The Passover in a certain sense combined them all. It joined their elements in one. It was a Sin-offering, in so far as the Blood of the Paschal Lamb was poured out and sprinkled. It was a whole Burnt-offering, in that it was roasted entire with fire. It was a Peace-offering, in that it was feasted on by the Offerer and his friends. And when, in addition to this, we bear in mind that the Killing of the Passover, and the sprinkling of the Blood, were commemorative of the deliverance of Israel from the wrath of God, and the sword of the destroying angel, passing over and sparing those whose doors were sprinkled with the blood of the Lamb; and that it was also a record of redemption from bondage, and a sign and means of federal union with God, and of communion with Him; and that the participation in it was accompanied with special ceremonial rites, the putting away of leaven, the eating of bitter herbs,—rites significant of moral duties and spiritual dispositions,—we recognize the propriety of the scriptural choice of the Passover to be the most prominent type of Christ's Death, and of the choice of the annual feast of the Passover to be the season of Christ's Death; and of its perpetuation in a spiritual form, in the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

2. This month shall be unto you the beginning of months] This month, Abib, or ear-month (see xiii. 4; xxiii. 15. Dent. xvi. 1; afterwards called Nisan, Neh. ii. 1. Esth. iii. 7), shall be to you the first month (see xl. 2. 17. Lev. xxiii. 5), in place of the month Tisri, which became the seventh month; see Josephus (Ant. i. 3. 3), who states that Tisri was still regarded as the first in secular matters: ep. Exod. xxiii. 16; and Lev. xxv. 8: and Kalisch, pp. 188, 189; and Mr. R. S. Poole in Bib. Dict. i. 315.

The Passover was the birthday of Israel. It was the beginning of a new life. It was Israel's birthday from bondage into liberty; from a state of spiritual death in Egypt into spiritual life in God. Their Exodus was their national birthday, their spiritual Spring-tide. It was therefore happily connected with the month Abib, the ear-month, and that month was appropriately made their "beginning of months." The Nation was thus consecrated as holy firstfruits to God. Thus the Spring-tide of their natural year and of their spiritual year were blended in a beautiful union. And the joy and beauty of this coincidence are greatly enhanced when they are considered in relation to Christ our Passover, in whom we are born anew, Who is our spiritual Spring-tide; and by Whose grace we put forth leaves and flowers, and bear fruit to God.

The Passover and the Exodus being typical of the redemption effected by Him, by whom all things were created (Col. i. 16), and Who is the New Man, the Second Adam, and delivers us from the state of bondage and death in which we were in the old Adam (1 Cor. v. 7, 8. 2 Cor. v. 17. Col. iii. 10), and makes all things new (Rev. xxi. 5), it was very fit that they should introduce a change in the Calendar and Life of the Ancient People of God.

Christ came to reform the world, and to raise up a new Creation from the old which was ready to vanish away (Heb. viii. 13). If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, the old things passed away, all things have become new (2 Cor. v. 17). This change in the beginning of the year foreshadows our ἐγκαίνια in Him: ep. S. Cyril de Ador. xvii. p. 594, where is an interesting dissertation on the typical character of the Passover; see also Bp. Andrewes, iv. p. 206; and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. v. p. 265, who observes that as there was a change made in the beginning of the year at the coming out of Egypt, so at the time of that more eminent deliverance which was typified by it, viz. the Redemption wrought by the Death and Resurrection of Christ, a change was made in the reckoning of the week; and the first day of the week, the day of Christ's Resurrection, became the Lord's day.

The weekly Sabbath was to be observed by the Jews as a Memorial of their deliverance from a state of servile work and bondage, and of their introduction into a condition of spiritual rest and freedom (see Deut. v. 14, 15). And inasmuch as that deliverance was a shadow of the Redemption to be achieved by Christ from a worse bondage into the "glorious liberty of the sons of God," it was very fitting that the Seventh-Day Sabbath, which was a memorial of the figure, should give way to the Lord's Day, which commemorates the substance, and be absorbed into it. On the question whether the Passage of the Red Sea was on a Sabbath, see further below, xiv. 1.

3. Speak ye unto all the congregation] Represented by their elders: see v. 21; and Keil, Archæol. ii. 221; Dr. Benisch on Colenso, p. 15.

— the tenth day] On which day, Christ, the Lamb of God, was taken up, or rather, on which He took Himself up. On that day, His Passion-Week began, and He went up to Jerusalem: see below, on Matt. xxi. 1.

— every man a lamb] How (it has been asked) could the Israelites have had so many lambs as were necessary for the Passover?

It was not necessary that they should have had lambs for every household; kids were permitted (see v. 5 and v. 21).

Next, the numbers associated in eating the lamb in each household were never less than ten (Josephus, B. J. vi. 9. 3), and might have been many more.

Thirdly, it is expressly stated that they had "very much cattle" (v. 38).

Fourthly, there is no evidence that the Israelites celebrated more than one passover in the wilderness, viz. that described in Num. ix. 5. On the contrary, there is reason to think that this was the only Passover celebrated there: see below, on Num. xv. 1, 2; xix. 2.

— a lamb] Heb. seh; either from the sheep or goats (v. 5. Deut. xiv. 4. 2 Chron. xxxv. 7); not, as has been supposed by some (Ewald, Knobel), some other animal, as a heifer: a lamb,—the figure of the LAMB without spot and blemish (1 Pet. i. 19); the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world (John i. 29. 36).

— lamb for an house] If not less than ten. Our Lord's twelve Apostles were His family (Matt. xxvi. 18. 20).

On the ceremonies to be observed in the Festival of the Passover, see Josephus, Ant. ii. 15. 1; iii. 16. 5; ix. 13. 3; and the treatise in the Talmud, entitled Pesachim, Treat. 14; Lightfoot, Temple Service, xi. 12; vol. i. p. 951; and Winer, R. W. B. ii. 195—206; Jahn, Archæol. § 353; Keil, Archæol. § 81; below, on Matt. xxvi. 2; and the materials collected by the Rev. Samuel Clark, in his article in Bib. Dict. ii. 712—726.

4. if the household be too little] Let them take in others. A symbol of the communion and enlargement of the Church.

5. Your lamb shall be without blemish] As Christ was: ep. Lev. xxii. 19. 1 Pet. i. 19. Heb. ix. 14. Origen, p. 122. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iii. p. 179.

take it out from the sheep, or from the goats: ⁶ And ye shall keep it up until the ^cfourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it † in the evening.

⁷ And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts and on the upper door post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it.

⁸ And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and ^d unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it. ⁹ Eat not of it raw, nor sodden

c Lev. 23. 5.
Num. 9. 3. &
28. 16.
Deut. 16. 1, 6.
† Heb. between the two evenings,
ch. 16. 12.

d ch. 34. 25.
Num. 9. 11.
Deut. 16. 3.
1 Cor. 5. 8.

— a male] Cp. Lev. i. 3. 11, and note on Rev. xii. 5.

— of the first year] Literally, son of a year. The Sept. renders it ἐνιαύσιος, a year old; and Vulg., “anniculus;” and so Keil, who asserts that the Law, Lev. xxii. 27, does not refer to the Passover. But the Hebrew phrase “son of a year” seems to signify “of the first year:” see Ainsworth here, and on Gen. iv. 32; and this is the interpretation of the Hebrew Rabbis, who say that the Paschal lamb might not be older than a year (Maimon.). The tender age was a type of innocence (Kalisch); and in this and other respects it was a figure of Him Whose title is “the Lamb of God” (John i. 29. 36); and “the Lamb” (Rev. v. 6. 8. 12, 13; vii. 14; xii. 11; xiii. 8; xiv. 7; xxi. 9).

— or from the goats] The flesh which Christ took was derived through sinners (cp. Matt. xxv. 33) as well as saints (see Matt. i. 3); and He was made in the likeness of sinful flesh (Rom. viii. 3). S. Aug., Qu. 42; Theodoret, Qu. 24.

6. ye shall keep it] This “taking up” of the lamb on the tenth day, and the keeping it till the fourteenth, was appointed by God, in order that there might be a stated time of religious preparation, in which the faithful Israelites might converse together on God’s great mercies to them in their deliverance from Egypt, and in their march to Canaan; and in which they might also meditate on the Great Antitype,—the true Passover,—to be offered in the fulness of time, and on the deliverance to be wrought by Him.

— the fourteenth day] Of Nisan; on which Christ ate the Passover with His disciples, and thus represented His own Death: see on Matt. xxvi. 2. 17, and John xviii. 28.

— the whole assembly—shall kill it] The whole assembly, or congregation, represented by their houses or families: see v. 7, and Keil here. All, in their respective households, shall kill it; it is a sacrifice for all, and all must partake of it if they are to escape death. So it is with the true Passover.

After the erection of God’s house, it was to be killed only there (Deut. xvi. 5—7). After their entrance into the land of promise, and the acquisition of Jerusalem, it was only to be killed in the court of the Temple there by the Priests (Lev. xvii. 3—6. 2 Chron. xxxv. 1, 2. 6. 10, 11), and then eaten by each family at their own homes (Maimonid., in Korban Pesach, cap. i.)

On the manner in which this service was performed by the Priests, see Dr. McCaul on Bp. Colenso, pp. 136—147. And on that point, and on the probable number of lambs killed at the Passover, and on the question, How the Priests could suffice for that work, see note below, on Num. ix. 3—5.

The whole assembly shall kill it. In this divine commandment we have a striking proof that the Messiah is come, and that the Passover has been fulfilled in Jesus Christ.

A learned Jewish Expositor (Dr. Kalisch) rightly calls the Passover “the corner-stone and basis of the national life of Israel” (p. 181), the solemnity of “the divine covenant with Israel;” and he observes that Almighty God has annexed the most awful punishment to the non-observance of the Passover. The soul of every one who neglects it shall be cut off from Israel; he is severed from union with God.

Dr. Kalisch also observes, that by the express command of God, the Passover was “to be killed within the precincts of the Temple at Jerusalem” (Deut. xvi. 5—7); and he adds this remarkable avowal, “since the Temple is destroyed, consequently the paschal lamb cannot be sacrificed” (p. 182), and therefore Jewish tradition has now collected a complete order of service to be observed on the first two evenings of the Passover, which contains a brief history of the events connected with the festival, allegorical rites, and hymns of praise, mostly psalms: cp. Jahn, Archæol. § 353; Ainsworth, p. 38.

What clearer evidence could be desired that the Passover has now been fulfilled? The Temple has been destroyed; no Passover can now be sacrificed, in the literal sense of God’s precepts to His people. And yet every Israelite who does not keep the Passover, as God requires, has broken the covenant, and is cut off from God’s people. How then is the Passover to be kept? The answer is, The shadows of the good things to come have passed away, and the substance has succeeded in their place (Heb. x. 1. Col. ii. 17). The law has been our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ (Gal. iii. 24). “Christ, our Passover, has been sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast” (1 Cor. v. 7). And let the ancient people of God join with us as fellow-citizens and fellow-worshippers in the true Zion, the Church of Christ; and feed on Him Who is the Lamb of God slain from the foundation of the World (Rev. xiii. 8), and then they will be Israelites indeed: cp. note below, on v. 14.

— in the evening] Literally, “between the two evenings;” or, as Onkelos renders it, between the two suns; or, as the Arabic renders it, between the two settings, i. e. between “the time in the afternoon, in which the heat of the sun begins to decrease at three o’clock (in Abib, or March), and the second evening, namely, sunset.” So the Talmudists, in the Treatise on the Passover in the Mishna (Treat. xiv.), entitled Pesachim; and Dr. McCaul on Colenso, 141; and Gesenius, p. 652. Josephus (B. J. vi. 9. 3) interprets it to mean from the ninth to the eleventh hour (perhaps inclusive), i. e. three and six p.m.; and so Bochart, who compares the “two evenings” of the Greeks, the πρῶτη ὄψια and δεῖλη ὄψια: cp. Deut. xvi. 6; and Pfeiffer, Dubia p. 119.

Our Lord ate the Passover at this time, on the fourteenth of Nisan, and thus represented His own death, which took place at about the same time, namely, at three o’clock, on the fifteenth (Matt. xxvii. 46).

In another sense, also, Christ was sacrificed in the evening, —viz. in the last age of the world (Tertullian, adv. Jud. c. 8; Greg. Nazian., Orat. 42; S. Cyril de Adorat. xvii.; S. Gregory Mag., in Evang. ii. Hom. 22).

7. on the two side posts and on the upper door post of the houses] Of every house: otherwise the destroying angel will not pass over it (v. 13). It is vain to hope for salvation except from the blood of the Lamb, through which alone we have redemption and deliverance (Acts iv. 12. Eph. i. 7. Col. i. 14. Heb. ix. 12. 15. 1 Pet. i. 2. Rev. v. 9).

This blood is to be applied personally to every Israelite in the Church of God: cp. S. Aug., c. Faust. xii. 30; S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Exod. lib. ii. p. 270.

The blood was sprinkled on the side posts, and on the upper door-post,—not on the threshold,—perhaps to signify that the precious blood of Christ is to be revered with godly fear; a warning to those who “tread under foot the Son of God, and count the blood of the covenant an unholy thing” (see Heb. x. 29). The “Lamb slain” is the Lamb adored (Rev. v. 6, 12), Bridegroom (xix. 9), King (xxii. 3), and Judge (vi. 16).

8. Unleavened bread] Literally, bread that is sweet, free from all impure sour admixtures (Kalisch, p. 195; Gesen., p. 500); the original word is from matsah, to suck with avidity.

This unleavened bread was a record of their sudden and unexpected deliverance (v. 31). Such was our redemption in Christ. It was effected suddenly and unexpectedly, when the disciples had forsaken Him and fled, and had lost all hope (Matt. xxvi. 56).

The Passover was to be eaten with unleavened bread. “Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us: therefore let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth” (1 Cor. v. 7).

Before the Passover, a diligent examination was made in the apartment where it was to be eaten, lest any leaven should be secretly concealed there; any that was discovered was carefully removed: see vv. 15. 19 (cp. Jahn, Archæol. § 353). St. Paul applies this to the Christian Passover, and takes occasion therefrom of enforcing the duty of making a similar examination of the heart, before it receives Christ: see note on 1 Cor. v. 7; and Bp. Andrewes, ii. pp. 303—305.

— bitter herbs] Heb. merorim; πικρῖδες, Sept.; wild lettuce, Vulg.: cp. Aristot., H. A. ix. 6; Plin., N. H. viii. 41; Dioscor., ii. 160; and probably, also, chicory, and wild endive, and scorzonera: cp. Bochart, Hier. i. 691 (Keil). These bitter herbs were commemorative of the affliction in Egypt, where at all with water, but ^e roast with fire ; his head with his legs, and with the ^e Deut. 16. 7. purtenance thereof. ^{10 f} And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the ^f ch. 23. 18. & morning ; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with ^{34. 23.} fire. ¹¹ And thus shall ye eat it ; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand ; and ye shall eat it in haste : ⁵ it is the ^g Deut. 16. 5. LORD's passover.

¹² For I ^h will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all ^h ch. 11. 4, 5. the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast ; and ⁱ against all the ^{Amos 5. 17.} || gods of Egypt I will execute judgment : ^k I am the LORD. ¹³ And the blood ⁱ Num. 33. 4. || ^or, ^{princes.} ch. 21. 6. & ^k ch. 6. 2. ^{22. 23. Ps. 82. 1, 6. John 10. 34, 35.}

their lives were made bitter with hard bondage (Exod. i. 14. Deut. xvi. 3, 4. Ps. lxi.); and symbolic of the bitterness of our affliction when we were in bondage to Satan, and felt how bitter a thing it is to forsake the living God (Jer. ii. 19) ; and of the bitterness of Christ's sufferings for our sins ; and of the bitterness of that sorrow and anguish with which we ought to mourn for them ; and of the end, "bitter as wormwood," to which sin leads (Prov. v. 4).

9. Eat not of it raw] In order to distinguish the Israelites from heathen nations, who ate flesh in that state (Kalisch).

Perhaps this precept may intimate spiritually, that human labour must concur with the divine grace given in Christ crucified ; and that He is not to be approached and fed upon without diligent preparation on our part.

— nor sodden at all with water] Christ's Sacrifice is not to be diluted with the water of human imaginations (Theodoret).

The act of seething would have necessitated a dismemberment of the body, which was "not to be broken."

— roast with fire] In an oven (Jahn, Archæol. § 141).

"The lamb was roasted whole, with two spits thrust through it, the one lengthwise, the other transversely, crossing the longitudinal one near the fore leg, so that the animal was in a manner crucified" (Jahn, Archæol. § 353).

So the True Passover on the cross ; He suffered for us, the just for the unjust (1 Pet. iii. 18) ; making His soul an offering for sin, enduring the fierce fire of God's wrath against the sins of the world. "He was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities ; the Lord laid on Him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. liii. 5—10). Cp. Ps. xxii. 14 ; xlii. 9 ; lxxxviii. 6 : see note on 1 John iv. 10.

The ancient Fathers regarded the manner, in which the Lamb was roasted, as typical of crucifixion. "The Paschal Lamb, being transfixed by the spit passing from the feet to the head, represents Him who was nailed to the Cross" (Justin Martyr, c. Tryphon. § 40) : cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv., "The preparing of the Paschal Lamb represented the Cross."

— his head with his legs] The true Passover must be eaten entirely ; Christ must not be divided. We may not make schisms in His body. We may not take a part of His doctrine and omit the rest, but must thankfully receive the whole : see Matt. v. 19 ; and on James ii. 10. Purtenance is intestines.

10. let nothing of it remain] Ye must eat the whole, and eat it without delay. So the True Passover is to be received entire and immediately, "while it is called to-day" (Heb. iii. 13. 15).

If we do not receive Christ when we may, and when we ought to do so, He will withdraw Himself from us, and we may not be able to receive Him at all : see on Exod. xxix. 34.

— ye shall burn with fire] Not cast it away, as if it were a common thing.

11. with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand] As pilgrims and travellers to Canaan. "With your loins girded" (cp. 2 Kings iv. 29. Luke xii. 35), with haste and temperance (S. Ambrose de Parad. 3) : "with your shoes on your feet ;" this also was a characteristic of travellers (cp. Josh. ix. 5. 13. Bochart, Hier. i. p. 686) ; and staff in hand : cp. Gen. xxxii. 10.

So the true Passover is to be received by the Christian, with the loins of his mind girded (1 Pet. i. 13), and his "feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace" (Eph. vi. 15), and with his staff in his hand, ever mindful that he has quitted Egypt, and that "here is not his rest" (Micah ii. 10), but that as long as he is on earth, he is a stranger and a pilgrim, travelling onward to "another country, that is, a heavenly" (Heb. xi. 14—16), of which country Canaan was a type.

Therefore, our Blessed Lord exhorts us to stand always with our loins girded : see Luke xii. 35, where the words of the Sep-tuagint here are adopted by the Evangelist.

— eat it in haste] Eager and impatient to leave Egypt, and to march on to Canaan, and as having no time to lose. Such is to be the temper and conduct of the Christian. He must use a godly σπουδή,—speed and eagerness,—in spiritual things ; in departing from the Egypt of sin, and on his march toward heaven. Cp. S. Cyril, Glaph. in Exod. lib. ii. p. 274 ; and de Adorat. xvii. p. 598.

— it is the LORD's passover] Rather, it is a passover to the Lord. It is offered to the Lord, and accepted by Him : cp. xxxii. 5. This sense is important, because it brings out a special meaning of the Passover, in reference to Christ. Christ is the true Passover to the Lord ; for He offered Himself without spot to God (Heb. ix. 14), and was accepted by Him, and we in Him (Eph. i. 6 : cp. below, v. 27) ; and it is through the Blood of His Cross that the Destroyer passeth over us.

Passover, Heb. pesach, is a passing over, a sparing (therefore the Passover is called ὑπέρβασις by Aquila, ὑπερβαρία by Josephus, and ὑπερβαρία by Philo, from the root pasach, to spring, to leap (1 Kings xviii. 26), to pass over (1 Kings v. 4). Hence is derived the Hemanthie noun Tha-psacus, where the Euphrates is passed over : see Gesen., p. 683.

In a secondary sense, the word Passover is applied, as here, to the paschal Lamb (cp. v. 21. 27. Lev. xxiii. 5. Num. ix. 6. 2 Chron. xxxv. 1. 13), because it was on account of the sacrifice of the Lamb, and the shedding of this blood, and the sprinkling of it on the door-post, that the destroying Angel passed over the house, whose doors were so sprinkled, and spared its inhabitants. See v. 13 ; and cp. Lev. xxiii. 5. 6.

The killing of the Passover was a sacrifice (see v. 27),—a sacrifice, which united in itself the properties of a sin-offering and a peace-offering ;—and the eating of it was the participation of a sacrifice, and a sacrificial feast : see xxxiv. 25. It is very doubtful whether, as some have supposed, the fat of subsequent Passovers was burnt on the altar. See Keil, pp. 383, 384 ; and his Archæol. § 81.

The Blood of Christ, the True Passover, is the meritorious cause of our justification, or acquittal by God ; and Faith is the instrument on our part which applies that Blood to us. See below, the Introduction to Romans, pp. 201—203. The destroying Angel in Ezekiel spares only those who have a mark set upon them (ix. 4 : cp. Rev. vii. 3 ; and S. Cyprian ad Demetrian. p. 194 ; S. Cyril de Ador. xvii. p. 599).

12. this night] Or rather, that night,—the night of the fourteenth of Abib, when the Passover is to be sacrificed,—not on the night on which God was speaking, which was before the tenth of Abib : see v. 3. The Vulgate rightly has here "illa nocte," on that night. In v. 8, the original Hebrew has the same pronoun (hazzeb) ; and there our Version has rightly "that night." Cp. McCaul, p. 62 ; and τῆς νύκτος, Luke xvii. 34.

— all the firstborn] See xi. 5.

— against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment] Against all the idols of Egypt (Targum Jonathan, and Onkelos, and Aben Ezra). This victory was achieved by the destruction of the firstborn of their worshippers, and by the destruction of cattle, some of which were worshipped as deities by the Egyptians, and by the deliverance of God's people from their hands.

Here is the solution of the question, Why God said that His NAME Jehovah had not been manifested to the Patriarchs : see vi. 3. Not that the word Jehovah was unknown ; but He had never come into collision, as now, with those who disputed His Title to be Jehovah, i. e. the One only self-existing, supreme, Everlasting God. He had never as yet executed His judgment against those deities, who set up themselves as rivals against shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you † to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.

† Heb. for a destruction.

1 ch. 13. 9.

m Lev. 23. 4, 5.
2 Kings 23. 21.
n ver. 24, 43.
ch. 13. 10.

o ch. 13. 6, 7, &
23. 15, &
34. 18, 25.
Lev. 23. 5, 6.
Num. 28. 17.
Deut. 16. 3, 8.
1 Cor. 5. 7.
p Gen. 17. 14.
Num. 9. 13.
q Lev. 23. 7, 8.
Num. 28. 18, 25.
† Heb. soul.

14 And this day shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a "feast to the Lord throughout your generations; ye shall keep it a feast" by an ordinance for ever.

15 Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, ^pthat soul shall be cut off from Israel.

16 And in the first day there shall be ^qan holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every † man must eat, that only may be done of

Him; as the gods of Egypt did, whether they were Elements, such as Heaven (Neith), or the Air (Kneph), or the Fire (Pthah); or the Sun (Ra), or the Nile (Hapiow), or were divinized men, like Osiris, or brute beasts, such as Apis and Anubis. In the time of the Patriarchs, JEHOVAH had not manifested His glorious NAME, that is, the greatness of His awful Majesty, and the fulness of His divine attributes, in all their dread significance, in opposition to such vain pretenders.

But now the Lord of Hosts was going to march, like a mighty Warrior and Conqueror, into the midst of Egypt, in the darkness of night: see xi. 4. Now He was about to confound the power of all the gods of Egypt, and to execute His judgments upon them, that is, upon the Evil Spirit, who worked in them, and by them (see on 1 Cor. x. 20, 21), and to show Himself to be indeed JEHOVAH, the I AM THAT I AM, who everlastingly to everlasting. Therefore, He concludes this announcement with those solemn words,—I, JEHOVAH; I, the LORD.

13. when I see the blood, I will pass over you] And spare you. The Israelites, though God's people, are regarded as liable to God's wrath and punishment. But He sees the blood of the lamb on their doors, and passes over them. Here is a foreshadowing of the Atonement made by the blood of the Lamb: "In the blood is the life" (Gen. ix. 4). It is the blood which maketh atonement (Lev. xvii. 11); and "without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. ix. 22). "Christ gave His life as a ransom (ἀντίποιον) for us all" (Matt. xx. 28. 1 Tim. ii. 6). "We are redeemed and saved by His blood" (Eph. i. 7. Col. i. 14. Heb. ix. 12. 1 Pet. i. 18, 19). The song of the saints is, "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood" (Rev. i. 5, 6; v. 9, 12). We are bought thereby to God (1 Cor. vi. 20). God spares us, and loves us, because He sees our door-posts sprinkled with the blood of the Lamb, His own well-beloved Son. Unless they are so sprinkled, we shall be cut off by the sword of the destroying Angel. We shall not be treated by Him as Israelites,—but as Egyptians (1 John iii. 5, 6; v. 10—13).

14. ye shall keep it a feast—by an ordinance for ever] Ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever. This cannot be said to be done by the literal Jews, who reject Christ. They, by their own confession, have now "no Paschal sacrifice:" see above, on v. 6. They have now only an empty form,—a mere cenotaph of a Passover,—not the living body itself.

If, therefore, the Jews are right in rejecting Christ, then these solemn words of Jehovah have failed of effect.

But heaven forbid that we should suppose this! These words have not failed of their effect. The Passover is fulfilled in Christ; and it remains as an ordinance for ever in His Church, the spiritual Jerusalem. For, as the great Apostle, the Hebrew of the Hebrews (Phil. iii. 5), says, "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us: therefore let us keep the feast" (1 Cor. v. 7). "And as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till He come" (1 Cor. xi. 26).

The Passover, as far as it was a sign, was not for ever; but the things signified by it, and which are fulfilled in Christ, are eternal (S. Augustine, Qu. 42: cp. note above, v. 6; and see below, Lev. xvi. 29. Num. ix. 9).

15. Seven days] From the evening of the fourteenth of Abib or Nisan, to the twenty-first. See v. 18, 19. Exod. xxiii. 15. Lev. xxiii. 4—8. Num. xxviii. 16—25. Deut. vi. 1—8.

— unleavened bread] See v. 8.

— ye shall put away leaven] Two words are used in this verse for leaven and leavened respectively: the one, seor, from saar, to boil; so Greek ζύμη, from ζέω, and Latin fermentum, from ferveo; the other is chamets, from chamets, to be sour, as corrupting what is pure and sweet.

These two words represent two qualities to be avoided: one, with regard to morals; the other, to faith, viz. (1) the swelling of pride, hypocrisy, schism, malice, lust, &c. (Matt. xvi. 6. Luke xii. 1. 1 Cor. v. 8); and, (2) the bitterness of heresy and false doctrine, corrupting the simplicity and purity of the true faith: see below, on Gal. v. 9.

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, says (1 Cor. v. 7), "CHRIST our Passover is sacrificed for us: therefore let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."

That is a most important passage. It teaches that we have the true Passover, and that we must keep it; and also that the Levitical Law was not only to be obeyed literally by the Israel of old, but that it has a moral and spiritual significance for every age and nation in the world, even to the end. Thus this passage puts into our hand a divine key for unlocking the mysteries of that law: cp. note below, on Lev. i. 1.

— that soul shall be cut off from Israel] By God Himself, as having broken the covenant with Him, which was ratified by the Passover, the great festival of national union and communion with God. Cp. Lev. xx. 5, 6. Selden de Synedriis i. 6. Kalisch, p. 180.

It is well observed by Dr. Kalisch (pp. 179, 180), that the Passover was to the Nation of Israel, what Circumcision was to the individual Israelite, viz. the federal rite of union and communion with God. And any Israelite who neglected these divinely-appointed means of union and communion with God, was regarded as guilty of severing himself from God, and was threatened with excision by Him.

Further, it will be remembered, that Circumcision, as the initiatory rite, was administered but once; but the Passover was to be observed regularly every year.

May we not say, that these circumstances supply serious matter for consideration with regard to the two Christian Sacraments, which have succeeded in the place of,—and are the spiritual fulfilment of,—Circumcision and the Passover?

Baptism is the Sacrament of adoption by God in Christ. By it we are planted in Him, born into the new life in Him; and the Sacrament of the Christian Passover, in which we show the Lord's death, is the Sacrament of Communion with Him, Who is the Life, and with His body the Church; and since the Israelite was cut off by God if he neglected the shadow, can any man be safe, if he neglects those Christian Sacraments, which are the substance? If "he that despised Moses' law, died without mercy under two or three witnesses, of how much sorer punishment shall he be thought worthy who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, . . . and hath done despite to the Spirit of grace?" (Heb. x. 29).

"The Jews, we know, were held hard to their Passover upon a great pain,—to have their souls cut off from God's people. And is it a less trespass for Christians to pass by their Passover?" Bp. Andrewes, ii. 302. See, above all, our Lord's words (John iii. 5; vi. 53).

16. in the first day] On which the Exodus took place (v. 17), there shall be a holy convocation, or assembly, summoned by trumpets (Num. x. 2. 10. Lev. xxiii. 24).

you. ¹⁷ And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for ^r in this ^{ch. 13. 3.} selfsame day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance for ever. ¹⁸ ^s In ^{Lev. 23. 5. Num. 28. 16.} the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even. ¹⁹ ^t Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, "even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land." ²⁰ Ye shall eat nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

²¹ Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, ^x Draw out and take you a ^{||} lamb according to your families, and kill the passover. ²² ^y And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and ^z strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the bason; and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning. ²³ ^a For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and ^b will not suffer ^c the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you. ²⁴ And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever. ²⁵ And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, ^d according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service. ²⁶ ^e And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service? ²⁷ That ye shall say, ^f It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people ^g bowed the head and worshipped. ²⁸ And the children of Israel went away, and ^h did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

²⁹ ⁱ And it came to pass, that at midnight ^k the LORD smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, ¹ from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in the [†] dungeon; and all the first-born of cattle. ³⁰ And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, ⁱ ch. 11. 4.

^k Num. 8. 17. & 33. 4.
Ps. 78. 51. & 105. 36. & 135. 8. & 136. 10.
¹ ch. 4. 23. & 11. 5.
[†] Heb. house of the pit.

17. have I brought your armies] The Sept. and Vulgate have the future here, "I will bring out," which is a correct exposition of the meaning. God regards their deliverance as a thing already done, because it is certain (cp. Jude 14).

— by an ordinance for ever] See v. 14.

18. on the fourteenth day of the month] i. e. at the full moon. Christ is the "Sun of Righteousness;" and the Church, as deriving her light from Him, is often compared by the ancient Fathers to the Moon. The fulness of her light is from His Death and Resurrection. They are her Plenilunium. See Matt. xxiv. 29. Rev. vi. 12; viii. 12.

19. that soul shall be cut off] See v. 15.

— a stranger] Heb. ger, a proselyte, of which there were two kinds. See on Matt. xxiii. 15; and Acts vi. 5; and Introduction to the Acts, p. 9. They who are here contemplated are the "proselytes of righteousness," who had received circumcision.

21—28. Then Moses called] Moses now communicates to the Elders (cp. iii. 16), and through them to the People, the law concerning the Passover.

— a lamb] The word is a generic one, Hebr. tson, pecus, animal (Vulg.), and includes both kids and lambs.

22. a bunch] A handful (Maimon).

— hyssop] Heb. ezob. Either hyssopus officinalis, a low herb, growing on walls (1 Kings iv. 33), with small pointed leaves, branching stalks, and blue and white flowers; or perhaps also thymus serpyllum, or origanum, the Arabic sâter (Gesen., p. 25; Keil, p. 387); or, as others think, the caper plant (capparis spinosa). It was used for sprinkling (Lev. xiv. 4. 6. 49. Num. xix. 6. Ps. li. 7. See also John xix. 29. Heb. ix. 19. Kalisch, p. 205; and the full account in Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 709; and in Mr. Wright's article in Dr. Smith's Bibl. Dict. i. 845).

The instrument by which the blood of the Paschal Lamb was sprinkled was a simple and lowly herb; so the instruments by which the doctrine of Christ crucified, Who sprinkles many nations (Isa. lii. 15. 1 Pet. i. 2), is preached, are weak and humble (2 Cor. iv. 7). The first preachers of it were fishermen and publicans (cp. 1 Cor. i. 27—29); they were not like "cedars of Lebanon," but only like the "hyssop on the wall" (1 Kings iv. 33: cp. note below, on Lev. xiv. 4).

27. It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover] Rather, this is the sacrifice of the Passover to the Lord; signally fulfilled in Christ: see above, on v. 11.

On the Christian Passover as a Sacrifice and a Sacrament, see Bp. Andrewes, ii. pp. 292—299.

29. at midnight] Of the fourteenth day of Abib (see xi. 4), when all seemed at peace. So the Great Day of the Lord will come suddenly, when men say "peace and safety" (1 Thess. v. 2. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Rev. iii. 3; xvi. 15. See above, on xi. 4—6).

— smote all the firstborn] See xi. 5.

— firstborn of cattle] Regarded as sacred by the Egyptians; and some among them were made objects of worship.

By punishing them in their cattle, God showed to them and to all men the sin and infatuation of creature-worship.

To those, therefore, who take objection to this visitation

m ch. 11. 6.
 Prov. 21. 13.
 Amos 5. 17.
 Jas. 2. 13.
 n ch. 11. 1.
 Ps. 105. 38.
 o ch. 10. 9.
 p ch. 10. 26.
 q Gen. 27. 34.
 r ch. 11. 8.
 Ps. 105. 38.
 s Gen. 20. 3.
 || Or, dough,
 ch. 8. 3.
 t ch. 3. 22. &
 11. 2.
 u ch. 3. 21. &
 11. 3.
 x Gen. 15. 14.
 ch. 3. 22.
 Ps. 105. 37.
 y Num. 33. 3, 5.
 z Gen. 47. 11.
 a Gen. 12. 2. &
 46. 3. ch. 38. 26. Num. 1. 46. & 11. 21. † Heb. a great mixture, Num. 11. 4.

and all the Egyptians; and there was a ^m great cry in Egypt; for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

³¹ And ⁿ he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, ^o both ye and the children of Israel; and go, serve the LORD, as ye have said. ³² ^p Also take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone; and ^q bless me also.

³³ ^r And the Egyptians were urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, ^s We be all dead men. ³⁴ And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their ^{||} kneadingtroughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders. ³⁵ And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; and they borrowed of the Egyptians ^t 'jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: ³⁶ ^u And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required. And ^x they spoiled the Egyptians.

³⁷ And ^y the children of Israel journeyed from ^z Rameses to Succoth, about ^a six hundred thousand on foot that were men, beside children. ³⁸ And [†] a on the cattle, the same answer may be made as to those who except against our Lord's miracles on the swine at Gadara, and on the barren fig-tree. Cattle and trees were made for men; and these acts convey moral lessons and warnings, which are reasonable at all times, and profitable to all men and nations. See on Matt. viii. 32; xxi. 20; and above, on xi. 5.

- 30. a great cry] See xi. 6; and Matt. xxv. 5.
- 31. Rise up] A fulfilment of God's promise (xi. 1).
- 32. take your flocks and your herds] After repeated resistance, Pharaoh at last gives up their cattle: see x. 24. — bless me also] Pharaoh, who had oppressed them, and had rebelled against God, now asks for a blessing from Moses. So they who resist Christ will one day be humbled; but it will be too late to sue for a blessing, when it is the hour of judgment: see Luke xiii. 25. 27.
- 34. kneadingtroughs] Small vessels, perhaps of leather. — their clothes] The large, rectangular, folding simlah, ἱμάτιον (Septuagint), or mantle (ep. Matt. v. 40; xxi. 7; xxiv. 18; xxvi. 65), probably like that which is now worn by the Bedouins. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 662; Keil, Archæol. § 102.
- 35. they borrowed] They demanded. By God's express direction: see iii. 21; xi. 2.
- 36. they lent unto them] They gave them gladly: the hiphil form here used means they caused them to ask: ep. 1 Sam. i. 27, 28; they even pressed the gifts upon them; see Kalisch here, and Ps. cv. 37, which confirms this exposition. — they spoiled the Egyptians] See iii. 22.
- 37. the children of Israel journeyed] How (it has been asked) could the Israelites, — more than two millions in number, — have been so soon brought into marching order by Moses?

It may be replied, that God had given them notice some time before by Moses. The order for the taking up of the lamb was some days before the Exodus (see v. 3), and public notice had been given to the elders of Israel at least a month before, of God's design to carry them out of Egypt into Canaan; see iii. 16—22. The demands which Moses made on Pharaoh in God's name, "Let my people go" (v. 1; vii. 16; viii. 20; ix. 1; x. 3. 9. 26), must have been matters of public notoriety, and the people must have been prepared by them.

THE STATIONS IN THE WILDERNESS.

— from Rameses to Succoth] From Raemeses (Heroopolis) in Goshen (see ch. v. 1) to Succoth, so called from the booths in which they encamped there (ep. Gen. xxxiii. 17), or it may have been so called before, in the direction of the gulf of Suez. From Succoth they journeyed to Etham on the edge of the wilderness (xiii. 20); and on the third day they came to Pihahiroth (xiv. 2. 21).

The names of the successive stations or halting-places of the Israelites in their journey from Egypt to Canaan are set down by Moses at God's command in the Book of Numbers, ch. xxxiii. Those stations were forty-two in number.

The ancient Christian Fathers have observed that this number is the same as that of the Generations from Abraham to Christ, as set down in the Gospel of St. Matthew (i. 17).

The Birth of Christ is to the Church Universal, what the arrival in Canaan, the Land of promise and of rest, was to the Israelite. Christ is Our Rest. He is our Land of Promise.

This number, forty-two, is also the number of the months of the sojourn of the Woman, or Christian Church, in the Wilderness, in the Apocalypse; whose pilgrimage in this world was foreshadowed by that of the Ancient Hebrew Church in the wilderness: see on Rev. xii. 6; and Introduction to the Apocalypse, pp. 148, 149.

On the figurative meaning of these forty-two stations, and of the journey through the wilderness, the spiritual significance of which is clearly asserted by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. x. 1—11, where he says that the literal Israelites were τύποι ἡμῶν, types of us, and that these things happened to them τυπικῶς, with a typical relation to us, and "are written for our admonition" (see notes on that passage, p. 114: ep. Heb. iii. 15—19; x. 28, 29), the reader may consult Origen in Numeros, Hom. 27, and especially the interesting treatise of S. Jerome, "de XLII Mansionibus Israelitarum in deserto;" ad Fabiolum, ii. p. 586.

INCREASE OF ISRAEL.

— about six hundred thousand on foot that were men, beside children] They were "on foot," and the Egyptians their pursuers had chariots and horses; but God delivered His people, and overthrew their enemies. As to their number, compare Num. i. 21—46, where the census is described.

According to the usual proportion of adult males to the whole, we may suppose that the whole number of Israelites who came out of Egypt was about four times the number in the text, namely, about 2,400,000.

This number has seemed incredible to some, for the following reasons:—

- (1) When Jacob came down into Egypt, they numbered only seventy souls (see i. 5. Gen. xlvi. 27. Deut. x. 22).
- (3) Their sojourn in Egypt was only 215 years: see on v. 40.

But let it be remembered,—

- (1) That the Hebrews married early, about the fourteenth year.
- (2) That they had several wives.
- (3) That the average age of man was longer than at present: ep. Gen. xvii. 9, where Jacob represents 130 years as "few," and he lived 147 years (xlvii. 28).
- (4) That of those who came into Egypt, none was an old man but Jacob himself.
- (5) That the Egyptian women were proverbial for their fecundity (see on i. 7); and that the Hebrew women in Egypt are asserted to have been even more vigorous than the Egyptian women themselves.

(6) Above all, the increase of the Israelites in Egypt is represented as supernatural and miraculous; "they grew and multiplied exceedingly, they were fruitful; and the land was filled with them;" see Gen. xlvii. 27. Exod. i. 7—12, and Deut. x. 22, "Thy fathers went down into Egypt with three-score and ten persons, and now the Lord thy God hath made mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle. ³⁹ And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they thee as the stars of heaven for multitude." And it is described by the Holy Spirit as the fruit of Abraham and Sarah's faith: see Heb. xi. 12, "Therefore sprang there of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand by the sea shore innumerable: cp. Aug., in Exod. Quæst. 47, who says, "His annis quantum multiplicari poterint si fecunditas hominis consideretur, adjuvante ILLO qui eos voluit multiplicari, reperitur non esse mirum, quod in sexcentis millibus peditum egressus est populus ex Ægypto."

(7) That the seventy souls do not include all who came with Jacob into Egypt; but that number expresses only such as are specified for particular reasons: see above, on Gen. xlii. 8. That the households of each of the sons of Jacob are said to have come down with them (i. 1), and these may have been very numerous; and since they were received into the covenant by circumcision (Gen. xvii. 12), these may have been numbered with them.

(8) Even to some, who have well considered this matter, with reference to ordinary causes, the statement in the text has not appeared improbable; see Malthus, Essay on Population, p. 517; Bp. Harold Browne on the Pentateuch, p. 20; Pritchard, Vindiciæ; the calculations of Dr. McCaul, Answer to Colenso, pp. 106—115; and of Dr. A. Benisch, p. 127; and the Rev. W. W. Hoare (Letter to Bp. Colenso, p. 56); and Rev. Thomas Laud, Key, &c. p. 65; Rev. F. W. Fowler, Vindex Pentateuchi, p. 43; and Rev. F. Ashpittel, On the Increase of the Israelites, pp. 9—16. Dr. Benisch (p. 127) observes that "200 years after the Hegira of Mahomet, the family of the uncle of Mahomet had increased to 33,000. If we take the number of Jacob's family, viz. 67, and multiply that number by 33,000, we have 2,211,000," for the possible number of the Israelites in 200 years.

Mr. Eyles Clinton (Script. Chron. Fasti Hellenici, i. 294) says, "It is acknowledged that in parts of North America the people have doubled their numbers in fifteen years (Malthus, ii. 190). The Israelites in Egypt doubled their numbers in periods of something less than fifteen years." The writer (Mr. Clinton) supposes the sojourn of Israel in Egypt to have been 215 years: see below, on v. 40.

(9) We may here quote a remark of Dr. Kalisch (p. 213), who supposes the sojourn in Egypt to have lasted as much as 430 years (see on v. 40). "If we take a generation to extend about thirty years, and suppose that on the average every man had no more than three sons, the sixty-nine souls, excluding Jacob, trebled in thirty years, and this number was again increased to the threefold amount in other thirty years, and in fourteen generations (=420 years) would have amounted to about 33,000,000."

If this calculation is correct, it would seem to prove that the sojourn could not have been so long as 430 years; for if so, the real increase, viz. to 2,400,000, would have been marvellously small; whereas it is represented in Scripture as extraordinarily great: cp. below, v. 40.

(10) That miraculous increase is also confirmed and illustrated by another circumstance no less miraculous. It is stated by the Holy Spirit in Ps. cv. 37, that there was not one feeble person among their tribes, i. e. among more than 2,000,000.

(11) Their miraculous increase is in harmony with the miraculous support of this vast number for forty years in the wilderness.

(12) It has been already observed, that the miraculous increase of the literal Israel in time of affliction, foreshadowed the prodigious multiplication of the spiritual Israel, the Christian Church, in the times of the early persecutions. We know that increase to be a fact, and why should we doubt the other? See above, on Gen. xlii. 27. Exod. i. 7. 12; and cp. Keil on Numbers, p. 176, note.

(13) It has been alleged, that if the Israelites had been so numerous, they would have easily overcome the Canaanites, and have taken immediate possession of Canaan. But this allegation is grounded on very erroneous calculations of the population of Canaan: see on xxiii. 29, 30; Dr. Benisch on Colenso, p. 111; and Keil on Num. i.—iv. p. 177.

(14) For a reply to the allegation that exaggerations of numbers were to be expected in the Pentateuch, see on xiv. 6, 7.

38. a mixed multitude] Who were not Israelites, or only so in name. They are described as "many foreigners" in the Targum of Onkelos; the original Hebrew word, ereb, is from ereb, to wander (Gesen. 652); and were a snare to the Israelites by their bad example. See Num. xi. 4, 5: cp. Nehem. xiii. 3; and Wright, in Bibl. Dict. ii. 385.

The same is the condition of the spiritual Israel, the Church of God, in its pilgrimage through the wilderness of the world to the Canaan of its rest. Tares are mingled with wheat in its field, chaff with good grain on its floor, sheep and goats in its fold, bad fish with good fish in its net; but a severance will here after be made: see on Matt. iii. 12; xiii. 25—40.

VERY MUCH CATTLE.

— very much cattle] How was this very much cattle sustained in the wilderness for forty years?

(1) During thirty-six of the forty years the Israelites dwelt near the Mount Seir, which was well peopled, and on the Ælantic gulf of the Red Sea, and could have had easy intercourse with tribes who would have provided them with food for their cattle.

(2) We are informed, that they brought with them a supply of gold and silver and jewels from Egypt (see iii. 22; xi. 2; xii. 35), and thus they would have been able to purchase corn and fodder for their cattle: cp. Deut. ii. 6.

(3) Nearly a whole year they encamped in the fertile region around Mount Sinai: see Num. x. 11; xi. 31; and cp. above, on Exod. iii. 1, whence it appears that shepherds resorted to Sinai for pasture, and that Moses himself had done so: cp. Burckhardt, Travels, p. 481; and Porter, quoted by McCaul, p. 74, on the fertility of the neighbourhood of Sinai.

The Israelites halted for a whole year (saving ten days, Num. x. 11. Exod. xix. 1, 2) at Sinai, which, for natural causes, was a very eligible place for such a sojourn. And this long sojourn at Sinai leads us to infer, that while Almighty God fed them miraculously whenever other supplies failed, yet human Reason was exercised, and natural resources were used, as far as they were available. And this is intimated by the speech of Moses, their leader, to Hobab, "Leave us not, I pray thee, forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, that thou mayest be to us instead of eyes" (Num. x. 31). Here is evidence of truth.

(4) We know nothing of the duration of their sojourns at other places in the wilderness after the first year of their wandering, and it is probable that they remained stationary in several places, where they might sow and reap.

(5) The peninsula of Sinai was formerly much more rich in pasture than now (Ewald; Kalisch: cp. Keil on Num. i. p. 176; McCaul, p. 71; Benisch, pp. 31—41; Professor J. R. Young, pp. 87—93).

The name "wilderness" itself, midbar, from dabar, to drive cattle to pasture, does not express a desolate place, but rather a pastoral country, a sheep-walk, where cattle range and feed. See Gesen., 186. 188. 449: cf. German Trift, from treiben, to drive. The same meaning sometimes belongs to the Greek ἐρημος (Luke xv. 4). Doubtless there are passages which speak of the wilderness as "waste, howling, terrible" (see Deut. i. 19; viii. 15. Jer. ii. 6); and where man's help failed, God supplied subsistence by a miracle (cp. Deut. viii. 15, 16). On this question, see Vitringa's Essay on the soil and climate of the Arabian Desert, in his Observ. v. 15; and Tholuck's Essay in Lit. Anzeig. 1833, No. 31; Hengstenberg, Bileam, p. 284; and Keil's note on Exod. xvi. 31, p. 425; and the works of McCaul, Benisch, Hoare, Drew, Fowler, and others, quoted on v. 37; Lund, pp. 41—49; Fairbairn, Typology, ii. 62, 63; Hayman, in B. D. ii. p. 1752.

(6) Their cattle were diminished by sacrifice at the second Passover (Num. ix.). It has, indeed, been alleged that the Levitical Law required an immense number of cattle and sheep in the wilderness for compliance with its injunctions concerning sacrifice. But this allegation is grounded on a misconception. The Levitical Law was promulgated at Sinai, on the supposition that in a short time after its promulgation the Israelites would be no longer in the wilderness, but in Canaan; and it was framed with a view to observance in Canaan, and was in abeyance in the wilderness: see Dr. Benisch on Colenso, p. 68; and Rev. J. B. McCaul, pp. 20—26; and compare below, notes on Num. xv. 2; xix. 2; and above, Introduction to this Volume.

(7) Above all, from the fact that the Israelites themselves were miraculously supplied with food and water by Almighty God in the wilderness (xvi. 4; xvii. 6. 1 Cor. x. 3, 4), it may be inferred that their cattle were also sustained by Him in a similar manner when necessary.

Indeed, the miraculous supply of water to the Israelites

b ch. 6. 1. & 11. 1. brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because ^b they were thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

⁴⁰ Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was ^c four hundred and thirty years. ⁴¹ And it came to pass at the end of the four

Gen. 15. 13.
Acts 7. 6.
Gal. 3. 17.

was itself an example of a miraculous supply to their cattle also: see xvii. 3. Num. xx. 7. 11, "Thou shalt give the congregation and the beasts drink; and the congregation drank, and the beasts also."

We know that Almighty God led them and their cattle into the wilderness, and that He also was their leader in the way in the wilderness (Exod. xiii. 18. 21) for forty years (Deut. i. 31; xxxii. 9—12. Num. ix. 18), so that they "lacked nothing" (Deut. ii. 7). This is enough for us. God did not lead the cattle into the wilderness in order that they might die there. He who led them fed them. "He giveth fodder to all cattle, and feedeth all the beasts of the forest, and suffereth not the cattle to decrease" (Ps. cvii. 38).

(8) No argument can be derived from the silence of Scripture in this matter. Only incidentally, and seemingly by chance, do we hear any thing of the continual miracle of the preservation of their raiment, &c. This is nowhere recorded in the history. But it is referred to, as a thing well known to them, by Moses in his speeches to the Israelites at the end of their wanderings (see Deut. viii. 4; xxix. 5).

(9) The History of the Flood affords a remarkable parallel to the History of the wanderings in the wilderness. God brought the animals into the Ark by a miracle; but we are not told how they were fed there. So God brought the cattle of Israel into the Wilderness; but we are not informed how they were sustained in it. God, who did the one, did not fail to do the other: see above, Preliminary Note to Gen. vi. p. 36.

(10) The silence of Scripture in such things as these is our moral probation. If we are disposed to be captious, and cavil, Scripture allows us to do so. But if we reverently accept the Bible as the Word of God, and if we use our Reason candidly and soberly in its interpretation, we shall conclude that the Power and Love of God, which exerted themselves in a miraculous manner in the deliverance of the Israelites, and of their cattle from Egypt (see xii. 32. 38), and which sustained the Israelites with an almost daily Miracle in the wilderness, did not fail to support the cattle also, which He had delivered, and which He had required them by Moses to bring with them into the Wilderness. See x. 26: ep. below, on xiii. 17.

DURATION OF THE SOJOURN OF ISRAEL IN EGYPT.

40. The sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwell in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years] Rather, the sojourning of the children of Israel, which they sojourned in Egypt. The relative (which) refers, as all the ancient Versions render it, to the sojourn, and not to the people.

It has been affirmed by most expositors, in recent times, that the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt lasted four hundred and thirty years. See Ewald, Geschichte, i. 454; Delitzsch, Genesis, p. 363; Kurtz, History, ii. 137; Kalisch, Intro. to Exodus, p. xi.; Keil, p. 393; Fairbairn, Typology, i. 360.

At first sight, the Hebrew Text seems to favour this assertion, which is confirmed by Theophilus Antiochenus, ad Autolye. iii. 10; and iii. 24.

But the Samaritan Text and Septuagint Version insert here the words, "and in the land of Canaan." This insertion seems to have been made independently, and without concert; for in the Samaritan Text the word Canaan stands before the word Egypt, but in the Septuagint it comes after it. This insertion is supported by Targum Jonathan, by both the Talmuds, by Aben Ezra, Rasbam, Nachmanides, and others among the Jews. Josephus sometimes describes the oppression of Israel in Egypt as lasting 400 years (Ant. ii. 9. 1; B. J. v. 9. 4); but in Ant. ii. 15. 2, where he is expressly describing the Exodus, he states that the "Israelites left Egypt four hundred and thirty years after the entrance of Abraham into Canaan, and two hundred and fifteen years after Jacob's coming into Egypt;" and Tertullian says (c. Judaeos, cap. 2), "Post quadringentos et triginta annos Abraham data Lex est."

The most important testimony in favour of such a paraphrase as that in the Samaritan Text and Septuagint is that of the Apostle St. Paul, who states that the Law was given to Moses four hundred and thirty years after the Promise to Abraham. The Apostle's words are, "This I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the Law, which was given four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the Promise of none effect" (Gal. iii. 17).

According to St. Paul, the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt was not more than two hundred and fifteen years.

The Promise to Abraham (which is described in Gen. xii. 1—3) was twenty-five years before Isaac's birth; for Abraham was only seventy-five years old when he left Haran (see Gen. xii. 4; xxi. 5; and on Gal. iii. 17; and on Acts vii. p. 67); and from the birth of Isaac to that of Jacob was a period of sixty years (Gen. xxv. 26); and from the birth of Jacob to the going down into Egypt was 130 years (Gen. xlvii. 9).

Since therefore, according to St. Paul (Gal. iii. 17), there were four hundred and thirty years between the Promise to Abraham and the giving of the Law on Sinai, which was in the first year of the Exodus (Exod. xix. 1. 11. 20); and since there were 215 years between the Promise and going down into Egypt, therefore there were 215 years between the going down into Egypt and the Exodus; or, in other words, the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt was 215 years.

This supposition is confirmed by the history of the Exodus.

Levi, at the time of Jacob's going down into Egypt, was about forty-five years old. Kohath, the son of Levi, came down with Jacob (Gen. xlv. 8. 11). He lived 133 years (vi. 20). Moses, the son of Amram, and of Jochebed his wife, the daughter of Levi, was eighty years old at the Exodus. See Gen. xv. 13. Deut. xxxiv. 7.

Suppose now, that Jochebed, the mother of Moses, was born to Levi fifty years after his immigration into Egypt, then since Moses was eighty years old at the Exodus, Jochebed would have given birth to Moses when she was eighty-five years of age, if the sojourn lasted 215 years. This is not improbable; but how improbable would the history be, which Moses gives of his own parentage, if the sojourn is extended to 430 years!

The supposition by which some have endeavoured to obviate this objection, has been already considered. See ii. 1; vi. 16. 18. 20: ep. Num. xxvii. 59.

Achan, in the age of Joshua, after the entrance into Canaan, was only in the fourth generation from Judah (Josh. vii. 1—18).

Again, the increase of the Israelites during their sojourn in Egypt is represented throughout the Pentateuch as super-naturally great. But that increase would not have been extra-ordinarily large, but rather the reverse, if the sojourn had been extended to 430 years: see above, on v. 37.

Further, in Gen. xv. 13. 16, we read, that God said to Abraham, "Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them four hundred years; and that nation whom they shall serve will I judge; and afterwards shall they come out with great substance, and thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; but in the fourth generation they shall come hither again."

At first sight it would seem as if it were foretold in that passage that the Israelites would be afflicted by one nation during four hundred years. But we know that this was not the case.

The bondage and affliction of the Israelites in Egypt did not last above eighty years. It did not begin till a considerable time after the death of Joseph (i. 8). It had not begun when Aaron was born. It commenced only a little while before the birth of Moses; and Moses led the people out of Egypt when he was eighty years of age.

The prophecy, therefore, that the seed of Abraham should be strangers, is to be applied to the sojourn in Canaan as well as in Egypt; and this is the interpretation given to it by the Apostle, where he says, "By faith he (Abraham) sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange land, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob" (Heb. xi. 9).

That prophecy in Genesis affords the best comment on this historical statement in Exodus.

The sojourn, of which the prophecy speaks, extended from the utterance of the prophecy to the Exodus, that is, from the time of the promise in that prophecy to the time of its fulfilment, viz. four hundred years in round numbers. The sojourn, hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all ^d the ^{d ch. 7. 4. & ver. 51.} hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

⁴² It is [†] a night to be much observed unto the LORD for bringing them out ^{† Heb. a night of observations.} from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all ^{† See Deut. 16. 6} the children of Israel in their generations.

⁴³ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is [†] the ordinance of ^{† Num. 9. 14.} the passover: There shall no stranger eat thereof: ⁴⁴ But every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast [‡] circumcised him, then shall he eat ^{‡ Gen. 17. 12, 13.} thereof. ⁴⁵ A foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof. ⁴⁶ In one ^{‡ Lev. 22. 10.} house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth ought of the flesh abroad out of the house; ⁴⁷ neither shall ye break a bone thereof. ⁴⁷ All the congre- ^{† Num. 9. 12. John 19. 33, 36. k ver. 6. Num. 9. 13.}

of which the history here speaks, extended from the time of the promise to Abraham, when he left Haran, to the time of its fulfilment, viz. four hundred and thirty years.

Doubtless there is something peculiar in the language of this history. So there is in that of the prophecy; but the one is to be explained by the other. In both, by a common idiom in Hebrew, the fathers are contained in the children, and the children in the fathers. (See Gen. xvi. 12; and on Matt. xxiii. 35, "Ye slew;" and Heb. vii. 9, "Levi paid tithes in Abraham.") And in both, the duration of the whole period is spoken of as if it were the duration of that part with which the period was closed. There is a somewhat similar synecdoche in Gen. xxxv. 26, where it is said, "These are the sons which were born to Jacob in Padan-aram," whereas Benjamin was born in Canaan.

This mode of speaking is also illustrated by St. Paul's language in Acts xiii. 20, according to the true reading; where he dates the entrance into Canaan from the birth of Isaac; and fixes that entrance at about 450 years from that event. See below on Acts, p. 105.

On the whole, therefore, we arrive at the conclusion, that the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt was two hundred and fifteen years; and that the sojourn, mentioned in the text, is to be extended to the time in which Abraham and His seed were sojourners and strangers, both in Canaan and in Egypt, i. e. to the time which elapsed between the promise of Canaan and its fulfilment. This exposition is confirmed by S. Augustine, Qu. in Exod. xlvii., who says, that "this computation, which Eusebius has followed, is grounded on evident truth." So S. Epiphanius, in Ancorat. § 112; S. Jerome, in Galat. iii. 17; and Epist. Crit. ad Damas. Ep. 121; Sulpit. Sever., lib. i.; and so Luther, Calvin, A Lapide, and Glassius, Phil. Sacra, lib. v. Tract. i. e. 17, p. 895; Willett, on Exodus, p. 171; Pfeiffer, Dubia Sacra, in Gen. xv. 13; Bp. Walton, Proleg. xi. 18; Baumgarten, Commentar, p. 476; cp. Mr. R. E. Stuart Poole, in Smith's Bibl. Dict. i. 321, and our distinguished English Chronologer, Mr. H. Fynes Clinton, who dates the 430 years from the call of Abraham, and agrees in the opinion that the sojourn in Egypt was 215 years. See his Scripture Chronology in Fasti Hellenici, i. 297—301. See also Rev. Henry Browne, Ordo Sæclorum, p. 295—316.

Finally, there appears to be a profound spiritual meaning in this passage, which St. Paul, who refers to it, enables us to recognize (Gal. iii. 17).

St. Paul says that the Law was given by Moses four hundred and thirty years after the promise to Abraham. The Apostle teaches us to connect those two events together; he teaches us to combine the Promise with the Law; to connect the revelation of God to Abraham with the revelation of God to Moses, and to Abraham's seed at Sinai, when the promise began to be fulfilled, and Abraham's seed went forth from Egypt to Canaan, or, as God Himself expresses it, to return thither.

The words of Moses here, when compared with those of St. Paul, and with those of God to Abraham, teach us to see Abraham himself embodied in his seed, waiting patiently for the fulfilment of the promise which God made to him, that He would give Canaan to him, i. e. to Abraham himself (Gen. xiii. 15; xvii. 8). They teach us to recognize the union of Abraham's seed with Abraham, and to see in the Exodus an accomplishment of God's promise to Abraham, the father of the faithful, and a return of Abraham (after his banishment in his seed in Egypt) to the land of promise.

If we extend our view from the Type to the Antitype, we ourselves, who are children of Abraham by faith, may here see spiritual consolation in our own earthly pilgrimage.

We were pilgrims in Abraham. Abraham is still a pilgrim in us. God promised to Abraham that in his seed "all nations should be blessed." Abraham's seed sojourned long and patiently; but at last they had their Exodus from a spiritual Egypt in Christ. There is a deep spiritual mystery in God's words, "Out of Egypt have I called My Son," applied to Christ (Matt. ii. 15). God has promised, that in Christ, who is Abraham's seed, we shall have peace in our heavenly Canaan. The seed of Abraham waits patiently for the fulfilment of this promise. Abraham himself in his seed waits in faith; he waits in the communion of saints. He will not be made perfect without us (Heb. xi. 40). Our Exodus will be his. We are pilgrims here. He waits in Paradise. At last he will have his Exodus, and enter the everlasting Canaan of his heavenly rest. May we be then with him! (See Matt. viii. 11).

41. the selfsame day] Literally, in the body of that day (Gen. xvii. 23), viz. on the day above mentioned, the fourteenth of Abib (v. 12. 14. 51; and xiii. 4: cp. Keil, p. 393).

42. that night of the LORD to be observed] Literally, that night of watchings, Heb. shimmerim,—a word only found here; from shamar, to watch, and to guard; and it implies that the feast of this night is to be kept as holy to the Lord.

44. bought for money] Cp. Gen. xvii. 12, 13.

46. In one house] In the same house. A person may not eat it in two different households. All the congregation of Israel shall keep it (v. 4). And each man must eat it in the society of his own family. There is to be national unity, and also household unity.

To feed on Christ is therefore not a solitary act. They who feed on Him aright, feed on Him in the communion of their own households, in domestic prayer and praise, and in reading God's Word; and also in the family of the Church of Christ Universal, in all things which God ordains in His Holy Word, as interpreted by the consent and practice of the Apostles and the Primitive Church: cp. S. Cyprian de Unit. Eccl. ad init.; and S. Cyril de Adorat. x. p. 355; xv. p. 532; Theodoret, Qu. in Exod. 24.

There is something therefore very appropriate in the language of the Church in her Collect for Good Friday, in reference to "our PASSOVER,"—"Almighty God, we beseech Thee graciously to behold this Thy family," &c.

— neither shall ye break a bone thereof] A mark of wholeness and unity (cp. Ps. xxxiv. 20). The participation of all in one entire lamb showed their oneness in the Paschal feast. It was also a figure of the unity of Christ's Church and people, joined together as fellow-members in Him, and as partakers of His fulness. "We being many, are one bread and one body, for we are all partakers of that one bread" (1 Cor. x. 17). "We being many are one body in Christ" (Rom. xii. 5. 1 Cor. xii. 20. Eph. v. 23. 30. Cp. Bähr, Symb. ii. 635).

St. John teaches that this Scripture was fulfilled in the crucifixion of Christ (John xix. 36). St. John adopts the remarkable verb here used by the Septuagint for break, συντριβω, which makes his reference more clear. Thus he instructs us to apply this history to Him, and to recognize Christ as prefigured by the Passover: see S. Aug., c. Faust. xii. 30; S. Cyril, Glaphyr. p. 274; de Ador. p. 598; and cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. p. 200, who affirms that in these words there is a prophetic reference to the punishment of crucifixion; and see above, on rr. 1. 9, and 15.

† Heb. do it.
1 Num. 9. 14.

m Num. 9. 14.
& 15. 15, 16.
Gal. 3. 28.

n ver. 41.

o ch. 6. 26.

a ver. 12, 13, 15.
ch. 22. 29, 30. &
34. 19.
Lev. 27. 26.
Num. 3. 13. &
8. 16, 17. & 18. 15.
Deut. 15. 19.
Luke 2. 23.
b ch. 12. 42.
Deut. 16. 3.
† Heb. servants.
c ch. 6. 1.
d ch. 12. 8.

e ch. 23. 15. &
34. 18.
Deut. 16. 1.
f ch. 3. 8.
g ch. 6. 8.

h ch. 12. 25, 26.

i ch. 12. 15, 16.

k ch. 12. 19.

l ver. 14.
ch. 12. 26.

m See ver. 16.
ch. 12. 14.
Num. 15. 39.
Deut. 6. 8. &
11. 18. Prov. 1. 9. Isa. 49. 16. Jer. 22. 24. Matt. 23. 5.

gation of Israel shall † keep it. ⁴⁸ And ¹ when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof. ⁴⁹ ^m One law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you. ⁵⁰ Thus did all the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

⁵¹ ⁿ And it came to pass the selfsame day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt ^o by their armies.

XIII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² ^a Sanctify unto me all the firstborn, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast: it is mine.

³ And Moses said unto the people, ^b Remember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of † bondage; for ^c by strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place: ^d there shall no leavened bread be eaten. ⁴ ^e This day came ye out in the month Abib. ⁵ And it shall be when the LORD shall ^f bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he ^g sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, ^h that thou shalt keep this service in this month. ⁶ ⁱ Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD. ⁷ Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall ^k no leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.

⁸ And thou shalt ^l shew thy son in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt. ⁹ And it shall be for ^m a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the LORD's law may be in thy mouth: for with a strong hand — of beast] See v. 15.

— it is mine] Therefore Christ Jesus, being the firstborn son of the Blessed Virgin Mary (Matt. i. 25), was presented to the Lord in the substance of our flesh (see Luke ii. 23), and His true humanity was proved (see S. Hippolyt. de Antiehr. § 22); and He taught a lesson of obedience, and set His seal on the Levitical Law, by conforming to it. And we were presented in Him, Who is our Second Adam, and were accepted by God in Christ, Who is the Holy One, Emmanuel, God manifested in the flesh (see on Luke ii. 22, 23).

Observe, all the firstborn were to be sanctified: whatsoever openeth the womb; and to be sanctified very soon after the birth (cp. Num. xviii. 16. Lev. xii. 2, 3), without any reference to the question whether there might be afterwards any second born, or no. This is one of the considerations which serve to explain why St. Matthew calls our Blessed Lord the firstborn son of the Virgin Mary; and it shows that the phrase of the Evangelist does not imply (as some have imagined) that the Blessed Virgin had other children after the birth of Christ: see on Matt. i. 25; and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iii. pp. 174, 175.

3. Remember this day] The Passover and the redemption of the firstborn by the blood of the lamb were a figure of the redemption of "the Church of the firstborn" (Heb. xii. 23) by the blood of Christ (Bp. Andrewes, ii. 296, 297).

4. Abib] Literally, an ear of corn (Exod. ix. 31); from abab, to produce fruit, especially early spring fruit: cp. Aprilis, from aperio, to open; and ἀνοίξις, the modern Greek word for the season of Spring, from ἀνοίγω, to open.

6. Seven days] See xii. 15, 16: cp. Deut. xvi. 8, where it is said, "Six days shalt thou eat unleavened bread," and besides this, on the seventh day of unleavened bread an holy convocation shall be held.

9. And it shall be for a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes] See below, on v. 16.

48. And when a stranger shall—keep the passover] Here is an intimation that strangers were to be received into the Church of God, which is done by the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Who is the true Passover, to the Heathen (Theodore).

CH. XIII. 2. Sanctify unto me all the firstborn] Who are Mine by creation, and by redemption, because when I slew the firstborn of Egypt I passed over them, and brought them forth out of the house of bondage: see v. 12.

Christ is God's firstborn (cp. Heb. i. 6. Matt. i. 25); and all who are baptized into Him have put on Christ (Gal. iii. 27); and being members of Christ, the first-begotten and only-begotten Son, they become God's firstborn, and are therefore called the Church of the firstborn (Heb. xii. 23). Christ sanctified Himself for their sake (John xvii. 19), and they have been redeemed to God by His blood (Rev. v. 9); and they are to be sanctified to God. And therefore the Apostle says, "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God" (Rom. xii. 1). "Ye are bought with a price, therefore glorify God in your body" (1 Cor. vi. 20). "And as He which called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation" (1 Pet. i. 15).

— firstborn, whatsoever openeth the womb] Here are two conditions: the offspring, here described, is to be the firstborn of the father and of the mother. A man who had many wives could not have more than one firstborn. It was also to be a male: see v. 12; and on Num. iii. 43.

This command was prospective: it was grounded on the deliverance from Egypt (see Num. iii. 13; viii. 17), and did not refer to those who had been born before the Exodus. This is necessary to be borne in mind in connexion with the question concerning the number of the firstborn, in Num. iii. 43.

— whatsoever openeth the womb] Literally, the opening of every womb: cp. v. 12, and Num. viii. 16.

hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt. ¹⁰ Thou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in his season from year to year.

¹¹ And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, as he swore unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee,

¹² That thou shalt † set apart unto the LORD all that openeth the matrix, and every firstling that cometh of a beast which thou hast; the males shall be the LORD's. ¹³ And ^p every firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a || lamb; and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and all the firstborn of man among thy children ^a shalt thou redeem.

¹⁴ And it shall be when thy son asketh thee † in time to come, saying, What is this? that thou shalt say unto him, ^s By strength of hand the LORD brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage: ¹⁵ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would hardly let us go, that ^t the LORD slew all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both the firstborn of man, and the firstborn of beast: therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the firstborn of my children I redeem. ¹⁶ And it shall be for "a token upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes: for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

¹⁷ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was

o ver. 2.
ch. 22. 29. &
34. 19.
Lev. 27. 26.
Num. 8. 17. &
18. 15.
Deut. 15. 19.
Ezek. 44. 30.
† Heb. cause to pass over.
p ch. 34. 20.
Num. 18. 15, 16.
|| Or, kid.
q Num. 3. 46, 47.
& 18. 15, 16.
r ch. 12. 26.
Deut. 6. 20.
Josh. 4. 6, 21.
† Heb. to-morrow.
s ver. 3.
t ch. 12. 29.

u ver. 9.

12. that cometh] Literally, a casting forth.

13. every firstling of an ass] The ass was chosen as the representative of unclean animals (such as horses and camels: see Num. xviii. 15: cp. Exod. xxxiv. 20), because the ass was probably the only beast of burden which the Israelites had in the wilderness.

— thou shalt redeem] Being unclean, it could not be offered, as the firstborn of sheep and oxen, which were clean, could, and must be (S. Cyril, Glaphyr. p. 278).

— with a lamb] A clean animal; and with the addition of a fifth part of the value (Lev. xxvii. 27).

— thou shalt break his neck] This was wisely provided as a safeguard against covetousness and sacrilege. The owner would not choose such an alternative as this (which was prescribed by way of penalty and fine, in order that the precept might not be evaded), and therefore he would redeem the ass.

This is the answer to those who have taken occasion from this command to charge the Divine legislator with cruelty. Similar safeguards against covetousness and sacrilege may be seen in Lev. xxvii. 10. 33.

— all the firstborn of man among thy children shalt thou redeem] They are due to God, but they were to be redeemed. First, because by nature they were impure; and because, also, God would show His displeasure against the human sacrifices of the heathen; and because he would give a figurative foreshadowing of the redemption of Mankind to be effected by the blood of His own Son, "the firstborn of every creature" (Col. i. 15. Heb. i. 6). Cp. S. Greg. Nyssen. de Occursu Domini, ii. p. 882; S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Exod. lib. ii. p. 278, ed. 1638.

— shalt thou redeem] For five shekels (Num. xviii. 16).

14. in time to come] Literally, to-morrow: see Gen. xxx. 33. Deut. vi. 20. Josh. iv. 6. 21.

15. when Pharaoh would hardly let us go] Rather, when Pharaoh hardened himself as to letting us go, i. e. so as not to let us go (Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac, and Arabic: cp. Kalisch and Ainsworth, on Gen. xxxvi. 6, where the Hebrew preposition is used in a similar sense).

16. And it shall be for a token upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes] Frontlets.—totaphoth (cp. Deut. vi. 8; xi. 18), bands, fillets, probably from tuph, to surround (Ges., p. 320: cp. 2 Sam. i. 10. Esth. viii. 15; and see Pfeiffer, Dubia p. 120; Kalisch, p. 225). On this text, and on Num. xv. 37—41, and Deut. vi. 9; xi. 20, the Jews have grounded the practice of having three distinct visible memorials of divine commands and national blessings, viz.,—

(1) Memorials to be worn on the arm and forehead, tephillim (either from phalal, to pray: tephillah, prayer; Gesen. 871, or from taphal, to sew), phylacteries (Matt. xxiii. 5), inscribed with texts of the Law (especially Exod. xiii. 1—10. 11—16. Deut. vi. 4—9; xi. 13—21), and bound about the head and arm, and worn especially at the season of prayer, and called therefore prayer-bands (Winer, R. W. B. ii. 260; Keil, Archæol. i. 342; Farrar in B. D. i. 634).

(2) Tsitsith (κράσμεθα), fringes, worn on the garment, also inscribed with texts: see on Num. xv. 37—41; and Matt. xxiii. 5; and xiv. 36.

(3) Mezuzoth, texts written on the door-posts of houses (Deut. vi. 9).

Doubtless Moses prescribed external memorials; and the opinion which regards this precept as merely figurative seems inadmissible. Indeed, the figurative expressions in Prov. iii. 3; vi. 21; vii. 3, "Bind them (my precepts) round thy neck, on thy heart, on thy hand," presuppose literal practices, from which the metaphor was derived; and these practices appear to have been based on the commandment in this text and the parallel passages in the Books of Numbers and Deuteronomy.

On this subject the reader may refer to Othon, Lexicon Rabbin. p. 756; Buxtorf, Synagog. Jud. p. 170; Ainsworth, p. 47; and Kalisch, pp. 224—227; and the authorities quoted below, in the notes on Matt. xxiii. 5.

17.] Here begins a new Parashah or Proper Lesson of the Law, and is continued to Exod. xvii. 16. The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is Judg. v. 1—31, the Song of Deborah and Barak; a sequel to the Song of Moses here, chap. xvi.

— God led them] Cp. v. 21, the Lord went before them. In these few words is an answer to all the objections that have been raised, or can be raised, to the history of the Wanderings of the Israelites in the wilderness. How could they be maintained there? How could their cattle subsist? The answer is, God was their leader, the Lord of heaven and earth, He who made all things and sustains all things, He was their Guide. He was their Shepherd. They were His Flock; and He fed them. It is enough to know this. "The Lord is my Shepherd, therefore can I lack nothing," Ps. xxiii. 1: see above, on xii. 38.

God was their leader (see v. 18. 21, 22). This must be borne in mind, in order that we may not fall into great perplexities, as some have done, in tracing their route here; and that we may not charge Moses with "unaccountable infatuation" for leading them, as they were led, into what has been regarded as a needless difficulty, a dilemma between the Egyptians and the Red Sea, by what has been called "a foolish march" and "a false movement," by some modern Critics and Historians.

"God's foolishness is wiser than men" (1 Cor. i. 25), and that very difficulty and dilemma, which some have regarded as signs of infatuation in their leader, were designed by God for wise purposes, as we shall find: see v. 18, and xiv. 1—3.

x ch. 14. 11, 12.
Num. 14. 1—4.
y Deut. 17. 16.
z ch. 14. 2.
Num. 33. 6, &c.

|| Or, by five in a rank.

near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people ^x repent when they see war, and ^y they return to Egypt: ¹⁸ But God ^z led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red sea: and the children of Israel went up || harnessed out of the land of Egypt. ¹⁹ And Moses took the bones of Joseph

There was also a deep spiritual mystery here, a prophecy of Christ and of His Exodus (see below, v. 18).

Observe also that it is here said that God (Elohim) led them; and in v. 21, that the Lord went before them; a declaration that the Lord of Israel is the God of the Universe; and a preparation for the wonderful history of His mighty working in the elements, for the delivery of His People, and for the overthrow of His enemies.

— not through (or by, or in) the way of the—Philistines] Toward the Philistines: cp. v. 18, the way of the wilderness; and Num. xiv. 25; and Matt. x. 5, ὁδὸν ἐθνῶν.

— although that was near] Literally, because it was near; and so Sept., Vulg., Syriac, Arabic, and Onkelos, and this seems to be the true meaning. The way thither, from Rameses to Gaza, was near, only about ten days' journey (Robinson, i. 124. 438; Kalisch, p. 223); but the very nearness made it objectionable, because it would have brought them very soon into the country of a warlike enemy: and God would not put any stumbling-blocks in their way, which might cause them to turn back in fear.

The Israelites were as yet in a state of weakness and degradation, produced by their bondage in Egypt; and God would strengthen and elevate them. They were as yet like children, and He would train and educate them by moral and spiritual discipline, in their sojourn in the Wilderness, which was to be their school for Canaan. He would exercise their faith in His power and love, and make them obedient to His law. Therefore He did not lead them by the way from Rameses to Gaza, because it was near. Milton (Paradise Lost, xii. 223) has caught the true meaning of the words,—

“This also shall they gain by their delay
In the wide wilderness, there they shall find Their government, and their great senate choose
Through the twelve tribes to rule by laws ordained.
God from the mount of Sinai, whose grey top Shall tremble, He descending will Himself
In thunder, lightning, and loud trumpet's sound,
Ordain them laws; part such as appertain
To civil justice; part religious rites
Of Sacrifice, informing them by types
And shadows of that destined Seed to bruise
The Serpent, by what means He shall achieve
Mankind's deliverance.”

The pilgrimage in the wilderness was their Education for Christianity.

18. But God led the people about, through the way of the wilderness] Or, rather, God made them to turn to the way of (or, toward, see v. 17) the wilderness. The word rendered in our English Version, led them round (yasseb, the hiphil of sabab, to turn), signifies “he caused them to turn” (see Gesen., p. 577), instead of going in a straight line, as they would naturally have done. He made them to turn to the south-east, instead of marching to the north. It was God who brought them into the difficulty which is about to be described, and which tempted Pharaoh to follow them—to his own destruction: see v. 17.

— of the wilderness of the Red sea] A remarkable declaration; not the wilderness of Sinai; which would indeed have been a deviation from the straight route, but would have placed them in less peril. He bade them turn even into the wilderness of the Red Sea, so as to have the Red Sea in their front; hence they seemed to Pharaoh to be “entangled in the land,” his own land—the land of Egypt; and he said, “The wilderness hath shut them in:” see xiv. 1—3.

In order to read this history aright, we must consider the spiritual Antitype. Israel was God's firstborn, His dear Son (Exod. iv. 22. Jer. xxxi. 9); and so Israel was a figure of Christ, the only-begotten, dearly beloved Son. And Israel, in his Exodus, was a figure of Christ, coming forth out of Egypt (see Matt. ii. 15. Hos. xi. 1), and in conquering His enemies and ours by His Death and Passion, and leading us out of the bondage of a spiritual Egypt.

Now, in the Passion of Christ there seemed to be a temporary triumph to the Evil One; as there seemed to be a certain prospect of victory to Pharaoh in the Exodus of Israel.

Satan tempted Judas to betray Christ. He stirred up the People to cry “Crucify Him!” Christ, in “His Exodus” (see Luke ix. 31), seemed to be caught in a snare, “to be entangled in the land, and to be shut in by a wilderness.” He appeared to be brought into a difficulty like that of the Israelites. Satan exulted, as Pharaoh did for a time. He imagined that he had caught his prey. But all this was permitted by God for a wise purpose, in order that His Name might be magnified even through the wiles and malice of Satan himself, and that Satan might fall into his own snare. Pharaoh rejoiced when he heard that the Israelites had not gone up by the straight route toward Palestine. He triumphed in what he supposed to be their infatuation, their “foolish march,” their “false movement” (as some Critics and Historians have called it), to the south, and toward the wilderness of the Red Sea. But all this was God's doing. Pharaoh imagined that the Red Sea would destroy the Israelites. But it was by the Red Sea that Pharaoh and his hosts were destroyed. So the Apostle says of Christ, “By Death (by the Red Sea of His Own Blood), Christ destroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the Devil” (Heb. ii. 14). To the Cross, on which He was nailed, He nailed Satan, and triumphed over him by it, and rescued the world from his grasp (see below, on Col. ii. 15).

The “Cross of Christ was to the Greeks foolishness” (1 Cor. i. 23), and the route of Moses (which God Himself prescribed, v. 17) is “foolishness” to many of the wise of this world. But by the “foolishness of that route” God overcame Pharaoh, and delivered Israel; and by “the foolishness of the Cross” God vanquished Satan, and redeemed the World.

— and the children of Israel went up harnessed out of the land of Egypt] Harnessed, Heb. chamushim: cp. Josh. i. 14; iv. 12. Judg. vii. 11, where the same word is used.

Three interpretations have been given to this word, according to different etymologies.

(1) It has been derived from chamash (allied to another root, chamas and chamats), signifying to be active, eager, nimble, brave, and therefore fit for war; and it has been rendered equipped, harnessed (Gesen., p. 291), and so Aquila, Symmachus, Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac, S. Jerome, Epist. Crit. ad Dam. Epist. 125. qu. 2; Aben Ezra.

(2) It has been derived from chomesh, the loins, “the fifth rib,” 2 Sam. ii. 23; iii. 27; iv. 6; xx. 10; and has been connected with the word chalats, to be active, to be girded, derived from chalats, the loins; and it is observable that the word chalutsim, which signifies with the loins girt (Gesen., p. 283), is also translated armed, in Ancient Versions, in Num. xxxii. 30. 32: cp. Deut. iii. 18.

Perhaps, therefore, chamushim here may signify “with loins girt;” so Keil, who says “the word is connected with chomesh, the loins, and means properly ‘with loins girt,’ as is proved from the comparison of the word chamushim in Josh. i. 14; iv. 12, with chalutsim in Num. xxxii. 30. 32. Deut. iii. 18; and that it does not mean armed, but in regular order, not in confusion as if they had been fugitives.” God led them; and they followed Him not with sword and spear, but in faith.

(3) It has been derived from chamesh, five, and it has been rendered five in a rank, as in our margin here, and in Josh. i. 14. Judg. vii. 11; and so Theodotion here, Fuller, Montanus, Rivetus, Juinus, Iffeffer (Dubia, p. 121), and Lengerke (Kenan, p. 426), taking the word in a figurative sense, well ordered, as by Jves.

Others render it “in five sections,” viz. the right and left wings, the centre, the van, and the rear. Freytag; Ewald, ii. 54; cp. Kalisch, p. 623. The Sept. renders it “in the fifth generation.” On this subject the reader may consult Dr. McCaul, Answer to Colenso, p. 49; and Dr. Benisch, pp. 4—9, both of whom reject the rendering armed.

Whatever the etymology may be, the sense appears to be (to which all these derivations lead) that the Israelites did not go out of Egypt in confusion, like a promiscuous multitude of fugitives, but well organized and marshalled, under the guidance of God Himself: see v. 17, 18: cp. Bp. Horsley, p. 92.

There is therefore no reason for the question which has been put by some,—

“How is it possible that 600,000 Israelites could have procured arms?”

We are not to suppose that they had arms. God would with him: for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, ^a God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you.

a Gen. 50. 25.
Josh. 24. 32.
Acts 7. 16.

²⁰ And ^b they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness. ²¹ And ^c the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night: ²² He took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people.

b Num. 33. 6.

c ch. 14. 19, 24.
& 40. 38.
Num. 9. 15. &
10. 34. & 14. 11.
Deut. 1. 33.
Neh. 9. 12, 19.
Ps. 78. 14. &
90. 7. & 105. 39.
Isa. 4. 5.
1 Cor. 10. 1.

XIV. ¹ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children reserve all the glory of the Victory for Himself. They were not to trust in an arm of flesh. "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts" (Zech. iv. 6). It was with them as with the force of Deborah; the Lord was their shield, and buckler, and their spear; but "was there a shield or a spear seen among forty thousand in Israel?" (Judg. v. 8).

The triumphal hymn of Deborah is the Proper Prophetical Lesson coupled with this Lesson from the Law: see on v. 17, and it is a divinely-inspired commentary upon it. Deborah begins her song with a thankful reference to God as the Great Captain of Israel in their march. Judg. v. 3—5. As Moses himself said, "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord. The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace" (xv. 13, 14). Arms therefore were unnecessary; they would have been an incumbrance, like Saul's armour to David, when he went to meet the Philistine with a sling and a stone; and would have detracted from the glory of the Victory.

It is not without reason, that the Israelites have been already described as having "their kneading-troughs bound up with their clothes on their shoulders" (xii. 34), and that the precept was given for their accoutrement and demeanour in eating the Passover. "Ye shall eat it with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand" (xii. 11). Strengthened with this food, they were to go forth, as pilgrims travelling onward to Canaan—the type of heaven.

May we not say, that we have here an image of the Church Universal, not relying on an arm of flesh, and on carnal weapons of this world, but fed with divine food, and marching in quiet order, and regular array, through the wilderness of this world, under the guidance of God, to her heavenly Rest?

19. And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him] Another evidence that they did not go forth in hurry and confusion. Moses remembered the command of Joseph, given more than a hundred and fifty years before: see Gen. i. 25. Joseph's bones were carried through the wilderness to Sichem, and were buried there (Josh. xxiv. 32), with the bones of the other patriarchs. See note on Acts vii. 15, 16, p. 68; and S. Jerome, c. Vigilant. Ep. 37.

20. Succoth] Heb. booths, i. e. for shepherds.

— Etham, in the edge of the wilderness] Of the Red Sea (see v. 18: cp. xiv. 3), not far from the head of the gulf of Suez, supposed to be near Agirud by Niebuhr (p. 408). Others suppose Agirud to be P^h-hahiroth (Winer: cp. Stanley, p. 66).

21. the Lord went before them] A fact, which explains the route taken by them, which otherwise might have seemed inexplicable. See v. 18; and xiv. 3. The Lord, called in the next chapter (v. 19) "the Angel of God;" and St. Paul teaches us that Christ was with the Israelites (1 Cor. x. 9).

THE PILLAR OF CLOUD AND FIRE.

— by day in a pillar of a cloud] A lofty column rising toward heaven; to shelter them from the heat by day (Ps. cv. 39), as well as to guide them by night in a pillar of fire. Cp. Num. ix. 17, 18. Deut. i. 33.

So Christ goes before His Church, and leads, protects, and enlightens her in her earthly pilgrimage; see Isa. iv. 5, 6: cp. 1 Cor. x. 1, 2, where St. Paul says, "All our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud, and in the sea." They were initiated into faith in Moses as their mediator with God (Gal. iii. 19), and as the figure of Christ.

22. He took not away the pillar] Rather, the pillar of cloud never failed by day, nor the pillar of fire by night (Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac, Arabic).

The Pillar was a manifestation of the Lord's resplendent glory and purity in the light, and of His awful majesty in the fire, and a guide and guardian to the Israelites (Neh. ix. 12. Ps. lxxviii. 14); and whenever the army encamped, it rested over the Holy Tabernacle (xl. 34. Num. ix. 15); and God's presence was in it (Num. xiv. 14), and spake out of it to Moses (Exod. xxxiii. 9. Num. xii. 5. Ps. xcix. 7); and in its protecting and refreshing shadow, and in its shining and guiding light, pure, bright, and glorious, Isaiah saw a symbol of God's Eternal Presence, shielding and illuminating Zion; and he foretold that it would be "upon every dwelling-place of Mount Zion, and upon her assemblies" (Isa. iv. 5), thus predicting the perpetual presence of God with the Universal Church.

The Pillar of the cloud and fire never failed by day and night. So Christ says to His people, "Lo, I am with you always (literally, all days), even to the end of the world" (Matt. xxviii. 20); and He promised to send the Blessed Comforter, to "teach her all things," and to "guide her into all truth," and to "abide with her for evermore" (John xiv. 16; xvi. 13). Cp. S. Ambrose de Sac. i. 6, who says that the Pillar of cloud was the illumination of the Holy Spirit given by Christ, and by which He dwells in the Church, and guides her. Here, then, in the Sea and the Pillar we see the water of baptism and the Holy Spirit united together, as in our Lord's words (John iii. 5: cp. Theodoret, Qu. 27).

For a confutation of the rationalistic allegations of Toland, and of others after him, that the Pillar of fire was only a military beacon,—a portable fire,—such as has been carried before Eastern armies, the reader may refer to Bibliotheca Biblica, ii. p. 170; and Keil, pp. 400, 401. Fairbairn, 11. 82.

CHAP. XIV.—PRELIMINARY NOTE ON THE PASSAGE OF THE RED SEA.

To read this history aright, we must consider what it represents.

Israel, "God's firstborn" (cp. Jer. xxxi. 9), the beloved child of God (Jer. xxxi. 20), is a figure of Christ, the firstborn beloved Son. Especially was he so in his coming out of Egypt (see Hos. xi. 1. Matt. ii. 15); and the holy Evangelist, St. Luke, by applying the word Exodus to Christ's Death and Resurrection (Luke ix. 31), leads us to regard Israel, in his Exodus from Egypt, and Passage through the Red Sea, as a figure of Christ, dying, going down into the depths of the Red Sea of His Passion, and rising again, and overthrowing His enemies in that Red Sea.

Pharaoh is called in the Scripture by the same title as Satan, the dragon: cp. Ps. lxxiv. 13; Isa. li. 9, 10. Ezek. xxix. 3.

Pharaoh and the Egyptians imagined that Israel was entangled in the desert, that "the wilderness had shut them in," and that they would be driven into the Sea, and overwhelmed thereby, but the Sea became a grave to the Egyptians themselves. So our ghostly Enemy imagined that he had destroyed Christ by Death; he said by the mouth of Priests and Pharisees, "He saved others, Himself he cannot save." But the Devil was caught in his own snare; he had instigated them to cause Him to be put to death; and "by Death Christ destroyed him that had the power of it, the Devil," and delivered them who through fear of Death were subject to bondage (Heb. ii. 14, 15), as the Israelites were delivered from the bondage of Egypt, and He rose, by a mighty triumph, in His glorious Resurrection from the dead. And as the Egyptians were swallowed up in the Red Sea (Heb. xi. 29), into which they drove the Israelites, who were delivered and triumphed over them, so Death was swallowed up in Victory by Christ (Isa. xxv. 8. 1 Cor. xv. 54); see on xiii. 18.

Christ is the Head, the Church Universal is His Body. His Passage through the Red Sea of His Passion, His rising again from the depths of the grave to a glorious victory, His overthrow of Satan, Death, and the Grave thereby, are not His triumphs only, but ours: cp. Origen, in Num. Hom. 17.

The Church of England uses the following words in her Office for the Ministration of Baptism, both of infants, and of those of riper years: "Almighty and Everlasting God, Who

a ch. 13. 18.
b Num. 33. 7.
c Jer. 44. 1.

of Israel, ^a that they turn and encamp before ^b Pi-hahiroth, between ^c Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.

didst safely lead the children of Israel, Thy people, through the Red Sea, figuring thereby Thy holy Baptism. . . ."

The Church regards the Passage of the Red Sea as a Type of that Sacrament, by which we are buried with Christ in His death, and in which we rise again with Him to newness of life, and are begotten again to a lively hope of eternal glory in body and soul, through His Resurrection from the dead, by which He overcame our spiritual enemies, Satan, Sin, and Death, and has made us partners of His Victory. See on Rom. vi. 2—5. 8—10, 11. Col. ii. 12; iii. 3, 4; and on 1 Pet. i. 3, 4.

The Church also marks the typical character of this History, and its connexion with Christ's Burial and Resurrection, by appointing the thirteenth chapter of Exodus to be read on EASTER EVEN, and the twelfth and fourteenth chapters of Exodus to be read on EASTER DAY, and by appointing the 114th Psalm ("When Israel came out of Egypt") to be a Proper Psalm on that Day.

The Holy Spirit in the Scriptures of the New Testament affirms the truth of this history, and has also taught us to regard the passage of the Red Sea in this spiritual light. See 1 Cor. x. 1, 2, "I would not have you ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea." And "these things were figures of us," τύποι ἡμῶν (v. 6). "They happened unto them (the Israelites) as types," or figures; and "were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come" (v. 11).

Accordingly, the Evangelical Prophet Isaiah connects the victorious passage of the Red Sea with the triumphs of the Church; and proceeds from the Type to speak immediately of the Antitype (see Isa. xi. 16; xii. 1—6).

The saints glorified in heaven unite the Type with the Antitype: "they stand on the sea of glass, having harps of God, and sing the Song of Moses, the servant of God, and the Song of the Lamb" (Rev. xv. 3). See note there, and Introduction to the Apocalypse, pp. 148, 149.

Therefore we are authorized, encouraged, and commanded to see ourselves in this history. Israel is called in Scripture God's son (Exod. iv. 23. Deut. xxxii. 6. Jer. iii. 19. Mal. ii. 10); and God's firstborn (Exod. iv. 22); and so was a type of Christ, God's firstborn, God's only-begotten everlasting Son, Who, by taking our nature, became the New Man, the Second Adam, the Father of the regenerate race, the Church of the firstborn, whose names are written in heaven (Heb. xii. 23): Christ is the first begotten of the dead, the firstfruits of the Resurrection. As Israel went down into the depths of the sea, in which his enemies were drowned, so Christ went down into the depths of the grave, and by going down thither overthrew our enemies. As Israel rose from the sea and sang a song of Victory, so Christ arose from the dead and triumphed, and said, "All power is given unto Me in heaven and earth" (Matt. xxviii. 18); and forthwith He gave His disciples a commission to bring all the World to Himself in the Sacrament of Baptism, of which this Passage was a Type. In that Sacrament He leads His people through the Red Sea, and baptizes them into His death, so that they may be conformed to it, and be partakers of its benefits, by dying unto sin; and He raises them up again from that death, leaving their ghostly enemies,—their spiritual Pharaoh and his Egyptians,—in the Baptismal waters (see on v. 27), and raises us up to the new life in which we walk through the wilderness of this world on a pilgrimage of trial to the heavenly Canaan of our rest and joy.

"Invocanda misericordia Dei, (says an ancient Father,) ut insequentem Pharaonem possimus effugere, et nobis in spirituali baptisate suffocetur" (Jerome, Mans. v.). When Israel is led out of Egypt, we see ourselves freed from the bondage of this world. When Pharaoh is overthrown in the sea, there we see Satan overwhelmed (S. Bernard, Sermon. 39, in Cantica).

On the passage of the Red Sea, as Typical of Christian Baptism, see Tertullian de Baptismo, c. 9; S. Cyprian, Epist. ad Magnum, 76; S. Ambrose de Sacr. ii. 6; S. Cyril, Cat. i.; S. Cyril. Alex. de Ador. ii. p. 87; S. Ilier., in Ps. 67. 134; S. Basil de Spir. c. 14; S. Augustine, c. Faust. xii. 29; Sermon. 213. 363; and in Ps. 43; S. Prosper Aquit. de Rom. i. 37; Theodoret, Qu. 27; and the notes below on 1 Cor. x. 1, 2, p. 114.

It has been supposed by some that the Passage of the Red Sea was on a Sabbath (from Deut. v. 15: see Joseph Mede, pp. 55, 56: ep. Bp. Pearson, p. 264, Art. v.), and that the Israelites went down into the depth of the Sea about the same time that Christ was in the Grave, and that they rose from it at about the time of His Resurrection; and thus we should have another symbolical reference to Baptism, which the Church of Christ connects with the Burial and Resurrection of Christ in her Collect and Epistle for Easter Even.

Certain it is, that the Jewish Sabbath was a memorial of the blessings bestowed on them in their Redemption from the land of bondage, and of their reception into a holy rest in the love and service of God (see Deut. v. 15, 16). The spiritual Antitype, namely, our Redemption by Christ, is commemorated by the Day of the Lord's Resurrection, which has succeeded into the place of the Jewish Sabbath, which was a memorial of the type and shadow of our Universal Redemption.

If the passage through the Red Sea was on the Sabbath, then "the morning watch, in which the Lord looked through the pillar of fire and the cloud, and troubled the host of the Egyptians" (v. 24), corresponded nearly to the hour when our Lord arose from the dead, and overthrew our ghostly enemies; for He rose very early in the morning, "when it began to dawn toward the first day of the week" (Matt. xxviii. 1. Mark xvi. 2. Luke xxiv. 1. John xx. 1).

And further, the first Pentecost would then also have been on a Sunday, as well as that Pentecost on which the type was fulfilled by the Descent of the Holy Ghost.

Such considerations as these are important in an historical point of view, and in the region of sacred evidences.

The passage of the Israelites through the Red Sea was a foreshadowing of events which are unique and without a parallel in the annals of Mankind, and which have an interest for every Nation in every age, in Time and in Eternity. It was figurative of Christ's Death and Resurrection,—of the overthrow of Satan by Him,—of the deliverance of all Mankind from his power,—of the glorious and triumphant march of the Church Universal out of a spiritual Egypt.

Are we then to be surprised that the Passage of Israel was miraculous? Marvellous rather would it have been, if it had not been attended, as the Crucifixion was, with wonderful manifestations of Divine Power in Earth, and Sky, and Sea.

2. Speak unto the children of Israel, that they turn and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon] The command was, not to go forward to the north-eastward, round the northern gulf of the Red Sea, but to turn (see Gesen., pp. 807, 808) to the south, so as to have the Red Sea in their front; and not to march onward, but to halt; to encamp before (probably to the east of) Pi-hahiroth, a name which signifies "mouth of passes, or rocky straits." Or, as some others suppose, pi is only the Egyptian article (Keil), and the word hachiroth occurs Num. xxxiii. 8. The site of Pi-hahiroth is probably at Adshared, or Agirud. From Adshared stretches a broad plain, about ten miles long, to the Red Sea (Robinson; Niebuhr; Burckhardt, Syr. p. 750).

Between Migdol (i. e. the tower, or fortress), probably near Bir Suez (Niebuhr), south of Agirud, on a height of the Atakah, near the Red Sea, over against Baal-zephon, probably the lord, god (idol) Typhon (Targum of Jonathan); or the place or possession of Typhon, i. e. sacred to him (Gesen., p. 131; Keil, p. 403: cp. below, on Lev. xxi. 4). Typhon was the Egyptian God who represented the power of evil (see Sharpe, Egypt. Mythol. pp. 7, 10).

The position of Israel is best explained by what is said by their Almighty Leader Himself in the next verse,—“Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.” “The land” here, in Pharaoh's mouth, is the land of Egypt, his own land, as in viii. 25, “Go ye, do sacrifice to your God in the land,” the Egyptian side of the Red Sea; and his meaning is, the wilderness, i. e. the wilderness of the Red Sea (xiii. 18); “not the Arabian, but the Egyptian desert” (Kalisch, p. 240), the wilderness, with its rocky defiles (with which the name of Pi-hahiroth is connected) has shut them in, shut them in “as in a prison,” so that they cannot get forth (cp. Ps. lxxxviii. 8, where these words are said of Christ); they are now entrapped there, and will fall an easy prey into my hands.

This “turning” of the Israelites was not a circuitous route, considered with respect to the divinely predetermined passage through the Red Sea; but irrespectively of that design, it was not only a roundabout way, but, according to human judgment, a foolish and infatuated march (see on xiii. 17).

The design of this divine direction was threefold,—

(1) To exercise the faith of the Israelites in the power of their Unseen Deliverer and Leader, Almighty God; and to

³ For Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, ^d They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in. ⁴ And ^e I will harden Pharaoh's heart, that he shall follow after them; and I ^f will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; ^g that the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

⁵ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and ^h the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us? ⁶ And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him: ⁷ And he took ⁱ six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over

d Ps. 71. 11.
e ch. 4. 21. & 7. 3.
f ch. 9. 16. ver. 17, 18.
Rom. 9. 17, 22, 23.
g ch. 7. 5.

h Ps. 105. 25.

i ch. 15. 4.

convince them, that, when all human helps failed, and when they seemed to be about to be swallowed up by their enemies, then He would interfere to rescue them and to overthrow their enemies; see note below, on Acts ix. 3, for examples of this method of divine operation; and Bp. Sanderson, iii. 342. As an ancient Father well said, "When we are nearest to the sword, then we are nearest to God; when we are in the midst of wild beasts, then we are in the hand of God" (S. Ignatius, ad Smyrn. c. 4). Thus it was with the disciples of Christ at His Crucifixion. Then all human hope had failed; but then the Resurrection was near; and Christ's Victory was achieved. So it will be at the end of the World. When Antichrist rages most fiercely, then Christ will come.

(2) Not to tempt Pharaoh and the Egyptians by a feint. No; this would have been unworthy of God; but to exercise their faith also; to lead them to consider, that the same Almighty Power, Who had signally punished by Ten Plagues those who had rebelled against Him and resisted Him, and had miraculously delivered His people, would not fail to protect them now that they were delivered; and therefore to try Pharaoh and his subjects; to allow them an opportunity of showing whether they had been corrected by the divine visitation of the Plagues, and whether they had really repented of their sin.

(3) But if Pharaoh and the Egyptians were still hardened, then God would be more magnified even through their pride and rebellion, and would achieve a full and final triumph by means of the Red Sea. As the King and People of Egypt had drowned the innocent infant children of God's people (i. 22), they themselves would be overwhelmed by water; and God's People would be delivered from them by means of the same element (Theodore). Thus "God would be honoured upon Pharaoh and all his hosts, that the Egyptians might know that He is the LORD;" as the Prophet says, "The Spirit of the Lord led the people through the deep, to make to Himself a Glorious Name" (Isa. lxxiii. 13, 14).

S. Irenæus draws a parallel between the Jews crucifying Christ, and being thus made instrumental in the salvation of the World, and the Egyptians pursuing the Israelites, and being made ministerial to the glory of God, and to the confirmation of our faith in Christ. "Ut ii per Egyptiorum, nos per Judeorum cœcitatem, accepiamus salutem" (Irenæus, iv. 4. 7).

There is something significant in the name Baal-zephon, or place of Typhon (as Gesenius and others interpret it), over against which the Israelites encamped.

Typhon, as worshipped by the Egyptians, represented the Power of Evil, the malignant demon, the enemy of Osiris, and of all good. "Typhon," says Mr. Sharpe (Egypt. Myth. p. 8), "is the Author of Evil" (cp. Mr. Deane, Serpent Worship, p. 313, where he is described as a monster with a human head, and with arms and feet terminating in serpentine folds, and snakelike contortions).

Perhaps the Egyptians may have supposed, that the Evil Genius whom they worshipped, would be a Demon of ill to the Israelites who did not worship him. But God had said that "against all the gods of Egypt I will execute My judgments" (xii. 12). And this divine promise seems to have had a special fulfilment in the execution of the divine retribution in this place, where one of their gods was worshipped, and which bore his name. S. Jerome seems to have entertained this opinion, "Baal-zephon idoli arcanæ contemnimus" (Mansio iv.).

When we consider the prophetic significance of the Exodus, and of the passage of the Red Sea, this name, Baal-zephon, may appear more remarkable.

Israel, "God's firstborn," in his Exodus was a figure of Christ in His conquest over Satan, and of "the Church of the firstborn" who conquer by Him. His victory was a triumph achieved over the Power of Evil. At His Passion He encamped over against Baal-zephon; His Church in this world encamps against the Baal-zephon of the spiritual Egypt. Satan rages against her, but Christ is with her, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against her (Matt. xvi. 18). She seems often to be "entangled in the land;" and the "wilderness to have shut her in;" but she encamps there in faith, and sees "the salvation of God."

— before it shall ye encamp by the sea] The precise spot where the Israelites encamped, and where they crossed the Red Sea, cannot be determined. There is reason to believe that the Red Sea has receded considerably from the north during the last 3000 years: see Bois Aymé, Niebuhr, and others quoted by Winer, R. W. B. ii. 71; and Kalisch, p. 233.

Some suppose the passage to have been to the south of Atakah, near the valley of Bedeia; but the breadth of the sea is said to be too great there for them to have passed in one night (Robinson, i. 93).

Others suppose it to have been more to the north, and nearer Suez, and not far from Kolsoum (Kalisch, pp. 239. 251: cp. Stanley, Palestine, pp. 36. 66). This northern site seems most probable, for though doubtless under their infatuation described in v. 17, the Egyptians might have been tempted to follow the Israelites almost any where, and have supposed it possible for themselves to go safely wherever the Israelites went, yet it is more likely that this would have been the case in a more northerly position, where the sea is narrower and shallower, than in a spot where it is more than twelve miles broad. The various opinions may be seen in Winer, ii. pp. 72, 73; Kittó's Hist. of Palestine, i. 77; Niebuhr's Description of Arabia, pp. 409—414. Mr. R. S. Poole in Dr. Smith's B. D. i. 148. 598; ii. 1017; and in the elaborate article by Mr. Hayman, ibid. ii. p. 1748.

6, 7. And he made ready his chariot—And he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt] Which was famed for horses and war chariots, similar to the Greek and Roman cars (Homer, II. v. 837; Herod. 113; Virgil, Georg. iii. 103). On the Egyptian military forces, especially in chariots for battle (which may be seen represented in ancient Egyptian pictures in the British Museum and elsewhere), see Rosellini, ii. p. 232; Wilkinson, i. 288. 335; Hengstenberg, p. 127; and Mr. R. S. Poole's article on Egypt, in Dr. Smith's B. D. i. pp. 503. 511; and Ibid. p. 296.

The chariots of Pharaoh are here stated to be six hundred. Here is an evidence of veracity.

It has been alleged, by some recent writers, that there are exaggerations in the numbers of the Israelites in the Mosaic narrative, and that we ought not to be surprised that there are such exaggerations in Exodus, because "exaggerations are common in the writings of Herodotus, Livy, and other classical historians, and also in the history of Josephus." As a specimen of the exaggeration of Greek historians, it has been observed, that they speak of "five millions and a half in the army of Persia" invading Greece, and overcome by the handful of Greek warriors at Marathon.

But there is no such analogy between the two cases.

If the Bible had been written by a Hebrew Herodotus, a Livy, or a Josephus, we might indeed have had exaggerations; but the exaggerations would not have been in the number of the Israelites, but of their enemies, the Egyptians; in order that greater glory might accrue to Israel from the overthrow; and we should have had a diminution of the number of Israelites for a similar reason.

It is observable that Josephus, whose tendency it is to imitate the classical historians in their high colouring of historical events, in order to obtain greater glory for their own nation, adds to Pharaoh's army 200,000 footmen, and 50,000 horsemen (Ant. ii. 15. 3), of which the Bible says nothing.

k ver. 4. every one of them. ⁸ And the LORD ^k hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and ^l the children of Israel went out with an high hand. ⁹ But the ^m Egyptians pursued after them, all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army, and overtook them encamping by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

¹⁰ And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were sore afraid: and the children of Israel ⁿ cried unto the LORD. ¹¹ And they said unto Moses, Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt? ¹² Is not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

¹³ And Moses said unto the people, ^q Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will shew to you to day: || for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to day, ye shall see them again no more for ever. ¹⁴ The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall ^s hold your peace.

r ver. 25. Deut. 1. 30. & 3. 22. & 20. 4. Josh. 10. 14, 42. & 23. 3. 2 Chron. 20. 29. Neh. 4. 20. Isa. 31. 4. s Isa. 30. 15.

And, as classical historians exaggerated the numbers of the enemies of their own nations, so they extenuated the force of their own countrymen. If Moses had been an Herodotus, he would not have assigned so many as six hundred thousand male adults (i. e. about 2,500,000 souls in all) to the Israelitish side, and so few as six hundred chosen chariots to the Egyptians.

There is no reason to suppose any error here. At the same time one general remark may be added as to the numbers in our present copies of Holy Scripture.

Copyists are peculiarly prone to err in the transcription of numbers; and there may be probably some numerical inaccuracies in some of our present Manuscripts and Translations of the Bible; and yet some modern critics and historians do not scruple to charge the Sacred Text itself with those errors, as if the Text were the same thing as an incorrect copy of it; and they even proceed to ground their own theories, concerning the Inspiration of the Bible, on their own confusion of the Sacred Original with erroneous transcripts of it.

— captains] Heb. shalishim: τριπύρας (Sept.), from shalish, a third, explained by S. Jerome (in Ezek. xxiii.) to mean the nobles of the second rank after the king, but by Origen as those picked soldiers who fought in sets of three in chariots. See Gesen., p. 828; Keil, p. 404, and on 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, asserts that it means “adjutants of the king.”

9. all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army] Rather, all the chariot horses (Onkelos, Kalisch), and riding horses, and his army. The Sacred Text is speaking of chariots, their horses, their drivers, and riders on horses. See 1 Kings iv. 26. Gesen., p. 693; Keil, p. 404; and cp. Clemens Rom., i. 51; and Hengstenberg, Egypt, pp. 127—129; Kalisch, pp. 212, 215.

It has been said by some that Pharaoh and the Egyptians had no cavalry; but see ch. xv. 1.

“Some put their trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will rejoice in the Name of the Lord our God” (Ps. xx. 7). The Egyptians trusted in their chariots and their horses; “but He Who maketh the Clouds His chariot, and rideth on the wings of the Wind” (Ps. civ. 3); and “Who rideth upon the Heavens as on a horse” (Ps. lxxiii. 4), “and Who is to be praised in His Name Jah.” He also rode on His chariots and horses. The Prophet Habakkuk describes Him as a mighty Conqueror, riding upon “chariots and horses of salvation,” and carrying His people through the sea: see Hab. iii. 8. 13. A noble picture of God’s Victory over the horses and chariots of Egypt, and applicable in a still higher sense to the Victory achieved by Him Who rode upon the Cross, as upon a car of triumph, and conquered his foes: see below, on Col. ii. 15.

— his army] Of infantry. An ancient representation of the Egyptian phalanx may be seen in Mr. Poole’s Article on Egypt, in Smith’s B. D. i. pp. 503, 504.

10. they were sore afraid] And they murmured against their Deliverer (v. 11, 12). Notwithstanding that they were 600,000 men, and had seen God’s miracles in Egypt. Here is a candid confession, confirming the truth of the historian. He does not flatter the Hebrew Nation; he does not disguise their failings. We may compare the honest avowal of the two Apostolic Evangelists, St. Matthew and St. John, confessing the weakness of faith of the Apostles and Disciples at the time of our Lord’s death, when He was about to overthrow our ghostly enemy, and to redeem the World. See Matt. xxvi. 56. John xx. 19. Cp. Luke xxiv. 21.

The ancient Hebrew Church received the Pentateuch as true, and as divinely inspired, although it records the unbelief of the Hebrew Nation. Here is a proof of the truth and inspiration of the Pentateuch: see above, Introd. p. xxxiii.

12. Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians] See here an image of the temper of those who reject the Cross of Christ, and prefer the service of this World.

13. the Egyptians whom ye have seen to day] Rather, as you have seen; that is, in the same condition as you now see them, confident of victory. Hereafter you will see them prostrate at your feet. See v. 30; so Sept., Onkelos, Augustine.

So, in a spiritual sense, though we still see our spiritual foe, yet he has no longer the same power that he had before Christ’s triumph over him, and before our Exodus. Christ has taken away his sting.

14. The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace] This announcement, and the previous exhortation, “Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which He will show to you to-day,” declare that when human help and hope failed, the divine arm wrought salvation, and the divine arm alone; and that the duty of the Israelites was to have faith in Him, and look with patience and trust for their deliverance.

Thus in a striking manner the victory of the Lord at the Red Sea exhibits the true character of its great Antitype in the History of Mankind, the Deliverance of the World by the “LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.”

When we were without help and hope, when, as far as man was concerned, we were ready to be devoured by our enemies, then His own arm wrought salvation (Isa. lxiii. 5); then by His free grace He delivered us (see Rom. ii. 20; ix. 11; xi. 6. Eph. ii. 9. 2 Tim. i. 9); then “the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost” (Titus iii. 4, 5). The Evangelical Prophet, Isaiah, in his sublime prophecy, appointed by the Church to be read as the Epistle on the Monday before Easter, couples the deliverance of Israel in the passage of the Red Sea with our Deliverance from our spiritual Enemy by the Redemption wrought for us in the Passion and Resurrection of Christ. “Who is this that cometh from Edom?” He remembered the days of old, Moses and his people, saying, “Where is He that brought them up out of the sea with the shepherd of his flock, that led them by the right hand of Moses with his glorious ¹⁵ And the LORD said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward: ¹⁶ But 'lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea. ¹⁷ And I, behold, I will "harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: and I will *get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen. ¹⁸ And the Egyptians 'shall know that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

¹⁹ And the angel of God, ² which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them: ²⁰ And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and ^a it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

²¹ And Moses ^b stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and ^c made the sea dry land, and the waters were ^d divided. ²² And ^e the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were ^f a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

²³ And the Egyptians pursued, and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen. ²⁴ And it came to pass, that in the morning watch ^g the LORD looked unto the host of the

t ver. 21, 26.
ch. 7. 19.

u ver. 8.
ch. 7. 3.
x ver. 4.

y ver. 4.

z ch. 13. 21. &
23. 20. & 32. 31.
Num. 20. 16.
Isa. 63. 9.

a See Isa. 8. 14.
2 Cor. 4. 3.

b ver. 16.

c Ps. 66. 6.

d ch. 15. 8.
Josh. 3. 16. &
4. 23.
Neh. 9. 11.
Ps. 74. 13. &
106. 9. & 114. 3.
Isa. 63. 12.
e ver. 29.
ch. 15. 19.
Num. 33. 8.
Ps. 66. 6. &
78. 13.
Isa. 63. 13.

g See Ps. 77. 17, &c.

1 Cor. 10. 1. He^c. 11. 29.

f Hab. 3. 10.

arm, dividing the water before them, to make himself an everlasting name?" (Isa. lxiii. 1—12.)

15. go forward] Here was a trial of their faith, and therefore the Apostle says, "By faith they passed through the Red sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians assaying to do, were drowned" (Heb. xi. 29).

16. lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it] Lest it might be said that the division of the Sea was due to natural causes, God commanded Moses to perform a visible act, in order that Moses might be known to be the doer of it in obedience to the divine will, and by the operation of the divine power; Moses was careful to say that it was "the LORD Who caused the sea to go back, and made the sea dry land," v. 21. The rod of Moses is regarded by many of the Fathers as an emblem of the Cross of Christ, by which He saves His people, and overcomes their enemies.

— divide it] See v. 21, the waters were divided; an answer to those who revive the ancient fiction (see Euseb., Præp. Ev. ix. 27), and allege that it was only by taking advantage of the low tide that the Israelites crossed over the bed of the sea: see also v. 22, "The children of Israel went into the midst of the sea, and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand and on their left;" and v. 29: cp. Ps. lxxvi. 5; lxxiv. 14; cvi. 9. Neh. ix. 11. Isa. lxiii. 12; and St. Paul's assertion, "Our fathers passed through the sea," 1 Cor. x. 1, 2.

The passage of the Red Sea seems to be referred to by Diodorus Siculus (iii. 39), who relates, that by a great ebb the whole gulf once became dry, the waters gathered on the opposite side so that the bottom was visible, and then a violent flood filled up the bed again; and Artapanus (apud Euseb., Præp. Evang. ix. 27) says, that the inhabitants of Heliopolis (On, in Egypt) relate that the king of Egypt, at the head of a great army, and accompanied by the sacred animals, pursued the Jews, who had carried off with them the wealth of the Egyptians; and that Moses, having been directed by a divine vision to strike the sea with his rod, touched the water with it, which divided itself, and the army went through on a dry road; but when the Egyptians tried to do the same and followed after them, fire flashed upon them, and the sea returned to its former place and drowned them: comp. Clem. Alex., Strom. i. p. 149.

19. the angel of God] See Gen. xxii. 11. Exod. iii. 2; xiii. 21; and xxiii. 20. Euseb., Dem. Ev. v. 11; S. Cyril de Ador. p. 86, who says, "By the Angel is signified Christ."

As a specimen of the care with which the Hebrews preserved and analyzed the Sacred Text, it may be observed that their Rabbis have noticed here that each of these three verses (19, 20, 21) has seventy-two letters.

20. it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these] The words to them and to these are not in the original, but have been rightly supplied by ancient Versions, e.g. the Syriac and Onkelos: cp. Kalisch, p. 249.

Such are all God's manifestations. They have a dark side and a light side. Such was Christ Himself (see Luke ii. 34). Such are all the means of grace (2 Cor. ii. 16). Such especially are the Holy Scriptures (see on Rev. ix. 13—19; and on Rev. xi. 5). Such is the present History of the passage of the Red Sea. To the Rationalist, who cavils at it, it is mere cloud and darkness; but to the reverent reader of Scripture it is a pillar of fire, and gives light by night; he sees in it an evangelical vision of Christ, Who by His Death and Resurrection brought life and immortality to light.

22. the waters were a wall] Moses is commanded by God to stretch out his rod over the sea, that it may cleave asunder to receive the people of God. The elements obey; and the waters, which they had dreaded, become to them a wall on the right hand and on the left: the waves stand up on a heap, and the billows bow down before them. The liquid becomes solid, and the bottom of the sea becomes like dust, that the people of God may pass over dryshod. Learn hence the goodness of the Creator; if thou obeyest His voice, and keepest His law, the elements themselves will serve thee (Origen).

23. the Egyptians pursued] Thou art baptized into Christ by water and the Holy Spirit; but remember that Egyptians are pursuing thee, and desire to bring thee back into bondage, namely, "the rulers of this world, and spiritual wickedness in high places;" but march on, turn not back, they will be drowned in the abyss, and thou "wilt sing a new song, the song of Moses and of the Lamb" (Rev. xv. 3). Origen, Hom. 5.

24. the morning watch] About two in the morning. Before the captivity, the Hebrews reckoned three watches in the night: the first from six to ten p.m. (Lam. ii. 19); the second from ten p.m. to two a.m. (Judge. vii. 19); the third from two a.m. to dawn (1 Sam. xi. 11). In our Lord's time they reckoned four: see Matt. xiv. 25.

"In the morning watch, the Lord looked unto the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled the host of the Egyptians," and delivered His people. So "in the fourth watch of the night JESUS went unto His disciples, walking on the sea" (Matt. xiv. 25). "And JESUS rose from the dead early in the morning on the first day of the

- Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled the host of the Egyptians, ²⁵ And took off their chariot wheels, || that they drave them heavily: so that the Egyptians said, Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD ^h fighteth for them against the Egyptians. ²⁶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ⁱ Stretch out thine hand over the sea, that the waters may come again upon the Egyptians, upon their chariots, and upon their horsemen. ²⁷ And Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the sea ^k returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it; and the LORD ^l † overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea. ²⁸ And ^m the waters returned, and ⁿ covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them; there remained not so much as one of them. ²⁹ But ^o the children of Israel walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.
- ³⁰ Thus the LORD ^p saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel ^q saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore. ³¹ And Israel saw that great † work which the LORD did upon the Egyptians: and the people feared the LORD, and ^r believed the LORD, and his servant Moses.
- XV. ¹ Then sang ^a Moses and the children of Israel this song unto the LORD, and spake, saying, week” (Mark xvi. 9), and troubled the host of the spiritual Egypt, and took off her chariot wheels, and overwhelmed our ghostly Enemy in the Red Sea of His own Blood.

— troubled the host of the Egyptians] With a fierce storm: see Ps. lxxvii. 18, 19. Probably of thunder and lightning: cp. Joseph., Ant. ii. 16. 3. Moses says nothing of the storm; he only says, “The Lord looked through the pillar of fire and of the cloud.” The sober simplicity of his language is an evidence of truth.

²⁵ that they drave them heavily] Or, he drave them on with violence. So Sept., Arabic. God drave them on with the storm of His fury into the deep, after their wheels were taken off.

²⁷ in the midst of the sea] So our spiritual enemies are shaken off (see marg.) in Baptism (Tertullian de Baptism. cp. 9; S. Cyril. Hieros., Cat. i.; S. Hilari., in Ps. 67; S. Prosper de Promiss. i. 38, who applies the words of Micah vii. 19, “He will have compassion upon us, he will subdue our iniquities; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.”)

²⁸ not so much as one of them] It has been questioned by many whether Pharaoh himself perished. This seems to be affirmed in xv. 9, 10, and Ps. cxxxvi. 15; and so Clemens Rom., Epist. i. 51; and so Theodoret, Qu. 25. Milton says (P. L. xii. 195),

“————— The sea
Swallows him and his host, but them lets pass
As on dry land between two crystal walls.”

³⁰ dead upon the sea shore] When the sea returned to its strength (v. 27), and the waters, which had been like a wall on the right and the left, came together, as it were, with a violent collision and crash, every thing between them would be hurled upward to the surface, and the force of the current, which, it appears, set eastward, would carry bodies and arms also to the eastern shore.

³¹ the people feared the LORD, and believed the LORD, and his servant Moses] Cp. 1 Cor. x. 1, 2.

CH. XV.] THE SONG OF MOSES.

Moses began and ended his career in the wilderness with a Song of praise to God: see Deut. xxxii. Here is an evidence of unity in the Pentateuch.

This triumphal hymn is divided into two portions, one retrospective and historical (vv. 1—12), which celebrates the deliverance of Israel; the other prospective and prophetic (vv. 13—18), which pre-announces the effects which will be produced by that glorious event upon heathen nations, such as Philistia, Edom, Moab, and which anticipates the blessedness of the future settlement of Israel in the land of Promise, and the establishment of God’s worship in a sanctuary there.

It consists of three strophes, each of which opens with the glorification of the Lord, and closes with the mention of the overthrow of the Egyptians His enemies: see vv. 2—5, 6—10, 11—16.

As to the structure of this Divine Poem, some Jewish writers, who were desirous of conciliating the popular mind of Greece and Rome, have asserted that it is composed in hexameter verse (Josephus, Ant. ii. 16. 4: cp. iv. 8. 4; vii. 12. 3; cp. Philo de Vit. Cont. p. 901); and some modern writers have endeavoured to reduce it to the laws of various classical metres. But these efforts are futile, and grounded on erroneous notions as to the genius of Hebrew poetry.

The rhythm of this song, and of Hebrew poesy generally, will be easily appreciated by all who pay attention to the parallelism of its different parts, which answers the same purpose as the strophe or antistrophe of lyrical composition; and is more effective in this respect, that the response follows more rapidly on the original utterance, and they are linked together like the suffrages in the iterative strain of a well-ordered Liturgy.

The three principal kinds of parallelism in this song are:—

(1) The synonymous or repetitive: see v. 2 (second half) 3, 4. 6. 8. 11. 14. 17.

(2) The antithetical: see vv. 16. 19.

(3) The synthetical, with a co-ordination, or progress of thought, which leads the mind onwards: see vv. 1, 2 (first half), 5. 7. 10. 12, 13. 15.

(4) A rapid replication: see v. 9. Cp. Kalisch, pp. 260, 261; and Bp. Lowth, Prælect. xix.; and Bp. Jebb; and the essays of Herder and others; and the Authors on Hebrew music referred to by Winer, R. W. B. ii. 121; and Wright, in Smith’s Bib. Dict. ii. 442—445.

Some critics in modern times have denied the genuineness of this song, and have asserted that it was later than the age of Moses, and even than the building of the Temple at Jerusalem, because it refers to the structure of God’s sanctuary on the holy mountain there (see on v. 17). But these allegations are refuted by the consideration that the Lord’s victory over the Egyptians, and the deliverance of His people, were pledges and earnest that all His promises to Israel would be fulfilled, and gave a natural occasion for a prophetic revelation of His future mercies to them: see Keil, pp. 408. 411. 413.

Besides, it is enough to remember that its genuineness is avouched by the Holy Spirit in the New Testament: see Rev. xv. 3, where mention is made of the Song of Moses as a well-known song; and no other song of Moses can there be meant than the present.

This song is recited by the Jews in their Synagogues on the seventh day of the Passover, when the passage of the Red

I will ^b sing unto the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously :

The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

² The LORD is my strength and ^c song,

And he is become my salvation :

He is my God, and I will prepare him ^d an habitation ;

My ^e father's God, and I ^f will exalt him.

³ The LORD is a man of ^g war : the LORD is his ^h name.

⁴ Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea :

^k His chosen captains also are drowned in the Red sea.

⁵ The depths have covered them :

^m They sank into the bottom as a stone.

⁶ Thy right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power :

Thy right hand, O LORD, hath dashed in pieces the enemy.

⁷ And in the greatness of thine ^o excellency thou hast overthrown them that rose up against thee :

Thou sentest forth thy wrath, which ^p consumed them ^q as stubble.

^r And ^s with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together,

^t The floods stood upright as an heap,

And the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

⁹ The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake,

I will ^u divide the spoil ; my lust shall be satisfied upon them ;

I will draw my sword, my hand shall || destroy them.

¹⁰ Thou didst ^x blow with thy wind, ^y the sea covered them :

b ver. 21.

c Deut. 10. 21.
Ps. 18. 2. & 22. 3.
& 59. 17. & 62. 6.
& 109. 1. &
118. 14. & 140. 7.
Isa. 12. 2.
Hab. 3. 18, 19.
d Gen. 28. 21, 22.
2 Sam. 7. 5.
Ps. 132. 5.
e ch. 3. 15, 16.
f 2 Sam. 22. 47.
Ps. 99. 5. &
118. 28.
Isa. 25. 1.
g Ps. 24. 8.
Rev. 19. 11.
h ch. 6. 3.
Ps. 83. 18.
i ch. 14. 28.
k ch. 14. 7.
l ch. 14. 28.
m Neh. 9. 11.
n Ps. 118. 15, 16.

p Ps. 59. 13.
q Isa. 5. 24. &
47. 14.
r ch. 14. 21.
2 Sam. 22. 16.
Job 4. 9.
2 Thess. 2. 8.
s Ps. 78. 13.
Hab. 3. 10.
t Judg. 5. 30.

u Gen. 49. 27.
Isa. 53. 12.
Luke 11. 22.
|| Or, repossesses.

x ch. 14. 21.
Ps. 147. 18.
y ver. 5. ch. 14. 28.

Sea is supposed by them to have taken place, and has been embodied in their daily liturgy (Hooker E. P. V. xxvi.).

For the Christian reader, the "Song of Moses" has a special interest, because the Holy Spirit in the Apocalypse puts it into the mouth of the saints redeemed by the blood of Christ, and glorified in heaven. After their victory they stand on the sea of glass,—formerly troubled, but now calm as crystal,—and mingled with fire, a record of judgment,—“and they have harps of God, and they sing the Song of Moses, the servant of God, and the Song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are Thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are Thy ways, Thou King of the nations. Who shall not fear Thee and glorify Thy Name? For all the Nations shall come and worship before Thee, for Thy judgments are made manifest.”

Thus the Holy Spirit teaches us to see in the Exodus from Egypt, and in the Passage through the Red Sea, a figure of our own deliverance and victory in Christ; and the Song of Moses has been consecrated for ever into a holy Epinicion of the Church (see above, note before chap. xiv.; and on Rev. xv. 3; and Introduction to the Apocalypse, pp. 148, 149). It is well said by an ancient Father, that “the things of the Old Testament were types of those of the New. The Law was the shadow, but the body is of Christ. The Red Sea is a figure of Baptism; the Cloud a type of the Spirit; Moses was a figure of Christ; his rod, of Christ's cross; Pharaoh and the Egyptians, of our spiritual foes; and as the Israelites, when they crossed the Red Sea, were delivered from them, so are we delivered from our enemies when we are baptized into Christ” (Theodoret, Qu. 37: cp. Mather on the Types, pp. 156—158).

1. Then sang Moses and the children of Israel] It has been supposed by some of the Rabbis that they sang antistrophically, the one responding to the other; or that Moses first sang each verse, and then the people followed (Philo de Agricolt. i. p. 312). This song was probably sung near the site now called Ayun Musa, or Well of Moses, on the eastern side of the northern part of the Red Sea (Burckhardt, ii. 702; Robinson, i. 90; Ritter, Erdk. xiv. 824).

— I will sing unto the LORD] So Miriam answers, Sing ye to the Lord (v. 21), and the song ends with an ascription of glory to the Lord, “The Lord shall reign for ever and ever,” a divine intimation from this—the first Hymn in the Bible—that the true end of Hymnology is to glorify God by the rehearsal of His mighty and merciful acts (see Col. iii. 16); an important principle which seems to have been too often forgotten in modern times, as is shown more at length in the Preface to “The Holy Year,” Lond. 1863.

2. The LORD] JAH in the original here; an abbreviated poetical form of JEHOVAH, or derived from the ancient pronunciation (Gesen., p. 335; Kalisch, p. 265), and added to many proper names.

It has a special significance to the Christian, as being adopted by the Church Universal upon Earth, and by the Church glorified in Heaven, in “HALLELU-JAH, the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth” (Rev. xix. 4. 6).

— my strength] My might, and therefore the subject of my thanksgiving and praise: see 1 Chron. xvi. 27. Ps. xxix. 1. Cp. Ps. viii. 2 with Matt. xxi. 16. The Lord is my strength: these words are often used by the prophets when celebrating the future glories of CHRIST: see Ps. cxviii. 14. Isa. xii. 2.

— I will prepare him an habitation] Rather, perhaps, I will make him glorious, I will glorify him. The original Hebrew word is the hiphal conjugation from navah, and signifies to adorn (Gesen. 538: cp. 524). It is, however, connected with the root naah, to sit, to dwell (valiev, Gesen., p. 524), whence the variations in the Versions, both ancient and modern: cp. Kalisch, p. 266.

3. a man of war] See Habakkuk iii. 8, 9. So Christ also is described (Ps. xxiv. 8; xlv. 4. Rev. vi. 2; xix. 11).

— the LORD is his name] He has now manifested the full meaning of that glorious Name by His victory over false gods and over those who worship them: see above, on vi. 3; and xii. 12.

4. hath he cast] hath He hurled—as a stone from a sling.

5. as a stone] Never more to rise: said of the enemies of Christ, in Rev. xviii. 21.

6. Thy right hand] Here begins the second strophe (v. 6—10) of the song; and in it there is an amplification of the former strophe, and a preparation for the third (v. 11—18).

8. The floods stood upright as an heap] Or, as a wall (ρείχος); Septuagint, ἐνάγη ὡς ρείχος τὰ ὕδατα: and so Onkelos, a translation which gives the force and beauty of the original: the foaming billows and floods (nozelim, from nozol, flowing) were suddenly fixed upright like a wall (ep. xiv. 22), properly a mound (ned): cp. Josh. iii. 13. 16. Ps. xxxiii. 7; lxxviii. 14.

— the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea] Literally, were drawn together, from kapha, to bind, whence kipaon, ice. The image has been happily transferred to the celebrated glacier of Chamounix, the “Mer de glace.”

10. Thou didst blow with thy wind] Eusebius adopted these

They sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 ^z Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the || gods?

Who is like thee, ^a glorious in holiness,

Fearful in praises, ^b doing wonders?

12 Thou stretchedst out ^c thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

13 Thou in thy mercy hast ^d led forth the people which thou hast redeemed:

Thou hast guided them in thy strength unto ^e thy holy habitation.

14 ^f The people shall hear, and be afraid:

^g Sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.

15 ^h Then ⁱ the dukes of Edom shall be amazed;

^k The mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them;

^l All the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away.

16 ^m Fear and dread shall fall upon them;

By the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still ⁿ as a stone;

Till thy people pass over, O LORD,

Till the people pass over, ^o which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and ^p plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance,

In the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in,

In the ^q Sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have established.

18 ^r The LORD shall reign for ever and ever.

19 For the ^s horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and ^t the LORD brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 And Miriam ^u the prophetess, ^x the sister of Aaron, ^y took a timbrel in her z 2 Sam. 7. 22.

1 Kings 8. 23.
Ps. 71. 19. &
86. 8. & 89. 6, 8.
Jer. 10. 6. &
49. 19.
|| Or, mighty ones?
a Isa. 6. 3.
b Ps. 77. 14.
c ver. 6.
d Ps. 77. 15, 20.
& 78. 52. & 80. 1.
& 106. 9.
Isa. 63. 12, 13.
Jer. 2. 6.
e Ps. 78. 54.
f Num. 14. 14.
Deut. 2. 25.
Josh. 2. 9, 10.
g Ps. 48. 6.
h Gen. 36. 40.
i Deut. 2. 4.
k Num. 22. 3.
Hab. 3. 7.
l Josh. 5. 1.
m Deut. 2. 25. &
11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
n 1 Sam. 25. 37.
o ch. 19. 5.
Deut. 32. 9.
2 Sam. 7. 23.
Ps. 74. 2.
Isa. 43. 1, 3. &
51. 10.
Jer. 31. 11.
Tit. 2. 14.
1 Pet. 2. 9.
2 Pet. 2. 1.
p Ps. 44. 2. & 80. 8.
q Ps. 78. 54.
r Ps. 10. 16. &
29. 10. & 146. 10.
Isa. 57. 15.
s ch. 14. 23.
Prov. 21. 31.
t ch. 14. 28, 29.
u Judg. 4. 4.
1 Sam. 10. 5.
x Num. 26. 59.
y 1 Sam. 18. 6.

words as an expression of thankfulness for the victory of Constantine over Maxentius (Ecl. Hist. x. 9). And hence the motto on the medals of Queen Elizabeth at the destruction of the Spanish Armada, "Atlavit Deus, et dissipantur."

— They sank] were rolled down: Judg. vii. 3; Ges. 710.

11. Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the gods?] See xii. 12. Here begins the third and last strophe: see v. 6. The words in the Hebrew here are Micamocah baelim Jehorah, which are said to have been inscribed on the standard of the Maccabees in their struggles against Antiochus Epiphanes, the Syrian Pharaoh, and a type of Antichrist; and some suppose that from the initial letters of these words the Maccabees derived their name: see Buxtorf de Abbreviaturis, p. 131; and Prudeau, Connexion, at B.C. 166; but see below, on Judg. iv. 21.

The name of the archangel Michael also expresses the same truth. See below, on Jude 9; and Rev. xiii. 4, the rival claim of the enemy of Christ: cp. also the name of the prophet Micaiah (1 Kings xxii. 8).

— Fearful in praises] A remarkable expression. So great is God's glory, so awful His majesty, that even the saints and angels praise Him with fear (A Lapidé).

12. Thou stretchedst out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them] A saying which was fulfilled in the highest sense in Christ's Death and Resurrection, by which "Death was swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. xv. 54).

13. Thou in thy mercy hast led forth the people which thou hast redeemed] Also fulfilled in the highest sense by Christ's passage through the Red Sea of His own Death and Passion, by which He led forth the prisoners whom He redeemed (Zech. ix. 11, 12, part of the Proper Lesson for Easter Even).

— Thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation] In the prophetic vision of the future, he sees with the eye of faith the Israelites as already settled in Canaan, and on Mount Zion, the habitation of God (see v. 17. Isa. xxxiii. 20. Jer. i. 19). And the prophecy reaches far beyond, even to the heavenly Canaan, and to the everlasting Jerusalem, where they sing the song of Moses and of the Lamb (Rev. xv. 3).

14. The people] Rather, the nations, the enemies of God's people,—Philistia, Edom, Moab (vv. 14, 15).

— shall hear] Literally, have heard. This and other verbs in this and the next verse are in the past tense; the prophet sees future events as already present.

— Palestina] Here used for Philistia: cp. Gen. xxi. 34. Joseph, Ant. i. 6. 2; Reland, Paläst. p. 38. And since the maritime frontier land of Philistia was the best known to the Greeks and Romans, therefore the name of that region was applied by them to the whole of Canaan: cp. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 186; Stanley, Palestine, p. 257. For the fulfilment of this prophecy, see Josh. v. 1.

15. Edom] See Deut. ii. 4. Num. xx. 21. Judg. xi. 17.

— Moab] See the fulfilment in Num. xxii. 3.

17. the mountain of thine inheritance] A prophecy of the erection of God's sanctuary on Mount Moriah: cp. Ps. lxxviii. 54, 55. Isa. lvii. 13: see above, on v. 1. The eye of Moses was illumined by the light of the Holy Spirit, Who sees "the end from the beginning."

18. The LORD shall reign for ever and ever] A triumphant close to this divine hymn, which is re-echoed by the voices of the redeemed in the Apocalypse (xix. 6).

THE SONG OF MIRIAM.

This song of Miriam, for the delivery of Israel,—which was a figure of Mankind's Redemption in Christ,—is one of the golden links of inspired prophecy, uttered by women (types of the Church), which connect the song of Sarah for the birth of Isaac, with the song of Hannah for the birth of Samuel, and with the Magnificat of Mary the mother of CHRIST. See above, Gen. xxi. 6; below, 1 Sam. ii. 1.

20. Miriam] The same name as Mariam, or Mary. "Because no Greek word ends in m, it was necessary to alter the termination to make it current in their language. The Jews derive the name from the bitterness of the Egyptian bondage. And as Miriam was exalted, to be one of them who brought the people of God out of the Egyptian bondage (Micaiah vi. 4), so was the Blessed Virgin Mary exalted, to become the mother of that Saviour, Who, through the Red Sea of His Blood, hath wrought a plenteous redemption for us, of which that was but a type" (Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iii. p. 169).

hand; and all the women went out after her ^z with timbrels and with dances.

²¹ And Miriam ^a answered them,

^b Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously;

The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

²² So Moses brought Israel from the Red sea, and they went out into the wilderness of ^c Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water. ²³ And when they came to ^d Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called || Marah. ²⁴ And the people ^e murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink?

²⁵ And he ^f cried unto the LORD; and the LORD shewed him a tree, ^g which when he had cast into the waters, the waters were made sweet: there he ^h made for them a statute and an ordinance, and there ⁱ he proved them,

²⁶ And said, ^k If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of these ^l diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the LORD ^m that healeth thee.

²⁷ ⁿ And they came to Elim, where were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm trees: and they encamped there by the waters.

^z Judg. 11. 34. & 21. 21.
^a Sam. 6. 16.
^b Ps. 68. 11, 25.
^c 149. 3. & 150. 4.
^d 1 Sam. 18. 7.
^e ver. 1.

^c Gen. 16. 7. & 25. 18.

^d Num. 33. 8.

|| That is, Bitterness, Ruth 1. 20.
^e ch. 16. 2. & 17. 3.
^f ch. 14. 10. & 17. 4.
^g Ps. 50. 15.
^h See 2 Kings 2. 21. & 4. 41.
ⁱ See Josh. 24. 25. i ch. 16. 4.
^j Deut. 8. 2, 16.
^k Judg. 2. 22. & 3. 1, 4.
^l Ps. 66. 10. & 51. 7.
^m Deut. 7. 12, 15. i Deut. 28. 27, 60. m ch. 23. 25.
ⁿ Ps. 41. 3, 4. & 103. 3. & 147. 3. n Num. 33. 9.

Some learned Roman Catholic expositors (e. g. A Lapide) suppose Miriam to have been unmarried, because her husband is not mentioned in Scripture. But the Jews suppose her to have been married. Josephus says that Miriam was the wife of Hur (Antiq. iii. 2. 4); according to the Talmud (Sotah ii.) she was the wife of Caleb, and Hur was her son. How uncertain is Jewish History apart from the Bible!

— the prophetess] Nebiah, from nabi: see above, on vii. 1. So the Blessed Virgin Mary prophesied, when she sang her Magnificat (Luke i. 46—55).

— a timbrel] Rather, the timbrel, her timbrel. Cp. Gen. xxxi. 27. Job xxi. 12. 2 Sam. vi. 5.

^{21.} Miriam answered them] The men. Moses led the men, Miriam the women, in responsive chorus to the men. Here was an intimation of the future glory of the Church as it is in Christ, Who has exalted women, by His birth from the Blessed Virgin, and has espoused to Himself the Bride, and in “whom is neither male nor female” (Gal. iii. 18). This has never been realized in the Jewish Synagogue (cp. Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. cap. xiv.), nor in any other communion, but that of the Christian Church,—the mystical body of the “Seed of the Woman.”

^{22.} wilderness of Shur] The upper portion of the desert, now called Dschifar, which stretches from Egypt, and along the eastern shore of the Red Sea to the s.w. of Palestine. See Gen. xvi. 7; xx. 1; xxv. 18. 1 Sam. xv. 7; xxvii. 8. Winer, R. W. B. 435. It is called the wilderness of Etham in Num. xxxiii. 8. The word here rendered so is rather and.

On the route of the Israelites from the Red Sea to Sinai, see Dr. Hayman, Bibl. Dict. ii. 1750.

^{23.} Marah] i. e. bitter. After victory comes trial. Immediately after His Baptism in Jordan, Christ,—the first-begotten Son,—was led into the wilderness to be tempted of the Devil; and He “was an hungred, and was with the wild beasts.” See on Matt. iv. 1, 2. Mark. i. 13. Luke iv. 2.

So it was also with God’s firstborn, Israel. As soon as they have been “baptized in the cloud, and in the sea” (1 Cor. x. 1, 2), they enter the wilderness, and come to Marah, and are tempted.

The site of Marah is perhaps at Howarah, about thirty-three miles from Ayun Musa (Burckhardt, ii. 777; Robinson, i. 97; Seetzen, iii. 117; Winer, i. 55).

^{24.} the people murmured] Murmured: the Hebrew word here is from the root lan, to pass the night, to tarry, and (in the niphal and hiphal conjugations) to be obstinate; thence to complain, and murmur; and it is expressive of the sullen, stubborn spirit which the Israelites too often showed in the wilderness. Cp. xvi. 2. Num. xiv. 27; xvi. 41; xvii. 5. It is rendered in the Sept. by γογγύζω, which indicates more of active expression of discontent, and which is applied to them by St. Paul (1 Cor. x. 10), and is adopted in the Gospels to describe the temper of the descendants of Israel in the days of Christ (Luke v. 30. John vi. 41; vii. 32).

^{25.} the LORD shewed him a tree, which when he had cast into the waters, the waters were made sweet] A tree, ξύλον (Sept.), the same word as is used in the New Testament for the Cross (1 Pet. ii. 24). And God said to Moses at Marah, “I am the Lord that healeth thee” (v. 26). These things “are figures of us” (ἑστέον ἡμῶν, 1 Cor. x. 6). “Do not be dismayed (says S. Jerome), if after a spiritual victory thou comest to Marah. The Passover itself was to be eaten with bitter herbs. Thy trial worketh experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed” (Rom. v. 3—5). And into the bitter waters if you cast the wood of the tree of Christ’s Cross, and the mystery of the Lord’s passion, all thy Marahs will be changed into sweetness.” See S. Jerome, Mans. v. Cp. Tertullian adv. Jud. c. 13, “Nos de sæculi calamitatis extracti, siti pereuntes, ligno passionis Christi aquam edulcitantis baptismatis potantes;” de Bapt. c. 9; Justin M. c. Tryphon. c. 86; S. Cyprian de Zelo, ad finem; S. Cyril, Catech. 13; S. Cyril. Alex., Glaphyr. p. 284, and de Ador. v. p. 155; Theodoret, Qu. 26; and Augustine, Qu. 57, “Per lignum aquas dulces fecit, præfigurans gratiam et gloriam Crucis;” and c. Faust xii. 30. Cp. Rom. v. 3; vi. 3. 2 Cor. i. 5—10. Gal. iii. 13. 1 Pet. ii. 21; and Rev. xvii. 2.

The passage of Tertullian c. 13, is preceded (Ibid. c. 10—12) and is followed (c. 14) by a summary of the prophecies and types of Christ, especially those which refer to His Cross. Such a summary, presented to us by a Christian Author of the third century, can hardly fail to be read with great interest by the Christian student.

Another ancient Father observes, that this text may be applied also spiritually to the Law of Moses itself. The Law taken literally, as the Jews take it, is bitter. Circumcision,—the law of leprosy, sacrifices, and other Levitical ordinances,—are bitter to flesh and blood; but let them be spiritualized; let us cast into their bitter waters the wood of the Cross, and they become sweet: “The letter killeth” (when taken alone), “but the spirit giveth life” (2 Cor. iii. 6. Origen, Hom. 7).

^{26.} I am the LORD that healeth thee] As I have healed these waters, so will I heal thee, and keep thee safe from the diseases of Egypt: cp. Deut. xxviii. 27. 60. This is verified spiritually by the Great Physician, Whose Cross is the Tree of Life, which bears leaves for the healing of the Nations: see on Rev. xvii. 2.

^{27.} they came to Elim, where were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm trees: and they encamped there by the waters] Elim (i. e. trees), probably in what is now called the Wady Gharandel (Niebuhr, iii. 95; Robinson, i. 100, 105; Wellsted, ii. 38. 779; Keil, p. 416). It was a beautiful oasis in the barren wilderness, and still abounds with fountains of water, and is adorned with palm-trees and tamarisks. Shaw found there nine fountains, and a large number of palm-trees. The word rendered wells would be better translated springs.

a Num. 33. 10, 11.

b Ezek. 30. 15.

XVI. ¹And they ^atook their journey from Elim, and all the congregation of the children of Israel came unto the wilderness of ^bSin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt. ²And the whole congregation of the children of

After His temptation in the wilderness, Christ proceeded to call His Twelve Apostles, and Seventy Disciples. "After victory (says S. Jerome) comes the Marah of temptation; and after temptation comes refreshment." The People of God come to Elim, where are Twelve Fountains, and Seventy Palm-trees. Here we may see a figure of the Twelve Apostles, whose streams are derived from the Fountain of Living Waters, Christ, and which irrigate and refresh the World with the pure rivers of divine truth. Near these Twelve Fountains are Seventy Palm-trees, the emblems of Christ's Seventy Disciples. Cp. Tertullian c. Marcion. iv. 24; Origen, in Num. Hom. 27. Let us drink the waters of those Apostolic streams of Christian doctrine, and let us feed on the sweet fruits of those trees of victory (Rev. vii. 9), and gird up our loins for our march through the wilderness to our heavenly Canaan. S. Jerome, Mans. vi. Cp. Tertullian c. Marcion. iv. c. 13, who says, "Duodecim fontes Elim; duodecim gemmas in tunica Sacerdotali Aaronis; duodecim lapides ab Jesu (Joshua) de Jordane electos; totidem et Apostoli portendebantur, fontes et annes rigaturi desertum, et ut gemmæ illuminaturi sacram Ecclesie vestem." Cp. the notes below, on Luke x. 1.

— they encamped there by the waters] The Church of God encamps beside the waters of Apostolic doctrine, which flow from the well-spring of salvation in Christ, and she abides in safety beneath the shade of the palm-trees, the pledges and emblems of victory and glory in heaven (Rev. vii. 9).

The spiritual interpretation given to these verses by an ancient Father deserves notice:—

"If we look merely at the letter of the history, it imports us not much to know what was the first place to which the Israelites came, and what the second. But if we explore the hidden mystery here, we find a spiritual order. First, the People come to Marah. This represents the bitterness of the Law of Moses without Christ. The water of the Law is made sweet by the wood of the Cross (see above, on v. 25). And after Marah they come to Elim, with its twelve wells, and seventy palm-trees. The Church passes from the Law to the Gospel, preached not only by the Twelve Apostles, but by the Seventy Disciples, in whom the World sees palms of victory won for Christ. We, who are the true people of God, march on from the Old Testament to the New. But the Jews are still at Marah, drinking its bitter waters; for God has not yet shown them the wood of the Cross, by which those waters are sweetened. As the Prophet says to them, 'Except ye believe, ye shall not understand'" (Isa. vii. 9, Sept.). Origen, Hom. 7.

CHAP. XVI.—PRELIMINARY NOTE ON THE HISTORY OF THE WANDERINGS OF ISRAEL IN THE WILDERNESS.

The following chronological data are to be observed in reading the following history:—

The Israelites leave Egypt in the spring, the 14th of Abib, the first month (Exod. xii. 6).

They enter the wilderness of Sin on the 15th day of the second month (Exod. xvi. 1) of the first year.

They arrive at Sinai on the first day of the third month (Exod. xix. 1) of the first year.

The Tabernacle is set up on the first day of the first month of the second year: see below, on xl. 2. 17.

The Laws contained in the whole of the Book of LEVITICUS are delivered to Moses in the Tabernacle at Sinai, in the interval between the beginning of the first month of the second year and the twentieth of the second month. They were given by God to Moses, on the supposition that the Israelites would be obedient to His Word, and would proceed forthwith into the Promised Land, from the confines of which they were only eleven days' journey when they were at Sinai (Deut. i. 2).

The Israelites observe the Passover at Sinai on the fourteenth day of the first month of the second year (Num. ix. 1—5).

This was, probably, the only Passover which was observed in the wilderness.

On the first day of the second month they are numbered, and their tents are ranged about the Tabernacle (Num. i. 1; ii. 2).

They leave Sinai on the twentieth day of the second month of the second year (Num. x. 11. Deut. i. 6), on their way to Canaan, and soon arrive at Kadesh-barnea, on its confines;

But they murmur against God on the return of the spies, whom they sent from Kadesh, and who searched the land forty days, and they are condemned by God for their unthankfulness, unbelief, disobedience, and rebellion, to wander forty years, i. e. thirty-eight more years—in the wilderness (Num. xiii. 1—33; xiv. 1—34).

After this condemnation there is a great gap in the history. The generation which rebelled is blotted out from the pages of God's book: see below, Num. xv. 1; xix. 1.

There is a hiatus of thirty-eight years between the fourteenth chapter of Numbers and the twentieth chapter.

In the twentieth chapter of Numbers the Israelites re-appear,—a new generation,—at Kadesh, the same place at which they had arrived thirty-eight years before (Num. xx. 1).

At the beginning of the fortieth year of their wanderings they are no nearer to Canaan than they had been in the second year.

They had made no progress as a Nation, because they had disobeyed God.

In that fortieth year Miriam dies, in the beginning of the year (Num. xx. 1); and in the fifth month of that year Aaron dies (Num. xxiii. 38); and in the end of that fortieth year Moses dies (Deut. i. 3; xxxiv. 5).

The contents of the whole of the Book of Deuteronomy belong to that one year, the fortieth: see Deut. i. 3. That Book is a farewell address of the great Leader of Israel, now ready to depart, and to be with God.

After thirty-eight years' waiting, under the Law, Israel, rejected at Kadesh-barnea, was brought, after the death of Moses, by Joshua into Canaan. So in the Gospel, the impotent man, after waiting thirty and eight years, under the shade of Bethesda with its five porches—(regarded by some as emblematic of the five books of Moses; Augustine, in Joann. v. 2),—was raised and restored by JESUS CHRIST, the true Joshua: see below, note on John v. 2. 5.

1. they took their journey from Elim] The Christian Church regards the passage of the Red Sea as figurative of Christ's Death and Resurrection; and the fourteenth chapter of Exodus is appointed to be read on Easter Day; and the sixteenth and seventeenth chapters are read on the Monday in Easter week: see above, xiv. 1.

— the wilderness of Sin] Probably they marched past the fountains of Murkha, through what is now called the valley of Mukatleb, or Inscriptions (from the inscriptions on the rocks there; Laborde, Raumer), or through the broader valley to the south-east, Wady Feiran (Robinson), and so arriving at Wadi-esk-Sheikh (cp. Stanley, p. 39, who supposes them to have gone by Wady Shellal, Wady Mukatleb, to Wady Feiran, and its great mountain, Serbal).

See, however, Strauss, Graul, Knobel, and others, quoted by Keil, p. 419, who suppose that on account of the narrowness of some parts of the pass from Murkha through Mukatleb and Feiran, the Israelites would not have been led by that way, but that they went from Gharandel, by the high and wide sandy plain of Debbet er Ramle (which lies eastward of the former route), to Sinai; and that the murmuring, mentioned in v. 21, was in this sandy plain.

S. Jerome observes, that the whole desert tract of country to Mount Sinai was called Sin.

A station is mentioned in the Book of Numbers, which is not specified here, viz. the station "at the Red Sea" (Num. xxxiii. 10, 11), perhaps at the entrance of Wady Taiybeh, a beautiful valley, overgrown with tamarisks, and which opens on the Red Sea, by Ras Zelimeh. Probably no remarkable event took place there.

It was observed, by ancient expositors, that there is the same relation between the Book of Exodus and the thirty-third chapter of Numbers, as there is between a Book of Travels, which records what is memorable, and an Itinerary or Map, which exhibits the names of places, but does not profess to give any details concerning them.

On the localities mentioned in this chapter, and on the Mosaic history of the wanderings generally, the reader may be referred to the Rev. Henry Hayman's articles, in Dr. Smith's Bibl. Dict., "Marah," "Massah," "Meribah," "Rephidim," "Sin, Wilderness of," "Sinai," "Wilderness of the Wanderings," &c., ii. p. 1755.

Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness: ³And the children of Israel said unto them, ⁴Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, ⁵when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger.

⁴Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather † a certain rate every day, that I may ⁵prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no. ⁵And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and ⁶it shall be twice as much as they gather daily.

⁶And Moses and Aaron said unto all the children of Israel, ⁷At even, then ye shall know that the LORD hath brought you out from the land of Egypt: ⁷And in the morning, then ye shall see ⁸the glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and ⁸what are we, that ye murmur against us? ⁸And Moses said, This shall be, when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and ⁹what are we? your murmurings are not against us, but ⁹against the LORD. ⁹And Moses spake unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children

e ch. 15. 24.

Ps. 106. 25.

1 Cor. 10. 10.

d Lam. 4. 9.

e Num. 11. 4, 5.

f Ps. 78. 24, 25. & 105. 40.

John 6. 31, 32.

1 Cor. 10. 3.

† Heb. the portion of a day in his day, Prov. 30. 8.

Matt. 6. 11.

g ch. 15. 25.

Deut. 8. 2, 16.

h See ver. 22.

Lev. 25. 21.

i See ver. 12, 13.

& ch. 6. 7.

Num. 16. 23, 29,

30.

k See ver. 10.

Isa. 35. 2. &

40. 5.

John 11. 4, 40.

l Num. 16. 11.

m See 1 Sam. 8. 7.

Luke 10. 16.

Rom. 13. 2.

2. the whole congregation—murmured against Moses and Aaron] At Marah, only a part of the people had murmured (xv. 23, 24), here the whole congregation murmur; and here they murmur against Moses and Aaron. An evidence of truth. They had now been a month and fourteen days absent from Egypt; their gratitude for their deliverance was becoming faint; and the provision which they had brought with them had probably failed, and instead of marching towards Canaan, they were being led farther and farther from it, into the wilderness. For another stage in this progress of discontent, see xvii. 2, 3.

3. Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD] They do not yet venture to murmur against the Lord; they murmur against Moses and Aaron for taking them out of Egypt, where they might have died, in the natural order of things, by the hand of the Lord; "Ye have brought us forth into this wilderness to kill us, to kill this whole assembly (the Lord's people) with hunger." Thus they set Moses and Aaron against the Lord; as their descendants set Moses against Christ. Matt. xxii. 24. John ix. 28. Acts vi. 11. 14. But Moses said in reply, "Your murmurings are not against us, but against the Lord;" and St. Peter said to Ananias, "Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God" (Acts v. 4).

—when we sat by the flesh pots] See Num. xi. 5, "We remember the fish which we did eat in Egypt freely, the cucumbers, the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick."

MANNA PROMISED.

4. I will rain bread from heaven] A plain assertion from God Himself, that the supply of manna was miraculous, and not (as some have supposed) a natural provision: see on v. 14, 15. The Septuagint here has the present tense, ἐγὼ ῥω, I am raining, which is a better rendering of the original than the future; and describes not a single act, but a continual supply.

—the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day] Literally, the people shall go out and gather the thing of the day in his day, viz. what is enough for that day's eating, and no more; a phrase which explains the petition in the Lord's prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread;" see on Matt. vi. 11. Luke xi. 3; and Matt. vi. 31—34. The Septuagint has correctly, τὸ τῆς ἡμέρας εἰς ἡμέραν.

—that I may prove them] That I may see by this daily provision whether they trust in Me for their daily subsistence in the wilderness; or whether they persist in murmuring against Me: cp. Theodoret, Qu. 31.

5. on the sixth day they shall prepare] Hence it would seem that the Manna began to be given on the first day of the week (see vv. 21, 22), the day on which God began to create, the day on which Christ rose from the dead, and on which He appeared to His Apostles; the day on which the Holy Spirit came down from heaven.—the Lord's Day.

Here is a figure of the blessings which are rained down from heaven on Mankind, in the Church of God, particularly on the Lord's Day, in prayer, in the preaching and hearing of God's Word, and the Ministry of the Sacraments. The True Manna comes down in copious abundance, and is rained about our tents on that day: cp. Origen, Hom. 7, who adds, "Hence let the Jews understand that even before the Law 'the Lord's Day was preferred to their Sabbath.'"

The sixth day of the week was the day of the Creation of the First Adam, and it was the day of the Death and Passion of the second Adam, by which new life and food is given to all true Israelites: and this divine food, which comes from God, is to be gathered and prepared by man for the heavenly Sabbath and eternal Rest, which "remaineth to the People of God" (Heb. iv. 9).

This duty of gathering and preparation for eternity was signified by the precept concerning the Manna, "The people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them; and on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in, and it shall be twice as much as they gather in on any other day." Thus their faith and obedience was proved; and so our faith and obedience is proved by our going out, and gathering, and preparing for Eternity. The sixth day (Friday) is called ἡ παρασκευή, the preparation, in the Gospels (Matt. xxvii. 62. Mark xv. 42. Luke xxiii. 54, a name still retained in Greece), as being the preparation for the Hebrew Sabbath.

6, 7. At even, then ye shall know that the LORD hath brought you out from the land of Egypt] The Lord, not we: see v. 3. There are two parallel members in this sentence, "At even—Egypt," "And in the morning—Lord."

—ye shall see the glory of the LORD] In the cloud,—toward the wilderness, and not toward Egypt, showing that the Lord (not Moses and Aaron, on any mere motion of their own) had led them out of Egypt, and was leading them toward the wilderness, and not directly to Canaan.

God had expressly revealed to Moses His will, that as soon as the People were delivered from Egypt, and before they went to Canaan, they should come and worship Him at Horeb, where He had revealed Himself to Moses: see iii. 12.

8. in the evening flesh—in the morning bread] "Ad vesperam mortuus est Christus in infirmitate carnis propter delicta nostra; mane resurrexit propter justificationem nostram, et apparuit discipulis, qui resurrexerat in virtute, et nos pane de caelo pascit" (S. Aug.).

—flesh] How was it that they murmured for flesh when they had cattle (xii. 38)? See below, on Num. xi. 4.

—what are we? your murmurings are not against us, but against the LORD] Cp. 1 Sam. viii. 7; and so St. Peter and St. John said, "Why look ye on us?" (Acts iii. 12.) and to Ananias, "Thou hast not lied to men, but unto God" (Acts v. 4), and see our Lord's words, Luke x. 16.

of Israel, "Come near before the LORD: for he hath heard your murmurings.

¹⁰ And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD ^o appeared in the cloud. ¹¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹² ^p I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel: speak unto them, saying, ^q At even ye shall eat flesh, and ^r in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

¹³ And it came to pass, that at even ^s the quails came up, and covered the camp: and in the morning ^t the dew lay round about the host. ¹⁴ And when the dew that lay, was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay "a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost on the ground." ¹⁵ And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, || It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, ^x This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat. ¹⁶ This is the thing which the LORD hath

o ver. 7.
ch. 13. 21.
Num. 16. 19.
1 Kings 8. 10, 11.
p ver. 8.
q ver. 6.
r ver. 7.

s Num. 11. 21.
Ps. 78. 27, 28. &
105. 40.
t Num. 11: 9.

u Num. 11. 7.
Deut. 8. 3.
Neh. 9. 15.
Ps. 78. 24. &
105. 40.

|| Or, What is this? or, It is a portion.
x John 6. 31, 49, 58. 1 Cor. 10. 3.

12. At even] Literally, Between the two evenings.
13. At even the quails came up] Literally, the quail, called ὄρνις by Josephus, ὀρνυμοῦστρα by Sept., the "King quail" (Ant. iii. 1. 5). The article is used with the singular noun in a collective sense (Gesen., § 109). This bird abounds, says Josephus, in those regions.

God brought the quails to feed His People in the wilderness, as He afterwards sent the ravens to feed Elijah. "I have commanded the ravens to feed thee," 1 Kings xvii. 4. 6. The miraculous feeding with the quails was repeated about a year after this: see Num. xi. 31. Ps. cv. 40.

So Christ fed the People in the wilderness twice, Matt. xiv. 20; and xv. 37. Mark viii. 19, 20.

— in the morning the dew lay] Literally, in the morning there was a layer of dew; a layer, shecabah, from shacab, to lie down; and the text goes on to say, that the layer of dew arose (as from its bed on the ground), and then the manna appeared.

14. round] Or, "divested of its covering," peeled off, scaled; the original word, which is only found here, is from the root chasayh, to strip off: see Gesen., p. 295; and so Onkelos; Syriac. Other interpreters suppose it to mean congealed, crystallized, or crusted together like ice: see Keil, p. 422.

On the figurative meaning of this remarkable word, see further, on v. 16.

THE MANNA.

15. It is manna] Rather, What is this? as in the margin, and so Sept., Vulg., Syriac, Arabic, Onkelos, and Josephus, iii. 6. Some (as Gesen. 481) think it means gift. Canon Cook supposes it to be Egyptian for "white manna." But the old rendering seems best: see Pfeiffer, Kalisch, Keil.

Manna? what is it? Signifying that it was a Mystery. So it is with its Antitype, the human body of Christ, God Incarnate; and so it is with the Body of Christ in the Holy Eucharist. We may well call it Manna; for we cannot solve the mystery. Let us not pry curiously into it; but believe and adore Him, Who is the living Bread that came down from heaven (John vi. 35. 50. 58), and has taken our Nature in very deed, and joined it to God; and Who gives Himself to be our heavenly Manna, our Bread of Life, in the Holy Communion of His blessed Body and Blood (John vi. 51—58).

— And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat] Although it is true that Manna is found upon some shrubs in parts of the Arabian desert, and also falls sometimes like dew from heaven (see the testimonies of Niebuhr, Ehrenberg, Shaw, Breitenbach, and others in Gesenius, p. 581; Kalisch, pp. 287, 288; Robinson, i. pp. 170. 550; and of Burckhardt, Seetzen, Ritter, in Keil, p. 421: cp. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 53; Stantey, Palest. p. 26; Stow, article in Bib. Dict. ii. 229; Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 65), yet this fact does not in any way derogate from, but rather confirms, the authority of the Sacred History concerning the supply of the Israelites with Manna during their forty years' sojourn in the wilderness.

At the Creation, God made all things from nothing, and then rested from His works. He does not now create new things, but according to His sovereign will He uses what He has already created by His Almighty Power. He did not create a new species of bird in order to feed the Israelites with flesh; He sent quails in miraculous abundance, like the sand of the sea (Ps. lxxviii. 27), at the very time when they were needed, to supply the hunger of more than two millions of People. And He did not create an entirely new species of bread, but provided a miraculous supply in new combinations, and with new circumstances, of what was already in existence.

There is some likeness between the Manna now found, and that which was supplied to the Israelites, but there is also great dissimilitude in various respects. The Manna which is now found, hangs on the twigs of the tamarisk shrub; and does not cover the ground; and it is not hard, so as to be ground in mills, but soft like wax; and it is only collected in small quantities. About 700 pounds weight of Manna is collected in a year in the Arabian peninsula, which is not the thousandth part of what the Israelites would have needed for a single day. And the Manna of which we read in Exodus was rained down from heaven, and lay upon the ground around the tents of the Israelites, and was supplied daily, with the exception of one day in the week (which weekly exception made the daily miracle more striking), for nearly forty years, and sustained them during that time.

The Holy Spirit, in describing the supply of the Manna, appears to suggest this doctrine with regard to it. He calls it Angels' food (Ps. lxxviii. 25), bread from heaven (v. 4, and Ps. lxxviii. 23, 24), something already existing in a mysterious condition, and for mysterious purposes, but not wholly new.

This view is further illustrated by considering the divine Antitype,—the Son of God Incarnate. He Himself has taught us that the Manna was a figure of Himself (see John vi. 48—51), God and man coming down from heaven to feed the Israel of God in their earthly pilgrimage.

The Divine Nature is from Eternity; the Human Nature was made by God at the Creation. The Incarnation of Christ was a new combination of the two Natures, for the spiritual life and food of all the faithful children of Abraham in their wanderings to their heavenly Canaan. Christ is the true Manna, given to all. He is also the "hidden Manna" (see on Rev. ii. 17); because the Mystery of His Incarnation, and of His feeding us with Himself, is a hidden Mystery, only to be apprehended by faith. When He fed the five thousand in the wilderness, He did not create any thing new, but multiplied the five barley loaves and two fishes into food for them all.

Let it not therefore perplex us, that we find Manna now in the desert of Mount Sinai, hanging on its shrubs, and dropping down like dew on its soil. We see human Nature every where about us. But what we do not see, except with the eye of faith, is the living Bread "which cometh down from heaven," and feeds our souls and bodies to eternal life. Though we may see some earthly resemblances to the Manna, with which the Israelites were fed in the wilderness, we do not see the Angelic food itself; we do not hear now that Manna causes surprise to the pilgrims in the wilderness, and that they ask, "What is it?" as men did when Christ, the true Manna, came down from heaven (John vi. 31, 32. 41. 50. 58). We do not hear it called a food which "the fathers of the Israelites had not commanded, Gather of it every man according to his eating, ^y an omer † for every man, according to the number of your † persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents. ¹⁷ And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less. ¹⁸ And when they did mete it with an omer, ^z he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating. ¹⁹ And Moses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning. ²⁰ Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them. ²¹ And they gathered it every morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.

²² And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses. ²³ And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To morrow is ^a the rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that

^y ver. 36.
[†] Heb. by the poll, or, head.
[‡] Heb. souls.
^z 2 Cor. 8. 15.
^a Gen. 2. 3.
 ch. 20. 8. &
 31. 15. & 35. 3. Lev. 23. 3.

known" (Deut. viii. 3), as the true Manna is. We do not find, that however much or little of the Manna of Arabia may now be gathered, it fills an omer for each man. But we know that the Son of God is no respecter of persons; that He took the common nature of all men; that He tasted death for every man (Heb. ii. 9), and gave Himself for all (Rom. viii. 32. 1 Tim. ii. 6). We do not see that Manna is any where supplied continuously in all seasons in such large quantities as to feed two millions of souls. But we do know, that Christ, the true Manna, feeds all the myriads who hunger for Him; and we know that He must be gathered daily for the Sabbath of Eternity.

"Was it a new thing?" is a question which has been discussed by Critics and Naturalists with regard to the literal Manna; and the solution of the question concerning the Type is to be found in the Antitype. It is to be found in Christ. He was the New Man; and yet He is from Eternity. By His coming down from heaven, and His taking of our nature, He gave us Angels' food, and bread from heaven. In this living Bread, this heavenly Manna, there was a new combination of what was old, even from Everlasting, and it makes "all things new;" it gives new hopes, new joys, new powers, hopes of a blessed Resurrection, and a glorious Immortality (John vi. 53—58). On the Manna as a type of Christ, see S. Ambrose, Epist. 61.

16—23. This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded] We are taught by Christ Himself that the Manna was a type of Himself (John vi. 48—51), and see what is said by St. Paul (1 Cor. x. 1. 3. 6).

(1) The Manna came down from heaven. So Christ.
 (2) When it came down, it was covered with dew (vv. 13, 14). So Christ with the dews of God's holy Spirit. He was a free gift of God's gracious favour. He came like the Manna, freely and plentifully to all. The Manna fell in the wilderness in a time of distress. So Christ came into a fainting world in the hour of its greatest need. The Manna is described as "small" and "divested of its covering" (v. 14). May not the word there used represent figuratively the character of Christ, the true Manna, in His Incarnation and Coming down from heaven, when He divested Himself of the glory which he had in heaven, and appeared upon earth, and made Himself little in man's eyes, and of no reputation, and humbled Himself, and took on Him the form of a servant? See Phil. ii. 7, 8. Compare the remarkable text (John xiii. 3) where Jesus, the true Manna, feeds His disciples, and lays aside his garments, and teaches humility. The word, as applied to the literal manna, is difficult of explanation; does it not find its interpretation in Him?

(3) It fell about the camp of Israel; so Christ came down to feed His People, and is ever giving the living Bread in His Word and Sacraments in His Church, and especially in the Holy Eucharist, by which the benefits of His Incarnation are bestowed on all faithful Israelites: see below, note at end of John vi.; and cp. S. Ambrose, Epist. Class. ii. Ep. 65; S. Basil de Spir. Sanct. c. 14; Prosper Aquilan. de Prom. i. 39.

(4) The People must go out to gather it; so all must go forth to gather the food which Christ gives. Heb. xiii. 13.

(5) They must go out in the morning; Christ is to be sought early. John xii. 35. Gal. vi. 10.

(6) They must gather it daily; Christ must be our daily bread.

(7) All had an equal portion (vv. 18. 22); there is no respect of persons with Christ: see Col. iii. 11; cp. Gal. iii. 28, 29. 2 Pet. i. 1.

(8) They must gather in God's appointed time and way: they must gather it on six days, but cannot gather it on the Sabbath; Christ must be sought in the ways of God's appointment; and it is too late to seek for Christ, in the grave.

(9) The miraculous supply ceased to fall on them when they came to Canaan; but they had a golden pot of Manna there as a remembrance; Christ will be the joy of the saints in heaven, and they will have an everlasting remembrance of the extraordinary mercies vouchsafed to them on earth.

(10) The worldly-minded disparaged it, and called it "light bread;" but doubtless to the faithful, who partook of the Manna in the wilderness, some gleams and glimpses were vouchsafed of Christ, and some portion of His sweetness was tasted by them (1 Cor. x. 1. 6); so Christ in His Word and Sacraments is slighted by the world; but to the faithful Israelite He is Angels' food; the living Bread; the Bread of immortality (Num. xi. 6; xxi. 5).

16. an omer] Omer, properly a sheaf (Lev. xxiii. 10—15), because it was the measure filled by the grains of one sheaf, equal to about four pints English. On the Hebrew measures, see Gesen. 661; Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 40; Bevan, in Smith's B. D. ii. 1741. This measure is not to be confounded with the chomer, rendered homer in our Version, which contained ten ephahs.

— in his tents] Heb. tent (singular). How could such a vast multitude have been furnished with tents in the wilderness? We know that they had waggons (Num. vii. 1—6), and cattle to draw them (Exod. ix. 4; x. 26), and they came out with great substance (Gen. xv. 14). The word signifies here his abode or home, of whatever kind it was. Cp. Dr. Benisch on Colenso, p. 18.

18. he that gathered much had nothing over] That is (according to the ancient Hebrew exposition; see Buxtorf, Exerc. de Hist. Mannæ, p. 362), when they came to measure it in their tents, they found that, what was gathered, was an omer for each member of the family.

St. Paul teaches us the moral to be derived from this providential arrangement (see 2 Cor. viii. 15), and so directs our attention to the spiritual meaning of the whole history.

19. Let no man leave of it till the morning] For the moral reason of this, see Matt. vi. 11. 34.

20. It bred worms, and stank] But that which was gathered for the Sabbath did not breed worms and stink. If thou gatherest and hoardest up for the present life, thy substance will breed worms and be corrupt, but if thou liest up treasure for eternity, thy treasure will endure for ever (1 Tim. vi. 17—19. Origen, Hom. 7).

23. To morrow is the rest] Lit. a rest, a Sabbath holy to the Lord. The Sabbath was therefore before the Decalogue (xx. 11); cp. vv. 25. 29, 30, where the law of the Sabbath is spoken of as a law already given by God; and see note above, which ye will bake to day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning. ²⁴ And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: and it did not ^bstink, neither was there any worm therein. ²⁵ And Moses said, Eat that to day; for to day is a sabbath unto the LORD: to day ye shall not find it in the field. ²⁶ ^cSix days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none. ²⁷ And it came to pass, that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none. ²⁸ And the LORD said unto Moses, How long ^drefuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? ²⁹ See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day. ³⁰ So the people rested on the seventh day. ³¹ And the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna: and ^eit was like coriander seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

³² And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commandeth, Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt. ³³ And Moses said unto Aaron, ^fTake a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations. ³⁴ As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up ^gbefore the Testimony, to be kept. ³⁵ And the children of Israel did eat manna ^hforty years, ⁱuntil they came to a land inhabited; they did eat manna, until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan. ³⁶ Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah.

Gen. ii. 2; and A Lapide here. Here are three miracles marking the sanctity of the Sabbath:—(1) a double portion on the sixth day; (2) none on the seventh; (3) preservation of the Manna on the seventh day.

The Sabbath had a retrospective character, in that it was a record of Creation; and it is also prospective and preparatory to the rest or sabbatism (as St. Paul calls it) which “remaineth to the People of God” (see note on Heb. iv. 9). Well, therefore, might its spiritual meaning be explained by a command to lay up for the Sabbath, the type of Eternity.

It is called here the holy sabbath, or sabbath of holiness; showing that it is not to be a rest of indolence; but a rest from the world to God: a rest from Earth to heaven; a rest from the things of Time to those of Eternity. “Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, for they rest from their labours, and their works do follow them” (Rev. xiv. 13).

^{26.} Six days ye shall gather it] We must gather spiritual food while we have time; and provide ourselves with all things needful for the Sabbath of Eternity. There is no more gathering then. See S. Hilary's beautiful words in Ps. 91,—“Est hoc perfectum Sabbatum, hæc vera requies, cui omnia vitæ necessaria pridiè præparare præcipimur. Judæi, &c.: (he then recites this history.) “ita et nobis, æterna sabbata expectantibus, quibus illie possimus uti, sunt præparanda—orationibus, vigiliis, lectionum frequentia, jejuniâ voluntate, humilitatis tranquillitate, bonitatis operibus, castitatis nitore, virtute patientiæ. Hæc pridiè in otium æterni sabbati sunt præparanda, ut sit nobis æterna lux, laudum Deo et eum angelorum choris hymnus æternus:” cp. S. Cyril de Adoratione, vii. 234.

^{29.} abide ye every man in his place] Do not go out to gather it on the seventh day. From these words the Rabbis deduced a precept that no one should go on the Sabbath more than 2000 yards, the supposed distance of the Tabernacle from the farthest part of the camp; which they called a “sabbath day’s journey:” see Acts i. 12; and Ainsworth, p. 61.

^{31.} coriander seed] In shape, and white in colour. Num. xi. 7: cp. Joseph., iii. 1. 6.

— wafers] ἑγκρίς (Sept.); “simila” (Fulg.); a cake baked with oil (Schleusner).

— honey] And compared to oil, Num. xi. 8; and to bdellium in transparency: cp. Gen. ii. 12.

^{33.} And Moses said unto Aaron] After the Tabernacle had been made. Here is an anticipation (Augustine, Qu. 61): cp. Gen. xxv. 8. 1 Sam. xv. 54. Luke x. 17. 19—42. John xi. 2: cp. Hengstenberg, Authent. ii. pp. 207, 210.

— lay it up before the LORD] In a vase in the Holy of Holies: see Heb. ix. 4.

^{34.} before the Testimony] Cp. xxv. 16; 21, 22; the Ark of the Testimony, in which the two Tables were: see note on 1 Tim. ii. 6.

^{35.} And the children of Israel did eat manna forty years] It ceased immediately after the first Passover, which the Israelites kept on the East of Jordan (Josh. v. 12).

This sentence shows that the Book of Exodus did not pass out of the hands of Moses till a little before his death, and confirms the belief that the Five Books of Moses are to be regarded as forming one work: see above, Introduction to this Volume, p. xxix.; and Exod. i. 1: cp. Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. 209—211.

^{36.} Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah] A sentence supposed by some to be an interpolation. But if we regard the Bible as it ought to be regarded, namely, as a book designed by God to be read by all nations in all times, we need no more be surprised by such statements as these, than we are by being told in the Gospels that Jordan is a river (Mark i. 5), or that the Passover is a Feast of the Jews (John vi. 4), or that the Feast of unleavened bread is called the Passover (Luke xxii. 1).

Besides, exactness is necessary in laws; and the Pentateuch was a Code (see ch. xxx. 13), as well as a History. There was, also, more need of defining what the omer was, because it might have been confounded with the chomer, rendered homer in our Version (Isa. v. 10, “an homer shall yield an ephah,” cp. Ezek. xlv. 11, 13, 14), which contained ten ephahs.

The omer is not mentioned elsewhere as a measure, and it seems to have been rather a household vessel, which every family possessed, and therefore it was more requisite to specify what the daily allowance here mentioned was. Michaelis, Hengstenberg, Keil.

On the measure of the ephah, see Winer, ii. 40; Bevan, in Smith's B. D. iii. 1742. According to the testimony of Josephus it would hold about eight and a half gallons; but the Rabbinical writers make it about four and a half gallons.

XVII. ¹ And ^a all the congregation of the children of Israel journeyed from ^a ch. 16. 1. the wilderness of Sin, after their journeys, according to the commandment of Num. 33. 12, 11. the LORD, and pitched in Rephidim: and there was no water for the people to drink. ² ^b Wherefore the people did chide with Moses, and said, Give us ^b Num. 20. 3, 4. water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? wherefore do ye ^c tempt the LORD? ³ And the people thirsted there for water; and the people ^d murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this ^c Deut. 6. 16. that thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our Ps. 78. 18, 41. cattle with thirst? Isa. 7. 12. ^d ch. 16. 2.

⁴ And Moses ^e cried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this ^e ch. 14. 12. people? they be almost ready to ^f stone me. ⁵ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^f I Sam. 30. 6. ^g Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy John 8. 59. & 10. 31. rod, wherewith ^h thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go. ⁶ ^g Ezek. 2. 6. ⁱ Behold, ^h ch. 7. 20. I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite Num. 20. 8. the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. ⁱ Num. 20. 10, 11. ¹ Cor. 10. 4. Ps. 78. 15, 20. & 105. 41. & 114. 8.

Boeckh and Bertheau have adopted the former, Thenius the latter reckoning: see Keil, Archæol. ii. 141, 142.

CH. XVII. 1. Rephidim] Perhaps in the Wady Feiran, which opens out from Wady Mukatteb (Stanley, p. 40).

Others suppose Rephidim to be in Wady-es-Sheikh, which is to the N.E. of Wady Feiran. So Robinson, i. 179; and Keil, p. 428, who is of opinion that the route of the Israelites to Mount Sinai lay on the high and wide sandy plain, Debbel-er-Ramle, and so through Wady-es-Sheikh, and that Rephidim was at the entrance of this Wady, in the plain of Er Rahah: cp. above, on xvi. 1.

Two stations are omitted here, Dophkah (perhaps El Tabbacha) and Alush: see Num. xxxiii. 12: cp. on xvi. 1.

2. the people did chide] Here is another stage in the progress of discontent. Before this they had murmured (see on xvi. 2); now they not only murmured, but strove: from root rib, to strive vehemently, literally, to seize (cp. strove), especially by the hair (Gesen., p. 767), whence the name Meribah, the place of striving: see v. 7. The Sept. uses the word λοιδόροῦμαι here, to revile (cp. 1 Pet. ii. 23, where it is applied to Christ), a strong expression, implying insult: see v. 4.

— wherefore do ye tempt the LORD?] See v. 7. The word used here for to tempt is masah, whence the name of Massah, the place of temptation (Deut. vi. 16; ix. 22; xxxiii. 8. Ps. xcv. 8).

3. Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us] Another degree of discontent. Why hast thou made us to come up out of Egypt to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst? — and our cattle] The sacred writer calls attention therefore to the fact that they had cattle, and suggests to the reader the question, How were their cattle maintained for forty years in the wilderness? See above, note on xii. 38.

4. they be almost ready to stone me] Lit. yet a little, and they will stone me—as the Jews would have stoned Jesus (John viii. 59, &c.). The Jews receive the Pentateuch as true, and genuine, and inspired. Would they have ever received a document as true, genuine, and inspired, which records such discreditable things as these in this chapter concerning themselves, unless they had had irresistible evidence of its truth, genuineness, and inspiration? Consider the zealous fury of the Jews of later days against St. Stephen for blasphemy (as they called it) against Moses (Acts vi. 11). Here their own fathers are guilty of it. Would they have read this history (as they did) in their Synagogues as true, and as written by Moses, if it had not been, what they believed it to be? See above, Introduction to this Volume.

5. take with thee of the elders of Israel] Lest any one should say that water had existed there formerly. So our Lord took with Him witnesses of His miracles: see, for example, Mark v. 40; ix. 2. These things were not done in a corner. They challenged inquiry.

6. in Horeb] See on iii. 1.

THE SMITTEN ROCK.

— thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink] Here is a type of Christ smitten for our sakes, as St. Paul teaches (1 Cor. x. 4), and refreshing all true Israelites with living spiritual water (John vii. 37—39) in their pilgrimage to their heavenly Canaan. He was smitten by the rod of Moses, being made subject for our sakes to the curse of the Law pronounced on disobedience (Gal. iii. 10. 13. Isa. liii. 4, 5). On this typical character of the Rock see also Origen, in Exod. Hom. xi. The rock gave no water before it was struck. Justin Martyr, c. Tryphon. § 114; S. Basil de Spirit. c. 14; Prosper Aquitan., i. 39, who says, “Hæc Petra percussa in cruce sanguinem produxit et aquam, quâ nos sobrie inebriamur.”

The Rock was to be smitten, but only to be smitten once. Christ was once smitten for our sins; He died once for all. He offered one sacrifice for sins, but now “He dieth no more” (Rom. vi. 9); and having offered one all-sufficient sacrifice on the Cross,—once for all (1 Heb. ix. 28; x. 26), He is set down at the right hand of God (see Heb. x. 12).

St. Paul says that the spiritual rock followed them (1 Cor. x. 4). That is, as the Psalmist and Isaiah testify, the Israelites had water flowing from the rocks in the wilderness as an habitual consequence of the once smiting of the Rock at Horeb (see Ps. lxxviii. 15. 20; cv. 41; cxiv. 8. Neh. ix. 15. Isa. xliiii. 20; xlvi. 21).

Observe the accuracy of St. Paul’s language. He says that “they were all baptized” (ἐβαπτίσθησαν, aorist middle voice, marking their own concurrence in the act) once for all “unto Moses, in the cloud, and in the sea.” But he then changes his tense (from the aorist to the imperfect), and says that they all ἔπυνον, were drinking (drinking continually) “of the spiritual rock that was following them.”

St. Paul declares, also, that “that Rock which followed them was CHRIST,” that is to say, it was the divine Power of Christ, which not only made the Water to flow at Horeb, but was ever present with them, and gave a continual supply of Water in the wilderness; and the faithful among them received spiritual refreshment from Him.

In like manner, the benefits of the Death of Christ, Who was once smitten for our sakes, are ever flowing to us in our mortal pilgrimage through the wilderness of this world to our heavenly Canaan. The Fountain, which was once opened for sin and uncleanness (Zech. xiii. 1), is ever sending forth its cleansing streams, to wash away the sins of the world, in all ages, and in every land. In the Sacraments of Baptism and of the Lord’s Supper, its vivifying and healing influences are ever being applied, to the quickening of the dead in trespasses and sins, and to the healing of the spiritual diseases of those who come to them in faith with the eager craving of spiritual thirst for Christ.

On one occasion the supply of water in the wilderness was suspended; this was at Kadesh-barnea, after thirty-eight years’ wandering in the desert. Doubtless this suspension was designed by God Himself to try the faith of the People and of Moses himself; and to teach a salutary lesson to all ages of the Church. On that occasion, Almighty God commanded Moses — not to strike the Rock, which had been once smitten, and once for all—but to speak to it. But Moses disobeyed the command, and smote the Rock twice. — Moses also claimed to himself the power and the honour of bringing water out of the Rock. “Must we fetch you water out of the Rock, ye rebels?”

And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel. ⁷ And he called the name of the place ^k || Massah, and || Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?

⁸ Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim. ⁹ And Moses said unto ^m Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with ⁿ the rod of God in mine hand.

¹⁰ So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill. ¹¹ And it came to pass, when Moses ^o held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. ¹² But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took

k Num. 20. 13.
Ps. 81. 7. & 95. 8.
Heb. 3. 8.
|| That is, Tentation.
|| That is, Chiding, or, Strife.
l Gen. 36. 12.
Num. 24. 20.
Deut. 25. 17.
1 Sam. 15. 2.
m Called Jesus.
Acts 7. 45.
Heb. 4. 8.
n ch. 4. 20.

o James 5. 16.

And for this sin Moses was excluded from Canaan (see Num. xx. 1—13; xxvii. 14. Deut. xxxii. 48—51. Ps. cvi. 32).

The lesson thus taught is, that Christ, once smitten, is not to be smitten any more. The Rock is now to be spoken to. The Christian Minister does not sacrifice Christ afresh,—as Rome says,—but he speaks to the Rock. He uses the Word of God, and by the application of that Word in the administration of the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper, he brings forth Divine Virtue from the Rock, and he applies the Divine Virtue of the Sacrifice once offered. He applies it to the regeneration and renovation of the soul; and he does this by the power of Christ. The Christian Priest does not say, "Must we fetch you water out of the Rock?" he does not smile it, as if it was he who gave the water, and as if the people were to look to him as the author of their life and health; but he regards himself only as an instrument in God's hands, to be governed by God's Will and Word, and he refers all the efficacy of his ministry to God, and to God alone, through Christ. Compare what is said below on 1 Cor. x. 4.

In a secondary sense, the Rock smitten, and flowing with water, represents Christ, the Incarnate Word, as pouring forth by His death the living waters of His holy Word. If Christ had not been crucified, we should never have been able to understand the Old Testament. If His side had not been pierced, and shed forth blood and water, we should all have perished with thirst, not of water, but of the Word of God (Origen).

Some of the first European travellers in the region of Mount Sinai supposed that the Rock which was smitten by Moses at Rephidim may still be identified (see Pococke, Description, i. 215; and Shaw, quoted by Kalisch, p. 307: cp. Killo, Illustrations, iii. 121—125). An obscure tradition of the miracle seems to have been preserved even among the heathen: see Tacit., Hist. v. 3.

7. Massah and Meribah] See on v. 2.

8. Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim] Amalek came by stealth, and attacked the rear of Israel when they were weary, and it is added that they "feared not God," whose People Israel was, and for whom He had done such wonders (Deut. xxv. 17). Probably they were excited by envy and jealousy against Israel at this time, and by fear that the blessing of which Jacob had dispossessed their father Esau was now to be fulfilled (A Lapide, Munster).

Concerning the origin of the Amalekites, from Amalek, the grandson of Esau, see Gen. xxxvi. 12. 16. On their subsequent history, see Num. xiv. 43. Deut. xxv. 17—19. 1 Sam. xiv. 48; xv.; xxvii. 8; xxx.; 2 Sam. viii. 12.

Why did the Amalekites come at this time particularly? Had they heard of the supply of water in this dry land? Did they come to contest the possession of it? Conflicts for "wells of water" were of common occurrence: see Gen. xxvi. 18—22; and the instance in the history of Moses himself (Exod. ii. 16—20): cp. the promise (Num. xx. 17); and the command (Deut. ii. 6); and Blunt, Coincidences, p. 67.

— and fought with Israel] Here was a new trial from without, by which their faith in the help of God given in answer to prayer was exercised (v. 11).

9. And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek] This is the first place in the Bible where the name of Joshua, or Jesus, occurs. Here are the first gleams of the glory of that holy Name. Moses calls Joshua and says, "Choose men." The voice of the Law calls upon Christ, and prepares the way for Him. Moses does not choose the men, but says to Joshua, "Choose men." It is Jesus alone Who can choose men who are able to fight against Amalek,—the foes of His Church. It is He Who said, "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you" (John xv. 16). It is He Who fights against our Amalek. It is He alone Who can enter the house of the strong man and spoil his goods (Origen).

— Joshua] So called here by anticipation. His name was originally Hoshea, and he was a chief of the tribe of Ephraim (Num. xiii. 8. 16. Deut. xxxii. 44). The name Joshua (Jesus in Greek) means, "Jehovah is Saviour:" cp. Hengstl., Auth. ii. 395; and see below, on Num. xiii. 8. 16; xxxiii. 11; xxxiv. 17; and on Matt. i. 21; and Rev. W. T. Bullock's Art. in Bib. Diet. i. 1143.

— fight with Amalek] Whence had Israel arms? (See above, on xiii. 18). The reply given by the Christian Fathers (e. g. Theodoret, Qu. 33) is, that they had obtained them from the bodies of the Egyptians which had been washed upon the shore of the Red Sea (see xiv. 30). The Israelites discomfited Amalek, and thus obtained much spoil and food, and fresh supplies of arms, says Josephus (iii. 2. 4, 5).

This text has been commented on, as an argument for the lawfulness of War in certain cases, by Bp. Andrewes, i. pp. 324, 325—332: cp. S. Aug., c. Faust. xxii. 74.

10. Hur] Of the tribe of Judah, the son of Caleb (the son of Jephunneh, Josh. xiv. 6), the son of Ezrom, not the grandson of Judah (1 Chron. ii. 5. 9. 18, 19), and the father of Bezaleel (Exod. xxxi. 2—5). He was left with Aaron to exercise the office of judging the people when Moses went up into Mount Sinai (xxiv. 14), and is called the husband of Miriam by Josephus (Ant. iii. 2. 4).

— hill] Not mountain (ὄρος), but bovros (Sept.).

11. when Moses held up his hand] Probably in prayer: so Targum Onkelos and Jerusalem, and Josephus; and so the ancient and most of the best modern expositors (Keil, p. 431). Moses with Aaron and Hur in the hill, and Joshua in the field, appear to display the two offices of Christ: of praying in heaven for His people in their conflicts (see Josh. vi. 15), and of fighting for them, as their Captain and Saviour upon earth. Cp. Josh. xix. 51, and Ps. xcix. 6.

The hand of Moses is called by St. Paul "the hand of a Mediator" (Gal. iii. 19), and when raised up in prayer it was typical of the uplifted hand of "the One Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. ii. 5).

Christ is gone up to the everlasting hills of heaven; and as He was parted from His Apostles He lifted up His hands and blessed them (Luke xxiv. 50, 51), and He is ever spreading His hands for them on the hill of heaven, in prevailing prayer, "since He ever liveth to make intercession" for them (Heb. vii. 25). But He is also ever with them as their Jesus upon earth, ever fighting for them, and leading them on to victory: cp. Barnab., Epist. c. 12; Tertullian, adv. Jud. c. 10; c. Marcion. iii. 16. 18; Origen, in Exod. Hom. xi.; S. Aug., c. Faust. xii. 30, "hostis, extensis manibus Mosis, signo Crucis dominice, superatur;" S. Greg. Mag., in Ev. ii. Hom. 33.

The grouping of types together is requisite in order to give any adequate notion of the manifold love and power of Him Who is our Priest, our King, our Prophet,—our all in all.

In this union of prayer and conflict is an evidence of the need of the continued co-operation of the divine grace with the human will (Phil. ii. 13. Bp. Andrewes, v. 403).

Hence, also, we learn that it is not merely or mainly by the physical and material power of armies that victory is gained, but by the lifting up of the hearts and hands of the faithful in prayer. (S. Hilary, in Ps. 133.)

a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun. ¹³ And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword. ¹⁴ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^p Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua: for ^q I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven. ¹⁵ And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it || Jehovah-nissi: ¹⁶ For he said, || Because † the LORD hath sworn that the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

p ch. 34. 27.
q Num. 24. 20.
Deut. 25. 19.
1 Sam. 15. 3, 7.
& 30. 1, 17.
2 Sam. 8. 12.
Ezra 9. 14.
|| That is, The LORD my banner: see Judg. 6. 24.
|| Or, Because the hand of Amalek is against the throne of the LORD, therefore, &c. † Heb. the hand upon the throne of the LORD.

|| Or, Because the hand of Amalek is against the throne of the LORD, therefore, &c. † Heb. the hand upon the throne of the LORD.

12. until the going down of the sun] Christ will continue to pray for His people, even till the end of the world (Heb. vii. 25). His Prayer is set forth as the incense, and the lifting up of His Hands is for us as an evening sacrifice (cp. Ps. cxli. 2). "Spes pugnantis ex manibus Crucifixi pendet, per quas quotidie eruinur de potestate tenbrarum" (Prosper Aquitan., i. 40).

14. Write this for a memorial] God commands Moses to write an account of this victory achieved by the arms of Joshua and the prayers of Moses. Here, then, is an evidence that Moses did write, and write by Divine direction (cp. Num. xxxiii. 1, 2; xxxvi. 13. Deut. xxviii. 61).

The objections grounded on the supposition that alphabetical characters were not used, and that the art of writing was not known in the age of Moses, need hardly to be noticed after their refutation by Hengstenberg, Authentic, i. 416—501.

This Divine command to write is repeated from age to age, from the days of Moses to those of St. John: see Rev. i. 11. 19. And thus we observe a uniform plan continued by God for 1500 years for the instruction of the world by the written Word, that is, by Holy Scripture, given by inspiration of God: cp. Hooker, i. 13, 14.

— in a book] Or rather, in the book; the book which thou hast begun to write, and which is to be preserved to after ages (for the history of this victory is to be a memorial), and to be known as the book written by thee.

That this is the true grammatical meaning of the passage has been shown by Hävernick, Einleitung, § 108 (or § 4 of the English Edition); and by Hengstenberg, Authentic, ii. 149—178; Kalisch, p. 312; Keil, p. 433; from other passages of the Pentateuch, such as Exod. xxiv. 4. 7. Deut. xvii. 18; xxviii. 58; xxix. 19, 20. 27; xxxi. 9. 24.

What Book was this?

Since God gave direction to Moses to write a record in this Book as a memorial for future ages, we may be sure that the Divine command was obeyed by Moses, of whom God testifies that he was "faithful in all His house" (Num. xii. 7. Heb. iii. 2. 5). We may be sure that the Book was written, and that God's design, that it should be preserved, was fulfilled. No other Book has ever been heard of, that has been attributed to Moses by the Hebrew Church, but the Pentateuch; and the Pentateuch has been attributed to him by its immemorial and universal consent; and the Son of God Himself has set His Divine seal on that of the Hebrew Church. He received the Pentateuch as the work of Moses, and delivered it as such to the Christian Church, to which He gave the Holy Spirit "to teach her" and "to guide her into all truth;" and which from the times of the Apostles has received the Pentateuch as written by Moses under the direction of God.

— I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek] Because he came treacherously to fight against his brother Israel, and against Israel's God, after the miraenous manifestation of My power in his behalf. Cp. the sentence pronounced on Amalek for this sin, Num. xxiv. 20, and 1 Sam. xv. 2; and see Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. pp. 309—313.

15. built an altar] Perhaps on the hill where he had prayed.

JEHOVAH-NISSI.

— Jehovah-nissi] The LORD, my banner. The word NISSI is from nasas, to lift up (Gesen., p. 553: see Isa. v. 26; xi. 12. Jer. iv. 6. 21. Ps. lx. 4). Hence the Vulgate has "Dominus exaltatio mea," "the LORD is my banner," i. e. is high lifted up, and exalted, and is become my standard in the battle, and my banner of victory.

This may be truly affirmed of Him Who is "the LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS." Christ has been lifted up, and highly exalted, by His Ascension into Heaven; and in looking up to Him, we see the banner under which we have pledged ourselves at our Baptism to fight manfully against our spiritual Amalek, — Sin, the World, and the Devil; and we behold the pledge also of everlasting victory and glory.

Moses built an altar, and called it Jehovah-nissi, "the LORD is my banner." Gideon built an altar, and called it Jehovah Shalom, "the LORD is our Peace" (Judg. vi. 21). Christ is the Jehovah Tsidkem, the LORD our RIGHTEOUSNESS (Jer. xxiii. 6); and the name of the holy City, in the last words of Ezekiel, is Jehovah Shammah, "the LORD is there." All these attributes are contained in Christ. Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 148, note.

16. For he said, Because the LORD hath sworn] Literally, he said, Because (a) hand (is) on the throne of the Lord, a war of the Lord against Amalek from generation to generation. A mysterious and prophetic speech, which has a profound meaning. The conflict with Amalek is introduced with a special direction from God Himself to Moses; and it is the first direction of the kind in the Pentateuch,—to write a memorial of it in THE BOOK. Therefore, we may be certain, that this conflict has a significance extending far beyond the range of a tribe of Arabia, and of hostilities between Israel and Amalek. It speaks of the throne of the Lord, and a war of the Lord. It concerns the Enemies of God and His People; who are specially represented by Amalek, treacherously and cruelly attacking the people of God. Accordingly, the Hebrew Rabbis say that these words of Moses will be fulfilled in the days of the Messiah (R. Menachem).

In the prophecy of Balaam, concerning Christ and His People (which is the best commentary on this passage), Amalek holds the first place among His enemies. Amalek was the first to attack Israel; and "his end 'is to perish for ever:'" see on Num. xxiv. 20.

It is not improbable that the Amalekites may have been tempted to make the assault on the Israelites by a desire to dispossess them of their supply of water, and that thus perhaps they represent those enemies of God's people who would deprive them of spiritual privileges.

What seems to have been in the mind of Moses (with reverence be it spoken) was this.—He had said that He would go up to the mountain with the rod of God in his hand (v. 9); and when Moses held up his hand, Israel had prevailed; but when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. But "his hands were heavy;" and he was placed upon a seat by human aid; and "his hands were stayed up" by help of others, and then his hands were steady. Surely this repetition of the word hand has its meaning.

It might have been thought that the hands of Moses were the cause of the victory. But "Moses was a servant, not a Son" (Heb. iii. 5), and he would not arrogate the victory to himself; he would not deprive God of His glory and praise. After the victory, therefore, he built an altar, and by its name he declared that the LORD was the Giver of the victory. This was as much as to say, it was not the lifting up of my hands, but the lifting up of the Lord's Name as a Banner, which was the cause of the Victory; and he explained this further by adding, as a commentary, "Because a hand was on the throne of the Lord, therefore the battle was gained. Not by any inherent virtue in my hand, nor by any essential efficacy in the rod which was in my hand, but because my hand rested on the throne of the Lord, and because the rod was 'the rod of God,' therefore my prayer prevailed, and so the victory was won."

The lifting up the hand to the throne has been said by some to imply an oath. So Onkelos, and Targum of Jerusalem; and our Version; and see Bp. Patrick here; and Ifeiffer, Dubia, p. 123. This may be a part of the sense, but surely it is not the whole.

There is a higher meaning than that. The expression is,

a ch. 2. 16. & 3. 1.

b Ps. 44. 1. & 77. 14, 15. & 78. 4. & 105. 5, 43. & 106. 2, 8.

c ch. 4. 26.

d Acts 7. 29.

e ch. 2. 22.

|| That is, A stranger there.|| That is, My God is an help.

f ch. 3. 1. 12.

g Gen. 14. 17. & 18. 2. & 19. 1.

h Kings 2. 19.

i Ps. 29. 13. & 33. 4.

† Heb. peace,

Gen. 43. 27.

2 Sam. 11. 7.

† Heb. found

them, Gen. 44. 34.

Num. 20. 14.

i Ps. 78. 42. & 81. 7. & 106. 10. & 107. 2.

k Gen. 14. 20.

2 Sam. 18. 28.

Luke 1. 68.

XVIII. ¹ When ^a Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father in law, heard of all that ^b God had done for Moses, and for Israel his people, and that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt; ² Then Jethro, Moses' father in law, took Zipporah, Moses' wife, ^c after he had sent her back, ³ And her ^d two sons; of which the ^e name of the one was || Gershom; for he said, I have been an alien in a strange land: ⁴ And the name of the other was || Eliezer; for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh: ⁵ And Jethro, Moses' father in law, came with his sons and his wife unto Moses into the wilderness, where he encamped at 'the mount of God: ⁶ And he said unto Moses, I thy father in law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her. ⁷ And Moses ^g went out to meet his father in law, and did obeisance, and ^h kissed him; and they asked each other of their † welfare; and they came into the tent. ⁸ And Moses told his father in law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had † come upon them by the way, and how the LORD ⁱ delivered them. ⁹ And Jethro rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians. ¹⁰ And Jethro said, ^k Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

"A hand upon the throne of the Lord." The hand of Moses is compared with a hand on the throne of the Lord; the seat of Moses on the hill is compared with the throne of the Lord in heaven. The rod of power in the hand of Moses leads him to think of a heavenly rod, a divine sceptre. "A hand on the throne of the Lord" is the hand to which Moses looks, and by which he had prevailed, and which will chastise the enemies of Israel, especially Amalek. That hand has a rod in it,—a rod of power,—to lead, to rule, to bruise.

What hand is that?

Surely, it is the hand of Him, Whose hand is ever lifted up in heaven in prayer and in power; surely, it is the hand of Him, Who is a King and a Priest on the throne of God; surely, it is the hand of Him, concerning whom the Psalmist speaks: "The Lord shall send the rod of Thy power out of Zion; be Thou Ruler even in the midst among Thine enemies;" "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou on My right hand, until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool;" "The Lord sware, and will not repent, Thou art a Priest for ever;" "The Lord upon Thy right hand shall wound even kings in the day of His wrath" (Ps. ex. 1—5). "Thy throne, O God, endureth for ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy kingdom" (Ps. xlv. 6, 7. Heb. i. 8). "Thy right hand shall teach Thee terrible things; the people shall be subdued unto Thee even in the midst among the King's enemies" (Ps. xlv. 5). "Thou shalt bruise them with a rod of iron, and break them in pieces like a potter's vessel" (Ps. ii. 9).

That hand,—the Hand of CHRIST,—upon the Throne of the LORD,—is the Hand which now rules the World. "The Father hath given all things into His hand" (John iii. 35). Of Him His People says, "Strong is Thy hand, and high is Thy right hand: righteousness and equity are the habitation of Thy seat" (Ps. lxxxix. 14). "Upon Thy right hand stands the Queen," Thy Bride (Ps. xlv. 10). "We are the sheep of His hand" (Ps. xc. 7). "Thou hast driven out the heathen with Thy hands, and planted us in. It was not our own arm that helped us, but Thy right hand, and Thine arm, because Thou hast a favour unto us. Through thee will we overthrow our enemies" (Ps. xlv. 2—6). "All Thine enemies shall feel Thy hand: Thy right hand shall find out them that hate Thee" (Ps. xxi. 8).

Therefore, in Moses seated on the mountain, with the rod of power in his hands, uplifted in prayer, and vanquishing the enemies of God, we may see a Vision of Christ, seated in glory, on the hill of the heavenly Zion, with the Rod or Sceptre of Majesty and Dominion in His Hand, which is on the Throne of Jehovah Himself, at Whose right Hand He sits, and will continue to sit from generation to generation, even to the sunset of the World, and until He has subdued all the spiritual Amalekites who defy His power, and persecute His people, and until He has put all His enemies under His feet.

For a confirmation of this exposition, see Barnabas, Epist. 12; Justin Martyr, Apol. § 49; Irenæus, iv. 41, ed. Grabe; Tertullian, c. Marcion. iii. 18; Theodoret, Qu. in Exod. 34.

CHAP. XVIII.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law as read in the Synagogues, and continues to xx. 26. The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is Isa. vi. 1 to vii. 6, revealing the sublime vision of Jehovah in the Temple, and the Mission of the Prophet himself. The ancient Hebrew Church by this juxtaposition intended that a comparison should be made of that Vision with the Vision of Jehovah on Sinai, and the commission of Moses.

To these Lessons is added in some Synagogues Isa. ix. 5, 6, foretelling the birth and victories of the Messiah.

1. Jethro, the priest of Midian] See ii. 16. 18; iii. 1; and Num. x. 29. The facts recorded in this chapter show that the Midianites had opportunities of learning a good deal of the history of the Israelites, and of God's dealings with them through Jethro, and might have profited by that knowledge. In considering God's judgments on the Midianites (Num. xxv. 17; xxxi. 2), it is requisite to bear in mind these facts. It seems that the Rechabites profited by his instructions. See 1 Chron. ii. 55. Jer. xxxv. 2. The Midianites heard of God's doings, but only to fear His power, and to hire Balaam to curse His people.

2, 3. Zipporah—And her two sons] See ii. 21; and iv. 20. Zipporah, the wife of Moses, had not accompanied him into Egypt. He would not expose her to the danger of the conflict with Pharaoh. There is also a moral here, as Origen suggests: it is only the masculine spirit, animated by God, which can endure the hardships of such struggles: "Non potest descendere in Ægyptum et subire agones Ægyptios, nisi qui fuerit athleta probabilis et talis quem dicit Apostolus" (1 Cor. ix. 25. Cp. 1 Cor. vii. 29).

We hear very little of these sons of Moses. Moses did not use his power as a Leader, to promote his children, and make himself a family; he appointed a person of another tribe, Joshua, to be his successor. Here is a proof of his disinterestedness. Here also is an example to Prelates and other Rulers in the Church (Origen).

5. at the mount of God] Horeb. See iii. 1; xvii. 6. Deut. v. 2. The place of this meeting was at Rephidim, the encampment of Israel, perhaps at Er Rahah, at the mouth of Wady-es-Sheikh: see ch. xvii. 1 (Keil).

6. And he said] By messengers. See v. 7; and ep. Matt. viii. 5, 8, with Luke vii. 3, 6.

10. Blessed be the LORD] The word Jehovah was known therefore to Jethro; and he confesses that Jehovah, the God of Moses, is greater than all Elohim, or rather, above all the Elohim (ha-elohim), who were worshipped by other nations (v. 11: see on vi. 2, 3).

¹¹ Now I know that the LORD is ¹greater than all gods: ^mfor in the thing wherein they dealt ⁿproudly he was above them. ¹² And Jethro, Moses' father in law, took a burnt offering and sacrifices for God: and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to eat bread with Moses' father in law ^obefore God.

¹³ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses sat to judge the people: and the people stood by Moses from the morning until the evening. ¹⁴ And when Moses' father in law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even? ¹⁵ And Moses said unto his father in law, Because ^pthe people come unto me to enquire of God: ¹⁶ When they have ^qa matter, they come unto me; and I judge between [†]one and another, and I do ^rmake them know the statutes of God, and his laws. ¹⁷ And Moses' father in law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good. ¹⁸ [†]Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee; ^sthou art not able to perform it thyself alone. ¹⁹ Harken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and ^tGod shall be with thee: Be thou ^ufor the people to God-ward, that thou mayest ^vbring the causes unto God: ²⁰ And thou shalt ^yteach them ordinances and laws, and shalt shew them ^zthe way wherein they must walk, and ^athe work that they must do. ²¹ Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people ^bable men, such as ^cfear God, ^dmen of truth, ^ehating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens: ²² And let them judge the people ^fat all seasons: ^gand it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every Acts 6. 3. c Gen. 42. 18. 2 Sam. 23. 3. 2 Chron. 19. 9. d Ezek. 18. 8. e Deut. 16. 19. f ver. 26.

g ver. 26. Lev. 24. 11. Num. 15. 33. & 27. 2. & 36. 1. Deut. 1. 17. & 17. 8.

12 Chron. 2. 5.
Ps. 95. 3. & 97. 9
& 135. 5.
m ch. 1. 10, 16,
22. & 5. 2, 7. &
14. 8, 18. n 1 Sam. 2. 3.
Neh. 9. 10, 16, 29
Job 40. 11, 12
Ps. 31. 23. &
119. 21.
Luke 1. 51.
o Deut. 12. 7.
1 Chron. 29. 22.
1 Cor. 10. 18,
21, 31.

p Lev. 24. 12
Num. 15. 34.
q ch. 23. 7. &
24. 14.
Deut. 17. 8.
2 Sam. 15. 3.
Job 31. 13.
Acts 18. 15.
1 Cor. 6. 1.
† Heb. a man and his fellow.
r Lev. 24. 15.
Num. 15. 35. &
27. 6. &c. & 36. 6,
7, 8, 9.
† Heb. *Fading
thou wilt fade.*
s Num. 11. 14, 17.
Deut. 1. 9, 12.
t ch. 3. 12.
u ch. 4. 16. &
20. 19.
Deut. 5. 5.
x Num. 27. 5.
y Deut. 4. 1, 5.
& 5. 1. & 6. 1, 2.
& 7. 11.
z Ps. 143. 8.
a Deut. 1. 18.
b ver. 25.
Deut. 1. 15, 16.
& 16. 18.
2 Chron. 19. 5—10.
f ver. 26.

11. in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them] He made their sin to be an instrument of their punishment, and of His own glory. They drowned the children of His people. He drowned them in the Red Sea. In their pride they pursued after them, and were overwhelmed in the pursuit, and God was magnified by their overthrow, and by the deliverance of His people. See above, on ix. 16; and cp. xiv. 4.

12. Jethro—took] This religious intercommunion of Jethro, the Priest of Midian, with Moses and Aaron, and the elders of Israel, is full of interest, as showing that there was not a barrier set up by God between His people, and those of other nations, who acknowledged Him. Jethro, a Priest of the Midianites, descendants of Abraham and Keturah, had derived some knowledge of Jehovah from his ancestors (see v. 10), and he rejoiced when he heard what God had done with Israel. He stands here in contrast with the Amalekites, descended from Esau, who did not fear God (see on xvii. 8), and had recently come and fought with Israel, and also in contrast with the Midianites, who joined with the King of Moab in hiring Balaam to curse Israel, and who tempted Israel to harlotry and idolatry (Num. xxii. 7; xxv. 6; xxxi. 16).

Jethro occupies a place by the side of Job and Melchizedek (cp. S. Augustine, Qu. 69); and his intercommunion in sacrifice at Horeb "before God," with Moses, Aaron, and the elders of Israel, reveals a glimpse of that blessed time when all true worshippers of God will be united together in adoration of Him, Who is the Father of all (John iv. 23).

— a burnt offering] Olah, from olah, to go up, and from its hiphil conjugation, to cause to go up (i. e. to the altar), to offer upon it: hence the substantive olah signifies an offering brought up to the altar, and entirely burnt upon it to the Lord,—a holocaust—δολοκάτωμα (Sept.). Cp. the word ἀναφέρειν in the New Test. (Heb. vii. 27; xiii. 15. James ii. 2. 1 Pet. ii. 5. 24), and see Gesenius, 531.

— sacrifices] Zebachim; zebach, a sacrifice, is properly what is slain (cp. Gen. xxxi. 54), from zabach, connected with Gr. σφάζω, to slay, and σφάγη, a sacrifice; and it signifies what was slain as a victim, but not burnt (as the olah was), with the exception of parts of the fat, but was partly given to the priest (viz. the breast and right shoulder), and the rest eaten at a feast by the offerer, his family, and friends, among whom (after the giving of the Levitical Law) the Levites and the poor were not to be forgotten. The word zebach comprises, therefore, the peace-offering, but not the minchah (or meal-offering), which was unbloody. See below, Lev. iii. 1. 3. 14, 15; iv. 10. 35; vii. 31. Num. vii. 17; x. 10. Deut. xii. 6. 11; xxvii. 7. 1 Sam. ix. 24; xvi. 2. 5. Gesenius, p. 238; Kalisch, p. 319; and Rev. Dr. Barry, in Smith's B. D. Arts. "Burnt Offering," "Thank Offering," and "Sacrifice;" B. D. ii. 1076.

— and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to eat bread] To eat bread, that is, to partake of the sacrifice. Cp. Lev. iii. 11; xxi. 6. Num. xxviii. 2.

It seems that in the present instance the sacrificial feast took place in the tent of Moses (v. 7), and therefore Moses is not mentioned as coming to it, as Aaron is, and all the elders of Israel are; and they are said to eat "before God," because the sacrifice had been offered to Him, probably on the altar, near the tent of Moses, perhaps the altar of Jehovah-nissi, mentioned in xvii. 15.

15. to enquire of God] For Moses brought their matters before Him (v. 19: cp. Num. xv. 33—35; xxvii. 5, 6; and 1 Sam. ix. 9). The judgment is God's, said Moses (Deut. i. 17),—a lesson to all, that men are not to go to law to seek to gratify their own passions, but to endeavour to ascertain God's will, and to abide by it: see 1 Cor. vi. 1—7.

16. the statutes of God, and his laws] There were, therefore, certain statutes and laws of God before the Decalogue. Such, especially, were the precepts of Noah (see above, on Gen. ix. 4). Hooker, IV. xi.; and such is the Moral Law, which is written by God's finger on the conscience and heart of man: see on Rom. ii. 14.

21. thou shalt provide out of all the people able men] In Deut. i. 9—17 this advice is inserted in the record of what happened immediately before the departure from Horeb. But (as Kalisch has observed, p. 323) there is no discrepancy between the two passages. Their designs were different. That of Deuteronomy is a rapid sketch of the whole time of the wanderings. On the providential uses of this advice of Jethro, see further, on xix. 7.

22. every great matter] On which no divine command has been given (Selden de Syr. i. 16; Keil, Arch. § 149).

h Num. 11. 17. small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and ^h they shall bear the burden with thee. ²³ If thou shalt do this thing, and God command thee so, then thou shalt be ⁱ able to endure, and all this people shall also go to ^k their place in peace.

i ver. 18.

k Gen. 18. 33. & 30. 25.
ch. 16. 29.
2 Sam. 19. 39.

l Deut. 1. 15.
Acts 6. 5.

m ver. 22.
n Job 29. 16.

o Num. 10. 29. 30.

²⁴ So Moses hearkened to the voice of his father in law, and did all that he had said. ²⁵ And ^l Moses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens. ²⁶ And they ^m judged the people at all seasons: the ⁿ hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

²⁷ And Moses let his father in law depart; and ^o he went his way into his own land.

a Num. 33. 15.

b ch. 17. 1, 8.

c ch. 3. 1, 12.

d ch. 20. 21.
Acts 7. 35.
c ch. 3. 4.

f Deut. 29. 2.

g Deut. 32. 11.
Isa. 63. 9.

Rev. 12. 14.

h Deut. 5. 2.

i Deut. 4. 20. & 7. 6. & 14. 2, 21.

& 26. 18. & 32. 8, 9.

Job 41. 11. Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 12.

1 Cor. 10. 26, 28.

XIX. ¹ In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day ^a came they into the wilderness of Sinai.

² For they were departed from ^b Rephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel camped before ^c the mount. ³ And ^d Moses went up unto God, and the LORD ^e called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel; ⁴ Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and

⁵ how ^f I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself. ⁵ Now ^h therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ⁱ ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for ^k all the earth is mine:

⁵ Now ^h therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ⁱ ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for ^k all the earth is mine: ^g Deut. 32. 11. Isa. 63. 9. Rev. 12. 14. h Deut. 5. 2. i Deut. 4. 20. & 7. 6. & 14. 2, 21. & 26. 18. & 32. 8, 9. 1 Kings 8. 53. Ps. 135. 4. Cant. 8. 12. Isa. 41. 8. & 43. 1. Jer. 10. 16. Mal. 3. 17. Tit. 2. 14. k ch. 9. 29. Deut. 10. 14. Job 41. 11. Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 26, 28.

24. Moses hearkened to the voice of his father in law] Moses, the divinely-commissioned Leader of Israel, and the divinely-inspired Author of the Pentateuch, listened to the advice of Jethro,—an evidence that in matters of practical duty God instructs men by natural Reason, as well as by Holy Scripture. St. Paul sent for his books and his parchments (2 Tim. iv. 13), and commanded Timothy to give attendance to reading (1 Tim. iv. 13). See note below, on Num. x. 31; and on 2 Tim. iv. 13; and Hooker, II. viii. and III. viii.; and Bp. Sanderson, on Conscience, Prelection iv. Compare S. Augustine, Qu. 68, who observes that “even the holiest of men are prone to be too fond of power and pre-eminence; and that Moses, the Leader of Israel, showed his wisdom and his meekness in listening to the advice of Jethro, a foreigner, which rescued him from the snare and peril of pride, as well as from the perplexity and embarrassment of too much business and distraction, which might wear out his mind, and draw his thoughts from God.” See Luke x. 41. Eccles. xi. 10.

May not this example of Moses, listening to the advice of Jethro, be applied to commend the Subdivision of Dioceses, and an Increase of the Episcopate, in England and Wales?

CH. XIX. 1. In the third month, when] Some interpret this, in the third new moon after. But the word chodesh, here rendered month, never signifies new moon in the Pentateuch (Hengstl., Auth. ii. 363; Keil, p. 438).

—the wilderness of Sinai] Before the Mount Sinai (see v. 3. The Mountain before which the Israelites were encamped is almost always called Sinai (see xix. 18. 20. 23; xxiv. 16; xxxiv. 2. 4. 29. 32. Lev. vii. 38; xxv. 1; xxvi. 46; xxvii. 34. Num. iii. 1; xxviii. 6. Deut. xxxiii. 2); and the wilderness where they encamped is called the Wilderness of Sinai, not of Horeb. Only in Exod. xxxiii. 6 is this station called Mount Horeb; and briefly Horeb, in Deut. i. 2. 6. 19; iv. 10. 15; v. 2; ix. 8; xviii. 16; xxix. 1. See above, iii. 1, where it is observed that Horeb was probably the name of the region, of which Sinai was probably a mountain. The encampment of the Israelites has been supposed by some to have been in the wide open valleys to the north and north-west of Sinai, perhaps those which are now called Wady-er-Rahah, and Wady-es-Sheikh, which at their junction form a wide area to the north of Jebel Musa,—the hill of Moses; almost immediately arising from this area, and on the south of it, and nearer to it than Jebel Musa is to the lofty peak of Râs Sussafeh, supposed by Robinson to be the mountain of the Law (Stanley, Sinai, p. 42). It has been supposed by others, that the Israelites were encamped in Wady Sebayeh, on the south-east of Jebel Musa: see Laborde, Strauss, Ritter, Kurtz: see Keil, pp. 440, 441.

There is something providential and instructive even in the uncertainty which envelopes the Holiest Places of the Bible: see on Matt. iv. 1. It draws us off from what is circumstantial and temporary, to what is essential and eternal. We are not to dwell so much on the Places in the Bible, as on what was done in them.

The Israelites remained here nearly a whole year, save ten days; viz. from the first day of the third month (Sivan) of their wandering, to the twentieth day of the second month in the second year (Num. x. 11). This part of the peninsula abounded in pastures, and was best adapted for a long sojourn for their cattle: see on iii. 1; xii. 38.

4. on eagles' wings] See Deut. xxxii. 11; and note below on Rev. xii. 14, where the Woman in the wilderness,—the Christian Church,—is described as borne on the wings of the Great Eagle. The history of the Exodus, and of the mercies of God to His ancient People in the wilderness, is continually presented to the eye in the Apocalypse, as a picture of God's dealings with His Church, even to the end of time; and thus we learn to see a shadowing forth of our own history as Christians in that of the Israelites in the desert: see the Introduction to the Apocalypse, pp. 148, 149.

5. ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me] In Hebrew, segullah, from sagal, to acquire,—a precious treasure acquired with labour, and which is carefully laid up: ep. 1 Chron. xxix. 3. Eccles. ii. 8. The phrase in the text is rendered by Sept., λαός περιούσιος, and in Mal. iii. 17, εἰς περιούσιον, whence St. Peter has λαός εἰς περιποίησιν, or, purchase (1 Pet. ii. 9); and this phrase is applied by him to the universal Church of Christ, as purchased by God to Himself by the precious blood of His dear Son, to be His peculiar treasure (Acts xx. 28. 1 Cor. vi. 20; vii. 23; and see on Eph. i. 14; and on Titus ii. 14). Thus the Apostle teaches us to apply this Scripture to ourselves, and to regard the members of Christ as the true Israelites, and as heirs of the promises of God. Here then is spiritual comfort and assurance of His favour towards us.

God said to the Israelites, Ye shall be a peculiar treasure to Me,—a treasure chosen by Me from all nations, and carefully kept by Me,—if ye obey My voice. But they did not obey His voice, and therefore fell under the curse (Deut. xxvii. 26). But Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the Law (Gal. iii. 13), and we are become a peculiar treasure, which the Jews cannot be, as long as they reject Christ (see Theodoret here). Their rejection for disobedience is our warning also.

— all the earth is mine] I am not a mere local and national ⁶ And ye shall be unto me a ¹ kingdom of priests, and an ^m holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.

⁷ And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the LORD commanded him. ⁸ And ⁿ all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the LORD.

⁹ And the LORD said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee ^o in a thick cloud, ^p that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and ^q believe thee for ever. And Moses told the words of the people unto the LORD. ¹⁰ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go unto the people, and ^r sanctify them to day and to morrow, and let them ^s wash their clothes, ¹¹ And be ready against the third day: for the third day the LORD ^t will come down in the sight of all the people

1 Deut. 33. 2, 3, 4.
1 Pet. 2. 5, 9.
Rev. 1. 6. & 5. 10.
& 20. 6.
m Lev. 20. 24. 26.
Deut. 7. 6. &
26. 19. & 28. 9.
Isa. 62. 12.
1 Cor. 3. 17.
1 Thess. 5. 27.
n ch. 24. 3, 7.
Deut. 5. 27. &
26. 17.

o ver. 16.
ch. 20. 21. &
24. 15, 16.
Deut. 4. 11.
Ps. 18. 11, 12.
& 97. 2.
Matt. 17. 5.
p Deut. 4. 12. 36.
John 12. 29, 30.
q ch. 14. 31.
r Lev. 11. 44, 45.
Heb. 10. 22.
s ver. 14.

Gen. 35. 2. Lev. 15. 5. t ver. 16, 18. ch. 34. 5. Deut. 33. 2.

deity, like the false gods of Egypt, but all the Earth is Mine. Therefore, the full meaning of these promises is not to be sought in a local and national religion, like Judaism (which was only preparatory and temporary), but they reach forward to the great commission given by the Lord of all to His Apostles, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature" (Mark xvi. 15).

6. a kingdom of priests] That is, a royal race of priests; kings and priests (Onkelos). So Jonathan Targ., Hieros., Syr., and the ancient Christian Expositors; and Drusius, Luther, Calvin. As Priests and Kings have a commission from God, Whose Ministers they are, to maintain His truth, glory, and worship in the world, so were the Israelites charged by God to advance His sacred kingdom among all Nations.

This title also is applied to Christians by St. Peter (1 Pet. ii. 5), who adopts the words of the Septuagint here, βασιλευσιν ιερατευμα, εθνος αγιον,—another example of the use of that Version, as a vinduct between the Old Testament and the New, and as conducing to establish the Christian exposition of the Old Testament.

As all Israelites were separated from other nations, and were consecrated to God's Service as a holy nation; so are Christians severed from the world, in order that they "may offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. ii. 5); and to "show forth the praises of Him Who hath called them out of darkness into His marvellous light" (1 Pet. ii. 9).

The Holy Spirit, also, has taught us in the Apocalypse to see the full accomplishment of this promise in Christ, the true Shiloh (Gen. xlix. 10), and in His People (see Rev. i. 6; v. 10).

The true nature of the sacrifices to be offered by all Christians is declared by St. Paul, Rom. xii. 1. Heb. xiii. 15, 16.

The original word for "holy,"—kadosh,—is supposed to be connected with chodesh, the bright new moon, and perhaps with the Sanscrit dhushch, to be bright, pure (Diestel, Delitzsch); perhaps the Greek κεδως is connected with kadosh. The opposite to it is chol (κωλως, common), from chalal, to be loose: cp. Gesen., pp. 278. 722—725.

7. called for the elders] By whom God's words were to be communicated to the people (see iii. 16). The adoption of Jethro's advice (xviii. 21) was a providential preparation for ready communication with the people, and together with the institution of the well-organized body of elders, supplies an answer to those who suggest doubts whether it was possible for Moses to communicate God's mandates to more than two millions of people.

8. All that the LORD hath spoken we will do] The alliance of God with His ancient Church is often described in Scripture under the figure of Marriage; and it has been well observed, that the time between the Exodus and the ratification of the Covenant on Mount Sinai answered to the time of Betrothal (cp. Ezek. xvi. 8; xx. 5. Hos. ix. 10; xi. 1; xiii. 5. Amos ii. 10); and the words in the text are like those of the Bride promising faithfulness to her Husband; and the Decalogue and Laws that follow to the end of the twenty-third chapter, and which are called "the Book of the Covenant," are like the Marriage Covenant between the Lord and His Church: cp. Kalisch, pp. 333. 375.

9. in a thick cloud] Literally, in thickness, or darkness of a cloud,—with thunder and lightning, a sign of God's presence, in order that all the people might know that God spake with Moses, and might obey the precepts given through him (cp. v.

11), and a rehearsal of the future Judgment, when all will be judged according to the Law given them by God.

10. let them wash their clothes] An incidental evidence of a supply of water in the wilderness of Sinai; see also Deut. ix. 21, "I cast the dust thereof (of the golden calf) into the brook that descended out of the mount." See note there.

This washing before the reception of the Law was a figure of that spiritual cleansing with water and the Holy Ghost which we have in Christ (John iii. 5. Eph. v. 26. Titus iii. 5), and of the purity required of those who come to God. "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water" (Heb. x. 22).

11. And be ready against the third day] The sixth of the third month, Sivan, according to the Jewish Calendar, and the same day as the Feast of Pentecost (see on v. 1). Accordingly, at the feast of Pentecost, that portion of Scripture is read by the Jews which relates the delivering of the Decalogue.

S. Jerome (Mansio xii) says, that "the Law was given on Mount Sinai on the fiftieth day after the Exodus; and therefore the Feast of Pentecost is celebrated in commemoration of that Delivery; and that it was afterwards fulfilled in the Coming of the Holy Ghost from heaven on that day on the Apostles, who were enabled thereby to evangelize the world."

The Law was written at the first Pentecost at Mount Sinai on tables of stone; but at the Christian Pentecost it was written by the Spirit, on the fleshy tables of the heart; and divine light was then given, in order that the disciples of Christ might understand it; and divine power, in order that they might fulfil it. Cp. S. Leo, Sermon. lxxiii.; and S. Augustine, Qu. 70, who thus speaks: "On this day (the day here specified by Moses), the fiftieth after the Passover, the Law was given, which was written on tables of stone by the finger of God. Here was a shadow of the future. For on this day, also, the fiftieth after the Resurrection of the True Passover, the Holy Spirit was given, Who is the Finger of God, and Who writes the Law of Love on our hearts,—that new Law, to which the Levitical Law looked, and for which it yearned, as its own fulfilment." See Jer. xxxi. 31; and Justin Martyr, Dialog. c. Tryphon. § 67. Therefore the Church of England when reciting the Decalogue at her altars, well teaches us to pray for the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, that we "may perfectly love" God, and to "write all His laws on our hearts."

The Pentecost was also the feast of wheat-harvest; and at the Christian Pentecost the Apostles were sent forth to reap a spiritual harvest in all parts of the world, which is the Field of Christ: see below, notes on Acts ii. 1.

The Church has appointed the sixty-eighth Psalm to be used on the Festival of Whitsunday. That Psalm opens with a description of the glory of the Lord in His appearance on Mount Sinai (v. 8); and proceeds to speak of the Ascension of the Lord Jesus, with thousands of Angels as on Sinai, and of the Coming of God the Holy Ghost to dwell among His people (v. 18). These words of the Psalmist are adopted by the Church, teaching us to connect the Giving of the Decalogue on Mount Sinai with the Descent of the Holy Spirit on Mount Sion, whose glories are celebrated in another Psalm, appointed for the same Festival, viz. the forty-eighth.

It is not without a figure that the command was given, "Be ready against the third day;" see also r. 15. The Feast of the Christian Pentecost is always on the first day of the week, the day of the Resurrection of Christ, Who rose from the dead on the third day.

upon mount Sinai. ¹² And thou shalt set bounds unto the people round about, saying, Take heed to yourselves, that ye go not up into the mount, or touch the border of it: "whosoever toucheth the mount shall be surely put to death: ¹³ There shall not an hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned, or shot through; whether it be beast or man, it shall not live: when the ^x trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

¹⁴ And Moses went down from the mount unto the people, and ^y sanctified the people; and they washed their clothes. ¹⁵ And he said unto the people, ^z Be ready against the third day: ^a come not at your wives.

¹⁶ And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there were ^b thunders and lightnings, and a ^c thick cloud upon the mount, and the ^d voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp ^e trembled. ¹⁷ And ^f Moses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mount. ¹⁸ And ^g mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it ^h in fire: ⁱ and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and ^k the whole mount quaked greatly. ¹⁹ And ^l when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, ^m Moses spake, and ⁿ God answered him by a voice. ²⁰ And the LORD came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the LORD called Moses up to the top of the mount; and Moses went up. ²¹ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go down, ^o charge the people, lest they break through unto the LORD ^p to gaze, and many of them perish.

²² And let the priests also, which come near to the LORD, ^q sanctify themselves, u Heb. 12. 20.

 || Or, cornet.
 x ver. 16, 19.
 y ver. 10.
 z ver. 11.
 a 1 Sam. 21. 4, 5.
 Zech. 7. 3.
 1 Cor. 7. 5.
 b Ps. 77. 18.
 Heb. 12. 18, 19.
 Rev. 4. 5. & 8. 5.
 & 11. 19.
 c ver. 9.
 ch. 40. 34.
 2 Chron. 5. 14.
 d Rev. 1. 10.
 & 4. 1.
 e Heb. 12. 21.
 f Deut. 4. 10.
 g Deut. 4. 11.
 & 33. 2.
 Judg. 5. 5.
 Ps. 68. 7, 8.
 Jsa. 6. 4.
 Hab. 3. 3.
 h ch. 3. 2. &
 24. 17.
 2 Chron. 7. 1, 2, 3.
 i Gen. 15. 17.
 Ps. 114. 5.
 Rev. 15. 8.
 k Ps. 68. 8. &
 77. 18. & 114. 7.
 Jer. 4. 24.
 Heb. 12. 26.
 l ver. 13.
 m Heb. 12. 21.
 n Neh. 9. 13. Ps. 81. 7.

† Heb. contest.

o See ch. 3. 5. 1 Sam. 6. 19.

p Lev. 10. 3.

13. There shall not an hand touch it] Rather, there shall not a hand touch him. The man or the beast was not to be killed cominus, sed eminus, with stones or with a dart. So the ancient Versions (Kalisch and Ainsworth: see the following note). — he shall surely be stoned, or shot through] From a distance. This mode of punishment was prescribed, because the Israelites were not allowed to follow the offender, and touch him, within the precincts of the Mount, and so to violate its sanctity.

The Apostle, in his Epistle to the Hebrews, teaches us how to understand these divine directions: see Heb. xii. 18—24. He had taught us in the Epistles to the Galatians and the Romans, that the Law was given because of transgressions, and to show men's sinfulness, and consequent danger, and need of a Redeemer, to shelter them from the wrath of God. See Gal. iii. 19. Rom. iii. 20; iv. 15; v. 20; vii. 8; and Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, pp. 188—193; and that therefore "the Law was a schoolmaster, to bring us to Christ" (Gal. iii. 24), without Whom the Law only worketh wrath, and leaves us under a curse (Gal. iii. 10. 13. 1 Cor. xv. 56), and is called a ministration of death (2 Cor. iii. 7), and therefore was a teacher of humility, and excited all true Israelites to look forward with earnest longing to the Coming of Him Who would deliver them from the curse of the Law, and restore them to peace with God; and in the Epistle to the Hebrews the Apostle shows, that the awful circumstances with which the Law was delivered, the fire, the smoke, the darkness, the storm, the thunder and lightning, the sound of the trumpet, and the voice of the words of God, too terrible to be heard, and the fear of even Moses himself, their leader, the faithful servant of God; and the awful denunciation, that "if any one touched the mountain, he should be stoned or pierced through with a dart," were all designed to show God's Majesty and Holiness, and their own sinfulness, and their consequent need of some other Mediator than Moses; and to quicken their faith and hope in Him Who had been promised to their forefather Abraham, and in Whom all Nations of the Earth should be blessed (Gen. xii. 3; xviii. 18; xxii. 18. Gal. iii. 8. 17, 18); and that these words were also intended to excite the joy and thankfulness of all those who live under the Gospel, where God speaks to them,—not in cloud and thunder,—but in the mild light of fatherly love and mercy, in His only-begotten Son, God manifest in the flesh, the Mediator between God and man, the Redeemer and Saviour of the world. Let them contrast the terrors of Mount Sinai with the beatitudes of the Sermon on the Mount, and with the gracious effusions of the Holy Spirit of Peace and Love at Sion on the day of Pentecost, and with the glorious revelation of the Jerusalem which is above, whereof they are made citizens in Christ; and of the innumerable company of Angels, with whom they are assembled as fellow-worshippers; and of the Church of the firstborn, who are written in heaven, to which they are admitted in Him, and of God, the Judge of all, and of the spirits of just men made perfect; and of Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant. Let them also not forget the awful consequences of rejecting Moses, and the law given by him, and they will understand what the true meaning of that Law was, and what that of the Gospel is, and they will see the strongest motives there to faith, love, holiness, and obedience to CHRIST, and the peril of rejecting HIM. See Heb. iii. 1—12; x. 28, 30; and xii. 18—28.

St. Paul authenticates the truth of the history of this wonderful and awful revelation of God on Mount Sinai by quoting the very words of the narrative as they stand in the Septuagint. See especially Heb. xii. 18—20.

— trumpet] Yobel, a joyful sound, jubilum; thence the sound of the trumpet, which was used to announce the jubilee (see Gesen., p. 340; and on Josh. vi. 4—6); perhaps connected with the same root as Jubal, Gen. iv. 21. The word here used is different from that in v. 16. 19.

— they shall come up to the mount] Not ascend it, but come forward towards it, and hearken to what is proclaimed from it: see v. 17.

15. come not at your wives] See 1 Cor. vii. 5. 1 Pet. iii. 7. The command is general, "ne tangatis mulierem," Vulg., and so Sept., Syr., Arabic.

16. trumpet] Shophar, from shaphar, to be bright: so called from its clear sound (Gesen., pp. 811. 846). Here and in other circumstances of the delivery of the Law, is a preparation for, and a rehearsal of, the great Day of Doom, "when the trumpet will sound, and the dead be raised" (1 Cor. xv. 52), and the Lord Himself will "descend from heaven with the voice of the Archangel, and the trump of God" (1 Thess. iv. 16), and summon all Nations to be judged, according to the Law which He has given them. S. Chrys., in Heb. xii. Hom. 32.

lest the LORD^a break forth upon them. ²³ And Moses said unto the LORD, ^q ² Sam. c. 7. 8. The people cannot come up to mount Sinai: for thou chargedst us, saying, 'Set bounds about the mount, and sanctify it. ²⁴ And the LORD said unto ^r ^{ver. 12.} ^{Josh. 3. 4.} him, Away, get thee down, and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aaron with thee: but let not the priests and the people break through to come up unto the LORD, lest he break forth upon them. ²⁵ So Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

XX. ¹ And God ^a spake all these words, saying,

a Deut. 5. 22.

^{24.} let not the priests and the people break through] Let them not press violently, ἡ βία ἐσθλα (Septuagint). The very thing which is here forbidden under the Law, is commanded under the Gospel, and with the same word βιάζομαι. The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence (βιάζεται, Matt. xi. 12); and every one presseth into it (βιάζεται, Luke xvi. 16); and the violent (βιασταί) take it by force, Matt. xi. 12: cp. Luke xiii. 24, concerning the strait gate; and Luke xviii. 1, 2, concerning the unjust judge. "Hæc vis Deo grata est" (Tertullian). St. Paul marks the contrast, "Ye are not come to the mount that might be touched" (or, rather, to a mount that is being groped for in the dark by the hand of man, as was the case with your forefathers, the literal Israel, who were blinded by the awful gloom of Mount Sinai), "and that burned with fire, and unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest;" and so terrible was the sight, that even Moses said, "I exceedingly fear and quake" (cp. Deut. ix. 19, Sept.). "But ye are come to Mount Sion, unto the city of the living God, and to JESUS, the Mediator of the New Covenant" (Heb. xii. 18—24). "Having an high Priest over the house of God, let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith" (Heb. x. 21, 22).

— the priests] What priests? The Levites had not yet been set apart (see below, xxviii. 1); but the idea was already familiar to the people: the word priest had already been used in this chapter (v. 6), and doubtless there were some persons who were set apart to offer the sacrifices already mentioned (iii. 18; v. 3. 8; viii. 27; x. 25). The Rabbis say that the firstborn were the Priests of each family (see xiii. 2), in whose place the Levites were afterwards taken by God (Num. viii. 8). And so Bp. Pearson (Art. ii. p. 95), who observes that Jesus being the first-begotten of God was by right a Priest.

CH. XX. 1. God spake all these words]

ON THE DECALOGUE, OR TEN COMMANDMENTS.

(1) The Decalogue, or "ten words" (Deut. iv. 13), contains the Moral Law, as distinguished from the Ceremonial.

(2) The delivery of the Decalogue was not the promulgation of a new code; but the republishing in clearer terms and with stronger sanction of what had been already obligatory from the beginning. The Decalogue did not make it sinful to commit murder, or adultery, or to steal; but declared to be sinful what had been sinful from the beginning: see Tertullian, c. Judæos, c. 2: Hooker, i. xii. 1; Bp. Andrewes, on the Decalogue (ch. xvii., and note below, on Rom. v. 13).

(3) "The law was added because of transgressions" (Gal. iii. 19), i. e. because men transgressed the natural law, God brought in the Law of Moses into the world, to be as a stand to the inundation of impiety. Bp. Taylor, Pref. to Life of Christ, p. xxxi; and not only to be a barrier to check, but to be like a graduated scale, to mark the height of the inundation: see below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, pp. 190—192.

(4) The Law of Moses was added because of transgressions, ill the seed should come (Gal. iii. 19), that is, it was preparatory for Christ. That the Law was not intended as a perfect declaration of God's will, but introductory to another revelation, is evident from the fact that God does not clearly set forth in it the great doctrine of future eternal rewards and punishments. That was reserved for the teaching of Him "Who has brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel" (2 Tim. i. 10); or rather, Who has shed new light upon what was before revealed but not with the same clearness. The system of rewards and punishments established in the Moral Law given on Mount Sinai, was itself a strong evidence of a Moral Governor, and was doubtless designed to suggest the inference that the tendencies therein evinced toward the establishment of a Moral Government even in this present life upon earth would be fully developed and perfectly consummated in a Future State: cp. Bp. Butler, Analogy, I., Chaps. 2, 3; and Fairbairn, Typology, i. 483.

On the preparatory character of the Law of Moses, and on its principles and scope generally, the reader may also refer to Dr. Barry, in Dr. Smith's B. D., art. "Law of Moses."

(5) Since the Decalogue or Moral Law of Moses was not a new Code, but a republication of the Law of Nature, Christ, Who is the Author of the Law of Nature, and Who, as the Everlasting Jehovah, was Himself the Giver of the Law from Mount Sinai, did not come into the world to destroy His own work, but, as He Himself says, to fulfil it (Matt. v. 17). The Gospel which He preached is the fulfilment of the Law, which He, by Whom all things were made, wrote originally on the heart of man, and afterwards spake from Mount Sinai, and wrote on the Two Tables of stone: cp. Tertullian, c. Judæos, c. 2, Primordialis lex data Adæ in Paradiso quasi matrix omnium preceptorum Dei; in hæc lege omnia præcepta condita, quæ postea pullulaverunt data per Moysen. The Law, planted in Paradise, branching forth on Sinai, bore fruit in Sion.

(6) Consequently, Christ Himself declares the universal and perpetual obligation of the Decalogue as explained and fulfilled in the Gospel. He rebuked the Pharisees for making the commandments of God of none effect by their traditions (Matt. xv. 3—6. Mark vii. 8—13). He said, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments" (Matt. xix. 17). And St. Paul declares, that "the Law is good, if a man use it lawfully," that is, not as against the Gospel, or apart from the Gospel, or as the means of justification, independently of faith in Christ (1 Tim. i. 8); and that "circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God" is the main thing (1 Cor. vii. 19); and that "the commandment is holy and just and good" (Rom. vii. 12); and St. James declares that any one who wilfully allows himself in the breach of any one of the Commandments, is guilty of disobedience to all (see on James ii. 10).

Therefore the Church of England has rightly inserted the Decalogue in her Baptismal Office, and in her Catechism, and reads it from her Altar, and declares in her articles that "no Christian man whatsoever is free from the obedience of the Commandments which are called Moral" (Art. VII.). And she reminds us in what sense they are to be understood, by setting a Prayer before the recital of the Decalogue from the Altar for the cleansing of the heart by the Inspiration of God's Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love Him; and at the end of each commandment she subjoins a prayer to Him, that He would incline our hearts to keep this law; and at the end of all, that He would write all these laws in our hearts.

Thus she teaches us to connect Sinai with Sion, and the writing of the Law on tables of stone by the finger of God at the first Jewish Pentecost, with the writing of the Law of Love on the heart by the Holy Spirit, Who came from Heaven at the first Christian Pentecost: see above, on xix. 11.

(7) "The Law is spiritual," says St. Paul (Rom. vii. 14); it is not to be taken merely in its literal sense. The meaning of the Decalogue, as explained by Christ, in His Sermon on the Mount and elsewhere, and by His own example (John xiii. 34); and by His holy Apostles, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost, whom Christ sent to "teach them all things," and to "guide them into all truth," is its true meaning, its only true meaning; and He declares to us, that "to love God with all the heart, soul, and mind" is the chief commandment; and that the next is, "to love our neighbour as ourselves" (Matt. xxii. 37); and that Love is the badge of Christians (John xiii. 35); and St. James teaches that to love our neighbour as ourself is the royal law (James ii. 8); and St. Paul teaches that "Love is the fulfilling of the law" (see Rom. xiii. 10); and that no spiritual gifts and graces are of any profit without Love (1 Cor. xiii. 3—13), which is the end of the commandment (1 Tim. i. 5); and St. John declares, that "God is Love; and he that loveth not, knoweth not God;" and "this commandment have we from Him, that he who loveth God, love his brother also" (1 John iv. 7—21).

b Lev. 26. 1, 13.
Deut. 5. 6.

Ps. 81. 10. Hos. 13. 4.

² I am the LORD thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of

(8) When, therefore, it is said in Scripture, that "Christ redeemed us from the curse of the Law" (Gal. iii. 13), it is not meant that Christ exempts us from the duty of obeying the Law. No: Christ redeemed us from the curse, which was denounced by the Law on all who did not keep every one of its commandments, and He has commanded, that "repentance and remission of sins should be preached to all in His Name" (Luke xxiv. 47). And by faith in Christ we are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the Law of Moses (Acts xiii. 38, 39; and 1 John ii. 12); and "if any man have sinned, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous; and He is the propitiation for our sins;" and, "if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, His blood cleanseth from all sin" (1 John ii. 1, 2; i. 7).

(9) But, so far from weakening our obligation to obey the Law, as explained in the Gospel, Christ has greatly strengthened its obligations, by giving Himself to die for our sins; and so we are constrained by tenderest ties of love to our adorable Redeemer, to abhor sin, which caused His bitter sufferings, and to be like Him here, in order that we may be with Him for ever hereafter; and because He has given us His example as our Pattern, and has sent to us His Holy Spirit, to enable us to walk as He walked: "Nihil amanti est difficile:" "Da, Deus, quod jubes, et jube quod vis" (S. Augustine de Dono Persever. c. 53).

It will not be expected in a work like the present that a full explanation should be given of the precepts of the Decalogue. This would require a treatise on practical theology. Happily such expositions abound in the theological literature of the Church of England. The reader may be referred to Bp. Andrewes, on the Ten Commandments, Lond. 1650, folio; Dr. Barrow, on the Decalogue, vi. 473; Dr. Hammond's Practical Catechism, 7th edit. 1662; Abp. Leighton on the Decalogue; Bp. Nicholson, on the Catechism, Part ii.; Hele's Manual of Devotion; and Mannals for Confirmation, such as the Catechesis of the Bp. of St. Andrew's: Lond. 1858: see also Fairbairn, Typology, ii. 90—114.

(10) The name Decalogue is derived from the Greek Version of Deut. x. 4, τοὺς δέκα λόγους, the ten words; and from the consequent use of the phrase δέκα λόγους by Jewish writers, such as Philo and Josephus; and from the terminology of the ancient Christian Church, which usually employed the word δέκαλογος as a feminine substantive (Suicer, Thes. in v., i. 830).

(11) The division of these Ten Words has been and is a matter of controversy.

Our division of them is that which has been already given by Josephus (Antiq. iii. 5. 5).

Many Rabbinical Writers regard the declaration in ver. 2 as constituting a separate commandment (Talmud, Targum Jonathan, Maimonides).

Christian writers (from the time of Origen, Hom. 8, in Exod.) are generally of opinion that the Decalogue begins with v. 3. Many early Christian expositors regard that verse (v. 3) as constituting the first commandment (Origen, Jerome, &c.); and so the Church of England, and the Presbyterians,—not the Church of Rome and Lutherans. The Roman Church and the Lutherans (following Augustine, who distributes the commandments concerning God into three, and the others, concerning man, into seven) consider vs. 2—6 as constituting the first commandment, and v. 7 as containing the second commandment. See Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 128; Suicer, Thesaur. i. 830. And in order to form the number ten, they divide v. 17 into two, viz. (1) "Thou shalt not covet the house;" (2) "Thou shalt not covet the wife;" &c.: and this is also the Masoretic division; but it does not seem a natural one.

On this question, see Augustine, Qu. 71; and cp. Keil, p. 453, and Fairbairn, Typology ii. 103—106, who claims a preference for the division into two fives. The Augustinian division has been defended by Sonntag, Kartz, Otto: the other division, by Züllig, Geffken, Keil, and others.

(12) There is also a doubt as to the arrangement of the commandments on the Two Tables. Most Christian writers suppose that the first table contained the commandments which relate to God; and the second, those which concern man, and that consequently the second table began with ver. 12, "Honour thy father and thy mother;" so Origen, Augustine.

Our Blessed Lord distributes the commandments into two parts, and sums them up in two,—Love to God, and love to our neighbour (Matt. xxii. 37—40. Luke x. 27).

Josephus (Ant. iii. 5. 5) and Philo (de Decal. § 12) place five commandments on either table, so that the second begins with ver. 13 (cp. Professor Plumtree, in Smith, B. D. ii. 1465); and as the commandments were written on both sides of the tables, they supposed that two and a half were contained on each side. cp. Kalisch, p. 342; Keil, p. 453. These speculations are rendered more uncertain by the fact that the original tables were broken (xxxii. 19); and we do not know whether the expressions here used apply equally to the second set, which were not hewn by God: see xxxiv. 1.

Our ignorance as to these details is instructive. We do not know how the Decalogue was written. God is silent on this point; but it is clearly known to us by Whom it was written, namely, by God Himself, and why it was written, and where it ought to be written, viz. on our hearts.

(13) There are two differences observable between the first five and the last five. In the last five there is a simple command, without any motive assigned for it, as in the first five; and in the first five the words "the LORD thy GOD" are introduced, which are not inserted in the last five.

This remarkable fact brings out clearly the important principle that the duty of honouring parents is intimately connected with the duty of honouring the LORD our GOD: cp. 1 Tim. v. 4, εὐσεβεῖν. Indeed, the fifth commandment, "Honour thy father and mother;" is, as it were, a connecting link, or hyphen, between the duty to God and the duty to Man, and shows the indissoluble union of both duties.

The Decalogue is like the coat of Christ, woven without seam (John xix. 23). The Ten Commandments are like the ten Curtains of the One Tabernacle, as coupled together in two sets of five: see on v. 12; and xxvi. 1—3. In the Book of Deuteronomy (v. 18—21), the connexion of the commandments concerning man is marked by the conjunction van, prefixed to each of them after v. 17.

(14) The Two Tables of the Covenant were to be laid up in the Ark in the Holy of Holies in the Tabernacle (Exod. xxv. 21. Deut. x. 2. 5. 1 Kings viii. 9). They were placed under the wings of the Cherubim, and were overshadowed by the Divine Presence, and thus their sanctity was avouched by God Himself, and they were guarded by His divine protection.

The Two Tables, and "the Judgments," contained in chapters xxi.—xxiii., formed "the Book of the Covenant," which Moses read to all the people, with solemn sacrifices, and which they pledged themselves to fulfil (xxiv. 4. 7).

These provisions for the promulgation and guardianship of "the Book of the Covenant" were designed to avouch its genuineness and divine authority.

(15) Besides this, when the Israelites were come into Canaan, the Law was written by Joshua on stones, set up upon Mount Ebal. See Deut. xxvii. 2—7. Josh. viii. 32. In the Samaritan Pentateuch (Walton, Polyglott i. p. 313), after the tenth commandment, in the present chapter (v. 17), there is inserted a precept, "to set up two large stones, and to plaster them with lime, and to write upon them all the words of this Law; and to place these stones on Mount Gerizim, and to build an altar there to the Lord thy God, over against Gilgal, near the oak of Moreh, toward Shechem,"—an interpolation imported—with a Samaritan bias toward Gerizim—from Deut. xi. 30; xxvii. 2—7. cp. Josh. viii. 30. 32; and Walton, Proleg. p. 79; Malan, Philosophy, &c., p. 146.

(16) It has been alleged by some, that there are important discrepancies between the commandments as they are recorded in this chapter of Exodus, and as they stand in Deuteronomy.

But this allegation is grounded on a misconception of the design of the Sacred Writer in these two several books.

The Book of Exodus contains an exact report of the words of God on Mount Sinai, as engraved on the tables of stone. The Book of Deuteronomy exhibits the general sense; and is, as it were, a commentary upon the text of Exodus, and a divine exposition of it; and accordingly it refers to Exodus for the precise words of the commandments as therein contained: see Deut. v. 12. 16. We see a parallel to this in the Christian Decalogue, in the Gospels. The Sermon on the Mount is set down fully by St. Matthew, and is repeated in a somewhat modified form by St. Luke: see note below, on Luke vi. 17.

(17) The Decalogue, as written in the Hebrew Bibles, has a double accentuation; the one with reference to the close of the commandments, the other with respect to the termination of the verses, which serve the purpose of marking the solemn tone with which they were to be rehearsed, especially in the public congregation (Ainsworth, p. 77; Kalisch, p. 312).

(18) We learn from the New Testament that the Law was Egypt, °out of the house of †bondage. ^{3d}Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

^{4c}Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth : ^{5f}Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them : for I the Lord thy God am ^ga jealous God, ^hvisiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me ; ⁶And ⁱshowing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

e ch. 13. 3.
 † Heb. servants.
 † Deut. 5. 7. & 6. 14.
 2 Kings 17. 35.
 Jer. 25. 6. & 35. 15.
 e Lev. 26. 1.
 Deut. 4. 16. & 5. 8. & 27. 15.
 Ps. 97. 7.
 f ch. 23. 24.
 Josh. 23. 7.
 2 Kings 17. 35.
 Isa. 44. 15, 19.
 g ch. 34. 14.
 Deut. 4. 24. & 6. 15.
 Josh. 24. 19.
 Nah. 1. 2.
 h ch. 34. 7. Lev. 20. 5. & 26. 39, 40. Num. 14. 18, 33. 1 Kings 21. 29. Job 5. 4. & 21. 19. Ps. 79. 8. & 109. 14.
 Isa. 14. 20, 21. & 65. 6, 7. Jer. 2. 9. & 32. 18. i ch. 34. 7. Deut. 7. 9. Ps. 89. 34. Rom. 11. 28.

delivered "by the disposition of angels;" see on Acts vii. 53; and Gal. iii. 19: cp. Heb. ii. 2. Not that we are to suppose that the Law was uttered by Angels, but by the voice of God Himself (cp. Keil, p. 451). But these passages explain the allusion to the presence of Angels on Mount Sinai in Deut. xxxiii. 2 and Ps. lxxviii. 17. Isa. lxiii. 9; and exhibit another characteristic resemblance between the awful manifestations revealed in this chapter (with clouds and thundering, lightning, smoke, and fire, and the sound of the trumpet exceeding loud), and the future glorious appearance of "the Great God, our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus ii. 13), attended by myriads of Angels, to judge the world: cp. Bp. Andrewes on the Decalogue, Introd. chap. xix.

The Love of God in Christ is manifest in the contrast between the terrors of the Divine Majesty on Mount Sinai, and the eight Beatitudes with which He, Who was God manifest in the flesh, "opened His mouth," and preached His Sermon on the Mount (Matt. v. 1—11). But so much the more awful will be the Visitation of the Great Day to those who obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Thess. i. 8), and who will then cry out to the hills in vain, "Fall on us, and hide us from the wrath of the LAMB" (Rev. vi. 16).

2. I am the LORD] JEHOVAH, the Everlasting, One, Unchangeable God (see above, on vi. 3; xii. 12). Only the first and second commandments contain the first personal pronoun I; in the third there is a transition to the third person.

As was before observed, the words "the Lord thy God" occur in every one of the first five commandments, and in none of the five last.

— of bondage] Literally, of servants; and so Deut. v. 6.

3. Thou shalt have no other gods before me] Literally, there shall not be (singular number) to thee gods other beside (Heb. al; Sept. πλὴν) Me; whether they be the elements, the powers of heaven, sun and stars (see Deut. iv. 19), or gods of the heathen, such as those of Egypt or Canaan (see Exod. xxiii. 13, 24. Deut. vii. 25). Compare our Lord's words to Satan at the Temptation (Matt. iv. 10).

On the use made of this text by Noetians and Sabellians, contravening the Divinity of Christ, see S. Hippolytus, c. Noetum, § 2, p. 44; ed. Lagarde; and Epiphanius, Hæres. 76.

This and the following verses were used by the Fathers against the Arians, who stood convicted of idolatry, if they did not confess Christ to be God: see S. Greg. Nyssen, de Fide ii. p. 470; and Theodoret, Qu. 37; S. Epiphanius, Hæres. 69, 76.

S. Augustine (de Consensu Evangelist. 12) observes that the God of the Hebrews, Who is our God, differs from all other deities, who were willing to be worshipped together in the Roman Pantheon. He is to be worshipped alone: "Thou shalt have none other gods but Me."

4. graven image] Heb. pesel; from pasal, to carve (Gesen., p. 684; cp. Judg. xvii. 3. 2 Kings xxi. 7); such as the golden calf, and the calves of Jeroboam: cp. v. 23.

— any likeness] Heb. temunah. Literally, an appearance (ἰδέα, εἶδος), resemblance, from the root min, in Arabic to pretend, simulate; whence it means similitude, kind, sort (Gesen., p. 470, and is rendered here by ὁμοίωμα in Sept. It is therefore of wider meaning than the preceding word, pesel. Cp. Deut. iv. 15, which states the ground of the command: "Take good heed unto yourselves, for ye saw no similitude (i. e. of Jehovah) on the day that the Lord spake to you in Horeb." This command forbids the making of any ideal likeness of Jehovah, or any object of worship: cp. Keil.

This fourth verse is not inserted, as a part of the Decalogue, in recent Catechisms of the Church of Rome. It is referred to, and expounded, in the Trent Catechism (Pars iii. cap. ii. qu. 16).

5. a jealous God] Rather, a zealous God,—El kannah; Θεὸς ζηλωτής (Sept.); "Deus Zelotes" (Fulg.). From the root kana, to be red, to burn (cp. ζέω, ζήλος, ferveo, fervidus) with indignation, or love, or other vehement affection. And this is said of God ἀνθρωποπαθῶς, in condescension to our understandings, in order to teach us that He will not bear any rival, but will punish all defection from Himself. Thus also He declares His love for us; in order that we may cleave to Him and Him alone. He therefore does not disdain to call Himself the Husband of the Church (Jer. ii. 2. Hos. ii. 19: see above on' xix. 8, whence idolatry is called fornication in Holy Scripture: Deut. xxi. 16. Judg. ii. 17. Jer. iii. 9). Christ adopts the same figure of Marriage, in order to declare His affection for us. See John iii. 29. Matt. ix. 15, and St. Paul's language (2 Cor. xi. 2), ζηλω ὑμᾶς Θεοῦ ζήλω, κ.τ.λ.: "I am zealous over you with a zeal of God;" and see the note there; and on Gal. iv. 17, 18; and Origen and Theodoret here, and Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 119.

— unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me] Rather, "to those that hate me;" and so Sept., and Deut. v. 9. That is, if the children also hate me, as their fathers did; and if they have not been warned by My judgments, to shun their fathers' sin. See note on Num. xxvi. 11; and cp. Deut. xxiv. 16. 2 Kings xiv. 5, 6; below, xxxii. 33. Jer. xxxi. 29, 30; xxxii. 18, 19, 30, 31. Ezek. xviii. 20—24.

Accordingly, the Chaldee Paraphrase, the Targum of Onkelos, rightly explains these words by inserting the provision, "when the children continue to sin, like the fathers." See Deut. xxiv. 16, "The children shall not be put to death for the fathers; every man shall be put to death for his own sin;" and Ezek. xviii. 20, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

On the objection of the Marcionites, who took offence at this text, see Tertullian, c. Marcion. ii. 15, where he says, "Si patrum delicta ex filiis Deus exigebat, duritia populi exigebat ut posteritatis suis prospicientes legi divinæ obedirent." Cp. Origen, Hom. 8; and particularly the answer of S. Augustine to the Manichæans, Qu. in Deut. 42, "permanente impietate et imitatione malorum parentum;" and c. Adimantum, c. 7; S. Cyril de Ador. vi. p. 174; Theodoret, Qu. in Exod. 40, who refers to Ezek. xviii. 2—4, 20, and says, "those that hate Me" means, "if the children imitate the evil examples of their parents;" cp. S. Greg., Moral. xv. 41.

This subject is well treated by Bp. Sanderson (in his sermon on 1 Kings xxi. 29, vol. iii. pp. 58—88), who observes (p. 71) that the words "third and fourth generation may have been added respectively to the ages of men, who often live to see their children of the third generation, and sometimes to the fourth, but seldom further;" and so their children's punishment is their punishment.

God punisheth the son for the father's sin, but with temporal punishments, not eternal; and with those, perhaps, so as to redound to the father's punishment in the son; perhaps because the son treadeth in the father's steps, perhaps because he possesseth that from his father to which God's curse adhereth; perhaps for other reasons best known to God Himself. But whatever the occasion be, or the ends, evermore for the son's own personal sins abundantly deserving them (Bp. Sanderson). And these temporal punishments are calls to repentance, and are means of grace, and may be regarded even as signs of God's favour, for "whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth;" and impunity in sin is the greatest punishment.

The question is also discussed by Dr. Waterland, Scripture Vindicated, pp. 89—94. See also the remarks of Hengstl., Auth. ii. 544—550, and Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 120.

6. of them that love me] Rather, to them that love Me; God shows mercy to the thousandth generation, to them that love Him: so Sept., Fulg., Onkelos, Syriac.

k ch. 23. 1.
 Lev. 19. 12.
 Deut. 5. 11.
 Ps. 15. 4.
 Matt. 5. 33.
 1 Mic. 6. 11.
 m ch. 31. 13, 14. Lev. 19. 3, 30. & 26. 2. Deut. 5. 12.

⁷^k Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD ¹ will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

⁸^m Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. ⁹ⁿ Six days shalt thou n ch. 23. 12. & 31. 15. & 31. 21. Lev. 23. 3. Ezek. 20. 12. Luke 13. 14.

7. Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain] The Hebrew word here used, nasa, means to take, up bear, carry, lift up (Gesen. 567). Thou shalt not take up the Name of the LORD, which is Great and Holy, and ought to be borne, carried, and lifted up on high as something awful and majestic, like a sacred standard or banner of God's hosts, as was intimated by Moses himself, calling his altar Jehovah-nissi (xvii. 15), which word (though spelt with samech, and not with sin) is from the same root as nasa (see Gesen., p. 553). Thou shalt not carry that awful Name for a vain thing, ἐνὶ ματαίᾳ (Sept.), "in vanum" (Vulg.), for falsehood, or for any irreverent use. The word NAME expresses the Divine Person as revealed in all His divine attributes: see vi. 3, and on Matt. vi. 9, "Hallowed be Thy NAME." This prohibition is illustrated by the words of Amos, v. 26, quoted by St. Stephen, Acts vii. 43, "ye took up the tabernacle" of your god; where the verb nasa is used by Amos.

On the sin of rash and vain oaths, see below, Matt. v. 34. 37. James v. 12, 13.

THE SABBATH.

8—11. Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy] Remember; by this word God intimates the solemn importance of the precept; the antiquity of it (Gen. ii. 2); the continual recurrence of the duty prescribed; and its permanent endurance. Remember to sanctify it, that is, to separate it from common days and common uses, and to dedicate it to God and His service.

The obligation to sanctify one day in seven was prior to the promulgation of the Decalogue. This is clear from xvi. 23—30, where we find "the rest of the holy sabbath" mentioned as a thing already known before the delivery of the Decalogue.

Besides, the Decalogue (as before observed, v. 1) was not a new Code, but a republication of the original Law given by God to Man at the beginning. It was a restoration of primitive Jurisprudence. And we cannot imagine, that when the first three Commandments in the Decalogue have a moral meaning and universal application, and the last six Commandments have also a moral meaning and universal application, yet the Fourth Commandment, which is inserted between them by the hand of God Himself, and prescribes the sanctification of one day in seven, has no such moral significance; and that virtually, and in substance, it has no such perpetual obligation. We may not suppose, that a Code, written and graven with the finger of God, was so incoherently framed. We may not take the Two Tables into our hands, and erase from the first of those Tables one Commandment, and leave only nine. If so, what does the Church mean, by delivering to her children the whole of the Decalogue? What does she mean by reading the Fourth Commandment every Sunday from her altars, and by putting into the mouths of her people a prayer, entreating pardon for violations of the Fourth Commandment, as well as of the other nine, and praying for grace to keep it—"Lord, have mercy upon us, and incline our hearts to keep this law?"

There is, therefore, something of universal application and perpetual obligation in the Fourth Commandment.

It is indeed true, that while we can recognize the moral fitness of setting apart some portion of time for sacred uses, we do not see the moral fitness of setting apart precisely a seventh part. Therefore the sanctification of one day in seven is to us a matter of positive institution; and thus there is a difference in this particular respect between the Fourth Commandment and the other Nine, which are based on known principles of immutable morality.

But, because we do not see the moral fitness of hallowing one day in seven, it does not follow that there is not some moral fitness in so doing. On the contrary, it is probable that there is such a fitness. Almighty God does every thing in number and weight (Wisdom xi. 20). We do not as yet understand the secret harmonies of the Divine Arithmetic; but we should read Holy Scripture to little purpose, if we had not been brought to a conviction that there are such harmonies in numbers; and that we may one day be enabled to appreciate them; and particularly, from the remarkable circumstances in which the number seven is ever coming before our eyes in Holy Scriptures, as if it were invested with a sacred dignity, and endued with a holy significance, we have reason to believe that there is far more than we are yet aware of—in the setting apart one-seventh of the World's time to holy uses, and in consecrating it to God.

Surely it was not for nothing that the seventh day was the Sabbath; the seventh year the sabbatical year; and after seven times seven, the year of Jubilee. It was not for nothing that the seventh new Moon was the day of Trumpets; the seventh month was occupied with festivals; and that the Passover lasted seven days; and seven weeks lie between Passover and Pentecost; and the Feast of Tabernacles lasted seven days; and that Circumcision was to be performed after seven days; and say nothing of the perpetual recurrence of the number seven in the New Testament, especially in the Apocalypse (see below, on Rev. xii. 1, p. 221: cp. Bähr, Symbolik i. 187—199; ii. 537. 562; and Kalisch, p. 448).

The Fourth Commandment is not as yet seen by us to rest on the same ground of natural morality as the other Nine. But perhaps on this very account the Fourth may be fitly said to be better adapted than any other of the Ten Commandments (of which we see the reason), to try our Faith and Obedience to God. We have good reason for obeying God in all that He commands. But in doing things of which we ourselves see the reason, we may be only obeying ourselves, and not be obeying God. Therefore Almighty God tests our Faith by things of which we do not see the reason.

The question is, —

Does the Fourth Commandment come from God? And is it addressed to us?

No one doubts that it came from God: and that it concerns us, is clear from the fact that it dates from the Creation of the world, and is based upon it, that is, it is grounded upon what concerns all created beings.

For how is the Fourth Commandment introduced?

Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is."

God made the heaven and earth for us, as well as for the Jews. Creation concerns us as well as them, and much more. For, "by Christ were all things made. By Him all things were made," says St. John (i. 1—4). And, therefore, a religious duty, grounded on Creation, concerns us, not only as men generally, but specially as Christians: see above, on Gen. ii. 21—25.

And since God commanded the Jews, under most solemn sanctions, to hallow one day in seven; and since He punished their violations of this law with the severest chastisements, and promised the richest blessings to those among them who observed it; and since it is an elementary principle of Natural Reason that God is to be worshipped, and that by consequence a special day of periodic recurrence is to be set apart for His honour and service, it follows, by logical inference, that Christians, who are so much more favoured by God than were the Jews, and who in the work of Creation and Preservation of the Universe see the operation of Christ, and who, in addition to the blessings of Creation, ought to celebrate those of Redemption and Sanctification, are bound to set apart a no less portion of time than the Jews were obliged to do, for God's Glory and Worship, and for the concerns of Eternity.

The universality of the duty of this sanctification is further evident from the fact that Almighty God here not only grounds it on Creation, but extends its blessings to all, to foreign slaves, as well as to Hebrews, and even to the beasts of the field. See v. 10: cp. xxiii. 12. Deut. v. 14.

The fourth commandment is also grounded on the deliverance from Egypt (Deut. v. 15), and from its incessant toil and bondage, in which no Sabbaths could be kept,—a deliverance which was to be remembered with thankfulness and love on the weekly Sabbath; and this fact, so far from weakening its claim to universal and perpetual acceptance, does, on the contrary, show its universality and perpetuity,—as to its spiritual essence,—because that deliverance was a type of the universal deliverance wrought by Christ; and because all are bound to show their gratitude for the Evangelical substance, of which the Exodus was a shadow.

We may therefore affirm, with Richard Hooker (V. lxx.), "that the sanctification of one day in seven is a duty which God's immutable Law doth exact for ever: the Moral Law requires a seventh part throughout the age of the whole world to be so employed." Compare Bp. Sanderson, Case of the labour, and do all thy work: ¹⁰ But the °seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, ^p nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: ¹¹ For ^q in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

o Gen. 2. 2, 3. ch. 16. 26. & 31. 15.

p Neh. 13. 16, 17, 18, 19.

q Gen. 2. 2.

¹² Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

r ch. 23. 26.

Lev. 19. 3.

Deut. 5. 16.

Jer. 35. 7, 18, 19.

Matt. 15. 4. & 19. 19.

Mark 7. 10. & 10. 19.

Luke 18. 20.

Eph. 6. 2.

s Deut. 5. 17.

Matt. 5. 21.

Rom. 13. 9.

t Deut. 5. 18.

Matt. 5. 27.

u Lev. 19. 11.

Deut. 5. 19.

Matt. 19. 18.

Rom. 13. 9.

l Thess. 4. 6.

w ch. 23. 1.

Deut. 5. 20. & 19. 16.

Matt. 19. 18.

x Deut. 5. 21.

Mic. 2. 2.

Hab. 2. 9.

Luke 12. 15.

Acts 20. 33.

z Heb. 12. 18.

a Deut. 5. 25.

¹³ Thou shalt not kill.

¹⁴ Thou shalt not commit adultery.

¹⁵ Thou shalt not steal.

¹⁶ Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

¹⁷ Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, ^y thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

¹⁸ And ^z all the people ^a saw the thunders, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain ^b smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off. ¹⁹ And they said unto Moses, ^c Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but ^d let not God speak with us, lest we die.

Rom. 7. 7. & 13. 9. Eph. 5. 3, 5. Heb. 13. 5.

a Rev. 1. 10, 12.

b ch. 19. 18.

c Deut. 5. 27. & 18. 16.

y Job 31. 9.

Prov. 6. 29.

Jer. 5. 8.

Matt. 5. 28.

z Heb. 12. 18.

a Rev. 1. 10, 12.

b ch. 19. 18.

c Deut. 5. 27. & 18. 16.

y Job 31. 9.

Prov. 6. 29.

Jer. 5. 8.

Matt. 5. 28.

z Heb. 12. 18.

Sabbath, 1634; and Bp. Cosin, on the Immutable Obligation of the Lord's Day (iv. 452; v. 529). Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 125—151.

The seventh day, as a day of rest, had a prophetic and typical character in reference to the rest of Christ in the grave on that day; who has made the grave itself to be a blessed rest,—a holy Sabbath,—to all who die in the Lord, and rest from their labours (Rev. xiv. 13: see S. Aug. de Gen. ad Lit. iv. 11), who says, "The seventh-day Sabbath was a shadow of the future, and prefigured a spiritual rest, which God promised to His people who work for Him. The mystery of this rest was fulfilled in the burial of Christ, who rested in the grave on the seventh day, after He had finished His work, and had said on the Cross upon the sixth day, It is finished" (John xix. 30: see below, on Luke xxiii. 56. Col. ii. 16).

As to the alleged non-observance of the Sabbath by the Patriarchs, see on Gen. ii. 2, and Fairbairn, ii. p. 132.

As to the grounds on which the first day of the seven is now to be hallowed by us, see above, on Gen. ii. 2, 3. Exod. xii. 1, 2; and xiv. 1; below, notes on Matt. xxvii. 62; xxviii. 1. Acts xx. 7; and on Rev. i. 10.

10. thou shalt not do any work] See xvi. 26, as to the gathering of manna; (Num. xv. 32) as to the gathering of sticks; (Num. xxxv. 3) as to preparing food; (Exod. xxxiv. 21) as to agricultural work; (Neh. iii. 15; xiii. 15. Amos viii. 5) as to buying and selling; (Jer. xvii. 21) as to carrying of burdens. Corporal labour, especially since the fall, is weariness and vexation of spirit (see Gen. iii. 19); and cessation from it is requisite for the cherishing the spiritual life in God, and for the fruition of His presence in eternity. The Fourth Commandment, like the others, is expressed as a prohibition; but this prohibition, like that in the others, involves a precept to do what is contrary to what is forbidden. Thus the prohibition to do secular work on the Sabbath involves a command to do spiritual work. The Sabbath was to be a rest from the world, in order serve God. Cp. Heb. iv. 9, 10. Rev. xiv. 13.

On the right observance of God's day of religious rest, see Jerome in Esai. c. 56; and c. 58; and in Amos, c. 5; and Augustine de Spiritu et Littera, c. 15; and de Civ. Dei xi. 8, "Requies Dei significat requiem eorum, qui requiescunt in Deo, et quos facit Ille requiescere; qui, si ad Illum prius per fidem accesserint, in Illo habebunt requiem sempiternam." Cp. below, on Matt. xxviii. 1. Luke xxiii. 56.

On the history of the Sabbath, and of the Lord's Day, and the literature connected with them, see Winer, R. W. B. ii. 343—349; Bähr, Symbolik ii. 540. 566. 577; Jahn, Archaeol. § 345. 348; and the Treatise entitled "Sabbath" in the Mischna; Keil, Arch. § 77; *Dr. Hesse*y, Bampton Lecture, 1860; and Art. in Smith's Bibl. Dict. ii. 134; and Rev. F.

Garden, ibid. ii. 1073. Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 114—151, and Appendix A.

—gates] Of a city; not doors of a house.

12. Honour thy father and thy mother] See on Matt. xv. 4, —a reference which S. Irenæus uses (iv. 21 and 22) to refute those heretics, who alleged that Christ was at variance with the Giver of the Law, as the Marcionites did in early times, and the Manichæans after them. Christ ascribes this commandment to God Himself; and thus attests the divine authorship of the Decalogue: see also Eph. vi. 2.

This commandment, as was before observed, is a connecting link between what precedes and what follows, and partakes of the nature of both.

The Decalogue, as before observed, is like the ten curtains of the Tabernacle, looped together into one; five curtains coupled together, and other five curtains coupled together. So it is with the commandments: see on xxvi. 1—3.

13. Thou shalt not kill] See Matt. v. 21, 22, for the Christian explanation of this precept.

That this is a commandment against suicide has been shown by Josephus (iii. 8. 5), and by Christian Expositors, as Bp. Andrewes on the Decalogue, p. 404. "Ye are not your own," says the Apostle, "but are bought with a price" (1 Cor. vi. 20; vii. 23). And if a man may not mar God's image in another, neither may he do so in himself, but is guilty of a capital crime in doing so (see Gen. ix. 6); and, therefore, he who commits suicide, rushes into the presence of God, and to the judgment-seat of Christ, bearing with him the guilt of deadly sin.

14. Thou shalt not commit adultery] See Matt. v. 28; and xix. 9, for our Lord's explanation of this commandment.

15. Thou shalt not steal] See Eph. iv. 28.

16. thy neighbour] For the Christian exposition of the word see Luke x. 29, 36.

17. nor his ox, nor his ass] The horse is not mentioned, for it is not supposed that the Israelites will have horses in Canaan. But concerning the Egyptians we read (ix. 3), "Behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thy cattle, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen." Here is an evidence of accurate discrimination. It is remarkable that the Septuagint, which was made in Egypt, generalizes the word ass into ὑποζύριον and πᾶν κρῆνος.

18. And all the people saw the thunders] So will it be at the Great Day, when the Trumpet will awaken us from our graves, and all will be judged according to the rule of God's Law: cp. above, xix. 19; and S. Hilary, in Psalm 68.

19. Speak thou with us] The reverent awe and humility of e 1 Sam. 12. 20.

Isa. 41. 10, 13.
f Gen. 22. 1.
Deut. 13. 3.
g Deut. 4. 10. &
6. 2. & 10. 12. &
17. 13, 19. &
19. 20. & 28. 58.
Prov. 8. 7. &
16. 6.
Isa. 8. 13.
h ch. 19. 16.
Deut. 5. 5.
i Kings 8. 12.
j Deut. 4. 36.
Neh. 9. 13.
k ch. 32. 1, 2, 4.
l 1 Sam. 5. 4, 5.
m 2 Kings 17. 33.
Ezek. 20. 39. &
43. 8.
n Dan. 5. 4, 23.
o Zeph. 1. 5.
p 2 Cor. 6. 14.
q 15, 16.
r 1 Lev. 1. 2.
s m Deut. 12. 5, 11,
21. & 14. 23. &
16. 6, 11. & 26. 2. t 1 Kings 8. 43. &
9. 3.
u 2 Chron. 6. 6. &
7. 16. & 12. 13.
v Ezra 6. 12. Neh. 1. 9. Ps. 74. 7. Jer. 7. 10, 12. n Gen. 12. 2. Deut. 7. 13. o Deut. 27. 5. Josh. 8. 31. † Heb. build them with hewing.

²⁰ And Moses said unto the people, ^e Fear not: ^f for God is come to prove you, and ^g that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

²¹ And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto ^h the thick darkness where God was.

²² And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have talked with you ⁱ from heaven. ²³ Ye shall not make ^k with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold. ²⁴ An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, ^l thy sheep, and thine oxen: in all ^m places where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will ⁿ bless thee. ²⁵ And ^o if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not [†] build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. ²⁶ Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

XXI. ¹ Now these are the judgments which thou shalt ^a set before them.

the request was approved by God (Deut. v. 27, 28). Thus also they confessed

“———— that to God is no access Without Mediator, Whose high office now
Moses in figure bears” (i. e. in a figure of Christ).
Milton, Paradise Lost, xii. 236.

See note below, on Gal. iii. 19.

God Himself accepted this prayer as a desire for the Coming of Christ, in Whom alone all the Mediations of Moses were pleasing to God: see Deut. xviii. 16.

^{20. to prove you}] To try your obedience, and also to show that man by his own power is not able to please God. Man's need of a Redeemer was also thus shown. On the evidence which the Law gave of man's sinfulness, see Gal. iii. 19. Rom. iii. 20; vii. 9, 10, 13; viii. 3.

^{24. An altar of earth}] Of simple native elements, such as they came out of God's hand, and not devised by man according to any invention or art of his own. A protest against human imaginations, and unauthorized inventions, in the public worship of God.

When God would have an altar made with human hands, He Himself gave directions for its form (see xxvii. 1).

Besides, such an altar as here described was best adapted for use in their migrations, so that there might be no excuse for omitting God's worship. Wherever they went they might find “holy ground” (see Preliminary Note on Acts vii.). Here was a prophetic protest against the exclusive notions of the Jews, limiting God's presence and favour to their own land, city, and temple; and an anticipation of the time when God would be worshipped every where. For another probable reason, see on v. 25, concerning the unhewn stone.

— thy burnt offerings] See on xviii. 12, and Lev. i. 1.

— thy peace offerings] Shelamim, σωτηρία (Sept.). Properly offerings made for mercies received, for health and peace restored. The word is from shalam, to be whole, safe and sound; and is connected with shalom, peace; and may be rendered thank-offerings: cp. Gesen. 830, and below on Lev. iii. 1.

— in all places where I record my name] Literally, in all places where I shall cause My Name to be remembered: cp. 1 Chron. xvi. 4. Do not therefore imagine that My worship is to be limited to one place; it is to extend to all. Those devotions are not, as some have imagined (e.g. De Wette, Ewald, Knobel), inconsistent with the instructions afterwards given for the altar in the Tabernacle, to which all offerings were to be brought (Lev. xvii. 8. Deut. xii. 5); but they are prospective preparations for the time when, in compliance with God's order, or in consequence of His revelation, altars would be built to Him in various places, as at Ebal (Josh. viii. 30), or Ophrah (Judg. vi. 25: see Keil, p. 468).

In all places where I shall cause My Name to be had in remembrance. There is something very affecting in this promise, when taken in connexion with the words of our dying Saviour, instituting the Holy Eucharist, whereby He is ever with us in all places until He comes again, “Do this in remembrance of Me” (Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 24—26).

In all places where I shall make My Name to be remembered I will come and bless thee. This promise has also its fulfilment in Him Who said, “Where two or three are gathered together in My Name, there am I in the midst of them:” see Matt. xviii. 20. And since the divine commission under the Gospel is, “Go and teach all nations” (Matt. xxviii. 18), and the Church of Christ, in which the Sacraments are administered, is to be universal, therefore we have here an anticipation of the time when “from the rising of the sun even unto the going down thereof, God's Name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto His Name, and a pure offering” (Mal. i. 11).

^{25. not build it of hewn stone}] Probably for the same reason as that suggested at v. 24 (as Aben Ezra says); an altar of this kind,—like an altar of earth,—was not likely to be desecrated by being used by idolaters for their worship; and because it could easily be dilapidated, and would not be left to be abused for idolatrous worship. Besides, if they had formed the habit of using altars of hewn stones, and had not been prohibited from using them, they might easily, when they came to Canaan, have adopted altars which had been polluted by the Canaanites to their idolatrous worship (Theodoret, Qu. 44).

Probably there was also something figurative in both these precepts. The Altar on which all our sacrifices are to be laid, in order to be accepted by God, is Christ. Our Altar is of Earth, for by His Incarnation He took our Nature. He also is the stone cut out without hands (Dan. ii. 34. 45). He was begotten of God; not by human power, but by the eternal generation of the Father was He begotten as to His Divine Nature; and by the operation of the Holy Spirit was He conceived as Man in the Virgin's womb. Further, we are thus reminded that in holy things we may not introduce human inventions, but must conform ourselves to God's commandments. We may not indulge in will-worship (Col. ii. 23), which is a sign of “a fleshly mind,” and of being “puffed up,” and is self-idolatry. How much unlicensed hewing of stones for God's altar is there in the adoration of saints and angels, and of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and in the mutilation of the holy Eucharist by the denial of the Cup to the Laity!

^{26. thy nakedness}] Not by any steps of our own making, but by Christ alone, can we venture to go up to God's altar and worship; and it is He and He alone Who can hide that shame and nakedness to which we have been reduced by the fall of the First Adam: see Gen. iii. 7. 10, 11; and Christ's own words, Rev. iii. 18.

CH. XXI.—LAWS CONCERNING SERVANTS AND SLAVES.

It may seem surprising that after the awful manifestation of the divine Majesty in the delivery of the Decalogue on Mount Sinai, the Sacred Writer should proceed to speak of ordinary details of household life, particularly concerning servants and slaves. But the infinity of the Godhead is conspicuous, and the divine love to man is manifest, in such condescensions as these, from the highest altitude of divine glory and power, to the lowest level of human wants and weaknesses. “Not a sparrow falls to the ground without your Father,” said Christ

^{2b} If thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. ³ If he came in † by himself, he shall go out by himself: if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him. ⁴ If his master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or

b Lev. 25. 39,
40, 41.
Deut. 15. 12.
Jer. 34. 14.
† Heb. with his body.

to His disciples, and "all the hairs of your head are numbered" (Matt. x. 29). He clothes the grass of the field, and provides for the ravens (Matt. vi. 30. Luke xii. 24). So it was with Christ Himself. In His Transfiguration He manifested His glory to three Galilean fishermen. On the day of His glorious Resurrection, He did not show Himself to the great and noble of this world, but to Mary Magdalene, to the two disciples going to a village called Emmaus; and cheered the sorrowful disciples in the upper-room at Jerusalem.

By this condescension, in the following chapters, to minute details of domestic life, after the glorious manifestation of Himself on Mount Sinai, amid thunder and lightning and thick cloud, God warns us that nothing is too small to escape the Omniscience of Him Who will judge the world at the great Day. Thus also He guards us against pride, and teaches us to despise no man (James ii. 6), and not to mind high things, but condescend to men of low estate (Rom. xii. 16): ep. Irenæus, iv. 31.

There is a parallel to this in the Apostolical Epistles of the New Testament, where, after dilating on supernatural doctrines of Faith, the Holy Spirit proceeds to apply those doctrines to the household duties of daily life: see below, Introd. to Ephes. pp. 275, 276. Heb. xiii. 4.

These Laws concerning civil and social matters stand on a different footing from the Decalogue, or Moral Law, which was spoken by God Himself and written by the finger of God; and which, as explained by the Gospel, is of perpetual and universal obligation (see the Preliminary Note to Chap. xx., and the expositors of the Seventh Article of the Church of England).

This is the more requisite to be observed, because some writers have urged objections against several of the precepts contained in this chapter (see vs. 14, 21), as if they were unworthy of God, and could not have proceeded from Him.

Such critics look at these precepts from a wrong point of view. All these precepts came from a God of infinite perfection, and they were perfectly adapted to serve the purpose for which they were designed. But they were addressed to persons in an imperfect state, and are such as they were able to bear, and were designed to prepare them gradually for a more perfect state, and to lead them on to it. No one builds a house by means of a house, but by means of a scaffold. A scaffold is adapted to the purpose for which it is intended; but when the house is built, the scaffold is taken away. For such reasons as these it is said in Holy Scripture that God gave to Israel "right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments, by the hand of Moses his servant" (Neh. ix. 13, 14).

The Israelites, at the delivery of the Law on Mount Sinai, were morally and spiritually in a very imperfect condition. They had been bowed down under the hard yoke of Egyptian bondage for many generations, and could only be elevated by degrees to a higher condition. God gave them laws as they "were able to hear it" (ep. Mark iv. 33. John xvi. 12).

The Jews indeed assert that these precepts were designed to be of perpetual obligation, and they cannot refute the objections just specified. Some Christians, also, who Judaize, affirm that these precepts give a divine sanction to slavery. But the true Christian will affirm, that these precepts of domestic and social life were not designed to be permanent, and were intended to bear witness, even by their imperfection, to the need that mankind had of another dispensation—that is to say, the Gospel of Christ—which would harmonize all classes of society; in a word, to prepare the way for the Coming of Him who was pre-announced to Abraham as the promised Seed, in Whom all nations would be blessed, and Who by His Incarnation has united all men as brethren in Himself, and in Whom there is "neither Jew nor Greek, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, but Christ is all in all" (Col. iii. 11: see below, Introduction to the Epistle to Philennon).

1. these are the judgments] Mishpatim, judicial laws for punishment of transgressors in matters of social duty, and distinguished from statutes or decrees (Exod. xii. 24. 43; xxvii. 21; xxix. 9. Lev. iii. 17).

These Laws concern,—

(1) The right of persons (xxi. 1—32).

(2) The right of property (xxi. 33; xxii. 15).

(3) General moral laws; against unchastity, witchcraft, illicit marriages and conjunctions; laws for the protection and relief of the poor, strangers, widows, and orphans; humanity to animals; religious laws concerning the Sabbath and the three great festivals (xxii. 15; xxiii. 20).

On these Laws the reader may refer to Hooker, III. xi. 5; Bp. Warburton's Divine Legation; Witsius' Aegyptiaca; Dr. Waterland's Charge, 1731, vol. viii. p. 6; Michaelis, Mosaisch. Recht, Frankfurt, 1770; and the works of Maimonides on the Mosaic Legislation; Hengstenberg on the Pentateuch, tom. ii.; Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 416; and the works of Lowman, Lewis, and Jahn on the Hebrew Republic and Legislation; Rev. Alfred Barry in Smith's Bib. D., art. "Law of Moses;" Keil, Archæologie, § 148—155. Spencer, de Legibus Hebræorum, lib. iv. Cantabr. 1727, is to be read with caution, as Waterland, Graves, and others have observed.

Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law as read in the Synagogue, and is continued to xxiv. 18, and it is called Mishpatim or Judgments, from its contents.

The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is Jer. xxxiii. 25, 26; xxxiv. 8—22, which announces God's indignation against King Zedekiah and his nobles for non-observance of this law concerning the emancipation of servants at the end of seven years; and the King and his nobles are therefore threatened by God with war, famine, pestilence, and captivity.

Here is one of the many proofs of the historic truth of the delivery of the Laws and of their enactments, as here set down. We find that they were made to exercise a powerful influence on the fortunes of the Kingdom of Judah nearly a thousand years after their delivery.

2. If thou buy an Hebrew servant] A son of Israel (Onkelos). No one might buy a Hebrew except he sold himself (Deut. xv. 12. Lev. xxv. 39); or if he was sold by the Civil Magistrate for stealing property which he was not able to restore (Exod. xxii. 3).

On the condition of the Hebrew servant, the reader may refer to the Rev. W. L. Bean in Smith's Bib. Diet., art. "Slavery," ii. 1331; and to the works specified above (p. 1).

— six years he shall serve] Not more than six: ep. Deut. xv. 12. In Lev. xxv. 40 it is added, that he is to become free in the year of jubilee; that is, he is to be free before the end of six years, if the year of jubilee fall in that period. From this and other benevolent provisions of the Levitical Law, Tertullian takes occasion to refute the objections of Marcion to the Old Testament, as if it were from a different Author than the God who speaks in the Gospel: see Tertullian c. Marcion. ii. 17, 18.

This emancipation in the seventh year, and also in the year of jubilee, seems to have had a figurative reference to the blessings which were to be brought into the world by Him Who came "to preach the Gospel to the poor, to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord," the year of Evangelical Jubilee (Luke iv. 18, 19. Isa. lxi. 1).

— for nothing] Gratuitously; and not merely so, but he was to be furnished liberally by his master (Deut. xv. 14).

4. If his master have given him a wife] A heathen bond-slave; for only such with their children might be so left (Lev. xxv. 41—44); and not a Hebrew woman; see vs. 7—11; and see Deut. xv. 12—17, which applies to a Hebrew woman, as well as a Hebrew man; and shows that no Hebrew man or woman could be brought against his or her will into perpetual servitude. In fact, there was no such thing as slavery among Hebrews; and as there is no such thing as national distinctions in Christ, for "by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free" (1 Cor. xii. 13; ep. Col. iii. 11. Gal. iii. 28), and every man is to mankind universally, what every Hebrew man was to the Hebrew nation, therefore Slavery is condemned by the fundamental principles of the Gospel: see below, p. 16.

The Hebrew Rabbis suppose that this Law, concerning the servant receiving a wife, refers only to those who have been condemned by the magistrate to service for theft; and that he who sold himself was forbidden to receive a heathen wife; but that if such a Hebrew servant should have a wife given by his master, his wife and children would go out free with him (Maimonides, Tract. de Servis, chap. iii. 3—5). In considering this enactment, we must bear in mind that it was the design of the divine Legislator to deter Israelites from daughters ; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself. ^{5c} And if the servant † shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children ; I will not go out free : ⁶ Then his master shall bring him unto the ^d judges ; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door post ; and his master shall ^e bore his ear through with an aul ; and he shall serve him for ever.

⁷ And if a man ^f sell his daughter to be a maidservant, she shall not go out ^g as the menservants do. ⁸ If she † please not her master, who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed : to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her. ⁹ And if he have betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters. ¹⁰ If he take him another wife ; her food, her raiment, ^h and her duty of marriage, shall he not diminish. ¹¹ And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out free without money.

¹² He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

¹³ And ^k if a man lie not in wait, but God ^l deliver him into his hand ; then

^m I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee. ¹⁴ But if a man come

c Deut. 15. 16, 17.
† Heb. saying shall say.

d ch. 12. 12. & 22. 8, 28.
e Ps. 40. 6.

f Neh. 5. 5.

g ver. 2. 3.
† Heb. be evil in the eyes of, &c.

h 1 Cor. 7. 5.

i Gen. 9. 6.
Lev. 24. 17.
Num. 35. 30, 31.
Matt. 26. 52.

k Num. 35. 22.
Deut. 19. 4, 5.

l 1 Sam. 24. 4, 10, 18. m Num. 35. 11. Deut. 19. 3. Josh. 20. 2.

forming marriages with the heathen. The Hebrew servant might marry a Hebrew woman, and then his wife would go out with him, even if she were a servant ; she could not continue such against her will beyond the term of seven years ; or the Hebrew servant might wait till the end of his term of service before he contracted a marriage.

The connexion with a heathen bondslave entailed upon him great disabilities according to this law (which would be well known to him) ; and therefore this law would have the effect of preventing Hebrew servants from marrying heathen wives.

— he shall go out by himself] Without his wife and children. This law embodies an important spiritual truth. The wife here mentioned was a heathen, remaining such ; and as the Hebrew interpreter says, "An Israelite married to a Canaanitess can only beget Canaanites" (Maimonides de Servis ix. 1). Children born of bondwomen are bondmen. This is our own condition by nature, apart from Christ and His grace. Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean ? (Job xiv. 4.) And this Law, even by its rigour, showed the imperfection of mankind under the Levitical dispensation, and evinced the temporary and partial character of that dispensation, and prepared the way for the Coming of Him, Who by His Incarnation made all men one in Himself, and by His Gospel proclaims liberty to all (Luke iv. 18), and Who has delivered us from Sin and Satan into the glorious liberty of the children of God (Rom. viii. 21).

^{6. judges}] Heb. Elohim. Cp. Ps. lxxxii. 1. 6. John x. 34, 35. This was to be done by a public judicial act, in order to guard the rights of servants, and to prevent their masters from pretending that their servants had engaged themselves to perpetual service (Michaelis).

— bore his ear] To the door-post, to show his obedience and attachment to his master and his house (Theodoret). Some have supposed that there is a reference to this practice in Ps. xl. 6. See on Heb. x. 5 ; and Bp. Pearson, Art. ii. p. 122.

— for ever] That is, as long as in the nature of the case he could be, namely to the Jubilee ; for at the year of Jubilee all relations of person and property among Hebrews (and the case supposed is that of a Hebrew servant) assumed their original condition (Lev. xxv. 13. 28. 40, 41. Maimonides, Ainsworth, Kalisch). Or, it may rather mean, that the faithful servant is never to be cast off, but is to be maintained by his master, in his old age, till his death.

By these enactments God designed to prevent men from falling into bondage, or from bringing others into it. The mark in the ear was to be considered as a servile stigma (Theodoret). God's design was to wean the Israelites by degrees from that servile temper into which they had sunk in the house of bondage in Egypt. Thus also He prepared them by degrees for the Gospel, which teaches that men cannot rightly enslave themselves or others : "For we are not our own, but are bought with a price." "Stand fast therefore in the liberty with which Christ hath made us free ; and do not become (μη γίνεσθε) slaves of men" (Gal. v. 1. 1 Cor. vii. 23).

^{7. if a man sell his daughter to be a maidservant}] That is, as a wife of inferior rank (see v. 8) ; not simply a servant, for a Hebrew womanservant was free after six years' service. See Deut. xv. 12 ; and on v. 4.

In the provisions of this Law are evidences of the imperfect condition of society with which the Legislator had to deal. These enactments were mitigations of inveterate evils, which could not be eradicated at once, and were designed only to be provisional and preparatory to a more perfect dispensation, which has now been vouchsafed to mankind by Christ, Who declared that Divorce and Polygamy are contrary to the Will of God as revealed at the beginning (Matt. xix. 8), and were only tolerated by Him for a time, on account of the hardness of men's hearts, and to prevent greater evils, but have now been abolished by Him, Who came to restore all things, and to give to mankind new sanctions and new motives, as well as new powers of obedience to God, Whose service is perfect freedom.

^{8. who hath betrothed her to himself}] There is a variety in the reading here in the original between the text and margin, the former having to, not, the other to, to himself (the difference being between aleph and vau after the lamed). The reading in the margin is followed by Onkelos ; that of the text by Syriac and Arabic. The readings of the Sept. fluctuate between the two. The reading of the margin, which is that adopted by our Translators, seems to be the best : cp. below, Lev. xxv. 30.

^{10. If he take him another wife}] If the father take to the son another wife. On this sense of take, see Judg. xiv. 2. Keil, p. 470. It has been questioned whether this text implies a toleration of polygamy. The determination of this question depends on the meaning of the word onah, rendered in our version "duty of marriage;" and so Gesenius, p. 613. A different opinion has been maintained by others, who render it simply "domicile;" so Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 125 : but the other seems to be the correct interpretation, and has the authority of Onkelos, Syriac, Sept., and most of the Hebrew expositors, not Fulg. There is, therefore, a toleration, not an approval of polygamy ; and here is another evidence that this Code was not designed to be perpetual, but was preparatory for a better dispensation.

^{12. smiteth a man}] Wilfully. Cp. Gen. ix. 6.

^{13. but God deliver him into his hand}] Not as if God did not deliver him into his hand if he slew him wilfully, but because in the former case there was no sin, which is an act of the will. God delivered (tradidit) Jesus for us all (Rom. viii. 32) ; Jesus delivered Himself (se ipsum tradidit) ; but Judas, who delivered up Christ (qui Christum tradidit), was not therefore excused (S. Augustine, Qu. 79). From this text it may also be concluded that nothing happens by chance or accident (Bp. Andrewes on Pestilence, v. p. 225).

— I will appoint thee a place] In the cities of refuge (Num. xxxv. 6). The altar seems to have been the asylum till that was done : see v. 14.

"presumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; ° thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die. ¹⁵ And he that smiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

¹⁶ And ^p he that stealeth a man, and ^q selleth him, or if he be ^r found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

¹⁷ And ^s he that || curseth his father, or his mother, shall surely be put to death.

¹⁸ And if men strive together, and one smite || another with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed: ¹⁹ If he rise again, and walk abroad 'upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit: only he shall pay for † the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

²⁰ And if a man smite his servant, or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall be surely † punished. ²¹ Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for ^u he is his money.

²² If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from n Num. 15. 30. & 35. 20.

Deut. 19. 11, 12.
Heb. 10. 26.
o 1 Kings 2. 28—34.
2 Kings 11. 15.
p Deut. 24. 7.
q Gen. 37. 28.
r ch. 22. 4.

s Lev. 20. 9.
Prov. 20. 20.
Matt. 15. 4.
Mark 7. 10.
|| Or, revileth.
|| Or, his neighbour.

t 2 Sam. 3. 29.

† Heb. has ceasing.

† Heb. avenged,
Gen. 4. 15, 24.
Rom. 13. 4.
u Lev. 25. 45, 46.

16. he that stealeth a man] Of his brethren (Deut. xxiv. 7). But this has been enlarged by the Gospel, which has taken away all distinction between Jew and Gentile (Col. ii. 11), and here therefore is a condemnation of the Slave-Trade. Cp. below, on 1 Cor. vii. 21. 1 Tim. i. 10. Rev. xviii. 13; and Introduction to Philemon; and above, v. 4.

17. he that curseth his father—shall surely be put to death] Not by the parents themselves, but after judicial process (Deut. xxi. 18—21).

It is remarkable that our Blessed Lord has distinctly affirmed the divine authority of these "Judgments," as written by Moses in this chapter, by quoting this precept with two preambles, "God commanded" (Matt. xv. 4), and "Moses said" (Mark vii. 10). In both cases the quotation is from the Sept. Version, in the Alexandrine edition.

18. fist] So Sept. and Vulg. The Syriac and Arabic render it by stick or sharp instrument. That in our Version seems to be the correct rendering (Gesen., p. 11).

19. If he rise again, and walk abroad upon his staff] Without loss of limb. If a limb has been injured, then the just talionis takes place (v. 24, 25. Lev. xxiv. 19, 20).

— he shall pay for the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed] And if he had caused a blemish he was to pay damages for it (Lev. xxiv. 19, 20); and it is inferred by the Hebrew expositors (from Deut. xxii. 29; xxv. 11, 12) that he must pay also for the pain and shame endured by the sufferer: cp. Maimon. on Injuries, chap. i. and ii.

20. if a man smite his servant] That is, a heathen bondslave, as may be inferred from the exposition in v. 21, "he is his money," which was not applicable to a Hebrew servant, who was only a hired servant, and was entitled to his freedom after six years' service, and was treated with mildness: see above, Deut. xv. 12. Lev. xxv. 39—46.

— a rod] Heb. the rod; the instrument permitted for such a purpose; not a murderous instrument, which was forbidden by the law (Benisch).

— he shall be surely punished] Or, he (the slave) shall be surely avenged, that is, by the civil magistrate, who is thence called an avenger by St. Paul, Rom. xiii. 4 (Ainsworth). The Hebrew expositors affirm that the master was to be punished by death: see Hottinger, Leg. Heb. p. 60. The verb here used is nakam, the same as is used in Gen. iv. 15, 24, which affords the best illustration of the passage: cp. Num. xxxi. 2. Deut. xxxii. 43. Josh. x. 13 (cp. Gesen., p. 566). It corresponds to the Greek ἐδικεῖν (see Luke xviii. 3. Rev. vi. 10; xix. 2), the word here used by the Sept. If he deprived him of one of his limbs, he must let him go free (v. 26).

21. if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for he is his money] Or rather, if he continue a day or two, and afterwards die, then he (the slave) shall not be avenged (by the magistrate, inflicting death on his master), for he is his (master's) money.

It has been erroneously imagined by some (e.g. Bp. Colenso), that the master who maltreated his servant, was exempt from punishment; and on the ground of this erroneous supposition, the Legislator has been taxed by them with cruelty. What the text means is, that the master was not to be punished in the way mentioned in the foregoing verse, that is, by death, which would have been inflicted on the master, if the slave had died under his hand; see v. 12. Lev. xxiv. 21, 22. And the reason of this is, that the slave was smitten with the rod (the authorized instrument of chastisement), and that he did not die under the chastisement, but survived it; and therefore the death was not wilful, but accidental; and because he is his master's money, and it is to be presumed that the master did not wish to destroy his own property (or money); and if, after surviving certain days, the slave dies, then the master is punished by the loss of his slave, who is his money, and need not be punished by death, as he would have been, if the slave had died "under his hand." Cp. Benisch on Colenso, p. 23.

That the master was to be punished for any serious injury to his slave,—even a heathen bondslave (much more to a Hebrew servant),—is evident from v. 26, 27, where it is provided that the bondslave, for such injury, was to go out free; that is, the master was to be punished by the loss of the value of his bondservant, viz., thirty shekels (v. 32).

It has been already observed (in the Preliminary Note to this Chapter) that the enactments of this Code were designed for a people who had just been freed from a long and degrading bondage, and who were morally and spiritually in an imperfect state; and therefore, though these enactments came from an all-perfect Legislator, and were perfectly adapted to the condition of the people for whom they were designed, yet they were not perfect in themselves; and their very imperfection,—such as the toleration of slavery and polygamy,—served an important purpose, that of witnessing to the need of a better dispensation, and of preparing the way for the Gospel, which is the perfecting of the Law.

But let those critics, who make the human imperfections of a People just emerging from bondage and barbarism, to be a ground for imputations of imperfection to the Divine Legislator Himself, be desired to consider, whether in any heathen country of the world, even in the most civilized Nations of Antiquity, such as Greece and Rome in their best days, any Code can be found, which dealt so mercifully with the Slave as that of the present chapter. Let them compare the condition of the bondslave among the Israelites, with his position at Sparta, where the Helots were made the objects of savage cruelty and of profligate buffoonery; or at Rome, where he was exposed to death in the gladiatorial conflicts of the arena. Can any single instance be adduced, where the Israelitish bondslaves, exasperated with a desperate sense of wrong, banded together in insurrection against their masters in a servile war, as they did in Italy and Greece? Might not some modern Christian Nations derive much instruction from the Mosaic Legislation concerning slaves? Compare Jahn, Archæol. § 189; and Winer, R. W. B. ii. pp. 475—478; and the remarks of Kalisch on this chapter, which exhibit the points of contrast between the condition of Slaves in the Hebrew Commonwealth with their position in other states: see also Graves on the Pentateuch, Part ii. Lect. iii. iv.

22. and hurt a woman with child] Who intervenes to part them asunder, her, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall ^x pay as the judges determine. ²³ And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life, ²⁴ Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, ²⁵ Burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

²⁶ And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his maid, that it perish; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake. ²⁷ And if he smite out his manservant's tooth, or his maidservant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

²⁸ If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then ^z the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit. ²⁹ But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death. ³⁰ If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give for ^a the ransom of his life whatsoever is laid upon him. ³¹ Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him. ³² If the ox shall push a manservant or a maidservant; he shall give unto their master ^b thirty shekels of silver, and the ^c ox shall be stoned.

³³ And if a man shall open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein; ³⁴ The owner of the pit shall make it

x ver. 30.
Deut. 22. 18, 19.
y Lev. 24. 20.
Deut. 19. 21.
Matt. 5. 33.

z Gen. 9. 5.

a ver. 22.
Num. 35. 31.

b See Zech. 11.
12, 13.
Matt. 26. 15.
Phil. 2. 7.
c ver. 28.

— so that her fruit depart] Rather, if her children come forth from her (ep. Gen. xxv. 25); that is, if she prematurely gives birth to a child: see Onkelos, Arabic, Syriac, Keil. These laws not only had a literal meaning for the Israel of old, but have also a spiritual significance for the Israel of God,—the Church of every age. See S. Cyril's important work, "De Adoratione in Spiritu et Veritate;" and particularly what he says concerning this precept (lib. viii.), where he applies it to spiritual injuries done to the tender Christian soul, in which, as St. Paul says, Christ's image has been formed (Gal. iv. 19).

^{23, 24.} Life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth] On the "lex talionis," or law of retaliation, see Deut. xix. 16. Lev. xxiv. 19, 20. Judg. i. 7. 1 Sam. xv. 33. Josephus, Ant. iv. 8. 33.

It is well said by Theodoret (on Lev., Qu. 34), "God did not enact these laws in order that such penalties might be inflicted, but in order that men might be deterred from doing evil by the fear of these penalties." God is speaking rather to the offender and to the Magistrate, than to those who suffer wrong.

There is not any ground for the objection of the Marcionites and Manicheans, that this Law is inconsistent with that in the New Testament (Matt. v. 39), "But I say unto you, Resist not evil, but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also," and could not have come from the same Author. See Tertullian c. Marcion. iv. 16; August. c. Faust. xix. 25; de Serm. Domini in Monte i. 19; Epiphani., Hæres. 33; Prosper Aquit. de Prom. ii. 1. Our Lord, in dealing with this matter, does not address Himself to the Magistrate, who administered the Law, but to the parties who might feel inclined to put it in force; and He publishes a new Law of Christian retaliation, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that despitefully use you, and persecute you" (Matt. v. 44). And so His Apostles (Rom. xii. 14, 20), "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink;" and St. Peter, "not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing" (εὐλογούντες, 1 Pet. iii. 9). Christ did not censure the Law, which was designed as a bridle for cruelty, and was "not made for the righteous, but for the lawless" (see 1 Tim. i. 8—10); but He condemned that state of mind which would resort to the Law for redress, instead of using injuries as occasions for growth in grace, and for the exercise of Christian virtue. S. Augustine (Qu. 80) remarks that the Law, which prescribes what penalty is due for sin, teaches us what is forgiven us when that penalty is not inflicted upon us.

S. Aug. (c. Adim. 17) and Prosper Aquilan. (ii. 1) observe that under the Gospel there are sundry instances of strict justice and rigorous severity, as well as under the Law; as in the case of Ananias (Acts v.), Hymenæus and Alexander (1 Tim. i. 20); those who were smitten with diseases for profaning the Lord's Supper (1 Cor. xi. 30). And it must be borne in mind that we live under a dispensation in which new and clearer views have been opened of the awful terrors of the future retribution of the Last Judgment, and that these ought to be ever before our eyes.

At the same time, it must not be forgotten, that in God's own dealings with man, there is, and ever will be, a certain Retaliation; that is, men are always punished by their sin, and by that on which they rely in rebelling against God. As Augustine says, "peccati pœna peccatum." Adam sinned by tasting the fruit of the earth, and was punished by the curse of the earth. Nadab and Abihu sinned by fire, and were punished by fire. The kings of Canaan were mured up in their caves; their refuge was their prison. David was punished in his wives for his sin in taking the wife of Uriah. The rich glutton is punished in the member (the tongue) by which he sinned against God. The Jews feared the Romans, and crucified Christ at the Passover; at the Passover their city was burnt by the Romans, and many of them were crucified; and they were rejected by God as they rejected Him. The Goliaths of this world are ever beheaded by their own sword.

^{26.} if a man smite the eye of his servant] See vv. 20, 21; and Maimonides de Servis, chap. v., who says, "If a man injure his Canaanitish bondsman purposely, and deprive him of one of his limbs, he must let him go free."

^{28.} the ox shall be surely stoned] Thus its owner was punished for not keeping it within bounds.

— his flesh shall not be eaten] The owner was thus punished. He could not convert the flesh into food. God requires man's blood even of beasts (Gen. ix. 5), and shows His detestation of murder by denouncing the flesh as unclean (Maimonides de Cibis illicitis, chap. iv.; Ainsworth). By means of beasts He teaches men the heinousness of murder (Theodoret).

^{31.} a son] Of Israel (Onkelos).

^{32.} thirty shekels] The value of a slave,—"the goodly price" at which our Lord was valued (Matt. xxvi. 15. Zech. xi. 12, 13). The freeman was valued at fifty (Lev. xxvii. 3). The sum here mentioned is probably about 3*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* (Kalisch, p. 412; Winer, ii. pp. 443—446.)

^{33.} if a man shall open a pit] On the equity of this law see Bp. Sanderson, vol. v. p. 52 (case of the Liturgy).

good, and give money unto the owner of them; and the dead beast shall be his.

³⁵ And if one man's ox hurt another's, that he die; then they shall sell the live ox, and divide the money of it; and the dead ox also they shall divide.

³⁶ Or if it be known that the ox hath used to push in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox; and the dead shall be his own.

XXII. ¹ If a man shall steal an ox, or a || sheep, and kill it, or sell it; he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and ^a four sheep for a sheep.

² If a thief be found ^b breaking up, and be smitten that he die, there shall ^c no blood be shed for him. ³ If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed for him; for he should make full restitution; if he have nothing, then he shall be ^d sold for his theft. ⁴ If the theft be certainly ^e found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; he shall ^f restore double.

⁵ If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution. ⁶ If fire break out, and catch in thorns, so that the stacks of corn, or the standing corn, or the field, be consumed therewith; he that kindled the fire shall surely make restitution.

⁷ If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; ^g if the thief be found, let him pay double.

⁸ If the thief be not found, then the master of the house shall be brought unto the ^h judges, to see whether he have put his hand unto his neighbour's goods.

⁹ For all manner of trespass, whether it be for ox, for ass, for sheep, for raiment, or for any manner of lost thing, which another challengeth to be his, the ⁱ cause of both parties shall come before the judges; and whom the judges shall condemn, he shall pay double unto his neighbour.

¹⁰ If a man deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or a sheep, or any beast, to keep; and it die, or be hurt, or driven away, no man seeing it:

¹¹ Then shall an ^k oath of the LORD be between them both, that he hath not put his hand unto his neighbour's goods; and the owner of it shall accept thereof, and he shall not make it good. ¹² And ^l if it be stolen from him, he shall make restitution unto the owner thereof. ¹³ If it be torn in pieces, then let him bring it for witness, and he shall not make good that which was torn.

¹⁴ And if a man borrow ought of his neighbour, and it be hurt, or die, the

|| Or, goat.

a 2 Sam. 12. 6.

See Prov. 6. 31.

Luke 19. 8.

b Matt. 24. 43.

c Num. 35. 27.

d ch. 21. 2.

e ch. 21. 16.

f See ver. 1, 7.

Prov. 6. 31.

g ver. 4.

h ch. 21. 6. &

ver. 28.

i Deut. 25. 1.

2 Chron. 19. 10.

k Heb. 6. 16.

l Gen. 31. 29.

CH. XXII. 1. If a man shall steal an ox] He shall restore fivefold; a greater penalty than that for stealing a sheep, because the loss was proportionably much greater; a man might have only one or two oxen, for ploughing, and the loss of one would put a stop to the tillage of his land.

— and kill it, or sell it] Proving thereby that he was a wilful and obstinate offender; if he had not killed or sold it, there might be hope of repentance and restitution: cp. v. 4.

On the spiritual meaning of these precepts, and their application to Christian times, see S. Cyril Alex. de Ador. viii. p. 254.

— four sheep for a sheep] So David judged (2 Sam. xii. 6); an instance of the acceptance of the Law in his day (S. Chrys. in 1's. 50), and Zaecharæus acted accordingly (Luke xix. 8).

2. breaking up] As was an easy thing in many Eastern houses, made of clay, with transverse beams (Rosenmüller: cp. Job iv. 19); if he be found breaking in, i. e. by night (see v. 2), no blood shall be shed for him if he is killed; because it is not evident that he did not come with the intent to kill (Theodorel), and it is probable that by night a thief may be tempted to kill if he is repelled (Calov).

3. If the sun be risen upon him] Then it is clear that he did not come to do any personal violence, but that his offence is against property only; he is not to be killed, but to make restitution; and if he is not able to do that, he is to be sold for the theft: see xxi. 2.

5. and shall put in] Rather, shall let his beast go loose, &c.

6. If fire break out] As it might easily do, from the custom of Hebrew agriculturists to set fire to the thorns and weeds in their fields before the rainy season in August, to increase the fertility of the soil, as the Italian husbandmen also did: see Virgil, Georg. i. 84; and on the consequences of such fires, see Georg. ii. 303.

8. the judges] Heb. Elohim: see xxi. 6.

— goods] Heb. work: see Gen. xxxiii. 14.

11. an oath of the LORD] "For the end of strife:" see on Heb. vi. 16; and Bp. Andrewes, "On the Lawfulness and Form of Swearing," vol. v. 80.

owner thereof being not with it, he shall surely make it good. ¹⁵ But if the owner thereof be with it, he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, it came for his hire.

m Deut. 22. 28, 29.

¹⁶ And ^m if a man entice a maid that is not betrothed, and lie with her, he shall surely endow her to be his wife. ¹⁷ If her father utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall [†] pay money according to the ⁿ dowry of virgins.

+ Heb. weigh, Gen. 23. 16. n Gen. 34. 12. Deut. 22. 29. 1 Sam. 18. 25. o Lev. 19. 26, 31. & 20. 27. Deut. 18. 10, 11. 1 Sam. 28. 3, 9. p Lev. 18. 23. & 20. 15.

¹⁸ o Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live.

¹⁹ p Whosoever lieth with a beast shall surely be put to death.

²⁰ a He that sacrificeth unto any god, save unto the LORD only, he shall be utterly destroyed.

q Num. 25. 2, 7, 8. Deut. 13. 1, 2, 5, 6, 9, 13, 14, 15. & 17. 2, 3, 5. r ch. 23. 9. Lev. 19. 33, 34. & 25. 35. Deut. 10. 19. Jer. 7. 6. Zech. 7. 10. Mal. 3. 5.

²¹ r Thou shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. ²² s Ye shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child.

²³ If thou afflict them in any wise, and they ^t cry at all unto me, I will surely ^u hear their cry; ²⁴ And my ^x wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and ^y your wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless.

s Deut. 10. 18. & 24. 17. & 27. 19. P. s. 94. 6. Isa. 1. 17. 23. & 10. 2. Ezek. 22. 7. James 1. 27. t Deut. 15. 9. & 24. 15. Job 35. 9. Luke 18. 7. u ver. 27. Job 34. 28. Ps. 18. 6. & 145. 19. x Job 31. 23. Ps. 69. 24. y Ps. 109. 9. Lam. 5. 3. z Lev. 25. 35, 36, 37. Deut. 23. 19, 20. Neh. 5. 7. Ps. 15. 5. Ezek. 18. 8, 17.

²⁵ z If thou lend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as an usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury. ²⁶ a If a Deut. 24. 6, 10, 13, 17. Job 22. 6. & 24. 3, 9. Prov. 20. 16. & 22. 27. Ezek. 18. 7, 16. Amos 2. 8.

s Deut. 10. 18. & 24. 17. & 27. 19. P. s. 94. 6. Isa. 1. 17. 23. & 10. 2. Ezek. 22. 7. James 1. 27. t Deut. 15. 9. & 24. 15. Job 35. 9. Luke 18. 7. u ver. 27. Job 34. 28. Ps. 18. 6. & 145. 19. x Job 31. 23. Ps. 69. 24. y Ps. 109. 9. Lam. 5. 3. z Lev. 25. 35, 36, 37. Deut. 23. 19, 20. Neh. 5. 7. Ps. 15. 5. Ezek. 18. 8, 17.

16. if a man entice a maid] He is to marry her if her father consents (v. 17); if she was betrothed to another, he was to be put to death as an adulterer (Deut. xxii. 24, 25).

17. He shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins] viz. fifty shekels (Deut. xxii. 28, 29). "Need we add (says Dr. Kalisch, p. 423) what excellent fruits these wise and most moral laws have produced in the Israelitish Nation?" Certainly, it must be allowed, that the condition of some Christian nations, in the violation of the sanctity of Marriage, and in forfeiture of chastity before Marriage, is such as to excite shame and sorrow, and to suggest for consideration, whether the enactments of the Mosaic Law for the punishment of adultery, and for the protection of chastity before Marriage, are not deserving of imitation. The opinion of our own Reformers may be seen in the legal provisions recommended by them in the Reformatio Legum, "De corruptoribus mulierum," who are required to marry those whom they have humbled and abused, and "De Adulteris," who are to be banished for life, or condemned to perpetual imprisonment (see Reform. Legum, pp. 40, 50, ed. Oxon., 1850). Dean Graves, on the Pentateuch (Pt. ii. Lect. iii.), says, "Must we not confess that the Jewish Law adjusted its punishments more suitably to the real degree of moral depravity attending different species of guilt than modern Codes, which permit some of the most atrocious instances of moral turpitude (such as adultery, seduction) to pass with trivial punishments, or none at all?"

This is a subject which claims the attention of the Christian Statesman and Legislator, especially where facilities are given to Divorce, and where encouragements are thus offered to Adultery, which, by the Laws of Almighty God, was punished with death.

18. Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live] A witch, mecahshephah, the feminine form of the word used in Exod. vii. 11 for magician, from cashaph, to mutter prayers to a false deity: Gesen., p. 419. Compare Lev. xix. 26. 31; xx. 27. Deut. xviii. 10, 11. From these passages, as well as from many in the New Testament (see note, Acts xvi. 16, 19: cp. Gal. v. 20. Rev. ix. 21; xxii. 15), it is clear, that such a thing is possible as intercourse with Evil Spirits; and although the power "of discerning the spirits" is not now given to those who take cognizance of human actions, and therefore the infliction of capital punishment on Witchcraft is now rightly superseded, yet this divine enactment ought at least to have the effect of withholding all who believe in divine revelation from lending any countenance to those who deal in "spirit-rappings," or other similar arts of so-called spiritualism.

Witchcraft is regarded in Scripture as a sin against man, and also against God, as being a resort to the Powers of Darkness, the enemies of God and man.

S. Augustine quotes the Roman Law of the Twelve Tables against witchcraft (de Civ. Dei viii, 19); cp. Plin., xxviii. 2; Senec., N. Q. iv. 7; and see the Benedictine note on the passage in S. Augustine.

The Sept. here has a remarkable rendering, φαρμακὸς οὐ περιποιήσετε, which reflects light on the use of the words φαρμακὸς and φαρμακείαι, and of περιποιῶμαι and περιποίησις, as used in the New Testament: see Rev. xxi. 8; xxii. 15. Gal. v. 20, as to the former words; and Acts xx. 28. Eph. i. 14. 1 Thess. v. 9. 2 Thess. ii. 14. Heb. x. 39, as to the latter.

19. Whosoever lieth] Cp. Lev. xviii. 23—29. He that sacrificeth unto any god, save unto the LORD] The insertion of this precept in this place is remarkable as exhibiting the fact that the enormities above mentioned were associated with acts of worship of false gods, and that they were sins against the majesty and holiness of Jehovah Himself; and because it indirectly inculcates the doctrine that the maintenance of pure religion in faith and worship is essential to the preservation of social and domestic purity and happiness.

This principle has also a reference to what follows. Unkindness to strangers, oppression of the widow and of the poor, are sins against JEHOVAH; and will be punished as such by Him Who will hear the prayers of the distressed when they cry to Him (vv. 21—27: cp. Dent. x. 18. Ps. lxxviii. 5. Mal. iii. 5. James i. 27; v. 4).

— shall be utterly destroyed] Literally, shall be devoted—(as Jericho was, Josh. vi. 17—19. 26: cp. Lev. xxvii. 29)—under a curse (cherem, ἀνάθεμα) to God: see Acts xxiii. 14. 1 Cor. xvi. 22. Gal. i. 5, 8; and on Mark ix. 49.

21. a stranger] Heb. ger, rendered προσῆλυτος here by Sept., proselyle: distinguished from the toshab, which is rendered by Sept. πάροικος, or sojourner (see Gesen., p. 860; Kalisch, pp. 431—433). The former word (from gur, to settle) represents a stranger, who conformed to the Jewish Law, either entirely (as a proselyte of righteousness, and who was circumcised, Lev. xxiv. 22. Num. xv. 14. 16. 29), or in part, as a proselyte of the gate (see on Matt. xxiii. 15). The latter, toshab (from yashab, to sit down), was a mere temporary and transitory sojourner, who did not so conform. The word ger is rendered by προσῆλυτος, but toshab is not so rendered. This consideration throws light on the word παροικεῖς, Luke xxiv. 18.

— ye were strangers] Here is one fruit among many of their adversity in Egypt; it was a school of humanity and compassion. "Non ignara mali miserere disce" (cp. xxiii. 9. Deut. x. 9).

25. usury] Neshec: literally, biting, from nashac, to bite, as a serpent (Gesen., p. 570). Interest for loans might be demanded of foreigners (Deut. xxiii. 20. Michaelis, Mos. Recht, § 152), but was not to be taken of an Israelite; and the character of a usurer is stigmatized in the Old Testament. Lev. xxv. 35—37. Deut. xxiii. 19. Job xxii. 6; xxiv. 3. 9. Ps. xv. 5. Prov. xxviii. 8. Jer. xv. 10. Ezek. xviii. 8. 13. 17; xxii. 12. Neh. v. 7.

As to the lawfulness of usury among Christians, see on Matt, thou at all take thy neighbour's raiment to pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down: ²⁷ For that is his covering only, it is his raiment for his skin: wherein shall he sleep? and it shall come to pass, when he ^b crieth unto me, that I will hear; for I am ^c gracious.

^{28 d} Thou shalt not revile the || gods, nor curse the ruler of thy people.

²⁹ Thou shalt not delay to offer ^{† e} the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy [†] liquors: [†] the firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me. ^{30 g} Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep: ^h seven days it shall be with his dam; on the eighth day thou shalt give it me.

³¹ And ye shall be ⁱ holy men unto me: ^k neither shall ye eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field; ye shall cast it to the dogs.

XXIII. ¹ Thou ^a shalt not || raise a false report: put not thine hand with the wicked to be an ^b unrighteous witness. ^{2 c} Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil; ^d neither shalt thou [†] speak in a cause to decline after many to wrest judgment: ³ Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.

^{4 e} If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again. ^{5 f} If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, || and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him.

See 1 Kings 21. 10, 13. Matt. 26. 59, 60, 61. Acts 6. 11, 13. c Gen. 7. 1. & 19. 4, 7. ch. 32. 1, 2. Josh. 24. 15. 1 Sam. 15. 9. 1 Kings 19. 10. Job 31. 34. Prov. 1. 10, 11, 15. & 4. 14. Matt. 27. 24, 25. Mark 15. 15. Luke 23. 23. Acts 24. 27. & 25. 9. d ver. 6, 7. Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. Ps. 72. 2. † Heb. answer. e Deut. 22. 1. Job 31. 29. Prov. 24. 17. & 25. 21. Matt. 5. 44. Rom. 12. 20. 1 Thess. 5. 15. f Deut. 22. 4. † Or, wilt thou cease to help him? or, and wouldest cease to leave thy business for him; thou shalt surely leave it to join with him.

b ver. 23.
c ch. 34. 6.
2 Chron. 30. 9.
Ps. 86. 15.
d Eccles. 10. 20.
Acts 23. 5.
Jude 8.
|| Or, judges,
ver. 8, 9.
Ps. 82. 6.
† Heb. thy ful-ness.
e ch. 23. 16, 19.
Prov. 3. 9.
† Heb. tear.
f ch. 13. 2, 12 &
34. 19.
g Deut. 15. 19.
h Lev. 22. 27.
i ch. 19. 6.
Lev. 19. 2.
Deut. 14. 21.
k Lev. 22. 8.
Ezek. 4. 14. &
44. 31.
a ver. 7.
Lev. 19. 16.
Ps. 15. 3. & 101. 5.
Prov. 10. 18.
See 2 Sam. 19. 27,
with 16. 3.
|| Or, receive.
b ch. 20. 16.
Deut. 19. 16,
17, 18.
Ps. 35. 11.
Prov. 19. 5, 9, 28.
& 24. 28.
1 Kings 19. 10.
Deut. 1. 17.
f Deut. 22. 4.

xxv. 27. The case is argued by Bp. Sanderson, v. p. 127—136. The main consideration is, whether in lending, the creditor regards solely his own benefit, and grasps at inordinate gains, and gambles with his money; or is content with moderate interest authorized by law, and looks to the convenience and profit of the borrower, and aims to promote the cause of Christian charity, and the divine glory, by assisting others, and by providing a moderate competency for those of his own house (1 Tim. v. 8), and by detaching himself from worldly cares, and by regarding his substance as a talent committed to his trust by God for His honour and service. Accordingly, we find that this prohibition of usury is connected here with a precept of liberal contribution to the service of God (ver. 28, 29).

If a man put out his money to neshec (Ps. cv. 5), that is, so as to bite others, it will turn like a serpent in his hand and bite him (1 Tim. vi. 10).

^{27. wherein shall he sleep?} The long loose raiment of the Easterns,—those of the Bedouins are about six yards long and five feet broad,—was a bed by night, as well as a covering by day (Rosenmüller, Kalisch): cp. above, xii. 34.

^{28. the gods} Heb. Elohim; the Magistrates (Onkelos, Jonath., Aben Ezra, Theodoret); see v. 8. Ps. lxxxii. 6.

Others suppose that the word is to be rendered God; and that the connexion is as in Prov. xxiv. 21, and in 1 Pet. ii. 17, "Fear God, Honour the King."

The Emperor Julian and some of the Jews understood Elohim here to mean other deities; but this sense is condemned as heretical by S. Cyril, c. Julian. vii. p. 240; Philast., Hæres. 147, p. 162, ed. Oehler, where see the note of Fabricius.

—nor curse the ruler of thy people] A precept referred to by St. Paul, as binding on himself (Acts xxiii. 5), and even in the case of an evil ruler (cp. 2 Pet. ii. 10. Jude 9), and it is to be observed in thought, as well as in word and deed (Eccles. x. 20).

St. Paul there quotes verbatim from the Sept., and prefaces his quotation with the words, "It is written;" showing that he regarded these precepts as a part of divinely-inspired Scripture.

^{29. the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors} Literally, thy fulness, and thy tear (lacrymam); the former specially said of corn; the latter of the vine and olive; that which comes out of the press in drops like tears; the choicest and best of both, τὸ δάκρυον τῶν δένδρων (Theophr.); "arborum lacrymæ" (Plin., xi. 6).

^{30. the eighth day} See Lev. xxii. 27.

^{31. ye shall be holy men unto me} Heb. men of holiness to

God. This "is the true notion of saints both as to the subject and the affection for it." Bp. Pearson, Art. ix. p. 353: cp. 1 Pet. i. 15; ii. 9, where the Apostle applies this to all Christians.

—torn of beasts in the field] Cp. Lev. xvii. 15; xxii. 8. Ezek. iv. 14. Ye shall not eat what is torn of beasts, who devour before they kill; and who eat while the blood is still in the body. This is therefore a law against cruelty and inhumanity (Theodoret). Ye shall not make yourselves to be guests with the beasts of the field, "ye shall be holy men" (men of holiness) unto Me. This precept is designed also as a safeguard against communications in eating and drinking with those who profaned or dishonoured God, for example, with idolaters in idol sacrifices: cp. 1 Cor. viii. 10; x. 20, 21. "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. x. 31).

CH. XXIII. 1. Thou shalt not raise a false report] This precept is primarily addressed to witnesses in a court of justice. Thou shalt not raise, literally, not take up, and put forth, a false statement in thy evidence. It is also applicable to the civil magistrate; thou shalt not take up or receive a false testimony. Accordingly, the Jewish Expositors interpret it in both senses; and so Bp. Sanderson, in his sermon "ad Magistratum" on these three verses, vol. v. pp. 210—239.

^{2. after many} A multitude. The same word (rabbim) as in the foregoing clause, and rendered πλειονας by Sept.

^{3. Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause} By partial judgment, whereby thou mayest tempt the poor man to sin. Thou art God's minister, Who is no respecter of persons. Thou shalt not abuse thy authority for the purpose of oppression or covetousness, by favouring the rich; nor for the purpose of obtaining popularity, by flattering the poor. On the one hand, "thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor" (v. 6); on the other hand, thou shalt not encourage him in sin: cp. Lev. xix. 15, "Thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty, but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour;" cp. Aug., Qu. 88, who says, "Compassion is a good thing, but not when it thwarts justice," and when it encourages crime by impunity.

^{4. If thou meet thine enemy's ox}] Not only thy friend's, but thy enemy's. A precept preparatory to the Evangelical command, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you" (Matt. v. 43—45. Rom. xii. 19—21).

^{5. and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him}] And wouldest forbear (Heb. chadal, to cease, to

g ver. 2.
Deut. 27, 19.
Job 31, 13, 21.
Eccles. 5, 8.
Isa. 10, 1, 2.
Jer. 5, 28, & 7, 6.
Amos 5, 12.
Mal. 3, 5.
h ver. 1.
Lev. 19, 11.
Luke 3, 14.
Eph. 4, 25.
i Deut. 27, 25.
Ps. 94, 21.
Prov. 17, 15, 26.
Jer. 7, 6.
Matt. 27, 4.
k ch 34, 7.
Rom. 1, 18.
1 Deut. 16, 19.
1 Sam. 8, 3, & 12, 3.
2 Chron. 19, 7.
Ps. 26, 10.
Prov. 15, 27, & 17, 8, 23, & 29, 4.
Isa. 1, 23, & 5, 23, & 33, 15.
Ezek. 22, 12.
Amos 5, 12.
Acts 24, 26.
† Heb. the seeing.
m ch. 22, 21.
Deut. 10, 19, & 24, 14, 17, & 27, 19.
Ps. 94, 6.
Ezek. 22, 7.
Mal. 3, 5.
† Heb. soul.
n Lev. 25, 3, 4.
|| Or, olive trees.
o ch. 20, 8, 9. Deut. 5, 13. Luke 13, 14.
Josh. 23, 7. Ps. 16, 4. Hos. 2, 17. Zech. 13, 2.

^{6g} Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause. ^{7h} Keep thee far from a false matter; ⁱ and the innocent and righteous slay thou not: for ^k I will not justify the wicked.

³ And ^l thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth [†] the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.

⁹ Also ^m thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ye know the [†] heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

¹⁰ And ⁿ six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof: ¹¹ But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy oliveyard.

^{12o} Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed. ¹³ And in all things that I have said unto you be

^p circumspect: and ^q make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

^{14r} Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year. ^{15s} Thou shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread: (thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven p Deut. 4, 9. Josh. 22, 5. Ps. 39, 1. Eph. 5, 15. 1 Tim. 4, 16. q Num. 32, 38. Deut. 12, 3. r ch. 34, 23. Lev. 23, 4. Deut. 16, 16. s ch. 12, 15, & 13, 6, & 34, 18. Lev. 23, 6. Deut. 16, 8.

desist, to fail, to omit: see Gesen., p. 262) to help (Heb. azab, to loosen bands: cp. Job. x. 1. Gesen., p. 617). Our translators and others seem to have considered it as equivalent to azar, to help; and the sense may be, and if thou wouldest forbear to loose him (the ass) thou shalt surely loose loose (the ass) with him (the enemy) from his burden: cp. Deut. xxii. 4. Keil supposes that the verb azab signifies to pass by, in the first member of the sentence, and to loose in the second; and that the sense is, thou shalt beware of passing him by (i. e. thy enemy); loosing thou shalt loose (the ass) with him. This interpretation is confirmed by Sept., which has ὁὐ παρελεύσῃ, thou shalt not pass by; and so Vulg., “non pertransibis.” And it is illustrated by the conduct of the Priest and Levite in the Parable, who passed by the wounded traveller, and so did to him what the Law forbade to be done to an enemy’s ass (Luke x. 31, 32). Other interpretations may be seen in Kalisch, p. 445.

Observe the good effects of this law. First, an animal’s life is saved; secondly, the owner’s loss is prevented; thirdly, two enemies are made friends (Isidor. Pelus., Ep. iii. p. 389).

^{8. thou shalt take no gift}] No bribe: cp. Deut. xvi. 19. Ps. xxvi. 10. Prov. xvii. 8, 23; xviii. 16. Isa. i. 23; v. 23. The custom of Orientals to give presents of raiment, &c. to friends, necessitated such a law as this; and the insertion of ‘t is an evidence of courage, honesty, and disinterestedness in Moses,—the Leader and Judge of Israel,—who might have enriched himself by receiving gifts, in the discharge of his office,—as Samuel’s sons did (1 Sam. viii. 3).

— the gift blindeth the wise] Literally, blindeth the open, i. e. those with open eyes; the seeing.

— perverteth the words] Rather, perverteth the cause (the words, matters); that is, wrests a good cause into a bad one, and robs the righteous of his right.

^{9. thou shalt not oppress a stranger}] The context implies that a stranger and an Israelite were on a par in Hebrew courts of justice; and see Dent. i. 16; xxvii. 19. Mal. iii. 5. Such Laws as these exacted much sacrifice of self; and the national reception and observance of them by the Hebrews is a proof of the national belief in the divine authority of the legislator.

^{11. the seventh year thou shalt let it rest}] Here is a national act of faith in God, Whose the land is, and Who will bless those who trust in Him; and a national recognition on the part of Israel that they themselves were only pilgrims upon earth. Cp. Lev. xxv. 3, 4. 20, 23; and Matt. v. 31.

The Sabbath Day was a weekly memento and type of the “rest that remaineth to the people of God.” The Sabbatical Year was an image of that rest: in that year they rested from worldly cares, and they rested to God, by meditation on His Law, which contained a record of His benefits and mercies, as well as a declaration of His promises and judgments, and which was to be read in the hearing of all the People in that year (Deut. xxxi. 10—12. Neh. viii.). It was a rest, also, of mercy to the Poor, and even to the beasts of the field (v. 11; and Deut. xv. 1, 2). Thus it revealed to the eye of Faith some gleams and glimpses of the blessed time when all Creation will be harmonized in Christ, and will rest and be refreshed in His everlasting kingdom of peace.

On the sacred character of the number seven, see above, on xx. 9, 10; and Kalisch, p. 448; and on the Sabbatical Year see Josephus, iii. 12. 3; Mather on the Types, p. 447; Bähr, Symbolik ii. 569. 601; Hengstenberg, Authentie ii. 435; Wiener, R. W. B. 349.

Some have expressed surprise, “that there is no mention here of the year of Jubilee” (De Wette, Kritik, p. 284); and this circumstance has been alleged as a reason for supposing that some of the Levitical laws were of post-Mosaic origin. But the present chapter is only one of three which contain the fundamental laws, and not the entire code; and as the Jubilee was a distant event when these Laws were promulgated, and as the Divine Legislator foresaw that another fitter occasion would occur for its enactment (Lev. xxv. 8—17), He reserved it for that time.

He would not lay upon them too great a burden at once, but would prepare them by degrees, and reveal His commands as they were able to bear them. The same was done by Christ in the Gospel dispensation (Mark iv. 33. John xvi. 12).

^{13. be circumspect}] Eph. v. 15.

^{14. Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me}] See xxxiv. 23. Lev. xxiii. 4. Deut. xvi. 16. All these feasts were “figures of us;” types of Gospel blessings and Christian festivals: see above, xii. 2, 13; and xix. 1; and below, Acts ii.; and John vii. 2; and S. Aug., c. Faust. xv. 4; xxxii. 12.

^{15. the feast of unleavened bread}] On its religious character, and figurative reference to the true Passover, see on xii. 15, and throughout that chapter.

Besides the connexion of the Passover with the deliverance from Egypt, it was to be observed as a feast of thanksgiving for the fruits of the earth (see Lev. xvi. 10, 11; xxiii. 9—14). On the second day of unleavened bread, the 16th of Abib, the firstfruits,—a wave-sheaf of barley,—were waved before the Lord, and with it the barley harvest began. Cp. Joseph., Ant. iii. 10, 6.

The Sabbath and the three Feasts are here considered, not only in their religious character, but in their social bearings, and these “Judgments” and statutes generally have a civil and domestic, as well as a sacred reference, and show the days, as I commanded thee, in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt: 'and none shall appear before me empty :) ¹⁶ "And the feast of harvest, the firstfruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in the field: and *the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field. ¹⁷ ^y Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the Lord God.

t ch. 34. 20.
Deut. 16. 16.
u ch. 34. 22.
Lev. 23. 10.
x Deut. 16. 13.
y ch. 34. 23.
Deut. 16. 16.

¹³ ^z Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my || sacrifice remain until the morning. ¹⁹ ^a The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. ^b Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

z ch. 12. 8. & 34. 25.
Lev. 2. 11.
Deut. 16. 4.
|| Or, fenst.
a ch. 22. 29. & 34. 26.
Lev. 23. 10, 17.
Num. 18. 12, 13.
Deut. 26. 10.
Neh. 10. 35.
b ch. 34. 26.
Deut. 14. 21.

²⁰ ^c Behold, I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. ²¹ Beware of him, and obey c ch. 14. 19. & 32. 34. & 33. 2, 14. Num. 20. 16. Josh. 5. 13. & 6. 2. Ps. 91. 11. Isa. 63. 9.

dependence of national peace and happiness on religious faith and worship: cp. Theodoret, Qn. 54.

In addition to other authorities referred to in the present work, the reader may consult the articles on "Passover," "Pentecost," and "Tabernacles," by the Rev. Samuel Clark, in Dr. Smith's Bib. Dict. 1863.

¹⁶ The feast of harvest] Or Pentecost, fifty days after the day on which the sheaf was waved (Lev. xxiii. 15. Joseph., Ant. iii. 10. 6).

Pentecost was the "feast of harvest," because then the wheat was ripe, and two wave-loaves of the ripe wheat were then offered: cp. Lev. xxiii. 10. Num. xxviii. 26—31. Deut. xvi. 9—12.

On the relation of the Feast of Pentecost to the delivery of the Law on Mount Sinai, see above, Preliminary Note to chap. xx.; and on its Christian fulfilment in the descent of the Holy Spirit, see on Acts ii. 1.

The Feast of Pentecost is called Asantha (or assembly) by Josephus (iii. 10. 6), under which name it is often mentioned in the Talmud; from azar, to surround; whence azarah, a court in the Temple (Gesen., p. 620).

— the feast of ingathering] Or, Tabernacles, beginning on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, and continuing for seven days, when the oil and wine were gathered in (Lev. xxiii. 33—43. Num. xxix. 12—39. Deut. xvi. 13—15); whence it appears that it was also called the Feast of Tabernacles, to commemorate God's blessings to Israel, when they dwelt in Tabernacles in the wilderness.

On the Christian reference of this festival, especially with regard to the Incarnation of Him Who deigned to "tabernacle in us" (John i. 14), see on Matt. xxi. 8, 9. Luke xxiv. 1; and note at end of John vii.; and on Rev. vii. 13.

— when thou hast gathered in] Rather, when thou gatherest in: see Keil, p. 483.

¹³ Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread] Leaven being an emblem of what is evil in doctrine, worship, and practice, and to be avoided in all approaches to God, especially in the sacrifice of the true Passover, and in the communion of His body and blood; see on xii. 8. 15; and Theodoret here.

— neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning] Nothing of the Paschal Lamb was to remain unto the morning, either of the fat, which was offered to God, or of the flesh, which was to be eaten by man (xii. 3. 6. 9, 10). The true Passover offered Himself entirely to God, without any reservation (Ps. xl. 7. Luke xx. 11. 42. Heb. ix. 14); and true Israelites are bound to receive the whole of the true Passover (see on xii. 10).

¹⁹ Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk] A precept repeated xxxiv. 26. Deut. xiv. 21, and inculcating feelings of humanity for animals; and much more towards men; cp. Deut. xxii. 6, concerning the dam and its young; and Lev. xxii. 28, concerning the mother and her young, not to be killed on the same day; and Deut. xxv. 4, concerning the ox treading out the corn, with St. Paul's comment in 1 Cor. ix. 9. 1 Tim. v. 18; showing that these precepts are to be used as guides of conduct towards men: compare also our Lord's lesson of trust, derived from God's goodness to birds, and even to flowers (Luke xii. 24. 27).

The practice of seething a kid in its mother's milk was also reprobated, it is probable, because it was in use among idolaters, and connected with idolatrous worship: see Maimon., Mor. Nev. iii. 48; and Cudworth on the Lord's Supper, p. 26. Spencer, de Leg. Heb. ii. 8. This practice prevails among the Arabs, who prepare this dish, which they call lebu immá (kid in his mother's milk), and regard it as a delicacy; but the Jews, who assert that it is unnatural and barbarous to dress a kid in that which God intended for its nurture, and that it is forbidden by Him, will not partake of it: see Dr. Thomson, The Land and the Book, p. 94.

These precepts have a spiritual meaning also. Milk is a scriptural emblem for the nourishment of the soul (see 1 Pet. ii. 2). He who seethes a kid in its mother's milk, uses for the kid's injury, that which God designed for the kid's nourishment—a thing cruel and unnatural (Clement Alex., Strom. ii. p. 478; and a wanton diminution of the species, and tending to its extinction (Theodoret). In like manner, they who use the spiritual milk of doctrine, not for the nurture of Christ's little ones, but employ the milk of the Word for their injury, by erroneous interpretations of Scripture, contrary to the teaching of the Church herself, their spiritual Mother, they, in a certain sense, may be said to be guilty of the sin of "seething the kid in his mother's milk:" cp. below, Lev. xxii. 27, 28.

²⁰ Behold, I send an Angel before thee] The Holy Spirit, speaking by the Prophet Malachi, entitles CHRIST "the Messenger," or Angel "of the Covenant" (Mal. iii. 1); and He seems to refer to Christ, when He says, by Isaiah (lxiii. 9), "The Angel of His Presence saved them;" and He leads us to apply this text to Him, when He teaches us, by St. Paul, that Christ was in an especial manner present with the Israelites in the wilderness. "Let us not tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted" (1 Cor. x. 9), where he appears to refer to this precept, by which the Israelites were warned against disobeying and provoking the Angel: cp. Heb. xi. 26, where Moses is said to prefer "the reproach of Christ to the riches of Egypt." Christ, in the highest sense, is the Angel, "in Whom God's Name is," because he is sent by God, and is God. And it cannot be said of any created Being, that he has the power of pardoning, which is here ascribed to the Angel; and it is Christ Who brings all true Israelites into the land of promise, which He has gone before to prepare for them (John xiv. 2). Accordingly, this text has been applied to CHRIST by some of the ancient Fathers (see Justin M., c. Tryphon. c. 75. 106. 113. 132; Tertullian, c. Jud. c. 9; c. Marcion. iii. 16; Euseb., D. Ev. iv. 17; S. Cyril, c. Julian. viii. p. 281; S. Aug., c. Faust xvi. 19. 20; Lactant., Instit. iv. 17), some of whom apply these words in a subordinate sense to Josua, but only as a type of JESUS (cp. S. Athanas. de Communi Essentia, ad fin.; and Hesychius, in Lev. xxvi.). See Bp. Bull, Defence of the Nicene Creed, book i. chap. i. sect. 11, who says, "It was in truth an Angel who went before the people of Israel to the promised land, but One in Whom the Son of God Himself was present in some peculiar manner:" see also Ibid., sect. 15; and, referring to this and other passages of the Pentateuch, he says, "The Christian Fathers were of opinion that He Who spake to Moses in the burning bush, and Who manifested Himself to Abraham, was the Son of God; and He is called JEHOVAH, I AM, the title which is reserved to the true God. In these manifestations it was not a mere created Angel, but the Son of God, Who was present" (sect. 20). The Son of God, as being sent, is called an Angel; and the "Name of God is in Him" (see v. 21), because He is God. Cp. Ainsworth; Bp. Wilson here; and Dr. W. H. Mill, on Luke i. p. 92; and note above, on Gen. xviii. 1; xxii. 11; xlviii. 16; and on Exod. iii. 2; xiv. 19.

d Num. 14. 11. Ps. 78. 40, 56. Eph. 4. 30. Heb. 3. 10, 16. e ch. 32. 34. Num. 14. 35. Deut. 18. 19. Josh. 24. 19. Jer. 5. 7. Heb. 3. 11. 1 John 5. 16. f Isa. 9. 6. Jer. 23. 6. John 10. 30, 38. g Gen. 12. 3. Deut. 30. 7. Jer. 30. 20. || Or, I will afflict them that afflict thee. h ver. 20. i Josh. 24. 8, 11. k ch. 20. 5. Lev. 18. 3. Deut. 12. 30, 31. m ch. 34. 13. Num. 33. 52. Deut. 7. 5, 25. & 12. 3. n Deut. 6. 13. & 10. 12, 20. & 11. 13, 14. & 13. 4. Josh. 22. 5. & 24. 14, 15, 21, 24. 1 Sam. 7. 3. & 12. 20, 24. Matt. 4. 10. o Deut. 7. 13. & 28. 5, 8. p ch. 15. 26. Deut. 7. 15. q Deut. 7. 14. & 28. 4. Job 21. 10. Mal. 3. 10, 11. r Gen. 25. 8. & 35. 29. 1 Chron. 23. 1. Job 5. 26. & 42. 17. Ps. 55. 23. & 90. 10. s Gen. 35. 5. ch. 15. 14, 16. Deut. 2. 25. & 11. 25. Josh. 2. 9, 11. 1 Sam. 14. 15. 2 Chron. 14. 14. t Deut. 7. 23. † Heb. ack. Ps. 18. 40. u Deut. 7. 20. Josh. 24. 12. v Deut. 7. 22. w Gen. 15. 18. Num. 34. 3. Deut. 11. 24. Josh. 1. 4. 1 Kings 4. 21, 24. Ps. 72. 8. x Josh. 21. 44. Judg. 1. 4. & 11. 21. y ch. 34. 12, 15. Deut. 7. 2. z ch. 34. 12. Deut. 7. 16. & 12. 30. Josh. 23. 13. Judg. 2. 3. 1 Sam. 18. 21. Ps. 106. 36.

his voice, ^d provoke him not; for he will ^e not pardon your transgressions: for ^f my name is in him. ²² But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then ^g I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and ^h an adversary unto thine adversaries. ²³ ^h For mine Angel shall go before thee, and ⁱ bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites: and I will cut them off.

²⁴ Thou shalt not ^k bow down to their gods, nor serve them, ^l nor do after their works: ^m but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and quite break down their images. ²⁵ And ye shall ⁿ serve the LORD your God, and ^o he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and ^p I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

²⁶ ^q There shall nothing cast thy young, nor be barren, in thy land: the number of thy days I will ^r fulfil. ²⁷ I will send ^s my fear before thee, and will ^t destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their ^u backs unto thee. ²⁸ And ^v I will send hornets before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee. ²⁹ ^w I will not drive them out from before thee in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee. ³⁰ By little and little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

³¹ And ^x I will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the desert unto the river: for I will ^y deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee. ³² ^z Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods.

³³ They shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, ^a it will surely be a snare unto thee.

XXIV. ¹ And he said unto Moses, Come up unto the LORD, thou, and ²¹. my name is in him] Literally, My Name is in the midst of Him,—a phrase much stronger than “My Name is in Him;” and specially true of Christ, of whom God Himself says, “This is His NAME whereby He shall be called, the LORD (JEHOVAH) our Righteousness” (Jer. xxiii. 6); and “in Whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead” (Col. ii. 9. Cp. 2 Cor. v. 19), as He Himself declares (John x. 38. Cp. xxxiii. 14).

The Sept. adds here, “Ye shall be to me a peculiar people; ye shall be a royal priesthood, and a holy nation,”—from xix. 5, 6,—words adopted verbatim by St. Peter and St. Paul, and applied to the Christian Church (1 Pet. ii. 5. Tit. ii. 14. Cp. Rev. i. 6).

²⁴. images] στήλας, pillars (Sept.) statues: see xxxiv. 13.

²⁵. he shall bless thy bread, and thy water] God promises to them temporal blessings. And the absence of any reference to future and eternal happiness is (as before observed) an evidence of the temporary character of the Law.

²⁸. I will send hornets before thee] The hornet, tsireah, from tsara, to strike, to overthrow (Gesen., p. 719). Some understand this literally (Bochart, Hieroz. iii. p. 407; Rosenmüller, Bibl. Alterthum iv. p. 430; and so the Talmud, in Sotah 36; and A Lapidé). But we do not hear of any literal fulfilment of this promise; and the word appears to be descriptive of the divine visitations inflicted by God on the enemies of Israel, by which they were smitten and driven out. Cp. Deut. vii. 20. Josh. xxiv. 12. Wisd. xii. 8. The sense, therefore, seems to be that their enemies are discomfited, expelled;—not, however, by their own power, not with their “sword and bow” (Josh. xxiv. 12), but by the agency of God (as Jericho was cast down), and by terrors and panics sent by Him (as S. Augustine says; cp. Keil, p. 486); and therefore God claims the power for Himself in the two following sentences.

²⁹. lest the land become desolate] Surprise has been expressed by some, that with two millions of people the Israelites could not at once clear so small a country as the promised Land has been assumed to be. But it must be remembered that “the promised Land,” according to God’s

design, was a very extensive country, reaching from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates (Gen. xv. 18); and that the modern notions of the ease of clearing a land of wild beasts are formed on the possession of firearms, &c., unknown to the ancients. Even now the population of Palestine amounts to about two millions; and some parts of it are still infested by wild beasts (J. L. Porter).

³¹. from the Red Sea even unto the sea of the Philistines (or Mediterranean), and from the desert unto the river] i. e. to the river Euphrates (Gen. xv. 18. Deut. i. 7. Isa. vii. 20), and so Sept. here.

These boundaries are also specified (Gen. xv. 18. Cp. Deut. xi. 24. Josh. i. 4); and were almost attained in David’s and Solomon’s reign (2 Sam. viii. 6. 1 Kings iv. 24; v. 1—5; ix. 26. 2 Chron. viii. 17); but as they were conditional on Israel’s obedience, and as man’s part was not performed, they were not fully realized: as the Holy Spirit Himself, speaking by David, teaches (Ps. lxxxi. 9—17, which is like a divine Commentary on this promise); and see Theodoret here, Qu. 59; and S. Jerome, Epist. ad Dardan. p. 609.

But this promise is fully accomplished in the true Antitype,—God’s Firstborn,—His well-beloved Son, to Whom He has given “the Heathen for an inheritance, and the utmost parts of the world for a possession” (Ps. ii. 8). “His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth” (Ps. lxxii. 8).

CHR. XXIV. 1. And he said unto Moses] As soon as God had delivered “the Judgments,” contained in chaps. xxi.—xxiii., He commanded Moses to come up to the mountain again. But first Moses must go and communicate the Judgments to the people, as is evident from vv. 3—8.

The order of events was this:—

The People came to Sinai. God gave them a promise by Moses, on condition of obedience (xix. 1—8). They promised obedience (xix. 8); and Moses returned to God, Who commanded him to go down and enjoin the people to prepare them-

Aaron, ^a Nadab, and Abihu, ^b and seventy of the elders of Israel; and worship ye afar off. ² And Moses ^c alone shall come near the LORD: but they shall not come nigh; neither shall the people go up with him.

³ And Moses came and told the people all the words of the LORD, and all the judgments: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, ^d All the words which the LORD hath said will we do. ⁴ And Moses ^e wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the hill, and twelve ^f pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.

⁵ And he sent young men of the children of Israel, which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD. ⁶ And Moses ^g took half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the

a ch. 28. 1.
Lev. 10. 1, 2.
b ch. 1. 5.
Num. 11. 16.
c ver. 13, 15, 18.

d ver. 7.
ch. 19. 8.
Deut. 5. 27.
Gal. 3. 19, 20.
e Deut. 31. 9.

f Gen. 28. 18. &
31. 45.

g Heb. 9. 18.

selves during three days for the revelation of the Law (xix. 10—25).

The DECALOGUE was then given by the Voice of God from Mount Sinai (xx. 1—17). Moses returns to God (xx. 21), and receives the Judgments (xxi.—xxiii.), and goes down, and delivers them to the people, who promise obedience to them; and then, as he had been commanded, he returns to the Mountain with Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy elders, and Joshua; and he alone enters into the cloud, and receives directions for the structure of the Tabernacle, and concerning the Priesthood. Cp. Aben Ezra, and others, quoted by Kalisch, p. 470.

— Aaron, Nabab, and Abihu] Aaron, and his two eldest sons (Exod. xxviii. 1). Their presence was required at this time, because the divine precepts now to be delivered concerned the Tabernacle and the Priesthood, to which Aaron and his sons were to be consecrated.

³. And Moses came] After he had received the Judgments, contained in the three foregoing chapters; and before he went up with Aaron, he came and rehearsed to the people these Judgments, and they pledged themselves to obey them.

— All the words which the LORD hath said will we do] This was like the solemnization of the Marriage between God and His ancient Church: see xix. 8. Moses, the Mediator between God and Israel, solemnizes the Marriage. God's first covenant had been with a Person, in Abraham; then with a Family, in Jacob; then with a Nation, in the people of Israel at Sinai; and, finally, it is with the World, in Christ.

⁴. Moses wrote all the words of the LORD] In the Book of the Covenant mentioned in v. 7, which contained the Decalogue and the Judgments.

— builded an altar—and twelve pillars] The altar represented the relation of the covenant on the side of God; and the twelve pillars represented its relation to the twelve tribes, the other contracting party. Compare the stones set up by Joshua (iv. 8. 20).

⁵. young men] Ministers of Moses, who acts here as the Mediator between God and Israel. Perhaps the firstborn of each family, as the Targum of Onkelos paraphrases it (see xix. 22). The words “young men” are often applied to those who ministered. Cp. 2 Sam. xviii. 15. 1 Kings xx. 14. The words “the young men,” in Acts v. 6, may designate certain ministers of the early Church (Blunt's Coincidences, Part i. sect ii. p. 11).

— burnt offerings—and—peace offerings] In laying his hand on the burnt-offering, the offerer discharged himself of sin; and in bringing it to be slain, he dedicated himself to God. In the shedding of the blood of it, there was expiation; in the consumption by fire on the altar, there was acceptance. The peace-offering was eucharistic; for in it the offerer fed together with God on the sacrifice. See xviii. 12; xx. 24. and below, Lev. i. 3; and iii. 1.

⁶. And Moses took half of the blood, and put it in basons] Half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar which was consecrated to God; and half of it he sprinkled on the people (v. 8). St. Paul in the Epistle to the Hebrews, informs us that he sprinkled also the Book of the Covenant (Heb. ix. 19).

In the blood is life (Gen. ix. 4); and in sprinkled blood there is confession of sin, and of forfeiture of life for sin, and presupposal of death. The sprinkling of blood, half on the altar first, and half on the people, represents the communion of blood between God and the people; i. e. it represented a communion of the principle of life, derived from God, the sole Author of life,—the Jehovah,—or eternal fountain of Being, and imparted to His people. This blood is sprinkled,

i. e. this communion presupposes death. And thus we have here a vision of the Incarnation and Death of the Son of God, as the means of expiation of Sin, and reconciliation and union with God, and of life to the world. The blood maketh atonement (Lev. xvii. 1); and “without shedding of blood there is no remission” (Heb. ix. 22). But how could the shedding of the blood of bulls and goats take away sin? (Heb. x. 4.) How should it cleanse the offerer? How should it procure forgiveness and access to God? Therefore, here is a prophetic representation of that Blood, which alone can cleanse from all sin, because it is the blood of the Son of God (1 John i. 7).

The Holy Spirit, therefore, speaking by the Apostle, assures us that this act of Moses presupposed the death of Christ and represented it; and the Apostle rightly argues that this Covenant might therefore properly be called a Testament, because it was grounded on the Death of Him Who made it; and thus he declares the human nature, as well as the divine, of Him, Who was one of the covenanting parties. This is important to be observed, as the Apostle's argument cannot otherwise be understood; and if it be duly borne in mind, it sheds a clear light on this solemn act of covenanting between God and His People, and removes all the objections alleged against the reasoning of St. Paul upon it, as if he were playing the sophist, in representing the Old Covenant as a Testament. Heb. ix. 16—20. See below, on Hebrews, p. 408.

In the Divine Mind the Gospel is prior to the Law. Christ is the Lamb of God, slain from the foundation of the world (Rev. xiii. 8. 1 Pet. i. 20). All the virtue of the Levitical Sacrifices was derived from the Death of Christ. He “came by Water and Blood” to the Faithful in every age (1 John v. 6). Thus the Levitical Covenant was dependent on, and was subsequent to, the Death of Christ, in reason, power, and effect, although not in time.

Accordingly, St. Paul declares, that the Scriptures of the Old Testament were able to make Timothy wise unto salvation, through Faith in Christ Jesus: see 2 Tim. iii. 15.

The Levitical Covenant, viewed in this light, as founded on the ground of the pre-ordained and pre-supposed sacrifice of Christ's Death, and as deriving all its efficacy from it, may, in a profound spiritual sense, be called a Testament.

In the Counsel and Decree of God, to Whom all things are present at once, Christ was already slain, when the Law was delivered from Mount Sinai; and all the Faithful, who were accepted by God, were foreseen and accepted in Christ from the beginning of the world. Hence St. Paul says (Heb. xi. 26), that Moses preferred “the reproach of Christ to the riches of Egypt.” Christ was the Paschal Lamb, by whose blood the Israelites were delivered from the sword of the destroying Angel. Christ was the Rock smitten in the Wilderness, from which the water flowed (1 Cor. x. 4). They who rebelled in the desert, tempted Christ (1 Cor. x. 9).

Christ Himself was the Διαθέτης, or Testator, Who covenanted with the Israelites. As God, He could not die; but in the fulness of time He was to become Man, and as Man He was to die. He became Man, that He might die. The Covenant was grounded on His Death, foreseen and presumed; and all the virtue of the Covenant, which He made with the Israelites, flowed from His death. It would have been of no avail if Christ had not died; it derived its force from that death.

Thus the Old Covenant was itself a Testament. Christ was its Testator. He is the Giver of Both Testaments; they are both sealed by His Blood, and derive all their virtue from it.

It is not, therefore, without reason that the Church of Christ, following the suggestion of the Apostle, calls the Hebrew Scriptures “the Old Testament.”

h Heb. 9. 19.

i ver. 3.

k Heb. 9. 20. & 13. 20.

l Pet. 1. 2.

altar. ⁷ And he ^h took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, ⁱ All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient. ⁸ And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold ^k the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

The Hebrew Scriptures, as well as the Gospel, are a Testament from Christ; they receive their efficacy from His Death. And whenever we speak of the Old Testament, we profess a fundamental article of Faith, which distinguishes us alike from Jews and Heathens; we declare that Both Testaments are from One and the same Author, who gives Laws to the world as God, and Who made His Covenant to become a Testament by dying for us, in order that all who enter into covenant with Him, and live as His children, may enjoy the heavenly inheritance, bequeathed to them by Him, and purchased for them by His blood. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, v. p. 91, who shows how Christ's Blood is the Blood of the Covenant, and also of a Testament.

In the Epistle of Barnabas (cap. xiv.), it is well said, that "Moses received the Covenant as a servant, and they to whom he delivered it were disobedient; but the Lord Himself has now delivered the Covenant to us, having suffered for us, and He has made us to be an inheritance to God."

— half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar] The reason why part of the blood was sprinkled by Moses on the Altar and part was sprinkled on the people was this;—Blood represents Life; and communion of Blood represents a Communion of Life; and by Christ's Incarnation and Bloodshedding we are united to God. His Blood has a twofold character and efficacy, it looks to God, and it looks also to us; it is the blood of a Sacrifice offered as a propitiation to God; and of redemption by which, as by the payment of a price or ransom to God, we were purchased by Christ (Rev. v. 9. See Eph. i. 7. Col. i. 14. 1 Pet. i. 18), and were freed from God's wrath, and receive forgiveness of our sins (Col. i. 14), and were received into favour with Him, and became inheritors of Heaven. And it is also the blood of cleansing, by which we were sprinkled and washed from our sins (1 Cor. vi. 11. Heb. ix. 12—14. 1 John ii. 7. Rev. i. 6), and were made acceptable to Him.

This twofold relation of Christ's Blood—first Godwards, and next Manwards—was also typified by the command that all the fat of the Paschal Lamb should be given to God, and that all the remainder should be consumed by the Israelites (see on xxiii. 8).

This twofold relation is represented in a solemn manner in the Holy Eucharist. It partakes of the character of a sin-offering and of a peace-offering. In that blessed Sacrament, there is an oblation to God on the one side, and there is a participation by man on the other. In it God and man are joined together in Holy Communion in Christ. In it we show the Lord's Death till He come (1 Cor. xi. 26). In it, on the one side, the meritorious Blood of Christ, which was sprinkled once for all on the Altar of the Cross by Him Who is the Mediator of the new covenant, and Who offered Himself without spot to God (Heb. ix. 13—15), is exhibited, represented, and pleaded before God, as "a full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction for sin;" and therefore even where the communicants are few, yet the Godward action in the Holy Eucharist is a most important and effectual one. And in it, on the other side, the Blood of Christ is sprinkled on the souls of all penitent and faithful receivers, who draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience (Heb. x. 19), and they thereby receive remission of their sins and all the other benefits "which by His precious bloodshedding He hath obtained for us."

Observe that the blood was first sprinkled by Moses on the Altar, and afterwards on the People. It is by virtue of Christ's offering Himself to God, that His Blood is efficacious through faith to our cleansing from sin: see below on v. 8.

7. he took the book of the covenant] The Decalogue (cp. Deut. iv. 9. 11. 13; ix. 13; x. 8) and the Judgments, in Exod. xxi., xxii., xxiii. (cp. Kalisch, p. 375).

St. Paul states, that the Book of the Covenant itself was sprinkled with the Blood (Heb. ix. 19). The Decalogue itself must be sprinkled with the Blood of Christ. The Ten Commandments cannot be understood and obeyed, except by faith in that Blood; and violations of them are forgiven only through the merits of that most precious Blood, sprinkled on the heart of the penitent. It must be remembered, also, that the "Book of the Covenant" contained the precepts in chapters xxi., xxii., xxiii., concerning slaves, &c. Those precepts were not perfect in themselves, but were preparatory to a perfect system, the Gospel dispensation. They required to be sprinkled with Christ's Blood. The Doctrine of Christ's Incarnation and Passion has placed the whole question of slavery on a new footing. It has sprinkled those precepts, and has cleansed them from the imperfection which belonged to them by reason of the imperfect condition of those to whom they were given (see above, Preliminary Note to chap. xxi., and below, Introduction to Philemon, pp. 334—336).

— All that the LORD hath said will we do] The Blood was offered first to God; and was afterwards sprinkled on the people; and then the people promised to obey. The Sacrifice of Christ must precede; and His Blood must be offered as a propitiation to God, and then be sprinkled on us for our cleansing; and we must promise obedience to God. Obedience to God's revealed Will is neither possible, nor acceptable, before the Sacrifice of Christ, and before the sprinkling of His Blood on our souls. Christ has redeemed us from the Curse of the Law, but not from Obedience to its precepts. "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the Commandments." Indeed by His sacrifice of Himself He has strengthened our obligation to obey. "He gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people zealous of good works" (Tit. ii. 14). "He bare our sins in His own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness" (1 Pet. ii. 24).

This is clearly represented in the Holy Sacrament "of the New Testament in Christ's Blood." There is the oblation to God; there is the sprinkling on the People; there is the promise of obedience. The ratification of the Old Covenant with Israel was the solemnization of a Marriage of the Church with her Husband and Maker (Isa. liv. 5). So it is in the Holy Communion: in it there is a Marriage feast; there must also be a wedding garment.

8. Behold the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you] Behold with the eye of faith the Blood of the Covenant which the Lord hath made with you in Christ. The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, teaches us to understand the words in this sense (Heb. ix. 20). And therefore the Apostle calls Christ's Blood "the Blood of the Covenant with which we were sanctified" (Heb. x. 29), and he calls Christ's Blood the Blood of the everlasting Covenant (Heb. xiii. 20), in contradistinction to the blood of the Old Covenant, which was temporary, and preparatory to the New Covenant (Jer. xxxi. 31).

Our Blessed Lord Himself suggested this interpretation, when He instituted the Sacrament of His Own Blessed Body and Blood, by which the benefits of the sacrifice offered on the Cross are communicated to every faithful receiver, and in which His own Blood of cleansing and redemption is sprinkled on our souls. He then said, "This is My Blood of the New Covenant" (referring to these words of Moses), "which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins," Matt. xxvi. 28. Mark xiv. 24. Both Evangelists use the words τὸ αἷμα τῆς διαθήκης, which are the very words of the Septuagint here. This coincidence could hardly fail to lead the readers of the Gospels to connect Christ's Death, and the Holy Sacrament of His Body and Blood, with this solemn sacrifice here described by Moses: cp. above on v. 6.

— concerning all these words] On the condition of your obedience to these words (Kalisch).

When it is considered that the benefits of the New Covenant in Christ's Blood (typified by this covenant between God and Israel) are perpetually applied to all faithful Israelites in the Communion of Christ's Body and Blood, it will be acknowledged that the Church has acted wisely in requiring that whenever the Holy Communion is administered, the part of the "Book of the Covenant," which is of perpetual and universal obligation, viz. the Ten Commandments (see note before, chap. xx.), should be read in the audience of the people, and that they should promise obedience to the same, and pray for pardon for the breach of its laws, and for grace to perform the same.

⁹ Then ¹ went up Moses, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the ¹ elders of Israel: ¹⁰ And they ^m saw the God of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of a ⁿ sapphire stone, and as it were the ^o body of heaven in his clearness. ¹¹ And upon the nobles of the children of Israel he ^p laid not his hand: also ^q they saw God, and did ^r eat and drink.

¹² And the LORD said unto Moses, ^s Come up to me into the mount, and be there: and I will give thee ^t tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them. ¹³ And Moses rose up, and ^u his minister Joshua: and Moses ^v went up into the mount of God. ¹⁴ And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

¹⁵ And Moses went up into the mount, and ^x a cloud covered the mount. ¹⁶ And ^y the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud. ¹⁷ And the sight of the glory of the LORD was like ^z devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel. ¹⁸ And Moses went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and ^a Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.

9. Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu] Who soon afterwards fell into heinous sin (xxxii. 1—6. Lev. x. 1); perhaps they were elated with spiritual pride, for the greatness of God's favour towards them.

— elders] Called nobles, v. 11.

10. they saw the God of Israel] Not His Face (Exod. xxxiii. 20. Cp. Deut. iv. 12. John i. 18. 1 John iv. 12. 1 Tim. vi. 16), but His glory: cp. Isa. vi. 1 (Onkelos, Augustine).

— of a sapphire stone] Literally, of splendour (libenah) of sapphire. Libenah is properly whiteness, transparency, clearness; from laban, to be white; and sapphire is sky-blue: see xxxix. 21. Job xxviii. 6. 16. Ezek. i. 26. Rev. xxi. 19.

This Revelation showed that the God of Israel is not merely a national deity, but is the God of the whole world, and sits in sovereign majesty and glory, and in undisturbed calmness and bliss, on the Throne of the Universe; and it was a warning to the Israelites against polytheism and against idolatry (S. Cyril).

11. the nobles] Literally, the separated, or chosen men, the elect, the representatives of the elect people of God (S. Augustine); they were the same as the elders (v. 9).

— he laid not his hand] They were not injured (cp. iii. 5), because they did not intrude unbidden, but had been commanded to come.

— they saw God, and did eat and drink] Partook of their Peace-offerings in His presence (Onkelos); thus manifesting the communion to which they were admitted with God, as representatives of His People. Here was an earnest of what Christ promises to those who enter into Covenant with Him, and remain faithful to Him (see Luke xxii. 30): especially at the Marriage Feast of the Lamb in heaven, of which this repast was a pledge and a foretaste (Rev. xix. 7—9); and therefore this eating and drinking is fitly connected with that bloodshedding and covenant which has just been described (vv. 5—9), and which was a figure of Christ's sacrifice (cp. Keil, p. 491).

Herein was foreshadowed the participation of divine graces in the spiritual food prepared for us by Christ, when we are admitted to communicate with Him, and even to feed on Him in the Holy Eucharist (cp. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Exod. iii. p. 332).

12. tables of stone] But now the Law is written by the Holy Spirit, who is called the Finger of God, on "the fleshy tables of the heart" (2 Cor. iii. 3. Aug.).

— and a law, and commandments] Rather, the law, and the commandment (singular), in apposition with the tables which contained them (so Sept.). The singular (mitsevah) is here used, as the corresponding Greek word is by St. Peter, 2 Pet. ii. 21; iii. 2.

— which I have written; that thou mayest teach them] Literally, which I have written to teach them. God wrote in order to teach.

13. and his minister Joshua] See below, Num. xiii. 16.

11. Tarry ye here for us, until we come again] The elders returned to the people, but we know not what became of Joshua. "Jesus absconditur, id est, tacetur" (S. Augustine). We lose sight of Joshua here, but he reappears at the side of Moses coming down from the Mount (xxxii. 17). Moses in the delivery of the Law was now acting as a figure of Christ the Mediator (cp. Gal. iii. 19, with 1 Tim. ii. 5. Heb. viii. 6; ix. 15; xii. 24), and Joshua was a type of Christ at this time as a minister of Moses (v. 13), viz. as born under the Law (Gal. iv. 4), and the time of Joshua's independent action as Leader and Saviour of Israel was not yet come. He was, as it were, hid for a time. It is not without reason, therefore, that the Scripture is silent here. It may perhaps be inferred, that Joshua went with Moses into the cloud; and so some of the Fathers suppose, viz. S. Ambrose in Ps. xlvii., "Moses in nubem intravit, adhaerente sibi socio Jesu;" and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 76. And this seems to be implied by the words of Moses in the text, "Tarry ye for us until we come again to you." S. Augustine suggests, that the reason why Joshua is here hidden from the view, while Moses, the Giver and Representative of the Law, goes into the Mountain, and that afterwards Joshua reappears, may be, that thus it was represented as in a figure that Jesus was for a time hidden in the Law; but, as Joshua came forth again as it were from his secrecy, and as in due time Joshua led the people into the promised land, which Moses could not do, so when the Law had run its course, Jesus came forth in the fulness of time, to conduct the People of God into their Heavenly Canaan.

16. six days] Of preparation for Moses to enter the cloud: he entered it on the seventh day, and was forty days and forty nights in the mountain. Some suppose that the six days are included in the forty days (à Lapide), on the ground of the declaration in Deut. ix. 9, 11. 18.

18. forty days and forty nights] During which he neither did eat bread nor drink water, and then he received the Law (Deut. ix. 9). For the like time, Elias fasted and came to Horeb (1 Kings xix. 8), and so long was Christ tempted in the wilderness after His Baptism and the descent of the Holy Spirit upon Him, before He entered on His Ministry (Matt. iv. 2—11).

Moses and Elias were brought to do homage to Christ on another Mountain—the Mountain of Transfiguration, to which He ascended "after six days," and they were then overshadowed by a bright cloud (Matt. xvii. 5. Mark ix. 7. Luke ix. 34), when the Voice came from heaven, and said, "This is My Beloved Son, hear ye Him" (Matt. xvii. 1—5). Moses and Elias did not eat for forty days, and yet were in the body; we may be in the body for ever in heaven, without doing carnal acts (Tertull. de Res. 61).

There is a remarkable parallelism between the narrative here as it stands in the Septuagint, and the history of the Transfiguration in the Gospels, as follows,—

XXV. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, that they †bring me an || offering: ^a of every man that giveth it

† Heb. take for me.
|| Or, heave offering.

a. ch. 35. 5, 21. 1 Chron. 29. 3, 5, 9, 14. Ezra 2. 68. & 3. 5. & 7. 16. Neh. 11. 2. 2 Cor. 8. 12. & 9. 7.

Ἄνέβη Μωϋσῆς (καὶ Ἰησοῦς, Vatican MS.) εἰς τὸ ὕρος, καὶ κατέβη ἢ δόξα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐπὶ τὸ ὕρος, καὶ ἐκάλυψεν αὐτὸ ἐξ ἡμέρας, καὶ ἐκάλεσε Κύριος τὸν Μωϋσῆν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἐβδόμῃ ἐκ μέσου τῆς νεφέλης: τὸ δὲ εἶδος τῆς δόξης Κυρίου ὡσεὶ πύρ . . . καὶ εἰσελήθη Μωϋσῆς εἰς τὸ μέσον τῆς νεφέλης, καὶ ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὕρος.

Compare with this the history of the Transfiguration as collected from three Evangelists:—καὶ μεθ' ἡμέρας ἐξ Ἰησοῦς ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὕρος, καὶ ἐγένετο τὸ εἶδος τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ ἔτερν, καὶ ἐλάμψεν ὡς ὁ ἥλιος, καὶ ἰδοὺ ἄνδρες δύο συναλάοντων αὐτῷ, οἵτινες ἦσαν Μωϋσῆς καὶ Ἥλιος, οἱ ὄφθέντες ἐν δόξῃ ἔλεγον τῆν ἑξοδὸν αὐτοῦ. Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ εἶδον τῆν δόξαν αὐτοῦ . . . καὶ ἰδοὺ νεφέλη φαιεῖν ἐπέσκιασεν αὐτοὺς, ἐφοβήθησαν δὲ ἐν τῷ ἐκείνου εἰσελεθεῖν εἰς τὴν νεφέλην καὶ φωνῇ ἐγένετο ἐκ τῆς νεφέλης λέγουσα, Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱός μου ὁ ἀγαπητός, αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε (Matt. xvii. 1—8. Mark ix. 2—8. Luke ix. 28—36).

Does not this parallelism suggest that the Holy Spirit intends us to compare the entrance of Moses into the cloud with the Transfiguration of Christ; and to infer from the comparison, that Christ, even in the days of His earthly humiliation, is far greater than Moses in the time of His greatest glory? And was it without significance that the subject of our Lord's conversation with Moses at the Transfiguration was His own Death—His Exodus (Luke ix. 31), that very event, which had been typically represented by Moses and the Israelites, before he went up, into the Mountain (see here, vv. 4—8)?

THE TABERNACLE.

CH. XXV.] Here begins a new Parashah, or Proper Lesson of the Law, and continues to xxvii. 19.

The parallel Haphtarah, or Proper Lesson of the Prophets is 1 Kings v. 12 to vi. 13, which describes the number of Solomon's workmen, and the building of the Temple.

By the Fall of Man, Man was separated from God. But God in His mercy purposed to bring Man back into closer union with Himself than that in which Man had existed even in Paradise.

This design was consummated in the Incarnation of the Son of God, when He came down from heaven, and “tabernacled in us” (John i. 14); but it was foreshadowed in those divine Institutions, which God appointed for His chosen people, especially in the Tabernacle. The Tabernacle was the Dwelling-place of Jehovah upon earth (see xxv. 22), where He would meet His People, and commune with them, and to which they were to repair with their offerings of worship.

The Holy of Holies contained the visible symbol of His Presence enthroned on the Ark of the Covenant (Lev. xvi. 2). The spiritual meaning of the design of the Tabernacle is clearly revealed in the Apocalypse, where the union of God with His people is displayed as completed and perpetuated in the heavenly Jerusalem. “I saw no temple therein; for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it” (Rev. xxi. 22).

THE NAMES OF THE TABERNACLE.

The Tabernacle is called in Holy Scripture

(1) Beth (house), Ohel (tent), Mishcan (habitation), as being the place where God specially vouchsafed to dwell (xxv. 8; xxix. 46) among His people, and to manifest His presence.

(2) It is also called ohel mōed, from yaad, to appoint, to designate, and (in niphal) to meet a person at an appointed place, and (in hiphal) to appoint any one to meet at a certain time or place, as in a court (Gesen., p. 355), tent of meeting, as being the place appointed by God for meeting His Ministers as Representatives of His People (see v. 22). This phrase ought not to be translated the “Tabernacle of the Congregation,” a rendering which has led some persons into error, and has tempted them to make objections to the sacred narrative, as if it represented the Congregation of Israel as assembling within the limits of the Tabernacle: see Benisch on Colenso, pp. 12—14.

(3) It is called also ohel ha-eduth, tabernacle of witness, as containing the Tables of the Law, which were a witness of the covenant between God and Israel (see xvi. 32—34; xxv. 21. Num. ix. 15). Hence it is called ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ μαρτυρίου (Acts vii. 44; and cp. Rev. i. 5; and note on 1 Tim. ii. 6; and Kalisch, p. 493). The Tabernacle itself, and all its vessels and furniture, were witnesses of God's presence, and of His Covenant with His People; and therefore, in a large and comprehensive sense, the Tabernacle might well be called the “Tabernacle of Witness.”

(4) It is called also the kodesh, and mikdash, holy house, or sanctuary, as set apart to the worship of God. The inner shrine, or oracle, was separated from the Holy Place by the Veil, and in it was the Ark, in which were the two Tables of the Law, and which was covered by the Mercy Seat, and overshadowed by the wings of the Cherubim, on which the Divine Presence (i. e. the Schecinah, from schacan, to dwell) was enthroned. There God spake, from above the Mercy Seat, and from between the two Cherubim upon the Ark (v. 22), and this was the Holiest of all, or, Holy of Holies: cp. Heb. ix. 1—3. Rom. iii. 25. Heb. ix. 5. On the Schecinah, see Schoettgen, Hioræ Heb. p. 1217.

DIMENSIONS OF THE TABERNACLE.

The Court of the Tabernacle was a double square; so as to be 50 cubits at the east and west ends; and 100 cubits on the north and south sides.

In the square toward the West was the Tabernacle, which was 10 cubits broad by 30 cubits long (see below, xxvi. 15).

The Holy of Holies was a cube of 10 cubits.

The cubit equalled about 18½ inches.

On the relation of the TABERNACLE to the TEMPLE, see below, on 1 Kings vi. 1.

The dimensions of the Tabernacle, and even of the Temple (see below, 1 Kings vi. 1), as compared with many other sacred buildings, are surprisingly small. And they who charge Moses with exaggeration as to numbers, &c., may here see a refutation of that allegation.

THE DESIGN AND PURPOSE OF THE TABERNACLE.

The names of the Tabernacle specified above, express the design of the Tabernacle, as a place solemnly set apart for God by His own express command, and framed according to the pattern and direction given to Moses by God Himself, and in which He vouchsafed to dwell, and to meet His People, and to receive their worship, in prayer, praise, and thanksgiving, according to the ritual prescribed by Himself; and as testifying to His Divine Presence, Majesty and Glory, and to His gracious mercy and favour towards them, so as to be united with them.

But the Tabernacle and its worship had other and higher purposes. Like the rest of the Levitical dispensation, it was preparatory to another scheme of Divine Mercy and Love, which would embrace all Nations. It was figurative of, and ministerial and manuductory to, the Gospel of Christ. Its purposes have been explained in the Gospel, and are fulfilled in the Church of Christ.

If the Tabernacle had been final in itself, and not a means to an end, God, Who ordered it to be built, would not have permitted it to be superseded by the Temple; and He would not have allowed that Temple to be destroyed, and to remain in ruins for nearly two thousand years, to this day.

If the Tabernacle had been like the Decalogue, or Moral Law, if it had been like the Pentateuch, if it had been like the rest of the Old Testament, not only of divine institution, but also of perpetual and universal obligation, He would have preserved it as He has preserved the Decalogue, the Pentateuch, and the Old Testament. God designed it to serve the purpose of preparing the way for Christianity. And when Christ cried on the Cross, “It is finished,” and bowed His head, and gave up the Ghost (John xix. 30), and the Veil of the Temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom (Matt. xxvii. 51. Mark xv. 38. Luke xxiii. 45), and the Holy of Holies was opened, then it was declared by Him Who had commanded the Tabernacle and Temple to be built, that they had served the purpose for which they had been constructed; then it was made manifest, that they had been designed by Him to be preparatory to the Incarnation of the Son of God, and to His Manifestation in our Flesh (1 Tim. iii. 15), and to the One Sacrifice which was then offered, once for all, by Him, Who is perfect God and Man, for the sins of the whole world.

The Holy Ghost Himself declares this truth by the mouth of the Apostle, writing to that people,—the Hebrews, by whose fathers the Tabernacle had been built. His words are the best commentary on the history and design of the Tabernacle. “Then, verily, the first Covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a (the) worldly sanctuary. For there was a willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering. ³ And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brass, ⁴ And blue, and Tabernacle made; the first, wherein was the Candlestick, and the Table, and the Shewbread; which is called the Sanctuary. And after the second veil, the Tabernacle, which is called the Holiest of all; which had the golden censer, and the Ark of the Covenant, overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had (the) manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the Tables of the Covenant; and over it the Cherubims of glory, shadowing the Mercy Seat, of which we cannot now speak particularly.

"Now when these things were thus ordained, the Priests went always into the first Tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God. But into the second went the High Priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people; the Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the Holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first Tabernacle was yet standing, which was a figure (παραβολή) for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience; which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation.

"But CHRIST being come, an High Priest of (the) good things to come, by a greater and more perfect Tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building, neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by His own Blood, He entered in once (for all) into the Holy Place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

"For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, Who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" (Heb. ix. 1—15).

The Holy Ghost here reveals to us that the Tabernacle in the wilderness had a spiritual meaning; that it was designed to be a παραβολή, or figure of "the good things to come;" that in it "the Holy Ghost Himself signified that the way into the Holiest of all had not been made manifest" under the Levitical Dispensation, but would be made manifest by CHRIST in a greater and more perfect Tabernacle.

Here then we are on solid ground, and with that divinely-inspired Commentary in our hands we may now proceed, with prayer to God for the illumination of the Holy Spirit, to contemplate the Tabernacle, which He commanded to be built as the House of His Glory and Worship, and as a preparation for the Incarnation, Passion, Resurrection, and Ascension of Him Who digned to take our nature, and who "tabernacled in our flesh" (John i. 14), and Who is "GOD WITH US;" and Who spake of the Temple (the stationary Tabernacle) as His own Body (John ii. 19), and Who is called "a minister of the true Tabernacle" (Heb. viii. 2), a High Priest of a perfect Tabernacle (Heb. ix. 11), and Who has promised to be ever with His Church (Matt. xviii. 20), which is "the House of the Living God, the Church of the Living God" (1 Tim. iii. 15), "made a habitation of God by the Spirit" Who dwells there (Eph. i. 22); and to receive His faithful people to Himself in Heaven, where the "tabernacle of God will be with men," and "He will tabernacle with them," and upon them, for evermore (see Rev. vii. 15; xxi. 3). As God was with His people in "the Tabernacle of meeting," and entered into union with them; so much more, God and Man meet in Christ, Who is "Emmanuel, God with us." As the Tabernacle and its vessels were Anointed with holy oil, so He is our MESSIAS, CHRIST or Anointed One; and we, as members of His body, partake of His unction, for "of His fulness we all receive," and are sanctified and glorified in Him. Thus the scope and meaning of the Tabernacle in the wilderness will be understood. The TABERNAACLE symbolized God dwelling with Man in Christ; and it symbolized Man admitted to dwell for ever with God in Him, Who is both God and Man.

It is not therefore without reason that an ancient Father of the Church thus writes,—"Whosoever rightly understands the march of Israel out of Egypt, and the passage of the Red Sea, and their pilgrimage through the Wilderness; and whosoever reads this history, not merely as written with ink, but by the Spirit of God, he may be enabled to attain to the vision and apprehension of the Tabernacle concerning which the Holy Scriptures deliver many things, and intimate others, which the hearing of man can hardly entertain. Specially, however, the Apostle Paul has pointed out to us some hidden mysteries which are signified by it, and these mysteries are so abstruse and profound that he may be said to have as it were closed the door on our weak intellects even when he appears to open it." He then cites the passages from the Hebrews (ix. 2, 3, 12, 24); and adds, "Even the prophets and saints of the Old Testament have taught us to see here heavenly mysteries. Thus David says, 'Lord, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle, or who shall rest on thy holy hill?'" (Ps. xv. 1, 2; cp. Ps. xli. 4. Origen, Hom. 9.) David there prophesies of Christ's Ascension.

On the spiritual meaning of the Tabernacle, see also S. Augustine, Qu. 105; and S. Hippolytus on Daniel (p. 153, Lagarde), where he says, "Whatever was done by Moses in the Wilderness with regard to the Tabernacle, was a type and figure of spiritual mysteries, in order that when the Truth appeared in the last days in Christ, thou mightest understand that these things have been fulfilled." And S. Irenæus, iv. 28 (ed. Grabe): "The Word of God (Christ Himself) trained and educated the People of Israel in the Wilderness. He disciplined them by means of a Law suited to their condition. By means of the making of the Tabernacle and the choice of the Levitical Priesthood, and by sacrifices and oblations, He weaned them from idolatry, and drew them to the worship of God. He raised them through secondary things to primary; through types to truths, through temporal things to things eternal, through carnal to spiritual, through earthly to heavenly. He said to Moses, See that thou make all things after the pattern which thou hast seen, and during forty days Moses was learning to apprehend the words of God, and celestial and spiritual images, characters, and prefigurations of future things, as St. Paul declares, All those things were figures of us' (1 Cor. x. 11). Thus by means of types or figures they were taught to serve and obey God. Thus the Law was their discipline, and a prophecy of future things." See also Theodoret, Qu. 59, 60, in Exod. xl.; and S. Jerome, ad Fabiol., Ep. 128, p. 578; Prosper Aquilan. de Prom. ii. 2; ep. Bp. Pearson, Art. vi. p. 269; and Wm. Jones of Nayland on the Figurative Language of Holy Scripture, Lectures iv. and v., and notes below, on Heb. ix. 1—15, and 1 Tim. ii. 6. See also S. Gregory Nyssen de Vit. Moysis, pp. 224, 225.

SACRIFICES OF THE TABERNAACLE.

On the figurative character of the SACRIFICES offered in the TABERNAACLE more will be said in the notes on LEVITICUS. In the mean time we may observe here, in the words of Bp. Pearson (Art. x.), "As to the atonement made by the Sacrifices, it clearly had relation to the Death of the MESSIAS; and whatsoever virtue was in them, did operate through His Death alone." As He was "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the World" (Rev. xiii. 8), so all atonements which were ever made were only effectual by His Blood. No sin was ever forgiven but by virtue of that satisfaction. God was never reconciled unto any sinner but by virtue of that propitiation. See also Fairbairn, Typology, ii. 304—335.

In the mean time it may be well to guard the younger student against the error of some who imagine that there was no inner spiritual meaning and power in the ceremonial Law; or that the sacrifices of the Levitical sacrificers had no efficacy in improving the spiritual and moral condition toward God, of those who offered them with repentance, faith, and obedience.

With the passages in the Holy Scriptures concerning the Tabernacle, compare Josephus, Ant. iii. 6. The principal modern works on the Tabernacle are those of Lamy de Tabernaculo, Paris, 1720; Reland, Antiquitates Sacræ; Bähr, Symbolik i. 55—103. 255—366; Frederick, Symbol. d. Mosaisch. Stiftshütte, 1841; Hengstenberg, Authentie ii. 636; Kalisch on Exodus, pp. 476—498; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 529—534; Jahn, Archæol. Bibl. § 327—332; Keil, Archæol. § 20; Professor Plumtyre in Dr. Smith's Bib. Dict. iii. 1413; Fergusson in B. D. iii. 1451.

2. an offering] Heb. terumah, literally, what is lifted up to God, as a heave-offering (cp. Exod. xxix. 27; and Keil on Lev. ii. 9). Such an offering was supposed to be raised up from earth to heaven, in acknowledgment of the goodness of God, "from Whom cometh every good and perfect gift;" and to be laid up "like treasure in heaven."

—that giveth it willingly with his heart] Literally, whose heart shall make him willing: to this precept St. Paul refers, 2 Cor. ix. 7.

3. gold, and silver, and brass] Not iron.

4. blue] Heb. teceleth: Gr. and Latin, jacinth; violet-blue: from a shell-fish, muræa, or helix ianthina (Gesén., p. 864).

|| Or, silk, Gen. 41. 42.

b ch. 27. 20.

c ch. 30. 23.

d ch. 30. 31.

e ch. 28. 4, 6.

f ch. 28. 15.

g ch. 36. 1, 3, 4.

Lev. 4. 6. & 10. 1.

& 21. 12.

Heb. 9. 1, 2.

h ch. 29. 45.

1 Kings 6. 13.

2 Cor. 6. 16.

Heb. 3. 6.

Rev. 21. 3.

i ver. 40.

k ch. 37. 1.

Deut. 10. 3.

Heb. 9. 4.

purple, and scarlet, and || fine linen, and goats' hair, ⁵ And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim wood, ^{6b} Oil for the light, ^c spices for anointing oil, and for ^d sweet incense, ⁷ Onyx stones, and stones to be set in the ^e ephod, and in the ^f breastplate. ⁸ And let them make me a ^g sanctuary; that ^h I may dwell among them. ⁹ⁱ According to all that I shew thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it.

^{10k} And they shall make an ark of shittim wood: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof. ¹¹ And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, within and without shalt thou overlay it, and shalt make upon it a crown of gold round about. ¹² And thou shalt cast four rings of gold for it, and put them in the four corners thereof; and two rings shall be in the one side of it, and two rings in the other side of it. ¹³ And thou shalt make staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold. ¹⁴ And thou shalt put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, that the ark may be borne with them. ^{15l} The — purple] Hebrew, Argamon; Sanscrit, ragaman (whence perhaps Greek, ἀραργίς), also from a shell-fish found in the Mediterranean (Gesen., p. 76; Winer, ii. p. 290).

11 Kings 8. 8.

— scarlet] Deep scarlet, or crimson, Heb. tolath shani, i. e. worm of the coccus (Gesen., p. 840), which adheres with its eggs to the leaves of an ilex (πρίνος), and from which worn the crimson is obtained, whence the word vermilion (cp. Kalisch, p. 487. Winer, i. p. 213. Keil, Archæol. § 17). Some derive shani from shanah, to repeat (so Sept.), and suppose it to mean twice dyed, διβαφός; but this is doubtful.

It is observable, that both these colours are mentioned in the Gospel history of the Crucifixion (Matt. xxvii. 28. John xix. 2): they are royal and military colours (see notes there), and both are applied as epithets to blood; and being used for the coverings of the Tabernacle, they may perhaps be symbolical of the Divine King and Conqueror, who triumphed by His blood, in Whose blood the robes of the saints are washed (cp. Rev. i. 7; vii. 14, and Ainsworth here).

— fine linen] Heb. shesh (from shush, to be white); probably the same as what is also called bad or byssus (cp. Exod. xxviii. 42. Ezek. xlv. 17). See Maimonides on the Sanctuary, c. 8. Kalisch, pp. 487—489. Keil, Archæol. § 17, who asserts here that it was made of cotton, not of flax: and cp. Luke xvi. 19, and Rev. xviii. 1, 2. The “fine linen clean and white,” says the Apocalypse (xix. 8), “is the righteousness of saints.”

It is observable that we read here first of the crimson and purple colours, and afterwards of the white. So it is in the Apocalypse. Christ first leads the way, clothed “in a vesture dipped in blood;” but His saints follow Him, clothed in linen clean and white (Rev. xix. 13), and “the saints have washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb” (Rev. vii. 14).

— goats' hair] Which was made into coverings for tents, and is scarcely penetrable by rain.

Every one must offer willingly to God's Church, according to his power. The rich must bring their purple and scarlet; and the goats' hair of the poor is also accepted by God (Ruffinus in Josh., prolog.).

5. rams' skins dyed red] So Sept., Vulg., Onkelos. “Aries rubricatus, cui non occurrit Christus passione cruentatus?” S. Augustine, Qu. 108.

— badgers' skins] For the fourth or outermost covering of the Tabernacle. What the precise meaning of the Hebrew word tachash (translated badger) is, is not certain: some suppose it to be a marine animal, a phoca (Knobel), or the Halicora (Rüppell), or the tan or atum, a large fish found in the Red Sea (Robinson, Keil); but the English translation seems on the whole to be the best supported by authority (see Gesenius, p. 861; Kalisch, p. 490).

— shittim wood] “Acacia vera,” very durable and light. The singular shittah is found only in Isa. xli. 19. In the Pentateuch the word shittim is usually preceded by ets, wood, etsey, in the construct plural; for the probable reason, see xxvi. 15. It is rendered ξύλα ἄσηπτα by Sept. Cp. Gesen., p.

816; Kalisch, p. 490; Bähr, Symb. i. 262; Ritter, Erldk. xiv. 335; Houghton, in Smith's Bib. Dict. iii. 1295.

7. in the ephod, and in the breastplate] See xxviii. 4. 6. 15.

8. that I may dwell among them] See xxix. 45. This is fulfilled in the Church by the Incarnation of Christ, and by the gift of the Holy Ghost (cp. 2 Cor. vi. 16. Rev. xxi. 3).

9. According to all that I shew thee, after the pattern] Cp. Acts vii. 44. Heb. viii. 5; ix. 23. Whether Moses saw a real heavenly Temple, of which the Tabernacle was to be a copy; or whether God showed him a plan, a design, a sketch, which he was to follow and embody in the structure of the Tabernacle, is not stated. The former opinion is maintained by the Rabbis, and Delitz. on Heb. viii. 5; the latter by Keil, and this seems to be confirmed by the ease of the pattern of the Temple in 1 Chron. xxviii. 19.

This, however, is certain, that God dictated the form and details of the Tabernacle; and therefore this form and these details are full of heavenly symbolical meaning, and claim the most careful attention. “Umbra in Lege, Imago in Evangelio, Veritas in Cælo” (S. Ambrose).

The words, As the Lord commanded Moses, so did he, are repeated eighteen times in the last two chapters of Exodus. The necessity of punctual compliance with all the directions of God, even in the external order and ritual of His Church, is thus clearly shown. Cp. 1 Chron. xxviii. 11, 12, 19. How carefully, therefore, should the Christian imitate Christ, Who is the substance of all that was contained in the Tabernacle? (Bp. Andrewes, ii. 179.)

THE ARK.

10. ark] Heb. Aron, probably from arah, to collect, as being a depository of treasures to be stored up in it (see Gesen., pp. 76, 77. Cp. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 202). In the Ark were placed, in process of time, the two Tables of the Law, and the pot of manna, and Aaron's rod (see on Heb. ix. 4. Cp. Exod. xvi. 3, 4; xxv. 16. Num. xvii. 10. Deut. x. 2, 5), and by its side was placed the Book of the Law. See Deut. xxxi. 26.

Christ's Body is the true Ark, in which it pleased the Godhead to dwell bodily (Col. ii. 9); and its place was, at the Resurrection, between two Angels, as the Ark, the type of it, was between two Cherubims (Bp. Andrewes, iii. 10). The Church is the mystical body of Christ (Eph. i. 23. Col. i. 18, 24), united indissolubly to Him; and thus, in a secondary sense, the Ark is a figure of the Church of Christ. The Decalogue was in the Ark. “Thy Law is within My heart,” says Christ (Ps. xl. 8); and this must also be the language of His Church, which is the depository and guardian of His Word.

— two cubits and a half] Probably about three feet and a half; but the length of the cubit is not quite certain. Cp. Bevan, in Smith's Bibl. Dict. iii. 1737—1739.

11. a crown] Zer, from zarah, to bind; a margin or rim.

12. corners] bases, or feet.

14. that the ark may be borne] Which was to be done by none but by Priests or Levites, on their shoulders (Num. vii. 9. 2 Chron. xxxv. 3. Cp. 1 Chron. xiii. 7, 10; xv. 12, 15).

staves shall be in the rings of the ark: they shall not be taken from it.

¹⁶ And thou shalt put into the ark ^m the testimony which I shall give thee.

¹⁷ And ⁿ thou shalt make a mercy seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof. ¹⁸ And thou shalt make two cherubims of gold, of beaten work shalt thou make them, in the two ends of the mercy seat. ¹⁹ And make one cherub on the one end, and the other cherub on the other end: even || of the mercy seat shall ye make the cherubims on the two ends thereof. ²⁰ And ^o the cherubims shall stretch forth their wings on high, covering the mercy seat with their wings, and their faces shall look one to another; toward the mercy seat shall the faces of the cherubims be. ²¹ ^p And thou shalt put the mercy seat above upon the ark; and ^q in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee. ²² And there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, from ^s between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel.

m ch. 16. 24. & 31. 13.
Deut. 10. 2, 5. & 31. 26.
1 Kings 8. 9.
2 Kings 11. 12.
Heb. 9. 4.
n ch. 37. 6.
Rom. 3. 25.
Heb. 9. 5.

|| Or, of the matter of the mercy seat.
o 1 Kings 8. 7.
1 Chron. 28. 13.
Heb. 9. 5.

p ch. 26. 34.

q ver. 16.

r ch. 29. 42, 43. & 30. 6, 36.
Lev. 16. 2.
Num. 17. 4.

s Num. 7. 89.
1 Sam. 4. 4.
2 Sam. 6. 2.
2 Kings 19. 15.
Ps. 80. 1. & 90. 1. Isa. 37. 16.

15. they shall not be taken from it] To show that the Ark was in transitu, and not come to its perfect condition, at which it only arrived in Christ. Therefore, even in the Temple, the staves, though drawn out further eastward, were still left with their ends visible (see on 1 Kings viii. 8), to show that the Ark had not arrived at its resting-place even there, but had, as it were, a tendency and a yearning for a more perfect state, and that all might see that it was preparatory to another dispensation,—the Gospel of Christ.

16. the testimony] The two tables of the Decalogue (xxxii. 18, given to Moses (xxxiv. 29). Hence the Ark itself, in which they were put, is called the “Ark of the testimony” (v. 22), and the Tabernacle “the Tabernacle of the testimony.” They are also called the Covenant (xxxiv. 28. Deut. ix. 9, 11, 15; and the Ark is called the “Ark of the Covenant” (Num. x. 33. Heb. ix. 4).

The word “testimony” as used in connexion with the Tabernacle, explains a difficult passage of St. Paul. See below, on 1 Tim. ii. 6, p. 442.

17. mercy seat] Capporeth, from caphar, to cover, as covering the Ark. In Greek, ἱλαστήριον, propitiatorium (Fulg.); and it is observable that the piel form of the word caphar, to cover, signifies to cover in the figurative sense of forgiving, and also to expiate, to atone for, and to propitiate, and appease. See Gesen. 411, 412; and note above, on Gen. vi. 14; and below, on Heb. ix. 5; and Rom. iii. 25. Hence the Most Holy Place is called in 1 Chron. xxviii. 11 beth hac-capporeth: cp. Keil, p. 497.

The use of the remarkable word ἱλαστήριον (or, propitiatory) seven times by the Septuagint here (in vv. 16—21), and the adoption of that word in the New Testament by St. Paul (Rom. iii. 25), reflect much light on the spiritual meaning of the Mercy Seat, and of the ritual of the Holy of Holies.

The Ark, containing the Tables of the Covenant, was the Throne of God, dwelling between the Cherubim (1 Sam. iv. 4. 2 Sam. vi. 2. Ps. lxxx. 1), who looked with their faces inward, ministering to God, and looked down on the capporeth, ἱλαστήριον, or Mercy Seat, with their wings stretched over it. Angels desire to see the mysteries which are shadowed by the Ark and its furniture (cp. 1 Pet. i. 12); and which are revealed in the Church of God (see Eph. iii. 10). The capporeth, ἱλαστήριον, or Mercy Seat, which covered the Ark, represented the grace of God in Christ, Who covers our sins by the propitiation (ἱλασμός, ἱλαστήριον, Rom. iii. 23. John ii. 2. 14. 10) which He has made for the sins of the whole world; and for Whose sake God covers our iniquities, and no more imputes them to us (see Ps. xxxii. 1, 2; lxxxv. 2. Rom. iv. 7; and note below, on James v. 20); and in Whom He rests, and is well pleased (Matt. iii. 17; xvii. 5). Therefore, God's Throne, sprinkled, on the great Day of Atonement, with blood (Lev. xvi. 14—18), typical of that blood which our great High Priest brought with Him into the true Holy of Holies, even into Heaven itself, at His Ascension (Heb. ix. 12, 24—28), is now become to us a “Throne of Grace,” to which we “may come boldly in time of need” (Heb. iv. 16; ix. 5).

It is observable, that though Solomon made all other things new in the Temple, yet he did not make a new Ark, but introduced into the Holy of Holies in the Temple the Ark which Moses had made for the Tabernacle (2 Chron. v. 7). Thus he showed that in essence the Temple and Tabernacle belonged to the same dispensation, and witnessed to the same divine truth, and looked forward to the same end, namely, to “Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever” (Heb. xiii. 8).

Origen applies these directions also in a spiritual sense. Every true believer (he observes) is a Temple of God (2 Cor. vi. 16). Every true Israelite is a Spiritual Tabernacle. Let him have in his own Holy Place an altar of incense,—an altar of incense of prayer in his heart; let him have a Holy of Holies, in which he may have the Ark of God's presence, and the Tables of the Covenant, and the books of His Holy Word, treasured up there as in a spiritual library, in which he may meditate day and night (Origen, Hom. 9).

18. two cherubims] Forged of gold beaten with the hammer (cp. Isa. iii. 24; and see Bähr, Symbol. i. p. 380), according to the pattern shown to Moses by God (cp. Heb. ix. 23). They stretched their wings over the Mercy Seat, and formed one whole with it, and looked with their faces turned to each other. They were representatives of the Angelic Hierarchy worshipping the Divine Majesty, and adoring His love to man in Christ (Heb. i. 6. Phil. ii. 10, 11), and devoutly looking down into the mysteries of the Gospel (1 Pet. i. 12: see the preceding note; and the note above, on Gen. iii. 24; and Heb. ix. 5; and S. Augustine, Qu. 105). It has been supposed by some that the Cherubim of the Ark had the quadriform character described by Ezekiel (Ezek. i. and x.); cp. 2 Chron. iii. 13; and Keil, Archæol. § 19; and his note here, p. 498, and below, on Rev. iv. 6—9.

It is observable, that the word Cherub is used by the Sept. both in the masculine and neuter genders. St. Paul (Heb. ix. 5) has it in the neuter gender. So used, it may be designed to show that the figures above the Ark were not representatives of persons, and were not to be made objects of worship.

Josephus says, that they were not like any creatures ever seen on earth by human eyes, but that Moses had seen their prototypes near the throne of God (Ant. iii. 6. 5; see also Clemens Alex., Strom. v. p. 241).

22. there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony] See xxix. 42, 43. Num. vii. 8, 9, where it is said that when Moses was gone into the Tabernacle, he heard the voice of one speaking to him from off the Mercy Seat; and therefore the Mercy Seat was called the Debir, oracle, or place of speaking (1 Kings vi. 23; see also Lev. xvi. 2), where God promised to appear in the cloud upon the Mercy Seat; and there the Divine shechinah rested (cp. Lightfoot, Temple Service, chap. xxxviii.).

How graciously is this promise fulfilled to us in Christ! He is God and Man. God meets us, and communes with us, and embraces us with the arms of His love, and clasps us to His fatherly bosom, as reconciled children, in His well-beloved Son, Who was in His bosom from Eternity (John i. 18).

t ch. 37. 10.
1 Kings 7. 48.
2 Chron. 4. 8.
Heb. 9. 2.

²³ Thou shalt also make a table of shittim wood: two cubits shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof. ²⁴ And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, and make thereto a crown of gold round about. ²⁵ And thou shalt make unto it a border of an hand breadth round about, and thou shalt make a golden crown to the border thereof round about. ²⁶ And thou shalt make for it four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof. ²⁷ Over against the border shall the rings be for places of the staves to bear the table. ²⁸ And thou shalt make the staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold, that the table may be borne with them. ²⁹ And thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and spoons thereof, and covers thereof, and bowls thereof, || to cover withal: of pure gold shalt thou make them. ³⁰ And thou shalt set upon the table ^w shewbread before me alway.

u ch. 37. 16.
Num. 4. 7.
¶ Or, to pour out withal.

w Lev. 24. 5, 6.

x ch. 37. 17.
1 Kings 7. 49.
Zech. 4. 2.
Heb. 9. 2.
Rev. 1. 12. & 4. 5.

³¹ * And thou shalt make a candlestick of pure gold: of beaten work shall the candlestick be made: his shaft, and his branches, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, shall be of the same. ³² And six branches shall come out of the sides of it; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side: ³³ Three bowls made like unto almonds, with a knop and a flower in one branch; and three bowls made like almonds in the other branch, with a knop and a flower: so in the six branches that come out of the candlestick. ³⁴ And in the candlestick shall be four bowls made like unto almonds, with their knops and their flowers. ³⁵ And there shall be a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two

^{25.} a border] Rather, a framing, from one leg to another.
^{29.} spoons] Rather patens, pans, or bowls: see Gesen., p. 410; for the frankincense which was to be burnt over the bread: see Lev. xxiv. 7; and below, v. 30; and Num. vii. 14.
— covers] Cups (Gesen., p. 552).
— and bowls thereof, to cover withal] Rather, to pour out withal, i. e. to make libation (Sept., Onkelos, and Vulg.: see Robertson, 359; Gesen., 552). The original word is derived from nasach, to pour out (see xxxvii. 16; and Gen. xxxv. 14). This is important to be observed; the shewbread, being an oblation, or Meat-offering, was accompanied with a libation or Drink-offering: see v. 30.

TABLE OF SHEWBREAD.

^{30.} thou shalt set upon the table shewbread before me alway] Literally, bread of faces, as being continually before the face of God, whence called ἄρτοι ἐνώπιοι; and προθέσεις, as being set before Him, and thence called also the “continual bread” (Num. iv. 7; cp. Lev. xxiv. 5, 6, and note below, on Matt. xii. 4; and Heb. ix. 2). The Sept. has here ἄρτους ἐνωπίους ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ διαπαντός.

It is said by Jewish expositors, that the loaves were each ten hand-breadths long, and five broad, and their height seven fingers, and that the length of the cakes was set on the breadth of the table (Talmud Menachoth, chap. xi.; Maimonides on the Daily Sacrifice, c. 5).

The shewbread consisted of twelve Loaves, set in two rows on each successive Sabbath (Lev. xxiv. 8),—rows, rather than in piles, as they are usually represented. Being set in rows, each loaf representing a tribe of Israel, they would be in the face of God; as was the case with the stones on the breast-plate of the High Priest (xxviii. 15—21). Those that were removed, were to be eaten only by the Priests, being holy bread (Lev. xxiv. 5—9), bread of God (Sept. Cp. Matt. xiii. 3, 4. A bas-relief of it is on the Arch of Titus at Rome.

The Shewbread represented the duty of the people, on their part, to set themselves ever before God, and to set the Lord always before their face, and to remember His continual presence, and their own special duty to set themselves anew before Him on each succeeding Sabbath; and they exhibited also God's continual care and favour towards the twelve tribes of His inheritance, which were ever before Him, and his eye ever upon them (Isa. xlix. 16. Jer. xxxi. 20).

The shewbread was a holy oblation, a meat-offering (Lev.

xxiv. 7), and represented God's Church presenting herself as a living sacrifice to God, Who on His side pledges Himself to be ever with her; and it was accompanied with the burning of frankincense (see on v. 29), the emblem of prayer to God, and with the pouring out of wine (see v. 29; and cp. Num. iv. 7), emblematic of the outpouring of Christ's blood, by which all her offerings are sanctified, and significant of her own readiness to spend and be spent for Him. See the interesting reference to this in St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians, ii. 17.

May it not be added, that the continual renewal of the Loaves, on each successive Sabbath, and the presentation of them to God by the Priests, together with the incense and the libation, exhibited the office of the Church of Christ in an especial manner, in the oblation of the Holy Eucharist, the Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ, the perpetual Memorial of the Lord's Death, in the Lord's House, on the Lord's Day? See below, note on Acts xx. 7.

On the typical character of the shewbread, see also below, Num. iv. 7.

THE GOLDEN SEVEN-BRANCHED CANDLESTICK.

^{31—39.} a candlestick of pure gold] The golden seven-branched Candlestick or Lamp-stand (λυχνία, Sept.), in the Tabernacle before the Veil, and which was fed with pure oil, “to cause the lamps of it to burn always,” and was to be watched and trimmed by the Ministers of the Sanctuary (Exod. xxvii. 20. Lev. xxiv. 2—4), was another emblem of the Church, as we know from Holy Scripture itself (Rev. i. 20; ii. 1. 5). It was an emblem of the Church in receiving the pure oil of the Spirit and the light of God's Holy Word, and in diffusing that Light throughout the World; see below on xxvii. 20, 21, and on Rev. xi.; and cp. S. Irenaeus, v. 20, who says that the Church is the seven-branched Lamp-stand, “Christi bajulans lumen;” and Prosper Aquitan., ii. 3, who says, “Lucerna septiformi spiritu accensa toti lucet Tabernaculo;” and Bp. Andrewes, iii. 372. Cp. below on xxvii. 20, 21. Num. iv. 7; viii. 4; and Winer, l. W. B. ii. 17; and Kalisch. A bas-relief of it is on the Arch of Titus at Rome.

^{31.} his shaft] Rather, its base.

— his branches] Its shaft and branches, or tubes. The Heb. word kaneh signifies literally a reed, κάνων, canna, cane (from kanah, to erect), whence the “Canon of Scripture,” as the measuring reed of the Church, and as the “Rule of Faith.” See below, on Rev. xi. 4; and Gesen., 735.

branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches that proceed out of the candlestick. ³⁶ Their knops and their branches shall be of the same: all of it shall be one beaten work of pure gold. ³⁷ And thou shalt make the seven lamps thereof: and ^y they shall || light the lamps thereof, that they may ^z give light over against † it. ³⁸ And the tongs thereof, and the snuffdishes thereof, shall be of pure gold. ³⁹ Of a talent of pure gold shall he make it, with all these vessels. ⁴⁰ And ^a look that thou make them after their pattern, † which was shewed thee in the mount.

XXVI. ¹ Moreover ^a thou shalt make the tabernacle with ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims † of cunning work shalt thou make them. ² The length of one curtain shall be eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and every one of the curtains shall have one measure. ³ The five curtains shall be coupled together one to another; and other five curtains shall be coupled one to another. ⁴ And

y ch. 27. 21. &
30. 8.
Lev. 24. 3, 4.
2 Chron. 13. 11.
|| Or, cause to ascend.
z Num. 8. 2.
† Heb. the fire of it.
a ch. 26. 30.
Num. 8. 4.
1 Chron. 23. 11,
19.
Acts 7. 44.
Heb. 8. 5.
† Heb. which thou wast caused to see.
a ch. 36. 8.
† Heb. the work of a cunning workman, oi, embroiderer.

38. tongs] Snuffers. Cp. 1 Kings vii. 49. On their figurative meaning, see below on xxvii. 21.

— snuffdishes] Cp. 1 Kings vii. 50.

40. after their pattern] See above, v. 9.

St. Paul guarantees the truth of this revelation, by quoting almost verbatim the language of the Septuagint, with which this chapter ends; see Heb. viii. 5.

Let us review here the order of the preparations for the Tabernacle.

(1) The people were invited to offer freely.

(2) Every thing was to be made according to the divine pattern.

(3) The first thing mentioned is the Ark: in which the Tables of the Testimony are to be placed.

(4) The Mercy seat: and the Cherubim,—the Throne of God.

(5) The Table of shewbread.

(6) The Golden Candlestick.

The reasons of this order will be readily understood from a consideration of the sacred text, and of the observations that have been made upon it.

CH. XXVI.] The interior of the Tabernacle was divided into two unequal parts; the first part twenty cubits long, ten broad, and ten high, called the Holy Place, or Sanctuary, into which "the Priests went, always accomplishing the service of God" (Heb. ix. 6).

The second, called the Holy of Holies (see v. 33; and above, xxv. 10—22), separated from the Holy Place by the Veil (v. 31—35). The Tabernacle was without windows. The Holy Place was lighted by the golden seven-branched Lamp-stand, an emblem of the Visible Church, filled with the oil of the Spirit, and set in the world to illumine it with the light of God's Word: see above, xxv. 31—39; and below, xxvii. 20, 21.

The only light of the Holiest of all was that of the Divine Shechinah (cp. Bp. Horsley, Biblical Criticism, i. p. 105). And in that respect, as in many others, the Holy of Holies was a type of Heaven itself, "which has no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God doth lighten it, and the Lamb is the Light thereof" (Rev. xxi. 23).

The Sacred Writer now proceeds to relate the Divine directions for the covering of the Tabernacle. To understand these, it is to be borne in mind that the Tabernacle stood toward the western side of the outer rectangular Court, or Enclosure, into which every Israelite might enter; which was 100 cubits long (about 150 feet), and 50 cubits broad (about 75 feet). In this outer Enclosure was the Brazen Altar of Burntoffering, and the Laver, or Sea.

The Tabernacle, properly so called, was thirty cubits long from east to west, and ten broad from north to south. It was approached from the east; as Josephus says (iii. 6. 3), "it fronted the east that it might receive the first rays of the Sun." So the Church of God turns, as it were, her eyes to Christ, that she may receive the rising beams of the Day-Spring from on high, and rejoice in the light of the Sun of Righteousness.

Its sides were formed of forty-eight gilded boards; twenty on the north, twenty on the south, and six on the west; the two at the angles were doubled, and thus made forty-eight (v. 15—30). The eastern side was covered with the outer hangings (see v. 36).

The inner covering, roofing, or ceiling of the Tabernacle was made of ten curtains of fine twined linen, blue, red, and crimson (v. 1), woven with Cherubim (v. 1—6); over these were eleven curtains of goats' hair (7—13), and over these a covering of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of badgers' or seals' skins.

1. the tabernacle] Or habitation; mishcan, which is distinguished from ohel (in v. 7), inasmuch as it represents the interior dwelling-place (from shaacan, to dwell); and ohel is rather the outer covering, perhaps from ahal, to shine, a tent being an object conspicuous from afar: cp. Gesen., p. 17.

— ten curtains] The number ten denoting perfection and unity. The ten curtains were, like the Decalogue, divided into two halves, but were so combined and knit together that the habitation was one (v. 6), as the Law is closely woven together (see xx. 12), and is summed up in one word,—Love (Rom. xii. 3. 10).

— of cunning work] Work of chosheh, or a weaver. Properly, one who reckons, counts, from chashab (Gesen., p. 311). This work of the weaver is distinguished from the work of an embroiderer (rokem, from rakam, to embroider, whence the Spanish and Italian words recamare and ricamare: Gesen., p. 780). Cp. Sept. xxvii. 16, with its version here; the latter word is rendered ραφιδευτής, a worker with the needle; the former by ὑφαντής, a weaver.

The former kind of work was known to classical writers as Babylonian; the latter, as Phrygian (Herod. iii. 47; Plin., viii. 48).

3. The five curtains shall be coupled together] So the first five Commandments are coupled together: they all have the Name of "the Lord thy God" in them; and Love of God, the Lord ΙΕΗΟΥΑΙ, is that which joins them all. The fifth, which enjoins the love of parents, on the principle of the love of God, is the middle term, which partakes of duty to God and Man, and binds both duties in one: see Preliminary Note to chap. xx.

The coupling together of the Curtain is elegantly described by the Septuagint: πέντε ἀυλαῖαι ἔσονται ἐξ ἀλλήλων ἐχόμεναι ἢ ἑτέρα ἐκ τῆς ἑτέρας, καὶ πέντε ἀυλαῖαι ἔσονται συνηχόμεναι ἑτέρα τῇ ἑτέρα. A beautiful description which may be well applied to the Ten Commandments, which make the One Moral Code. It would have been impossible to detach one curtain from the other nine without marring the symmetry of the whole, and how can we take one commandment from the other nine, (say, the commandment concerning the Sabbath, understood in a Christian sense), without disturbing the harmony of all? Cp. James ii. 10.

— one to another] Literally, a woman to her sister. On this Hebraism, and the parallel one, "a man to his brother," see Gen. xiii. 11; xxvi. 31. Exod. xvi. 15; xxvi. 5. 6. 17; xxxii. 27. Isa. iii. 5; xix. 2. Ezek. i. 9; iii. 13; xvi. 45. 48, 49. Joel ii. 8. Gesenius, pp. 27. 30. By this expressive term is denoted the Unity of the Universal Church of Christ, the parts of which ought to be knit together in sisterly love, like the curtains of the Tabernacle.

thou shalt make loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain from the selvedge in the coupling; and likewise shalt thou make in the uttermost edge of another curtain, in the coupling of the second. ⁵ Fifty loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second; that the loops may take hold one of another. ⁶ And thou shalt make fifty taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches: and it shall be one tabernacle.

b ch. 36. 14.

⁷ And ^b thou shalt make curtains of goats' hair to be a covering upon the tabernacle: eleven curtains shalt thou make. ⁸ The length of one curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure. ⁹ And thou shalt couple five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tabernacle. ¹⁰ And thou shalt make fifty loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling, and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second. ¹¹ And thou shalt make fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the ^{||} tent together, that it may be one. ¹² And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half curtain that remaineth, shall hang over the backside of the tabernacle. ¹³ And a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side † of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side and on that side, to cover it.

|| Or, covering.

† Heb. in the remainder, or, surplusage.

c ch. 36. 19.

¹⁴ And ^c thou shalt make a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering above of badgers' skins.

¹⁵ And thou shalt make boards for the tabernacle of shittim wood standing up. ¹⁶ Ten cubits shall be the length of a board, and a cubit and a half shall be the breadth of one board. ¹⁷ Two † tenons shall there be in one board, set in order one against another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

† Heb. hands.

¹⁸ And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards on the south side southward. ¹⁹ And thou shalt make forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

6. and it shall be one tabernacle] Rather, that the habitation may be one. Unity is the design of all the arrangements here specified (cp. v. 11). "Father, I pray that they may be all one, as we are One" was the prayer of Christ for His Church (John xvii. 20, 21); and the Apostle's exhortation is, that we be "perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment" (1 Cor. i. 10), and "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. iv. 1—6).

The golden taches, clasped in the sky-blue loops, made the ten curtains of fine twined linen, blue, red, and crimson, which formed the inner ceiling of the habitation, to be one Tent; and if Unity was to be the characteristic of the Curtains of the Tabernacle, how much more should it be maintained in the doctrine and discipline of the Church, so that the whole may be joined together for an "habitation of God through the Spirit" (Eph. ii. 22)!

7. a covering upon the tabernacle] Rather, a tent (ohel) over the habitation (mishcan): see v. 1. The tent (ohel) was larger than the mishcan, as will be seen in a comparison of the dimensions specified in the text. It is most probable that these ten beautiful curtains, which formed the inner roof or ceiling of the Tabernacle, were also inside the boards of the sides, so as to form an inside arras-work for it (Fater; Bähr; Kalisch, p. 477).

9. shalt double the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tabernacle] Thou shalt roll up the sixth curtain at the front of the tent; to make a portal to it.

294

12. the remnant] Literally, the superfluity.

15. shittim wood] Acacia (see xxv. 5). The dimensions of these planks are larger than might have been expected from the size of the acacia as now found in the Arabian peninsula. Some have supposed that the word Keresh, rendered board in Ezekiel (xxvii. 5), is a collective noun. Perhaps these boards were constructed of inlaid variegated wood; and this opinion seems to be confirmed by the fact that the word appears in the original in the Pentateuch in a double plural form, thus: "Thou shalt make boards of woods of shittim;" and Sept. has also the plural, ἐκ ξύλων ἀσήπτων. Cp. the original in xxv. 5. 10. 13, &c.; xxvi. 26. 32. 37; xxvii. 1. 6; xxxv. 7; xxxvi. 20. 31. 36. Dent. x. 3.

The acacias of the Sinaitic peninsula have been destroyed by the Bedouins for the sake of charcoal (Stanley, p. 25), and we do not know what their size was at the time of the Exodus. cp. Hayman, in Smith's Bib. Diet. ii. 1751.

16. length—breadth] The thickness is not specified, but is said by Josephus (Ant. iii. 6. 3) to have been four fingers. It could hardly have been as much as a cubit, as some have supposed: see Keil, p. 505. The dimensions of the Tabernacle were 30 cubits long by 10 broad. Josephus, Ant. iii. 6. 3, and this agrees with the text (Fergusson).

17. tenons] Or spikes; like the sharp end of a spear (Josephus), which were fixed in sockets or mortices of silver (v. 19).

²⁰ And for the second side of the tabernacle on the north side there shall be twenty boards: ²¹ And their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

²² And for the sides of the tabernacle westward thou shalt make six boards.

²³ And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides. ²⁴ And they shall be † coupled together beneath, and they shall be † coupled together above the head of it unto one ring: thus shall it be for them both; they shall be for the two corners. ²⁵ And they shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

²⁶ And thou shalt make bars of shittim wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, ²⁷ And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the two sides westward. ²⁸ And the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall reach from end to end. ²⁹ And thou shalt overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold.

³⁰ And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle ^d according to the fashion thereof which was shewed thee in the mount.

³¹ And ^e thou shalt make a veil of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen of cunning work: with cherubims shall it be made: ³² And thou shalt hang it upon four pillars of shittim wood overlaid with gold: their hooks shall be of gold, upon the four sockets of silver. ³³ And thou shalt hang up the veil under the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither within the veil ^f the ark of the testimony: and the veil shall divide unto you between ^g the holy place and the most holy. ³⁴ And ^h thou shalt put the mercy seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place. ³⁵ And ⁱ thou shalt set the table without the veil, and ^k the candlestick over against the table on the side of the tabernacle toward the south: and thou shalt put the table on the north side.

³⁶ And thou ^l shalt make an hanging for the door of the tent, of blue, and ^d ch. 25. 9, 40. & 27. 8. Acts 7. 44. Heb. 8. 5.

^e ch. 36. 35. Lev. 16. 2. 2 Chron. 3. 14. Matt. 27. 51. Heb. 9. 3.

^f ch. 25. 16. & 40. 21. ^g Lev. 16. 2. Heb. 9. 2. 3. ^h ch. 25. 21. & 40. 20. ⁱ Heb. 9. 5. ^j ch. 40. 22. ^k Heb. 9. 2. ^l ch. 40. 24.

22. the sides of the tabernacle westward] Rather, the end westward; literally, seaward; so in v. 23, side is end.

24. coupled] Literally, twined, or double. It seems that each board was half a cubit thick: see Kalisch, p. 477.

27. two sides westward] See v. 22.

31. a veil] Heb. paroceth; καταπέτασμα (Sept.). See on v. 36.

— of cunning work] Woven (see v. 1), and seen on both sides. The outer Veil, which was wrought with needlework, was seen only on one side (Maimonides on the Sanctuary, chap. 8).

33. within the veil] See Heb. ix. 3. 8. 24, 25.

— the holy place] The figure of Heaven itself: see below, on Heb. ix. 11, 12; and note above, on xxv. 1.

35. the table—the candlestick] According to the Ancient Expositors, the Table with the Shewbread stood two cubits and a half from the north side; and the golden seven-branched Candlestick at a like distance from the south side; and the golden Altar of Incense between them; and all of them were ten cubits from each of the veils.

36. an hanging] The outer Veil is not called by the same name as the inner Veil, which hung before the Holy of Holies (v. 31—33). Here door means wide opening. Levit. viii. 3.

The inner Veil (v. 31) is called paroceth, from the root parac, to separate (Gesen., 690). But the outer Veil, or hanging, is only called masac, from sacac, to cover (Gesen., p. 586); and is called ἐπίσπαστρον by Sept., and more rarely καταπέτασμα. The cloud itself is called a masac (Ps. cv. 39). The former is called καταπέτασμα by Sept., and in the Gospels (Matt. xxvii. 51. Mark xv. 38. Luke xxiii. 35); and by St. Paul (Heb. vi. 19), and δεύτερον καταπέτασμα (Heb. ix. 3).

No cherubim were woven in this outer Veil; and the sockets of its pillars were not of silver, but of brass.

Three gradations of approach to the presence of God were marked by these arrangements.

In the outer court, every Israelite approached God by means of the burnt-offerings offered on the brazen altar.

In the Sanctuary or Holy Place, the People came near to God by the Ministry of the Priests; and the ancient Church of God presented herself symbolically to God in the twelve Loaves of Shewbread (see xxv. 23—30); and she was represented by the Seven-branched Golden Candlestick, receiving illumination from God, and diffusing Light through the Sanctuary; and her prayers ascended from the Golden Altar of Incense before the Veil.

Into the Holiest Place, or Holy of Holies, where was the Presence of God in the Cloud, over the Mercy Seat, and the Cherubim overshadowing the Ark, she could only enter once a year, on the Great Day of Atonement, by the Ministry of the High Priest (Lev. xvi. 2. 15. 34); “the Holy Ghost this signifying that the way into the holiest was not yet made manifest, while as the first Tabernacle was standing” (Heb. ix. 8).

But now that Christ is come, a High Priest of the good things to come, by a greater and more perfect Tabernacle, and having entered in once for all within the Veil as our forerunner (Heb. vi. 19), even Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant (ix. 15), and is to us made a High Priest for ever, and who has gone within the Veil with His own blood, even into Heaven itself (ix. 24), let us therefore come boldly to the throne of purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework. ³⁷ And thou shalt make for the hanging ^m five pillars of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold, and their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt cast five sockets of brass for them.

XXVII. ¹ And thou shalt make ^a an altar of shittim wood, five cubits long, and five cubits broad; the altar shall be foursquare: and the height thereof shall be three cubits. ² And thou shalt make the horns of it upon the four corners thereof: his horns shall be of the same: and ^b thou shalt overlay it with brass. ³ And thou shalt make his pans to receive his ashes, and his shovels, and his basons, and his fleshhooks, and his firepans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of brass. ⁴ And thou shalt make for it a grate of network of brass; and upon the net shalt thou make four brazen rings in the four corners thereof. ⁵ And thou shalt put it under the compass of the altar beneath, that the net may be even to the midst of the altar. ⁶ And thou shalt make staves for the altar, staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with brass. ⁷ And the staves shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be upon the two sides of the altar, to bear it. ⁸ Hollow with boards shalt thou make it:

^c as [†] it was shewed thee in the mount, so shall they make it. ⁹ And ^d thou shalt make the court of the tabernacle: for the south side southward there shall be hangings for the court of fine twined linen of an hundred cubits long for one side: ¹⁰ And the twenty pillars thereof and their twenty sockets shall be of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver. ¹¹ And likewise for the north side in length there shall be hangings of an hundred cubits long, and his twenty pillars and their twenty sockets of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver. ¹² And for the grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need (Heb. iv. 16. Cp. Theodoret, here, Qu. 60).

— with needlework] Embroidered: see on v. 1.

THE ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERING.

CH. XXVII. 1. thou shalt make an altar] Heb. the altar. The Sacred Text now proceeds to describe what was in the outer court, in the open air, viz. the brazen Altar of burnt-offerings;—an altar, mizbech, from zabach, to slay, and zebach, a slain sacrifice, as distinguished from minchah, a gift, a bloodless offering, and olah, a burnt-offering. Zebach denotes a sacrifice, of which only a part was consumed, such as expiatory and eucharistic offerings, and signifies sometimes a sacrificial feast (x. 25. Lev. iii. 1; iv. 10; xvii. 8. Num. xv. 5. 1 Sam. i. 21. Cp. above, xviii. 12; and Gesen., pp. 238. 461).

This Altar, θυσιαστήριον, was placed in the outer court in the open air, for obvious reasons, that all might bring their sacrifices to it, and that the steam of the sacrifices might evaporate. In Solomon's Temple it was in the Court of the Priests (2 Chron. viii. 12. Cp. Joel ii. 17. See also Bähr., Symbolik, i. 480; Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 194; Kalisch, p. 484; Pérouse, J. J. S., in Smith's Bibl. Dict. i. 53).

— five cubits long] The top of the Altar was four-square,—a token of completeness and universality, like the most holy place (2 Chron. iii. 8), and the heavenly city (Rev. xxi. 16. Ezek. xlvi. 20. Cp. note before Rev. xii.).

2. horns] Symbols of power, protection, and help, and also of glory. (See Jer. xlviii. 25. Hab. iii. 4. Luke i. 69.) To these horns of the Altar the distressed fled for refuge (1 Kings i. 51). On them the blood was sprinkled (xxix. 12. Lev. iv. 7), and to them the victims perhaps were bound (Ps. cxviii. 27).

— with brass] And its implements (vr. 3, 4) were of the same metal, emblematic of strength and light. See Zech. vi. 1. Rev. i. 15.

3. firepans] See Num. xvi. 6.

4. grate] Heb. micbar, from cabar, to braid: cp. Latin, cribrum, a sieve.

5. compass] Carcob, a word only found here, and in xxxviii. 4. It is rendered border or margin by Syriac, and circle by Onkelos; from carac, to surround: see Gesen., 414.

8. Hollow with boards shalt thou make it] In order to receive the earth, with which it was to be filled, wherever it was set, the framework, above described (which was consecrated with holy oil, xl. 10. Num. vii. 1), being made portable, and easy to be removed from place to place in the wanderings of the Israelites.

The Altar was not to be made of hewn stones (see xx. 25); but by the provisions above mentioned, an Altar was immediately ready for use, wherever they halted in their march. Here was a practical exhortation to thankfulness and worship of God in every place of their earthly pilgrimage, and a prophetic intimation that all the Earth would be consecrated to Him; and that from the rising of the sun, even unto the going down of the same, His name should be great among the Gentiles, and in every place a pure offering be offered unto Him (Mal. i. 11).

There was, doubtless, a symbolical meaning in all the directions with regard to this Altar.

The Altar seems to have represented CHRIST in His two Natures. There was the Earth within, representing the Human Nature, and without there was the strength and splendour of the brass, symbolizing the Divine. As man, He was able to suffer; as God, He alone could satisfy. The Altar was the place of bloodshedding, by which man was reconciled to God. It is Christ's blood poured out which is our Peace. The Altar was anointed with holy oil; so is Christ, the Anointed of God. The four-square form of the Altar may have represented the perfection and universality of His offering; the four Horns of the Altar, to which men fled for protection, and on which they laid hold (1 Kings i. 50; ii. 28), represented the power of His sacrifice, and the protection and salvation offered to all in the four corners of the Earth, who "flee for refuge to lay hold of the hope set before them" (Heb. vi. 18). The stones of the Altar, when stones were used, were not to be hewn, wrought by hand or tool of man (see xx. 24, 25). Man has no part in his own redemption. That is the work of God in Christ alone.

9. the court of the tabernacle] The outer court. Heb. chatzar, from chatzar, to surround, to enclose, to fence in; ἀλλή (Sept.), atrium (Vulg.): see note before ch. xxvi.

breadth of the court on the west side shall be hangings of fifty cubits: their pillars ten, and their sockets ten. ¹³ And the breadth of the court on the east side eastward shall be fifty cubits. ¹⁴ The hangings of one side of the gate shall be fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three. ¹⁵ And on the other side shall be hangings fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three. ¹⁶ And for the gate of the court shall be an hanging of twenty cubits, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needle-work: and their pillars shall be four, and their sockets four. ¹⁷ All the pillars round about the court shall be filleted with silver; their hooks shall be of silver, and their sockets of brass. ¹⁸ The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth † fifty every where, and the height five cubits of fine † Heb. sfoty by sfoty. twined linen, and their sockets of brass. ¹⁹ All the vessels of the tabernacle in all the service thereof, and all the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court, shall be of brass.

²⁰ And *thou shalt command the children of Israel, that they bring thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamp † to burn always. ²¹ In the tabernacle of the congregation † without the vail, which is before the testimony, † Aaron and his sons shall order it from evening to morning before the LORD: † it shall be a statute for ever unto their generations on the behalf of the children of Israel.

XXVIII. ¹ And take thou unto thee † Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, even Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's

e Lev. 21. 2.
† Heb. to ascend up.
f ch. 26. 31, 32.
g ch. 30. 8.
1 Sam. 3. 3.
2 Chron. 13. 11.
h ch. 28. 43. & 29. 9, 28.
Lev. 3. 17. & 16. 34. & 24. 9.
Num. 18. 23. & 19. 21.
1 Sam. 30. 25.
a Num. 18. 7.
Heb. 5. 1, 4.

16. an hanging] Masac: see above, xxvi. 36: cp. xxxvi. 37.
20.] Here begins a new Parashah, or Proper Lesson of the Law, and is continued to xxx. 10.

The parallel Haphtarah, or Proper Lesson of the Prophets, is Ezekiel xliii. 10—27, which describes the future repentance of Israel, and renewal of God's House and its sacrifices.

— pure oil olive beaten] “Fresh oil” (Ps. xcii. 10), made from young green olives, beaten in a mortar; it gives a clearer and purer light than that which is made from the ripe olives, which are trodden with the feet (Micah vi. 15), or cast into oil-presses (torcularia) or mills (see Plin., xii. 60; xv. 3; and other authorities, in Winer, R. W. B. ii. 171), and it was therefore preferred for holy uses.

So may youthful hearts and minds,—like those of Samuel, Daniel, and St. John,—particularly if disciplined by sorrow, and beateu and bruised in the mortar of affliction, be specially pleasing to God, and be made recipients of spiritual grace, and diffusive of spiritual light.

— the lamp] Or Golden Seven-branched Candlestick. See above, on xxv. 31—39; and the note on v. 21.

21. before the testimony] The two Tables of the Law: see xxv. 21.

— Aaron and his sons shall order it from evening to morning before the LORD] Daily, by trimming the lamps of the Golden Candlestick, and supplying them with pure fresh oil, and by causing them to burn brightly.

The Church, which bears the light of Christ, was typified by the Seven-branched Candlestick (S. Irenæus, v. 20. Cp. Rev. i. 12, 20; xi. 4).

Here then is a solemn exhortation to all Bishops and Clergy to watch continually, and to give heed to doctrine (Acts xx. 28. 1 Tim. iv. 13, 14. 2 Tim. i. 13; ii. 15; iv. 2—5), lest it be adulterated with corrupt admixtures of heretical teaching; and to take care that the Golden Candlestick of the Church, of which they are the Ministers, may diffuse the pure light of Evangelical truth, lest He, Who is the Lord of the Tabernacle, should remove their Candlestick from its place: see Rev. ii. 5; xi. 4.

Doubtless for such reasons as these Almighty God vouchsafed to give directions for the making of the snuffers, and the snuff-dishes (xxv. 38; xxxvii. 23), and to order that they should be of pure gold. And the Holy Spirit has recorded for our learning these minute directions, concerning matters which might otherwise have seemed trivial. These injunctions concerning the implements of the Candlestick have a spiritual meaning; they show the will of God with regard to the substance, of which it was a type; they declare His Divine Will, that the Church should maintain sound doctrine, and be “the Pillar and ground of the Truth” (1 Tim. iii. 15). The Jews, who do not accept the Gospel, do not understand the meaning of the Divine Commands concerning the furniture of the Tabernacle. But the true Israelites comprehend them. They know that these are commands to them to keep their lights always burning, and to have ever before their eyes the light of God's Holy Word (S. Hilary, in Ps. xviii.).

The Sacred Lamps of the Golden Candlestick were to be trimmed every evening, and to be supplied with fresh oil (v. 21. Cp. xxx. 7, 8. 2 Chron. xiii. 11). In order to make the light literally “a perpetual light,” and because there was no other light in the Holy Place, surrounded as it was with a fourfold curtain, it seems to have been customary to keep one light at least always burning. The phrase, “Ere the lamp of God went out,” in 1 Sam. iii. 3, has been supposed to intimate that in the day-time all the lights of the whole Candlestick were not kept burning in that age: cp. Lightfoot, on the Temple Service, xiv. 14.

CH. XXVIII.] From a description of Holy Things the Sacred Text now proceeds to speak of the appointment and attire of Holy Persons.

1. take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother] By the special call of God. No man taketh this honour to himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron (Heb. v. 4), and as Christ Himself was (Matt. iii. 16, 17. Luke iii. 21, 22. Heb. v. 5. Ps. cx. 4).

God says, Take Aaron thy brother; every high priest is taken from among men (Heb. v. 1). Christ must become man to be a Priest for men. The Son of God must be also Man, to be “the Mediator between God and men;” and therefore, as such, He is called “the man Christ Jesus” (1 Tim. ii. 5).

— that he may minister unto me in the priest's office] This seems to be the true rendering, and is supported by the authority of all the Ancient Versions. On account of the suffix vau, Kalisch renders it “to initiate him in the Priest's office.”

The word cohen, Priest, is from cahan, to plead a cause, as an intercessor, mediator, or advocate (Gesen., p. 385); and thus it well describes the office of Christ.

b ch. 29. 5, 29. &
31. 10. & 29. 1, 2.
Lev. 8. 7, 30.
Num. 20. 26, 28.
c ch. 31. 6. &
36. 1.
d ch. 31. 3. &
35. 30, 31.
e ver. 15.
f ver. 6.
g ver. 31.
h ver. 39.

sons. ² And ^b thou shalt make holy garments for Aaron thy brother for glory and for beauty. ³ And ^c thou shalt speak unto all that are wise hearted, ^d whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom, that they may make Aaron's garments to consecrate him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. ⁴ And these are the garments which they shall make; ^e a breastplate, and ^f an ephod, and ^g a robe, and ^h a brodered coat, a mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. ⁵ And they shall take gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen.

ch. 39. 2.

⁶ And they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of purple, of scarlet, and fine twined linen, with cunning work. ⁷ It shall have the two shoulder-pieces thereof joined at the two edges thereof; and so it shall be joined together.

|| Or, embroidered.

⁸ And the || curious girdle of the ephod, which is upon it, shall be of the same, according to the work thereof; even of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. ⁹ And thou shalt take two onyx stones, and grave on them the names of the children of Israel: ¹⁰ Six of their names on one stone, and the other six names of the rest on the other stone, according to their birth. ¹¹ With the work of an engraver in stone, like the engravings of a signet, shalt thou engrave the two stones with the names of the children of Israel: thou shalt make them to be set in ouches of gold. ¹² And thou shalt put the two stones upon the shoulders of the ephod for stones of memorial unto the children of Israel: and ^k Aaron shall bear their names before the LORD upon his two shoulders ¹ for a memorial. ¹³ And thou shalt make ouches of gold; ¹⁴ And two chains of pure gold at the ends; of wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

k ver. 29.
ch. 39. 7.
l See Josh. 4. 7.
Zech. 6. 14.

m ch. 39. 8.

¹⁵ And ^m thou shalt make the breastplate of judgment with cunning work;

2. for glory and for beauty] For honour (cabod) and for beauty (from root paar, to be adorned); such is the glory of Christ, our Great High Priest (Ps. viii. 5), the King of Glory (Ps. xxiv. 7: cp. John i. 14); full of grace are His lips (Ps. xlv. 3).

3. whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom] As Bezaleel and Aholiab (xxx. 6; xxxvi. 2). God filled them with wisdom: "every good gift cometh down from the Father of lights" (James i. 17); and "if any lack wisdom, let him ask of God, and it shall be given him" (James i. 5).

4. And these are the garments] Cp. Lev. viii. 7, 8, where they are mentioned in the order in which they were put on: see also below, xxxix. 1—31, where they are described.

The High Priest's garments were as follows:—

(1) The mitre (mitsnepheth), with the golden plate, inscribed "Holiness to the Lord."

(2) The breastplate (choshen), with the Urim and Thummim.

(3) The Ephod.

(4) The long blue robe (meil).

(5) The turban.

(6) The girdle.

(7) The drawers.

(8) The coat or tunic (celthoneh: χιτών).

The High Priest and the other Priests had no covering for their feet: to be barefoot was a mark of reverence (see iii. 5).

Concerning the garments of the High Priest, see Ecclus. xlv. 6—12; Josephus (Ant. iii. 7), and S. Jerome de Veste Sacerdotali, Epist. 128, ad Fabiolam; and the treatises of Braunius, Schröder, Bähr, and others enumerated in Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 504; and Kalisch, pp. 524—548; and Plumpre in Smilh's Bib. Diet. ii. 917.

The number of the High Priest's garments was eight (see Maimonides on the Sanctuary, ch. x.), who says, that "the ministry of a High Priest was unlawful, if he ministered with less than the eight garments;" eight is the number of blessedness (see on Matt. v. 2. Luke xxiv. 1. Rev. i. 8; xvii. 10, 11). Is this a figure of the perfect beauty of the Blessed One? — a robe] The Septuagint renders this by ποδήρη, a word adopted by St. John in the Apocalypse to describe the priestly attire of Christ (Rev. i. 13).

5. take gold, and blue] The same colours as in the Tabernacle.

6. the ephod] From aphad, to put on, to bind on. It is called ἐπιώμια by Sept. and Josephus, and "superhumeral" by Vulg., as being placed upon the shoulders; the type of government and power (Isa. ix. 6; xxii. 22).

— with cunning work] Woven (see on xxvi. 1). The Ephod harmonized in colour and workmanship with the veil of the Holy of Holies (xxvi. 31). It was the outermost of the Priest's garments, and served to hold fast the breastplate.

8. curious girdle of—gold] Heb. chesheb (cp. xxxix. 5). So called from the texture with which it was made (see on xxvi. 1). It was woven out of the same piece with the Ephod.

Christ is described as our High Priest in the heavenly Temple, clothed with a robe down to the feet, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle (Rev. i. 12, 13).

9. two onyx stones] "Stones of memorial" (v. 12), having the names of the twelve tribes engraven, six on each onyx stone (see v. 10), which served to clasp the ephod on the shoulders of the High Priest. The High Priest bearing the ephod, symbolized Christ Himself bearing on His shoulders the government of His Church, and supporting the weight of her sins, which He bore in His own body on the tree (1 Pet. ii. 24); and He is described as bearing His lost sheep on His shoulders (Luke xv. 5). And as the High Priest had the names of all the tribes clasped on His shoulders in the Ephod, so Christ knows all His sheep by name (John x. 3), and in Him we have an High Priest who is touched with a feeling of our infirmities and bears the burden of our sorrows (Heb. iv. 15).

11. ouches] Sockets, in which the two onyx stones were set.

THE BREASTPLATE OF THE HIGH PRIEST.

15. the breastplate] Choshen (from chashan, to be adorned). Cp. xxxix. 8. Lev. viii. 8. It is called λογέιον by Sept., Philo, Josephus, and Epiphanius: cp. Ecclus. xlv. 12, as containing the oracle; and rationale by Vulg., and the Latin fathers: see for example S. Jerome, Epist. 128.

after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it; of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen shalt thou make it. ¹⁶ Four-square it shall be being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof. ¹⁷ And thou shalt † set in it settings of stones, even four rows of stones: the first row shall be a || sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this shall be the first row. ¹⁸ And the second row shall be an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond. ¹⁹ And the third row a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst. ²⁰ And the fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper: they shall be set in gold in their † inclosings. ²¹ And the stones shall be with the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet; every one with his name shall they be according to the twelve tribes. ²² And thou shalt make upon the breastplate chains at the ends n ch. 39. 10, &c.

† Heb. fit in it
fillings of stone.
|| Or, ruby.

† Heb. fillings.

It is called in the sacred text the choshen or ornament of judgment, mishpat, because by inspection of it the High Priest was enabled to ascertain God's will, and to pronounce judgment accordingly: cp. Num. xxvii. 21.

It was to be on the heart of the High Priest (v. 29, 30), and in it were "the oracular gems, which shone on Aaron's breast" (Milton): see v. 17.

16. a span] Half a cubit.

17. settings of stones] Twelve jewels, having on them the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel: these were set in the breastplate worn on the heart of the High Priest; and he was commanded to bear them continually upon his heart when he went in before the Lord (v. 29: cp. Ecclus. xiv. 10, 11).

The Priest had their names in the Ephod, which he bore on his shoulders; and he had their names on the breastplate, which he wore near his heart.

God commanded Moses to have "the twelve tribes carved in Aaron's breastplate next his heart, to show that in care he was to bear them; but he had them engraven also in two onyx stones, and then set upon his very shoulders to show he must bear them in patience too" (Bp. Andrewes, i. p. 25).

So Christ, our great High Priest, bore on His shoulders the sins and sorrows of His People, the Israel of God (see v. 9); and their names are engraven on His heart (Cant. viii. 6). He gathers His lambs with His arm, and carries them in His bosom (Isa. xl. 11). He loves His Church, whom He vouchsafes to call His Sponse and Body, and He gave His life for her. She was formed out of His side when He died for her on the Cross, as Eve was formed out of the side of Adam (Gen. ii. 21—23); and He knoweth all that are His (2 Tim. ii. 19); "they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels" (Mal. iii. 17). When He ministers in the heavenly temple, He pleads for them, and presents their prayers to God, and wears the name of every one of His saints in the ephod on His shoulders, and in the breastplate at his heart.

Here also is an admonition to us of our duty, as well as a demonstration of our privileges. If we are to be borne on Christ's shoulders and on His breast, we must shine like precious stones.

—four rows of stones] In the variety, as well as the beauty of the twelve precious stones, we see a manifestation of the manifold love of God in Christ, giving all gifts and graces to His Church by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. xii. 4—9. 28. 30).

The twelve precious stones in the breastplate of the High Priest coincided with the twelve precious stones which are in the foundation-stones in the walls of the heavenly Jerusalem in the Apocalypse; and thus a Christian significance is given to these stones by the Holy Spirit Himself in the Scriptures of the New Testament (see Rev. xxi. 19, 20).

The breastplate of the High Priest, garnished with oracular gems, was like a beautiful vesture which might be put off; but the twelve precious stones in the Heavenly Jerusalem are set in the very foundations of the city, and will never be removed. Their glory and felicity is sure, infinite, and eternal.

Concerning the gems in the High Priest's breastplate, see the treatise of S. Epiphanius, tom. ii. p. 225; S. Jerome, Epist. 128, ad Fabiolum; and the valuable work of Corsi, Pietre Antiche, Roma, 1828.

—a sardius] Odem, from adam, to be red; a sardine stone, so called from Sardis, as being found there (cp. Plin., xxxviii. 7), and like the carneian, so called from caro, carnis,—flesh-coloured (cp. Rev. iv. 3; xxi. 20).

—topaz] See on Rev. xxi. 20. Its Hebrew name pitdah is probably from the root pitā (found in Sanscrit), pale-green; see Corsi, Pietre Antiche, p. 191.

—carbuncle] Rather, smaragd, or emerald. In the Hebrew it is called bareketh, from barak, to send forth lightning (cp. Ezek. i. 13); and it is rendered σμάραγδος by Sept. and Josephus; and smaragdus by Vulg. This was the colour of the Rainbow round the throne in the Apocalypse (Rev. iv. 3. Cp. Rev. xxi. 19).

Some have supposed that on it was written the name of Levi, "who was to teach God's Law and Judgments, whose lightnings illuminate the world;" and of Levi came Moses and Aaron and the Priesthood, who shone like emeralds in the Church, and John the Baptist, under the Gospel, who was "a burning and shining light."

18. emerald] Or rather carbuncle: Heb. nophec; rendered ἐνθαξ, "live coal," by Joseph. and Sept., and carbunculus by Vulg.; a deep red colour, tinged with scarlet: to this class of gems belong the ruby, garnet, &c. (Corsi, p. 184.) It is probably the same as what is called chalcledony in Rev. xxi. 19.

—sapphire] Heb. sapir. Heavenly blue. See on xxiv. 10, and Rev. xxi. 19. Corsi, p. 183.

—diamond] So Aben Ezra; Pers., Græc., Venet. Heb. yahalom, from halam, to strike. A very hard gem; rendered iaspis, by Sept. and Vulg., but that occurs in v. 20. Others suppose it to be the sardonyx or chalcledony; others, the emerald (Gesen., p. 339; Kalisch, p. 536).

19. ligure] Heb. leshem. The Hebrew expositors say, that on it the name of Dan was written; cp. Joshua xix. 47, where Leshem is a city of Dan. It is rendered ligure by Sept. and Vulg., from Liguria in Northern Italy, where it is found: probably it is the same colour as jacinth or hyacinth (see xxv. 5, and Rev. ix. 17; xxi. 19; and Corsi, p. 192).

—agate] Heb. shebo; similar to chrysoprasus in Rev. xx. 20 (Ainsworth), which is a species of agate (cp. Corsi, pp. 150. 155. 163), as is also the chalcledony and sardonyx.

—amethyst] Heb. achlamah; of a purple violet colour, tending towards red: see Corsi, p. 194; Gesen., 321. It is the twelfth of the stones mentioned in the Apocalypse (xxi. 20).

20. beryl] Or rather chrysolite (Sept., Vulg.). Heb. tarshish, as being found, as is supposed, in Tartessus, between the two mouths of the Baetis or Guadalquivir; of a lustrous golden hue (cp. Rev. xxi. 20. Corsi, p. 189).

—onyx] Heb. shoham; beryl: see Gen. ii. 12, from shaham, to be pale; Sept. and Vulg., onyx: so called from its likeness to the human unguis, or nail. Gen. ii. 12.

—jasper] Heb. yashpheh, derived probably from yashaph, to shine; a very bright gem of various colours, green, purple, blue, red; sometimes of one colour, sometimes tinted with various hues: see Corsi, p. 137.

21. with the names of the children of Israel, twelve—according to the twelve tribes] The Targumists say that they were arranged thus:—Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun (sons of Leah), Dan, Naphtali (sons of Bilhab), Gad, Asher (sons of Zilpah), Joseph, Benjamin (sons of Rachel). Josephus and Rashi say that they were arranged according to their ages,—Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, Asher, Issachar, Zebulun, Joseph, Benjamin.

But the order of the names is not revealed in God's Word; nor is the order given of the names of the Twelve Apostles in the walls of the heavenly city in the Apocalypse (Rev. xxi. 12). Perhaps this silence is designed to serve a sacred purpose.

of wreathen work of pure gold. ²³ And thou shalt make upon the breastplate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate. ²⁴ And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breastplate. ²⁵ And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt fasten in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod before it. ²⁶ And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breastplate in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward. ²⁷ And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the forepart thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod. ²⁸ And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod. ²⁹ And Aaron shall bear the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgment upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, ° for a memorial before the Lord continually.

o ver. 12.

p Lev. 8. 8.
Num. 27. 21.
Deut. 33. 8.
1 Sam. 28. 6.
Ezra 2. 63. Neh. 7. 65.

³⁰ And ^p thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgment the Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before Christ loves all His People. The Lord knoweth them that are His (2 Tim. ii. 19), but He does not now declare their relative places; and there will be no rivalry in heaven.

It is true that in the sealing of the Saints in the Book of Revelation the Tribes of the Spiritual Israel are mentioned in a specific order: Rev. vii. 5—8. But, as is there shown, those Tribes do not represent persons, but spiritual qualities and characters, for which reason Dan is altogether excluded.

²⁹ And Aaron shall bear the names of the children of Israel] See v. 17.

THE URIM AND THUMMIM.

³⁰. thou shalt put (or give) in the breastplate of judgment the Urim and the Thummim] The Urim and the Thummim, i. e. the lights and the perfections. Urim is the plural of Ur, light, flame, connected with or; whence Aurum, Aurora, and perhaps Oriens (Gesen., p. 23); and Thummim is plural from Thom, perfection (Gesen., p. 866). Hence Aquila and Theodotion rightly translate these words φωτισμοῦς καὶ τελειώσεως, "illuminations and perfections;" and so Arabic and Syriac.

The Septuagint less literally, δὴλωσις καὶ ἀλήθειαν; and the Vulgate still less so, Doctrinam et Veritatem. The rendering of Thummim by Ἀλήθεια seems to have led to the notion (a very strange one), that in the Urim and Thummim of the Hebrew High Priest, there was a reference to the figure of Truth suspended around the neck of the chief Judge of Egypt (Diod. Sic., i. 48. 75; Ælian, V. II. xiv. 34; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 644).

Much has been written, by à Lapide, Buxtorf, Drusius, Carpov, Hottinger, Spencer, Braun, Michaelis, Rosenmüller, Schroeder, Gesenius, Jahn, Baumgarten, Kalisch, Keil, Archæol. § 39; Plumptre, in Smith, Bibl. Diet. iii. 1600, and others,—on the question, What was the Urim and Thummim? and on the mode in which the Divine will was manifested thereby: see Pfeiffer, Dubia Sacra, p. 129, for a list of the works; and Winer, R. W. B. ii. pp. 644—648.

What the Holy Spirit reveals to us in Holy Scripture concerning the Urim and Thummim is as follows:—

- (1) Negatively.
- (2) Affirmatively.

(1) Negatively, There is no command given by God to Moses to make them, but only to insert them. And in the thirty-ninth chapter of Exodus, where is a description of the making of the robes of the High Priest, there is no mention of the making of the Urim and Thummim; and in Lev. viii. 8, it is said that Moses put the breastplate upon Aaron, and that he put in the breastplate the Urim and the Thummim.

Therefore it is evident that the gems existed first. They were precious stones from the mineral treasures of the earth, and were graven with the names of the twelve Tribes of Israel. And when this had been done, then afterwards the Urim and Thummim were received from God by Moses,—not made by him, or by any human workmanship,—and were placed by Moses in the breastplate of the High Priest. If the Urim and Thummim had been made, there would have been some account when they were made, by whom, and of what they were made,—which there is not.

In Num. xxvii. 19. 21, God says to Moses concerning Joshua, "Thou shalt set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation, and give him a charge in their sight, and put some of thine honour upon him. . . . And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask (counsel) for him after the judgment of Urim before the Lord."

Moses says, in the benediction of Levi, "Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one" (Deut. xxxiii. 8). There seem to be examples of inquiries of the Lord, by means of the Urim and Thummim, in Judg. i. 1; xx. 18. 28. 1 Sam. xxiii. 9—12; xxviii. 6.

In 1 Sam. xxviii. 6, it is said, that when Saul inquired of the Lord, "the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets." There were still the gems in the breastplate of the High Priest; but the Spirit in them was silent. It would not speak to Saul; he had grieved the Spirit, because he had disobeyed God.

From Ezra ii. 63, and Neh. vii. 65, it appears, that the High Priesthood did not possess the Urim and Thummim after the captivity; but God's people hoped that in due time "a Priest would stand up with Urim and with Thummim."

This is confessed by the Jewish Doctors. See Talmud, Babylon, in Yoma, cap. 1; and Bp. Pearson, on the Creed (Art. ii. p. 83). They had the breastplate of the High Priest (as Maimonides says); but they were not able to put the Urim and Thummim into it.

This, then, seems to be clear, that the Urim and Thummim were not made by man. They were not the gems of the breastplate themselves, nor were they any feeling or affection excited in the mind of the High Priest when he looked at the gems.

(2) Affirmatively. The Urim and Thummim were given by God to Moses, and were placed by Moses in the breastplate of the High Priest. They were like a divine spirit, given by God to Moses, and put by him into the breastplate, and beaming and flashing forth, as it were, from the gems, and making itself visible to the eye, and perhaps audible to the ear of the High Priest, when engaged in ministering before God, and when resorting to Him for illumination and perfection.

We have analogies illustrating this spiritual agency even from the Creation itself.

"The Lord God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul" (Gen. ii. 7). And not only so, but God also "took of the spirit of Moses, and put it on the seventy elders" (Num. xi. 17. 25. 29); and God commanded Moses to put some of his honour upon Joshua; and "Joshua was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him" (Num. xvii. 20. Deut. xxxiv. 9).

It appears then, that Moses was directed and empowered the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually.

³¹ And ^q thou shalt make the robe of the ephod all of blue. ³² And there ^q ch. 39. 22. shall be an hole in the top of it, in the midst thereof: it shall have a binding of woven work round about the hole of it, as it were the hole of an habergeon, that it be not rent. ³³ And beneath upon the || hem of it thou shalt make ¹ Or, skirt's. pomegranates of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the hem thereof; and bells of gold between them round about: ³⁴ A golden bell and a by God to put, or (as the word properly signifies) to give a spiritual quality to the gems of the breastplate; and the High Priest, wearing the breastplate before the Lord, was enabled to read God's will, by communion with this spiritual gift.

We have a remarkable illustration of this infusion of spiritual powers into inanimate objects, when used in relation to spiritual purposes, in the Christian Church. God vouchsafes to direct and to enable His Evangelical Priests to impart spiritual virtue to the elements, which are solemnly set apart and consecrated by them for the administration of the Christian Sacraments, according to the institution of Christ.

The elements are like the jewels of the breastplate; they are inanimate things; but they are made capable of conveying spiritual grace to worthy recipients.

When the Evangelical Priest consecrates the Bread and Wine, he puts, as it were, the holy Urim and Thummim into it. The Urim and Thummim of Divine grace speak to the faithful recipient therein. But to the impenitent they do not speak, as God gave no answer by Urim to Saul. The breastplate is visible; but the Divine reply is not audible.

In other respects the Urim and Thummim correspond to the Christian Sacraments. Aquila well translates Urim by φωτισμοί, illuminations; and this is the name given in Scripture, and by the Primitive Church, to the Sacrament of Baptism: see on Heb. vi. 4; x. 32. Aquila also translates Thummim by τελειώσεις,—a word which, in a Christian sense, represents the full participation of sacred mysteries: see on 1 Cor. ii. 6. Confirmation is called the consummating unction, χρῖστος τελειωτική (see on Acts viii. 15—18); and Communicants were called τέλειοι, and the Holy Eucharist is τὸ τέλειον. See Bingham, i. ch. iv. sect. 1—3.

In another sense, also, the Urim and Thummim are instructive illustrations of the Christian Sacraments.

Many volumes have been written concerning the manner in which God spoke by the Urim and Thummim; but no one has ever solved the mystery. We know, that God did reveal Himself by Urim; but we do not know, how He did it.

Similarly, God “is made known to us in the breaking of bread.” We know that Christ is present in the Holy Eucharist; but we do not know, how He is there, and how He acts upon our souls: see below, on John vi. 25.

The Breastplate was called λογέιον, rationale. It was an emblem not only of the Sacraments, but of the Scriptures, which are only like lifeless minerals to the mere readers of the letter; but in which the Spirit of God is; and they sparkle with divine light to the faithful soul.

Again, the Ancient Church of Israel said, after the captivity, that “the Priest should not eat of the most holy things till there stood up a Priest with Urim and Thummim” (Ezra ii. 63. Neh. vii. 55). That Priest has now stood up in CHRIST, the Great High Priest, Who reveals to us God's Will, and delivers to us and interprets for us the Holy Scriptures; and He invites us all to eat of the holy things in the Communion of His most Blessed Body and Blood (Matt. xxvi. 26—29. Mark xiv. 22—24. Luke xxii. 19, 20).

Observe, also, that the original word, which is translated put, is nathan, to give: and this is very suitable to Divine grace (Rom. xi. 6), which is a free gift, and is dispensed by means of the Scriptures and Sacraments.

It must not be forgotten, also, that the gems on the High Priest's Breastplate were Twelve; and that the Breastplate in which they were set was four-square; and that they had engraved upon them the names of the Twelve Tribes of Israel; and that they correspond to the twelve gems in the foundations of the Heavenly City, in the Apocalypse, which was also four-square; and the true Apostolic Church of God has twelve stars on her crown: see on Rev. xii. 1. Thus the Breastplate, in which the gems were set, was typical of a living whole, namely, of the Universal Church of God. These jewels in the breastplate were borne on the heart of the High Priest, and were figures of the Christian Church, borne on the bosom of our Great High Priest, Jesus Christ, “who ever liveth to make intercession for us.”

Those gems were types of God's faithful people. He speaks of the saints as His jewels (Matt. xiii. 17. See also Rev. xxi. 11). The gems were minerals, taken out of the Earth; they were chosen and dedicated to God's service, and were engraved and polished by human skill and toil. But all this would have been useless, unless the Urim and Thummim of Divine light and perfection had been put into them by God. In like manner we are mere minerals by nature. We are of the earth, earthy. Human skill and labour is necessary; but it is of little avail, unless the Urim and Thummim of God's grace is infused into us, and we are placed upon the breast of Christ.

But the Urim and Thummim of the Holy Spirit of God has been promised by Christ Himself to His Church. He bestows upon her divine grace by the Word and Sacraments. He Himself is with her always to the end (Matt. xxviii. 20); and He has given her the Holy Ghost, to teach her all things, and to lead her into all truth (John xiv. 26; xvi. 16). And if we cleave to Christ, and to His Word,—if by faith and love we rest on His bosom, as St. John did,—if we are worn on His breast, “Who is the Light of the World;” “Who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life;” “in Whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” (Col. ii. 3); and “in Whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily” (John xiv. 6; viii. 12. Col. ii. 9); and “of Whose fulness we all receive, and grace for grace” (John i. 16); then the Urim and Thummim has been put in us, and will dwell in us for ever, we shall shine as holy gems and jewels, and we shall reflect, as in a spiritual mirror, the will and the Word of God.

Thus, then, we arrive at the following conclusion,—that the Urim and Thummim, put by Moses, at God's command, into the High Priest's breastplate, containing twelve different precious stones, engraved with the names of the Twelve Tribes of Israel, was a type of the illuminating and perfecting grace of God in the Holy Scriptures and Sacraments, and in all true believers, in the Apostolic Church, cleaving by faith, holiness, and love to the Everlasting High Priest, Jesus Christ our Lord, ministering before God for us in His heavenly Temple; and who, by virtue of their union with Him who is the great High Priest, and the True Sacrifice, are made “priests to God and the Father” (Rev. i. 6; v. 10; xx. 6), and are made “a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God in Jesus Christ” (1 Pet. ii. 5).

³¹ the robe of the ephod all of blue] The robe. Heb. meil: see Gesen. 493, called סֹדֶרֶת by Sept. as reaching down to the feet. It was worn next under the ephod, and therefore was called the “robe of the ephod” (v. 31), and above the tunic (described in v. 39). It was longer than the ephod, and shorter than the tunic; so that no part of the High Priest's dress (except the drawers, v. 42) was altogether covered. This robe had no sleeves, and was entirely woven, like our Blessed Lord's tunic (John xix. 23).

³³ pomegranates] The fruit of the pomegranate is filled with numerous pulpy seeds (whence its name), refreshing to the taste. It has beautiful crimson flowers; and therefore the pomegranate was an apt emblem of fruitfulness and beauty. It was introduced frequently as an ornament of Solomon's Temple (2 Kings xxv. 17. 2 Chron. iii. 16). The Church is compared to “an orchard of pomegranates,” on account of her fruitfulness in good works (Cant. iv. 13); and she gives delight to the Bridegroom by them (Cant. viii. 2. Cp. vi. 11). The pomegranate is described by Dr. Thomson, p. 584.

—bells of gold between them] That is, bells and pomegranates alternately, on the hem of the robe. The golden bells (paamonim, from paam, to strike; Gesen., p. 685) indicated by their sound to the People in the Court what time the High Priest went into the Sanctuary to minister there in their name, and reminded them that they should accompany him with their hearts and prayers. See v. 34; and cp. Eccles. xlv. 9.

pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the hem of the robe round about. ³⁵ And it shall be upon Aaron to minister : and his sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the Lord, and when he cometh out, that he die not.

³⁶ And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD. ³⁷ And thou shalt put it on a blue lace, that it may be upon the mitre; upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be. ³⁸ And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the Lord.

³⁹ And thou shalt embroider the coat of fine linen, and thou shalt make the mitre of fine linen, and thou shalt make the girdle of needlework.

⁴⁰ And for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and bonnets shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty.

⁴¹ And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him; and shalt anoint them, and consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office. ⁴² And thou shalt make them linen breeches to cover their nakedness; from the loins even unto the

r ch. 39. 30.
Zech. 14. 20.

s ver. 43.
Lev. 10. 17. &
22. 9.
Num. 18. 1.
Isa. 53. 11.
Ezek. 4. 4, 5, 6.
John 1. 29.
Heb. 9. 28.
1 Pet. 2. 24.
t Lev. 1. 4. &
22. 27. & 23. 11.
Isa. 56. 7.
u ver. 4.
ch. 39. 27, 28,
29, 41.
Ezek. 44. 17, 18.

w ch. 29. 7. &
30. 30. & 40. 15.
Lev. 10. 7.

† Heb. fill their hand.

x ch. 29. 9 & c.
Lev. 8. 2—36.

Heb. 7. 28.

y ch. 39. 28. Lev. 6. 10. & 16. 4. Ezek. 44. 18.

† Heb. flesh of the nakedness.

To retain such bells in earthly services, where Priests are visible in their ministry, as the Church of Rome does, seems inconsistent with their typical meaning, which is this:—that we, who worship on earth, should look upward with the eye of faith to our Great Unseen High Priest, ministering in the Sanctuary of Heaven, and lift up our hearts to Him. The words "Sursum corda," sound in the ear of faith in the Sacrifices of the Christian Sanctuary, especially in the Holy Eucharist, and she ascends in heart to Heaven, and worships there.

^{35.} that he die not] As he would, if he went in merely as a common person, without his priestly robes, to which the bells were attached (Bähr, Oehler).

^{36.} a plate of pure gold] A plate, or lamina; tsits, from tsuts, to shine brightly (Gesen., 705. 709; and see note below, Num. xv. 38), called in Greek πέραλον, a leaf, fastened on the forehead by a blue braid to the mitre, and inscribed Kodesh-le-Yehovah, "HOLINESS to the LORD" (see xxxix. 30),—a declaration of the privileges and duty of the High Priest, set apart to minister before God for the People (Lev. xxi. 1. 7, 8), and fully verified in Him "Who is holy, harmless, undefiled" (Heb. vii. 26), and "Who is made unto us Wisdom and Righteousness and Sanctification" (1 Cor. i. 30), and Who says to us, "Be ye holy; for I am holy" (1 Pet. i. 15, 16).

The inscription, "Holiness to the Lord," was placed on the forehead of the Hebrew High Priest; but in the Christian dispensation this inscription has been extended even to the "bells of the horses," on which the saints ride in glory (Zech. xiv. 20, 21. Cp. Rev. xix. 11—14, and xiv. 20).

^{37.} upon the mitre] The mitre, mitsnepheth, from tsanaph, to wind round (Gesen., 501), or it may be from metsach, the forehead, from matsach, to shine; cp. xxix. 6. Ezek. xxi. 26. Zech. iii. 5. Joseph., iii. 7. 7. It was more like a turban or tiara than a mitre (Winer, ii. 504), and is rendered tiara by Vulg.

^{38.} that Aaron may bear the iniquity of the holy things] Beur; Heb. nasa, to lift and carry away (Gesen., p. 567). See Lev. x. 17. Ps. xxxii. 1. Isa. xxxiii. 24.

Christ bears the weight of our sins (see on 1 Pet. ii. 24), and He also takes them away (see on John i. 29).

The High Priest, who was the figure of the Holy One, is represented as bearing the iniquity of the congregation (Lev. x. 17; and Num. xviii. 1). That, in the case of the High Priest, this was a figurative bearing and carrying away of sins, is evident from the fact that he was obliged to offer for his own sins, as well as for the sins of the people (Lev. ix. 7. Heb. v. 3; vii. 27; ix. 7), and one who is a sinner cannot take away sins. It is also said in the text, that Aaron is to bear the iniquity of the holy things (see Bp. Pearson, Art. ix. p. 352, note), and to bear the iniquity of the sanctuary, and of the priesthood (Num.

xviii. 1); whence it is evident, that the most holy acts in the holy place of the Levitical Priesthood were compassed with infirmity, and infected with the taint of sin, and required an expiation to be made in their behalf.

Therefore, as St. Paul teaches in the Epistle to the Hebrews (vii. 21—28), the High Priest, in bearing sin, was a figure of Him who, being "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners," can and does take away the sins of the World (John i. 29. Heb. ix. 28. 1 Pet. ii. 24. 1 John ii. 1, 2), and removes the iniquities, which His People commit even in their most religious actions, and makes them acceptable to God. Eph. i. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 5.

^{39.} thou shalt embroider the coat] Rather, thou shalt weave. The Hebrew verb shabats, here used, does not signify to embroider with a needle, but to weave together, especially to make chequer or diaper work (Gesen., 803; Kalisch, p. 526).

The coat or tunic (ceathonoth, compare Gr. χιτών, from cathan, to cover) with sleeves, and girt with a golden girdle (abnet), was the longest robe, and reached a little way below the blue robe (neil, described in vv. 31, 32), down to the ground. It was made of fine white linen, and enfolded the whole body, and represented the complete purity in which the High Priest, as the chief Minister of God, and the Representative and Embodiment of the Holy People, was invested; and in this respect it prefigured the perfect, spotless righteousness of our Great High Priest, who is robed with holiness; and therefore Christ was revealed in heaven to St. John as "clothed with a garment down to the feet, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle" (Rev. i. 13; cp. S. Irenæus, iv. 37); and He joins all His members together in Himself, and clothes His mystical body the Church in the robe of His holiness, and clasps them together in unity and love with the golden girdle of His own righteousness (Isa. xxii. 21).

— the mitre] See v. 37.

^{40.} coats] Tunics. See v. 39.

— bonnets] Migbaoth, turbans; from gaba, having the sense of roundness and height. Cp. caput, cap, cup, goblet (see Gesenius, p. 155). It was probably lower than the mitsnepheth of the High Priest (Kalisch, p. 528).

^{41.} thou shalt—consecrate them] Literally, thou shalt fill their hands; see below, xxix. 9. 24; and Lev. viii. 27.

^{42.} breeches] Rather drawers (michnasim; from canas, to gather together, to hide (Gesen., 405); they were not used by Orientals generally, but are reserved to the Priests for the reason stated in the text (cp. xx. 26). All carnal thoughts and desires are to be banished from the service of God; and the soul is to be lifted up to heaven and heavenly things (cp. Rev. iii. 18; xv. 6). By Adam's sin we were made naked, and despoiled of righteousness and grace, but Christ the Second thighs they shall † reach: ⁴³ And they shall be upon Aaron, and upon his † Heb. bc.

 sons, when they come in unto the tabernacle of the congregation, or when they come near ^z unto the altar to minister in the holy place; that they ^a bear not iniquity, and die: ^b it shall be a statute for ever unto him and his seed after him.

z ch. 20. 26.
 a Lev. 5. 1. 17, &
 20. 19, 20. & 22. 9.
 Num. 9. 13. &
 18. 22.
 b ch. 27. 21.
 Lev. 17. 7.

XXIX. ¹ And this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister unto me in the priest's office: ^a take one young bullock, and two rams without blemish, ² And ^b unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened tempered with oil, and wafers unleavened anointed with oil: of wheaten flour shalt thou make them. ³ And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams. ⁴ And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, ^c and shalt wash them with water. ⁵ ^d And thou shalt take the garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breastplate, and gird him with ^e the curious girdle of the ephod: ⁶ ^f And thou shalt put the mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown upon the mitre.
⁷ Then shalt thou take the anointing ^g oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him.

a Lev. 8. 2.

b Lev. 2. 4. &
 6. 20, 21, 22.

c ch. 40. 12.
 Lev. 8. 6.
 Heb. 10. 22.
 d ch. 28. 2.
 Lev. 8. 7.

e ch. 28. 8.
 f Lev. 8. 9.

g ch. 28. 41. &
 30. 25.
 Lev. 8. 12. &
 10. 7. & 21. 10.
 Num. 35. 25.
 h Lev. 8. 13.

† Heb. bind.

i Num. 18. 7.

† Heb. fill the hand of.

k ch. 28. 41. Lev. 8. 22, &c. Heb. 7. 28.

⁸ And ^h thou shalt bring his sons, and put coats upon them. ⁹ And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aaron and his sons, and † put the bonnets on them: and ⁱ the priest's office shall be theirs for a perpetual statute: and thou shalt † ^k consecrate Aaron and his sons.

Adam, our Great High Priest, has covered our shame, and clothes us in Himself (Gal. iii. 27).

THE CONSECRATION OF AARON AND HIS SONS.

On the ceremonial used at the consecration of the High Priest and other Priests, see further the notes below on Lev. viii. 1—35; and see the explanation of its typical character in reference to Christ our High Priest, in Prosper Aquitan., de Prom. ii. 3; and Dean Jackson on the Creed, ix., ch. xxv.—xxviii.

CH. XXIX. 1. without blemish] Figures of the true Sacrifice of Christ. Cp. below, xii. 5. The Septuagint has ἀμώμους here, the word adopted in the New Testament to describe Christ's Sacrifice (Heb. ix. 14; and 1 Pet. i. 19).

2. tempered with oil] Rather, anointed with oil, the emblem of Divine grace, and of the outpouring of the Spirit. The original word is from balal, to pour over (Gesen., p. 122). The Septuagint has κεχρισμένα, anointed; whence, χρίσμα, chrism, and Χριστός, Christ.

4. tabernacle of the congregation] Of meeting; xxvi. 1. — wash them with water] From the holy laver (xxx. 18; cp. xl. 7. 11, 12. Lev. viii. 6).

Christ has made us to be priests to God: our consecration took place when "He washed us from our sins in His own Blood" (see on Rev. i. 5), the virtue of which was applied to us in the "laver of regeneration" (Titus iii. 5. 1 Pet. iii. 21. Heb. x. 22).

5. the coat] Tunic; see xxviii. 39.

— the robe of the ephod] xxviii. 31.

— the ephod] xxviii. 6.

— the breastplate] xxviii. 15—30.

— curious girdle] xxviii. 8.

6. the mitre] See xxviii. 36, 37. By the mitre was typified Christ's sacerdotal authority, and the spiritual marriage between Him and the Church (Prosper Aquitan., de Prom. ii. 3).

— the holy crown] Here called nezzer, from nazar, to sanctify, to consecrate; whence the word Nazarite (Gesen., 512).

THE ANOINTING OIL.

7. shalt thou take the anointing oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him] With regard to the composition of the anointing oil, see xxx. 30. Thou shalt anoint him; the original word here is from mashach, to anoint; literally, to spread over, as with unguent; whence Mashiach, Μεσσίας, the Messiah, the Christ, the Anointed One (see Isaiah lxi. 1. Matt. i. 1. John

i. 41. Cp. Acts x. 38). "He anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost;" and from Him the holy unction of the Spirit streams down upon His members, as the oil flowed from Aaron's head to the skirts of his clothing (Ps. cxxxiii. 2. John i. 16). Cp. Prosper Aquit., ii. 3, who says, "This unction signified that of Christ the true High Priest, 'Who is anointed with the oil of gladness above His fellows;'" Ps. xlv. 7; Heb. i. 9; and Bp. Pearson, on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 79, who says, "In the Law, whatsoever was anointed, was thereby set apart as ordained to some special use . . . Moses anointed the Tabernacle and all the vessels, and the anointing was their consecration. Hence 'the Priest that is anointed,' signifieth, in the phrase of Moses (Lev. iv. 3), the High Priest, because he was invested in that office at and by his unction; and when Jesus is called the Messias or Christ, and that so long after the anointing oil had ceased, it signified no less than a Person set apart by God, advanced to the highest office of which all those employments under the Law, in the obtaining of which oil was used, were but types and shadows." The Septuagint here has λήψη τοῦ ἐλαίου τοῦ χρίσματος, καὶ χρίσεις αὐτόν, expressions which point to Christ.

9. for a perpetual statute] In Christ (Heb. vii. 3). "Quod res significaret æternas" (S. Aug., Qu. 124).

— thou shalt consecrate] Literally, thou shalt fill the hands of. The term is explained in v. 24, and Lev. viii. 27.

The Septuagint has here the words τελειώσεις τὰς χεῖρας, and in v. 29. 33. 35, and in Lev. xxi. 10 τετελειωμένον, perfected. It is observable that St. Paul has adopted this word in the Epistle to the Hebrews, and uses it in several places in that Epistle, which cannot be rightly understood without reference to this use of it by the Septuagint. Thus, when speaking of the priesthood of Christ, he says that the Son is perfected, τετελειωμένον (i. e. is consecrated), for evermore (Heb. vii. 28) Cp. notes below, Lev. viii. 14. 22. 27; and xxi. 10; and Heb. ii 10; v. 9.

In reference to this ceremony in consecration, Our Lord's words may perhaps be understood,—“The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into His Hand” (John iii. 35), that is, God hath anointed Him with the full effusion of the spiritual unction of the Holy Ghost, and hath consecrated Him to be the High Priest and Head of His universal Church. God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto Him (John iii. 34).

It is noted of Jeroboam in Holy Scripture, that “he filled the hands of the lowest of the people” (i. e. ordained low and mean persons to the Priest's office), and “this thing became

1 Lev. 1. 4. & 8. 14.

m Lev. 8. 15.

n ch. 27. 2. & 30. 2.

o Lev. 3. 3.

|| It seemeth by anatomy, and the Hebrew doctors, to be the midriff.

p Lev. 4. 11, 12, 21.

Heb. 13. 11.

q Lev. 8. 18. r Lev. 1. 4—9.

|| Or, upon.

s Gen. 8. 21.

¹⁰ And thou shalt cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation: and ¹ Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock. ¹¹ And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ¹² And thou ^m shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon ⁿ the horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar. ¹³ And ^o thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and || the caul that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar. ¹⁴ But ^p the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin offering. ¹⁵ ^q Thou shalt also take one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall ^r put their hands upon the head of the ram. ¹⁶ And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar. ¹⁷ And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and || unto his head. ¹⁸ And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a ^s sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

sin to the house of Jeroboam, even to cut it off and to destroy it from the face of the earth" (1 Kings xiii. 33, 34). These and other Scriptures show not only the need of a due call and public mission for those who undertake any holy office; but also the sin of appointing unworthy persons to sacred functions in the Church of God.

10. a bullock] To be a sin-offering for the Priest himself: see v. 14.

Observe that after the investiture in the holy garments, and after the anointing with the holy oil, there were sacrifices to be offered of three kinds,

- (1) A sin-offering (10—14) —
- (2) A whole burnt-offering (v. 18) —
- (3) Peace-offerings (v. 28) —

to show the imperfection of the Levitical Priests, and their need of expiation, and cleansing, and pardon; and also to indicate the threefold character of the sacrifice of Christ for the sins of all, who are made Priests to God in Him (Rev. i. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 5); and as offering Himself as our sin-offering, our whole burnt-offering, and also as our peace-offering, that is, as being our perfect propitiation, satisfaction, oblation, and sacrifice, making peace with God, and as procuring pardon for all who believe and obey Him, and as communicating Himself to be received and fed upon (as the peace-offerings were) by the true penitent, with faith, thanksgiving, and love: see below, note on Lev. viii. 14.

— shall put their hands] As a symbol of the laying their own sins upon it (Theodoret, Qu. 61), which was to be done with confession of sin (see v. 15; and Lev. v. 5, 6; xvi. 21). But our High Priest, Who is "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners," required no such sin-offering for Himself (Heb. vii. 27); and, from the language of the Holy Spirit here, we may understand the force of His own words, "The Lord laid upon Him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. liii. 6—8).

11. thou shalt kill the bullock] The exception proves the rule. Moses, who was not a Priest, does several acts in this chapter (see v. 12. 26), which were afterwards reserved to those who were Priests. He does these acts by special authority and express command from God Himself,—the Author of all power, spiritual and temporal,—for the purpose of consecrating Aaron and his sons to the Priesthood (cp. Lev. viii. 19). But after their consecration to it, we never hear that Moses did any sacerdotal acts (cp. Num. xvi. 40. 46); and therefore his example shows that priestly acts are only to be done by priestly persons (cp. Heb. v. 4, 5. Acts xix. 14. Jude 11). Compare the extraordinary case of the Holy Ghost given before Baptism, in Acts x. 44—46, where see note: see also v. 12 here; and note below, Lev. ix. 2.

12. thou shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon the horns of the altar] Here is another exceptional act, which also serves to illustrate the truth stated in the foregoing note. The blood is here put on the horns of the brazen altar. This was done in order to consecrate the altar, and to make an atonement for it (see v. 36, 37. Lev. viii. 15. Ezek. xliii. 25—27). But after this act of consecration, the blood of the sacrifices offered on the brazen altar for the Priest, was to be put on the golden altar of incense in the Holy Place: see Lev. iv. 3. 7.

Also, the blood of this first offering was put on the brazen altar only, because as yet Aaron and his sons were not priests, but ordinary persons (cp. Lev. viii. 33).

Hence we see the imperfection of the holy things, as well as of the holy persons, of the Levitical ritual; which bore witness in itself that it was not a final dispensation, but preparatory to another,—that it was "a shadow of the good things to come" (Heb. x. 1): a schoolmaster,—παιδαγωγός—a leader of Israel, as children in their pupillage, to bring them to Christ, their true Teacher, Priest, and Lord (Gal. iii. 24).

13. caul] Or lobe (Sept., Kalisch).

— the liver—the two kidneys—the fat] The burning of the first signifying the mortification of all angry passions; the second of all sensual lusts; the third of all gross carnal desires (Theodoret). "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts" (Gal. v. 24); and have consecrated all their desires to God and His service.

14. shalt thou burn] In ordinary cases, if the blood of a sin-offering was not carried into the Tabernacle, the sin-offering was eaten by the Priest; but this being a sin-offering for the Priests themselves, it was to be burnt, and not eaten by them (Lev. iv. 3. 12). The eating of a man's sin-offering signified the bearing of his sin (Lev. x. 17). The Priests, therefore, here confessed their own imperfection, and that they themselves needed another Priest to bear their sin. Not so Christ. He Himself is without sin, and bears the sins of all (Heb. vii. 27, 28).

— without the camp] As Jesus suffered for sin without the city of Jerusalem (Heb. xiii. 11—13). St. Paul there adopts the words used by the Septuagint here, κατακαύσεις έξω τῆς παρεμβολῆς: ἁμαρτίας γάρ ἐστιν.

— it is a sin offering] Heb. chattath. Literally, a sin (Gen. iv. 7). It represents a sin (Gesen., p. 272).

This is the first place in the Bible where the word chattath occurs in the sense of sin-offering. This is to be explained from the fact, that the sin-offering is a correlative to the Law; and was offered for expiation of sin contracted by violations of it: see Lev. iv. 2, 3.

15. put their hands] See v. 10.

16. and sprinkle] As was done with the blood of all burnt-offerings. Compare St. Peter's words concerning the sprinkling of the Blood of the One great Burnt-offering, Jesus Christ (1 Pet. i. 2; and see Heb. xii. 24), and the typical act of Moses himself (xxiv. 8).

18. a sweet savour] Properly, an odour of rest, or acquiescence and complacency; as representing the perfect obedience and meritorious sufferings of Him in Whom the Father is well pleased, and Who has appeased His wrath, and rendered us acceptable to God: see above, on Gen. viii. 21: and Eph. v. 2, where St. Paul, speaking of Christ's sacrifice, adopts the words used by the Septuagint here, and in v. 25 (ὁσμὴν εὐωδίας), and thus teaches us to consider the Levitical offerings as fore-

19^t And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram. 20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about. 21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of ^u the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and ^w he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him. 22 Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul ^{above} the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration: 23^x And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD: 24 And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt ^y wave them for a wave offering before the LORD. 25^z And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD. 26 And thou shalt take ^a the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and ^b it shall be thy part. 27 And thou shalt sanctify ^c the breast of the wave offering, and the shoulder of the heave offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up, of

^t ver. 3.
Lev. 8. 22.

^u ch. 30. 25, 31.
Lev. 8. 30.
^w ver. 1.
Heb. 9. 22.

^x Lev. 8. 26.

^y Or, shake to and fro.
^y Lev. 7. 30.
^z Lev. 8. 28.

^a Lev. 8. 29.

^b Ps. 99. 6.

^c Lev. 7. 31, 34.
Num. 18. 11, 18.
Deut. 18. 3.

shadowings of Christ's offering, and as deriving their efficacy from it.

*Theodore*t well observes, that here is a proof of the figurative meaning of the Levitical Law. The steam of flesh and bones cannot (he says) be fragrant in itself even to man,—and how much less to God; but it became a sweet perfume even to God, by reason of what it represented—the perfect obedience of Christ. “Non Deus odore fumi delectatur; sed Illud, quod his significatur, Deum delectat” (S. Augustine, Qu. 127).

19. the other ram] The ram of consecration (Lev. viii. 22); by the blood of which Aaron and his sons and their garments were hallowed: see v. 21. In these two rams is represented the double work of Christ; first, of Justification by His Death and Resurrection; and next, of Sanctification by His Spirit: see 1 Cor. i. 30.

20. upon the tip of the right ear] To mark the sanctification of obedience to God's will and word, which they should teach to the people (Isa. l. 5. 1 Cor. xi. 23); and to denote the duty of all who are made priests to God in Christ (Rev. i. 6) to consecrate all their faculties to God's service (Rom. xii. 1. 1 Cor. vi. 20. 1 Thess. v. 23), in imitation of the Great High Priest, Whose ears God opened (Ps. xl. 8: see on Heb. x. 5), and who says, “He that has ears to hear, let him hear” (Matt. xi. 15).

— hand, and—foot] After the ear. “Be ye doers of God's Word, and not hearers only” (James i. 22); and to mark the perfect obedience of Christ, “Lo, I come to do Thy will, O God” (Ps. xl. 10. John iv. 32).

22. the rump] The fat tail. The tails of certain sheep in the East contain a large portion of fat (cp. Herod., iii. 115; Aristot., Hist. Animal. viii. 28; Diod. Sic. ii. 54). Hence the tails of sheep,—never of bulls,—were offered in the Levitical sacrifices: cp. Lev. iii. 9; vii. 3; viii. 25. Kalisch; Gesen., p. 51; Dr. Thomson, “The Land and the Book,” p. 97, who says that “the rump is not properly a tail, but a mass of marrow-like fat, which spreads over the whole rump to the caudal extremity, and is used by the Arabs for butter. I have seen many tails in Lebanon so heavy that the owners could hardly carry them.”

— it is a ram of consecration] Literally, a ram of filling (of hands), a ram of perfecting, τελειώσεως, Sept.: see above, v. 9. The word τελειώσεως is used in this sense of consecration by the Sept. in v. 26, 27. 31. 34; and in Lev. vii. 37; viii. 21. 27, 28. 31. 33: see below, on Lev. viii. 22.

24. thou shalt put all in the hands] See v. 9

VOL. I. PART I.—305

WAVE OFFERING—HEAVE OFFERING.

— wave] The difference between waving and heaving an offering is obvious from the etymology of the two Hebrew verbs by which those acts are expressed; the one is naph, to move to and fro (Gesen., p. 540); the other is rum, to lift on high (Gesen., p. 762). In waving, the offering was turned to the four quarters of the earth, and also to heaven, as an acknowledgment that He to whom it was offered is Lord and Giver of all. In the heaving (v. 28), it was signified that the offering was raised from earth, and was dedicated to Him Whose glory is revealed in Heaven.

The wave-offering and the heave-offering were accompaniments of the peace-offerings (see v. 28), which represented the acceptance of the people with God, and were an eucharistic acknowledgment of deliverance and peace vouchsafed to them by Him Who accepted the sacrifice. They represented not only Christ's Death for our sins, but His Resurrection for our Justification. “Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God” (Rom. iv. 25; v. 1). In the Peace-offering, the offerer himself, now justified, was admitted to partake with God in the sacrifice,—to communicate with God at His own Table, as it were, and with His Altar; which was not the case in the sin-offering or burnt-offering; and therefore the peace-offering is the Levitical symbol of Christ giving Himself to the penitent, faithful communicant in the Holy Eucharist (see below on Lev. iii. 1—11; and vii. 11—21). And the heaving and the waving of the sacrifice represent the thankful acknowledgment of the worshipper to Christ, Who, having been delivered as a sacrifice for sin, was raised from the dead for our justification, and ascended into heaven, that He might fill all things, and prepare a place for us (Eph. iv. 8—10. John xiv. 2).

On the temuphoth, or wave-offerings, and on the terumoth, or heave-offerings, see below, Lev. vii. 14—30; viii. 27; ix. 21; x. 14; xxiii. 10. Num. vi. 20; xviii. 8; and the Treatise in the Mishna, entitled, Terumoth, Treat. vi.; and Winer, R. W. B. ii. 667, Art. on “Waving and Heaving;” Bähr, Symbolik ii. 355. 376; Kurtz, Mos. Opfer, p. 146; Bib. Dict. ii. 1723.

26. it shall be thy part] On this special occasion, but not hereafter; for when Aaron and his sons are consecrated as Priests it shall be theirs: see vv. 27, 28; and on v. 11.

27. thou shalt sanctify the breast—and the shoulder] The choicest part; showing not only the devotion of the Priest's affections, but also the consecration of his strength to the service of God. Faith requires the addition of good works (Theo-

d Lev. 10. 15. the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons: ²⁸ And it shall be Aaron's and his sons' ^d by a statute for ever from the children of Israel: for it is an heave offering: and ^e it shall be an heave offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace offerings, even their heave offering unto the LORD.

f Num. 20. 26, 28. ²⁹ And the holy garments of Aaron ^f shall be his sons' after him, ^g to be anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them. ³⁰ And ^h that son that is priest in his stead shall put them on ⁱ seven days, when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation to minister in the holy place. ³¹ And thou shalt take the ram of the consecration, and ^k seethe his flesh in the holy place.

g Num. 18. 8. & 35. 25. ³² And Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the ^l bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ³³ And h Num. 20. 28. ³⁴ And if ought of the flesh of the consecrations, or of the bread, remain unto the morning, then ^o thou shalt burn the remainder with fire: it shall not be eaten, because it is holy. ³⁵ And thus shalt thou do unto Aaron, and to his sons, according to all i Lev. 8. 35. & 9. 1, 8. ³⁶ And thou shalt ^q offer every day a bullock for a sin offering for atonement: and thou shalt cleanse the altar, when thou hast made an atonement for it, k Lev. 8. 31. ³⁷ Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar, and sanctify it; ^s and it shall be an altar most holy: ^t whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.

l Matt. 12. 4. ³⁸ Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; ^u two lambs of the first year ^w day by day continually. ³⁹ The one lamb thou shalt offer ^x in the morning; and the other lamb thou shalt offer at even: ⁴⁰ And with the one

m Lev. 10. 14, 15, 17. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

n Lev. 22. 10. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

o Lev. 8. 32. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

p Ex. 40. 12. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

q Heb. 10. 11. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

r ch. 30. 26, 29, 29. & 40. 10. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

s ch. 40. 10. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

t ch. 30. 29. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

u Num. 28. 3. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

v Chron. 16. 40. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

w 2 Chron. 2. 4. & 13. 11. & 31. 3. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

x Ezra 3. 3. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

y See Dan. 9. 27. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

z 12. 11. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

aa 2 Kings 16. 15. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil;

ab Ezek. 46. 13, 14, 15. ⁴⁰ And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil; dorel). This was specially fulfilled in Christ, "Whose meat and drink it was to do His Father's Will, and to finish His work" (John iv. 34).

28. of the sacrifice of their peace offerings] In which the worshipper communicated with God by partaking in the sacrifice: see on Lev. iii. 1—12; vii. 11—21.

29. the holy garments of Aaron shall be his sons' after him] A precept obeyed before Aaron's death (Num. xx. 26. 28). Thus it was provided that there should be one, and one only, High Priest, in perpetual hereditary succession; an image of the everlasting Priesthood of Christ. Here is another proof also, that Judaism, as it is now, is false. For how can it subsist without a Priesthood? and where is the Aaronical Priesthood now?

30. put them on seven days] And wait at the door of the Tabernacle, and keep watch there day and night (Lev. viii. 33. 35).

33. they shall eat those things wherewith the atonement was made, to consecrate, and to sanctify them] So Christ says to all, "Except ye eat the Flesh of the Son of man (Who makes atonement thereby), and drink His Blood, ye have no life in you" (John vi. 53). We cannot be priests to God in Christ (Rev. i. 6) except we are partakers of the Flesh of the Divine Offering by which Atonement was made. The original word for Atonement signifies covering, from caphar, to cover, to cover sins, to expiate (see Gen. vi. 14), whence the covering of the Ark was called the propitiatory, ἱλαστήριον (see xxv. 17), on which the blood of Atonement was sprinkled on the great Day of Atonement (Lev. xvi. 30) by the High Priest.

34. if ought—remain—thou shalt burn the remainder with fire] A declaration of the solemn truth that holy things, if not used without delay, become polluted (Lev. vii. 18, 19); and a warning to all who slight God's offers, and defer to come to Christ in the ways of His appointment. If Holy Scripture and the Sacraments are neglected, they recoil upon those who disregard them, and become "a savour of death unto death" (2 Cor. ii. 16); and it is to be feared, that the power and opportunity of using them will be taken away from those who despise God's gracious overtures in them (see Exod. xii. 10). If we do not feed on Christ when we may, and when we ought, He will hide His face from us, as He did from the men of Nazareth and Gadara, and from Jerusalem itself.

36. thou shalt cleanse the altar] Showing the imperfect and shadowy character of the Levitical ordinances (ep. v. 10; and Heb. x. 11). The Altar "which sanctifieth the gift" (Matt. xxiii. 19), needed itself to be sanctified (see also xxx. 26—29).

37. it shall be an altar most holy] Rather, the altar shall be most holy; literally, shall be holiness of holinesses. Thus the altar also was a figure of Christ, Who "sanctifies Himself" (John xvii. 19) in order that all our gifts, and we ourselves, offered through Him, may be sanctified (John xvii. 17—19).

38. day by day continually] Morning and evening (Num. xxiii. 3). This daily repetition was a testimony of daily need; a daily act of worship, a daily avowal of imperfection; for if these offerings "had been perfect, would they not have ceased to be offered?" (see Heb. ix. 9; x. 1, 2), a daily expression of faith, hope, and desire for the perfect sacrifice to be offered by Christ; and a figure of the continual effects of that One Great Sacrifice offered once for all, or, as the Apostle says, offered εἰς τὸ διηνεκές: compare Heb. x. 1, where that phrase is used to signify the daily sacrifice, with Heb. vii. 3; x. 12. 14, where it is used to signify the daily effect, the enduring fruit, of the one Sacrifice offered by Christ.

39. at even] Between the two evenings (see xii. 6). 40. tenth deal] Tenth part of an ephah (Num. xxviii. 5), which tenth part was also called an omer (xvi. 36), the daily allowance of manna to each Israelite.

— the fourth part of an hin] A hin contained twelve logs and the fourth part of an hin of wine for a drink offering. ⁴¹ And the other lamb thou shalt offer at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meat offering of the morning, and according to the drink offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD. ⁴² This shall be ^a a continual burnt offering throughout your generations at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD: ^a where I will meet you, to speak there unto thee. ⁴³ And there I will meet with the children of Israel, and || the tabernacle ^b shall be sanctified by my glory. ⁴⁴ And I will sanctify the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar: I will ^c sanctify also both Aaron and his sons, to minister to me in the priest's office. ⁴⁵ And ^d I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God. ⁴⁶ And they shall know that ^e I am the LORD their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I may dwell among them: I am the LORD their God.

y 1 Kings 13, 29, 35.
2 Kings 16 15.
Ezra 9. 4. 5.
Ps. 141. 2.
Dan. 9. 21.
z ver. 38.
ch. 30. 8.
Num. 28. 6.
Dan. 8. 11, 12, 13.
a ch. 25. 22. &
30. 6, 36.
Num. 17. 4.
|| Or, Israel.
b ch. 40. 34.
1 Kings 8. 11.
2 Chron. 5. 14. &
7. 1, 2, 3.
Ezek. 43. 5.
Hag. 2. 7, 9.
Mal. 3. 1.
c Lev. 21. 15. &
22. 9, 16.
d Ex. 25. 8.
Lev. 26. 12.
Zech. 2. 10.
John 14. 17, 23.
2 Cor. 6. 16.
Rev. 21. 3.
e ch. 20. 2.
a ch. 37. 25. &
40. 5.
b See ver. 7, 8, 10.
Lev. 4. 7, 18.
Rev. 8. 3.

XXX. ¹ And thou shalt make ^a an altar ^b to burn incense upon: of shittim wood shalt thou make it. ² A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof; foursquare shall it be: and two cubits shall be the height thereof: the horns thereof shall be of the same. ³ And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, the † top thereof, and the † sides thereof round about, and the † Heb. roof.

† Heb. walls.

(Maimonides), and a log was equal to six eggs; and is about half a pint (ep. Lev. xiv, 10).

		Gallons.	Pints.
An Ephah	= about	7	4
„ Hin , $\frac{1}{8}$ of an Ephah	=	1	2
„ Omer , $\frac{1}{10}$ „	=	0	6
A Log	= about	0	0 $\frac{1}{2}$

(Bp. Kennett.)

These measures are only approximations: see Bevan in Smith's Bib. Dict. ii. 1742.

This flour and oil was called the minchah, from manach, to give (Gesen., p. 487), or meat-offering: see Num. xxviii. 5.

42. continual burnt-offering] See v. 38.

— tabernacle of the congregation] Or, of meeting, at which God promises to meet His people and speak with them; and the place "shall be filled with My Glory" (v. 43: see xl. 34. 2 Chron. v. 14). This promise was fulfilled in part by Christ, when by His presence He made the glory of the second Temple to be greater than the former, and therefore much greater than the Tabernacle (Hag. ii. 7—9); and much more is it fulfilled by Him in the Christian Church, to which He has promised His continual presence (Matt. xviii. 20), and to which He has given the Holy Ghost to abide with her for ever (John xiv. 16), and which contains the glorious realities that were foreshadowed in the Tabernacle and the Temple (see Heb. x. 1. 1 Cor. x. 6. 11. Col. ii. 17), and it will be consummated for ever in the Church glorified in Heaven (Rev. vii. 15; xxi. 11. 23).

45. I will dwell among the children of Israel] I will dwell among them in the Tabernacle. Observe the Hebrew and Greek words here. To dwell is shacan, whence the Tabernacle where God dwelt was called mischan; whence also the word shecinah, the presence and glorious indwelling of God in the Holy of Holies on the Mercy Seat between the Cherubim. Connected with these words is σκηνη, the Greek word for the Tabernacle. Accordingly, when St. John says that the Eternal Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, he takes up the Greek word, and says that the Word κατεσκήνωσεν, which is more strong than ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν (John i. 14), and signifies that He dwelt, or tabernacled down, in us, and thus intimates His condescension, and the perpetual continuance of His dwelling in us; and therefore the promise is to the saints in the Apocalypse that He Who sitteth on the throne, σκήνωσει ἐπ' αὐτούς, the Divine Shecinah will be for ever upon them (Rev. vii. 15, where see note).

The Septuagint has a remarkable paraphrase here: it explains the words, that I may dwell among them, by, to have My Name called upon them: ἐπικληθῆσομαι ἐν τοῖς οἴοις Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ ἔσομαι αὐτῶν Θεός (ep. Heb. xi. 16): ἐγὼ εἶμι Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς αὐτῶν . . . ἐπικληθῆναι αὐτοῖς. This promise is fulfilled in the Christian Church, which is baptized into the Name of the Triune Lord: ep. Matt. xxviii. 19; and on James ii. 7.

CH. XXX. 1. to burn incense] The Samaritan text transfers this description of the altar of incense (1—10) to ch. xxvi. 35, because it refers to the Holy Place whose vessels are there specified. But it is in its proper place here, as connected with the daily ministry of the Priests (ep. Kalisch, p. 516).

ALTAR OF INCENSE: Internal arrangement of the HOLY PLACE.

— shittim wood] To be overlaid with gold. It will be observed, that there is a gradual spiritual progress from the Altar of burnt-offering which was in the Court and was covered with brass, to the Altar of incense which was in the Holy Place and was covered with gold; and thence to the Mercy Seat, which was in the Holy of Holies, within the Veil, and was made of gold.

All these sacred objects stood in a direct line, passing through the golden Altar of incense, the emblem of Prayer. From it also on each side was a transverse line; on one side, viz. on the south side of the Altar of Incense, was the Golden Candlestick; and on the other side, viz. on the north side of the Altar of Incense, was the Table of Shewbread (see xl. 22. 24).

Thus in the Tabernacle there was a cruciform arrangement. The Mercy Seat was, as it were, in the Apsé; the Golden Candlestick and Table of Shewbread made the Transepts; the Golden Altar stood at their intersection; and the Nave was occupied by the Brazen Altar. In this cruciform arrangement the Golden Altar (the Altar of Prayer) was like a sacred centre. May we not say that it corresponded to that place in the Cross, from which the prayer was breathed, "Father, forgive them;" and "Father, into Thy Hands I commend my Spirit?" (Luke xxiii. 34. 46.)

This cruciform arrangement of the Tabernacle deserves consideration.

The Brazen Altar corresponded to the foot of the Cross, at which the Blood of the Saviour was spilt.

The Golden Altar was, as it were, the place of the Head; and as the Arms of the crucified Redeemer were outstretched on the Cross at Calvary, so in this typical Cross of the Tabernacle, His arms would embrace, and His Hands would touch, as in the act of Benediction, the two types of His Church, namely, the Seven-branched Golden Candlestick on the right (as He is described in the Apocalypse, having the seven stars in His right Hand: see Rev. i. 16. 20), and on the left hand, the Table of the Twelve Loaves of Shewbread. And at His Side was the Laver, the type of the water, which flowed from His Side on the Cross. And the Mercy Seat would correspond to the apex of the Cross, which pointed upward to Heaven, and to the work which He is ever doing in the heavenly Holy of Holies, pleading there the meritorious efficacy and divine virtue of the Sacrifice offered once for all on the Cross.

2. foursquare] As the altar of burnt-offering was; and the breastplate (xxviii. 16); and the heavenly City (Rev. xxi. 16).

horns thereof; and thou shalt make unto it a crown of gold round about. ⁴ And two golden rings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two † corners thereof, upon the two sides of it shalt thou make it; and they shall be for places for the staves to bear it withal. ⁵ And thou shalt make the staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold. ⁶ And thou shalt put it before the vail that is by the ark of the testimony, before the ^cmercy seat that is over the testimony, where I will meet with thee. ⁷ And Aaron shall burn thereon † ^dsweet incense every morning: when ^ehe dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it. ⁸ And when Aaron ‖ † lighteth the lamps † at even, he shall burn incense upon it, a perpetual incense before the LORD throughout your generations. ⁹ Ye shall offer no ^fstrange incense thereon, nor burnt sacrifice, nor meat offering; neither shall ye pour drink offering thereon. ¹⁰ And ^gAaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonements: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

¹¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹² ^hWhen thou takest the sum of the children of Israel after † their number, then shall they give every man

† a ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there † Heb. ribs.

c ch. 25. 21, 22.

† Heb. incense of spices.

d ver. 34.

1 Sam. 2. 28.

1 Chron. 23. 13.

Luke 1. 9.

e ch. 27. 21.

† Or, setteth up.

† Heb. causeth to ascend.

† Heb. between the two ovens,

ch. 12. 6.

f Lev. 10. 1.

g Lev. 16. 18. &

23. 27.

h ch. 38. 25.

Num. 1. 2, 5, &

26. 2.

2 Sam. 24. 2.

† Heb. them that are to be numbered.

† See Num. 31. 50. Job 33. 24. & 36. 18. Ps. 49. 7. Matt. 20. 28. Mark 10. 45. 1 Tim. 2. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.

6. before the vail—before the mercy seat] Some expositors have erroneously imagined that the text asserts that the Altar of Incense was in the Holy of Holies (see Augustine, Qu. 133. 174; and Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 130). Other critics have ventured to say that the Sacred Writer has made a mistake.

But the meaning of the statement is clear. The Sacred Author intends to point out the connexion of the Golden Altar with the Mercy Seat. The Golden Altar of Incense was not in the Holy of Holies, but in the Holy Place, and it was in a direct line with the Mercy Seat (cp. Kabisch, p. 561). The Altar of Incense was a golden link in the spiritual chain which stretched from the Brazen Altar to the Mercy Seat, and which led the thoughts of the faithful Israelite up to the throne of God in Heaven (see above, note on v. 1). And to the inner eye of the Christian, this spiritual line, passing into the Heavens, ends in Christ, ministering in the true Holy of Holies, and pleading the efficacy of His Own Blood sprinkled on the Heavenly Mercy Seat (see v. 10; and on Lev. xvi. 2—19. Heb. ix. 13. 24, 25; x. 4).

7. And Aaron shall burn thereon sweet incense every morning] Incense is an emblem of prayer (Ps. cxli. 2: cp. Rev. viii. 3, 4; ix. 13). Here then is a type of the true Aaron, our Divine Mediator, “the only Mediator between God and man, the Man Christ Jesus,” ever making intercession for us (1 Tim. ii. 5. Heb. vii. 25; ix. 24).

Here also is an exhortation to daily prayer, according to the example of David (Ps. v. 3; lv. 17; cxli. 2); and Daniel (vi. 10); and Anna (Luke ii. 37); and the command of Christ to His Apostles (Luke xviii. 1; cp. Eph. vi. 18. 1 Thess. v. 17).

9. Ye shall offer no strange incense] None that is made in any other way than that which is prescribed. Incense is an emblem of Prayer; and here is a warning against all such prayers as are not warranted by the Word of God; and how much more against prayers which are contrary to that Word; and also against irreverent, extemporaneous, and ill-digested effusions in prayer.

10. an atonement—once in a year] See xxix. 33, on the great day of atonement, the tenth day of the seventh month (Lev. xvi. 18. 29, 30. Num. xxix. 7).

11. And the LORD spake unto Moses] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and is continued to xxiv. 35.

The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is 1 Kings xviii. 1—39, containing the history of Elijah, and of his zeal for the worship of the Lord, in opposition to that of Baal.

The Proper Lessons from the Prophets which are selected as parallel to the remainder of Exodus are from the first Book of Kings (see on Exod. xxxvi., and xxxviii. 21), and refer to the building of Solomon's Temple.

12. When thou takest the sum of the children of Israel after their number] Cp. xxxviii. 26, where the people go to be numbered; and v. 21, where the name of the numberer is mentioned. In Num. i. 1—46, which describes the numbering, the payment prescribed is to be presumed as a matter of course, indeed the payment in Exod. xxxviii. was anticipatory of it; and therefore the number of half-shekels in the one account coincides with the number of persons in the other: cp. McCaul on Colenso's Difficulties, p. 42.

— then shall they give every man a ransom for his soul] Whenever he was enrolled in the census of those who were in their twentieth year or over (v. 14), he was commanded to give half a shekel (v. 13: see on Matt. xvii. 24) as an offering to the Lord.

This payment is called a ransom for his soul, and was an acknowledgment to God that all souls are His (Ezek. xvii. 4); and that all lives are due to Him for sins committed against Him; and also that all owe Him thanks and praise for their enrolment in the census of His people, and for the privileges which they there enjoy.

Such an enrolment was therefore an incentive to self-examination and repentance; as well as an expression of thankfulness, and an act of worship; and it was an act in which every individual in the whole nation took a part; and was therefore an united tribute of adoration to the God and Father of all.

This was an act of God's appointment, and it is declaratory of His will, that all Nations should be joined together as one in public acts of homage to Him. This contribution from every Israelite was dedicated to the maintenance of His worship (v. 16). It is called here ῥῆμα by the Septuagint, τοῦ διδραχμῶν, and this word διδραχμῶν has been adopted by the Gospel in the history of Christ: see Matt. xvii. 24. Its relation to the question of that national act of religion, which in our own country is embodied in the payment of Church-rates, has been considered in the note on that passage, Matt. xvii. 24.

The identity of the payment from each Israelite, as prescribed by God Himself, is an evidence that God is “no respecter of persons” (Acts x. 34. Rom. ii. 11), and that the soul of the poor is equally precious, in His sight, with that of the rich (Prov. xxii. 2. Cp. James ii. 1); and when it is explained by the Gospel, it may be recognized as a figurative declaration that all needed a Redeemer, and that all have been redeemed by Christ (Heb. ii. 9. 1 Tim. ii. 6; and 1 Pet. i. 18). The Septuagint here has λύτρα τῆς ψυχῆς, and in the Gospel our Lord says that He came to give His own ψυχὴν as a λύτρον, or ransom, for many (Matt. xx. 28); or, as St. Paul expresses it, an ἀντίλυτρον ὑπὲρ πάντων, a ransom in the stead of all and for all (1 Tim. ii. 6).

Every one was obliged to pay a half-shekel for the ransom of his soul. The Law was a shadow of the Gospel. God did be no ^k plague among them, when thou numberest them. ¹³ This they shall give, every one that passeth among them that are numbered, half a shekel after the shekel of the sanctuary: (^m a shekel is twenty gerahs:) ⁿ an half shekel shall be the offering of the LORD. ¹⁴ Every one that passeth among them that are numbered, from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the LORD. ¹⁵ The ^o rich shall not † give more, and the poor shall not † give less than half a shekel, when they give an offering unto the LORD, to make an ^p atonement for your souls. ¹⁶ And thou shalt take the atonement money of the children of Israel, and ^q shalt appoint it for the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; that it may be ^r a memorial unto the children of Israel before the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

¹⁷ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁸ Thou shalt also make a laver of brass, and his foot also of brass, to wash withal: and thou shalt put it between the tabernacle of the congregation and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein. ¹⁹ For Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and their feet thereat: ²⁰ When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation, they shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the LORD: ²¹ So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not: and ^w it shall be a statute for ever to them, even to him and to his seed throughout their generations.

²² Moreover the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²³ Take thou also unto thee ^x principal spices, of pure ^y myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet not desire money; for it cost more to redeem their souls (Ps. xlix. 8), for "ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious Blood of Christ" (1 Pet. i. 18, 19).

This appointment, therefore, is instructive to us. It teaches us that we, who are enrolled in the census of God's Church, and have professed ourselves His people, and are stamped with the name of Christ, and who are God's coin, created in His image (see on Matt. xxii. 20), and are a tribute due to Him, and have been redeemed by Christ, and have been bought by His blood (1 Cor. vi. 20; vii. 23), should offer ourselves to Him Who is the Lord of the Temple. The Levitical offering was figurative of our oblation of ourselves, and was prescribed to the people of God as a testimony to Jesus Christ (S. Hilary, in Matt. xvii. 24).

— that there be no plague among them] For neglect of the payment prescribed, and of the duties of self-examination, repentance, humiliation, thankfulness, and devotion, which that payment involved. They who defrauded God of His tribute, were visited with severe punishment under the Law, as in the case of those who withheld their tithes (Mal. iii. 8, 9), and under the Gospel, as in the examples of Ananias and Sapphira; see on Acts v. 2.

^{13. shekel of the sanctuary}] Double the value of a common shekel. See Gen. xx. 16; and Exod. xxi. 32; and on the weight and value of the shekel at different times, see Winer, R. W. B. ii. 443; and the valuable papers by Mr. R. Stuart Poole, Art. "Money;" and the Rev. H. J. Rose, Art. "Shekel."

"The Sanctuary" was not yet erected, but it was now about to be set up, and this phrase is used here,—and it is used for the first time,—in anticipation of that event, which was now near at hand.

— twenty gerahs] See Lev. xxvii. 25. There is no more reason to suppose that this is an interpolation, than that the clause in xvi. 36 is one. Exactitude is necessary in laws: and what would be superfluous elsewhere is very pertinent; and since this is the first time where the shekel of the sanctuary is mentioned, its insertion is appropriate, and is an evidence of care and unity of composition.

^{14. Every one that passeth}] On the sum produced by this taxation, see below, xxxviii. 25.

THE LAVER.

^{18. a laver of brass}] It was made of the brazen mirrors which the women offered for that purpose (xxxviii. 8). They offered those things which had served to their own personal adornment, and dedicated them to the service of God, and to the making of the Laver, which contained pure water for sanctification, and was like a spiritual mirror,—a sea of glass (Rev. iv. 6), reflecting heaven itself, and in which, when they approached it, they might see themselves reflected, and might remember that He, to Whose service it was dedicated, saw their inmost thoughts, and requires sanctification of heart. Here is an exhortation to the Christian soul, that it should gladly give to God its worldly gifts and graces, its pleasures, riches, and embellishments, its jewels and its furniture, for the promotion of His glory. True beauty is to be found only in the love of God, and in the everlasting glories of heaven.

^{19. wash their hands and their feet}] The Priests ministered barefoot. The Laver was placed near the entrance of the Holy Place, but outside it, so that they might wash before they entered the Holy Place: a memento to us of the need of inward cleansing before we come near to God. "I will wash my hands in innocency, O God, and so will I compass thine Altar" (Ps. xvi. 6. Cp. Heb. x. 22). "Be ye clean, ye that bear the vessels of the Lord" (Isa. liii. 11).

With this Laver in the Tabernacle, compare the Molten Sea in the Temple; and on the spiritual meaning of both, see below, on 1 Kings vii. 23—25.

^{23. principal spices}] Four in number; as were the ingredients of the Incense, v. 34. The spices which composed the Chirm are emblems of the qualities of divine Grace.

— pure myrrh] Literally, myrrh of freeness (cp. Cant. v. 13), which was not forced out by excision, but exuded spontaneously from the shrub. It denotes the freedom of divine Grace in Christ (Rom. iii. 24; v. 15—18. 1 Cor. ii. 12. Titus iii. 5. Rev. xxi. 6; xxii. 17). On the different kinds of myrrh and its qualities, see Plin., xii. 15. Winer, ii. 126; and below, Matt. ii. 11. John xix. 39.

— cinnamon] Myrrh flows freely, and has an astringent, cleansing, and preservative power. Cinnamon is very fragrant, and on account of its medicinal properties is applied to wounds, and is used for making lights, which diffuse a grateful smell

^k 2 Sam. 24. 15.
^l Matt. 17. 24.

^m Lev. 27. 25.
ⁿ Num. 3. 47.
^o Ezek. 45. 12.
^p ch. 38. 26.

^o Job 34. 19.
^p Prov. 22. 2.
^q Eph. 6. 9.
^r Col. 3. 25.

[†] Heb. multiply.
[†] Heb. diminish.
^p ver. 12.
^q ch. 38. 25.

^r Num. 16. 40.

^s ch. 38. 8.
^l Kings 7. 38.
^t ch. 40. 7, 30.

^u ch. 40. 31, 32.
^v Ps. 26. 6.
^u Isa. 52. 11.
^v John 13. 10.
^u Heb. 10. 22.

^w ch. 28. 41.

^x Cant. 4. 11
^y Ezek. 27. 22.
^y Ps. 45. 8.
^y Prov. 7. 17.

z Cant. 4. 14.
Jer. 6. 20.
a Ps. 45. 8.
b ch. 29. 40.

|| Or, perfumer.
c ch. 37. 29.
Num. 35. 25.
Ps. 89. 20. &
133. 2.
d ch. 40. 9.
Lev. 8. 10.
Num. 7. 1.

c ch. 29. 37.
f ch. 29. 7, &c.
Lev. 8. 12, 30.

g ver. 25, 37.

h ver. 38.

i Gen. 17. 14.
ch. 12. 15.
Lev. 7. 20, 21.
k ch. 25. 6. &
37. 29.

l ver. 25.
† Heb. salted.
Lev. 2. 13.

m ch. 29. 42.
Lev. 16. 2.
n ver. 32.
ch. 29. 37.
Lev. 2. 3.
o ver. 32.

z calamus two hundred and fifty shekels, ²⁴ And of ^a cassia five hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of oil olive an ^b hin: ²⁵ And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the || apothecary: it shall be ^c an holy anointing oil. ²⁶ ^d And thou shalt anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony, ²⁷ And the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense, ²⁸ And the altar of burnt offering with all his vessels, and the laver and his foot. ²⁹ And thou shalt sanctify them, that they may be most holy: ^e whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy. ³⁰ ^f And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office. ³¹ And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, This shall be an holy anointing oil unto me throughout your generations. ³² Upon man's flesh shall it not be poured, neither shall ye make any other like it, after the composition of it: ^g it is holy, and it shall be holy unto you. ³³ ^h Whosoever compoundeth any like it, or whosoever putteth any of it upon a stranger, ⁱ shall even be cut off from his people.

³⁴ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^k Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte, and onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices with pure frankincense: of each shall there be a like weight: ³⁵ And thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection ^l after the art of the apothecary, [†] tempered together, pure and holy: ³⁶ And thou shalt beat some of it very small, and put of it before the testimony in the tabernacle of the congregation, ^m where I will meet with thee: ⁿ it shall be unto you most holy. ³⁷ And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ^o ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof: it shall be (Winer, ii. 734). In this and other respects it also is figurative of the qualities of divine Grace.

— calamus] Its stem is very fragrant, and its root is used for an ointment (Plin., xii. 12; Winer, i. p. 615).

24. cassia] Also used as an ointment, and very fragrant (Ps. xlv. 8. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 651).

— an hin] See xxix. 40.

HOLY OINTMENT.

25. an oil of holy ointment] For the anointing of the Tabernacle, its vessels, and the priests, that they may be holy. Here is another proof of their imperfection, and a witness to the need of the outpouring of the true Unction,—the Unction of the Spirit,—which flows down from the Head of the Holy One, Christ, the Anointed of God, upon all the members of His mystical Body, by virtue of His Incarnation, and their Incorporation in Him, in Whom “dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily” (Col. ii. 9), and of Whose “fulness we have all received, and grace for grace” (John i. 16).

32. Upon man's flesh shall it not be poured] It is not to be applied to common uses. But the prophecy of Joel was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, that the Spirit (of Whose Grace the holy oil was a type) should “be poured on all flesh” (Joel ii. 28. Acts ii. 17). Joel declares that the Spirit shall be poured upon all flesh, that is, upon all nations of the world; but the injunction here is, that the holy oil is not to be poured upon the flesh of man (Adam). Grace will be vouchsafed to all; but it will not be poured on the flesh, that is, not be given to the carnal man, who lives according to the flesh, as a mere Adam (ἄνθρωπος: see St. Paul's words, 1 Cor. iii. 3, 4; and Rom. viii. 7, which is the best comment on this text: cp. John xiv. 17. Jude 19; and above, on Gen. vi. 1). If we desire the gifts of the Spirit, let us not walk according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit (Rom. viii. 4).

33. Whosoever compoundeth any like it] No one might compound for himself any unguent like that of the holy Oil, prescribed by God for holy purposes. Here is a spiritual warning that no one should pretend to counterfeit the means of grace, or to apply them to uses not appointed by God: cp. v. 37.

34. Take unto thee sweet spices] For the making of the sacred incense by divine direction, Incense is the emblem of prayer (cp. Rev. v. 8); and the commandment for the making of it follows that concerning the holy oil. There can be no acceptable prayer without divine grace. The prevalence of the prayer of Christ is from the divine Unction upon Him, by which He was consecrated to be our Priest.

— stacte] Heb. nataph, from nataph, to drop, to distil (Gesen., p. 547); whence it is rendered στακτή by Sept.; and so Vulg. Some suppose it to be a distillation from the myrrh-tree; others believe it to be the storax, a sweet-smelling, resinous gum, which distils of its own accord (Winer, ii. 512. 535; Kalisch, p. 568).

— onycha] The crustaceous covering of certain shell-fish, which was used as an ingredient in perfumes (Dioscor., ii. 10; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 594).

— galbanum] The resin of a thorny umbelliferous shrub-like fennel, which is said to be efficacious in fumigations for driving away serpents (Virgil, Georg. iii. 415, “Galbanoque agitare graves nidore ebelydros”). Is it a fanciful supposition that in the incense, the emblem of prayer, this ingredient was introduced, prayer being a spiritual safeguard against the Old Serpent, and one of the appointed means for putting him to flight? (Luke xxii. 31, 32).

— frankincense] Lebanah, from laban, to be white, the whitest being the purest (Plin., xii. 14; Gesen., p. 429). It was obtained by incisions in the shrub, called amyrus or juni-perus thurifera (Plin., xii. 31; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 682).

35. thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection,—pure and holy] A direction which shows the need of care in the framing and offering up of prayers to God.

— tempered together] Or, rather, with salt. Cp. Lev. ii. 13. Mark ix. 49, 50, “I have salt in yourselves;” and Col. iv. 6.

36. thou shalt beat some of it very small] “A broken and contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise” (Psa. li. 17. Isa. lviii. 15).

37. ye shall not make to yourselves] A warning against familiar and irreverent use of holy things. See below, on the act of Mary in the Gospel breaking the box of spikenard, and devoting the whole contents to Christ (Mark xiv. 3). Did she remember that the ointment applied to holy uses was not to be applied to any secular purpose?

unto thee holy for the LORD. ^{33 p} Whosoever shall make like unto that, to ^{p ver 33.} smell thereto, shall even be cut off from his people.

XXXI. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ^{2 a} See, I have called ^{a ch. 35. 30. & 36. 1.} by name Bezaleel the ^b son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah: ^{b 1 Chron. 2. 20.} ³ And I have ^c filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship, ⁴ To devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, ⁵ And in cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship. ⁶ And I, behold, I have given with him ^d Aholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan: and in the hearts of all that are ^e wise hearted I have put wisdom, that they may make all that I have commanded thee; ^{7 f} The tabernacle of the congregation, and ^g the ark of the testimony, and ^h the mercy seat that is thereupon, and all the [†] furniture of the tabernacle, ⁸ And ⁱ the table and his furniture, and ^k the pure candlestick with all his furniture, and the altar of incense, ⁹ And ^l the altar of burnt offering with all his furniture, and ^m the laver and his foot, ¹⁰ And ⁿ the cloths of service, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office, ^{11 o} And the anointing oil, and ^p sweet incense for the holy place: according to all that I have commanded thee shall they do.

¹² And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹³ Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, ^q Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you. ^{14 r} Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you: every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for ^s whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. ^{15 t} Six days may work be done; but in the ^u seventh is the sabbath of rest, [†] holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath

^d ch. 35. 34.
^e ch. 28. 3. & 35. 10, 35. & 36. 1.
^f ch. 36. 8.
^g ch. 37. 1.
^h ch. 37. 6.
[†] 11cb. vssets.
ⁱ ch. 37. 10.
^k ch. 37. 17.
^l ch. 38. 1.
^m ch. 38. 8.
ⁿ ch. 39. 1, 41.
Num. 4. 5, 6, & c.
^o ch. 30. 25, 31. & 37. 29.
^p ch. 30. 34. & 37. 29.
^q Lev. 19. 3, 33. & 26. 2.
^r Ezek. 20. 12, 20. & 44. 24.
^s ch. 20. 8.
^t Deut. 5. 12.
^u Ezek. 20. 12.
^v ch. 35. 2.
Num. 15. 35.
[†] ch. 20. 9.
^u Gen. 2. 2.
^{ch.} 16. 23. & 20. 10.
[†] Heb. holiness.

Chr. XXXI. 2. Bezaleel] Betsal-el—a name which means in the shadow of God. All true Artists—who understand what the proper aims of Art are—are Bezaleels. They grow up under the shadow of God; they are under the protection of His wings; their works are shadowings forth of the Divine attributes, as the Tabernacle was; and the Spirit of God dwells in them. The associate of Bezaleel, in the work of the Tabernacle, was Aholiab (v. 6),—a name which means Tabernacle of the Father. God is “the Father of lights;” and every “good and perfect gift is from Him” (James i. 17); and the “Father of lights” digned to dwell in the Tabernacle framed by him; and all genuine Artists honour God as the Father of all their gifts; and in their works they erect Tabernacles for Him. Such specially is the mission of the Christian Artist. The Christian Architect, Sculptor, and Painter,—the Bezaleels and Aholiab of the Gospel,—will love to dwell, as it were, under the shadow of God, and will endeavour, with the help of God's Spirit, which they seek for in prayer, in reading and hearing His Holy Word, and in the communion of the blessed Body and Blood of Christ in the Holy Eucharist, to produce noble and sublime works,—in which the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ may vouchsafe to dwell, as in the tabernacle.

3. I have filled him with the spirit of God] “If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally” (James i. 5. See above, xxviii. 3; and below, xxxvi. 1; and on James i. 17).

6. Aholiab] See on v. 2. God usually joins two persons together in all weighty affairs (cp. Hag. i. 14), as in the case of Moses and Aaron (see iv. 14; vi. 26), Zerubbabel and Joshua, Ezra and Nehemiah: the Apostles were sent forth in pairs (see on Matt. iv. 18); and the disciples (Luke x. 1), Peter and John (cp. Acts iii. 1; xii. 2), Paul and Barnabas (xv. 2. 40), Paul and Silas. Here is an example and pattern for Christian Missions.

10. the cloths of service] Rather, the vestments of ministration; the holy garments, in which the priests were clothed when they ministered. So Sept., Onkelos, Vulg., Syriac, Arabic. The following vau, and, is added by way of explanation, and is omitted in xxxix. 41. Cp. also xxxi. 1; and see Kalisch, p. 572.

13. Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep] Do not suppose that the daily ministry of the Tabernacle, which is now to be erected, is to be any reason for neglecting the ordinance of the weekly Sabbath. No. “Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep.” Indeed, the weekly Sabbath was the germ out of which all the services of the Tabernacle were evolved. From it was educes the cycle of the Sabbatical month, the Sabbatical year, and the Jubilee; and he who despised the Sabbath is declared in the Mosaic Law to be guilty of a capital offence against its Divine Author. Cp. xxiii. 10—12; xxxi. 14, 15; xxxv. 2. Num. xv. 33—36. Neh. x. 33; and xiii. 15—19. Isa. lvi. 2—6. Jer. xvii. 21; and Ezek. xx. 16—20. Hos. ii. 11; and see Talmud, Sabbath, 118; Mischna, Chagiga, i. 18; Maimonides, More Nevochim, ii. 31; iii. 32; Kalisch, pp. 356, 357.

— my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign—that ye may know that I am the LORD] As the seventh-day Sabbath was to be kept as a sign that God was the Lord, who overthrew the gods of Egypt, and delivered His people out of bondage into rest (cp. Ezek. xx. 12); so now is the first-day Sabbath to be kept as a sign that Christ is the Lord, who by His Resurrection on that day has overthrown Satan, and has delivered the world from the bondage of sin into the rest of the glorious liberty of the Sons of God; and therefore it is called by the Holy Spirit “the Lord's Day” (Rev. i. 10). “This is the day that the Lord hath made; let us rejoice, and be glad in it” (Ps. cxviii. 24). Cp. Bp. Pearson, Art. v. p. 266; and notes above, on Gen. ii. 2, 3. Exod. xii. 2. Preliminary Note to Exod. xiv.; xx. 8—11; and see ch. xii. and ch. xiv. throughout.

14. shall be cut off] By judgment of God. If the act of profanation is public, then he is to be punished by the arm of the law (see v. 15. Num. xv. 27. 35); if private and wilful, then God Himself will punish him: ep. Gen. xvii. 14.

15. the sabbath of rest] Heb. shabbath shabbathon. A Sabbath of Sabbatism,—an image of that Sabbatism, which, as St. Paul declares, “remaineth to the people of God” (see day, he shall surely be put to death. ¹⁶ Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. ¹⁷ It is ^x a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for ^y in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested and was refreshed.

¹⁸ And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, ^z two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God.

XXXII. ¹ And when the people saw that Moses ^a delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, ^b Up, make us gods, which shall ^c go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him. ² And Aaron said unto them, Break off the ^d golden earrings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me. ³ And all the people brake off the golden earrings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron. ⁴ ^e And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had

x ver. 13.
Ezek. 20. 12, 20.
y Gen. 1. 31, &
2. 2.

z ch. 24. 12. &
32. 15, 16. &
34. 28, 29.
Deut. 4. 13. &
5. 22. & 9. 10, 11.
2 Cor. 3. 3.
a ch. 24. 18.
Deut. 9. 9.

b Acts 7. 40.
c ch. 13. 21.

d Judg. 8. 24, 25, 26, 27.

e ch. 20. 23.
Deut. 9. 16.
Judg. 17. 3, 4.
1 Kings 12. 28.
Neh. 9. 18. Ps. 106. 19. Isa. 46. 6. Acts 7. 41. Rom. 1. 23.

on Heb. iv. 9); and thus it reaches from the Creation to Eternity.

¹⁷ was refreshed] By the sight of His works, which were all very good; and by foresight of His well-beloved Son, who is the True Sabbath, in Whom all find rest, and in Whom the Father is well pleased, and Who by His Rest in the Grave on the Seventh Day, consecrated the Grave to be a Rest in the Lord to all the Israel of God. See on Gen. ii. 1—3. Matt. xviii. 1. Col. ii. 16. Heb. iv. 9.

THE TWO TABLES OF STONE.

¹⁸ tables of stone, written] These two Tables were the work of God (xxiv. 12; xxxii. 16). When they were broken (xxxii. 19), the other two were hewn by Moses, and the words on them were written by God (xxxiv. 1—4). The writing of the Decalogue on stone (not on parchment), and the writing of them by the finger of God, and the writing of them in such a manner so as to cover both sides, and that nothing should be added to them, declared the perpetuity of its obligation, and the completeness of the Ten Commandments, or Moral Law.

In the Gospel, God writes His Law by the finger of God, — the Holy Spirit of God (Matt. xii. 28, compared with Luke xi. 20), — on the fleshy tables of the heart (2 Cor. iii. 3. Cp. Ezek. xi. 19. Jer. xxxi. 33).

For evidence of the writing on stone in the earliest times, see Job xix. 24.

God gave to His people two Tables, written by His own hand; but they rendered themselves unworthy of them by idolatry, and the tables were broken.

The defection of the Israelites, and their disqualification of themselves for God's revelations by Moses, reached its climax in their rejection of Christ Himself. The Lord Himself now gives His Law to us Christians. What will be the punishment of those who disqualify themselves for it!

It is remarkable, that the first set of Tables, which were broken almost as soon as they were made, was the work of God; whereas the second set of Tables, which endured for many centuries, was the work of Moses; and that the writing on them both was the writing of the same Law by God Himself. Perhaps the first set of Tables intimated God's gracious desire and design for all men's eternal good (cp. 1 Tim. ii. 4: "God willeth that all men should be saved"); but that this gracious design may be, and often is, thwarted by man's abuse of his free will: and it may represent God's first offer to the Jews, and its rejection by them. The second set of Tables may represent the Gospel dispensation, where Man in Christ (typified by Moses the Mediator) hews out the Tables anew; and God writes anew upon them with His Divine Finger, in a second Dispensation, that of the Gospel, at Pentecost. See Aug., Qu. in Exod. 144. 166, who in part only takes this view.

The first Tables are called Tables of Stone, in the singular; the second Tables are called stones, in the plural: see below, xxxiv. 1. The first set was hewn by God; the second set, by Moses. May this circumstantial variety, combined, as it is, with essential unity, be designed to intimate the oneness of the Moral Code, under various dispensations, and that the duties of the two Tables rest on one and the same basis,—that of Love to God, and to Man for God's sake?

CH. XXXII. 1. Moses delayed] Forty days and forty nights (xxxiv. 28. Deut. ix. 9).

This chapter and the twentieth are read in the Church on the Tuesday after the Festival of Christ's Resurrection, to remind us that in our Baptism into Christ's Death and Resurrection God gives us a Law, and to show the fearful consequences of breaking it: see the note at the end of the last chapter.

THE GOLDEN CALF.

— Aaron] Who had been left in charge by Moses (xxiv. 14).

This circumstantial recital of the sin of the elder brother of Moses,—Aaron, the future High Priest, with whom God was very angry, on account of this sin, to have destroyed him (Deut. ix. 20),—is a strong evidence of the truth of the history. No palliations or extenuations are offered for Aaron, such as are suggested by the circumstances of the case, and are urged by many Christian expositors (Theodoret, Qu. 66; S. Ambrose, Epist. chap. ii. 67). And the reception of this history by the whole Israelitish Nation is another proof of its veracity. This history relates their own sin,—a sin of great enormity, under peculiar circumstances, aggravating its guilt, and yet the whole Hebrew Nation agreed in receiving, and in publicly reading, this History as true, and divinely inspired. They never would have done this if they had not been convinced by the clearest demonstrations of its Truth and Inspiration: cp. below, on Deut. ix. 4—27; and Introduction to this Volume, p. xxii.

— make us gods] Rather, make us a God (Elohim). Make us a visible representation of the true God. They had not advanced so far in sin as to desire Aaron to make other gods of silver or gold, against the express command in xx. 23. Nor would Aaron have done that: see v. 4. Cp. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 131; Ainsworth, p. 134; Kalisch, p. 574.

— the man that brought us up] They ascribe their deliverance to man, and so they fell from God (S. Aug.).

— we wot not what is become of him] We expected him to come and bring to us a visible form of worship. He has been absent nearly forty days (Deut. ix. 11, 12). God may have taken him to Himself, like Enoch. Do thou supply what we hoped to have from him.

The Mountain still burnt with fire (Deut. ix. 15); perhaps some of them may have imagined that Moses was consumed by it. The truth of this history is avouched in the New Testament by St. Stephen (Acts vii. 39, 40), who quotes the words of the Septuagint here; and also by St. Paul (1 Cor. x. 7), who does the same: cp. v. 6.

² the golden earrings] Spoils of Egypt (xii. 35). Perhaps Aaron expected to divert them from their purpose by this requirement (Theodoret, Augustine).

⁴ fashioned it with a graving tool] By which it was made it a molten calf: and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. ⁵ And when Aaron saw it, he built an altar before it; and Aaron made ^f proclamation, and said, To-morrow is a feast to the LORD. ⁶ And they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the ^g people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

⁷ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^h Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, ⁱ have corrupted themselves: ⁸ They have turned aside quickly out of the way which ^k I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, ^l These be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. ⁹ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^m I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people: ¹⁰ Now therefore ⁿ let me alone, that ^o my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and ^p I will make of thee a great nation.

¹¹ ^q And Moses besought ^r the LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand? ¹² ^s Wherefore should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and ^t repent of this evil against thy people. ¹³ Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou ^u swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, "I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, finished off after it had been molten. It seems probable that the internal form of the calf was of wood, and that the gold molten plate was laid over it, and polished: cp. Isa. xxx. 22; xl. 19; and Keil.

Some have supposed that the original words here signify "he bound it in a purse" (Bochart, Shroeder); but this version cannot be accepted: cp. Keil, p. 537.

— a molten calf] They returned back with their hearts into Egypt, says St. Stephen (Acts vii. 39, 40). A sentence which explains the particular form which Aaron adopted, a calf,—a resemblance of the gods of Egypt (S. Aug., c. Faust. xxii. 93); an imitation of the Egyptian Apis, the living symbol of Osiris (Plutarch, Isid. 33) at Memphis; and of Mnevis, at On, or Heliopolis (Diod. Sic., i. 21; Strabo, xvii. 803; Hengstenberg, Authent. i. 156. 161; Winer, R. W. B. i. 644; and Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 131).

"They made a calf in Horeb," says the Psalmist, with great emphasis (Ps. cvi. 19, 20); that is, at the very mountain—then burning with fire—from which God had promulgated His law against worshipping any graven image.

— These be thy gods] Or, This is thy god. Aaron designed it to be an image of the true God (see vv. 1. 5); and he inaugurates it with the words, "To-morrow is a feast to the Lord."

This is important. Aaron's sin is strongly condemned by God in Scripture (see Deut. ix. 20). But it did not consist in setting up any rival to the true God, but in making an image of the True God. And they who imitate him are guilty before God.

Aaron's example was imitated by Jeroboam, in the calves at Bethel and at Dan (see on 1 Kings xii. 28), which were intended to be symbols of Jehovah, and which were denounced by God as idolatry (1 Kings xiv. 9).

Surely, those persons are even more guilty, who not only make images of the true God, and bow down for adoration, but who set up images as rivals to God, or as objects of that worship which is due to God alone! Let some Christian Churches ponder this warning.

5. Aaron—built an altar before it] The author of idolatry is the Devil (see on Matt. iv. 9. 1 Cor. x. 20). When God is about to give any great blessing to His People, the Devil is specially active in his endeavours to make them sin against God (Bp. Andrewes, v. p. 505). And he endeavours to use holy instruments for that purpose. Here he beguiled Aaron, the priest of God, to make an altar to an idol. He has lured Christian Churches to idolatry. Here are proofs of his power, and of the need of watchfulness against him.

— a feast of the LORD] Aaron professed zeal for the Lord when he was breaking the second commandment (see 1 Cor. x. 7). The same thing is done now by some Christians, who are guilty of idolatry.

6. to eat and to drink] Of the sacrifices.

— to play] Heb. tsachak, to laugh (Gen. xxi. 6), with singing and dancing (see vv. 17—19), as at the festivals of the Egyptian Apis (Herod., ii. 60; iii. 37), and other heathen sacred rites. Judg. xxi. 21. 1 Sam. xviii. 6, 7. 2 Sam. vi. 5. 1 Kings xviii. 26; and see note on 1 Cor. x. 7, where St. Paul comments on this act. It is (says Tertullian de Jejun. 6) a modest word for immodest acts. Justin Martyr (Dialog. c. Tryphon. § 20) refers to this and similar acts of the Israelites as showing their need of a rigorous Code of Ceremonial Laws, to restrain their restless tempers and dissolute excesses.

7. thy people, which thou broughtest] Thy people; they ceased to be My people when they became idolaters (xxxiii. 1). Compare 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17, and our Lord's language to the Jews: "Your house is left unto you desolate" (Matt. xxiii. 38). It ceased to be God's house when they rejected His Son.

8. said, These be thy gods] Such was the language of their hearts, which God read,—if not of their lips (S. Aug.).

10. let me alone] A passage at which the Marcionites took great offence: see Tertullian, c. Marcion. ii. 26, who well observes that this Scripture is designed to bring out in the clearest manner the power and prevalence of the prayers of holy men with God; and how much more of the prayers of Christ! and who exclaims, "Miserandi vos, qui Christum non agnoscitis in personâ Moysi figuratum, Patris deprecatorum, et oblatorem animæ suæ pro populi salutē!" The heinousness of the sin of the Israelites is made more manifest by the divine declaration in this passage (Theodoret).

11. Moses besought the LORD] He recounts the words of his prayer in Deut. ix. 18. 20—29.

f Lev. 23. 2, 4, 21, 37.
2 Kings 10. 20.
2 Chron. 30. 5.
g 1 Cor. 10. 7.

h ver. 1.
ch. 33. 1.
Deut. 9. 12.
Dan. 9. 24.
i Gen. 6. 11, 12.
Deut. 4. 16. & 32. 5.
Judg. 2. 19.
Hos. 9. 9.
k ch. 20. 3, 4, 23
Deut. 9. 16.
l 1 Kings 12. 28.
m ch. 33. 3. 5. & 34. 9.
Deut. 9. 6, 13. & 31. 27.
2 Chron. 30. 8.
lsa. 48. 4.
Acts 7. 51.
n Deut. 9. 14, 19.
o ch. 22. 24.
p Num. 14. 12.
q Deut. 9. 18, 26, 27, 28, 29.
Ps. 74. 1, 2. & 106. 23.
† Heb. the face of the LORD.
r Num. 14. 13.
Deut. 9. 28. & 32. 27.

s ver. 14.
t Gen. 22. 16.
Heb. 6. 13.
u Gen. 12. 7. & 13. 15. & 15. 7, 18. & 26. 4. & 28. 13. & 35. 11, 12.

w Deut. 32. 26.
2 Sam. 24. 16.
1 Chron. 21. 15.
Ps. 105. 45.
Jer. 18. 8. &
26. 13, 19.
Joel 2. 13.
Jonah 3. 10. &
4. 2.
x Deut. 9. 15.
y ch. 31. 18.

and they shall inherit it for ever. ¹⁴ And the LORD ^w repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

¹⁵ And ^x Moses turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written. ¹⁶ And the ^y tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables. ¹⁷ And when Joshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of war in the camp. ¹⁸ And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for † being overcome: but the noise of them that sing do I hear. ¹⁹ And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that ^z he saw the calf, and the dancing: and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount. ²⁰ ^a And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strawed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it.

† Heb. wenkness.

z Deut. 9. 16, 17.

a Deut. 9. 21.

b Gen. 20. 9. &
26. 10.

²¹ And Moses said unto Aaron, ^b What did this people unto thee, that thou

14. the LORD repented] See Gen. vi. 6. "Pœnitentia Dei dicitur rerum in Ejus potestate constitutarum hominibus inopinata mutatio" (Augustine).

15. on the one side and on the other were they written] Cp. Ezek. ii. 10. Rev. v. 1. Josephus (Ant. iii. 6. 5) says that the ten commandments were written five on each table, and two and a half upon each side of them: see above, Preliminary Note to ch. xx.

17. Joshua] See on xxiv. 13.

18. It is not the voice] Literally, it is not the voice of crying (anoth), the infinite mood, from the verb anah, to cry victory (geburah, mastery), and it is not the voice of crying (anoth) defeat; the voice of singing (annoth, infinitive piel from anah) I hear. There is a paronomasia between anoth and annoth (Kalisch, p. 577; and Gesenius, p. 642). The Sept. has ἐξαρχόντων in each clause, and this rendering is a good one. The proper sense of the Hebrew anah seems to be, to strike up a song, or strain, in answer; thence to begin.

19. he cast the tables out of his hands] Moses brake the tables (which had been written by the finger of God), because the people had rendered themselves unworthy to read them (S. Augustine, c. Faust. xxii. 93. Cp. S. Barnabas, Epist. § 4. 14).

The Two Tables were like the Marriage Contract between God and His Church, and these were broken by her idolatry,—which is spiritual adultery (Theodoret, Qu. 68). The Jews preserve a memorial of the breaking of the Tables by an annual fast on the 17th Tamuz (July) (S. Jerome, on Zech. viii.). On this day the Rabbis say that the daily sacrifice ceased in the first Temple, and the Romans made a breach in the walls of Jerusalem (Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. c. 20).

Men lose God's law by violating it. By sinning against God, Nations provoke Him to take the Scriptures from them.

20. And he took the calf] The difference between the character of Moses and Aaron is brought out in a striking manner in this verse compared with vs. 4, 5; and the divine wisdom was seen in the choice made between the two brothers for the leadership of the people. Aaron was an eloquent speaker, but, at this time, was wavering in action and deficient in moral courage. Perhaps his eloquence tempted him to court popularity, and to rely on his own dexterity in managing the people by compromise. Moses was slow in speech, but unflinching and vigorous in maintaining the truth. Aaron overreached himself by his own manoeuvres. He tried to sway the people by an artifice, instead of relying on God, and boldly resisting them with authority; and he was swayed by the popular voice, and sinned against God. Moses set God's law before his eyes, and had a single eye to God's glory, and resisted his brother to the face, as St. Paul did St. Peter (Gal. ii. 11). He vindicated God's honour, and ruled and corrected the People, and reconciled them to God; and was thus an illustrious type of Christ.

— he took the calf—and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder] "Ut omnia impietatis aboleret vestigia," and that they might not be tempted to a relapse; and that their infatuation in worshipping what was thus treated might be more clearly exposed (S. Ambrose, Ep. ii. 67; S. Jerome, ad Fabiol. p. 576).

S. Augustine (c. Faust. xxii. 93) regards this act of Moses, burning the golden calf in fire, and grinding it to powder, and strawing it in water, and giving it to the people to drink,—as a figure of the work of the true servants of God, destroying idolatry, by the preaching of God's Word, which is compared to fire in Scripture (Jer. v. 14. Luke xii. 49), and reducing it to powder, and dissolving it by the waters of Christian Baptism. "Ille vitulus aureus, per ignem zeli, et aciem Verbi, et aquam baptismi, ab eis (qui eum fabricaverant) absorptus est" (S. Augustine, c. Faust. xxii. 93).

— the water] Of the brook that came down out of the mount (Deut. ix. 21); a proof that the Israelites were supplied with water at Sinai (cp. xix. 10), even in the middle of summer, when this event occurred; viz., forty days after the delivery of the Law, which coincided with the season of Pentecost.

— and made the children of Israel drink of it] He thus showed them the misery of sin; that it returns back upon the sinner, and incorporates itself with him; that "it enters into his bowels like water" (Ps. cix. 17); as the water of jealousy did into the adulteress (Num. v. 21, 22); and that men must have a deep and sorrowful sense of their sins, and take them into their own inmost parts by sincere repentance, and not lay them on others.

It is recorded in Deut. ix. 21 that the water in which this powder was dissolved was the water of the brook that descended out of the Mount Horeb. This water was a type of Christ (1 Cor. x. 4). It is only in the living waters which flow from Christ, that our sins can be dissolved. By mingling the remembrance of them with those living waters, together with confession of sin and penitential sorrow, and by abolishing, as for as we can, the effects of our iniquities, we obtain pardon for our sins. In this, as in many other matters, we may apply the wise counsel of S. Irenæus, "Non oportet iudicare, sed tyrum querere." Let us not venture to censure Moses, but see his Antitype in Christ. The typical character of the act has been unfolded by S. Augustine in his reply to the Manichæan's objections against it. See his treatise, Contra Faustum Manichæum, xxii. 93.

21. And Moses said unto Aaron] Since Aaron was the maker of the idol, why was not he punished either by the sword or the plague (v. 35)? Why was Aaron soon afterwards advanced to the priesthood?

This can only be ascribed to God's foreknowledge and mercy. God knows whom to punish and whom to spare; and He tempers judgment with mercy. From God's dealings with Aaron, we may infer His knowledge that Aaron would repent, and would continue faithful to the end. God had compassion on him, and spared him for the sake of his brother Moses, and on account of his prayers (see Deut. ix. 20); as He had spared Lot for Abraham's sake (Gen. xix. 29). So Christ had pity on St. Peter, and prayed for him, in order that when he was converted he might strengthen his brethren (Luke xxii.

hast brought so great a sin upon them? ²² And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: ^c thou knowest the people, that they are set on mischief. ²³ For they said unto me, ^d Make us gods, which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him. ²⁴ And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off. So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there ^e came out this calf.

²⁵ And when Moses saw that the people were ^f naked; (for Aaron ^g had made them naked unto their shame among [†] their enemies :) ²⁶ Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Who is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him. ²⁷ And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and ^h slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every

c ch. 14. 11. &
15. 24. & 16. 2.
20, 28. & 17. 2, 4.
d ver. 1.

e ver. 4.

f ch. 33. 4, 5.
g 2 Chron. 28. 19.
† Heb. those that rose up against them.

h Num. 25. 5.
Deut. 33. 9.

32). Perhaps it may hence be inferred that they, who were punished, would not have repented (cp. S. Augustine, Qu. 148).

25. Aaron] Who ought to have preserved their reverence for God; he himself was an instrument of their shame; and exposed them to insult from men and to the wrath of God.

It is observable that all the responsibility of the miserable condition to which the people were reduced, is laid upon Aaron; because he, who ought to have guided them aright, yielded to their solicitations (S. Augustine).

So it is in the Apocalypse. The errors and sins of Churches are imputed to the chief Ministers of the Churches (see on Rev. ii. 1). A solemn warning to Bishops and Pastors.

— made them naked] The Hebrew word here is from para, to let loose, to make naked, ungriddled (Gesen., 690); probably with their garments loose, in a dissolute and licentious manner (cp. v. 6. 18). The Septuagint has διεσκεδάσμενον.

— unto their shame among their enemies] Cp. v. 12; and Deut. xxviii. 37. Their enemies would scoff at them when they heard that they were chastised by their own brethren at the command of Moses; a proof of their sinfulness, as bringing a reproach from the heathen on themselves, God's people, and on God Himself.

26. Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Who is on the LORD's side?] A bold appeal from the faithful Leader of Israel, when even his own brother had fallen away from his duty to God, and had basely given way to these people in their rebellion and idolatry. It required much courage to make the appeal, and to reply to it. Moses and the Levites were faithful, although Aaron had been faithless.

— all the sons of Levi] The tribe which, in the person of Aaron, had been guilty of the sin against God, and against Moses their own kinsman, must repair the evil.

27. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel] Observe, the command is from God Himself; not from Moses.

— Put every man his sword by his side] The moral of this is,—that nothing in the world is to be placed in the opposite scale against the love of God. No love of parents, brothers, or sisters is to be set against love of God. This had been shown in the case of Abraham offering up Isaac; and see below, v. 29; and S. Ambrose, Epist. ii. 68, who says,—“Nihil durum videtur pro vindictâ, injuriæ cœlestis.”

— slay every man his brother] That had been guilty of rebellion against God, by saying, “Make us a god” (v. 1. Cp. Num. xxv. 5).

The reason of this act is declared by Moses himself. Moses said, “Consecrate yourselves to-day to the Lord” (v. 29); literally, fill your hands for God's service (xxix. 9). The work was to be done in the name of God, for His service (cp. Bp. Andrewes, i. p. 323).

The infliction of punishment on the wicked by the lawful authority, for a breach of divine law, to which a capital penalty is annexed, is represented here and elsewhere in Scripture as an act due to God. Compare the act of Phineas (Num. xxiv. 11—13); and of Samuel (1 Sam. xv. 33).

God Himself intervened to punish this act of idolatry with a pestilence (see v. 35), and whether they fell by the sword of the destroying Angel, or of the Levites, it was equally the act of Him Who is the Arbitrer of Life and Death, and is the only “Lawgiver that is able to save and to destroy” (James iv. 12).

Moses, the divinely appointed leader of Israel, commanded this act to be done, in his fervent zeal for the glory of God (Bp. Andrewes, v. 551); not from any feelings of revenge, but in that ardent love for God which consumed him, and would have made him (in the strong language of Christ Himself) hate even his father and mother (Luke xiv. 26), if they interfered with his love to God.

It is a remarkable circumstance, that in this same chapter, together with the record of this act, is contained that prayer by which Moses showed his intense love for the people,—“Forgive their sin—if not, blot me out of Thy book” (v. 32). He thus performed a double duty; that of a judicial Vicegerent of God, and of a Mediator with Him for the People; and was, in both respects, a remarkable type of CHRIST. Let no one so presume on the mercy of the Saviour, as to forget the righteousness of the Judge.

Heathens have admired Brutus for punishing his sons for treason against their country; but Brutus had not the clear direction that Moses had; nor was their act like that of those who made the calf at Horeb, and were guilty of breaking the commandment given by God Himself from the mountain which still burned with fire.

The severity of the punishment shows the enormous heinousness of the sin. It may well make us tremble, before we allow ourselves to be betrayed into any approach to idolatry.

The first transgressors of any divine law have ever been most severely punished. We see examples of this in the punishment of our first parents; in the punishment of the man who gathered sticks on the sabbath; in that of Nadab and Abihu; and of Ananias and Sapphira; and in the case before us, the first act of idolatry,—and that a most heinous one,—committed by Israel.

These punishments were designed to be warnings that others might be deterred thereby from the like sins; and therefore their severity has an aspect of mercy in it.

In the present case, the greater part of the people had been guilty of idolatry. “If in an army (says Calvin) a mutiny breaks out, the General of the army decimates the guilty; how much more mildly did God deal with Israel, where, out of 600,000 men, 3000 were slain.”

No one but God could tell how terrible might have been the consequences if this impious outrage against God had not been punished as it was; and no one but God can tell how many thousands of Israelites, and how many thousands and tens of thousands of readers and hearers of this history have been deterred from idolatry, and will be saved from eternal perdition by this awful record of the terrible punishment inflicted upon idolatry by Moses, the servant of God, in the name of God. We cannot know this; and we are therefore incompetent to pronounce judgment here. The fact also that God showed his approval of the act of Moses and the Levites, by pronouncing a blessing upon them, and taking them into His service for their zeal for His honour, and for preferring His glory to all earthly considerations (Deut. xxiii. 8, 9; cp. Num. iii. 9. 41. 45. Matt. x. 37), is sufficient to check all rash judgments on our parts, and to constrain us to adore the awful majesty of God with reverence and godly fear.

It is well said by an ancient Father, commenting on this history: “Ecce qui (Moses) vitam omnium eum suâ morte petivit, paucorum vitam gladio extinxit; intus ignibus amoris, foris accensus est zelo severitatis; utrobique legatus fortis, man his neighbour. ²⁸ And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men. ²⁹ ⁱ For Moses had said, † Consecrate yourselves to day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

³⁰ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, ^k Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; ^l peradventure I shall ^m make an atonement for your sin. ³¹ And Moses ⁿ returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have ^o made them gods of gold. ³² Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, ^p blot me, I pray thee, ^q out of thy book which thou hast written. ³³ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^r Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book. ³⁴ Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: ^s behold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless ^t in the day when I visit I will visit their sin upon them. ³⁵ And the LORD plagued the people, because ^u they made the calf, which Aaron made.

XXXIII. ¹ And the LORD said unto Moses, Depart, and go up hence, thou ^a and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the

Num. 25. 11, 12, 13.
Deut. 13. 6—11. & 33. 9, 10.
1 Sam. 15. 18, 22.
Prov. 21. 3.
Zech. 13. 3.
Matt. 10. 37.
¶ Or, And Moses said, Consecrate yourselves to day to the LORD, because every man hath been against his son, and against his brother, &c.
† Heb. Fill your hands.
k 1 Sam. 12. 20, 28.
Luke 15. 18.
12 Sam. 16. 12.
Amos 5. 15.
m Num. 25. 13.
n Deut. 9. 18.
o ch. 20. 23.
p Ps. 69. 28.
Rom. 9. 3.
q Ps. 56. 8. & 139. 16.
Dan. 12. 1.
Phil. 4. 3.
Rev. 3. 5. & 13. 8. & 17. 8. & 20. 12, 15. & 21. 27. & 22. 19.
u 2 Sam. 12. 9. Acts 7. 41.

r Lev. 23. 30. Ezek. 18. 4.
a ch. 32. 7.

s ch. 33. 2, 14, &c. Num. 20. 16.

t Dent. 32. 35. Amos 3. 14. Rom. 2. 5. 6.

causam populi apud Deum precibus, causam Dei apud populum gladiis allegavit; intus amans divinæ iræ supplicando obstitit, foris sæviens culpam feriendo consumpsit. Succurrit citiùs omnibus in offensâ paucorum; sed idcirco Dens eum citiùs audivit agentem pro populo, quia vidit quod super populum acturus esset pro Deo. In regimine ergo populi utrumque Moses miscuit, ut nec disciplina deceset misericordiæ, nec misericordia disciplina" (S. Gregory, Moral. 26; and Pastor. iii. c. 23).

^{28.} the children of Levi did] How was it that the people allowed them to do this?

They were smitten with a sense of sin, and were overwhelmed with an awful dread of God's offended majesty which they felt to be present with Moses, who gave the command.

The act of the Levites was an act of faith and obedience, and is described as such by Moses (Deut. xxxiii. 9); and when men have God on their side, and are animated by zeal for Him, He puts their adversary to confusion before their face: "one of them can chase a thousand" (Dent. xxxii. 30).

For an inference from the danger thus incurred by the Levites, see below, Num. iii. 39.

^{29.} Consecrate yourselves to day to the LORD] Literally, fill your hands to day for the Lord: cp. xxix. 7. Lev. viii. 2; and see 1 Chron. xxix. 5. 2 Chron. xiii. 9; xxix. 31.

— upon his son] Or, against his son, and against his brother. "He that loveth father or mother more than Me, is not worthy of Me" (says Christ, Matt. x. 37). "And if any one come to Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple" (Luke xiv. 26); so that if men censure Moses here, speaking for God, and for His glory and service, they may venture even to blame Christ Himself.

If this act of the Levites had been an act of private revenge, it would have incurred the same malediction from God, as did that of their forefather Levi, for his vindictive cruelty against the Shechemites. "Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel" (Gen. xlix. 7). But, on the contrary, by this act the Levites obtained a blessing from God (Dent. xxxiii. 9).

^{32.} if thou wilt forgive] On the ellipsis here, compare Gen. iv. 8. 1 Sam. xii. 14.

— blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book] Blot me out of the Book of Thine Elect (see Phil. iv. 3. Rev. iii. 5; xiii. 8). Not as if this were possible, but Moses thus shows his zeal for God's glory, which would be impaired, if it could be said that after He had saved the People, He destroyed them almost as soon as they were saved: see the comment which Moses himself supplies on this speech, in Deut. ix. 26—29.

St. Paul imitates the disinterestedness and self-devotion of Moses, and his ardent love for Israel, in Rom. ix. 3.

In both cases, that of Moses and of St. Paul, there is an image of the self-sacrifice of Him Who, in His infinite zeal for His Father's glory, and in His unspeakable love for mankind, vouchsafed to become a curse for us (Gal. iii. 13), and Who satisfied God's offended justice, and appeased His wrath against sin, by offering Himself for us, and Who made thereby a "full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world."

One of the Hebrew Expositors, Rabbi Menachem, makes a remarkable avowal here, viz. that Moses desired to bear their punishment and die for them, according to what is written in Isaiah (liii. 5), "He was wounded for our transgressions," which was fulfilled by Christ (Acts viii. 30—35. 1 Pet. ii. 24).

See the note below, on Rom. ix. 3. Compare also S. Jerome, Epist. ad Algas. p. 203; S. Hilar., in Ps. 68; S. Augustine, Qu. 147; S. Greg. Mag., Moral. x. 6; and Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 147.

The answer of God here appears to refer to that sacrifice, "Whosoever hath sinned against Me, him will I blot out of My book." Thou art a servant, not a Son. Thy life cannot atone for sin. It cannot propitiate Me. Moses and the Law cannot do this. A Moses and a Samuel cannot deliver a guilty nation (Jer. xv. 1). Noah, Daniel, and Job, cannot deliver them (Ezek. xiv. 14. 20). "Was Paul crucified for you?" (1 Cor. i. 13). Could he save you? No; but Christ can. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. xviii. 4). Christ took the nature of all, and died for all. But He had not sinned, and therefore was not blotted out of God's book. Nay, rather by His perfect sinless obedience and suffering He purchased redemption for all; and the names of His faithful people, the Church of the firstborn, the sons of God by adoption in Him, are written in heaven (Heb. xii. 23. Luke x. 20), and are in the Book of Life (Phil. iv. 3); and the Book of Life itself is called the "Lamb's Book of Life" (Rev. xxi. 27); the Book of Life of "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. xiii. 8).

^{34.} mine Angel shall go before thee] Some have doubted whether this is the same Angel as was promised in xxiii. 20 (Dr. W. H. Mill, on Luke i. p. 92; Dr. W. Lee, on Inspiration, p. 125); see on xxxiii. 2.

— I will visit] Unless they repent. Let them therefore not abuse my mercy, and presume upon my grace and goodness. If they do, then this pardon will be cancelled, and the guilt of this sin will return and rise up against them: cp. Matt. xviii. 34; and S. Jerome, in Ezek. xx.; S. Athanas., Epist. 6, ad Serapion. p. 707.

^{35.} The LORD plagued the people, because they made the calf, which Aaron made] Why then did He not plague Aaron? See above, v. 25.

CH. XXXIII. 1. the people which thou hast brought up] God no longer calls them His own people: see xxxii. 7.

land which I swore unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying; ^b Unto thy seed will I give it: ² ^c And I will send an angel before thee; ^d and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite: ³ ^e Unto a land flowing with milk and honey: ^f for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a ^g stiffnecked people: lest ^h I consume thee in the way.

⁴ And when the people heard these evil tidings, ⁱ they mourned: ^k and no man did put on him his ornaments. ⁵ For the LORD had said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, ^l Ye are a stiffnecked people: I will come up ^m into the midst of thee in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now put off thy ornaments from thee, that I may ⁿ know what to do unto thee. ⁶ And the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments by the mount Horeb.

⁷ And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, afar off from the camp, ^o and called it the Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which ^p sought the LORD went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp. ⁸ And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, and stood every man ^q at his tent door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

⁹ And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD ^r talked with Moses. ¹⁰ And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle door: and all the people rose up and ^s worshipped, every man in his tent door. ¹¹ And ^t the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: but ^u his

b Gen. 12. 7.
ch. 32. 13.
c ch. 32. 34. &
34. 11.
d Deut. 7. 22.
Josh. 24. 11.
e ch. 3. 8.
f ver. 15. 17.
g ch. 32. 9. &
34. 9.
Deut. 9. 6. 13.
h ch. 23. 21. &
32. 10.
i Num. 16. 21. 45.
j Num. 14. 1. 39.
k Lev. 10. 6.
l 2 Sam. 19. 24.
m 1 Kings 21. 27.
n 2 Kings 19. 1.
o Ezra 9. 3.
p Esth. 4. 1. 4.
q Job 1. 20. & 2. 12.
r Isa. 32. 11.
s Ezek. 24. 17. 23.
& 26. 16.
t 1 ver. 3.
u In See Num. 16.
45. 46.
n Deut. 8. 2.
p Ps. 139. 23.
o ch. 29. 42. 43.
p Deut. 4. 29.
q 2 Sam. 21. 1.

q Num. 16. 27.

r ch. 25. 22. &
31. 18.
s Ps. 99. 7.
t ch. 4. 31.

t Gen. 32. 30.
Num. 12. 8.
Deut. 34. 10.
u ch. 24. 13.

2. I will send an angel before thee] An angel before thee, instead of the cloud in the midst of thee (v. 3). As the Hebrew expositors say in the Targum, on Cant. ii. 17, "When the people of Israel made the golden calf, and worshipped it, the glorious cloud of God's presence, which had overshadowed them, was removed away from them."

The Angel, here mentioned, is supposed by some of the Fathers to be a created Angel (cp. above, note on xxxii. 34), and by others to be the Son of God. See Euseb., Dem. Ev. v. 15. Cp. above, iii. 2; xxiii. 20—23. Whatever the meaning of the words may be, it is clear that in compliance with the earnest prayer of Moses, God promised that "His Presence" should go with them: see vv. 14—16.

3. I will not go up in the midst of thee] But now God is in the midst of us; for Christ is Emmanuel, μεθ' ἡμῶν Θεός (more emphatic than σὺν ἡμῶν Θεός: see Matt. i. 23); and He says, "Where two or three are gathered together in My Name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matt. xviii. 20).

4. when the people heard these evil tidings] Which were accompanied with a demonstration of God's wrath in the plague (xxxii. 35), and probably by the removal of the cloud: see v. 9.

5. For the LORD had said] Rather, And the Lord said; so Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac. God's words were a consequence of the people's acts.

— Say unto the children of Israel] God sees their repentance, and changes His language (see v. 1). He now calls them children of Israel,—a gracious encouragement to repentance: see 1 Kings xxi. 29. Matt. xxi. 29.

— I will come up into the midst of thee] That is, if I come into the midst of thee, as thou now art, I shall consume thee. So Onkelos; Sept.; Ainsworth, p. 138; and Kalisch, p. 581. Cp. Ps. ii. 12.

— put off] Lay aside. So the Arabic Version.

— thy ornaments] Perhaps worn in honour of the festal celebration, which Aaron had proclaimed (see xxxii. 5), and so a memorial of idolatry.

— that I may know what to do unto thee] Rather, and I shall know how to deal with thee, by the temper which thou showest; that I may spare thee if thou art humbled and penitent, and if thou continuest to be so.

6. by the mount Horeb] Rather, from the Mount Horeb.

So Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Arabic, Syriac, which either means returning to the camp from Mount Horeb (Kalisch, p. 581), or they removed them (their ornaments) far from Horeb, the holy mount of God, and after that time did not assume them. Cp. ἀπὸ, in Heb. xiii. 24, and note there; and Winer, Gramm. § 47, p. 331. They left them off, from the time they were there.

7. the tabernacle] Not the Holy Tabernacle, which was not yet built (see below, xxxvi.), but either the tent of Moses himself (as the Septuagint renders it, and the Syriac, and so Philo, and S. Cyril), or some other tent which had been used for sacred purposes: see xviii. 7.

— the Tabernacle of the congregation] Rather, the tabernacle of meeting. See the prelin. note to ch. xxv.

9. as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended] Thus God gave, in the presence of all Israel, a visible approval and sanction to the acts of Moses, recorded in the foregoing chapter, xxxii. 19, 20. 26—29. God had been alienated from Israel by their idolatry; but He acknowledged the faithfulness of Moses, His servant; and Moses was the Mediator between God and them, and reconciled God to them,—a signal type of the One Mediator and Intercessor (1 Tim. ii. 5. Heb. vii. 25).

11. the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend] A remarkable assertion of the intimacy to which Moses was admitted with God. See also the declaration in Num. xii. 8; and Deut. xxxiv. 10.

These passages are very important in relation to the question concerning the composition of the Pentateuch;

The Pentateuch was received by the Hebrew Church as the work of Moses. Christ and His Apostles received it as such. The Christian Church receives it as such.

These declarations, which affirm God's intimate intercourse with Moses, and the divine communication to him, afford a much more rational and credible account of the composition of the Pentateuch than any unauthorized speculations as to the existence of fragmentary documents from which the Pentateuch is supposed by some to have been compiled. How could any uninspired writer have given an account of what took place before the Creation, and in it? How could he have told us the number of fathoms of the water of the Deluge? How could he have given us such narratives as we read there, of the Sacrifice servant Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

x ch. 32. 34.

y ver. 17.
Gen. 18. 19.
Ps. 1. 6.
Jer. 1. 5.
John 10. 14, 15.
2 Tim. 2. 19.
z ch. 34. 9.
a Ps. 25. 4. &
27. 11. & 86. 11.
& 119. 33.
b Deut. 9. 26, 29.
Joel 2. 17.
c ch. 13. 21. &
40. 34—38.
Isa. 63. 9.
d Deut. 3. 20.
Josh. 21. 44. &
22. 4. & 23. 1.
Ps. 95. 11.
e ver. 3.
ch. 34. 9.
f Num. 14. 14.
g ch. 34. 10.
Deut. 4. 7, 34.
2 Sam. 7. 23.
1 Kings 8. 53.
Ps. 147. 20.
h Gen. 19. 21.
James 5. 16.
i ver. 12.
k ver. 20.
l 1 Tim. 6. 16.
1 ch. 34. 5, 6, 7.
Jer. 31. 14.
m Rom. 9. 15, 16, 18. n Rom. 4. 4, 16.
o Gen. 32. 30.
Deut. 5. 24. Judg. 6. 22. & 13. 22. Isa. 6. 5. Rev. 1. 16, 17. See ch. 24. 10.

¹² And Moses said unto the LORD, Sec, ^x thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, ^y I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight. ¹³ Now therefore, I pray thee, ^z if I have found grace in thy sight, ^a shew me now thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider that this nation is ^b thy people. ¹⁴ And he said, ^c My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee ^d rest. ¹⁵ And he said unto him, ^e If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence. ¹⁶ For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? ^f is it not in that thou goest with us? so ^g shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

¹⁷ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^h I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for ⁱ thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name. ¹⁸ And he said, I beseech thee, shew me ^k thy glory. ¹⁹ And he said, ^l I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; ^m and will be ⁿ gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy. ²⁰ And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for ^o there shall no man see me, and live. ²¹ And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock: ²² And it of Isaac, of the Passover, of the Passage of the Red Sea,—narratives which are evidently pre-adjusted to Christian Mysteries? How could he have given us such minute details of divine legislation as we find in the latter half of Exodus, and in the whole of Leviticus? On this subject, see the Discourses of the learned John Smith, of Cambridge, ch. xi. pp. 281—287; and the Introduction to the present Volume.

The single fact that the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh to his friend, and that Moses wrote the Pentateuch by divine revelation, supplies the true solution of all these and similar phenomena.

The Fathers suppose that the Revealer was Christ. Thus S. Irenæus says (iv. 37), “Inasmuch as ‘no man hath seen God at any time, but the only-begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him’ (John i. 18); and therefore, Moses had a Vision of Christ, the Divine Word;” and so Tertullian (c. Prax. c. 14), “Enarrat Deum ab initio Filius.”

Moses, the Mediator of the Ancient Covenant, had a nearer intimacy with God than any of the children of men. But He, of whom Moses was a figure, and who is the “Mediator of the New Testament,” was in the bosom of the Father from the beginning (John i. 18), and revealed Him to Moses. The ETERNAL WORD speaks by Moses in the written Word.

— Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle Joshua was admitted into the tent of Moses, where God talked with Moses. The Septuagint here inserts the word θεράπων, minister. Joshua, the minister of Moses, when “a young man,” in the tent with Moses, is a figure of Jesus Christ, our Joshua, “who was born under the law” (Gal. iv. 4), and “fulfilled all righteousness” (Matt. iii. 15), and departed not from the tent of Moses, but glorified it with His presence: see below, on Josh. i. 1.

¹² thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me] Thou hast not revealed to me, who the Angel is, promised in xxxii. 34.

— I know thee by name] In a special manner. I have chosen thee as mine own: see Isa. xliii. 1; xlix. 1. “The Good Shepherd calls all His sheep by name” (John x. 3. Cp. 2 Tim. ii. 19. 3 John 15).

¹⁴ My presence] Called by Isaiah (lxiii. 9) “the Angel of God’s Presence,” and by Malachi (iii. 1) “the Angel of the Covenant,” and “the Angel, the Redeemer,” by the Hebrew expositors, as R. Menachem here.

In some mysterious manner this Angel and this Presence are identified with God Himself: see v. 16, “Thou goest with us;” and therefore the Septuagint renders thy Presence by thou thyself, in v. 15, and My Presence by I Myself, v. 14.

The Angel, who is God’s Presence, is Christ, “the brightness of His Father’s glory, and the express image of His Person” (Ileb. i. 3. See above on xxiii. 20).

The anxiety of Moses at this time, and his earnest longing for some manifestation of God’s presence and favour, are very natural, and easily explained.

Doubtless he felt some doubt, whether, after the enormous sin of ingratitude and rebellion against God, of which the Israelites had just been guilty, God would continue to be their Leader. The revelation, which he now received from God, was a gracious assurance of love to His faithful servant Moses, and of mercy to His sinful people. It was an act of amnesty and reconciliation; a renewal of the Covenant. It was a foretaste of that divine love which overflows upon us in Christ, as a reward for His Obedience, and in answer to His Prayers.

¹⁸ shew me thy glory] This is the craving of the Law,—to see the glory of God in Christ. It yearned for the time when it could be said, as it is by the blessed Evangelist, “We beheld His glory, the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father, full of grace and of truth” (John i. 14. 1 John i. 2).

The prayer of Moses was granted at the Transfiguration, when he saw Christ’s glory, and shone by it (Luke ix. 31, 32. Cp. 2 Pet. i. 17; and Tertullian, c. Marcion. iv. 22; Origen, Homil. 12).

¹⁹ I will make all my goodness pass before thee] This blessed privilege was granted to Moses, who was only a servant, “for a witness of those things which were to be spoken after” (Ileb. iii. 5). How much greater blessedness do they enjoy, who see the things themselves! And how great ought to be their thankfulness, and how great is their responsibility (Matt. xiii. 16)!

— I will proclaim the Name of the LORD before thee] See xxxiv. 5. Who is this that the LORD calls the LORD, and whose Name He will proclaim to Moses? Was there not here a Revelation of the Father and the Son? (S. Cyril, Cat. 10; see also Concil. Antioch., c. Paul. Samos. p. 847; Tertullian, c. Prax. c. 14; Novatian de Trin. c. 26; S. Cyril, c. Julian. ix. p. 294; S. Aug., Qu. 154, who sees here a promise of the proclamation of the Gospel to those whom Moses represented as their head; viz., the Jews); as there is also a promise to the Gentiles in the words “I will be gracious.” See St. Paul’s comment upon this passage, Rom. ix. 15, 16. 24—33.

²⁰ Thou canst not see my face] God spake with Moses face to face (v. 11), but Moses could not see His face. This is reserved in another life for the pure in heart (Matt. v. 8. 1 Cor. xiii. 12. 1 John iii. 2; S. Ambrose, in Ps. 118); but all will see their Judge (Rev. i. 7).

shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee ^p in a cleft of the rock, and will ^q cover thee with my hand while I pass by: ²³ And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts: but my face shall ^r not be seen.

XXXIV. ¹ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^a Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: ^b and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest. ² And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me ^c in the top of the mount. ³ And no man shall ^d come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.

⁴ And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Moses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had

r ver. 20
John i. 18.
a ch. 32. 16, 19.
Deut. 10. 1.
b ver. 23.
Deut. 10. 2, 4.

c ch. 19. 20. &
24. 12.
d ch. 19. 12, 13,
21.

The CLIFT of the ROCK.

22. cleft of the rock] Moses, in the cleft of the Rock, saw God's glory. The cleft in the rock which contained him showed his littleness and God's strength (S. Cyril, S. Aug.).

Moses was the figure of the Law, and CHRIST is the Rock cleft for our sakes (1 Cor. x. 4). The Law could not see God, except by reception into Christ (S. Augustine, Qu. 154).

By our baptism we are in Christ: we are baptized into His death. Thus we are placed in the cleft of the rock, and we see God's love. So true is it, as St. John declares, that "no man hath seen God at any time; the only-begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him" (John i. 18). It is only by being in Christ, and by being in Christ crucified, that we behold God's goodness and glory. It is impossible for man to see God, except by being in the cleft of the Rock,—which is Christ. See S. Irenæus, iv. 37, who has some excellent remarks on the revelation of Divine glory in Christ, to the Patriarchs and Prophets of the old dispensation.

This cleft in the rock was on the top of Mount Sinai; see xxxiv. 2. Some suppose that the place was the same as that on which Elijah passed the night in Horeb, and saw the vision of God (1 Kings xix. 8; Hengst., Auth. i. 129); and that it is a small rocky level about eighty feet in diameter, on the summit of Jebel Musa, where is now a small chapel and a ruined mosque, under which is a small grotto (Robinson). The Moslem tradition, with which the Greek monks agree, points to this spot as the place where Moses received the Law. Both those two Visions at Horeb—this to Moses the Giver of the Law, and that other Vision to Elijah the greatest of the Prophets—declared one and the same truth, viz. that the Law and the Prophets were preparatory to the Gospel. See below on 1 Kings xix. 11, 12.

—will cover thee with my hand] When we are in Christ, God covers us. He hides our sins in Him; and we can say, "Blessed is the man whose unrighteousness is forgiven, and whose sin is covered" (Ps. xxxii. 1). And in Christ we are covered with His protection; we abide there under the shadow of the Almighty; we are covered with His wings, and are safe under His feathers (Ps. xci. 1. 4).

23. my back parts] Compare the vision to Elijah (1 Kings xix. 11). Such was the vision of God to the Patriarchs and Prophets; they saw the promises afar off, in front of them, and with the back turned to them: we look back, and see "the face of God in Christ" (2 Cor. iv. 6: cp. on Num. xiii. 23). But with our present faculties we cannot judge aright of God and of divine things. In the natural world, and much more in the spiritual, we see but the skirts of His glory (see Job xxvi. 14); and therefore we are incompetent to pronounce judgment upon them (cp. S. Irenæus, iv. 57; S. Hilary, on Ps. exiii.; S. Cyril, Cat. 10; Theodoret, Qu. 68).

This speech of God even to Moses,—to Moses, the saint of the Lord, with whom "He talked as with a friend" (xxxiii. 9—11), may well be a lesson of humility and reverence, especially in the interpretation of His Holy Word. "We now see through a glass darkly" (1 Cor. xiii. 12); but if we pray for His grace to open our eyes, and if we cherish a spirit of meekness, humility, piety, and love, we may see Him face to face.

Moses was permitted to see His back parts. What are these? Are they not the humiliations of the Godhead in Christ; His afflictions and sufferings? (S. Ambrose, in Ps. 43.)

The contemplation and imitation of these is the way to glory. If we are with Him in the cleft of the rock, and if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him (Matt. x. 38. Phil. iii. 10—14. 2 Tim. ii. 12).

St. Paul suggests the interpretation given in this and the foregoing note, by his comment on the inability of the literal Israel to see the glory of God, reflected on the countenance of Moses, and by saying that "the veil on his countenance is taken away in Christ" (see 2 Cor. iii. 16, and below on xxxiv. 33).

The historical truth of this mysterious revelation to Moses is avouched by St. Paul, who quotes the words of the Septuagint in Rom. ix. 15.

On this passage (xxxiii. 18—23) an ancient Father thus remarks;—"It may well be asked, 'How could Moses, who had so many visions of God, still desire to see God, as if he had never seen Him before; and how God could say, No man shall see Me and live? And what is the meaning of the words, There is a place by me, and thou shalt stand on a rock, and I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, will cover thee with my hand, and thou shalt see my back parts?' In reply to these questions, we must first observe that God has no form or shape; for God is incorruptible, and indissoluble. Next, let us hence learn, that the true servant of God, like Moses, is never satiated with seeing God; and that this is the nature of divine knowledge, that it creates an appetite by feeding it. The more we know of God, the more we shall desire to know Him. The more we see of His beauty, the more we shall crave to see it. No man can see God's face and live; not that the vision of God is itself a cause of death,—for God is Life,—but because nothing that is visible to man, as man is now, is God; and if God could be seen by us in our present state, that vision would confound us; and thus we learn to look for another state of being where we shall be changed, and be able to see Him. But if we stand upon a rock, if we place our feet firmly on the Rock, which is Christ, we may have glimpses of God by faith; we may see His back parts. He that looks to God in Christ, as his Guide, he that comes after Him, and follows Him by faith and obedience, he has glimpses and gleams of God." See S. Greg. Nyssen. de Vit. Mos. pp. 240—243, and S. Aug. de Trin. ii. 16.

Ch. XXXIV. 1. Hew thee two tables of stone] Literally, two tables of stones (in the plural); and so v. 4. The former tables, which were hewn out by God, are called tables of stone (in the singular), xxiv. 12; xxxi. 18.

In the former, the material and the writing were from God; in the latter, the writing was from God, but the material was hewn by the ministry of man. God graciously permits Moses to hew again, and restore, what in his zeal had been broken; and He accepts the material prepared by him, and writes upon it. This was a mark of approval and favour. On this subject, cp. S. Greg. Nyssen. de Vit. Mosis, p. 183; and see above, on xxxi. 18, as to the probable spiritual significance of this action.

Moses, by obedience, zeal, and prayer, procured the restoration of God's Law: cp. Deut. x. 1, 2.

2. in the top of the mount] See above, on xxxiii. 22.

3. neither let the flocks nor herds feed] Hence it appears that there was pasturage for cattle near Mount Sinai. Moses had resorted thither in the first instance to feed Jethro's flock (iii. 1), and there he was called by God to be the shepherd of His people (cp. Ps. lxxvii. 20).

e ch. 33. 17.
Num. 14. 17.

f Num. 14. 18.
2 Chron. 30. 9.
Neh. 9. 17.
Ps. 86. 15. &
103. 8. & 111. 4.
& 112. 4. & 116. 5.
& 145. 8.
Joel 2. 13.
g Ps. 31. 19.
Rom. 2. 4.
h Ps. 57. 10. &
108. 4.
i ch. 20. 6.
Deut. 5. 10.
Ps. 86. 15.
Jer. 32. 18.
Dan. 9. 4.
k Ps. 103. 3. &
130. 4.
Dan. 9. 9.
Eph. 4. 32.
l John 1. 9.
1 ch. 23. 7. 21.
Josh. 24. 19.
Job 10. 14.
Mic. 6. 11.
Nah. 1. 3.
m ch. 4. 31.
n ch. 33. 15, 16.
o ch. 33. 3.
p Deut. 32. 9.
Ps. 28. 9. &
33. 12. & 78. 62.
& 94. 14.
Jer. 10. 16.
Zeck. 2. 12.
q Deut. 5. 2. &
29. 12. 14.
r Deut. 4. 32.
2 Sam. 7. 23.
Ps. 77. 14. &
78. 12. & 147. 20.
s Deut. 10. 21.
Ps. 145. 6.
Isa. 64. 3.
t Deut. 5. 32. &
6. 3, 25. & 12. 29,
32. & 28. 1.
u ch. 33. 2.
x ch. 23. 32.
Deut. 7. 2.
Judg. 2. 2.
y ch. 23. 33.
z ch. 23. 24.
Deut. 12. 3.
Judg. 2. 2.
† Heb. statues. a Deut. 7. 5. &
12. 2.
Judg. 6. 25.
2 Kings 18. 4. &
23. 14.
2 Chron. 31. 1. &
34. 3, 4.
b ch. 20. 3, 5.

c So Isa. 9. 6. & 57. 15. d ch. 20. 5. e ver. 12. f Deut. 31. 16. Judg. 2. 17. Jer. 3. 9. Ezek. 6. 9. g Num. 25. 2. 1 Cor. 10. 27.
h Ps. 106. 28. 1 Cor. 8. 4, 7, 10. i Deut. 7. 3. 1 Kings 11. 2. Ezra 9. 2. Neh. 13. 25. k Num. 25. 1, 2. 1 Kings 11. 4. l ch. 32. 8.
Lev. 19. 4. m ch. 12. 15. & 23. 15. n ch. 13. 4. o ch. 13. 2, 12. & 22. 29. Ezek. 44. 30. Luke 2. 23.

commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone. ⁵And the LORD descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and ^eproclaimed the name of the LORD. ⁶And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD ^fGod, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in ^ggoodness and ^htruth, ⁷i Keeping mercy for thousands, ^kfor-giving iniquity and transgression and sin, and ^lthat will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation. ⁸And Moses made haste, and ^mbowed his head toward the earth, and worshipped. ⁹And he said, If now I have found grace in thy sight, O Lord, ⁿlet my Lord, I pray thee, go among us; for ^oit is a stiffnecked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for ^pthine inheritance.

¹⁰And he said, Behold, ^qI make a covenant: before all thy people I will ^rdo marvels, such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD: for it is ^sa terrible thing that I will do with thee. ¹¹^tObserve thou that which I command thee this day: behold, ^uI drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite. ¹²^xTake heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for ^ya snare in the midst of thee: ¹³But ye shall ^zdestroy their altars, break their [†]images, and ^acut down their groves: ¹⁴For thou shalt worship ^bno other god: for the LORD, whose ^cname is Jealous, is a ^djealous God: ¹⁵^eLest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they ^fgo a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and ^gone ^hcall thee, and thou ⁱeat of his sacrifice; ¹⁶And thou take of ^jtheir daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters ^kgo a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods. ¹⁷^lThou shalt make thee no molten gods.

¹⁸The feast of ^munleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abib: for in the ⁿmonth Abib thou camest out from Egypt. ¹⁹^oAll that openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle, whether ox or sheep, that

5. the LORD—proclaimed the name of the LORD] This manner of speech contains an intimation of a plurality of Persons in the Godhead: see Gen. xix. 24; and above, xxxiii. 19.

6. the LORD passed by before him] S. Irenæus (iv. 37) states his belief that in these communings with God, Moses had visions of Christ. This is the more probable, because it is in Christ alone that we can hope for mercy; and (as Bp. Andrewes observes, v. 324) "in God's own style, framed and proclaimed by Himself here, consisting of thirteen titles, next after the LORD GOD, is this word Merciful; and of these thirteen titles, nine of them belong to Mercy;" see above, on xxxiii. 18—23.

Indeed, the special design of this revelation of God to Moses at Sinai, was, to intimate that the true end of the Law delivered to Moses at Sinai was to prepare the way for the Gospel of Christ; see below on 1 Kings xix. 11, 12, and below on v. 33.

7. that will by no means clear the guilty] The words the guilty are not in the text, but are rightly inserted, as in the Septuagint and Onkelos: cp. Num. xiv. 18. Nahum i. 3.

God proclaims His attributes of mercy first; and afterwards those of justice. He willesh that all should be saved: see 1 Tim. ii. 4; and note on Matt. xxv. 41.

—upon the children] If they imitate the sins of their fathers: see on xx. 6.

9. for it is a stiffnecked people] Moses pleads their natural corruption as a reason for mercy. God Himself had admitted that plea after the flood: see above, Gen. viii. 21.

13. images] Heb. matseboth, from natsab, to erect; either pillars dedicated to a deity (Gen. xxviii. 18: cp. Exod. xxiii. 14), or statues of a deity (2 Kings iii. 2); see Gesen., p. 500.

—groves] So the Hebrew asherim is rendered by Sept., Fulg., Onkelos, and by our Version in Deut. vii. 5; xii. 3; xvi. 21 (where the ancient Versions agree with this interpretation. Judges iii. 7; vi. 25, 26, 28, 30. 1 Kings xiv. 15, 23), and in about twenty-five other places. But there are strong objections to this rendering (see 2 Kings xiii. 6); and the Syriac has deities here; the Arabic has lofty trees.

The idea contained in the root of the word seems to be erection, setting up, straightness. Thus it is probably connected with ashrei, happy, what is upright, prosperous, and flourishing; and with asherah, the Canaanitish Venus, or goddess of prosperity (see Gen. xxx. 13. Judges ii. 13; iii. 7. 2 Kings xxiii. 4), and thence it came to signify pillars, or columns, and statues dedicated to her; which were made of wood, and are therefore said to be cut down and burned: see here, and Judges vi. 25. 2 Kings xxiii. 6. 15: cp. Movers, Phœnizier, i. 560; Winer, R. W. B. i. 94; Gotch in Smith's Bib. Diet. i. 120; Gesenius, p. 91; Keil, p. 553.

14. jealous] See xx. 5.

15. a whoring] Forsaking thy "Maker, who is thy husband" (Isa. liv. 5), and going as a harlot after idol lovers. Jer. iii. 1. Ezek. xvi. 36. Hos. ii. 5, 10. Spiritual whoredom was usually connected with carnal harlotry; see Num. xiv. 33. Lev. xvii. 7.

is male. ²⁰ But ^p the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a || lamb : and if thou redeem him not, then shalt thou break his neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. And none shall appear before me ^a empty.

²¹ ^r Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest : in eaning time and in harvest thou shalt rest.

²² ^s And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, of the firstfruits of wheat harvest, and the feast of ingathering at the † year's end.

²³ ^t Thrice in the year shall all your men children appear before the Lord God, the God of Israel. ²⁴ For I will ^u cast out the nations before thee, and ^x enlarge thy borders : ^y neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year.

²⁵ ^z Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leaven ; ^a neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover be left unto the morning.

²⁶ ^b The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. ^c Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

²⁷ And the LORD said unto Moses, Write thou ^d these words : for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.

²⁸ ^e And he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights ; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And ^f he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten † commandments.

²⁹ And it came to pass, when Moses came down from mount Sinai with the ^g two tables of testimony in Moses' hand, when he came down from the mount, that Moses wist not that ^h the skin of his face shone while he talked with him.

³⁰ And when Aaron and all the children of Israel saw Moses, behold, the skin of his face shone ; and they were afraid to come nigh him. ³¹ And Moses called unto them ; and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him : and Moses talked with them. ³² And afterward all the children of Israel came nigh : and ⁱ he gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai. ³³ And till Moses had done speaking with them, he put ^k a veil on his face. ³⁴ But ^l when Moses went in before the

p ch. 13. 13.
Num. 18. 15.
|| Or, kid.

q ch. 23. 15.
Deut. 16. 16.
1 Sam. 9. 7, 8.
2 Sam. 24. 24.
r ch. 20. 9. &
23. 12. & 35. 2.
Deut. 5. 12. 13.
Luke 13. 14.
s ch. 23. 16.
Deut. 16. 10, 13.

† Heb. revolutio of the year.
t ch. 23. 14, 17.
Deut. 16. 16.
u ch. 33. 2.
Lev. 18. 24.
Deut. 7. 1.
Ps. 78. 55. &
80. 8.

x Deut. 12. 20. & 19. 8.
y See Gen. 35. 5.
2 Chron. 17. 10.
Prov. 16. 7.
Acts 18. 10.
z ch. 23. 18.
a ch. 12. 10.
b ch. 23. 19.
Deut. 26. 2, 10.
c ch. 23. 19.
Deut. 14. 21.
d ver. 10.
Deut. 4. 13. &
31. 9.

e ch. 24. 18.
Deut. 9. 9, 13.
f ver. 1.
ch. 31. 18. &
32. 16.
Deut. 4. 13. &
10. 2, 4.
† Heb. words.

g ch. 32. 15.
h Matt. 17. 2.
2 Cor. 3. 7, 13.

i ch. 24. 3.

k 2 Cor. 3. 13.
12 Cor. 3. 16.

20. the firstling of an ass] See the notes on the parallel passage, specified in the margin, in this and other places throughout this chapter, and to the end of Exodus.

22. the feast of weeks] Pentecost : see Lev. xxiii. 15.

24. neither shall any man desire thy land] Either this prophecy came true, or it did not ; if it did not, then the law which contains it would never have been received as divine by the Jews ; if it did, then we have in its fulfilment a standing miracle, and an evidence of the divine mission of Moses.

29. Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone] It shone from communion with God ;

This shining was a sign of God's glory ; and it was also a proof to the people of the divine mission of Moses ; it showed him to be an accredited ambassador from God, Whose glory shone in his countenance. The face of Moses now shone with the glory of Jehovah ; it afterwards shone with the glory of Christ at the Transfiguration (Matt. xvii. 3) ; so the faces of the saints shine from communing with God in prayer. So St. Stephen's face shone like the face of an Angel (Acts vi. 15) ; and the righteous will shine forth like the sun in the kingdom of their Father (Matt. xiii. 43).

But Moses wist not that his face shone. The Saints of God are least conscious of their own gifts.

The Vulgate Version here has "ignorat quod cornuta esset facies sua ;" he wist not that his face was cornuta, a translation of the Hebrew karan, emitted beams, radiated. This Hebrew word is derived from keren, a horn ; the rays of a luminous body being like the horns which sprout from the face of an animal, whence the crescent moon was called bicornis ; and Diana is so represented ; and Virgil uses the term "cornua lunnæ" (Æn. iii. 645). See also above, Gen. xiv. 5, on the name Ashtoreth Karnaim.

VOL. I. PART I.—321

The dual Karnaim is used for flashes of lightning, by Habakkuk, iii. 4 (which suggests that the Greek word κεραυνός, thunder and lightning, may be connected with a similar root, —κέρως) ; and it is observable, that the Prophet is there describing the appearance of God Himself at Horeb, "His brightness was as the light ; he had horns (bright flashes) coming out of His hands."

Perhaps the framers of the Vulgate in the present passage did not intend the word cornuta to be understood literally, any more than Aquila did, who translated it by κερατώδης (S. Jerome, on Amos vi.). But the expression (which is strenuously defended by à Lapide) has unhappily led to the representation of Moses as cornutus by Painters and Sculptors,—for example, in the celebrated statue of Moses by Michael Angelo, in the Church of S. Pietro in Vincoli, at Rome.

His face shone. It is observable that here it is only the face of Moses, that is described as shining ; but at the Transfiguration "Moses appeared in glory" with Christ (see Matt. xvii. 2—5. Luke ix. 31). The whole Law is bathed with light by the Gospel ; cp. Origen, Hom. 12, in Exod., "Nihil aliud in Lege gloriosum habet Moses, nisi totam faciem ; in Evangelio autem totus glorificatur."

THE VEIL ON THE FACE OF MOSES.

33. And till Moses had done speaking with them, he put a veil on his face] Rather, and when Moses had done speaking. So Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac, Arabic, Kalisch. Moses, whose face shone from communing with God, brought down from the Mountain the two Tables of the Law, written with the finger of God, and he declared God's will and words to the People. They had been guilty of idolatry,—which blinds the spiritual eye,—and could not bear to look at his coun-

Y

LORD to speak with him, he took the veil off, until he came out. And he came out, and spake unto the children of Israel that which he was commanded.

³⁵ And the children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' tenance, on which the divine glory beamed. They were afraid to behold, when they heard the declarations of the Divine Law which they had broken; they were confounded by a sense of their own sin, and were awe-struck with the terrors of the Divine Omnipotence (Origen, Hom. 12, in Exod.).

They feared to approach Moses (v. 30). "They could not stedfastly behold his face, for the glory of his countenance" (2 Cor. iii. 8); and when he had declared to them God's Law (which he could not have done, if he had then had a veil upon his face) he put on a veil, and when he returned to commune with God, he took off the veil (v. 34).

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, has unfolded to us the figurative meaning of this act.

The Israelites were blinded by the hardness of their hearts, and by their disobedience to God, and were not able to look on the reflexion of His glory. Moses put a veil on his face, and he thus intimated that there was a veil on their hearts,—the veil of disobedience; for, if they had been true to God, they would have been able to look upon the countenance of Moses, and would have rejoiced in the sight.

Moses was the Giver of the Law, and its Representative. As such he appeared with Elias, the Representative of the Prophets, at the Transfiguration of Christ, in order to do honour to Christ and the Gospel, and to show that the glory of the Law and the Prophets is only a reflexion of the glory of Christ (Luke ix. 31).

When Moses came down from the Mount with the Law in his hands, his face shone. It was irradiated with the glory of God. Christ is the glory of God, shining in the Law of Moses. The Israelites, on account of their disobedience and rebellion against God, could not bear to look on that glorious illumination. They saw the two Tables of stone, and beheld the letters upon them, but they could not behold the divine glory in the face of Moses, the bearer of the Law from God. And so it is to this day. The Jews (as Theodore says, Qu. 69) read the letter of the Law, but they do not behold its Glory. It is veiled to them, on account of their disobedience and rebellion against God, in rejecting His dear Son. They cannot see in the Law the glory of God, which is Christ. They cannot behold Him there. As St. Paul says, "The veil is on their hearts in the reading of the Old Testament. Even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is on their hearts. But this veil is done away in Christ; and when their heart shall turn to the Lord, the veil is taken away." Observe the present tense, περιαιρέται; in that very act of their turning to the Lord it is being drawn off; that veil, which was wrapped round (περὶ) it, is being drawn off (see on 2 Cor. iii. 8—16).

The words of the Holy Spirit in the Book of Exodus, when interpreted by the same Spirit speaking by St. Paul in the New Testament, are of unspeakable importance, as declaring the true end of the Law, and as instructing us how the Pentateuch ought to be read. And the reader will do well to compare the Greek words in the Septuagint in this interesting history, with the Greek words of St. Paul in commenting upon it. They may be seen below, placed side by side, in the note on 2 Cor. iii. 7—18, p. 154.

The end of the Law is CHRIST (2 Cor. iii. 12). He is veiled in types and shadows in the Law, and this veil is taken away in Him, Who is the substance of what was prefigured in the Law, in the Passover, the Passage of the Red Sea, the Manna, the Smitten Rock, the Pillar of Cloud and Fire (1 Cor. x. 1—6). The true meaning of these things cannot be understood without belief in the Gospel. They are unfolded there. "In Lege Evangelium latet, in Evangelio Lex patet." The veil is taken away in Christ, and our face shines, like that of Moses himself, when he took the veil from his face and communed with God. It is observable, that St. Paul, when speaking of the taking of the veil from the heart, uses precisely the same word, and that a remarkable and most expressive word, as the Septuagint had used to describe the taking away of the veil from the face of Moses (περιαιρέται, Sept., v. 34).

The Spirit of Christ in the Gospel illuminates the Pentateuch, and takes the veil from its face, and irradiates its features with heavenly glory. It also takes the veil from the hearts of its hearers and readers, and enables them to see its true beauty and glory, illuminated by the light of Christ's Teaching, Actions, Sufferings, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension, as related in the Gospel. Christ opens to us the Scriptures (Luke xxiv. 32); and He opens our hearts to understand them (see Luke xxiv. 45).

Without Christ, the Old Testament is veiled, and the New Testament itself is a sealed book, which can only be opened by Him, Who is "the Lamb that was slain, and alone is worthy to take and open the Book that was sealed" (Rev. v. 7—9). Let us, therefore, take heed to ourselves how we hear, and how we read it; and let us pray to Him to open our eyes, and to shine upon our hearts, that we may understand it. As is excellently said by an ancient Father of the Church,—"Videamus ergo, ne non solum, cum Moses legitur, sed et cum Paulus legitur, velamen sit positum super cor nostrum. Et manifestè, si negligenter audimus, si nihil studii ad eruditionem et intelligentiam conferimus, non solum Legis et Prophetarum Scriptura, sed et Apostolorum et Evangeliorum, grandi nobis velamine tegitur. Ego autem vereor, ne per nimiam negligentiam et stoliditatem cordis, non solum velata sint nobis divina volumina, sed et signata: ut si detur in manus hominis nescientis literas liber legendus, dicat, quia nescio literas: si detur in manus hominis scientis literas, dicat quia signatus est (Isa. xxix. 11). Unde ostenditur, non solum studium nobis adhibendum esse ad descendas literas sacras, verum et supplicandum Domino, et diebus ac noctibus obsecrandum, ut veniat Agnus ex tribu Juda, et Ipse accipiens librum signatum (Rev. v. 7—9) dignetur aperire. Ipse est enim, Qui Scripturas adaperiens accendit corda discipulorum, ita ut dicant: 'homo cor nostrum erat ardens intra nos, cum aperiret nobis Scripturas?'" (Luke xxiv. 32.) Origen, in Exod. Hom. 12: ep. Tertullian, c. Marcion. v. 11, who says, "The veil will remain on the hearts of the Jews until they are converted to Christ. Then, and not till then, will they be able to understand the mysteries of their own Law."

34. he took the veil off] In God's presence; in order that he might see God's glory, and might receive light from Him. Observe the different effects of disobedience and obedience, with regard to the reception of spiritual truth and divine knowledge. The Israelites, by reason of disobedience, were not able to behold even the reflexion of the divine glory in the countenance of Moses. And Moses put a veil on his face. But Moses took off the veil when he went into the presence of God. He had been faithful and zealous in God's cause, and he went in and communed with God, and saw His glory, and was illuminated by it.

Here is warning, instruction, and encouragement to ourselves. We may read the Bible, but we cannot understand it, without obedience to God. Disobedience is the cause of spiritual blindness. He "that willet to do God's will, shall know of the doctrine" (John vii. 17). He that "keepeth the Law getteth the understanding thereof" (Ecclus. xxi. 11).

He that reads the Law by the Light of the Gospel, and not only reads the letter, but receives the spirit into his heart, his veil is removed, and he follows Moses into the presence of God, and is illumined by the Divine glory (S. Basil de Spiritu, c. 21).

As a pure and bright Mirror reflects the images of objects, so the glass of a clean heart reflects the divine glory. They who receive divine grace, shine by its beams, and they who communicate habitually with God, are transformed into His image (Theodore, Qu. 69).

When we interpret the Old Testament aright, we take off the "veil of Moses' face." Find Christ, find the mysteries of the Gospel, under the types of the Law, apply the old prophecies so as it may appear that "the spirit of prophecy is the testimony of Jesus" (Rev. xix. 10); and he is the best prophet now, that can do this best. Bp. Andrewes, iii. 312: ep. Bp. Pearson, Art. viii. pp. 316, 317, where he shows that this work is the work of God the Holy Ghost.

Moses took off the veil in God's presence. The veil is taken from the Law by Christ in the Gospel, where we not only see the divine glory, but we are illumined by it. The Gospel of Christ is our Mountain of Transfiguration. On that spiritual Mountain, if we are true disciples of Christ, "we all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory" (2 Cor. iii. 18); and are prepared thereby to be with Moses, Elias, and with Christ on the heavenly Mountain, and in the heavenly City, which is lightened by the Glory of God, and the Lamb is the Light thereof (Rev. xxi. 23).

May God grant us grace so to read the Law and the Gospel, that we come to that eternal Light, through JESUS CHRIST, our Lord!

face shone: and Moses put the vail upon his face again, until he went in to speak with him.

XXXV. ¹ And Moses gathered all the congregation of the children of Israel together, and said unto them, ^a These are the words which the LORD hath commanded, that ye should do them. ² ^b Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh day there shall be to you † an holy day, a sabbath of rest to the LORD: whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death. ³ ^c Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath day.

⁴ And Moses spake unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, saying, ^d This is the thing which the LORD commanded, saying, ⁵ Take ye from among you an offering unto the LORD: ^e whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it, an offering of the LORD; gold, and silver, and brass, ⁶ And blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, ⁷ And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim wood, ⁸ And oil for the light, ^f and spices for anointing oil, and for the sweet incense, ⁹ And onyx stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate. ¹⁰ And ^g every wise hearted among you shall come, and make all that the LORD hath commanded; ¹¹ ^h The tabernacle, his tent, and his covering, his taches, and his boards, his bars, his pillars, and his sockets, ¹² ⁱ The ark, and the staves thereof, with the mercy seat, and the vail of the covering, ¹³ The ^k table, and his staves, and all his vessels, ¹ and the shewbread, ¹⁴ ^m The candlestick also for the light, and his furniture, and his lamps, with the oil for the light, ¹⁵ ⁿ And the incense altar, and his staves, ^o and the anointing oil, and ^p the sweet incense, and the hanging for the door at the entering in of the tabernacle, ¹⁶ ^q The altar of burnt offering, with his brasen grate, his staves, and all his vessels, the laver and his foot, ¹⁷ ^r The hangings of the court, his pillars, and their sockets, and the hanging for the door of the court, ¹⁸ The pins of the tabernacle, and the pins of the court, and their cords, ¹⁹ ^s The cloths of service, to do service in the holy place, the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office.

²⁰ And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses. ²¹ And they came, every one ^t whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the LORD's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments. ²² And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing hearted, and brought bracelets, and earrings, and rings, and tablets, all jewels of gold: and every man that offered ^u offered an offering of gold unto the LORD. ²³ And ^u every man, with whom was found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, brought them. ²⁴ Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought the LORD's offering: and every man, with whom was found shittim wood for any work of the service, brought it. ²⁵ And all the women

CH. XXXV. 1.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and continues to xxxviii. 20. The parallel Proper Lesson in the Prophets is 1 Kings vii. 13—26, concerning the building of Solomon's Temple by Hiram and his workmen.

2. a sabbath of rest] See xxxi. 13.

The present and following chapters describe the execution of the commandments propounded in previous chapters. The references in the margin will direct the reader to the passages which are parallel to those in the present and following chapters respectively, and to the notes upon them.

22. bracelets] The Hebrew chach is properly a thorn; hence a ring put through the nose, a hook, a pin, a clasp, a brooch: see Gesen., p. 271.

— earrings] Rather, nose-rings: see Gen. xxiv. 22. 47; xxxv. 4.

— tablets] The Hebrew cumaz; literally, a globule. Perhaps a necklace of golden globules, or beads, strung together (Gesen., p. 386). Cp. Num. xxxi. 50.

— offered an offering] Properly, waved a wave-offering: see on Num. viii. 11; xviii. 11.

w ch. 28. 3. &
31. 6. & 36. 1.
2 Kings 24. 7.
Prov. 31. 19, 22,
24.

x 1 Chron. 29. 6.
Ezra 2. 68.
y ch. 30. 23.

z ver. 21.
1 Chron. 29. 9.

a ch. 31. 2, &c.

b ch. 31. 6.

c ver. 31.
ch. 31. 3, 6.
1 Kings 7. 14.
2 Chron. 2. 14.
Isa. 28. 26.

a ch. 28. 3. &
31. 6. & 35. 10, 35.

b ch. 25. 8.

c ch. 35. 21, 26.
1 Chron. 29. 5.
d ch. 35. 27.

e 2 Cor. 8. 2, 3.

f ch. 26. 1.

that were ^w wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen. ²⁶ And all the women whose heart stirred them up in wisdom spun goats' hair. ²⁷ And ^x the rulers brought onyx stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate; ²⁸ And ^y spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense. ²⁹ The children of Israel brought a ^z willing offering unto the LORD, every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all manner of work, which the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.

³⁰ And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, ^a the LORD hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah; ³¹ And he hath filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship; ³² And to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, ³³ And in the cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work. ³⁴ And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and ^b Aholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan. ³⁵ Them hath he ^c filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work, of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise cunning work.

XXXVI. ¹ Then wrought Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every ^a wise hearted man, in whom the LORD put wisdom and understanding to know how to work all manner of work for the service of the ^b sanctuary, according to all that the LORD had commanded. ² And Moses called Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one ^c whose heart stirred him up to come unto the work to do it: ³ And they received of Moses all the offering, which the children of Israel ^d had brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And they brought yet unto him free offerings every morning.

⁴ And all the wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, came every man from his work which they made; ⁵ And they spake unto Moses, saying, ^e The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work, which the LORD commanded to make. ⁶ And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from bringing. ⁷ For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.

⁸ And every wise hearted man among them that wrought the work of the tabernacle made ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims of cunning work made he them. ⁹ The length of one curtain was twenty and eight cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits:

25. did spin] On the practice of spinning by women in ancient Egypt, see Wilkinson, ii. p. 60; iii. p. 133: cp. Hengstenberg, Egypt, p. 140; and see Prov. xxxi. 19. The art of spinning is still much practised among the Arabs (Burckhardt, Nub. p. 211).

30. Bezaleel] And Aholiab: see xxxi. 2. They were filled with the Spirit of God, and wrought for the Tabernacle as Hiram and his workmen did for the Temple (1 Kings vii. 13, 14). So St. Paul and St. Peter, filled with the Spirit, were wise Master-builders of the Christian Church (1 Cor. iii. 10). The Tabernacle of Christ's human body, which was not made with hands, and not of this building (Heb. ix. 11; x. 20), was from the immediate operation of the Holy Ghost Himself.

35. Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work] So the "manifold wisdom of God" (Eph. iii. 10) is seen in the rich variety of gifts and graces bestowed by the Holy Ghost on the builders of the Spiritual Tabernacle, — the Christian Church (1 Cor. i. 5, 7; xii. 4—9. Gal. iii. 2, 5. Eph. iv. 11).

the curtains were all of one size. ¹⁰ And he coupled the five curtains one unto another: and the other five curtains he coupled one unto another. ¹¹ And he made loops of blue on the edge of one curtain from the selvedge in the coupling: likewise he made in the uttermost side of another curtain, in the coupling of the second. ¹²^s Fifty loops made he in one curtain, and fifty loops made he in the edge of the curtain which was in the coupling of the second: the loops held one curtain to another. ¹³ And he made fifty taches of gold, and coupled the curtains one unto another with the taches: so it became one tabernacle.

¹⁴^h And he made curtains of goats' hair for the tent over the tabernacle: ^{h ch. 21. 7.} eleven curtains he made them. ¹⁵ The length of one curtain was thirty cubits, and four cubits was the breadth of one curtain: the eleven curtains were of one size. ¹⁶ And he coupled five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves. ¹⁷ And he made fifty loops upon the uttermost edge of the curtain in the coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second. ¹⁸ And he made fifty taches of brass to couple the tent together, that it might be one.

¹⁹ⁱ And he made a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of badgers' skins above that. ^{i ch. 26. 11.}

²⁰^k And he made boards for the tabernacle of shittim wood, standing up. ^{k ch. 26. 15.} ²¹ The length of a board was ten cubits, and the breadth of a board one cubit and a half. ²² One board had two tenons, equally distant one from another: thus did he make for all the boards of the tabernacle. ²³ And he made boards for the tabernacle; twenty boards for the south side southward: ²⁴ And forty sockets of silver he made under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons. ²⁵ And for the other side of the tabernacle, which is toward the north corner, he made twenty boards, ²⁶ And their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board. ²⁷ And for the sides of the tabernacle westward he made six boards. ²⁸ And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides. ²⁹ And they were † coupled beneath, and coupled together at the head thereof, to one ring: thus he did to both of them in both the corners. ³⁰ And there were eight boards; and their sockets were sixteen sockets of silver, † under every board two sockets. ^{† Heb. twinned.} ^{† Heb. two sockets, two sockets under one board.}

³¹ And he made ¹ bars of shittim wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, ³² And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the tabernacle for the sides westward. ³³ And he made the middle bar to shoot through the boards from the one end to the other. ³⁴ And he overlaid the boards with gold, and made their rings of gold to be places for the bars, and overlaid the bars with gold. ^{l ch. 26. 26.}

³⁵ And he made ^m a vail of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined ^{m ch. 26. 31.} linen: with cherubims made he it of cunning work. ³⁶ And he made thereunto four pillars of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold: their hooks were of gold; and he cast for them four sockets of silver.

³⁷ And he made an ⁿ hanging for the tabernacle door of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, † of needlework; ³⁸ And the five pillars of ^{n ch. 26. 36.} ^{† Heb. the work of a needleworker, or, embroiderer.}

it with their hooks : and he overlaid their chapters and their fillets with gold : but their five sockets were of brass.

a ch. 25. 10.

XXXVII. ¹ And Bezaleel made ^a the ark of shittim wood : two cubits and a half was the length of it, and a cubit and a half the breadth of it, and a cubit and a half the height of it : ² And he overlaid it with pure gold within and without, and made a crown of gold to it round about. ³ And he cast for it four rings of gold, to be set by the four corners of it ; even two rings upon the one side of it, and two rings upon the other side of it. ⁴ And he made staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold. ⁵ And he put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, to bear the ark.

b ch. 25. 17.

⁶ And he made the ^b mercy seat of pure gold : two cubits and a half was the length thereof, and one cubit and a half the breadth thereof. ⁷ And he made two cherubims of gold, beaten out of one piece made he them, on the two ends of the mercy seat ; ⁸ One cherub || on the end on this side, and another cherub || on the other end on that side : out of the mercy seat made he the cherubims on the two ends thereof. ⁹ And the cherubims spread out their wings on high, and covered with their wings over the mercy seat, with their faces one to another ; even to the mercy seatward were the faces of the cherubims.

|| Or, out of, &c.

|| Or, out of, &c.

c ch. 25. 23.

¹⁰ And he made ^c the table of shittim wood : two cubits was the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof : ¹¹ And he overlaid it with pure gold, and made thereunto a crown of gold round about. ¹² Also he made thereunto a border of an handbreadth round about ; and made a crown of gold for the border thereof round about. ¹³ And he cast for it four rings of gold, and put the rings upon the four corners that were in the four feet thereof. ¹⁴ Over against the border were the rings, the places for the staves to bear the table. ¹⁵ And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold, to bear the table. ¹⁶ And he made the vessels which were upon the table, his ^d dishes, and his spoons, and his bowls, and his covers || to cover withal, of pure gold.

d ch. 25. 29.

|| Or, to pour out w. that.

e ch. 25. 31.

¹⁷ And he made the ^e candlestick of pure gold : of beaten work made he the candlestick ; his shaft, and his branch, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, were of the same : ¹⁸ And six branches going out of the sides thereof ; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side thereof, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side thereof : ¹⁹ Three bowls made after the fashion of almonds in one branch, a knop and a flower ; and three bowls made like almonds in another branch, a knop and a flower : so throughout the six branches going out of the candlestick. ²⁰ And in the candlestick were four bowls made like almonds, his knops, and his flowers : ²¹ And a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches going out of it. ²² Their knops and their branches were of the same : all of it was one beaten work of pure gold. ²³ And he made his seven lamps, and his snuffers, and his snuffdishes, of pure gold. ²⁴ Of a talent of pure gold made he it, and all the vessels thereof.

f ch. 30. 1.

²⁵ f And he made the incense altar of shittim wood : the length of it was a cubit, and the breadth of it a cubit ; it was foursquare ; and two cubits was the height of it ; the horns thereof were of the same. ²⁶ And he overlaid it with pure gold, both the top of it, and the sides thereof round about, and the horns of it : also he made unto it a crown of gold round about. ²⁷ And he made two rings of gold for it under the crown thereof, by the two corners of it, upon the two sides thereof, to be places for the staves to bear it withal. ²⁸ And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold. ²⁹ And he made ^g the holy anointing oil, and the pure incense of sweet spices, according to the work of the apothecary. g ch. 30. 23.

XXXVIII. ¹ And he made the altar of burnt offering of shittim wood: five cubits was the length thereof, and five cubits the breadth thereof; it was four-square; and three cubits the height thereof. ² And he made the horns thereof on the four corners of it; the horns thereof were of the same: and he overlaid it with brass. ³ And he made all the vessels of the altar, the pots, and the shovels, and the basons, and the fleshhooks, and the firepans: all the vessels thereof made he of brass. ⁴ And he made for the altar a brasen grate of network under the compass thereof beneath unto the midst of it. ⁵ And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grate of brass, to be places for the staves. ⁶ And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with brass. ⁷ And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to bear it withal; he made the altar hollow with boards.

⁸ And he made ^b the laver of brass, and the foot of it of brass, of the || looking-glasses of the women † assembling, which assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. b ch. 30. 18.
|| Or, brasen glasses.
† Heb. assembling by troops, as 1 Sam. 2. 22.

⁹ And he made ^c the court: on the south side southward the hangings of the court were of fine twined linen, an hundred cubits: ¹⁰ Their pillars were twenty, and their brasen sockets twenty; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets were of silver. ¹¹ And for the north side the hangings were an hundred cubits, their pillars were twenty, and their sockets of brass twenty; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver. ¹² And for the west side were hangings of fifty cubits, their pillars ten, and their sockets ten; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver. ¹³ And for the east side eastward fifty cubits. ¹⁴ The hangings of c ch. 27. 9.

CH. XXVII. 29. And he made] These words, he made, recur in almost every verse; and show the minute care of Moses to make all things, even the minutest, with punctual exactitude according to the pattern in the mount (xxv. 10—40). And since such care was requisite in the Levitical Tabernacle, which was only the type and shadow of the Evangelical Church; and since the Holy Spirit has thought fit to record this punctual execution of the divine commands in these living oracles of Holy Scripture, “which were written for our learning” (Rom. xv. 4), it cannot be a matter of indifference whether we comply with the directions which God has given us for building up the spiritual Antitype,—the Christian Church.

CH. XXXVIII. 8. of the looking-glasses of the women assembling, which assembled] The Hebrew verb here rendered to assemble is tseba (connected with tsaba, an army, host; whence Sabaoth, hosts), and it signifies to muster (in a neuter sense) for service or religion; the congregation being compared to a host, marshalled under the divine banner, to fight against the Enemy, with the arms of a spiritual warfare, especially with prayers and hymns; and this word is applied to the ministry of the Priests, who watched like sentinels in the service of God (Num. iv. 23; viii. 24). Here the word is explained by Onkelos, as meaning that these women assembled to pray, and so the Syriac Version; the Sept. renders it “who fasted,” the Tulg., “who watched.”

It, therefore, seems probable, that these women assembled at the door of the Tabernacle for religious exercises (cp. Hengstenb. Anth. ii. 133—136, and see on 1 Sam. ii. 22, and Abenezra, quoted by Hengst.); and they offered their mirrors of brass, which had formerly served for their own embellishment, and dedicated them to the service of God; and to the adornment of His House, and for the construction of the brazen Laver, which contained the pure water, the sea of glass, an emblem of that purity and self-examination, which is required of all who approach God in his House (see above, xxx. 18).

Perhaps the hearts of these women of Israel were fired with a brighter flame of holy zeal on this occasion, because they remembered to what unworthy and ungodly purposes their ornaments had been lately abused in the making of the golden calf (xxxii. 2). Were they not animated and quickened with a feeling of godly shame, remorse, revenge, and indignation against themselves for that abuse (2 Cor. vii. 11), and were they not more eager on that account to make reparation for their sin against God by these offerings of penitential love and zeal to His service? Was not their penitential zeal and love like that of the Woman in the Gospel, who washed Christ's feet with her tears, and wiped them with her hair, and kissed them with her lips, and thus consecrated to Him those members of her body which had been abused to the service of sin? (Luke vii. 37, 38.)

These women are likened to an army. The Church is compared to an “Army terrible with banners” (Cant. vi. 4), and weak women are strong as an Army, when united in love and prayer.

The Laver, standing near the entrance of the holy place, corresponded to the Baptismal Font at the door of the Christian Church; and this example of these holy women, renouncing their worldly pomps and vanities, and devoting their ornaments to God's Service, and adorning the holy Laver, and doing this with the enthusiastic zeal, rivalry, and eagerness of soldiers enlisting in military service, and mustering together in a well-marshalled Army, under the banner of their Leader, may serve as a suitable subject for meditation and imitation to those who, at the Baptismal Font, have renounced the pomps and vanities of the world, and the lusts of the flesh, and have been enlisted under the banner of Christ crucified, and have pledged themselves to fight manfully under that banner “against Sin, the World, and the Devil, and to continue Christ's faithful soldiers and servants unto their lives' end.” See below on 1 Kings vii. 23.

Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law as read in the Synagogues, and continues to the end of the Book. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is 1 Kings vii. 4—viii. 21, concerning the building of Solomon's Temple.

the one side of the gate were fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three. ¹⁵ And for the other side of the court gate, on this hand and that hand, were hangings of fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three. ¹⁶ All the hangings of the court round about were of fine twined linen. ¹⁷ And the sockets for the pillars were of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver; and the overlaying of their chapiters of silver; and all the pillars of the court were filleted with silver. ¹⁸ And the hanging for the gate of the court was needlework, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: and twenty cubits was the length, and the height in the breadth was five cubits, answerable to the hangings of the court. ¹⁹ And their pillars were four, and their sockets of brass four; their hooks of silver, and the overlaying of their chapiters and their fillets of silver. ²⁰ And all the ^d pins of the tabernacle, and of the court round about, were of brass.

d ch. 27. 19.

e Num. 1. 50, 53.
& 9. 15. & 10. 11.
& 17. 7, 8. & 18. 2.
2 Chron. 24. 6.
Acts 7. 44.
f Num. 4. 28, 33.
g ch. 31. 2, 6.

²¹ This is the sum of the tabernacle, even of ^e the tabernacle of testimony, as it was counted, according to the commandment of Moses, for the service of the Levites, ^f by the hand of Ithamar, son to Aaron the priest. ²² And ^g Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the LORD commanded Moses. ²³ And with him was Aholiab, son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet, and in fine linen.

²⁴ All the gold that was occupied for the work in all the work of the holy place, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, after ^h the shekel of the sanctuary.

h ch. 30. 13, 24.
Lev. 5. 15 &
27. 3, 25.
Num. 3. 47. &
18. 16.

i ch. 30. 13, 15.
† Heb. a poll.

k Num. 1. 46.

l ch. 26. 19, 21,
25, 32.

²⁵ And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary: ²⁶ ⁱ A bekah for [†] every man, that is, half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for every one that went to be numbered, from twenty years old and upward, for ^k six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty men. ²⁷ And of the hundred talents of silver were cast ^l the sockets of the sanctuary, and the sockets of the vail; an hundred sockets of the hundred talents, a talent for a socket. ²⁸ And of the thousand seven hundred seventy and five shekels he made hooks for the pillars, and overlaid their chapiters, and filleted them.

²⁹ And the brass of the offering was seventy talents, and two thousand and four hundred shekels. ³⁰ And therewith he made the sockets to the door of

24. All the gold—was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels (of gold)] A very large, and to some it has appeared an incredible, sum; to this must be added 100 talents, and 1775 holy shekels of silver; and 70 talents, and 1400 shekels of brass (v. 25). "It is computed that the value of the metals alone used in the Tabernacle would amount to more than 240,000*l.* of our money."

But they who make exception to this statement, have not duly considered the evidence which has been collected of the vast abundance of gold and silver in the East in ancient times; see Bähr, Symbolik, i. pp. 259, 260, who refers to Diod. Sic., xvi. 57; Polyb., x. 27; Plin., xxvii. 3; Ileeren, Ideen, i. pp. 87. 95; Von Bohlen, das alte Indien, ii. p. 118; Ritter, Erdkunde von Asien, iv. pp. 500. 538. 545.

The Egyptian Monarchs possessed gold mines in Arabia (Diod. Sic., iii. 11); and the Egyptians were famous for their profuse employment of gold in ornaments (Rosellini, ii. 2, p. 419; Hengstl., Egypt, pp. 136, 137).

The zeal of the women for the adornment of the Tabernacle has been already noticed (v. 8), and we have also already heard of the divine command given at Horeb, "Every woman shall ask of her neighbour jewels of silver and jewels of gold" (see iii. 22; xi. 2); and we have also heard the statement that they asked of the Egyptians jewels of silver and jewels of gold (xii. 35). And we now see at Horeb the reason and end of that command; as well as the fulfilment of that other promise of God to Moses, likewise given at Horeb, "When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain (iii. 12). "The silver is Mine, and the gold is Mine, saith the Lord" (Hag. ii. 8). The spoils of Egypt are made ministerial to the adornment of God's House.

Here is a lesson of man's duty, to consecrate all to God (see on iii. 22). Here is a prophecy of the future, when all things will be made ministerial to God's glory, and to the edification and beauty of His Church. "The nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of the heavenly City, and the Kings of the earth bring their glory unto it" (Rev. xxi. 24).

In these incidents we see marks of unity of plan in the History, and evidences of Truth.

25. And the silver of them that were numbered] Cp. or. Exod. xxx. 13—15; the number of half-shekels (603,550) coincides with the number of persons in Num. i. 46. To facilitate the construction of the Tabernacle, and to evince the alacrity of the people, the money was paid in advance, and God preserved the lives of all in the interval between the payment and the census; see note on Num. i. 46

the tabernacle of the congregation, and the brasen grate for it, and all the vessels of the altar, ³¹And the sockets of the court round about, and the sockets of the court gate, and all the pins of the tabernacle, and all the pins of the court round about.

XXXIX. ¹And of ^athe blue, and purple, and scarlet, they made ^bcloths of service, to do service in the holy place, and made the holy garments for Aaron; ^cas the LORD commanded Moses.

²^dAnd he made the ephod of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. ³And they did beat the gold into thin plates, and cut it into wires, to work it in the blue, and in the purple, and in the scarlet, and in the fine linen, with cunning work. ⁴They made shoulderpieces for it, to couple it together: by the two edges was it coupled together. ⁵And the curious girdle of his ephod, that was upon it, was of the same, according to the work thereof; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen; as the LORD commanded Moses.

⁶And they wrought onyx stones inclosed in ouches of gold, graven, as signets are graven, with the names of the children of Israel. ⁷And he put them on the shoulders of the ephod, that they should be stones for a ^fmemorial to the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

⁸And he made the breastplate of cunning work, like the work of the ephod; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. ⁹It was foursquare; they made the breastplate double: a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, being doubled. ¹⁰^hAnd they set in it four rows of stones: the first row was a || sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this was the first row. ¹¹And the second row, an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond. ¹²And the third row, a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst. ¹³And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were inclosed in ouches of gold in their inclosings. ¹⁴And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet, every one with his name, according to the twelve tribes. ¹⁵And they made upon the breastplate chains at the ends, of wreathen work of pure gold. ¹⁶And they made two ouches of gold, and two gold rings; and put the two rings in the two ends of the breastplate. ¹⁷And they put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings on the ends of the breastplate. ¹⁸And the two ends of the two wreathen chains they fastened in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod, before it. ¹⁹And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two ends of the breastplate, upon the border of it, which was on the side of the ephod inward. ²⁰And they made two other golden rings, and put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the forepart of it, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod. ²¹And they did bind the breastplate by his rings unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; as the LORD commanded Moses.

²²And he made the robe of the ephod of woven work, all of blue. ²³And there was an hole in the midst of the robe, as the hold of an habergeon, with a band round about the hole, that it should not rend. ²⁴And they made upon the hems of the robe pomegranates of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and twined linen. ²⁵And they made ^kbells of pure gold, and put the bells between the pomegranates upon the hem of the robe, round about between the pomegranates; ²⁶ A bell and a pomegranate, a bell and a pomegranate, round about the hem of the robe to minister in; as the LORD commanded Moses.

l ch. 28. 39, 40.

m ch. 28. 4, 39.

Ezek. 41. 18.

n ch. 28. 42.

o ch. 28. 39.

²⁷ ^l And they made coats of fine linen of woven work for Aaron, and for his sons, ²⁸ ^m And a mitre of fine linen, and goodly bonnets of fine linen, and ⁿ linen breeches of fine twined linen, ²⁹ ^o And a girdle of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, of needlework; as the LORD commanded Moses.

p ch. 28. 36, 37.

³⁰ ^p And they made the plate of the holy crown of pure gold, and wrote upon it a writing, like to the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

q ver. 42, 43.

ch. 25. 40.

³¹ And they tied unto it a lace of blue, to fasten it on high upon the mitre; as the LORD commanded Moses. ³² Thus was all the work of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation finished: and the children of Israel did ^q according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

† Heb. the incense of sweet spices.

³³ And they brought the tabernacle unto Moses, the tent, and all his furniture, his taches, his boards, his bars, and his pillars, and his sockets, ³⁴ And the covering of rams' skins dyed red, and the covering of badgers' skins, and the vail of the covering, ³⁵ The ark of the testimony, and the staves thereof, and the mercy seat, ³⁶ The table, and all the vessels thereof, and the shewbread, ³⁷ The pure candlestick, with the lamps thereof, even with the lamps to be set in order, and all the vessels thereof, and the oil for light, - ³⁸ And the golden altar, and the anointing oil, and † the sweet incense, and the hanging for the tabernacle door, ³⁹ The brasen altar, and his grate of brass, his staves, and all his vessels, the laver and his foot, ⁴⁰ The hangings of the court, his pillars, and his sockets, and the hanging for the court gate, his cords, and his pins, and all the vessels of the service of the tabernacle, for the tent of the congregation, ⁴¹ The cloths of service to do service in the holy place, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and his sons' garments, to minister in the priest's office. ⁴² According to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel ^r made all the work. ⁴³ And Moses did look upon all the work, and, behold, they had done it as the LORD had commanded, even so had they done it: and Moses ^s blessed them.

r ch. 35. 10.

§ Lev. 9. 22, 23.

Num. 6. 25.

Josh. 22. 6.

2 Sam. 6. 18.

1 Kings 8. 14.

2 Chron. 30. 27.

a ch. 12. 2. &

13 4

b ver. 17. &

ch. 24. 1, 30.

c ver. 21.

ch. 26. 33.

Num. 4. 5.

d ver. 22.

ch. 26. 35.

e ver. 23.

XL. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² On the first day of the ^a first month shalt thou set up ^b the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

³ And ^c thou shalt put therein the ark of the testimony, and cover the ark with the vail. ⁴ And ^d thou shalt bring in the table, and ^e set in order † the things that are to be set in order upon it; † and thou shalt bring in the candlestick, and light the lamps thereof. ⁵ [§] And thou shalt set the altar of gold for the ch. 25. 39. Lev. 24. 5, 6.

† Heb. the order thereof.

f ver. 24, 25.

g ver. 26.

CH. XXXIX. 22. the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses] An example of national union in the service of God, and in obedience to the command given to Moses for the erection of the material Temple.

If two Millions of people were of one heart and one mind in the execution of the divine direction for the details, however minute, of the external fabric of the itinerant Tabernacle in the wilderness, which was a type and shadow of those good things which are now revealed to us in the Christian Church, can it be a thing indifferent, undesirable, and impracticable, that a Nation should now be joined together in obedience to God's will and commands with regard to the spiritual fabric, of which the Tabernacle was a Type? (Heb. viii. 5.) If we have God's Spirit, the Spirit of Truth and Peace, we shall be enabled to do this. And if we would endeavour and pray that we may have that Spirit, He will be given us (Eph. iv. 3). And then we may hope to enjoy a greater and more glorious blessing than that which Moses invoked upon the Israelites, when he looked upon all the work, "and behold they had done it as the Lord commanded, even so had they done it" (v. 43).

CH. XL. 2. On the first day of the first month] The first day of Abib, or Nisan. This month was thus "a beginning of years," in another sense, to them (xii. 2). For now the Tabernacle was set up, and God fulfilled His promise to come and dwell among them (v. 33).

On the fourteenth of this month the People kept their first Passover in the wilderness (Num. ix. 1. 3).

On the first day of the second month they were numbered, and their tents were arranged about the Tabernacle (Num. i. 1, 2; ii. 2, 3), and the princes brought their offerings (Num. vii.).

In this interval, before the twentieth day of the second month, God delivered the Laws contained in the Book of LEVITICUS and the first nine chapters of NUMBERS.

On the twentieth day of the second month the Cloud removed, and the Tabernacle was taken down, and the Israelites began their march from the wilderness of Sinai toward Canaan (x. 11). See above, Preliminary Note to ch. xvi.

incense before the ark of the testimony, and put the hanging of the door to the tabernacle. ⁶ And thou shalt set the altar of the burnt offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation. ⁷ And ^h thou shalt set the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and shalt put water therein. ⁸ And thou shalt set up the court round about, and hang up the hanging at the court gate. ⁹ And thou shalt take the anointing oil, and ⁱ anoint the tabernacle, and all that is therein, and shalt hallow it, and all the vessels thereof: and it shall be holy. ¹⁰ And thou shalt anoint the altar of the burnt offering, and all his vessels, and sanctify the altar: and ^k it shall be an altar [†] most holy. ¹¹ And thou shalt anoint the laver and his foot, and sanctify it. ¹² ¹ And thou shalt bring Aaron and his sons unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and wash them with water. ¹³ And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments, ^m and anoint him, and sanctify him; that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. ¹⁴ And thou shalt bring his sons, and clothe them with coats: ¹⁵ And thou shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office: for their anointing shall surely be ⁿ an everlasting priesthood throughout their generations.

¹⁶ Thus did Moses: according to all that the LORD commanded him, so did he. ¹⁷ And it came to pass in the first month in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the ^o tabernacle was reared up. ¹⁸ And Moses reared up the tabernacle, and fastened his sockets, and set up the boards thereof, and put in the bars thereof, and reared up his pillars. ¹⁹ And he spread abroad the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses.

²⁰ And he took and put ^p the testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the mercy seat above upon the ark: ²¹ And he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and ^q set up the vail of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony; as the LORD commanded Moses.

²² And he put the table in the tent of the congregation, upon the side of the tabernacle northward, without the vail. ²³ And he set the bread in order upon it before the LORD; as the LORD had commanded Moses.

²⁴ And he put the candlestick in the tent of the congregation, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward. ²⁵ And ^u he lighted the lamps before the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

²⁶ And he put the golden altar in the tent of the congregation before the vail: ²⁷ And he burnt sweet incense thereon; as the LORD commanded Moses.

²⁸ And he set up the hanging at the door of the tabernacle. ²⁹ And he put the altar of burnt offering by the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation, and ^b offered upon it the burnt offering and the meat offering; as the LORD commanded Moses.

15. thou shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father] At the first the sons of Aaron were anointed as well as their father; but afterwards they were not anointed, but the successors of Aaron only; therefore the priest that is anointed signifies the High Priest (see Lev. iv. 3; and vi. 22); and therefore the word Christ, or the Anointed, does not signify any Priest, but the High Priest (Bp. Pearson, Art. ii. p. 93, note).

16. according to all that the LORD commanded him, so did he] As the Lord commanded Moses, this sentence is repeated eight times in this chapter.

17. in the first month in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the tabernacle was reared up] Ten months after their arrival at Sinai (xix. 1), and one month and twenty days before they departed from it (Num. x. 11). See above, Preliminary Note to chap. xvi.

20. the testimony] The two tables: see above, xxv. 1. 16. The Sept. has the plural, μαρτύρια.

26. he put the golden altar—before the vail] It has been supposed by some expositors that the altar was within the veil, but this is an error: see Joseph., Ant. iii. 6—8; S. Jerome, Theophyl., in Heb. ix.; and à Lapide here; and note above on xxx. 6.

^h ver. 30.
ch. 30. 13.

ⁱ ch. 30. 26.

^k ch. 29. 36, 37.

[†] Heb. holiness of holinesses.

¹ Lev. 8. 1—13.

^m ch. 28. 41.

ⁿ Num. 23. 13.

^o ver. 1.
Num. 7. 1.

^q ch. 26. 33. &
35. 12.

^r ch. 26. 35.

^s ver. 4.

^t ch. 26. 35.

^u ver. 4.
ch. 25. 37.

^x ver. 5.
ch. 30. 6.

^y ch. 30. 7.

^z ver. 5.
ch. 2. 36.
^a ver. 6.

^b ch. 29. 38, &c.

c ver. 7.
ch. 30. 18.

^{30 c} And he set the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and put water there, to wash withal. ³¹ And Moses and Aaron and his sons washed their hands and their feet thereat: ³² When they went into the tent of the congregation, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; ^d as the LORD commanded Moses.

d ch. 30. 19, 20.

e ver. 8.
ch. 27. 9. 16.

^{33 c} And he reared up the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the hanging of the court gate. So Moses finished the work.

f ch. 29. 43.
Lev. 16. 2.
Num. 9. 15.
1 Kings 8. 10, 11.
2 Chron. 5. 13. &
7. 2.
Isa. 6. 4.
Hag. 2. 7, 9.
Rev. 15. 3.
g Lev. 16. 2.
1 Kings 8. 11.
2 Chron. 5. 14.
h Num. 9. 17. &
10. 11.
Neh. 9. 19.
† Heb. journeyed.
i Num. 9. 19—22.
k ch. 13. 21.
Num. 9. 15.

^{34 f} Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle. ³⁵ And Moses ^g was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle. ^{36 h} And when the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel [†] went onward in all their journeys: ³⁷ But ⁱ if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up. ³⁸ For ^k the cloud of the LORD was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys.

35. Moses was not able to enter into the tent] Here is an honest avowal of inability, and an evidence of truth. This is more remarkable, because Moses had been able to enter into the cloud on Mount Sinai, where God Himself was (xix. 20). But, as S. Augustine observes (Qu. 176), Moses in the mountain typified the Saints of God, who will be admitted to His beatific presence; but now, in the lower region of earth, and in the Tabernacle, which was a figure and shadow of Evangelical good things, he cannot come near to God. Moses himself informs us, that he was not able to enter into the Tabernacle because of the cloud of Divine glory. Only when the Cloud had retired to the Holy of Holies, could Moses approach God and commune with Him. Such was the inadequacy and imperfection of the Law. How much more glorious is the Gospel of Him Who has entered into the heavenly Holy of Holies, and is there in Divine Majesty at the Right Hand of God! To Him, with the Father and the Holy Ghost, Three Persons and One God, be all honour and glory, now and for ever. AMEN.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION TO LEVITICUS	i
LEVITICUS	1
NUMBERS	89
INTRODUCTION TO DEUTERONOMY, ON ITS GENUINENESS, AND INSPIRATION	195
DEUTERONOMY	204

INTRODUCTION TO LEVITICUS.

“WHATSOEVER things were written aforetime”—that is, whatsoever things are written in the Old Testament—“were written for our learning,” says St. Paul¹; or, in other words, for the edification of Christians. And the same Apostle affirms, that “all Scripture is profitable for instruction, and is able to make us wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus.” He also asserts that the Levitical Law “had a shadow of *the*³ good things that were to come”—that is, of Evangelical blessings; and that it was “our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ⁴.” He does not hesitate to say that the Jews of his own age, who had not believed in Christ, did not understand the true meaning of the Law of Moses. He says that a veil was on their hearts when they read the Old Testament; and he declares that this veil is being drawn off, περαιρείται,—a very expressive word in a remarkable tense. The veil, which is, as it were, glued to their faces, is being unwrapped from its extreme circumference,—as the folds are stripped off from a mummy,—in proportion as they turn to Christ, and desery Him in the Old Testament. The veil is withdrawn from their hearts, in proportion as they learn to see Christ in that Law⁵.

The Apostle has also made a special application of these principles to the Book of Leviticus. He has taught us that the ceremonial prescribed in the Sixteenth chapter for the Day of Atonement was “a figure for the time then present;” and that it foreshadowed the work of Christ, “who is the High Priest of the good things to come⁶.”

By this specimen, and by one or two other examples in the Epistle to the Hebrews, he has put into our hands the clue for the right interpretation of Leviticus. Our Blessed Lord Himself declares that “Moses wrote of Him⁷;” and that if the Jews had believed the writings of Moses, they would have believed the words of Christ; and it was not without a mystery that Moses was transfigured with the glory of Jesus on the Holy Mount, and conversed with Him concerning His death⁸; and that after His Resurrection our Lord began with Moses, in order to show that Christ must suffer, and so enter into His glory⁹. Christ Himself, speaking by the Psalmist, teaches us to look at the Levitical sacrifices as weak in themselves, but having divine meaning as preparatory to the sacrifice of Himself; and the Apostle thus introduces His words:—“It is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins; wherefore when HE cometh into the world, He saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared Me. In burnt-offerings and sacrifices for sin hast Thou had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of Me) to do Thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that He may establish the second¹⁰.” In Leviticus, Moses presents to us the Code of Sacrifices instituted by God to prefigure the death of Christ.

This therefore is certain, that LEVITICUS is designed for the edification of the Christian Church, and that its true meaning is to be sought in the Gospel; and perhaps there is no portion of the Old Testament which demands more careful attention from the Christian student, or which will repay his labour with more abundant fruit than Leviticus.

Only four chapters of this Book are read publicly in the Church of England in the course of the year¹¹. The Church probably was of opinion, that on account of its need of continuous interpretation, it might be more profitably reserved for private study, or for exposition by her Preachers in their sermons¹². But her expectations do not seem to have been fulfilled.

¹ Rom. xv. 4.

² 2 Tim. iii. 15, 16.

³ τῶν μελλόντων ἀγαθῶν. Observe the article, Heb. x. 1.

⁴ Gal. iii. 24.

⁵ 2 Cor. iii. 14, 15.

⁶ Heb. ix. 11. In this passage, and in that just quoted, Heb. x. 1, the definite article the is in the original, and points to the good things of the Gospel.

⁷ John v. 46.

⁸ Luke ix. 31.

⁹ Luke xxiv. 27.

¹⁰ Heb. x. 4—9. See Ps. xl. 6. Both these Scriptures are connected by the Church with the sacrifice of the Cross, being appointed for use on Good Friday.

¹¹ Chapters xviii. xix. xx. xxvi.

¹² For a similar reason, it would seem, the Book of Canticles entirely, and the Book of Revelation in great part, were omitted from the Calendar of Lessons to be read in the Church.

The Book of Leviticus seems almost to have dropped out of the sacred Canon, so far as that Canon is practically received by a large number of Christians. Many persons never open it at all; and even some biblical students and commentators treat it as if it were only an antiquated record of an obsolete ritual.

But, when rightly read, Leviticus is a Manual of Christian Theology, of Christian Worship, of Christian Ethics, and of Christian Evidences.

It has been the endeavour of the Editor of the present volume to exhibit proofs of this assertion in the following Commentary, and especially in the Preliminary Notes to particular Chapters. And as it seems to him that the Pentateuch is most profitably studied, if the several parts of it are considered as forming one continuous whole, and as an Introduction to the whole has been already submitted to the reader of this work¹, he would willingly have forborne any further prefatory remarks upon any of its parts.

But for the reasons above stated, LEVITICUS seems to demand a special Introduction.

This Book then, be it premised, is not to be regarded as a mere rubrical order of a superannuated ceremonial.

(1) It is a Book of Christian Doctrine.

It exhibits in a clear view the true character of Christ's Sacrifice. It has been well said that the Two Testaments are like the Two Cherubim over the Mercy-seat on the Ark in the Holy of Holies. Both are of one beaten piece; each looks to the other, and toward one central point over the Mercy-seat, on which God was enshrined in love, and which was sprinkled with blood, typifying the Blood of Christ. They turn their eyes toward that One Sacrifice. And this is specially true of Leviticus.

As it is with the four Gospels, so it is with the Sacrifices prescribed in Leviticus. Each of the four Gospels displays some special element of Christ's office and character in greater prominence than the other. St. Matthew exhibits His royalty; He displays Christ as the promised King of the Jews, and as the Seed of Abraham and David. St. Mark dwells on His Manhood; St. Luke on His everlasting Priesthood, and propitiatory Atonement, and on the consequent blessings to all Nations. St. John declares His eternal Godhead as the source of Life and Immortality to Man, by virtue of the Incarnation, and by the instrumentality of the two Sacraments of the Gospel. These four Gospels make One Gospel. Each has a special function, and each is joined to the other three; and by means of the special work of each, and by the harmonious co-operation of all, we have a clearer view than we could otherwise have had, of the One Person, the Two Natures, and the Threefold Office of JESUS CHRIST.

So it is with the Sacrifices in Leviticus. No one single kind of sacrifice could have given even a faint image of the manifold richness of the virtue and efficacy of Christ's sacrifice. But each of these Levitical Sacrifices represents a special aspect of that One Sacrifice; and when they are combined together, they do what no one of them could do; they present to us a complete view of the true nature of the Sacrifice of Christ². MILTON therefore well says (Paradise Lost xii. 227):—

“ God from the Mount of Sinai will Himself
Ordain them Laws, part such as appertain
To civil justice; part religious rites
Of sacrifice, informing them by types
And shadows, of that destined Seed to bruise
The Serpent, by what means He shall achieve Mankind's deliverance.”

And v. 287—

“ And therefore was Law given them, to evince
Their natural pravity, by stirring up Sin against Law to fight: that when they see Law can discover sin, but not remove,
Save by those shadowy expiations weak,
The Blood of bulls and goats, they may conclude
Some Blood more precious must be paid for man;
Just for unjust; that, in such righteousness
To them by faith imputed, they may find

¹ Part I., p. xxviii—xxxvi.

² See below, on chap. i. 1.

Justification before God, and peace
 Of conscience; which the Law by ceremonies Cannot appease; nor man the moral part Perform; and, not performing, cannot live.
 So Law appears imperfect; and but given
 With purpose to resign them, in full time,
 Up to a Better Covenant; disciplined
 From shadowy types to truth; from flesh to spirit;
 From imposition of strict laws, to free
 Acceptance of large grace; from servile fear
 To filial; works of law to works of faith.
 And therefore shall not Moses, though of God
 Highly beloved, being but the Minister
 Of law, his people into Canaan lead;
 But Joshua, whom the Gentiles Jesus call,
 His Name and office bearing, Who shall quell
 The adversary Serpent, and bring back
 Through the world's wilderness long-wander'd man Safe to eternal Paradise of Rest."

The Levitical Sin-offering, which comes first in order, represents Christ's Sacrifice as the Expiation of our Sins; as the Propitiation of the Anger of God; and as the Satisfaction of His Justice; and as our Atonement with Him. Except this Expiation be first made, we cannot approach God; but when it is made, then comes the Burnt-offering, which exhibits Christ's total self-devotion and self-sacrifice to God; and also reveals the gracious acceptance of that self-devotion and that self-sacrifice in the silver steam ascending from the altar to heaven.

To the Burnt-offering is adjoined the Meat-offering of fine flour, with its Drink-offering of wine, representing the co-operation of human will and labour with divine grace, and foreshadowing the perpetual exhibition of that One Sacrifice in the Elements of Bread and Wine in the Christian Eucharist¹. This is succeeded by the Peace-offering, in which the offerer himself, now being received into favour with God, enjoys the blessed privilege of being made to partake of the sacrifice together with God Himself; and which represents the mercy and love with which the penitent and devout communicant is invited by His Heavenly Father to feed with festal joy and thanksgiving on Him who is our Peace, in the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

If therefore the Christian student desires to have a clear view of the various phases, and divers effects, of the One Great Sacrifice offered once for all on the Cross; if he would comprehend its composite universality, and analyze its distinct offices and benefits; if he would understand the spiritual organism of each of its parts, and admire the harmonious symmetry and divine fulness of the whole; and if he would rightly apprehend how that One Sacrifice is continually represented in the Christian Church, and how its virtue is ever communicated to the faithful in the Holy Eucharist, he will have his desires fully satisfied, and his labours amply rewarded, in reading the Book of Leviticus by the light of the New Testament, and with the help of those expositions which have been handed down from primitive times.

Nor is this all. The cause of the efficacy of the One Sacrifice of Christ is here presignified. That cause, as we know from the New Testament, is the union of the Divine Nature with the Human in the Person of Him who died upon the Cross. "Feed the Church of God," said St. Paul, at Miletus, to the Presbyters of Ephesus, "which He hath purchased with His own Blood²."

It is because the Blood which was shed on the Cross was the Blood of Him who is God, that its value and efficacy are infinite.

This doctrine of the union of the Two Natures in Him who died at Calvary, had been foreshadowed in the Levitical ritual (as the Ancient Church perceived) by means of the two Birds—the Living Bird and the Slain Bird—in the sacrifice appointed³ for the cleansing of Leprosy, the Levitical type of Sin. And as the two Natures of Him who is Very God and Very Man, and who, by virtue of that union in His own Person, was able both to suffer and to satisfy for us, were

¹ See below, on chap. ii. 1.

² See below, on Acts xx. 27. It is interesting to observe that a new authority for the reading θεοῦ (God) here has lately been brought to light in the Codex Sinaiticus.

³ See below, on xiv. 4—6.

represented in the two Birds of that Levitical Sacrifice; so the Death and Resurrection of Him who as Man suffered in weakness, and who as God raised Himself in Power, and who not only bare our sins, but carried them away, so that they are blotted out and no more seen, were represented by the two Goats—the one slain, the other set free—on the Great Day of Atonement¹.

JESUS CHRIST, God and Man, is not only our Sacrifice, but our Priest and Temple; and not only the Sacrifice of Christ, but His Ascension into Heaven, and His Everlasting Priesthood, were prefigured by the Levitical Ritual on the Great Day of Atonement, as we know from the sure witness of the Holy Ghost in the Epistle to the Hebrews².

If therefore we would read Leviticus aright, we must not only recognize the expiatory work of Christ as our Sacrifice in the Sin-offering of that day, but we must see Him as our Great High Priest entering with His own Blood within the Veil into the True Holy of Holies, even into heaven itself, in order to plead the efficacy of the Blood of that Sin-offering before the celestial Mercy-seat, and to obtain access for us to the Throne of Grace.

Leviticus exhibits in a figure all the great Articles of Christian Doctrine. It is a Creed in Types. We might proceed to illustrate this by showing how the work of the Holy Spirit is foreshadowed by the ceremonial of Pentecost³; and how the doctrine of forgiveness of sins is prefigured in the Jubilee⁴; and how the doctrine of the general Resurrection⁵ was foreshadowed, as St. Paul intimates, in the Wave-sheaf of the Passover⁶; and how the doctrine of Life Everlasting and the presence of God, tabernacling among Men, in the Incarnation of Emmanuel God with us, and tabernacling for ever with them in a blessed Eternity in heaven, were presignified to the eye of faith in the crowning festival of the Levitical Year—the Feast of Tabernacles⁷.

(2) But further: if the Christian student would clearly understand what was Man's condition by Nature, and what it is by Grace, and what therefore the World owes to Christianity, let him carefully examine Leviticus, and let him read it by the light of the Gospel.

In Leviticus, God declares that Man in his natural state is unclean from his Birth even to the grave.

The purification of Women after Childbirth, as prescribed by the Levitical Law⁸, testified to the hereditary taint which every child of man derives by natural generation from Adam; and it proclaimed the misery, degradation, and shame to which the Human Race was reduced by the Fall.

The divine prohibition and proscription in the Levitical Code of a large portion of the animal creation as not clean for human Food, attested the forfeiture of that sovereignty over the Creation, which was originally possessed by Man, while he was in a state of innocency in Paradise⁹, by the grant of Almighty God¹⁰.

The contagious and loathsome nature of Disease,—exemplified in Leprosy, not only polluting man's person, but even his clothes and habitation¹¹ with a foul plague, showed the hideousness of Sin, the prolific source of all the maladies which afflict the human frame.

The defiling influence of Death, the fruit of sin, and the baneful effect of Death on man as he is by nature, was displayed with awful solemnity by the divine command to Aaron, the Priest, not to mourn even for his dead sons; and to Eleazar and Ithamar, the Priests, not to bury their own dead brothers, lest they should be defiled by contact with Death, and be thereby disabled from ministering to the Holy One in His sanctuary.

Such—as God Himself declared in Leviticus by these significant edicts—is our own state by nature; a state of uncleanness, misery and shame, in Birth, in Disease, in Death; and even in many of those things which God created originally for the support of human life; a state of sorrow, of anguish,—almost of despair; a state which wrung from miserable humanity the piercing cry, which

¹ See below, xvi. 15—19, 20—22.

² See Heb. ix. 7—12. 24—28; x. 11—14. 19—22. Compare Lev. xvi. 1—4. 12—14. 15—17; and the notes on those passages. This is well expressed by S. Augustine (de Fide ad Petrum, c. 2): "In sacrificiis Carnalium victimarum, quæ ipsa sibi sancta Trinitas, quæ unus est Deus Novi et Veteris Testamenti, a Patribus nostris præcipiebatur offerri, illius Sacrificii significabatur gratissimum munus, quod pro nobis Seipsum solus DEI FILIUS secundum carnem esset misericorditer oblaturus. Ipse autem, secundum Apostoli doctrinam, obtulit Semetipsum pro nobis hostiam Deo in odorem suavitatis (Eph. v. 2). Ipse, verus Deus et Pontifex, qui pro nobis non in sanguine taurorum et hircorum, sed per sanguinem suum semel introivit in Sancta (Heb. ix. 12); quod tunc Pontifex ille significabat, qui cum sanguine hircorum in Sancta Sanctorum introibat. Iste igitur

est, qui in Se uno totum quod esse necessarium ad redemptionis nostræ sciebat effectum, idem Sacerdos et Sacrificium, idem Deus et Templum, Sacerdos per quem sumus reconciliati; Sacrificium reconciliationis; Templum in quo reconciliati; Deus cui reconciliati; solus tamen Sacerdos, Sacrificium et Templum, et læc omnia Deus secundum formam servi."

³ See below, Lev. xxiii. 17—21.

⁴ See below, xxv. 8—17.

⁵ 1 Cor. xv. 20—23.

⁶ See below, xxiii. 10—14.

⁷ See below, xxiii. 33—43.

⁸ See below, xii. 1—8.

⁹ See below, xi. l. Preliminary Note.

¹⁰ Gen. i. 28.

¹¹ See below, xiii. 47; xiv. 34.

is uttered by the natural man, speaking by the voice of the Apostle, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death¹?"

"I thank God, through JESUS CHRIST our Lord," is the reply.

Let us contemplate, therefore, first our own state by Nature as it is presented to us in Leviticus; and then let us view it as it is by Grace, and as it is displayed in the Gospel of Christ.

How blessed is the contrast! Childbirth has been hallowed by the Incarnation of the Son of God. In Adam we all died: in Christ we live. The Diseases of the Body are transfigured into Health to the Soul by the cleansing and cheering influences of the Gospel. Christ has restored to Man the dominion over the creatures². The Grave is now beautified; and has become like a fair garden; it has been sanctified by the Burial of Christ; it has become a Sabbath of rest to all who fall asleep in Him. Death has been swallowed up in Victory. It has been made the Gate of everlasting life, by the power and love of Him who died and was buried, and rose again for us, and who is gone into heaven to prepare a place for His faithful servants, and who will come again in glory to receive them for ever to Himself.

Again, we see in Leviticus, that Marriage, the fountain-head and well-spring of all household charities, had been sullied by the natural man, and polluted by the foulest abominations³. The picture of incestuous and abominable marriages and connexions which is presented to us in the eighteenth chapter of Leviticus is indeed a dark one; and we almost shrink with horror from the supposition that such details were necessary, as are there displayed to our view. But we know little of the deep and gloomy abysses, the cavern-like dark places and fathomless gulphs of corruption which lie beneath the surface of human society in its natural state, even in nations which call themselves civilized, if we allow our feelings to stifle the awful warnings of Almighty God, who sees what is hidden there. The Canaanites were a wealthy, powerful, and enlightened people (according to the ordinary conventional meaning of these terms), and they "committed all the abominations"⁴ which are revealed in that chapter. And these abominations are there set down and registered with stern exactness and plainness of speech; they are stamped and branded with the hot iron of God's wrath in that dark catalogue of sin for our warning.

Let us not flatter ourselves that we do not need the warning. The natural man is still what he was in the days of these Nations. The power of Satan over man's corrupt nature is as great now as it was then; and wealth, and commerce, and intelligence, and civilization cannot regenerate that Nature. The Holy Ghost alone can do this. And our responsibilities are far greater than theirs; for the Son of God Himself has come down from heaven, and has united our nature to His own, and has consecrated Marriage anew, by making it a figure of His own Union with His Church; and by being born of a woman He has raised Womanhood to a higher dignity than that of Eve in Paradise.

While therefore we thank Him for this blessed work of social regeneration, let us take heed, lest if we desecrate what has been so spiritualized, and beautified, and dignified, our condition should eventually be worse than that of the Canaanites themselves. Our present facilities for Divorce show our need of the warning.

If then we desire to measure aright from what depths of misery and shame we have been lifted, and to what heights of happiness and glory we have been raised in Christ, and how great therefore is the debt of gratitude which we owe to Him, and how great are our responsibilities, as well as our privileges, let us read the Book of Leviticus illumined by the Gospel.

(3) Leviticus is also a Book of Christian Ethics.

The considerations just stated cannot but produce, as a necessary consequence, a deep consciousness of moral obligation, and a keen sense of moral duty—the duty of love and obedience which we owe to Him who has wrought this blessed change in the state of Mankind in this world, and in our prospects for Eternity.

We need not dwell longer here on this topic, which suggests its own appropriate reflections.

But it may be worth while to observe that Leviticus has a special value in the department of Christian Morals and Metaphysics, as revealing the true character of Sin in its intricate and mazy windings, and as it appears in the eye of God.

Man is prone to imagine that if only he is sincere in his actions, he cannot be guilty; and that if he acts according to his conscience, he may conclude himself to be innocent.

¹ Rom. viii. 24.

² See below on Chapter xi., Preliminary Note. Cp. notes below on 1 Cor. iii. 22, p. 91; and on 1 Tim. iv. 4, p. 450.

³ Lev. xviii. 20—30.

⁴ xviii. 27.

But Leviticus shows that such reasoning as this is delusive. We here see that God required Sin-offerings for sins of *ignorance*¹, as well as for wilful and presumptuous sins. Thus God declared that a man may be guilty of sin, although he is not aware of his guilt; and that it is not enough for us to act according to our consciences, but that we must also take good care to inform our consciences aright, and to regulate them by the unerring rule of God's Will and Word.

God also declares in Leviticus that sins vary very much in their heinousness, according to the condition of those who commit them²; that the sin of a Priest and of a Ruler is greater in His sight than that of a private person; and that a whole People may be guilty of sin³, as well as individuals in it. He also displays the difference between sin and guilt; and teaches us that it is not enough to be sorry for acts of sin, but that we ought also to repent for the guilt contracted thereby, and for the remanent effects of sin, even after we have repented of it⁴.

Leviticus reveals the mysterious character of Sin, its insidious and subtle influence diffusing itself like a secret poison, and defiling and vitiating every thing around it as by a noxious atmosphere and pestilential miasma,—not only brooding, if we may so speak, in hazy mists over miry morasses and marshy quagmires, but sometimes basking at clear noonday in the bright sunshine and brilliant sky, and over sparkling streams and blue lakes, and amid the verdant shrubs and fair flowers of a luxuriant vegetation,—such as may be seen in parks, and palaces, and gardens in the outskirts of Rome, and bordering on the Roman Campagna, where the malaria lurks in ambush, and kills unawares its victims with the most intense virulence.

This secret moral pestilence of Sin could not be delineated by any process of the most minute metaphysical analysis with the same power and clearness as it is portrayed to our view in Leviticus, by a description of the working of that most expressive type of Sin—the plague of Leprosy⁵.

And when, after reading that awful description, we turn to the Gospel, and observe that the first miracle of healing which JESUS CHRIST is recorded to have wrought, after He had preached the Sermon on the Mount, is the healing of “a man full of leprosy,” and that He healed him saying, “I will, be thou clean”⁶; and that Christ was not polluted by the touch, but imparted immediate health thereby, we see another evidence of the blessed truth, that all the tide of Corruption, Disease, and Death, which flowed down upon us in a dark flood from the first Adam, and had gone on and swollen into a widening torrent, branching off and shooting itself into countless streams, and had well nigh overwhelmed us with a deluge, has been stemmed and flung back by the Second Adam; and that where Sin and Death abounded, there Grace and Life now much more abound⁷.

(4) That God requires of us certain moral dispositions in daily life, and especially in divine worship, will be clear to every careful reader of this book.

All the Levitical Sacrifices have their abiding moral lessons.

The Sin-offering declares the hatefulness of sin in God's sight, and the duty of holiness. The Burnt-offering reminds man of his duty to present himself a living sacrifice to God. Even the distinction between the unclean and clean animals, though it is now abolished in Christ, has a permanent moral meaning for us, as to Christian life and godliness⁸. The prohibition of honey and of leaven in the Levitical Ritual⁹ has a spiritual significance for Christian worshippers; and the going forth of fire from the Lord to destroy the two sons of Aaron, who offered strange fire before Him, may well inspire all Christian Ministers and Christian Congregations with godly fear; and may teach them to take good heed not to bring any strange doctrines into God's Church, and not to presume to approach Him with inventions of their own imagination and will-worship, either in the polity and government of that Church, or in the ministry of His Word and Sacraments.

(5) The Book of Leviticus concludes with laws concerning Offerings and Tithes.

This conclusion is grounded on the practical principle, that no system of religious worship and instruction, although instituted, as the Levitical economy was, by God Himself uttering His commands orally, can be expected to be sustained in this lower world without man's co-operation, and without the oblation of those earthly good things which God has lent him as talents, to be used in His service. Here is man's trial. Here is his privilege,—to consecrate his substance by offerings to God.

Here also the Christian Church may receive practical instruction. The elasticity and expan-

¹ See below, iv. 2. 13.

³ iv. 23.

⁵ See below, chapters xiii. and xiv.

² See below, iv. 3. 22.

⁴ See below, chap. v.

⁶ Luke v. 12, 13. Cp. Matt. viii. 2—4. Mark i. 40—45.

⁷ Rom. v. 20.

⁹ See below, on ii. 11.

⁸ See Prelim. Note to chap. x.

siveness of voluntary efforts, combined with the stability of fixed endowments, for the promotion of God's glory by the maintenance of His Worship, and by the Ministry of His Word and Sacraments to all classes of society, are most in conformity with the Will of God as revealed in His Holy Word.

(6) Leviticus claims also attentive consideration on account of its bearing on the evidences of the truth of Christianity.

This Book is a sacred Code delivered by God speaking to Moses at Mount Sinai in the Tabernacle, which had just then been reared up, as is related at the close of Exodus¹. It is an oracular utterance of the Almighty Legislator Himself. It was pronounced at intervals in the course of a few days in the first month of the second year of the deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt.

The character of divine inspiration and unity is therefore stamped strongly and deeply upon it². The Book of Leviticus was delivered at Sinai in the beginning of the second year of the Wanderings; and it was delivered on the supposition that the Israelites would be obedient, and march immediately into Canaan; and it was given with a view to its observance in Canaan. But they rebelled at Kadesh-barnea, and they were condemned to wander for thirty-eight years in the Wilderness. They forfeited their privileges by disobedience.

Thenceforth the Law was, for the most part, in abeyance. They were under a ban. And it was only when those thirty-eight years had expired, that the sentence of excommunication was taken off; and the Levitical Law, which had been dormant for thirty-eight years, awoke, together with the resurrection of the People, and with their national restoration to the favour of God. This is the answer to the objection of those who ask, "How could the Code of Leviticus be observed in the wilderness?" It was not intended for a rebel people in the desert, but for an obedient people in Canaan. They were not allowed to observe it in the wilderness, for they had forfeited the favour of God.

The requirements of this Levitical Code in their literal meaning may seem, at first sight, to concern mere outward observances; and if they are regarded only in this light, they cannot but appear to be wearisome, trivial, and even perhaps offensive; and they who look at them in this point of view may be tempted to ask, as indeed some have asked, whether such a Code of Laws as this is worthy of an all-wise and all-holy God, who requires the devotion of the heart, and the dedication of the life to His service?

But these very characteristics of this Code have their uses. The minute precision of the letter of the Levitical Law, its elaborate details, the complex, cumbrous nature of its requirements, the continual repetition of the same sacrifices (which was a practical evidence of their imperfection³), and the witness it bore to the sinfulness of the Priests themselves⁴, who were appointed to intercede for the People with God, suggested to the devout Israelite the belief that there must be a spiritual meaning beneath the surface of the letter. These characteristics of the Levitical Code made him to look forward to what was prefigured by it. They made him raise his eyes from the Type to the Antitype. They constrained him to yearn with intense desire for another Dispensation.

That other Dispensation appeared in the Incarnation of Christ. It was consummated in His Death, Resurrection, and Ascension, and in the sending of the Holy Ghost from heaven.

Thus the Levitical Law, which before that time had been like an enigmatic scroll of mysterious hieroglyphics, exercising the faith and patience, and quickening the hopes of the faithful Israelite, became intelligible. It was deciphered by the Holy Spirit in the Gospel. Its characters, before dim, were gilded with heavenly light, and shone forth in divine beauty and glory, and were seen to be instinct with moral and spiritual meaning. The literal requirements of the Levitical Law were fulfilled and done away in Christ; they fell off, like the husks of swelling seed, or like the blossoms of setting fruit; but their spiritual and moral meaning remains and is fruitful for ever, and is made more visible and beautiful, now that its preparatory integuments have been shed off, under the genial influence and soft vernal breath of the Holy Spirit in the Gospel.

On the one hand, therefore, the wonderful pre-adjustment of the Levitical Code to the great

¹ Exod. xl. 2. 17. Cp. Lev. i. 1.

² This appears to be generally admitted even by those Biblical critics who are most prone to scepticism. A recent Introduction to the Old Testament, where the objections that have been made to the inspiration and unity of other parts of the Pentateuch are minutely detailed, does not present a single allegation against the unity and inspiration of Leviticus.

³ See Heb. x. 2

⁴ For example, in the sin-offering the priest fed on the flesh in order to mark that he was appointed to take unto himself the people's sin (Lev. x. 17); and the blood of that offering was not brought into the sanctuary; but a sin-offering was to be offered for the priest himself, and its blood was brought into the sanctuary; he was not permitted to eat its flesh, in evidence that he could not take away his own sin: Lev. iv. 5. 16; vi. 30. Heb. x. 13—15.

events of the Gospel (supposed to be a divine Dispensation) is a striking proof of the divinity of that Code; and on the other hand, the marvellous adaptation of the great events of the Gospel to the requirements of the Levitical Code (acknowledged to be, what it declares itself to be, an utterance of God Himself) affords some of the clearest evidences of the truth of Christianity. The harmony of both is such as could not have been designed and executed by any other than Him, who does every thing in due season and order, and who sees the end from the beginning, and with whom a thousand years are as one day¹.

¹ The most recent commentaries on Leviticus are those of J. S. Vater, Halle, 1802—5. Baumgarten, 1843—4. Knobel, Leipzig, 1858. Keil, Leipzig, 1863. To these may be added the following works on Sacrifice:—Outram de Sacrificiis, Lond., 1677. Deyling, Observationes Sacræ, 5 vols., 4to., Leipz., 1735. Davison, Origin and Intent of Sacrifice, Oxf., 1840. Archdeacon Freeman's Principles of Divine Service, 1855—1862. Dr. Fairbairn's excellent work on Typology, 1864. For Patristic commentaries see below, chap. i.

That the Levitical Code was derived by God from usages already received among Heathen Nations, is a theory which has been put forth by some eminent writers of our own country; especially by Sir John Marsham, Canon Chronicus, Sect. ix.,

Lond., 1672; and by Dr. Spencer de Legibus Hebræorum, Cantab., 1685; but has been examined and refuted by Witsius, Ægyptiaca, lib. iii. Carpzov, Introd. in V. T., p. 107. Bp. Patrick on Num. vi. 16. Baltus, Défense des SS. Pères, liv. iv. Dr. Waterland's Charge, Works, vol. viii. p. 6. Dean Graves on the Pentateuch, Part II., Lect. v., by whom it has been shown that it is far more probable that the heathen usages, as far as they coincide with those prescribed in the Pentateuch, were either derived from sacred primitive traditions, or from the Levitical Code itself. So far from being derived from Gentilism, as such, the Levitical Code was rather designed to keep the Israelites separate from Gentilism.

LEVITICUS.

I. ¹ AND the LORD ^a called unto Moses, and spake unto him ^b out of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, ^a Ex. 19. 3.
^b Ex. 40. 34.
^{35.} Num. 12.
^{4, 5.}

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTERS I.—VII.

A new Parashah, or Proper Lesson of the Law, as read in the Synagogues (see on Gen. i. 1), begins with Leviticus, chap. i., and extends to chap. vi. 8. The parallel Haphtarah, or Proper Lesson of the Prophets, is Isaiah xliii. 21 to xlv. 23, where God reproves Israel for their neglect of His worship, and promises them forgiveness of sins, and comforts the Church with the pledges of divine mercy: "I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions, for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins. . . . I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring. I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins. Return unto Me, for I have redeemed thee."

Thus even at the beginning of Leviticus, the ancient Jewish Church, when listening to the Law concerning offerings for sin, declared its faith in a better Covenant, and in larger outpourings of divine favour and spiritual grace in Christ. S. Jerome well expresses the typical character of the Book when he says, "In promptu est LEVITICUS, liber in quo singulae penè syllabæ et vestes Aaron, et totus ordo Leviticus, spirant caelestia sacramenta." (Epist. 50 ad Paulinum.)

The first seven Chapters of this Book treat of Sacrifices. The next three relate to the Priests who offered them.

The divine purposes of the Laws in Leviticus concerning Sacrifices and the Priesthood were manifold;—viz.

(1) To restrain the Israelites from Idolatry, and to separate them as a holy people to the Lord, and to join them to Him. Cp. Tertullian, c. Marcion. ii. 18. Chrysost., Hom. vi. in Matt. "A true Sacrifice (says S. Augustine, de Civ. Dei x. 8) is every act which we perform in order that we may cleave to God in holy union; such act having relation to Him as our sovereign good, from Whom alone we can derive true happiness." Sacrifice, ever since the beginning, has been the divinely-appointed means by which men communicate with God, and endeavour to obtain His favour by a surrender to Him of themselves and their possessions, recognized as His gifts to men.

In LEVITICUS, the whole Hebrew Nation is encouraged and commanded by God Himself, speaking to Moses at Mount Sinai, to draw near to Him, and to be joined to Him in holy union by means of sacrifice. The sanctification of the whole Hebrew Nation as the chosen People of the Lord is what is here displayed to us. And in the sanctification of Israel, the ancient Hebrew Church of God, by the means of sacrifice, we have a foreshadowing of the sanctification of the Israel of God, the Universal Church of CHRIST, by means of His sacrifice; and of our perfect union with God, and of the derivation of all spiritual grace to mankind by means of that sacrifice of Him Who is God and Man.

(2) To give clear views of the nature of sin, by a minute spiritual analysis of it; to show the divine hatred of sin, and that the sinner is liable to punishment from God for sin,—even for sins of ignorance and infirmity (see chap. iv. 2), and much more for sins of presumption.

In this respect the Book of Leviticus is invaluable as a
VOL. I. PART II.—1.

Code of Ethics framed by God Himself (see below, on chapters iv.—vi.).

(3) To show that Almighty God requires public honour and worship from men; and that He is to be worshipped in the ways of His own appointment, and not according to human inventions.

(4) To prepare the way for the Coming of Christ, and to cherish the faith and hope of God's people by Types, foreshadowing that Coming, and to prefigure the One full, perfect, and sufficient Sacrifice, Oblation, and Satisfaction, for the sins of the whole world, to be offered by the One Great Everlasting High Priest on the Cross.

The comprehensive and manifold character of the One Sacrifice of Christ in its various aspects, could not be typified by any one kind of sacrifice; but it is reflected in the complex Sacrifices provided under the Levitical Law; and those Sacrifices, when considered together, serve to display as in a picture the true nature of that Sacrifice. They have therefore an important place in Christian Theology. As Origen says (Hom. iv.), "Sacrificium, pro quo hæc omnia Sacrificia in typo et figurâ præcesserant, unum et perfectum immolatus est CHRISTUS." It required such a combination of many kinds of Sacrifice to exhibit, even in a dim shadow, the wonderful fulness, and infinite value, of that one Sacrifice of Christ.

The Sin-offering represented the need of an expiation for Mankind alienated from God, and showed that this expiation was to be by blood, "in which is the life," and without which "is no remission." The non-admission of the offerer himself to participate in feeding on any part of the sin-offering, was an intimation that as yet he was unfit to communicate with God, and had no part in the work of expiation.

The Burnt-offering showed the total devotion of the Victim; and its consumption by fire showed its acceptance by God.

The Peace-offering crowned the whole by the union of God with the worshipper reconciled to Him, and joined together with Him in feeding on the Sacrifice.

All these sacrificial elements are united together in the One Sacrifice on the Cross. See below, viii. 14—32, which best explains the mutual relation and significance of the Sin-offering, Burnt-offering, and Peace-offering. In this respect the Epistle to the Hebrews may be regarded as a divine Commentary on the Book of Leviticus. Cp. also especially S. Cyril. Alex., Glaphyra; and De Adoratione, tom. i. ed. Paris, 1638; Euseb., Dem. Evang. i. 10; S. Augustine, de Civ. Dei xvii. 2; contra Adversarium Legis, c. 18; and S. Leo, Serm. viii. De Passione Christi; Bede, Quæstiones in Leviticum; Hesychius, in Levit. (Bibl. Patr. Max. xii. 52); Radulphus, in Levit. (Bibl. Patr. Max. xvii. 47); A Lapide, Prolegomena in Leviticum; Joseph Mede, on the Several Kinds of Sacrifice, Book ii. Disc. 51; Ven. Archdeacon Freeman, Principles of Divine Service, vol. ii. part ii. ch. i. pp. 141—282; Rev. Canon Barry, in Dr. Smith's Bib. Diet. ii. 1080; Keil, Archæol. i. pp. 195. 216—256; and above, the Introduction to Leviticus.

(5) To show also that not only were the various kinds of c ch. 22. 18, 19. and say unto them, ° If any man of you bring an offering unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

Levitical Sacrifices of a figurative kind, and that they all converge to the one Sacrifice of Christ, and are concentrated and fulfilled in it; but also that Christ is much more than a perfect Sacrifice; He is also a perfect offerer of Sacrifice; He sums up all Mankind sanctified to be a pure sinless worshipper in Himself; and, as being God and Man, He is also a perfect Priest, "a Priest for ever;" the one "Mediator between God and men" (1 Tim. ii. 5), who ever liveth to make Intercession for us (Heb. vii. 25).

(6) To afford à posteriori a clear proof of the truth of Christianity as fulfilling the types of the Levitical dispensation, and as showing its spiritual meaning, and vindicating them from the charge of being a mere outward ceremonial.

(7) To show by the peculiar character of the sacrifices prescribed (see on v. 2), and by the manner of their immolation, what are the inward, moral, and spiritual dispositions of the heart, which God requires of all worshippers in every age of His Church. In this view the Book of Leviticus, when rightly explained, becomes a Rule of Living as well as a Manual of Devotion, public and private, for the Christian believer and worshipper. On this point the reader may consult the treatises of the Christian Apologists against the Jews, such as Justin Martyr, Dialogus e. Tryphone Judæo; Tertullian e. Judæos; and the works of Tertullian against Marcion; and of S. Augustine against the Manichæans, who disparaged the Levitical Law as not in harmony with the Gospel; and see the Prolegomena of Theodoret to his book of Questions in Leviticum, tom. i. p. 176. The Christian student will find very interesting and valuable materials for the moral and spiritual exposition of the Levitical Code in the works of S. Cyril of Alexandria, especially his Treatise De Adoratione in Spiritu et Veritate; and in his Glaphyra already mentioned, in vol. i. of his works, ed. Paris, 1638. See also Bähr, Symbolik, 2 vols. Heidelberg, 1837.

(8) The Levitical Law professes to be from God Himself (see i. 1). The subjection of a Nation, so obstinate and stiff-necked as the Hebrew People, to its enactments so burdensome and minute with regard to Sacrifice, may justly be appealed to as a proof that they believed it to be, what it professed to be, from God.

(9) The Levitical Law was not only of great service à priori to the Israelite, as preparing him for the Gospel, and disposing him to look forward with faith to Christ, but it is also of great use à posteriori to the Christian, as enabling him better to understand the Gospel. Abstract Truths are best illustrated by living examples. Therefore Christ spoke to the People by Parables. By the means of Parables He enabled them to understand the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven. The Levitical Law, in like manner, is full of Parables representing Evangelical Mysteries. In these Levitical Parables we may see divine pictures, displaying in a vivid light those Christian Doctrines which are necessary to our everlasting salvation.

(10) In a word, it may be truly affirmed, that we can hardly have clear views of the true nature of our own sin and guilt, as they appear in the eye of God; and of the need of a Sacrifice to take away our sins, and to reconcile the sinner to God; and of the true character of that perfect Sacrifice in its manifold aspects; and of the duty and blessedness of repentance for sins,—whether they be sins of ignorance, negligence, or presumption; and of the glorious privilege of communicating with God in Christ in the Christian Peace-offering,—the Holy Eucharist; and of the character and office of Christ, not only as our Sacrifice, but also as our Priest; and as summing up all Mankind in Himself as the Universal Presenter and Offerer of the one Sacrifice acceptable to God,—without a careful study of the BOOK OF LEVITICUS.

In all these respects, while it is true, as St. Paul says, that the letter killeth, i. e. the letter alone, without the Spirit; it is also true that the Spirit giveth life (see 2 Cor. iii. 6), and brings us to Him Who is the Life, and leads us to eternal Life in Him.

CHAP. I. 1. And the LORD called] Hebrew vajikra. The conjunction vau, and, marks the connexion of this Book with the foregoing one. The Books of Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers, all begin with the conjunction vau, rightly rendered by and in the Sept. (Levit. i. 1. Num. i. 1), and thus the continuity of these Books is marked. The Books of the Pentateuch form one Book; see above, Introduction to the Pentateuch, p. xxviii; and below on Deut. xxxi. 9. 24

The LORD called unto Moses. Here is a reference to the words of the foregoing Chapter of Exodus, where it is said that "the cloud of the LORD was on the Tabernacle;" "Ipsum hujus libri initium termino præcedentis conjunxit legislator" (Hesychius). "Ilujus libri initium præcedentis respicit finem" (Radulphus). Here is another proof of the unity of these Books the first verse of Leviticus flows on from the last verse of Exodus.

The LORD called unto Moses; the Lord Himself delivered these Laws to Moses; here is evidence of the Inspiration and Unity and Genuineness of this Book. See above, Introduction to the Pentateuch, p. xxx.

The final aleph in vajikra is written with a smaller letter in the Hebrew Manuscripts; by which it is intended to be intimated, that this call of Moses by God was in a lower voice than that with which the Decalogue was spoken from Mount Sinai. Cp. Lightfoot's Works, i. p. 29, who sees there a providential sign that the Law was to give way to a more glorious dispensation.—of the congregation] Rather, of meeting with God.

The Laws in Leviticus were not delivered from Mount Sinai, but from the Mercy-seat over the Ark in the Tabernacle at the foot of Sinai (Exod. xxv. 22. Num. vii. 89). They were spoken from a lower level, among men; and by this mode of delivery their preparatory character was signified; they were designed to train the Israelites for the Coming of Him who would speak from "a greater and more perfect Tabernacle" (Heb. ix. 11).

All the Laws in Leviticus were delivered in the brief interval between the setting up of the Tabernacle on the first day of the first month of the second year of the journeying in the wilderness, and the twentieth day of the second month of that year, when they departed from Mount Sinai; see Exod. xl. 2. 17. Num. i. 1, and x. 11.

2. If any of you bring] of his own freewill. The freewill-offerings described in these first three Chapters are Burnt-offerings, Meat-offerings, and Peace-offerings.

In all, taken collectively, we see a figure of Christ who combines them all in Himself.

In the whole Burnt-offering consumed by the fire on the altar, we see Him freely devoting Himself in body, soul, and spirit, to God. In the Meat-offering the grace of the Spirit, typified by the oil; and the prevailing efficacy of His prayer, and the fragrance of His sacrifice in the incense. In the Peace-offering, our communion with Him, and through Him with God, by feeding upon Him in the Holy Eucharist. The significance of the various Levitical Sacrifices, as typical of the One Great Sacrifice, is exemplified and illustrated by the offerings of the Twelve Princes of the Twelve Tribes for the dedicating of the Altar, as described below in Num. vii. 13—89.

—an offering] korban, properly something that is brought near, from the hiphal of karab, to approach (Gesen. 741). No one might come near to God empty (Exod. xxiii. 15). And the Israelite must not expect the Priest to fetch the offering; but he must bring it himself to the door of the Tabernacle. Thus a provision was made for the personal appearance of all the people before God; see v. 3. The word Korban, a thing brought near, as is an offering, is only used in Leviticus and Numbers, and in Ezek. xx. 28, xl. 43, and is rendered δῶρον by Sept.

—of the cattle] Rather, of the beasts; and these words ought to be joined to the words the Lord; i. e. if ye bring an offering from beasts, ye shall not bring any wild animal, but only such as are tame and domestic (viz. oxen, sheep, goats; and of birds, only turtles and pigeons), such, as by docility, harmlessness, and cleanliness, may seem to have a certain fitness to be offered, and such as may indicate symbolically that moral temper and those spiritual dispositions, by which the offerer himself ought to be animated; and such as by their domestic associations with yourselves, are most closely connected with you, and may seem therefore to be the most suitable offering in your stead; and such, as being taken from your own herds and flocks, and being males without blemish, may indicate a devout spirit of self-sacrifice on your part, and a readiness to offer the best of your substance to God.

God is not to be worshipped in places of man's choosing, or by offerings of man's invention, but according to His own appointment. He here excludes many animals which were offered by the heathen to their deities.

The consummation of these precepts is in CHRIST, who was the universal KORBAN of all Mankind; being near to God from Eternity, and being made near to us all by His Incarna-

³ If his offering be a burnt sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male ^d without blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the Lord. ^{4 e} And he shall put his hand upon the head of the burnt offering; and it shall be ^f accepted for him ^g to make atonement for him. ⁵ And he shall kill the ^h bullock before the Lord: ⁱ and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, ^k and sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁶ And he shall flay the burnt offering, and cut it into his pieces. ⁷ And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and ^l lay the

d Ex. 12. 5.
ch. 3. 1 & 22. 20.
21. Deut. 15. 21.
Mal. 1. 14. Eph.
5. 27. Heb. 9. 14.
1 Pet. 1. 19.
e Ex. 29. 10, 15,
19. ch. 3. 2, 8, 13,
& 4. 15. & 8. 14,
22. & 16. 21.
f ch. 22. 21, 27.
Isa. 56. 7. Rom.
12. 1. Phil. 4.
18.
g ch. 4. 20, 26,
31, 35. & 9. 7. &
16. 24. Num. 15.
25. 2 Chr. 29.
1 Gen. 22. 9.

23, 24. Rom. 5. 11. h Mic. 6. 6. i 2 Chr. 35. 11. Heb. 10. 11. k ch. 3. 8. Heb. 12. 24. 1 Pet. 1. 2.

tion, and who brings us all near to God, and by whom we draw nigh to God (Heb. vii. 19); and who is holy, harmless, undefiled (Heb. vii. 26), redeeming all by His own precious Blood (1 Pet. i. 19). See S. Augustine, de Civ. Dei x. 5. Clem. Alex., Stromat. lib. v. Theodoret, de Sacrificiis, and S. Leo, de Passione Christi, Scrm. viii., who says, "Nunc corporaliu sacrificiorum varietate cessante, omnes differentias hostiarum una corporis et sanguinis DOMINI implet oblatio, ut, sicut est pro omni victima sacrificium, ita unum de omni gente sit regnum." The offerings from the herd are described first, v. 1—9; next those of the flock, v. 10—14; and of the birds, v. 14, to end.

^{3. burnt sacrifice}] Hebr. olah, literally, a going up, to the altar. See above on Gen. viii. 20; Exod. xviii. 12: the Sept. renders it by ὁλοκαύτωμα, holocaust.

The burnt-offering is mentioned first, being offered daily morning and evening, and called therefore "the daily sacrifice" (Exod. xxix. 38—42; Numb. xxviii. 3, 4; Dan. viii. 11, 12), and it was consumed upon the Altar of God with fire, and therefore the Burnt-offering was eminently the type of Christ in going up by His own freewill to the Altar of the Cross (see Heb. vii. 27), and in giving Himself wholly in body, soul, and spirit to God (see Ps. xl. 6—9; Heb. x. 5), and in being consumed by the fire of God's wrath against sin (see Exod. xii. 8, 9), and in being also accepted as a full satisfaction and sacrifice for the sins of the whole world (Isa. liii. 10; Rom. iii. 25; 1 John ii. 2; iv. 10).

On the ceremonial used in the burnt-offerings, see Light-foot's Works, vol. i. p. 926, Temple Service, chap. viii.; Winer, R. W. B. i. 192; Barry, in Smith's Bib. Dict. i. 235; ii. 1076.

— a male] Whence the prophet says, "Cursed be the deceiver which hath in his flock a male, and sacrificeth to the Lord a corrupt thing" (Mal. i. 14).

— without blemish] as Christ was (1 Pet. i. 19); cp. Prosper Aquitan. de Prom. ii. 5, on the typical character of these requirements, and Origen in Levit. Hom. i. The Septuagint has ἄμωμον, a word adopted in the New Testament, and applied to the sacrifice of Christ; see Heb. ix. 14, ἐαυτὸν προσήνεγκεν ἄμωμον τῷ Θεῷ, and 1 Pet. i. 19, ἀμωμὸν ἀβάμου. It was the duty of the Priest to examine the victim carefully whether it had any blemish: this was called μωμοσκοπεῖν; an act which betokened God's searching of the heart of every offerer; see on Heb. iv. 13, and implied the duty of the offerer to search and cleanse his own heart, in order that his offering of himself might be acceptable to God.

— of his own voluntary will] Or rather, for his own favourable acceptance. So Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac, and Arabic Versions. Cp. Lev. xxiii. 11, and St. Paul in Rom. xii. 1, "I beseech you . . . to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God;" and Phil. iv. 18, where he adopts the words of the Septuagint. These words (for his own favourable acceptance) imply that there are some spiritual conditions requisite in the offerer, in order that his offering may be accepted by God. So, though Christ by His blood has made atonement for us, yet there are certain conditions (i. e. faith, and obedience, a dying unto sin on our part, and the sacrifice of ourselves) which are requisite to render that offering available for our acceptance with God.

— at the door of the tabernacle] to present the sacrifice to God: hence St. Paul's expression, "I beseech you, . . . that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (λατρεία, Rom. xii. 1).

4. put his hand] Literally, make his hand rest upon. He shall lean his hand on his victim while it is still alive, confessing his own sins (xvi. 21), and thereby in a figure discharging himself of his sin, and transferring it to the victim, which he has thus set apart and designated for sacrifice, and which is surrendered and presented at the door of the sanctuary to the Lord by the offerer as his vicarious offering, representative, and substitute. See Exod. xxix. 10. Maimon. on Sacrifice, iii. 6—9. Origen, Hom. i. on Levit. Eusebius, Dem. Evang. i. 10, and Bp. Andrewes, ii. p. 297.

Here is a figure of the sacrifice of Christ, on whom the burden of our sins is laid; and here is an emblem of the work of Faith making its hand to lean and rest upon His Head, who is our Substitute and Representative, and who Himself (αὐτὸς), and alone, bare our sins in His own Body on the Tree (see 1 Pet. ii. 24. Isa. liii. 4, 5), and in whom we are accepted by God (Eph. i. 6), and through whom, and in whom, we are enabled to offer up ourselves a living sacrifice holy and acceptable to Him (Rom. xii. 1).

When Burnt-offerings and Sin-offerings were combined, the Sin-offering preceded the Burnt-offering (Ex. xxix. 36—38. Lev. viii. 14—18; ix. 8—12). Christ has offered Himself as a pure offering for us, and we are enabled thereby to draw near and offer our Korban to God.

— to make atonement for him] literally, to cover for himself. To provide a covering whereby he may be hidden, and sheltered from the anger of God for his sin. See iv. 23. 26, and xvii. 11, where the altar and its sacrifices are said to cover the soul, or make atonement for it; and cp. Exod. xxix. 33; xxxii. 9, 10. The Septuagint has ἐξιλάσασθαι περὶ αὐτοῦ, to make an atonement for himself. See below on Heb. ii. 17, ἰλασκεσθαι ἁμαρτίας, and 1 John ii. 2; iv. 10, where Christ is called our ἰλασμοὺς περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν. Cp. Heb. ix. 14.

5. he shall kill] he; the offerer (Maimon., Patrick, Freeman, p. 237), or the Priest or Levite (2 Chron. xxix. 24; xxx. 17; xxxv. 10. Ezek. xlvi. 24); this is spoken impersonally, it shall be killed (in token that he who brought it owned himself liable to death) by those who are appointed to kill it, and therefore the Septuagint here has the plural, they shall kill.

— the priests shall bring the blood, and sprinkle the blood] The blood, in which is the life (Gen. ix. 4), and without shedding of which is no remission (Heb. ix. 22). The Levites might kill the sacrifice, but the Priest only offered the blood. The Sacrifice was to be killed, for the Messiah was to be cut off (Dan. ix. 26), and the blood, in which is the life, was to be poured out and sprinkled, not by the offerer, nor by a Levite, but by the Priest; and He only, who is our Priest, can sprinkle the blood of the Sacrifice; and the only blood that can atone and cleanse is the blood of the true Priest and Sacrifice Himself (Heb. xii. 24. 1 John i. 7. 1 Pet. i. 2). In the Blood of Christ was His Life; that Life was given for us; by it we are ransomed and redeemed from death (Matt. xx. 28. 1 Tim. ii. 6); by it our debt of sin and guilt is paid, and we are reconciled to God; by it we are washed and cleansed, and a heavenly inheritance is purchased for us.

6. he shall flay the burnt offering] And the skin went to the Priest (vii. 8) as part of his maintenance, and there was scarcely any sacrifice of which the Priest had not a share (cp. ii. 3. 10). Thus God taught the duty of providing for His Ministers, and that they "which wait at the altar should be partakers with the altar," and "they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel" (1 Cor. ix. 13, 14). Here is an argument for the use of the Offertory, and for application of a portion of it to the maintenance of the Clergy, according to the tenor of the sentences from Holy Scripture, appointed to be read at the Offertory by the Church.

— and cut it into his pieces] This act of the Priest, dividing the victim into several pieces, and examining each whether it had any blemish, foreshadowed the judicial act of our Great High Priest, whose sword-like eye pierces "to the dividing asunder of the soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart." See note below on Heb. iv. 12, 13.

7. shall put fire] The fire which came down from heaven

wood in order upon the fire: ⁸ And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar: ⁹ But his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall burn all on the altar, to be a burnt sacrifice; an offering made by fire, of a ^m sweet savour unto the LORD.

¹⁰ And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt sacrifice; he shall bring it a male ⁿ without blemish. ¹¹ And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.

¹² And he shall cut it into his pieces, with his head and his fat: and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:

¹³ But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water: and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

¹⁴ And if the burnt sacrifice for his offering to the LORD be of fowls, then he shall bring his offering of ^p turtledoves, or of young pigeons. ¹⁵ And the in Gen. 8. 21.

Ezek. 20. 28, 41.
2 Cor. 2. 15. Eph.
5. 2. Phil. 4. 18.
n ver. 3.
o ver. 5.

p ch. 5. 7. & 12.
S. Luke 2. 24.

(ix. 24) went not out (vi. 9. 12, 13), but it received addition from common fire at each burnt sacrifice (Maimon. on the Daily Sacrifice, chap. ii. sect. 1). The fire of the altar is from heaven; but there must be also a concurrence of the fire of human love and zeal, in every acceptable sacrifice to God. God gives the Holy Spirit; He is the Author of all heavenly grace, and He gives that grace in order that there may be a co-operation also of man's will. (See Phil. ii. 12.) The fire represented a double act on God's part, that of consuming—"our God is a consuming fire" (Dent. iv. 24. Heb. xii. 29); and in this respect it signified God's anger against sin. But while the flesh of the sacrifice was consumed, there was an act of purification going on, and the gift ascended, cleansed and refined, in a sweet-smelling savour to heaven; and so the fire represented the work of the Spirit, sanctifying the offerer, represented by the victim, and rendering him acceptable to God.

^{8. shall lay the parts}] The several members of the victim. It was not to be offered confusedly, but after a careful partition of the several limbs, which were laid in regular order upon the altar (see Maimon. on Sacr. c. 6). This act of sacerdotal distribution betokens the necessity of a decent solemnity in the worship of God, and the duty of the Christian Priest "to divide rightly the Word of truth" (2 Tim. ii. 15).

— the fat] Hebr. peder (only used here and in v. 12, and viii. 20; from padar, to fatten, whence food, fodder, fat, Futter, Fett. Gesen., p. 667). See Bochart, Hierozoic. i. 472, and Baumgarten, p. 128, on the design of this precept, which intimates the duty of giving the best to God.

^{9. his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water}] indicating the need and duty of internal purification of the heart, and also of holy actions,—a lesson taught by our Lord when He washed His Disciples' feet. See the notes on John xiii. 5—10.

By Christ, the true Priest, our hearts "are sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water" (Heb. x. 22).

Every one is bound to offer himself to God (Rom. xii. 1); and here is represented the duty of every one who offers, to purify the heart (James iv. 8), and to examine himself, and to confess his sins, before he approaches God's altar (1 Cor. xi. 28).

— the priest shall burn all on the altar] The Altar was the Table of God; and what was laid upon the altar was ministered to Him; and what became the food of the fire of the altar (see iii. 11) was regarded as fed upon by God Himself, and as accepted by Him. Christ's Sacrifice was offered to God on the altar of the Cross; He endured the fire of God's wrath against the sins of the whole world (Exod. xii. 8), and He was accepted as a whole burnt-offering by Him.

In a secondary sense this is to be fulfilled by all Christians, whose Exemplar Christ is, and who must be partakers of His sufferings and fiery trials and afflictions, by which they are purified as gold in the fire (1 Pet. i. 7), in order that they may be partakers of His glory. Every sacrifice must be salted with fire (Mark ix. 49. Heb. xii. 10; xiii. 11, 12. 1 Pet. iv. 1. 12).

The act of burning, like that of pouring out the blood, could not be done by the offerer, but required the mediation of the Priest; whereby it was intimated that only by means of Christ's Priesthood can our offerings be acceptable to God.

— a sweet savour] Literally, a savour of rest; complacency and acquiescence (see Exod. xxix. 18. Gen. viii. 21), the figure of Christ's acceptable sacrifice (Eph. v. 2), and of our offerings made acceptable through Him (Rom. xii. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 5).

St. Paul, by adopting the phrase of the Septuagint, ὁσμήν εὐωδίας, and by applying it to Christ, teaches us to see a type of Him in these sacrifices (see above, on Gen. viii. 21). In the words of an ancient Father, "There is no other victim for sin but EMMANUEL, who is the true Lamb which taketh away the sins of the world. He is a whole burnt-offering, for He is perfectly holy, not partially; He is wholly fragrant, a Sacrifice of a sweet-smelling savour; for He did no sin, and He it is Who is the Author and Giver of Sanctity to all others. He hallows all Creation by His Spirit, for He came forth from God, and He is God" (S. Cyril, de Ador. xii. p. 442). "After that He was offered, all Sacrifices ceased, which were types and figures of that Sacrifice which offered the One True Priest and Mediator of God and man has offered" (Bede, Quæst. 2).

^{11. northward}] The Hebrew Expositors say that whatever sacrifice was killed to the southward of the altar was polluted (Maimonides), and they say that the North is the symbol of evil; as it is said in Jer. i. 14, "out of the north an evil shall break forth;" and that, because these sacrifices were offered to avert evil, therefore they were killed northward of the altar (R. Menachem). The north is in Hebrew tsaphon, the dark quarter, from tsaphan, to hide (cp. ἄφρος), and it may be for this reason that it was regarded as the source of evil. Figuratively, this is applicable to the true Sacrifice, that of Christ, Who is the only defence of the faithful against the Powers of Darkness.

Some of the Fathers suppose here a reference to the Gentile world lying in darkness and the shadow of death, and an intimation of the application of the benefits of Christ's sacrifice to the Heathen; and to their illumination by the dawning upon them of the "Sun of Righteousness with healing in His wings" (Mal. iv. 2).

— shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar] So the blood of the true Sacrifice was poured out on the Cross. "He hath poured out His soul unto death" (Isa. liii. 12). "This is My blood," He said, "which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. xxvi. 28). See also St. John (xix. 34, 35), describing the pouring out of the Blood from the pierced side of Christ.

^{14. of fowls}] Which were accepted by God, as well as larger and more costly sacrifices, such as oxen and sheep; so that no man, however poor, might be excluded from the privilege of offering to God (Theodoret). Such an offering was brought by the Mother of Christ Himself (Luke ii. 24). "If there be first a willing mind, a man is accepted according to that he hath, and not according to that he hath not" (2 Cor. viii. 12). Here is a divine precept for the gathering of alms from all, poor as well as rich; and therefore here is another reason for the use of the Offertory.

— turtledoves, or of young pigeons] Not any wild or carnivorous fowls, but such as were clean, harmless, and domestic (see on v. 2), and such as betokened the moral and spiritual dispositions required in the worshipper, and prefigured the love priest shall bring it unto the altar, and || wring off his head, and burn it on the altar; and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar: ^{|| Or, pinch off the head with the nail.}

 16 And he shall pluck away his crop with || his feathers, and cast it ^{|| Or, the fifth thereof.} ^{q ch. 6. 10.} beside the altar on the east part, by the place of the ashes: 17 And he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but ^{r Gen. 15. 10.} shall not divide it asunder: and the priest shall ^{s ver. 9, 13.} burn it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: ^s it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the Lord.

and innocence of Him through whose sacrifice alone all other sacrifices were accepted by God.

The turtle-dove, on account of its innocence and loving disposition, is used as an emblem of the Church (Ps. lxxiv. 19. Cant. v. 2; vi. 9). On the abundance of doves in Palestine see Robinson, i. 319; ii. 433, and Keil, p. 23.

15. wring off his head] or, shall make an incision in. The Hebrew word, matak, is found only here and in v. 8, in which place directions are given concerning the sin-offering. Our translators, following the Sept. (ἀνοκνύει), render it to wring off, and some of the Rabbinical authorities (see Keil, p. 23). But it seems not to signify to wring off the head, but rather to make an aperture with the nail of the finger, so that the blood might be poured out (see the Arabic version, and Maimonides in Ainsworth, p. 8, and Gesenius, p. 479, and so Hesychius, and Radulphus). There was no severance in the act of immolation (cp. v. 8), but only an outpouring of the life-blood. Thus, perhaps, this sacrifice prefigured Him of whom not a bone was to be broken (John xix. 36), and in whom the Godhead remained united with His human soul as well as with His human Body (cp. Bp. Pearson, Art. iv. pp. 213, 214). Another reason of the non-severance is suggested by an ancient Father: "The head of the turtle-dove was not separated from the body; Christ, our Head, is not separated from us who are His Body, in His Passion; nay, rather, by His Passion He joined us more closely to Himself." (S. Gregory, in Ezekiel, Hom. i.)

16. he shall pluck away his crop with his feathers] rather, with the excrement (notsah, from yatsa, to go out: Gesenius, p. 561; cp. Baumgarten, p. 129; and so Onkelos and Syriac); a figure of what is carnal and unclean (James i. 21). Neither the skin of the beast, nor the dung of birds were to be offered to God; they were unclean (Theodoret). Nothing that defiles, or is defiled, may be presented to Him who is all holy.

— on the east part] which was nearest the outer court, and furthest from the Holy of Holies, and ready to be carried away (cp. Ps. xciii. 5. 1 Pet. i. 15, 16).

17. not divide it asunder] See on Gen. xv. 10.

— a sweet savour] an odour of rest. The Sept. has δσμή εὐδίας; as in the case of the two other sacrifices (v. 9, and v. 13). The phrase repeated here shows that the sacrifice of the poor is equally acceptable with that of the rich to God, who is no respecter of persons (Acts x. 34).

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER II.

ON THE MEAT-OFFERING.

What is the special significance of the Meat-offering?

Each of the Levitical Sacrifices prefigures some peculiar characteristic of the One great sacrifice of Christ; and also suggests some peculiar duty of the Christian Church, and of all her members.

The Hebrew word rendered Meat-offering (Minchah) properly signifies a gift (see on v. 1). The English word meat-offering may produce confusion unless it be remembered that meat does not here signify flesh, but only food; not, however, animal food.

The Meat-offering was an adjunct to the BURNT-OFFERING (see xxiii. 13, 18); and is therefore here mentioned after it. It was also usually joined with a Drink-offering of wine; xxiii. 13. Ex. xxix. 40. Num. vi. 17; xv. 7, &c.; xxix. 16, 22, &c. 2 Chron. xxix. 35. Joel ii. 14.

The Burnt-offering was one of God's animal creatures to whose life man contributed nothing; but the Meat-offering was an offering in which human labour intervened. It was of fine flour (v. 1), prepared and ground by human industry; and sometimes baked with an admixture of oil (v. 4—7); or it was corn, but not in a green state, but parched by fire (v. 14). Therefore the Minchah, or Meat-offering, represents human labour working together with divine grace in bringing gifts to God, and in acknowledging Him as the Author of all the good that is done by man's labour. Therefore the offerer did not participate in the minchah; but it was given wholly to God, and called "most holy" (v. 10). A part of it was offered by the priest, and burnt on the altar with frankincense, and this was called the Memorial, μνημόσυνον (v. 2. 9, 16).

What, therefore, was the signification of the Minchah?

(1) With regard to Christ,—it represented the free offering of His labour in doing the Work of His heavenly Father. He went about doing good. "My Meat is to do the will of Him that sent Me, and to finish His work" (John iv. 34; vi. 38).

But, as all Christian Antiquity testified, it had also another meaning in regard to Christ. A part of the Minchah, called the Memorial, was offered on the altar with incense, and it was accompanied with a drink-offering of wine.

The flour and the cakes of the Minchah were a compound of many grains of corn kneaded into one substance; the wine was a product of many grapes fused into one liquid.

All the ancient Christian Fathers assert, that in this respect it was a figure of that "perpetual memory that is made of the precious death of Christ (Who joins us all together into One in His mystical Body) until His coming again," by means of God's creatures of Bread and Wine solemnly offered to God, as the Creator of all, in the oblation of the Holy Eucharist, according to Christ's own command, "Do this in remembrance of Me" (Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 24, 25); or, "for the commemoration of Me," and of My Sacrifice offered on the Cross, and for the continual representation of it before God on earth, as it is perpetually pleaded before Him by our great High Priest in heaven with the incense of prevailing Prayer; that He may remember that Sacrifice, and for His sake be gracious and merciful to His Universal Church. And thus the promise of God Himself in Malachi is fulfilled: "From the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same My Name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto My Name, and a pure Minchah; for My Name shall be great among the heathen, saith the Lord of hosts" (Mal. i. 11).

Thus the Minchah prefigured Christ's work upon earth consummated in His Passion; and as represented and pleaded before God in the perpetual commemorative Sacrifice of the Holy Eucharist. On this interpretation of the Minchah see S. Justin Martyr, c. Tryphon. c. 41. 117; and S. Irenaeus, iv. 32; S. Cyprian, c. Judaeos i. 16; Eusebius, Dem. Evang. i. ad fin.; S. Chrys., in Ps. xcvi. cp. in Hebr. Hom. 17. S. August., de Civ. Dei xviii. 35; xix. 14; and the learned Treatise of Joseph Mede, pp. 355—379.

The Minchah was offered "with the salt of the covenant" (v. 13). The Christian Minchah is offered by those who have been brought into covenant with God; and it is offered in attestation of that covenant, and for a renewal and confirmation of it. The Minchah was "most holy" (v. 3), and not partaken of by the offerer; it did not represent Christ's work as a Communion (that was done by the Shalem or Peace-offering, see iii. 1), but as unique in its merits, and as perpetually pleaded and presented before God.

(2) With regard to the Church herself, and every member of it,—the meaning of the Minchah is obvious from what has been said, and from a consideration of the example of Christ, her Head and Pattern.

The Minchah represents the oblation of human labour, working with and sanctified by divine grace. It therefore suggests the duty of offering and consecrating all our works to God, and of ascribing all to Him. "To do good and to communicate forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased" (Heb. xiii. 16. Cp. Phil. ii. 17; iv. 18). The sacrifice of prayers and thanksgiving, good works, alms, offerings, praise of the faithful, go to constitute the Christian Minchah, and they ascend to heaven as a Memorial to God, well-pleasing to Him through Jesus Christ (see on v. 2, and 1 Pet. ii. 5). In His Name the Church presents the alms of the faithful at the Christian Offertory, and prays (in the words of Nehemiah xiii. 14. 22), "Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and spare me according to the greatness of Thy mercy." a ch. G. 14. & 9.

17. Num. 15. 4.

b ver. 9. ch. 5.
12. & G. 15. & 24.
7. Isa. 66. 3.
Acts 10. 4.

c ch. 7. 9. & 10.
12, 13.
d Ex. 29. 37.
Num. 18. 9.

e Ex. 29. 2.

|| Or, on a flat
plate, or, slice.

f ver. 2.
g Ex. 29. 18.
h ver. 3.

II. ¹ And when any will offer ^a a meat offering unto the LORD, his offering shall be of fine flour; and he shall pour oil upon it, and put frankincense thereon: ² And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons the priests: and he shall take thereout his handful of the flour thereof, and of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof; and the priest shall burn ^b the memorial of it upon the altar, to be an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: ³ And ^c the remnant of the meat offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': ^d it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

⁴ And if thou bring an oblation of a meat offering baken in the oven, it shall be unleavened cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, or unleavened wafers ^e anointed with oil.

⁵ And if thy oblation be a meat offering baken || in a pan, it shall be of fine flour unleavened, mingled with oil. ⁶ Thou shalt part it in pieces, and pour oil thereon: it is a meat offering.

⁷ And if thy oblation be a meat offering baken in the fryingpan, it shall be made of fine flour with oil. ⁸ And thou shalt bring the meat offering that is made of these things unto the LORD: and when it is presented unto the priest, he shall bring it unto the altar. ⁹ And the priest shall take from the meat offering ^f a memorial thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar: it is an ^g offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD. ¹⁰ And ^h that which is left of the meat offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

CHAP. II. 1. will offer] Of his own freewill.
— a meat offering] A minchah, gift (Gen. xxxii. 13; xliii. 11), or distribution, from manah, to distribute, and manach, to give. Gesen. 485, 6. Cp. the Latin munus; and see the foregoing note.

The minchah consisted of inanimate things, such as flour or roasted grain, and is thus distinguished from the zebach, which was slain; ep. 1 Sam. iii. 14. Ps. xl. 6, where both are mentioned. The former is an unbloody, the latter a bloody sacrifice. The Septuagint renders minchah sometimes by θυσία, as here; sometimes by προσφορά (Ps. xl. 7), and sometimes it preserves the Hebrew word (Ezek. xlvi. 4. 7. 11).

The minchah was an accompaniment to the burnt-offering, which was preceded by the sin-offering. It was grounded on the supposition of previous atonement (expressed in the sin-offering), and of self-dedication to, and acceptance by, God (which was signified by the burnt offering); and it was an Eucharistic offering of God's gifts to the Giver Himself, and an acknowledgment of His love as the only source of blessing to men, and of man's consequent duty to God; and by its connexion with the burnt-offering, preceded by the sin-offering, it was a recognition, in a figure, of man's unworthiness to offer to God, except through the worthiness of Christ.

On the ritual of Meat-offerings, see Lightfoot, Temple Service, viii. 5, vol. i. p. 938.

— his offering] his korban.

— fine flour—oil—frankincense] Fine flour of wheat (Exod. xxix. 2), except in the case of the offering of jealousy (Num. v. 15), and the wave-sheaf at the Passover, which were of barley.

The fine flour of wheat, Heb. soleth, properly flour sifted and bolted (Ges. 590), and purged from bran, denoted the purity of Christ's offering, and the holiness required of Christians, and it symbolized the produce of human labour applied diligently to the improvement of God's gifts, and the need of the concurrence of both. The pouring of the oil symbolized the unction of the Holy Spirit Who anointed our Great High Priest (Ps. xlv. 7. Luke iv. 18), and the effusion of the Spirit through Him upon all His members (1 John ii. 20. 27), and the co-operation of divine grace with man's will and work. And the frankincense, in its sweetness and ascent to God, was an emblem of "the sweet-smelling savour" of His prevailing Mediation and Intercession, and of the acceptance of the prayers of Christians through Him (Eph. v. 2. Rev. viii. 3, 4). It was "through the Eternal Spirit that Christ offered Himself without spot to God" (Heb. ix. 14). It was by virtue of His Incarnation by the Holy Ghost, and by His unction to His office, that this offering was spotless and accepted (see on Heb. ix. 14); and the oil of the minchah showed the need of the Holy Spirit's influence to make our offerings acceptable to God.

^{2. he shall take}] that is, the priest shall take. See vi. 15. (Targum of Onkelos; Maimonides.)

— the priest shall burn] The offerer brought the offering to the Priest, the Priest took it, and burnt part of it on the altar: both these acts were figurative of the works of Christ, Who united both offerer and Priest in Himself. See Preliminary Note to chap. i.

— the memorial] a type of Christ's sacrifice, which is ever remembered on earth in the Holy Eucharist (Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 24. See Preliminary Note to this chapter), and which is ever presented to God's remembrance in heaven; and which, when remembered by Him, inclines Him to remember no more the iniquities of those for whom it is offered, but to remember them for good. This memorial is called also σμνη εὐωδίας here. The Sept. here has the word μνημόσυλον, and that word is adopted in the New Testament to describe the alms and prayers of pious men, such as Cornelius, which "went up as a memorial before God" (Acts x. 4).

^{3. shall be Aaron's}] and it must be eaten only by the Priests in the Holy Place (vi. 16).

— most holy] holiness of holinesses. The sin-offering (vi. 25. 29), and the trespass-offering (vii. 1. 6), are called most holy, because they were entirely dedicated to God, and were shadows of the Holy One to come, the True Sacrifice Who sanctifies all other sacrifices, and those who offer them, and Who is to be fed upon with holy love and desire and thankfulness. Cp. Mede on the several kinds of Sacrifices, Book i. Discourse 51, p. 286.

^{4. oblation}] korban.

— oven] not like a modern oven, but a large pot (Keil).

— it shall be unleavened] No meat-offering was to be with leaven (v. 11); an admonition to all worshippers that their offerings must be without hypocrisy, false doctrine, or malice; and be offered in "sincerity and truth" (Matt. xvi. 6. 12. Luke xii. 1. 1 Cor. v. 8. Gal. v. 9. See on Exod. xii. 15).

— cakes] See Ges. 281.

— wafers] or pancakes.

— oil] See v. 1.

^{5. in a pan}] a flat iron plate or girdle, held over the fire (Robinson, ii. 180).

^{7. fryingpan}] rather a cauldron, or boiling-pot (Ges. 509)

¹¹ No meat offering, which ye shall bring unto the LORD, shall be made with ¹ leaven: for ye shall burn no leaven, nor any honey, in any offering of the LORD made by fire. ¹² ^k As for the oblation of the firstfruits, ye shall offer them unto the LORD: but they shall not † be burnt on the altar for a sweet savour. ¹³ And every oblation of thy meat offering ¹ shalt thou season with salt; neither shalt thou suffer ^m the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy meat offering: ⁿ with all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt.

¹⁴ And if thou offer a meat offering of thy firstfruits unto the LORD, ^o thou shalt offer for the meat offering of thy firstfruits green ears of corn dried by the fire, even corn beaten out of ^p full ears. ¹⁵ And ^q thou shalt put oil upon it, and lay frankincense thereon: it is a meat offering. ¹⁶ And the priest shall burn ^r the memorial of it, part of the beaten corn thereof, and part of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

III. ¹ And if his oblation be a ^a sacrifice of peace offering, if he offer it of

i ch. 6. 17.
See Matt. 16. 12.
Mark 8. 15.
Luke 12. 1.
1 Cor. 5. 8. Gal. 5. 9.
k Ex. 22. 29.
ch. 23. 10, 11.
† Heb. ascend.
l Mark 9. 49.
Col. 4. 6.
m Num. 18. 19.
n Ezek. 43. 24.
o ch. 23. 10, 14.

p 2 Kings 4. 42.
q ver. 1.

r ver. 2.

a ch. 7. 11, 20.
& 22. 21.

11. No meat offering . . . shall be with leaven] except in the case specified in vii. 13; xxiii. 17.

— nor any honey] In an oblation made with fire, no honey was to be offered; for honey, though sweet to the taste, tends to fermentation and acidity (Prov. xxv. 16. 27), “Dulcia se in bilem vertent” (Horat., 2 Serm. ii. 75). A warning against such things as may be agreeable and luscious to the spiritual palate, but are not nutritive. Honey, being mingled with fire, boils up in froth, and is, by the Hebrew expositors, regarded as a symbol of pride (R. Elias; cp. Bähr, Symbolik ii. p. 322).

In divine worship nothing is to be introduced which ministers to the sensual appetite, to voluptuous excitement (cp. Prov. v. 3), or personal vain-glory; such, for instance, as certain kinds of music, and certain kinds of hymns of a familiar, meretricious kind; and all the delusive fascinations and dazzling allurements of creature-worship.

Only what is sound, sober, wholesome, and edifying, both in doctrine and ritual (1 Cor. xiv. 27), is to be admitted into the worship of God. We may not adopt our own inventions, though they may be sweet and delicious as honey to our own palates. We may not degrade God's worship into will-worship (Col. ii. 23). We must submit ourselves to God's Will, as revealed in His Word, and as declared by the public consent and authoritative judgment of His Church. Honey is good in its proper place, and heaven itself is typified by “a land flowing with milk and honey” (Exod. iii. 8; xiii. 5), but, if God forbids it, we must abstain from it, or we shall not come to that heavenly Canaan.

12. As for the oblation] rather, As an oblation of the firstfruits. Honey and leaven may be offered among the firstfruits (cp. xxiii. 17. 2 Chron. xxxi. 5). They were not to be mixed with any offering. They were not excluded from the firstfruits, but “they were not to be burnt on the altar for a sweet savour.”

13. every oblation . . . shalt thou season with salt] After the prohibition of leaven and honey we have the injunction of salt. Every oblation is to be seasoned with salt. The Sept. has πᾶν δῶρον θυσίας ὑμῶν ἅλι ἅλι σθησειται. All things in Public Worship are to be done to edification (1 Cor. xiv. 26). On the emblematic character of salt see Matt. v. 13. Mark ix. 49, where our Lord refers to this command of Leviticus, and the words of the Sept. are adopted. Luke xiv. 34. Col. iv. 6. Cp. Baumgarten, Pent., p. 31.

— the salt of the covenant] Salt is a preservative from corruption. “To eat salt with a man” was to be his friend; and so salt, especially among the Arabs and other Eastern tribes, was also a symbol of hospitality, and an emblem of an inviolable covenant; see Bp. Patrick here, Schulz, Volney, and Tischend. in Keil, p. 27; and below, Num. xviii. 19. 2 Chron. xiii. 5.

Therefore the salt represents the offering as deriving its efficacy from being offered by those who were in covenant with God — and as offered in attestation of that covenant, and for a renewal and confirmation of it; cp. Mede, p. 371, and above, Preliminary Note to this chapter.

14. dried by the fire, even corn beaten out of full ears] In every case the Meat-offering implied the concurrence of human labour with divine grace, symbolized by the outpouring of the oil; and with prayer, signified by incense; and with soundness of soul and spirit, in covenant with God, signified by salt.

CHAP. III. ON THE PEACE-OFFERINGS.

1. a sacrifice] literally, something slain, a zebach; the first mention of which is in Gen. xxxi. 54. It differed from the burnt-offering, or olah (which was wholly consumed), in that a portion of it was eaten by the offerer, and by others in covenant with him and with God; cp. Gen. xlvii. Exod. xviii. 12.

— peace offering] shelem, an offering for peace; a thank-offering. See Exod. xx. 24; xxiv. 5; and therefore rendered by the Sept. an eucharistic sacrifice for salvation (θυσία σωτηρίου), i. e. in grateful acknowledgment of God's saving power and mercy. The shelem was frequently offered in distress to procure deliverance or salvation; see vii. 20; ix. 4. Judg. xx. 26; xxi. 4. Amos v. 22. (Gesenius, p. 830.) The shelamim were offered “de rebus prosperis impetratis aut impetrandis” (Outram).

The shelem prefigured Christ's sacrifice in its gracious effects, producing peace and salvation. “The chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and by His stripes we are healed” (Isa. liii. 5). He is our Peace, and hath made peace by the blood of the cross (Col. i. 20. Acts xiii. 47. Rom. v. 1. Eph. ii. 14—16. Heb. v. 9; ix. 28). It is well rendered ειρηνική by Sept. in several places. See 2 Sam. vi. 17, 18. 1 Kings viii. 64. Prov. vii. 14.

It represented the duty of thankfulness for peace and salvation produced thereby. Indeed this is a characteristic of all Levitical sacrifices, whether they be sin-offerings, burnt-offerings, meat-offerings, or peace-offerings. They represented Christ's merit and man's duty. They represent the perfection and efficacy of His sufferings, and they represent also our duty of being conformed to Him in His sufferings; and they exhibit the moral qualities of that sacrifice of ourselves which we must offer to God.

But there is a well-defined order and significance in each of these kinds of sacrifices. The Sin-offering comes first, because there is no approach to God before the expiation and atonement made by the Blood of Christ. The Burnt-offering comes next, as expressing His perfect self-dedication, and exhibiting our consequent duty as offering ourselves as living sacrifices in conformity to Him. The Meat-offering, added to the Burnt-offering, represents the perpetual memorial of His obedience and sacrifice, ever pleaded before God in the Holy Sacrament of Bread and Wine; and it exhibited our oblations, sanctified in Him to God. Then, at length, succeeds the Peace-offering (cp. below, viii. 14; ix. 2, 3, 4), significant of our deliverance and reconciliation to God; and expressing our thankfulness to Him, joy in Him, and union with Him, and also with men by acts of mercy and love (see vii. 14). It was an Eucharist coupled with an Offertory (see vii. 11—15).

The heads of the victims in ancient sacrifices were crowned with garlands (see Acts xiv. 13), and the Levitical Peace-offering was like a beautiful crown set upon the head of all the sacrifices of the Levitical Law.

There is this remarkable characteristic of the Peace-offering, as distinguishing it from the Sin-offering and Burnt-offering: viz., that in the Sin-offering and Burnt-offering the offerer

b ch. 1. 3.

c Ex. 29. 10.
ch. 1. 4, 5.d Ex. 29. 17, 22.
ch. 4. 8, 9.
|| Or, suet.|| Or, midriff over the liver, and over the kidneys.
e Ex. 29. 13.
ch. 6. 12.

the herd; whether it be a male or female, he shall offer it ^b without blemish before the LORD. ² And ^c he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons the priests shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about. ³ And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; ^d the || fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards, ⁴ And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the || caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away. ⁵ And Aaron's sons ^e shall burn it on the altar upon the burnt sacrifice, which is upon the wood that is on the fire: it is an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

⁶ And if his offering for a sacrifice of peace offering unto the LORD be of the himself had no share, but in the Peace-offering the worshipper was a partaker of the sacrifice with God Himself, and had communion with Him, and was made a guest at His Table.

Thus the Peace-offering represented the worshipper in his reconciled relation to God; it foreshadowed the penitent and faithful of every age under the Gospel, as communicating with God in Christ; and was a signal type of the Christian Shelem, the Blessed Eucharist, or Holy Communion, wherein we are invited to feast on Christ (1 Cor. v. 8), and are admitted to the Communion of His Body and Blood (1 Cor. x. 16), and are partakers of the Lord's table (1 Cor. x. 21), and dwell in Him, and He in us; He is therefore our Peace-offering; "for of the Peace-offering, part God had, and part the Offerer ate, in sign of perfect peace and reconciliation" (see Bp. Andrewes, ii. p. 296); and we have thereby a pledge of a blessed Resurrection and a glorious Immortality, by virtue of our union with Him who is the Resurrection and the Life. (See on John vi. 53—57.)

The Lord's Supper is of the nature of an Eucharist or Peace-offering to be eaten: such an offering was never made, but it was also eaten, that there might be a representation of the memory of that Sacrifice, and an application of it to each person partaking of it. (See Bp. Andrewes, v. p. 66.) On this important subject, cp. Lightfoot's Temple Service, viii. 4, vol. i. p. 936, and Joseph Mede, on the Christian Sacrifice, Book ii. chap. 7; Dean Brevint, on the Christian Sacrament and Sacrifice, Sect. viii. p. 91; and the Rev. Philip Freeman's remarks "on the Peace-offering, the proper analogue to the Eucharist," in his valuable work, entitled the Principles of Divine Service, vol. ii. part ii. pp. 263—276, who thus speaks—"The Mosaic Peace-offering consisted of a slain animal, male or female, which the offerer presented and slew at the door of the Tabernacle court, after laying his hand upon its head; when the Priest sprinkled the blood round about the altar. The body was divided into three parts: (1.) The fat and inward parts were burnt upon the altar by the priests; and it is more distinctly ordered (Lev. iii. 5) that in the case of any other personal offering, it should 'be burnt upon the Burnt sacrifice' (that is, the daily sacrifice), 'which is upon the wood, which is upon the fire.' (2.) A second portion, the breast and shoulder, was given to the Priest, after the one had been lifted or 'heaved' up, and the other 'waved' to and fro, the Priest putting his hands under those of the offerer (Lev. vii. 28. 34; Num. vi. 19, 20). (3.) The remainder, forming by far the greatest part, was returned to the offerer, and was eaten with rejoicing by the offerer and his household and friends, and to which the widow, orphan, poor, slaves, and Levites, were invited (Lev. vii. 15—21; Deut. xii. 11. 17)."

From the time the Israelites entered the Holy Land, besides a meat-offering of bread (flour and oil), a drink-offering of wine was required to be added to the peace offering as well as to the personal burnt-offerings (Lev. vii. 12. Num. xv. 2—12). Of this meat-offering, a handful called the "memorial," as representing the whole, was burnt upon the altar; the rest eaten by the priest.

Now it is to be observed of this kind of sacrifice, that besides that, like the other personal or congregational sacrifices, it served in a general way to present and to plead, on behalf of the worshipper, the virtue of the continual burnt-offerings; it contained in it, in a measure, the powers of the other two kinds. Inferior to the burnt-offering in expressing self-dedication and worship, since it was burnt but in part; and to the sin-offering in respect of atonement, because the blood was not applied to the horns of the altar, nor yet poured out at the foot of it; it nevertheless was marked as of kin to the one by the sprinkling of the blood, and to the other by being partly eaten by the priest. While therefore the offering of all three kinds constituted the most complete act of personal priesthood, this one was best fitted to survive in the Christian Scheme as the representative of all, and carrying the powers of all in it. Nor is it to be doubted that the Christian Eucharist possesses in perfection the powers of the personal or congregational burnt-offering, sin-offering, and peace-offering all in one, and stands in the same relation to the Original and Continual Sacrifice of Christ, as all of them together did to the Mosaic Continual Sacrifice (Freeman).

The PEACE-OFFERING was also, in a signal manner, a figure of the Christian Shelem or Eucharist as a feast of Love; of Love to God and to man in God. In it the worshipper communicated with God by feasting on the sacrifice offered to Him; and he communicated with men by feasting together with his friends, and by gifts and alms to the poor; and thus it was a representation of that Sacrifice by which God the Father proved His love to us, in that He sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins (1 John iv. 10, 11), and by which God the Son proved His love to us by giving Himself for us for an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour (Eph. v. 1, 2), and in the commemoration of which we are all members one of another, for we all drink of one cup, and are all partakers of that one bread (1 Cor. x. 17).

— male or female] The Burnt-offering, specially representing the self-sacrifice of Christ suffering for sin, was to be of a male only (i. 3), but the Peace-offering might be a female as well as a male; it represents communion with God in Christ, in whom there is no difference between male and female. See Gal. iii. 28, where St. Paul seems to refer to the words of the Sept. here.

2. he shall kill it] Some suppose that this could only be done by the Priest or Levite, cp. i. 5; the text and most ancient versions seem to show that the act might be done by the offerer. May it not be significant of the truth, that we, by our sins, were the authors of Christ's death? Cp. Heb. vi. 6.

3. unto the LORD] The breast and the right shoulder were waved and heaved before the Lord, and then given to the Priest (vii. 30); the other portions were eaten by the offerer and his friends (vii. 15, 16).

— the fat] that which is best, in every sacrifice, is God's portion, and therefore consumed by the fire on His altar, which represents the divine acceptance of the sacrifice. See Exod. xxix. 18. Lev. iii. 16; iv. 31; xvii. 6; and note on Num. xviii. 17. Cp. Bähr, Symbolik ii. p. 381. Baumgarten, p. 133; and see Gen. xlv. 18. Ps. lxxiii. 5. Isa. xxv. 6, where the fat is synonymous with what is best. Hence appears the heinousness of the sin of Eli's sons, who robbed God of His part—the fat—and took it to themselves. See 1 Sam. ii. 16, 17, 29.

4. the two kidneys—and the caul above (or, lobe of the liver) the emblems of what is sensual, passionate, and unclean. Exod. xxix. 13. Col. iii. 5. (S. Basil, Theodoret.) These were to be burnt. "Mortify and kill in us all carnal and impure affections," is the prayer of the devout worshipper.

5. upon the burnt sacrifice] The Peace-offering must be burnt upon the burnt-offering. The burnt-offering of Christ's sacrifice and sufferings must precede, in order that the peace-offering may be accepted. See v. 1.

flock; male or female, 'he shall offer it without blemish. ⁷ If he offer a lamb ^{f ver. 1, &c.} for his offering, then shall he offer it before the LORD. ⁸ And he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons shall sprinkle the blood thereof round about upon the altar. ⁹ And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat thereof, and the whole rump, it shall he take off hard by the backbone; and the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards, ¹⁰ And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away. ¹¹ And the priest shall burn it upon the altar: it is ¹² the food of the offering made by fire unto the LORD.

¹² And if his offering be a goat, then ¹³ he shall offer it before the LORD. ¹³ And he shall lay his hand upon the head of it, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and the sons of Aaron shall sprinkle the blood thereof upon the altar round about. ¹⁴ And he shall offer thereof his offering, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards, ¹⁵ And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away. ¹⁶ And the priest shall burn them upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire for a sweet savour: ¹⁷ all the fat is the LORD's. ¹⁷ It shall be a ^k perpetual statute for your generations throughout all your dwellings, that ye eat neither ¹ fat nor ^m blood.

IV. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Compare with Deut. 32. 14. Neh. 8. 10.

m Gen. 9. 4.

ch. 7. 23, 26. & 17. 10, 14.

Deut. 12. 16.

1 Sam. 14. 33.

Ezek. 44. 7, 15.

g See ch. 21.
6, 8, 17, 21, 22, &
22. 25.
Ezek. 44. 7.
Mal. 1. 7, 12.
h ver. 1, 7, &c.

i ch. 7. 23, 25.
1 Sam. 2. 15.
2 Chron. 7. 7.
k ch. 6. 18. & 7.
36. & 17. 7. & 23.
14.
l ver. 16.
ch. 7. 23.

9. whole rump] or tail; the tail of the sheep or ram: as to the fatness of which, see Herod., iii. 113; Ælian, Hist. An. x. 4; Bochart, Hierozoic. i. p. 556; Robinson, ii. 391; Dr. Thomson, Land and Book, p. 97, and Keil's note here; and Kalisch on Exod. xxix. 22.

10. the caul above the liver] or the lobe of the liver. See Exod. xxix. 13; Bochart, Hierozoic. i. p. 498; and Bähr, Symbolik ii. p. 354; others suppose it to be the 'omentum minus,' or 'reticulum jecoris' (Fulg., Luther, De Wette, Knobel, Keil).

11. food of the offering made by fire] Literally, it is the bread of the fire-offering to the Lord. The altar was as it were God's table. God's altar must be fed first, and then the offerer may partake of the sacrifice. God's justice must be satisfied, His anger against sin must be first appeased. God must first signify His acceptance of the sacrifice before man can communicate in the Christian peace-offering.

The words 'eating and drinking' in Holy Scripture signify communion (see 1 Cor. x. 16, 17; xi. 24. Acts x. 13—15. Heb. xiii. 10); and the eating of the sacrifice of the Peace-offering signified communion with God in Christ Who is our Peace. See above, v. 1.

17. ye eat neither fat nor blood] The fat is the Lord's (v. 16), and whosoever eateth of the fat of an offering made by fire (i. e. of oxen, sheep, or goats), that soul shall be cut off from his people (vii. 23); and as to the blood, the command is (Deut. xii. 16), "Ye shall not eat the blood of any beast or fowl, but ye shall pour it upon the earth as water." (Cp. Gen. ix. 4.)

The fat was to be consumed in the fire (see on vv. 3, 4), because it was God's portion. The blood was not to be eaten, but poured out at the foot of the altar, because in it is the life, and the life was due to God; and the blood maketh atonement (xvii. 11), and "without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. ix. 22). Cp. Bochart, Hierozoic. i. 2. 50; Bähr, Symbolik ii. p. 201; and below, on xvii. 10—12.

The worshipper partook in the sacrifice with God Himself, but not in the blood; that was a type of the ransom or price of redemption (1 Cor. vi. 20; vii. 23) paid to God for the worshipper himself and for all the world, namely, of Christ's blood (1 Tim. ii. 6). The worshipper was forbidden to partake in the fat and the blood of the Peace-offering. In dealing with the doctrine of the Atonement, we must not rob God of what is due to Him as His part in the sacrifice of Christ; nor may we claim to ourselves any share in the meritorious work of our redemption (Isa. lxiii. 3. 5), in the satisfaction made once for all for our sins, and for our reconciliation with God, which was effected by the blood of Christ.

But in the Christian shelem, or Peace-offering, we are invited and commanded to drink of Christ's blood, as well as to eat of His flesh (Matt. xxvi. 26, 27. 1 Cor. xi. 23—25).

The reason is, that the blood is the life (Gen. ix. 4. Lev. xvii. 14), and that there is no life to us but by feeding on Him who is the Life (see John i. 4; xiv. 6). Therefore our Lord says, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you" (John vi. 53, 54—56; cp. Ex. xxiv. 6).

CHAP. IV.—PRELIMINARY NOTE ON SIN-OFFERINGS.

The foregoing three Chapters, as we have seen, have an important bearing on Christian Theology and Christian Ethics, especially with reference to the Death of Christ, in its sacrisficial and sacramental character, and our consequent privileges and duties.

The following four Chapters have a no less important bearing on Christian Theology and Christian Ethics, especially with reference to the true character of the Death of Christ, as an expiation for sin, and with regard to the doctrine of the Atonement (see vv. 26. 31. 35), and to the true nature of Sin in its manifold forms, as it appears in the eye of God, and as it is analyzed by Him.

The Sin-offering, which is the subject of the following Chapter, represents Christ, who was "made sin for us" (2 Cor. v. 21), as shedding His blood for the propitiation (ἱλασμός) of God's wrath against sin; and for the expiation of man's guilt; and for the cleansing of mankind from their sins.

According to the law of the Sin-offering, the hand of the offerer was to be laid on the victim's head, to mark the transfer of his sins to the victim; then the victim was to be slain; and the Blood, "in which is the life," and which "made an atonement" (see v. 6), was to be sprinkled seven times before the Veil, that is, in front of the Mercy-seat; and some of the Blood was to be put on the horns of the golden altar of Incense before the Lord (v. 7), and all the Blood was to

a ch. 5. 15, 17.
Num. 15. 22, &c.
1 Sam. 14. 27.
Ps 19. 12.

b ch. 8. 12.

c ch. 9. 2.

Israel, saying, "If a soul shall sin through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them: ³ b If the priest that is anointed do sin according to the sin of the people; then let him bring for his sin, which he hath sinned, ^c a young bullock without blemish unto the LORD for a sin offering. ⁴ And he be poured out at the foot of the Altar of Burnt-offering (v. 7). The fat, kidneys, &c., were to be burnt on the altar (v. 8—10); the skin and all the flesh, the head, inwards, &c., were to be carried forth out of the camp into a clean place and burnt with fire (v. 11, 12).

The Sin-offering, therefore, marked man's alienation from God. It showed that his life, represented by the blood which was poured out at the foot of the altar, was forfeited; and that death, the wages of sin, was his due: and that he was, as yet, incapable of communion with God; for in no case was any portion of the Sin-offering eaten by the offerer himself (see vi. 18. 22. 30; vii. 1; x. 17; xiv. 13); and thus it was distinguished from the Peace-offering, in which the offerer was admitted to communicate with God.

The sprinkling of the blood toward the Mercy-seat, and the pouring it out before the Lord, showed that it was to God's free grace and mercy alone that the sinner looked for pardon and peace. The Sin-offering, therefore, foreshadowed the vicarious, expiatory, and propitiatory Sacrifice and satisfaction of Christ as our Atonement.

Observe, that the expiatory offerings, viz., the Sin-offering and the Trespass-offering, are not mentioned in the Pentateuch before the delivery of the Levitical Law. Not that the consciousness of a need of expiation for sin, and of man's inability to make atonement for himself, was unknown before the Sinaitic Legislation (for such consciousness is involved in the very idea of every sacrifice where blood was shed), but it was one of the designs of that Legislation to bring out more clearly that consciousness, by means of sacrifices, bearing the special name of Sin-offerings, and to prepare the way for the full reception of the doctrine of the Atonement to be made by Him who is the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world (Rev. xiii. 8), "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world" (John i. 29).

2. If a soul shall sin through ignorance, &c.] Literally, a soul when it shall have sinned in ignorance, or aberration, (shegagah, i. e. straying) from all the commandments of the Lord which shall not be done; and shall have done from (i. e., in his doings have swerved from) one of them: for example, if the Priest that is anointed, &c.

The cases contemplated in this chapter concerning Sin-offerings, are cases where a sin has been committed by infraction of one of the divine prohibitions: not, however, wilfully or willingly, but through want of due consideration, κατ' ἀγνοίαν (see iv. 13; v. 18). The Sept. has here ἀκούσως, unwillingly, and Vulg. "per ignorantiam," and so the other ancient Versions.

The word shegagah, here used, is properly applied to the straying of animals, sheep, &c., or of the blind (Deut. xxvii. 18; Ezek. xxxiv. 6; compare Isa. viii. 6—"all we like sheep have gone astray"), and is thence used to signify such sins as arise from blindness of the understanding, and are sins of ignorance; or from sudden transport of the affections, and are sins of infirmity (ep. Ps. xix. 12, 13); and not to such sins as are deliberate, and transgressions of the will, and are sins of presumption.

Ignorance of the Divine Law (ἀγνοία) is itself regarded as sinful in the Old and New Testament: for "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," and "to depart from evil is understanding" (Ps. cxi. 10. Prov. ix. 10; xv. 33. Job xxvii. 28), and it is man's duty to know God's Law, and to obey it. In the New Testament the Jews are said to have crucified Christ through ignorance (κατ' ἀγνοίαν, Acts iii. 17), but they ought to have known and received "Him of whom Moses and the prophets did write." St. Paul says that he persecuted the Church through ignorance (ἀγνοῶν); but still he condemns himself as a "blasphemer and injurious" (1 Tim. i. 13).

But such sins were not so heinous as if they had been committed presumptuously and with a high hand (Num. xv. 30); and therefore our Lord pleaded for the Jews on the ground that "they knew not what they did" (Luke xxiii. 34), and St. Paul says, that he "obtained mercy" because he "did it ignorantly in unbelief."

On the threefold division of sins, viz.:—(1) of ignorance (i. e. want of consideration); (2) of infirmity; and (3) of presumption; which is carefully to be remembered in reading this and the following chapters; the reader may refer to Bp. Sanderson, i. 89; iii. 224; and the notes below on Acts iii. 17; xxiii. 5. 1 Cor. iv. 4. 1 Tim. i. 12, 13. The Psalmist marks this distinction of sins, when he says, "Who can understand his errors?" (or strayings, shegloth), "cleans Thou me from secretnesses," (sins hidden from myself). "Keep back thy servant from presumptuousnesses . . . then shall I be innocent from the great transgression" (Ps. xix. 12, 13). By the Levitical Law the wilful and presumptuous sinner was to be "cut off from his people" (Num. xv. 27—30).

An important lesson is inculcated by the precepts in this and the following chapter, and a very solemn view is presented of human responsibility.

Men are apt to imagine, that if they act according to their consciences, they are safe; but the Divine Lawgiver here teaches, that ignorances, infirmities, and negligences are sins, and were punishable as such; and that men must therefore take care to inform and enlighten their consciences by God's Will and Word; and keep a watch over their affections, as well as control their wills. We must pray for God's grace "to sanctify us wholly in our bodies, souls, and spirits, that we may be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

This chapter also teaches the important moral truth that the heinousness of a sin varies according to the position of the sinner; for example, that sin in a Priest is more hateful to God than in a common person.

"Omne adeū vitium tanto conspectū in se Crimen habet, quanto major, qui peccat, habetur."
(Juvenal, viii. 140.)

"A sharp judgment shall be to them in high places: mercy will soon pardon the meanest, but mighty men shall be mightily tormented" (Wisd. vi. 5, 6).

It also teaches that nations may be guilty of sin as well as individuals; and that they ought therefore to repent, when they have done wrong.

— commandments—concerning things which ought not to be done] For doing ignorantly what ought not to be done, the Sin-offering was to be offered; and it was limited to such cases (Maimonides, Shegagoth, c. 1); see v. 3.

3. the priest that is anointed] the High Priest: Exod. xxviii. 41; xxix. 7; Lev. xvi. 32; xxi. 10; and so Sept., Onkelos 3. The Hebrew word here is Mashiach, whence Messiah, and the Greek word in v. 5 is Χριστός, Christ. Therefore, since our Blessed Lord is the Christ, or the Anointed, and since no other High Priest is now anointed, He is not an ordinary Priest, but the High Priest, the great High Priest of our profession (Heb. iii. 1; iv. 14), and He has absorbed into Himself all the glory and dignity of the Levitical Priesthood.

— do sin] The Levitical High Priest is regarded by the Levitical Law as liable to sin; and thus the Levitical Law acknowledges the infirmity of the Levitical Priesthood, and avows its own imperfection, and declares that the Levitical Law and Priesthood were designed by God to be temporary and transitory, and preparatory to a better dispensation, that of Christ and His Gospel, which has a High Priest "holy, harmless, and undefiled, separate from sinners," who is able, by reason of His perfect sinlessness, to make atonement for sin, and has offered one sacrifice, once for all, the sacrifice of Himself, by which He has perfected for ever them that are sanctified. See Heb. v. 2, 3; vii. 25—28; x. 1—14.

St. Paul refers to this law in Heb. v. 2, where he speaks of the High Priest having compassion on the ignorant and them that are out of the way, that is, those who sin from ignorance—the case considered here.

— according to the sin of the people] Literally, to the guilt of the people, to make them guilty before God (so Vulg.), for the Priest was their head. It is remarkable that both the words, chattath and asham, are here combined: see on v. 3.

— let him bring] The Sin-offering is expressly commanded in the Levitical Law: burnt-offerings, meat-offerings, and peace-offerings, are presupposed. (See i. 3; ii. 1; iii. 1.)

— a young bullock] No less an offering than that of the whole congregation, v. 14; a solemn warning, showing the shall bring the bullock ^d unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation ^{d ch. 1. 3, 4.} before the LORD; and shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, and kill the bullock before the LORD. ^e And the priest that is anointed ^e shall take ^{e ch. 16. 14. Num. 19. 4.} of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation: ⁶ And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood seven times before the LORD, before the veil of the sanctuary. ⁷ And the priest shall ^f put some of the blood upon the horns of the altar of sweet incense before the LORD, which is in the tabernacle of the congregation; and shall pour ^g all the blood of the bullock at the bottom of the altar of the burnt offering, ^{g ch. 5. 9.} which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁸ And he shall take off from it all the fat of the bullock for the sin offering; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards, ⁹ And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away, ¹⁰ ^h As it was taken off from the bullock of the sacrifice of peace offerings: and the priest shall burn them upon the altar of the burnt offering. ¹¹ ⁱ And the skin of the bullock, and all his flesh, with his head, and with his legs, and his inwards, and his dung, ¹² Even the whole bullock shall he carry forth [†] without the camp unto a clean place, ^{i Ex. 29. 14. Num. 19. 5.} ^{† Heb. to without the camp.}

heinousness and evil consequences of the sins of Priests, even though they be only sins of ignorance.

There were also other differences between the sin-offering of the Priests and those of a civil ruler, and of an ordinary person. The blood of the former was to be sprinkled on the altar of incense before the veil (v. 7), like that of the sin-offering for all the congregation, and the body of the offering was to be burnt without the camp, which was not the case with those for the latter, which were eaten by the Priest (vi. 26—30).

These distinctions marked the gravity of the sins of Priests, and that they were equivalent to sins of the whole congregation.

— a sin offering] Chattath, from chattath, a sin, a slip, a mishap, from chata, to miss a mark (cp. ἀμαρτάνω, ἀμπλακέω, from πλάω), said of an archer missing his aim, or of a runner failing to reach the goal (see Gesen. 271, 272). Since the sin was regarded as transferred to the offering by the laying on of the offerer's hands on the head of the victim, therefore the word chattath also signifies sin-offering, as here.

The chattath or sin-offering is distinguished from the asham, rendered trespass-offering by our Translators (from asham, to fail, to become guilty. Gesen., p. 86), ch. v. 1—19; vi. 1—7; vii. 1—7; and iv. 1—35; vi. 24—30.

On the difference between the sin-offering and the trespass-offering, see below, Preliminary Note to ch. v.

On the ceremonial of the sin-offering, see Lightfoot, Works, vol. i. p. 929, Temple Service, ch. viii.

4. unto the door] For it is only by the blood of Christ that we enter into the true tabernacle, even within the veil, into the heavenly Temple itself. S. Cyril.

— lay his hand] make his hand to lean; for a symbolical discharge and transfer of his sin (see i. 4). He made confession of his sin at the same time.

5. the priest that is anointed]. In the Hebrew the word is here used, whence Messiah is derived; the Septuagint has κερχισμένος here, and Χριστός v. 16 (Christ). Thus the Original and the Greek translation prepared the way for Him who has fulfilled the Law.

— to the tabernacle of the congregation] Rather to the tabernacle of meeting, namely, with God. The Priest came to meet God, and to propitiate Him; and so typified the true Priest that is anointed, who has sprinkled the blood of the one perfect sacrifice before God. Heb. ix. 11, 12. 24.

6. the blood] For expiation and atonement. All these Levitical appointments prefigured the preciousness and efficacy of the blood of Christ. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Levit. pp. 343—348, where is an exposition of their meaning in reference to Him whose “blood cleanseth from all sin” (1 John i. 7: see above, iii. 17).

— seven times] A sacred and perfect number (see Ainsworth here, p. 19, and see note below on Rev. xi. 19, p. 220), prefiguring

the sprinkling of the blood of that perfect and sabbatical sacrifice, which brings rest to the troubled conscience, and peace with God (Heb. ix. 13; 1 Pet. i. 2; 1 John i. 7). Compare these enactments with those in Exodus xxix. 10, 12, 20, for the consecration of a Priest, whence it appears that the sin of the High Priest after his consecration is regarded as more grave than all the sins committed before his consecration; the offering in both cases is the same, but the blood now needs to be sprinkled seven times before the veil (cp. Baumgarten, p. 134).

The sin of the High Priest is of equal gravity with that of the whole congregation, v. 13—21 (cp. Mischna, iv. p. 497, ed. Surenhusii; Reland, Antiq. p. 131).

— before the veil] Of the Holy of Holies: the figure of heaven itself, to which we have now access by the blood of Jesus (Heb. x. 19, 20); and which was therefore rent in twain, and the Holy of Holies opened, when He cried on the Cross “It is finished” (Matt. xxvii. 51; John xix. 30).

7. upon the horns] The four corners, so that the whole might be sprinkled with the blood and a full expiation made.

— of the altar of sweet incense] The golden altar before the veil, and in a direct line between the brazen altar and the Mercy-seat, on which God's glorious presence was enthroned. By this aspersion of the blood on the golden altar of incense of sweet spices (see Exod. xxx. 1—34), the type of Christ's acceptable offering, as of a sweet-smelling savour, and of His prevailing prayers, it was signified that we obtain remission, pardon, and peace, through Christ's blood, once shed, and seven times sprinkled before the Lord, and put on the horns of the altar of incense; that is, always pleaded by Him “who ever liveth to make intercession for us” (Heb. vii. 25).

8—10. all the fat] The best part, due to God: see iii. 3, 4. 9, 10. 14, 15, &c.

The burning of the fat and the entrails upon “the altar, which sanctified the gift” (Matt. xxiii. 19), signified the dedication to God of all the faculties and affections which are accepted by Him in Christ offering Himself for us, and through the Spirit; and represented our conformity to Christ, and communion with Him in sufferings and afflictions (Rom. vi. 4—12. Col. ii. 12; iii. 1—5).

11. the skin of the bullock] Adhering to the flesh; for it was not flayed, as the burnt-offering was: ch. i. 6 (Maimonides, de Sacrificiis, c. 5).

12. shall he carry forth] Literally, he shall make to go out: the hiphil, from yatsa, to go forth (Gesen., p. 359). We do not know the precise form of the Encampment; it may have been of a cruciform shape, with the Tabernacle in the intersection of what we might call the transept and the nave; and then the work would have been easy for any one to perform (Lund). However this may be, there is no ground for supposing with some—on the contrary, it is unreasonable to imagine—that this was a personal act performed by the Priest himself. The Septuagint translates it “they shall carry forth” (ἐξήλθουσιν),

k ch. 6. 11.
l Heb. 13. 11.
† Heb. at the pouring out of the ashes.
m Num. 15. 24.
Josh. 7. 11.
n ch. 5. 2, 3, 4, 17.

^k where the ashes are poured out, and ^l burn him on the wood with fire: † where the ashes are poured out shall he be burnt.

o ch. 1. 4.
p ver. 5.
Heb. 9. 12, 13, 14.

¹³ And ^m if the whole congregation of Israel sin through ignorance, ⁿ and the thing be hid from the eyes of the assembly, and they have done somewhat against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which should not be done, and are guilty; ¹⁴ When the sin, which they have sinned against it, is known, then the congregation shall offer a young bullock for the sin, and bring him before the tabernacle of the congregation. ¹⁵ And the elders of the congregation ^o shall lay their hands upon the head of the bullock before the LORD: and the bullock shall be killed before the LORD. ¹⁶ ^p And the priest that is anointed shall bring of the bullock's blood to the tabernacle of the congregation: ¹⁷ And the priest shall dip his finger in some of the blood, and sprinkle it seven times before the LORD, even before the veil. ¹⁸ And he shall put some of the blood upon the horns of the altar which is before the LORD, that is in the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall pour out all the blood at the bottom of the altar of the burnt offering, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ¹⁹ And he shall take all his fat from him, and burn it upon the altar. ²⁰ And he shall do with the bullock as he did ^q with the bullock for a sin offering, so shall he do with this: ^r and the priest shall make an atonement for them, and it shall be forgiven them. ²¹ And he shall carry forth the bullock without the camp, and burn him as he burned the first bullock: it is a sin offering for the congregation.

q ver. 3.
r Num. 15. 25.
Dan. 9. 24.
Rom. 5. 11.
Heb. 2. 17. & 10.
10, 11, 12.
1 John 1. 7. & 2. 2.

²² When a ruler hath sinned, and ^s done somewhat through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD his God concerning things which should not be done, and is guilty; ²³ Or ^t if his sin, wherein he hath sinned, come to his knowledge; he shall bring his offering, a kid of the goats, a male without blemish: ²⁴ And ^u he shall lay his hand upon the head of the goat, and kill it in the place where they kill the burnt offering before the LORD: it is a sin offering. ²⁵ ^x And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out his blood at the bottom of the altar of burnt offering. ²⁶ And he shall burn all his fat

s ver. 2, 13.
t ver. 14.
u ver. 4, &c.
x ver. 30.

and they shall burn; so the Samaritan Text. Cp. Dr. M'Caul, on Colenso, p. 38; Dr. Benisch, p. 10; and the Rev. J. B. M'Caul, p. 38: cp. below, v. 21.

— without the camp] The body was to be burnt without the camp, a figure of Christ suffering without the gate (Heb. xiii. 11, 12), in a place nigh to the city (John xix. 20).

Christ suffered without the camp, that the cross might be an Altar, not of the Temple but of the World (S. Leo, Serm. ix. on the Passion). He suffered without the City, that we might go forth from the cares and pleasures of this world, bearing His reproach: Heb. xiii. 13. (S. Cyril, de Adoratione, lib. xv.)

¹³ if the whole congregation of Israel sin through ignorance] Here is a declaration on the part of the Divine Lawgiver, that all the people collectively were liable to sin, and needed an expiation; so that the suppositions in this chapter prove the truth of St. Paul's argument, that all the world is guilty before God, and needs a sacrifice, which the Law could not provide. "The Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe" (Rom. iii. 19—31; xi. 32; Gal. iii. 22).

— and are guilty] Heb. re-ashema; that is, have contracted asham, or guilt, which is a consequence of chattath (see v. 3); the same phrase occurs in v. 22 and v. 27, and it seems to be added in order to teach the important lesson, that guilt is contracted even by sins of ignorance.

¹⁴ a young bullock] Cp. Num. xv. 24. Where the Law appoints a bullock for a burnt-offering, and a he-goat for a sin-offering, that case is said by the Hebrew Expositors to be a case of idolatry committed, or taught, in ignorance (Maimonides, Shega-goth, c. 12). But the difference seems to be, that here the case supposed is one of commission, through ignorance, of some one sin, against a special commandment; but in Num. xv. 22, the case is that of omitting to do what was commanded.

16—20.] See above, v. 5—10.

16. the priest that is anointed] In the Hebrew the Messiah: in Greek, the Christ, ὁ Χριστός, see v. 3; and cp. Euseb., H. E. i. 3.

20. the priest shall make an atonement for them, and it shall be forgiven them] Cp. v. 31. Since the Priests themselves required a sin-offering for their own sin (v. 3), it is evident that they could not do this by means of any virtue inherent in themselves; and this declaration is therefore a recognition of the need of some more perfect Priesthood and Sacrifice, from which the Levitical Priesthood and Sacrifices acquired the efficacy they possessed. Heb. vii. 27, 28; ix. 26. Bp. Pearson, Art. x. pp. 363, 364.

21. he shall carry] shall cause to go forth; see v. 12; here also the Septuagint has the plural number, "they shall carry, and they shall burn:" and so the Syriac.

22. a ruler] nasi, one that is raised up above the rest, as the head of a tribe. Num. iii. 24. Gesen., p. 569.

23. a kid of the goats] Cp. Gen. xxxvii. 31: literally, a hair one of the goats; perhaps a peculiar kind (Bochart, Keil); a less offering than that of the Priest, v. 4; and of the congregation, v. 14; but greater than that of one of the common people, v. 28.

24. in the place where they kill the burnt offering] the north side of the altar, i. 11.

upon the altar, as ^y the fat of the sacrifice of peace offerings: ^z and the priest shall make an atonement for him as concerning his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

²⁷ And ^a if [†] any one of the [‡] common people sin through ignorance, while he doeth somewhat against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and be guilty; ²⁸ Or ^b if his sin, which he hath sinned, come to his knowledge: then he shall bring his offering, a kid of the goats, a female without blemish, for his sin which he hath sinned. ²⁹ ^c And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the sin offering, and slay the sin offering in the place of the burnt offering. ³⁰ And the priest shall take of the blood thereof with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar. ³¹ And ^d he shall take away all the fat thereof, ^e as the fat is taken away from off the sacrifice of peace offerings; and the priest shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour unto the LORD; ^f and the priest shall make an atonement for him, and it shall be forgiven him.

³² And if he bring a lamb for a sin offering, ^h he shall bring it a female without blemish. ³³ And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the sin offering, and slay it for a sin offering in the place where they kill the burnt offering. ³⁴ And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar: ³⁵ And he shall take away all the fat thereof, as the fat of the lamb is taken away from the sacrifice of the peace offerings; and the priest shall burn them upon the altar, ⁱ according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: ^k and the priest shall make an atonement for his sin that he hath committed, and it shall be forgiven him.

V. ¹ And if a soul sin, ^a and hear the voice of swearing, and is a witness,

y ch. 3. 5.
z ver. 20.
Num. 15. 28.

a ver. 2.
Num. 15. 27.
† Heb. any soul.
‡ Heb. people of the land.
b ver. 23.

c ver. 4. 21

d ch. 3. 4.

e ch. 3. 3.

f Ex. 29. 18.
ch. 1. 9.
g ver. 26.

h ver. 28.

i ch. 3. 5.

k ver. 26, 31.

a 1 Kings 8. 31.
Matt. 26. 63.

23. shall burn] But it must be remembered that in the case of the Sin-offering for a ruler or for a common person, the Priest must eat the residue in the holy place, vi. 30; cp. x. 19, and thus the Priest typified Christ taking our sins upon Himself.

27. if any one of the common people (literally, one soul sin] Therefore though the Priests of a nation sin (v. 3), and the whole nation sin (v. 13), yet this is not admitted as an excuse for the sins of individuals. "Every man shall bear his own burden," Gal. vi. 5. "The Lord will render to every man (whether small or great) according to his works," Ps. lxii. 12. Rom. ii. 6; xiv. 12. Rev. ii. 23; xx. 12; xxii. 12.

We may close the remarks on this chapter in the words of an ancient Writer commenting upon it: "All cleansing, whether of Priests or People, is from Christ; all expiation of sins, whether wilful or involuntary, is from Him. The Law of Moses pre-announced that all who are bound by sin, should be justified by Faith in Him, and in Him alone. He it is who is typified by the bullock that was brought to the door of the Tabernacle, to be slain, in order to gain an entrance for us; He it is who taketh away our sins; He, who with His own blood entered into the Holy of Holies, and obtained redemption for us, and by one offering perfected for ever them that are sanctified, as the blessed Paul testifies (Heb. x. 14); He it is who sanctifies the Church by the sprinkling of His own blood; 'for we have come to the Church of the firstborn, and the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel' (Heb. xii. 24), for Abel's blood testified against his murderer, Cain; but Christ's blood pleads for us; and is the price by which eternal life is purchased for us all, and it cleanses from sin by baptism, if we endeavour to be holy as He is holy." S. Cyril, de Ador. xv. 525.

35. according to the offerings] Rather, upon the offerings. Cp. v. 12.

CHAP. V.—PRELIMINARY NOTE ON TRESPASS-OFFERINGS.

The former chapter treated of Sin-offerings, the present chapter treats of Trespass-offerings.

What is the difference between a Trespass-offering and a Sin-offering?

Different replies have been given to this question, as may be seen by reference to the following writers: Joseph, Antiq. iii. 9. 3. Philo, de Victimis ii. p. 247. Outram, de Sacrificiis, c. 12. Lightfoot, Temple Service, ch. viii. sect. 3. Jahn, Archæol. Bibl. §§ 251. 379. Mather, pp. 245—7. Reland, Antiq. Sacr. iii. 4. 4. Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 410. Kurtz, Mos. Opfer, p. 196. Winer, ii. pp. 429—435, and ii. pp. 543—545. Hengstenberg, Authentie ii. pp. 214—220. Bauwgarten, p. 138. Barry in Smith's Bib. Dict. ii. 1323; and the works of Hoffmann, Riehm, Rinck, and Oehler, Keil, 42. Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 343—357.

Some have thought that the sin-offering was for sins of omission; and the trespass-offering, for sins of commission (Jahn).

Others have supposed that Sin-offerings were for offences against man, and Trespass-offerings were for offences against God.

Others are of opinion that the sin-offering is for sin considered objectively, and trespass-offerings for sin regarded subjectively (Winer).

Others have dismissed the question as inexplicable (Gesenius); and others have said that the Sacred Text is here corrupt, and that it is due to some writer more recent than Moses (De Wette).

None of these opinions appear to be satisfactory.

To ascertain the difference between the Sin-offering and the Trespass-offering, we must analyze the words assigned to each respectively.

The sin-offering is chattath. As was before observed (ii. 3), that word expresses properly an aberration from a mark, as in the case of an archer missing his aim (see Judges xx. 6, and Job v. 24; and cp. Ps. xxv. 8; li. 13). It designates an act by which a person fails of attaining what he ought to have attained, or deviates from a course which he ought to have followed.

It therefore signifies (1) a delinquency, or (2) a transgression. And because the sin is supposed to be transferred to the victim, therefore the word chattath comes to signify an offering for an act of delinquency, or transgression.

But the word for Trespass-offering signifies more than this:

b ver. 17.
ch. 7. 18 & 17. 16.
& 19. 8. & 20. 17.
Num. 9. 13
c ch. 11. 24, 28,
31, 39.
Num. 19. 11, 13,
16.

d ver. 17.
e ch. 12, & 13, &
15.

f See 1 Sam. 25.
22.
Acts 23. 12.
g See Mark 6. 23.

whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall ^b bear his iniquity. ² Or ^c if a soul touch any unclean thing, whether it be a carcase of an unclean beast, or a carcase of unclean cattle, or the carcase of unclean creeping things, and if it be hidden from him; he also shall be unclean, and ^d guilty. ³ Or if he touch ^e the uncleanness of man, whatsoever uncleanness it be that a man shall be defiled withal, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty. ⁴ Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips ^f to do evil, or ^g to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty and therefore the Lawgiver begins with Sin-offerings, and proceeds afterwards to speak of Trespass-offerings.

The word for Trespass-offerings is asham. This word expresses more than an act; it represents a state.

Chattath is an act of sin, but asham is a state of guilt; see Gen. xxvi. 10, "Thou shouldest have brought guiltiness (asham) upon us;" and Gen. xlii. 21, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother;" cp. 2 Sam. xiv. 13. Ezra x. 19. Gesen., p. 86. And therefore we find the word asham applied to persons, cities, and countries lying in a state of desolation and ruin (see Ps. xxxiv. 21, 22. Isa. xxiv. 6. Ezek. vi. 6. Hos. xiii. 16. Joel i. 18).

This difference may be illustrated by an example.

A man commits many acts of intemperance; he may be very sorry for each of those acts taken severally; but the acts taken severally do not represent his moral condition before God. There are effects of his sin remaining after his repentance. There is the moral ruin and desolation produced it may be in his health, his family, his fortunes, his reputation; there is the stain of sin contracted by repeated acts of sin; there is the asham of his bad example upon others, which cannot be removed by sorrow for the individual acts of sin. Or a man may have written and published a licentious or infidel book, he may have been brought to a sense of his sin in doing so, and may have repented of the act of writing and publication, but there are still the effects of the book upon the minds of others, in distant lands, and it may be, for many generations.

In such cases as these, there is the asham consequent on the chattath. There is the reatus consequent on the culpa or delictum (cp. S. Augustine, de Nupt. et Concep. i. 26, contra Julian. vi. 19). As Bp. Pearson says (Art. x.), speaking of particular sins, "Though the sin pass away together with the time in which it was committed, yet the guilt thereof doth not pass away, which by that sin was contracted; and as guilty he is subject to the wrath of God." See also Bp. Butler on the remanent effects of sin after repentance (Analogy, Pt. 1. ch. ii.). and Hengst, Authentice ii. 214. Baumgarten, p. 137.

In a word, asham seems to represent the consequences of chattath; the ravages produced by sin on the frame of man; and the desolation and ruin of his moral condition towards God—his guilt towards Him in whose image he was created, and whose Law he has broken; and the stain of sin as infecting, contaminating, and polluting not only the sinner himself, but others by his vicious example.

In accordance with these statements, it may be observed that at the very beginning of the Law concerning asham, the soul is described as bearing iniquity (v. 1), that is, in a state of guilt. See also v. 2, he shall be unclean and guilty. The word guilty occurs four times in our Version of the first five verses of this chapter, as a translation of asham.

It follows as a result from these characteristics of asham, that when the Evangelical Prophet Isaiah would describe by one word what Christ has effected for the World by His Sufferings, he does not say that He is our chattath or sin-offering (which doubtless He is for each individual offence), but that He gave His soul to be an asham, an offering to take away the guilt, and to wash away the stain of sin, and to restore the ruins made by the sin, of the whole Human Race. Here is the inexpressible comfort of the penitent sinner when he looks to the Cross of Christ (Isa. liii. 10).

Perhaps asham might better be translated guilt-offering, than trespass-offering, which word does not mark the difference between it and sin-offering. In our authorized Version in Ezra ix. 6, and Ps. lxxix. 5, where trespass is in the text, guiltiness is rightly placed in the margin as the rendering for ashmah; and it is remarkable, that in the numerous places where the verb asham occurs—e.g., nine times in Leviticus alone, iv. 13. 22. 27; v. 2, 3, 4. 17. 19; vi. 4, it is rendered eight times by is guilty and once, v. 19, he hath trespassed.

In the case of the chattath or sin-offering, the Blood was put on the horns of the altar of burnt sacrifice, or sprinkled seven times before the Veil in the two more heinous cases (iv. 6. 17). The asham involved the duty of reparation of wrong done, and of satisfaction for guilt contracted by sin (v. 15, 16), and was prescribed for the purpose of reminding the sinner, that though he had offered his sin-offering, his repentance for sin was not complete without restitution of what he has obtained thereby, with an addition over and above the value of what he has acquired by it (see v. 16).

The Levitical Law concerning the asham as distinguished from the chattath, has an important ethical character, as placing before us in a clear view the defilement and guilt of sin; and the need of repentance, and reparation. It may serve to explain such sayings as those of the Psalmist, "Cleanse thou me from my secret faults" (Ps. xix. 12); "Remember not the sins and offences of my youth" (Ps. xxv. 6); and may serve to remind the Christian, of the continual need of godly fear and humiliation before God: and it may serve to show the wisdom of the Church in putting such deprecatory language as the following into the mouth of the penitent and faithful communicant, before the reception of the Holy Eucharist—"We acknowledge and bewail our manifold sins and wickedness, which we from time to time most grievously have committed by thought, word, and deed, against Thy divine Majesty, provoking most justly thy wrath and indignation against us: the remembrance of them is grievous unto us, the burden is intolerable. Have mercy upon us, have mercy upon us, most merciful Father; for Thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ's sake forgive us all that is past, and grant that we may ever hereafter serve and please Thee in newness of life, to the honour and glory of Thy name, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

1. And if a soul sin] Some modern expositors (Baumgarten, Keil) have supposed, that the following three cases belong to the category of sin-offerings described in the foregoing chapter; but the language of verse 7, as well as the difference of the treatment of these cases, compared with those in chap. iv., seem to show that they belong rather to the class of trespass-offerings or guilt-offerings: cp. Ainsworth here.

—hear the voice of swearing] Or adjuration, by which he is required to declare the truth; as our Blessed Lord was by Caiaphas (Matt. xxvi. 63; Mark xiv. 61). Christ obeyed the charge as enjoined in this Law, and declared the truth. Guilt may be contracted by silence, as well as by speech.

—he shall bear his iniquity] He has contracted guilt thereby; and owes an asham or guilt-offering; see Preliminary Note.

2. if a soul touch any unclean thing] Even unwittingly. This and the following precept clearly mark the guilt and stain contracted by sin; as, for example, by association with vicious company. It requires an asham or guilt-offering. On the spiritual character and moral meaning of these appointments of the Levitical Law, see Origen, Homil. 3.

3. if he touch the uncleanness of man] See chapters xii.—xv. A person who touched a dead body was unclean seven days (Num. xix. 16); and if he purified not himself, is said to defile the tabernacle, and was liable to be cut off from Israel (Num. xix. 11. 13).

Here is a moral lesson on the contagious effects of sin, and on the permanent effects of sin, after the act is committed; and this case serves clearly to bring out the difference between the chattath and the asham: see on v. 1.

4. pronouncing with his lips to do evil] idly speaking, a rash or wicked oath, such as Jephthah's (Judges xi. 30), or David's (1 Sam. xxv. 22), or Herod's (Mark vi. 23), or that of those who swore that they would not eat till they had killed Paul (Acts xiii. 21). Observe, that guilt may be contracted by the tongue, cp. James iii. 2—16.

in one of these. ⁵ And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall ^h confess that he hath sinned in that thing: ⁶ And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD for his sin which he hath sinned, a female from the flock, a lamb or a kid of the goats, for a sin offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his sin.

⁷ And ⁱ if † he be not able to bring a lamb, then he shall bring for his trespass, which he hath committed, two ^k turtledoves, or two young pigeons, unto the LORD; one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering. ⁸ And he shall bring them unto the priest, who shall offer that which is for the sin offering first, and ^l wring off his head from his neck, but shall not divide it asunder: ⁹ And he shall sprinkle of the blood of the sin offering upon the side of the altar; and ^m the rest of the blood shall be wrung out at the bottom of the altar: it is a sin offering. ¹⁰ And he shall offer the second for a burnt offering, according to the ⁿ manner: ^o and the priest shall make an atonement for him for his sin which he hath sinned, and it shall be forgiven him.

¹¹ But if he be not able to bring two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, then he that sinned shall bring for his offering the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a sin offering; ^p he shall put no oil upon it, neither shall he put any frankincense thereon: for it is a sin offering. ¹² Then shall he bring it to the priest, and the priest shall take his handful of it, ^q even a memorial thereof, and burn it on the altar, according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: it is a sin offering. ¹³ ^r And the priest shall make an atonement for him as touching his sin that he hath sinned in one of these, and it shall be forgiven him: and ^s the remnant shall be the priest's, as a meat offering.

¹⁴ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ^u If a soul commit a trespass, and sin through ignorance, in the holy things of the LORD; then ^x he shall

^h ch. 16. 21. & 23. 40.

^{Num.} 5. 7.

^{Ezra} 10. 11, 12.

ⁱ ch. 12. 8. & 14. 21.

† Heb. his hand cannot reach to the sufficiency of a lamb.

^k ch. 1. 14.

^l ch. 1. 15.

^m ch. 4. 7, 13, 30, 34.

|| Or, ordinance.

ⁿ ch. 1. 14.

^o ch. 4. 26.

^p Num. 5. 15.

^q ch. 2. 2.

^r ch. 4. 55.

^s ch. 4. 26.

^t ch. 2. 3.

^u ch. 22. 14.

^x Ezra 10. 19.

6. his trespass offering] Or guilt-offering, asham: see the Preliminary Note.

— a female from the flock] The guilt-offering was not costly, and was the same for every one: in both these respects it differed from the sin-offering (see iv. 13. 22. 27).

The guilt-offering in the cases here supposed—not in the case specified v. 14—19, is the same victim as that prescribed for the sin-offering of one of the common people. Acts of sin differ in their heinousness according to the condition of the sinner. A priest and a civil ruler can bring, and ought to bring, a greater chattath than a private person; but the moral stain and contagion of sin is the same to every soul. The chattath differs, but the asham is the same; the asham is not made costly by the Legislator; in order that every one may bring it; and in order that every soul may be discharged from the weight and burden of guilt which oppresses it. And the prophet Isaiah has assured the Christian penitent, that Christ “has poured out His soul as an asham for all” (Isa. liii. 10).

7. lamb] Heb. seh, a word comprising sheep, goats, and kids of Exod. xii. 3; below, xxii. 23, 28. Gesen. 785.

— two turtledoves] innocent emblems of Christ, as a sin-offering and burnt-offering. Cp. xiv. 4 (S. Cyril).

— one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering] T is shows the composite character of the asham: and also exhibits the difference between it and the chattath, or sin-offering. Guilt supposes an act of sin, and therefore requires a chattath, but it is not removed thereby, because, after repentance for it, the effects of sin remain; and therefore after the offering of the chattath, there remains another sacrifice to be offered, and that is a burnt-offering, of which the whole is consumed, for a sweet savour to the Lord (i. 17), and which in a special manner represents the total self-oblation of Christ's sacrifice for sin.

8. who shall offer that which is for the sin offering first] The sin-offering comes first; because the particular act of sin is the first thing to be repented of, and then its consequences.

— wring off his head] Rather, make an incision in it, to let the blood run out; but it was not to be wrung off or severed, as is expressly stated here: see above, on i. 15.

9. and the rest of the blood shall be wrung out] And then the Priest was to consume the rest in the holy place, it being a sin-offering for the poor (see on iv. 26). Thus it was signified, that acts of sin are atoned for by Christ the spotless victim, whose blood is shed as an expiation for the sin of all who confess their sins, and are penitent for them, and that the sin is transferred from man to Him as our Priest, and abolished by Him. But there still remains another offering to be made for the effects of the act of sin, v. 10.

10. the second for a burnt offering] The first was for the particular sin; the second for its effects; which were consumed by the fire of the burnt-offering.

— according to the manner] Literally, judgment, the judicial decree of God.

11—13. shall bring for his offering] Here is another evidence of the composite character of the asham; it is commuted into a sin-offering (chattath), and a meat-offering (minchah, v. 13). The sin offering had no oil nor frankincense, as the meat-offering had (see ii. 1). Till the sinner had confessed his sin and had made an offering for it, he was not an object of God's grace and favour, signified by the oil; and he could not offer any thing pleasing and acceptable to God, as sweet fragrance of frankincense; but he must first offer an offering made by fire, signifying the sufferings of Christ for sin; and after this was done, then the remnant was eaten by the Priest in the Holy Place as a meat-offering, signifying the abolition of the guilt of the offerer by the transfer of it from him to the Priest, the representative of Christ, who made “atonement for him.”

12. according to, &c.] Rather, upon the offerings. Cp. iii. 5.

14. And the LORD spake unto Moses] There is a gradual progress and ascent in these legislative enactments. They now rise a step higher, and proceed to deal with direct offences against holy things, and against the Lord.

15. If a soul commit a trespass, and sin through ignorance] The original word here used for to commit a trespass is maal, which signifies to act faithlessly or stealthfully, treacherously, as a wife by sinning against her husband (Nun. v. 27); or a subject against his sovereign; and is therefore specially applied

y Ex. 30. 13.
ch. 27. 25.

bring for his trespass unto the LORD a ram without blemish out of the flocks, with thy estimation by shekels of silver, after ^y the shekel of the sanctuary, for a trespass offering: ¹⁶ And he shall make amends for the harm that he hath done in the holy thing, and ^z shall add the fifth part thereto, and give it unto the priest: ^a and the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass offering, and it shall be forgiven him.

z ch. 6. 5. & 22. 14.
& 27. 13, 15, 27, 31.
Num. 5. 7.
a ch. 4. 26.

b ch. 4. 2.

¹⁷ And if a ^b soul sin, and commit any of these things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the LORD; ^c though he wist it not, yet is he ^d guilty, and shall bear his iniquity. ¹⁸ ^e And he shall bring a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass offering, unto the priest: ^f and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his ignorance wherein he erred and wist it not, and it shall be forgiven him. ¹⁹ It is a trespass offering: ^g he hath certainly trespassed against the LORD.

c ver. 15
ch. 4. 2, 13, 22, 27.
Ps. 19. 12
Luke 12. 43.
d ver. 1, 2.
c ver. 15.

f ver. 16.

g Ezra 10. 2.

a Num. 5. 6.

VI. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² If a soul sin, and ^a commit a trespass against the LORD, and ^b lie unto his neighbour in that ^c which was delivered him to keep, or in ^{||} [†] fellowship, or in a thing taken away by violence, or hath ^d deceived his neighbour; ³ Or ^e have found that which was lost, and lieth concerning it, and ^f sweareth falsely; in any of all these that a man doeth, sinning therein: ⁴ Then it shall be, because he hath sinned, and is guilty, that he shall restore that which he took violently away, or the thing which he hath deceitfully gotten, or that which was delivered him to keep, or the lost thing which he found, ⁵ Or all that about which he hath sworn falsely; he shall even ^g restore it in the principal, and shall add the fifth part more thereto, and give it unto him to whom it appertaineth, ^{||} [†] in the day of his trespass offering.

b ch. 19. 11.
Acts 5. 4.
Col. 3. 9.
c Ex. 22. 7, 10.
|| Or
in dealing.
† Heb. putting of the hand.
d Prov. 24. 28. &
26. 19.
e Deut. 22. 1, 2, 3.
f Ex. 22. 11.
ch. 19. 12.
Jer. 7. 9.
Zech. 5. 4.

g ch. 5. 16.
Num. 5. 7.
2 Sam. 12. 6.
Luke 19. 8.
|| Or, in the day of his being found guilty.
† Heb.
in the day of his trespass.
h ch. 5. 15.
i ch. 4. 26.

⁶ And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD, ^h a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass offering, unto the priest: ⁷ ⁱ And the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD: and it shall be forgiven him for any thing of all that he hath done in trespassing therein.

to sins of faithlessness and rebellion against God; particularly when accompanied with hypocritical professions of zeal for His service (Josh. xxii. 16; 1 Chron. x. 13; 2 Chron. xxvi. 18): see Schultens on Job xxi. 34, and is therefore rendered "prævarice" by Vulg. Cp. Gesen., p. 494.

— in the holy things of the LORD] As in not sanctifying their firstling males (Deut. xv. 19), or in eating the tithes of their corn, wine, and oil, within their own gates (Deut. xii. 17). The law here given represents in strong terms the sin of sacrilege, especially if accompanied with professions of piety; the sin of Ananias was of this kind: see on Acts v. 1.

— with thy estimation] That is, of such a value as Moses, and the Priest after him, may think fit to require. Besides this, the holy thing, of which God had been defrauded, was to be restored, and a fifth part to be added to it. It must be remembered that the case here contemplated is one of ignorance, not of wilful sacrilege (see the Septuagint translation here, and Theodoret, Qu. 2, and Maimonides in Ainsworth).

17—19. if a soul sin] If even unwittingly he do any one (so the original) of the things which God has forbidden to be done, and if he knew it not (as he ought to have done, for all Israelites are presumed to know God's commandments, and to consider, and obey them), and is guilty (has contracted asham, or guilt), and bears his sin (avon, guilt, Gesen. p. 614), then he shall bring a ram without blemish (that is, when the sin is brought home to his conscience), at thy estimation—a ram valued at the price fixed by thee (see v. 15), for a trespass-offering (asham) to the priest, who shall make atonement for him. And let him not suppose that because he knew it not, he is therefore innocent. No: it is a trespass-offering; by trespassing he trespassed against the Lord.

In order to make a more solemn protest against the notion, that if any man acts according to his conscience, and is sincere in what he does, he is therefore safe; and in order to declare more strongly that ignorances and infirmities are sins, and bring guilt with them, and liability to the divine wrath, and to punishment, and therefore require repentance, and need an atonement for them, the Divine Legislator repeats the word asham three times in this verse: cp. note below, on 1 Tim. i. 12, 13; and above, Preliminary Note to chap. iv.

CH. VI. 2. If a soul sin, and commit a trespass against the LORD, and lie unto his neighbour] Here is another step in the ascent of sin. The case supposed is a case of trespass, against the Lord and against man, and not in ignorance, as in the previous case.

— in that which was delivered him] That is, by embezzlement of that which was entrusted to his care.

— in fellowship] Literally, in the putting to hand; in barter, exchange, or traffic. On such frauds see Bp. Sanderson, ii. p. 349.

3. sweareth falsely] On the various kinds of false oaths, see Bp. Andrewes, v. 76.

5. principal] Heb. head, κεφάλαιον, Sept.; the caput, or capital.

— day of his trespass offering] Of his asham, see v. 1. The penalties here prescribed (the restitution of the capital, with the addition of a fifth part, and an offering also to the Lord, as an acknowledgment for the outrage done to Him by the violation of His Law) displayed the difference between the chat-tath or sin-offering, and the asham or guilt-offering; and that the latter was of a composite character, and declared the important moral truth, that it is not enough to repent of the special act of sin committed, but it is requisite to make restitution not only to man, but to God; and this brings out the true character of repentance and genuine sorrow for sin—which St. Paul calls

⁸ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁹ Command Aaron and his sons, saying, This is the law of the burnt offering: It is the burnt offering, || because of the burning upon the altar all night unto the morning, and the fire of the altar shall be burning in it. ¹⁰ ^k And the priest shall put on his linen garment, and his linen breeches shall be put upon his flesh, and take up the ashes which the fire hath consumed with the burnt offering on the altar, and he shall put them ¹ beside the altar. ¹¹ And ^m he shall put off his garments, and put on other garments, and carry forth the ashes without the camp ⁿ unto a clean place. ¹² And the fire upon the altar shall be burning in it; it shall not be put out: and the priest shall burn wood on it every morning, and lay the burnt offering in order upon it; and he shall burn thereon ^o the fat of the peace offerings. ¹³ The fire shall ever be burning upon the altar; it shall never go out. ¹⁴ ^p And this is the law of the meat offering: the sons of Aaron shall offer it before the LORD, before the altar. ¹⁵ And he shall take of it his handful, of the flour of the meat offering, and of the oil thereof, and all the frankincense which is upon the meat offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour, even the ^q memorial of it, unto the LORD. ¹⁶ And ^r the remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat: ^s with unleavened bread shall it be eaten in the holy place; in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation they shall eat it. ¹⁷ ^t It shall not be baked with leaven. ^u I have given it unto them for their portion of my

|| Or, for the burning.

k Ex. 28. 39, 40, 41, 43.
ch. 16. 4.
Ezek. 44. 17, 18.

l ch. 1. 16.
m Ezek. 44. 19.
n ch. 4. 12.

o ch. 3. 2, 9, 14.

p ch. 2. 1
Num. 15. 4.

q ch. 2. 2, 9.
r ch. 2. 3.
Ezek. 44. 29.
s ver. 26.
ch. 10. 12, 13.
Num. 18. 10.
t ch. 2. 11.
u Num. 18. 9, 10

λύπην κατὰ Θεόν, sorrow Godward, and not merely worldward (see 2 Cor. vii. 10),—as involving the necessity of bringing forth “fruits meet for repentance” (Matt. iii. 8. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, i. 449, 450), and it displays the proper nature of the sacrifice of Christ as a satisfaction for the guilt of the world. See Preliminary Note to chap. v.

⁸ And the LORD spake unto Moses] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to viii. 36.

It would have been well if there had been a beginning of a new Chapter here, in our Bibles.

The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Jerem. vii. 21 to viii. 3 and ix. 23, 24, where God declares the vanity of sacrifice without obedience. By this combination the Ancient Hebrew Church declared its sense that the Levitical sacrifices have an inner spiritual meaning, and are of no avail unless that meaning is understood, and unless the moral precepts are obeyed which are embodied in them; cp. on ch. i. 1.

⁹ Command Aaron and his sons] Here is a recapitulation of the Law concerning the Burnt-offering and the Meat-offering (see chapters i. and ii.). The same subject is treated here, but it is handled in another relation, viz., with regard to the duties of the Priests; and not (as before) of the offerer. Therefore the address here is, Command Aaron and his sons; before it was, Speak unto the children of Israel.

This mode of dealing with the same subject in two different relations may be compared with that in Gen. ii. 4—22.

A careful examination of the details of these chapters will show that these laws are arranged with exact method.

— It is the burnt offering] Rather, This the burnt-offering shall be upon the burning on the altar all night.

¹⁰ put on his linen garment] No Priest might approach the Altar except in his holy garments, and these garments were to be put off when he had finished his ministration, and were not to be worn beyond the precincts of the Tabernacle, but to be laid up in the holy chamber appointed for that purpose (Ezek. xlv. 19).

Thus the Levitical Law prescribes to the Christian Minister the duty of sanctification in all liturgical approaches to God.

— which the fire] Rather, to which the fire hath consumed.

— beside the altar] On the east side—the most distant from the holy place; cp. i. 16.

¹¹ carry forth] Literally, he shall cause to go forth. See on ch. iv. 12.

— the ashes] The consumption of the Burnt-offering on the holy altar foreshadowed the acceptance of Christ's sacrifice; the careful carrying out of the ashes to a clean place outside the camp may have been designed to typify the taking down of His precious body from the Cross,—the Christian Altar,—and the carrying it forth wrapped in the clean linen cloth, and its burial in the new tomb, outside the city, in the garden (Matt. xxvii. 59, 60. John xix. 40, 41. Cp. Isa. liii. 9). The special care for these ashes seems to bespeak a Mystery: and what is that but the Mystery of the Resurrection?

¹³ The fire shall ever be burning] The fire came down from heaven (ix. 24), and was of divine origin, and it was to be continually watched, and fed by human vigilance and care, and to be kept constantly burning (ep. v. 9. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 135).

Christ Himself is like the fire which came down from heaven: that fire “ever burnt in Him bright and clear in His entire obedience all His life long” (Bp. Andrewes, v. 350). And the Holy Spirit, who descended upon Christ our Emmanuel, and remained ever with Him, and who also descended in tongues of fire on the Day of Pentecost, is like this fire from heaven (S. Cyril, de Ador. ch. xii. pp. 435, 436).

But, in order that the coming of Christ may justify us, in order that the coming of Christ may sanctify us, we must cherish the heavenly fire on the altar of our hearts. We must cherish and stir up the fire. The Spirit ζωοποιεῖ, but it is for us ἀναζωοποιεῖν (see 1 Thess. v. 19. 2 Tim. i. 6). The Holy Sacraments, and all other means of grace in God's Temple, are from God; but they must be cherished by human labour and diligence, and the sacred fire kindled by God on the sacred altar of our hearts must never be allowed to go out, but be ever fed and quickened.

¹⁴ the meat offering] Minchah, which was, in part, the produce of human labour—being fine flour from wheat cultivated by human hands—and carefully ground and sifted: and it was to be mingled with oil, the emblem of divine grace: and with frankincense, the symbol of prayer, ascending in sweet spiritual fragrance to heaven (see ii. 1—3). On the Christian significance of the Meat-offering, see Preliminary Note to chap. ii.

¹⁶ the remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat] The Levitical Priests ate of the sacrifice which they offered for the people; so our true High Priest, Christ Jesus, “saw of the travail of His soul and was satisfied” (Isa. liii. 11). “For the joy that was set before Him He endured the Cross, despising the shame” (Heb. xii. 2). This also may be applied to every Christian. There is no sacrifice which he offers to God, on which he himself does not feed: he will feed with joy at the Great Day, on the fruit of his own works, done in faith and love.

— with unleavened, &c.] Rather, shall be eaten unleavened.
— in the holy place, in the court of the tabernacle] Rather, in a holy place, viz., in the outer court (chatzer, atrium, Exod. xxvii. 9) of the tabernacle; they were not eaten in the holy place, where the Priests ministered (ep. v. 26; viii. 31; and xxiv. 9; and Keil, p. 45).

¹⁷ leaven] See ii. 11.

x ver. 25.
Ex. 29. 37.
ch. 2. 3. & 7. 1.
y ver. 29.
Num. 18. 10.
z ch. 3. 17.

offerings made by fire; ^x it is most holy, as is the sin offering, and as the trespass offering. ^{18 y} All the males among the children of Aaron shall eat of it. ^z It shall be a statute for ever in your generations concerning the offerings of the LORD made by fire: ^a every one that toucheth them shall be holy.

a Ex. 29. 37.
ch. 22. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

b Ex. 29. 2.

¹⁹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ^{20 b} This is the offering of Aaron and of his sons, which they shall offer unto the LORD in the day when he is anointed; the tenth part of an ^c ephah of fine flour for a meat offering perpetual, half of it in the morning, and half thereof at night. ²¹ In a pan it shall be made with oil; and when it is baked, thou shalt bring it in: and the baked pieces of the meat offering shalt thou offer for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

c Ex. 16. 36.

d ch. 4. 3.

²² And the priest of his sons ^d that is anointed in his stead shall offer it: it is a statute for ever unto the LORD; ^e it shall be wholly burnt. ²³ For every meat offering for the priest shall be wholly burnt: it shall not be eaten.

e Ex. 29. 25.

f ch. 4. 2.
g ch. 1. 3, 5, 11, &
h. 24, 29, 33.
i ver. 17.
ch. 21. 22.
j ch. 10. 17, 18.
Num. 18. 9, 10.
Ezek. 44. 28, 29.
k ver. 16.
l Ex. 29. 37. & 30.
29.

²⁴ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁵ Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, saying, ^f This is the law of the sin offering: ^g In the place where the burnt offering is killed shall the sin offering be killed before the LORD: ^h it is most holy. ^{26 i} The priest that offereth it for sin shall eat it: ^k in the holy place shall it be eaten, in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation.

^{27 l} Whatsoever shall touch the flesh thereof shall be holy: and when there is

- - most holy] Literally, holiness of holinesses: see above, ii. 3. ^{18. every one that toucheth them shall be holy}] Every one who approaches it must be sanctified. So Sept., Vulg., and other ancient Versions; and so A. Lapide, Luther, and others.

But there appears to be another meaning implied in this declaration, viz., that every one who touches it shall be made holy; and must regard himself as such; and therefore must abstain from all contaminations; and the moral is not only that all who approach holy things must remember the words, "sancta sanctis," "Be ye holy," says the Lord, "for I also am holy" (1 Pet. i. 16); but also they who have approached them, and have been made partakers of them, must remember that they have been consecrated thereby, and must consider themselves as priests and temples of God.

Besides (as Origen observes, Hom. 4 in Levit.), they who touch holy things, especially they who feed on Christ by faith, are sanctified and made holy thereby, and receive therefrom spiritual health and strength. The Woman in the Gospel, with the issue of blood, touched the Holy One by faith; and Virtue went forth to heal her, who, according to the letter of the Law (Lev. xv. 25), was unclean (Luke viii. 43). We touch the "Word made flesh" by faith in His Incarnation; and if we cleave to Him with love and obedience, then the Flesh of Him who is God, and who has touched us, and whom we touch by faith, heals the impurities and diseases of our corrupt and disordered humanity, and makes us to be holy (cp. Origen, Hom. 4).

^{20. in the day}] and from that time continually: compare vii. 36.

This concerned Aaron specially, and his successors. The ordinary Priests offered their Meat-offering only once, at their consecration. The High Priest daily (see v. 22). Ecclesi. xiv. 14. Maimonides, on Sacrifices, ch. 12. Josephus, Ant. iii. 10. 7).

This daily Meat-offering of fine flour with oil, for a sweet savour, prefigured the continual intercession of our Great High Priest, ever representing His own sacrifice, and pleading the efficacy of that sacrifice for sin, in the heavenly temple; and it typified the continual act of the Evangelical Priesthood on earth in the holy Eucharist. See Prelim. Note to chap. ii.

^{23. it shall not be eaten}] That is, by the Priest; because it was an offering for him. The Levitical Priest is to be regarded as a man needing pardon and salvation for himself; and the imperfect and preparatory character of the Levitical Priesthood is exhibited by this provision, that he was not to eat the Meat-offering which was offered by himself for himself. The act of eating by the Priest signified the transfer of the sin of the offerer to the Priest, who as a Priest—typifying Christ—incorporated into himself a part of the offering which represented the offerer's sin (cp. x. 17). He was to eat of the Sin-offering for the People

(vi. 26; x. 17); but he might not eat what represented his own sin. He could not transfer any thing from himself to himself. Thus the Levitical Priesthood showed its need of another Priesthood—the Priesthood of Christ—to take away the sins of its own corrupt humanity. It could not eat its own offering; that was eaten by the Fire of the Holy Altar; and this eating of it by the Fire represented God's acceptance of it (Exod. xxix. 25).

^{25. it is most holy}] Here is a great Mystery; the Sin-offering was "most holy" (cp. v. 29). Whosoever touched the flesh of it shall be holy (v. 27); and the earthen vessel in which it had been sodden was to be broken, so as never to be applied to common uses; and the brazen pot was to be scoured and rinsed in water.

The Sin-offering was a substitute for the sinner; its very name, chattath, literally signifies sin. The offerer's sins were transferred to the offering by the laying on of the offerer's hands upon it; and so the Sin-offering was "made sin," and its blood was shed for expiation and atonement; and yet it was "most holy."

Here was a figure of Him "Who was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners" (Heb. vii. 26), and yet was "made in the likeness of sinful flesh" (Rom. viii. 3), and "who knew no sin, and yet was made to be sin for us; that we might be the righteousness of God in Him" (2 Cor. v. 21).

The perfect sinlessness, and consequent efficacy of our Sin-offering, were foreshadowed in these requirements of the Levitical Law; and here we have a moral and spiritual lesson of the reverential awe with which the great mystery of the Atonement is to be treated by us.

^{26. in the holy place shall it be eaten}] The Sin-offering was penitential; not like the Peace-offering, of which a part was eaten by the offerer himself and friends, and which had a festal character.

The Ancient Fathers apply this to the consumption of the consecrated elements in the Holy Eucharist. The holy mysteries are offered in our Churches, and there Christ's chosen household are permitted to partake of His Holy Table, and the place is holy, and the Sacrifice sanctifies him who touches it; and we come to these holy mysteries in order to be partakers of the Holy One, by means of that ineffable and spiritual sacrifice (S. Cyril, de Ador. p. 412).

^{27. Whatsoever shall touch the flesh thereof shall be holy}] The Sin-offering being a figure of the Holy One, who was made sin for us (2 Cor. v. 21), and suffered for our sins, no unclean person might touch the flesh thereof; and whatever garment was sprinkled by its blood must be washed in the holy place.

Thus, if we are to profit by Christ's death, we must imitate sprinkled of the blood thereof upon any garment, thou shalt wash that whereon it was sprinkled in the holy place. ²² But the earthen vessel wherein it is sodden ^m shall be broken: and if it be sodden in a brazen pot, it shall be both scoured, and rinsed in water. ²⁹ ⁿ All the males among the priests shall eat thereof: ^o it is most holy. ³⁰ ^p And no sin offering, whereof any of the blood is brought into the tabernacle of the congregation to reconcile withal in the holy place, shall be eaten: it shall be burnt in the fire.

m ch. 11. 53. & 15. 12.
n ver. 18.
Num. 18. 10.
o ver. 25.
p ch. 4. 7, 11, 12, 18, 21. & 10. 18. & 16. 27.
Heb. 13. 11.

VII. ¹ Likewise ^a this is the law of the trespass offering: ^b it is most holy. ² ^c In the place where they kill the burnt offering shall they kill the trespass offering: and the blood thereof shall he sprinkle round about upon the altar. ³ And he shall offer of it ^d all the fat thereof; the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, ⁴ And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away: ⁵ And the priest shall burn them upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the Lord: it is a trespass offering. ⁶ ^e Every male among the priests shall eat thereof: it shall be eaten in the holy place: ^f it is most holy.

a ch. 5. & 6. 1—7.
b ch. 6. 17, 25. & 21. 22.
c ch. 1. 3, 5, 11. & 4. 24, 29. & 13.
d Ex. 29. 13.
ch. 3. 4, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16. & 4. 8, 9.
e ch. 6. 16, 17, 18.
Num. 18. 9, 10.
f ch. 2. 3.

⁷ As the sin offering is, so is ^g the trespass offering: there is one law for them: ^h the priest that maketh atonement therewith shall have it. ⁸ And the priest

g ch. 6. 25, 26. & 14. 13.

the holiness of His life. "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, the blood of Jesus Christ the Son of God cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John i. 7).

By this precept, spiritually understood, is inculcated the duty of careful preparation for the reception of the Communion of the body and blood of Christ in the Lord's Supper. 1 Cor. xi. 28. Cp. Theodore, Qu. in Exod. 5; and Origen, Hom. 4 in Levit.

— when there is sprinkled of the blood thereof upon any garment, thou shalt wash that whereon it was sprinkled in the holy place] So that none of the blood might ever come in contact with what is unclean.

²⁸. The earthen vessel wherein it is sodden shall be broken] The earthen vessel shall be broken. If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above. Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth. Mortify your members which are upon the earth—fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry (Col. iii. 1—5). The spiritual meaning of this precept seems to be, that we, having had communion with Christ our sin-offering in our baptism, must break our earthen vessel. We must be "dead to the world and alive to God," for our "life is hid with Christ in God" (Col. iii. 3). Our old man has been crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be destroyed in us (Rom. vi. 6). We must know no more of the earthen vessel of the "first Adam, who is of the earth, earthy" (1 Cor. xv. 47), but live the life of Him "who is the Lord from Heaven." Then at the great day our "vile bodies will be made like unto His glorious body" (Phil. iii. 21), and be "like vessels unto honour" for ever in the temple of the Lord (2 Tim. ii. 21).

By this breaking of the earthen vessels employed in sacred things it was provided that after they had been employed in this holy service, they should be never afterwards used for ordinary purposes. Compare the breaking of the alabaster box, from which the ointment was poured on our Lord's head, Mark xiv. 3.

— brazen pot] Which partook less of earth than the vessel of clay, and was more precious. That was to be carefully cleansed. Even what in our nature is best—our reason, our conscience, our memory, our imagination—requires to be cleansed and sanctified by the living waters of Divine Grace.

³⁰. no sin offering—shall be eaten] That is, no such sin-offering as was offered for the Priest himself, or for the whole congregation (see iv. 3—21), was to be eaten by the Priest, or by any one else, but to be carried out of the camp and burnt. The Priest could not take away his own sin, nor the sins of the whole community. It is only our Great High Priest, who is without sin, that can "take away the sins of the world."

Here is another evidence of the figurative and preparatory character of the Levitical dispensation. It could "make nothing perfect" in itself (Heb. vii. 19; x. 1), but, by its very imperfections, it perfectly did the work of preparing the way for Him who is perfect (Heb. x. 1; ix. 11), and it perfectly represents to us our own imperfections and the perfections of Christ.

— whereof any of the blood is brought into the tabernacle of the congregation] i.e., tabernacle of meeting with God. Such were the Sin-offerings for the People generally, and for the Priest himself (iv. 5—16).

— to reconcile withal in the holy place] As the blood was brought into the tabernacle to reconcile withal in the holy place, so it pleased the Father through the Son, "having made peace by the blood of the Cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself" (Col. i. 20—22. 2 Cor. v. 19. Bp. Pearson, Art. ii. p. 74).

— it shall be burnt in the fire] Here is a signal type of the One true Sin-offering, as St. Paul has taught us to understand it. "The bodies of those beasts (he says) whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the High Priest for sin (such as were offered for all the People and the Priests) are (not eaten, but) burned with fire without the camp. Wherefore JESUS also, that He might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered without the gate" (Heb. xiii. 11; cp. below, xvi. 27).

St. Paul there adopts the words of the Septuagint: he calls the sin-offerings by the periphrasis περὶ ἀμαρτίας, which is the language of the Septuagint; and he says, πυρὶ κατακαύεται, as the Septuagint does; which is a stronger expression than our English Version, "burned with fire," and means utterly consumed by fire.

CH. VII. 1. this is the law of the trespass offering] or guilt-offering (asham). What follows is a directory to the Priests, concerning their duties in offering the sacrifices described in chap. v. and vi. 1—7.

— most holy] Literally, holy of holinesses. See vi. 17.

2. In the place] The north side of the altar; i. 11.

3. the rump] The fat tail: see iii. 9. "I have seen many of these fat tails of sheep in Lebanon so heavy that the owners could not carry them without difficulty. Their fat is used instead of Arab butter. This is the rump so often mentioned in Leviticus; it is not properly a tail, but a mass of marrow-like fat, which spreads over the whole rump of the sheep down almost to the caudal extremity." Dr. Thomson, Land and Book, p. 97.

4. caul] See iii. 10.

7. the priest—shall have it] Cp. Ezek. xlv. 29. This and the following verse declare the Divine will, that they "who wait at the altar should be partakers with the altar" (1 Cor. ix. 13, 14), and show the duty of all to provide maintenance for their Ministers; and when compared with the following passages of the New Testament, are Divine testimonies to the wisdom of the Church in making the Offertory a means for the sustenance of the Christian Priesthood. See Luke x. 7. 1 Cor. ix. 7—14. Gal. vi. 6. 1 Tim. v. 17, 18.

h ch. 2. 3, 10.
Num. 18. 9.
Ezek. 44. 29.
|| Or, on the flat
plate, or, slice.

i ch. 3. 1. & 22.
18, 21.

k ch. 2. 4.
Num. 6. 15.
1 Amos 4. 5.

m Num. 18. 8, 11, 19.
n ch. 22. 30.

o ch. 19. 6, 7, 8.

that offereth any man's burnt offering, even the priest shall have to himself the skin of the burnt offering which he hath offered. ⁹ And ^h all the meat offering that is baken in the oven, and all that is dressed in the fryingpan, and || in the pan, shall be the priest's that offereth it. ¹⁰ And every meat offering, mingled with oil, and dry, shall all the sons of Aaron have, one as much as another.

¹¹ And ⁱ this is the law of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which he shall offer unto the LORD. ¹² If he offer it for a thanksgiving, then he shall offer with the sacrifice of thanksgiving unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers ^k anointed with oil, and cakes mingled with oil, of fine flour, fried. ¹³ Besides the cakes, he shall offer for his offering ^l leavened bread with the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace offerings. ¹⁴ And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation for an heave offering unto the LORD, ^m and it shall be the priest's that sprinkleth the blood of the peace offerings. ¹⁵ ⁿ And the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace offerings for thanksgiving shall be eaten the same day that it is offered; he shall not leave any of it until the morning. ¹⁶ But ^o if the sacrifice of his offering be a vow, or a voluntary offering, it shall be eaten the same day that he offereth his sacrifice: and on the morrow also the remainder of it shall be eaten: ¹⁷ But the remainder of the flesh of the sacrifice

10. one as much as another] Literally, man as his brother—a Divine precept of love and fellowship, especially among the Ministers of God.

11. peace offerings] Which had a twofold character, as Peace-offerings and as Thank-offerings, and were feasted upon by the People as well as by the Priest and by the Altar, and were especially types of Christ's sacrifice in its saving efficacy; and in its being the means of our Communion with God.

The Levitical Law of the Peace-offerings is like an Eucharistic homily. It shows the duty and privilege of thankful Communion with God, in Christ, both God and Man, in the participation of His most blessed Body and Blood (1 Cor. x. 16) in the sacred feast of His own institution, the Communion of His Body and Blood in the Holy Eucharist, which is the Christian Shelem, Peace-offering and Thank-offering. See above, iii. 1—17.

12. thanksgiving] Literally, confession of God's love and mercy; and of thankful acknowledgment of it, and of praise for it. St. Paul adopts the language of the Septuagint here, and authorizes and exhorts us to apply these precepts, in a Spiritual sense, to Christ. "By Him (Christ) let us offer the sacrifice of praise (θυσίαν αἰνέσεως)—the words, frequently repeated, of the Sept. here) continually to God; that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks (ὁμολογούντων) to His Name," Heb. xiii. 15. St. Paul, in that passage, appropriately connects the sacrifice of praise (θυσίαν αἰνέσεως), that is, the Christian Peace-offering or Eucharist, with the duty of Almsgiving. "To do good and to communicate forget not." The Peace-offering, and its Meat-offering, betokened that in consequence of God's love to us in Christ, we who communicate with Him are bound to communicate with one another in the body of Christ by acts of love and beneficence. With "such sacrifices God is well pleased" (Heb. xiii. 16). See below, v. 18.

— with oil] the oil is thrice mentioned; an emblem of the grace given in the Christian Shelem or Eucharist. See v. 11.

He, who was "anointed with the oil of gladness above His fellows" (Ps. xlv. 8), "offered Himself through the Eternal Spirit without spot to God" (Heb. ix. 14), and He thus was our Peace-offering, and He invites us to feast on Himself, and gives us of His own fulness, and diffuses on us the oil of His grace in the Holy Eucharist, or Thank-offering.

13. leavened bread] Not leaven mixed with the cakes and wafers in which the oil was; but leavened bread as a separate offering by itself: he shall offer ordinary bread with the unleavened bread; but it was not to be burnt on the altar (ii. 11), it was to be given to the priest (cp. A Lapid, and Keil, p. 48).

The Christian worshipper must bring his cares, his affections, all the infirmities of his humanity, and all the troubles of his daily life, and sacrifice them to God. He must lay them all at the foot of Christ's Cross; and pray for grace that they may all be sanctified to him.

The Holy Eucharist was the daily bread of the Primitive Church (see the treatises of Tertullian and S. Cyprian quoted in the note on Matt. vi. 11). She regarded it as the necessary food of the soul, as bread is of the body. The faithful are not to be deterred from the Christian Shelem—the Holy Eucharist—by their worldly cares and secular business, but they must bring their interests and concerns, and sanctify them to God's glory and service. Nor will they make the leaven of their corrupt nature to be a plea for absence. They may not wait till they are perfectly pure and holy before they come; if so, they will never come, and they will lose the blessings there promised by Christ. They are sick, and need the Physician; and are graciously invited to bring their sicknesses to Him who said, "They that are whole, need not a physician, but they that are sick. I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance" (Matt. ix. 12). They are sinners, and must feel that they are so, and that they need pardon and grace; and because they are sinners, and feel that they are sinners, they will come with sincere repentance, devout humility, and loving trust in Him; and because they are unworthy, and know that they are unworthy, they will come to Him "Who alone is worthy" (Rev. iv. 11; v. 12), and who will take away the rags of their unworthiness, and clothe them with the white robe of His own righteousness, by feeding them with His body, and by cleansing them with His blood.

Perhaps, also, the Divine requirement that leavened bread, as well as unleavened cakes, should be offered in the Peace-offering—which is the Levitical type of the Holy Eucharist—may have a prophetic meaning;

It has long been a controversy in the Church whether our Lord instituted the Eucharist in leavened or unleavened bread? But why should Christendom be divided by such questions as these? In the Levitical Shelem both leavened and unleavened bread had their place; and may not this have been providentially designed to assure the Christian Church that both are acceptable to God in the Holy Eucharist, if the Christian Communicant desires to sanctify his daily life, and if the heart of the receiver is purged from the leaven of unsound doctrine and unholy desires, and if he comes to Christ in faith and love?

14. one out of the whole oblation] Rather, out of each offering; the rest were eaten by him who brought them, and by his friends; and so in the Sacrifice, the Priest had the breast and shoulder; the other flesh was eaten by the person who brought it, and by his friends; and was thus the means of Communion with God, and with man in God.

15. the same day] Without delay: see v. 18. The eating of the Peace-offering was a festal act of communion with God, and an eucharistic expression of thankfulness to Him (see Deut. xii. 6, 7). The command to eat of it on the same day was an exhortation not to delay in the keeping of God's commandments, and in thanking Him for His mercies (Ps. xcv. 6, 8; cxix. 60). Is there not also a warning here against the postponement of the reception of God's grace; and especially against delay in receiving the Christian Shelem, or Eucharist? (Cp. Heb. iii. 12—15.) It implied a blessing to those who come—and who come soon—to God (cp. Exod. xii. 10, and xvi. 20).

on the third day shall be burnt with fire. ¹⁸ And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace offerings be eaten at all on the third day, it shall not be accepted, neither shall it be ^p imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an ^q abomination, and the soul that eateth of it shall bear his iniquity. ¹⁹ And the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire: and as for the flesh, all that be clean shall eat thereof. ²⁰ But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace offerings, that pertain unto the LORD, 'having his uncleanness upon him, even that soul ^s shall be cut off from his people. ²¹ Moreover the soul that shall touch any unclean thing, as 'the uncleanness of man, or any ^u unclean beast, or any ^w abominable unclean thing, and eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which pertain unto the LORD, even that soul ^x shall be cut off from his people.

²² And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²³ Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^y Ye shall eat no manner of fat, of ox, or of sheep, or of goat. ²⁴ And the fat of the † beast that dieth of itself, and the fat of that which is torn with beasts, may be used in any other use: but ye shall in no wise eat of it. ²⁵ For whosoever eateth the fat of the beast, of which men offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, even the soul that eateth it shall be cut off from his people. ²⁶ ^z Moreover ye shall eat no manner of blood, whether it be of fowl or of beast, in any of your dwellings. ²⁷ Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

²⁸ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁹ Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^a He that offereth the sacrifice of his peace offerings unto the LORD shall bring his oblation unto the LORD of the sacrifice of his peace offerings. ³⁰ ^b His own hands shall bring the offerings of the LORD made by fire, the fat with the breast, it shall he bring, that ^c the breast may be waved for a wave offering before the LORD. ³¹ ^d And the priest shall burn the fat upon the

p Num. 18. 27.

q ch. 11. 10, 11, 41. & 19. 7.

r ch. 15. 3. s Gen. 17. 14.

t ch. 12. & 13. & 15. u ch. 11. 24, 28. w Ezek. 4. 14. x ver. 20.

y ch. 3. 17.

† Heb. carcase, ch. 17. 15. Deut. 14. 21. Ezek. 4. 14. & 44. 31.

z Gen. 9. 4. ch. 3. 17. & 17. 10—14.

a ch. 3. 1.

b ch. 3. 3, 4, 9, 14.

c Ex. 29. 24, 27. ch. 8. 27. & 9. 21. Num. 6. 20. d ch. 3. 5, 11, 16.

17. third day] Is there not a mystery here? Is there not a reference to the Christian Peace-offering? Christ rose on the third day, and saw no corruption (Acts xiii. 37), but of Lazarus it is said that "he stinketh, for he hath been dead four days" (John xi. 39).

18. not be—imputed] as acceptable to God: ep. Num. xviii. 27—30.

— an abomination] Heb. pigul; literally, fetid, putrid, polluted (see xix. 7; and Gesen. 665). The flesh was not to be kept, for the reason stated above (v. 15), and to prevent its being kept, in parsimony, and not communicated to others, it was ordered to be burnt, and it was declared to be polluted if it was reserved to the third day.

So the Christian Peace-offering is a Communion in a manifold sense; it is a communion with God and Christ; a communion with the Priesthood with the Laity, and of the worshippers with one another. It is a communion of alms and offerings to the poor: see above, v. 12. In all those respects, delays are dangerous.

19. the flesh] The holy flesh of the Peace-offerings (Jarchi). — shall be burnt] Thus the offerer was restrained from grudging a part to his friends and the poor (Theodore), and the holy flesh was preserved from the danger of corruption. Cp. Exod. xxix. 34; and below, xix. 8.

21. that soul shall be cut off] By the judgment of God (see xxii. 3. 9), if he does it presumptuously—not ignorantly. So St. Paul declares that whosoever eateth or drinketh of the Christian Shelem unworthily, i. e. in an irreverent and profane manner, and without self-examination, "not discerning the Lord's body—eateth and drinketh judgment to himself" (1 Cor. xi. 27—29).

23. Speak unto the children of Israel] He turns from the Priests to the People, and speaks to them by way of recapitulation concerning their duties in holy things.

— no manner of fat] Which belongs to God. Here is a reference to the precept in iii. 16, 17.

24. ye shall in no wise eat of it] Ye may not eat of any thing that died of itself—for its blood is in it, which is the life. See v. 27; and below, xvii. 15. The act of eating represents participation not only with the thing eaten, but with others who also ate of the same food. To eat of what had died of itself was to be a partaker with Death; to eat what had been torn by wild beasts, was to be a partaker with wild Beasts; to eat of what had been offered to idols, was to be a partaker with Devils, or demons (δαμονίων), 1 Cor. x. 20, 21. All these injunctions contain moral cautions against evil associations (1 Cor. xv. 33).

25. the fat] Of an offering. See iii. 16, 17.

26. eat no manner of blood] For the reason of this law see iii. 17; and below, xvii. 10—12.

29—34.] Another recapitulation and enlargement on the duties of those who bring their Peace-offerings. See iii. 1—17. He sums up with a requirement that provision should be made for the Priests from the offerings to the Altar: see above, v. 7.

30. waved for a wave offering] The breast of the peace-offering was to be waved for a wave-offering; and the right shoulder was to be heaved for an heave-offering. On the significance of waving and heaving, see above, Exod. xxix. 24—27. This is observable, as a type of Christ's Sacrifice, and of the application of its benefits in the Holy Eucharist.

The Sin-offering was penitential, and represented the Atonement made by the shedding of Christ's blood for sin. The offerer was not admitted to partake of it; for men did nothing for their own Redemption. It represented the outpouring of Christ's blood, who was made sin for us, and "died for our sins." But the Peace-offering was festal and eucharistic; it represented the sacrifice of Christ, who not only "died for our sins," but was raised for our justification" (Rom. iv. 25). It represented our justification and acceptance with God through Christ's Death and Resurrection. Therefore the offerer was admitted to partake of this offering; to communicate with God in Christ at His table. And, therefore, it was waved and heaved, because it signified the Resurrection and Ascension of Christ, filling all things and sitting in heaven at God's right hand. Cp. x. 14.

e ver. 31.
f ver. 34.
ch. 9. 21.
Num. 6. 20.

g Ex. 29. 28.
ch. 10. 14, 15.
Num. 18. 18, 19.
Deut. 18. 3.

h Ex. 40. 13, 15.
ch. 8. 12, 30.

i ch. 6. 9.
k ch. 6. 14.
l ch. 6. 25.
m ver. 1.
n Ex. 29. 1.
ch. 6. 20.
o ver. 11.
p ch. 1. 2.

a Ex. 29. 1, 2, 3.

altar: "but the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons".³² And "the right shoulder shall ye give unto the priest for an heave offering of the sacrifices of your peace offerings."³³ He among the sons of Aaron, that offereth the blood of the peace offerings, and the fat, shall have the right shoulder for his part.³⁴ For "the wave breast and the heave shoulder have I taken of the children of Israel from off the sacrifices of their peace offerings, and have given them unto Aaron the priest and unto his sons by a statute for ever from among the children of Israel."³⁵ This is the portion of the anointing of Aaron, and of the anointing of his sons, out of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, in the day when he presented them to minister unto the LORD in the priest's office;³⁶ Which the LORD commanded to be given them of the children of Israel, "in the day that he anointed them, by a statute for ever throughout their generations."³⁷ This is the law "of the burnt offering, "of the meat offering, "and of the sin offering, "and of the trespass offering, "and of the consecrations, and "of the sacrifice of the peace offerings";³⁸ Which the LORD commanded Moses in mount Sinai, in the day that he commanded the children of Israel "to offer their oblations unto the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai.

VIII. "And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, "Take Aaron and his

35. This is the portion of the anointing of Aaron] This is the Anointing: so Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac. Some modern Expositors interpret the word here used, mashchah, by portion (so the Arabic Version and Keil), from a secondary meaning of mashach, to measure (Ges., p. 515). But the other and common interpretation seems preferable.

This anointing of Aaron, and of his sons, entitled them to share in the offerings by fire unto the Lord, when He made them come near (to Himself) to perform the Priest's office to the Lord; which (things) the Lord commanded to be given to them in the day of their anointing, by the Children of Israel. This is the anointing: that is, their anointing entitled them to these gifts. These gifts are a necessary consequence of it; and whosoever deprives them of it, does injury to the Spirit of God by whom they are anointed.—A warning against robbing God's Ministers of their dues.

37. This is the law of the burnt offering] He returns to the point from which he began, and so concludes this portion of the code: an evidence of the unity of its authorship.

—consecrations] Literally, fillings of the hand: see Exod. xxix. 9; and below, viii. 27, and xxi. 10.

38. Which the LORD commanded Moses in Mount Sinai (i. e. in the region of Mount Sinai)—in the wilderness of Sinai] To be a figure of, and a preparation for, the Law to be given by God on Mount Zion (Heb. xii. 22).

RETROSPECTIVE VIEW OF THE EFFICACY OF THE LEVITICAL SACRIFICES.

St. Paul says that Sina was typified by Agar, and Zion by Sarah (Gal. iv. 24—31), and that the Laws given at Sinai were shadows of the good things to come (Heb. x. 1), of which the body is Christ (Col. ii. 17), and that they were like the manuductory slave which led the Hebrew child to the school of the Gospel (Gal. iii. 24); and that thus the legislation of Sinai was preparatory to the time when the Lamb should stand on Mount Zion (Rev. xiv. 1), and when He should make His soul an offering for guilt (Isa. liii. 10), and take away the sins of the world (John i. 29. 36), and cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease (Dan. ix. 27), and rend the veil in twain (which under the Law separated the people of Israel, and even the Priests themselves, from the Holy of Holies), and should say on the Cross, "It is finished;" and fulfil all the sacrifices of the Law, and by fulfilling them take them away; and by one Offering, perfect for ever them that are sanctified (Heb. x. 14), and unite all men in Himself by His incarnation and by their mystical indwelling in Him through the operation of the Holy Ghost; so that now among the Gentiles, in every place, incense is offered unto God, and a pure offering (Mal. i. 11), and all the human race is invited to feast on the Christian Peace-offering, by which the Universal Church shows the Lord's Death till He come (1 Cor. xi. 26).

As to the efficacy of sacrifices before the Incarnation, and as to the cause of that efficacy, we know from the New Testament that Abel offered by faith a more excellent sacrifice than Cain (Heb. xi. 4); and that Abraham by faith offered up Isaac (Heb. xi. 8), and rejoiced to see Christ's Day, and saw it and was glad (John viii. 56), and that, if the Jews had believed Moses, they would have believed Christ (John v. 46), and that many prophets and righteous men desired to see the mysteries of the Gospel (Matt. xiii. 17), and that all the Fathers died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, they were persuaded of them and embraced them (Heb. xi. 13; ep. v. 39); "and it was revealed to the Prophets" (and therefore doubtless to the Law and the Priesthood), "that not unto themselves but unto us they ministered" divine truths (1 Pet. i. 12). We know, also, that it was not possible for "the blood of bulls and goats to take away sin" (Heb. x. 4), and that the Levitical Sacrifices could not make the comers thereto perfect, as pertaining to the conscience (Heb. ix. 9); and that the Eternal Word, the Son of God, is the True Light, that "lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John i. 9), and that the Scriptures of the Old Testament were able "to make wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. iii. 15). And the Church of England teaches in her Seventh Article "that both in the Old and New Testament everlasting life is offered only by CHRIST, Who is the only Mediator between God and Man."

S. Cyril says (Glaphyr. in Gen. lib. iii. p. 66), "It was revealed in a type and figure to the Israelites, that they could not be saved by any other means but through Christ, who justifieth the ungodly and forgiveth sins," and he there proceeds to prove this proposition; and S. Augustine says, c. Faustum xv. 2, "The Old Testament was a prophecy of the New; and therefore the holy Patriarchs and Prophets, who had an understanding of what their own actions meant, or of what was done by their means, placed their hope of eternal life in the New Testament; for that which they understood and loved, appertained to the New Testament, which was even then pre-signified, albeit it was not revealed." "The New Testament (says Lactantius, de Vera Sap. iv. 20) is the fulfilling of the Old; and there is One and the same Testator in both—Christ Jesus." Cp. note below, on Heb. ix. 16, p. 408, where it is shown that the Levitical Code is rightly called a Testament, as being grounded on the presupposed death of Christ.

The faith of those who offered the sacrifices under the Levitical Law was doubtless more or less clear-sighted and explicit in different persons, and at different times. But there was faith and obedience in the very act of complying with the complex requirements of a ceremonial system, which exacted so much self-sacrifice from the worshipper, and which bore continual witness of man's sinfulness, and of his need of a Saviour, and proclaimed its own insufficiency (ep. ix. 8—10; x. 1—10), sons with him, and ^b the garments, and ^c the anointing oil, and a bullock ^b Ex. 28. 2, 4. for the sin offering, and two rams, and a basket of unleavened bread; ³ And ^c Ex. 30. 24, 25. gather thou all the congregation together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁴ And Moses did as the LORD commanded him; and the assembly was gathered together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

⁵ And Moses said unto the congregation, ^d This is the thing which the LORD ^d Ex. 29. 4. commanded to be done. ⁶ And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, ^e and ^e Ex. 29. 4. washed them with water. ⁷ ^f And he put upon him the ^g coat, and girded him ^f Ex. 29. 5. with the girdle, and clothed him with the robe, and put the ephod upon him, ^g Ex. 28. 4. and he girded him with the curious girdle of the ephod, and bound it unto him therewith. ⁸ And he put the breastplate upon him: also he ^h put in the ^h Ex. 28. 30. breastplate the Urim and the Thummim. ⁹ ⁱ And he put the mitre upon his ⁱ Ex. 29. 6. head; also upon the mitre, even upon his forefront, did he put the golden plate, the holy crown; as the LORD ^k commanded Moses. ^k Ex. 28. 37, &c.

and incompetency to take away sin, and which pointed in almost every enactment to something beyond itself.

And it cannot admit of a doubt that the acceptance, on God's part, of the person of the worshipper and of the sacrifice offered by him, was due to the divine foreknowledge of the Incarnation and Sacrifice of His Only-Begotten Son, "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (see Rev. xiii. 8; notwithstanding the objection of a recent learned writer, this appears to be the right translation), and "who was fore-ordained before the foundation of the world" (1 Pet. i. 20); and that all who were ever accepted by the Father since the beginning, were accepted in the well-beloved Son (Eph. i. 4—6).

On this subject the reader may consult the remarks of one of the best Theologians of Christian Antiquity, S. Cyril of Alexandria, who has treated it fully in his works De Adoratione, and Glaphyra, ed. Paris, 1638.

CH. VIII. 1. And the LORD spake unto Moses] Having given commands concerning holy things, he now proceeds to speak of the consecration of holy Persons. On the ceremonies used in the consecration of Priests, see Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 61. 166. 414. 429; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 269. 275; Jahn, Archæol. § 366. On the consecration of Aaron, as figurative of the consecration of Christ, see the interesting remarks in Dean Jackson on the Creed, book ix. ch. xxv.—xxviii.

2. Take Aaron] Who had been before designated for the priesthood, Exod. xxviii. 1.

— the garments] The holy garments prescribed in Exod. xxviii. 5—9, and described in Exod. xxix. The definite article the is also in the Hebrew before bullock, rams, basket.

The Book of Leviticus takes for granted that the reader is acquainted with the Book of Exodus. This chapter is grounded on the last twelve chapters of that Book. Here is evidence of unity of design in the Pentateuch.

3. And gather thou all the congregation together unto the door of the tabernacle] Gather the congregation: though a man have a call from God, as Aaron had, to the Priesthood (Heb. v. 4), yet he is not a Priest, till he has received a public mission and ordination, in the sight of the congregation, from those who are authorized to ordain him. Origen, in Levit., Hom. 6: see below, on Acts xiii. 1—3.

How (it has been asked) could two millions of people be collected "at the door of the tabernacle?"

The words rendered unto the door are el pethach, that is, towards the opening: see Gesenius, p. 46, under the word el, and p. 697, under the word pethach, which is connected with the word pateo, to be wide, and is a different word from the door of a house, deleth (from dalah, to hang, to swing): see above, Gen. ix. 9. Strictly speaking, the tabernacle had no door; the east end being formed by the Hangings described in Exod. xxxvi. 37.

What the divine command required was, that the People should be summoned towards the east end of the Tabernacle (in order that they might be witnesses of the consecration of their future High Priest). Many of them might have been on the acclivities of Mount Sinai.

Besides, the word all is not to be pressed literally here, any more than in Matt. iii. 5, where it is said that "Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, went to the baptism of John and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins;" or when it is said by Juvenal (xi. 195), "Totam hodie Romam Circus capit" (cp. Dr. M'Caul on Colenso, p. 16). The word translated all the congregation might more fitly be rendered "all the assembly," as it is rendered in v. 4; the word is the same, edhah, in verses 3, 4, 5; and edhah signifies a meeting appointed (from yaad, to fix, appoint; συναγωγή, ἐκκλησία: see Gesen. 607); and it probably means "the people represented by their elders in a set assembly" (Keil, p. 55; and his Archæologie, ii. p. 221).

The People are summoned to this Consecration, because the Priests, who are to be consecrated, are to be their Ministers before God. They are to come "to the tent of meeting"—God.

It is observable that the Septuagint has here the word ἐκκλησιάζω, and in some MSS. ἐκκλησία, and this is the first place in that Version where this word, Ecclesia, or its derivative, occurs. S. Cyril of Jerusalem (Cant. 18) remarks, that the word Church is thus presented to us first when the Lord invested Aaron, the type of Christ, with the High Priesthood.

— tabernacle of the congregation] Rather, tabernacle of meeting; that is, of meeting with God. See Exod. xxix. 42—44.

5. This is the thing which the LORD commanded] See Exod. xxviii. 1; xxix. 1—37. Moses here takes for granted that they are acquainted with what is related there. Here is an evidence of unity and truth.

6. and washed them with water] So our Great High Priest was publicly inaugurated in the presence of a large multitude, by His Baptism, when He "sanctified water to the mystical washing away of sins" (see Matt. iii. 5. 15). Hesych.

So all Christians, who "are made Priests to God" in Christ, are initiated into their priesthood in Baptism, when His cleansing blood is first applied to them (Titus iii. 5). "To Him that loved us and washed us from our sins in His own Blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father" (or rather, who made, i.e., at that time; the tense used is the aorist, ὡς ἐποίησεν); "to Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever" (Rev. i. 5, 6).

7. the coat] the priestly linen tunic: see Exod. xxviii. 4. — the robe] the meil, or long purple robe of the Ephod (Exod. xxviii. 31—34), typifying the dress of Christ (Rev. i. 12). S. Iren., iv. 37.

— the ephod] See Exod. xxviii. 6.

8. the breastplate] With the twelve precious stones: see Exod. xxviii. 15.

— he put in the breastplate the Urim and the Thummim] See Exod. xxviii. 30. The original word for he put is different here from that which is rendered he put in the previous clause; in the previous clause (he put the breastplate upon him), the word is yasem, he placed; here it is yitten, he gave. In the next verse the word yasem occurs twice, he placed the mitre; he placed the golden plate. Perhaps by this difference it is marked that there was a special gift of grace in the Urim and Thummim: see above, note on Exod. xxviii. 30; and Origen, Hom. 6 in Levit., on the mystical meaning of Urim and Thummim. The word yitten is also applied to the priestly linen tunic and the ephod in v. 7.

9. the mitre] See Exod. xxviii. 36, 37.

1 Ex. 30. 26, 27,
28, 29.

m Ex. 29. 7. &
30. 30
ch. 21. 10, 12.
Ps. 133. 2.
n Ex. 29. 8, 9.
† Heb. bound.

o Ex. 29. 10.
Ezek. 43. 19.
p ch. 4. 4.

q Ex. 29. 12, 36.
ch. 4. 7.
Ezek. 43. 20, 26.
Heb. 9. 22.

r Ex. 29. 13.
ch. 4. 8.

¹⁰ ¹ And Moses took the anointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle and all that was therein, and sanctified them. ¹¹ And he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anointed the altar and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them. ¹² And he ^m poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head, and anointed him, to sanctify him. ¹³ ⁿ And Moses brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and † put bonnets upon them; as the LORD commanded Moses.

¹⁴ ^o And he brought the bullock for the sin offering: and Aaron and his sons ^p laid their hands upon the head of the bullock for the sin offering. ¹⁵ And he slew it; ^q and Moses took the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about with his finger, and purified the altar, and poured the blood at the bottom of the altar, and sanctified it, to make reconciliation upon it. ¹⁶ ^r And he took all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and Moses burned it upon the altar. ¹⁷ But the bullock, — the golden plate] on which was engraven "Holiness to the Lord" (Exod. xxviii. 36—38).

10. the anointing oil] See on Exod. xxix. 7; xxx. 23—25.

11. seven times] See iv. 6.

— all his vessels] The vessels of the Tabernacle are figures of those who are set apart by God for holy uses in His Church; as St. Paul, who was "a chosen vessel," σκευος εκλογης, Acts ix. 15 (Hesych.).

12. he poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head] A figure of the Unction of the true High Priest, who was anointed by the Holy Spirit (Isa. lxi. 1. Luke iv. 18. Acts x. 38), in His miraculous Conception in the womb of the Blessed Virgin (Luke i. 35), and at His Baptism in the river Jordan, when He was openly invested in His Priesthood (Luke iii. 22); and who was full of grace, and of whose fulness we all receive (John i. 14. 16); for we have received an anointing from Him (1 John ii. 20. 27). We are Christians because He is the Christ, or Anointed One (see on Acts xi. 26); and the Holy Unction, which was poured upon Him, flows down upon us; as the precious ointment upon the head of the High Priest ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard, and went down to the skirts of his clothing. Ps. cxxxiii. 2. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, i. 76. Bp. Pearson, Art. ii. p. 100.

13. And Moses brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them] See Exod. xxviii. 40. 43.

— as the LORD commanded Moses] It is not here mentioned that he also anointed them; which had been commanded in Exod. xxviii. 41; xl. 15, but the Anointing is taken for granted, below, v. 36; x. 7; and Num. iii. 3—another evidence of the unity and truth of the component parts of the Pentateuch.

According to the best Hebrew authorities, the High Priest alone had the oil poured on his head (see iv. 3); and his sons were only anointed with the oil applied by the finger on the forehead (see Reland, Antiq. ii. 1. 5. Selden, de Succes. Pontif. ii. 2. Keil, p. 56).

Our Great High Priest, Jesus Christ, has the fulness of the Divine Unction poured without stint or measure upon Him (John iii. 34). We, the children of the true Aaron, are anointed with His Unction on our foreheads at our baptism, when we receive our Christian name, and the blessing of spiritual sonship in Him (Hesychius), and are made priests and kings to God in Him (Rev. i. 6; v. 10; xx. 6). Cp. below, xxi. 10.

14. And he brought the bullock for the sin offering] There are three Sacrifices offered here at the inauguration of the Priesthood.

(1) The Sin-offering, v. 14.

(2) The Burnt-offering, v. 18; and

(3) The Peace-offering, v. 22—28.

These three Sacrifices showed the imperfection of the Levitical Priesthood, and its need of another dispensation, from which it derived all its efficacy, and for which it was preparatory.

Besides, here we have a lively image of the manner in which that other Priesthood, the Priesthood of Christ, was inaugurated. St. Paul says that Christ was made perfect through suffering; the word there rendered made perfect is τελειωθης, which is the word used by the Septuagint for consecrated (see Exod. xxix. 19. 29. 33. 35; and Lev. viii. 33; xvi. 32; xxi. 10. Num. iii. 3), and is rendered consecrated by our Translators in Heb. vii. 28. Cp. Heb. ii. 10, where it is said that Christ was consecrated through suffering; our Priest was consecrated by being our Sacrifice also.

Christ is both our Victim and our Priest, and He was fully consecrated to His everlasting Priesthood, which He exercises in Heaven, through His sufferings endured upon the Cross.

The One Sacrifice of Christ upon the Cross was represented by these three sacrifices in the Levitical Law, specified here, viz.:

(1) The Sin-offering.

(2) The Burnt-offering.

(3) The Peace-offering.

Observe their order, and their significance.

First came the Sin-offering, which represented Christ's Death as our Atonement (see above, iv. 1).

Next was the Burnt-offering, representing His perfect Self-dedication to God: cp. xiv. 10; xv. 15.

Thirdly, came the Peace-offering (see iii. 1; ix. 2—4), in which the offerer was admitted to partake, signifying our justification and continual communion with God, by virtue of Christ's Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into Heaven (see vii. 11. 15).

There must first be the shedding of the Blood of Christ's Sacrifice as our Sin-offering, for propitiation, expiation, satisfaction, and atonement, before any other sacrifice can be accepted by God. There must be the Burnt-offering of His perfect sinless obedience and self-dedication to God (see Ps. xl. 8—10). Then the way has been prepared for the Peace-offering, in which the worshipper rejoices with thankfulness before God for the infinite benefits procured by Christ's sacrifice; the blessings of redemption, pardon, peace, and filial adoption in Him; and in which the worshipper himself is admitted to feed on the sacrifice, and to communicate with God in Christ, in the Holy Eucharist.

Thus these three Levitical Sacrifices, by which the Priests were consecrated, represent comprehensively and clearly the One Sacrifice, by which He who is our Priest and Sacrifice was consecrated; and which is to us both a Sacrifice and a Sacrament even "till the Lord come."

— and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the bullock] Confessing their sins, and transferring them in a figure to the victim. But "the blood of bulls and goats could not take away sin" (Heb. x. 4). Here, therefore, in the public inauguration of the Levitical Priesthood, in the presence of all Israel, was a public profession, made by God's appointment, of the infirmity of the Levitical Priesthood, and of its inadequacy to take away sin; and of the consequent need of another Priesthood, to make atonement for the sins of the Priests themselves as well as of the People. Thus the Levitical Priesthood at Mount Sinai preached Christ, and prophesied of the grace to be given at Zion (cp. Heb. vii. 28).

15. he slew it] Moses slew it (see v. 19). A Victim therefore is presupposed for the initiation of the Levitical Priests, who are afterwards to be the sacrificers. In the Divine Mind the Gospel is before the Law. Christ is before Moses. He is the Lamb "slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. xiii. 8. 1 Pet. i. 20). From His blood the Levitical Sacrifices derived all their efficacy: see above, the note at end of chap. vii.

— the altar] Which required to be sanctified, in order that it might sanctify the gifts laid upon it (Matt. xxiii. 19).

16. the caul above the liver] Rather, the lobe of the liver (see iii. 4. 10). The word above is not in the Hebrew; the word and his hide, his flesh, and his dung, he burnt with fire without the camp; as the LORD ^s commanded Moses.

s Ex. 29. 14.
ch. 4. 11, 12.

¹³ And he brought the ram for the burnt offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram. ¹⁹ And he killed it; and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about. ²⁰ And he cut the ram into pieces; and Moses burnt the head, and the pieces, and the fat. ²¹ And he washed the inwards and the legs in water; and Moses burnt the whole ram upon the altar: it was a burnt sacrifice for a sweet savour, and an offering made by fire unto the LORD; ^u as the LORD commanded Moses.

t Ex. 29. 15.

²² And ^w he brought the other ram, the ram of consecration: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram. ²³ And he slew it; and Moses took of the blood of it, and put it upon the tip of Aaron's right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot. ²⁴ And he brought Aaron's sons, and Moses put of the blood upon the tip of their right ear, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet: and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about. ²⁵ ^x And he took the fat, and the rump, and all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and the right shoulder: ²⁶ ^y And out of the basket of unleavened bread, that was before the LORD, he took one unleavened cake, and a cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, and put them on the fat, and upon the right shoulder: ²⁷ And he put all ^z upon Aaron's hands, and upon his sons' hands, and waved them

u Ex. 29. 18.

w Ex. 29. 10, 31.

x Ex. 29. 22.

y Ex. 29. 23.

z Ex. 29. 24, &c.

are rendered "lobe of the liver" by Sept., and "reticulum jecoris" by Vulg.

17. without the camp] Here, in the first inauguration of the Levitical Priesthood, is a figure of another sacrifice, as St. Paul teaches (Heb. xiii. 12), which by its being burnt without the gate (as this was burnt without the camp) would be more extensive in its efficacy than the camp of the literal Israel, and would be applicable to all nations: cp. iv. 12.

18. the burnt offering] A burnt sacrifice for a sweet savour (v. 21. See on v. 14; and above, on Exod. xxix. 18; and Levit. i. 3—17). Christ is not only our Sin-offering for expiation of sin; but also our Burnt-offering. The Burnt-offering was consumed by the fire on God's Altar, and signified the entire Self-devotion of our Victim to God, and God's acceptance of Him, and of us in Him (see Eph. i. 5—7; v. 2).

19. Moses sprinkled the blood] Moses acted as a Priest on this special occasion (see v. 29) by express command of God (see the Sept. here, and Vulg. in v. 23); thus showing that the power of the Priesthood was not inherent in itself, but is derived from God, who constituted it. See above, on Exod. xxix. 11.

21. burnt the whole ram] The Septuagint has here ἀνήνεγκεν, the word adopted by St. Paul to describe the act of Christ, who offered Himself (ἀνήνεγκεν ἑαυτὸν) as a sacrifice, a whole burnt-offering (olah), upon the cross (Heb. vii. 27); and since in offering Himself Christ bore the weight of our "sins in His own body on the tree," and took them away, He is said also ἀναφέρειν ἁμαρτίας as well as ἀναφέρειν ἑαυτὸν (see Heb. ix. 28; 1 Pet. ii. 24); a most comfortable assurance to us of forgiveness through Him.

22. the ram of consecration] Literally, the ram of fulness (of the hand), and the Sept. renders it, the ram of perfecting (τελειώσεως): see above, Exod. xxix. 22; and above, on v. 14; and below, 27. 33.

The filling of the hand with sacrificial gifts signified that the Priest was henceforth now enabled to offer sacrifice to God; and was endowed with the appurtenances which the Priesthood received from the Altar. Corresponding to it is the delivery of the Holy Bible, accompanied with prayer for the reception of the Holy Ghost, "for the office and work of a Priest in the Church of God," and with a conveyance of "authority to preach the Word of God, and to minister the holy Sacraments," with which the Christian Priests are inaugurated. Cp. Bingham, Antiq. II. xix. 17.

The Sacrifice here offered was a Peace-offering (see iii. 1—17). It is called the Sacrifice of perfecting by the Septuagint. The Peace-offering, which comes last, perfects and consummates all other offerings. It was the offering wherein God had His share, which was accepted by Him in the fire, which came down from heaven (ix. 24), and was the emblem of His glorious presence on the Altar. In it also the ministering Priest had his portion (v. 31); and the offerer who brought it had also his share, on which he feasted with his friends. Therefore, the Peace-offering was a very significant figure of Christ, who is our Peace (Eph. ii. 14), our θυσία σωτηριου, or sacrifice of salvation (as the Sept. translates the Hebrew word shelem, Peace-offering), our sacrifice of joy and thanksgiving; and in whom we are admitted to communicate with God, when we feast on the spiritual food of His most precious body and blood in the Holy Eucharist (see above, on chap. iii. 1); and in whom we are made Kings and Priests to God (Rev. i. 6; v. 10); and who, having offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down at the right hand of God; for by one offering He hath perfected (τετελειωκεν, hath consecrated as Priests) for ever them that are sanctified (Heb. x. 14). This perfecting character of Christ's Sacrifice, who is not only our Sacrifice, but our Priest, ministering at the right hand of God, was signified also by the Wave-offering and Heave-offering, which accompanied the Peace-offering, and typified His exaltation to heaven in His Ascension, and that perfect fulness by which He now filleth all things: see above, v. 14, and vii. 30, and Heb. xiii. 20; "The God of Peace" (is there a reference here to the true εἰρημικὰ, or Peace-offerings offered by Christ on the Cross, our Victim and our High Priest?), "that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect to do His will."

23. ear—hand—foot] To signify the sanctification of the ear for hearing God's word, and of the hand for doing it, and of the feet for walking in God's commandments; an obedience fully realized in our Great High Priest, and in Him alone (cp. Ps. xl. 8), and to be imitated by all His Priests and people (1 Thess. v. 23; 1 Cor. ix. 27); cp. Theodoret, Qu. 8; and Hesych. here.

26. unleavened bread] A type of the Christian Passover; and as these Levitical symbols were waved as a wave-offering before the Lord, so the Body and Blood of Christ, now risen from the dead, and glorified in heaven, are represented before God in the Christian Church, in that Holy Sacrament wherein we lift up our hearts in joy and thanksgiving to Him, and have a pledge and foretaste of a glorious Resurrection and a blessed Immortality in heaven (John vi. 51, 54); see Hesych. here.

27. put all upon Aaron's hands] And so filled his hands, and consecrated him; hence the act of Consecration is called in the original Hebrew, the filling of the hands. Exod. xxviii. 41; xxix. 9, 24; and see above, v. 14, and below, xxi. 10.

- a Ex. 29. 25 for a wave offering before the LORD. ²⁸ a And Moses took them from off their hands, and burnt them on the altar upon the burnt offering: they were consecrations for a sweet savour: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.
- b Ex. 29. 26. ²⁹ And Moses took the breast, and waved it for a wave offering before the LORD: for of the ram of consecration it was Moses' ^b part; as the LORD commanded Moses.
- c Ex. 29. 21. & 30. 30. Num. 3. 3. ³⁰ And ^c Moses took of the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his sons' garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.
- d Ex. 29. 31, 32. ³¹ And Moses said unto Aaron and to his sons, ^d Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and there eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations, as I commanded, saying, Aaron and his sons shall eat it.
- e Ex. 29. 34. ³² e And that which remaineth of the flesh and of the bread shall ye burn with fire.
- f Ex. 29. 30, 35. Ezek. 43. 25, 26. g Heb. 7. 16. ³³ And ye shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation in seven days, until the days of your consecration be at an end: for ^f seven days shall he consecrate you. ³⁴ g As he hath done this day, so the LORD hath commanded to do, to make an atonement for you. ³⁵ Therefore shall ye abide at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation day and night seven days, and ^h keep the charge of the LORD, that ye die not: for so I am commanded. ³⁶ So Aaron and his sons did all things which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.
- h Num. 3. 7. & 9. 19. Deut. 11. 1. 1 Kings 2. 3. a Ezek. 43. 27. IX. ¹ And ^a it came to pass on the eighth day, that Moses called Aaron and his

Part of the sacrifice was put into the hands in token that the function of sacrificing was committed to him. Cp. John iii. 27. 35, where it is said of Christ, our Great High Priest, "The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into His hand."

— waved] See Exod. xxix. 24. 27.

²⁸. upon the burnt offering] We must have Christ as our Sin-offering and as our Burnt-offering, before we can have Him as our Peace-offering (see on iii. 1, and above, v. 14).

— consecrations] Literally, fillings: see v. 27.

²⁹. Moses took the breast] which was the Priest's part (see Exod. xxix. 28; Lev. vii. 34). Moses on this special occasion acted as a Priest by God's express command. Exod. xxix. 26: see above, v. 19.

³⁰. anointing oil, and of the blood] Exod. xxix. 21; xxx. 30.

Here is a figure of the union of the unction of the Holy Spirit with the Blood of the Son of God (cp. 1 John v. 8). He who shed His own blood for us was sanctified by the Holy Ghost, and by that divine unction of the Eternal Spirit He offered Himself without spot to God (John xvii. 18, 19; Heb. ix. 14). And these gifts are communicated to Christ's children and members, and sanctify them; especially in the Holy Sacrament of His body and blood, as the oil and the blood, first sprinkled on Aaron, were sprinkled afterwards on his garments, his sons, and sons' garments, and sanctified them (cp. Hesych. here).

³¹. Boil the flesh—and there eat it] it being a Peace-offering (see v. 22), in which the person who brought it (here Aaron) partook with God, whose share was consumed by the fire on the altar (v. 28), and also communicated with the Priest (here Moses): see v. 29.

In the Levitical Peace-offering there must be eating as well as offering. The offerer feasted on the Sacrifice, and so communicated with God and with His Priests. So it is in the Christian Peace-offering or Holy Eucharist. There must be Communion on the part of the worshipper with God and His Priests.

Here is a warning against the errors of those, who regard the Holy Sacrament as a Commemoration merely, and not a Communion; and against those who adore the Sacrament, but do not partake of it; and against those who deny a part of the Sacrament to the Laity.

— at the door of the tabernacle] At the opening of the tent of meeting (see v. 3), in the outer court, the αὐλῆ (Sept.), the court where the brazen altar and the laver were.

— as I commanded] Moses speaks in the person of God, whose Priest on this occasion he was (see Exod. xxix. 32, and below, v. 36).

³². that which remaineth] According to the law of Peace-offerings (see vii. 15—18).

³³. the days of your consecration] Literally, till the day of fulfilling the days of your fillings, or consecration. The fulfilling of the days for the consecration may have been a foreshadowing of the attendance of Christ at the Temple in the earthly Jerusalem, where He taught daily in the week of His Passion, till He was fully consecrated and perfected as our High Priest, and entered into the heavenly Sanctuary (see Dean Jackson on the Creed, ix. 28, "how the consecration of Aaron prefigured the consecration of the Son of God").

The fulfilling of the days of the consecration may also have been figurative (as Hesych. observes) of the fulfilling of the day of Pentecost, on which the Apostles were consecrated and perfected as Priests by the unction of the Holy Ghost (Acts ii. 1). And as Aaron and his sons were commanded not to go out of the Tabernacle till they were consecrated, so the Apostles were commanded not to go forth from Jerusalem till they had been endued with power from on high (Luke xxiv. 49).

— seven days] A sacred symbol of perfection: see v. 11, and iv. 6.

— for seven days shall he consecrate you] Literally, in seven days shall he fill your hand (see Exod. xxix. 35), where it is prescribed that a bullock is to be offered as a sin-offering for seven days.

He shall consecrate. It is God who consecrates, by the ministry of those whom He appoints to consecrate. The fact that He appointed Moses to consecrate Aaron, the future head and father of the Levitical Priesthood, is a striking evidence of the important truth, that all the authority which God's Ministers exercise, is from Him; and that they are channels of grace, and not sources; and it also shows that whosoever is appointed by God to discharge a sacred office, is to be revered for God's sake, and that the commands which he utters as God's ambassador, and by God's command, are of God (see v. 31, and v. 36, and above, on Exod. xxix. 9); and that whosoever receives His Ministers, receives Him who has authorized them to minister. He who receives a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophet's reward (Matt. x. 40; John xiii. 20).

³⁵. shall ye abide] Literally, ye shall sit: καθῆσθε, Sept.; cp. S. Augustine, Qu. 24; Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vi. p. 278, note.

CHR. IX.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, as read in the Synagogue, and reaches to Lev. xi. 3—47.

The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is 2 Sam. vi. 1 to vii. 17, which describes the bringing up of the Ark by David to Mount Zion with sacrifice and joy, and his purpose to build a Temple for it.

1. on the eighth day] The eighth day, the day of Resursons, and the elders of Israel; ² And he said unto Aaron, ^b Take thee a young calf for a sin offering, ^c and a ram for a burnt offering, without blemish, and offer them before the LORD. ³ And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying, ^d Take ye a kid of the goats for a sin offering; and a calf and a lamb, both of the first year, without blemish, for a burnt offering; ⁴ Also a bullock and a ram for peace offerings, to sacrifice before the LORD; and ^e a meat offering mingled with oil: for ^f to day the LORD will appear unto you.

b Ex. 29. 1.
ch. 4. 3. & 8. 14.
c ch. 8. 13.
d ch. 4. 23.
Ezra 6. 17. & 10.
19.

e ch. 2. 4.

f ver. 6. 23.
Ex. 29. 43.

⁵ And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of the congregation: and all the congregation drew near and stood before the LORD.

⁶ And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commanded that ye should do: and ^g the glory of the LORD shall appear unto you.

g ver. 23.
Ex. 24. 16.
h ch. 4. 3.
1 Sam. 3. 14.
Heb. 5. 3. & 7.
27. & 9. 7.

⁷ And Moses said unto Aaron, Go unto the altar, and ^h offer thy sin offering, and thy burnt offering, and make an atonement for thyself, and for the people: and ⁱ offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them; as the LORD commanded.

i ch. 4. 16. 20.
Heb. 5. 1.

⁸ Aaron therefore went unto the altar, and slew the calf of the sin offering, which was for himself. ⁹ ^k And the sons of Aaron brought the blood unto him:

k ch. 8. 15.

and he dipped his finger in the blood, and ^l put it upon the horns of the altar, and poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar: ¹⁰ ^m But the fat, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver of the sin offering, he burnt upon the altar; ⁿ as the LORD commanded Moses. ¹¹ ^o And the flesh and the hide he burnt with fire without the camp. ¹² And he slew the burnt offering; and

l See ch. 4. 7.

m ch. 8. 16.

n ch. 4. 8.
o ch. 4. 11. & 8.
17.

rection to new life and glory: see on Matt. v. 3; xxvii. 52. Luke xxiv. 1. Rev. xvii. 10, 11. S. Barnabas (Epist. c. 15) says, "We keep the eighth day as a day of joy, for on it Jesus arose from the dead."

The eighth day was the first day after Aaron's consecration; it was the day of his entry on his priestly office. And upon the eighth day, or the first Day of the Week (Easter Day), Christ, our Great High Priest, arose from the dead; and having ascended into the true Holy of Holies, He was inaugurated in His everlasting Priesthood, and began His work of Intercession; and on the eighth Day (Whitsunday) He sent down the Comforter from heaven to consecrate His Holy Apostles.

The eighth day, according to the Law, was the day on which Circumcision was administered, in which children were admitted into covenant with God; which was the type of Baptism, the Sacrament of Resurrection to new life in Christ (Rev. xx. 5, 6), who rose from the dead on the eighth day, the day after the Sabbath, and raised us to new life and eternal glory in Himself (1 Pet. i. 3); and who, being made perfect, or consecrated (τελειωθεὶς) by sufferings (Heb. ii. 10; see above, viii. 22, 27), "became the Author of Eternal Salvation to all them that obey Him" (Heb. v. 9). And by the Sacrament of Baptism—the antitype of Circumcision, administered on the eighth day—we are consecrated to God, and are made Priests to Him (Rev. i. 6) in Christ, whose unction is then first shed upon us.

2. Take thee a young calf—and offer] Moses now no longer performs the priest's office as he had done, by God's express command, for the consecration of Aaron (see viii. 14, 15, 29); Aaron is now consecrated to the priesthood: and now Moses says, "Take thee and offer."

Since, therefore, even Moses, who had been employed to consecrate Aaron, did not venture to perform any priestly function after Aaron had been consecrated, it is evident that no one else might do so. "No man taketh this honour to himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron" (Heb. v. 4). Here then is a solemn warning against all irregular intrusions into the sacred office of the Christian priesthood (cp. Acts xix. 15. Jude v. 11; and above, on Exod. xxix. 11; and Num. xvi. 1—40).

These first offerings of Aaron, now consecrated to the Priesthood, appear to be foreshadowings of the offerings of the Nations to God on the day of Pentecost, as the first fruits of the consecration of Christ in the heavenly Temple after His ascension (Acts ii. 8—42); see Hesych. here, and compare the metaphor used by St. Paul concerning "the offering up of the Gentiles," Rom. xv. 16.

— a sin offering] The first act of Aaron after his consecration is to offer a sin-offering for himself, and after it, a burnt-offering; a proof of the infirmity of the Levitical Priesthood, and of its need of another Priest to make reconciliation for it: see Heb. vii. 24, 27.

3. Take ye] The next act is to offer for the people: see v. 7, and Heb. v. 1—3; vii. 24, 27.

4. peace offerings] Which could not be offered till after the sin-offering and burnt-offering (see iii. 1; viii. 14).

— a meat offering] See ii. 1.

— the LORD will appear unto you] Cp. v. 6. The fulfilment of this pre-announcement (v. 24) was a proof of the Divine Legation of Moses.

5. all the congregation] See above, viii. 3.

6. the glory of the LORD shall appear] The glory of the LORD appeared in the Tabernacle, when Aaron had been consecrated; and "the glory of the latter house was greater than that of the former" when Christ came to it (Hagg. ii. 9). The glory of the LORD appeared, when Aaron had been perfected, and had entered upon his priestly ministration; so the glory of divine grace bestowed by God the Holy Ghost appeared, when the One sacrifice had been "finished" (John xix. 30); and our Great High Priest was perfected, and entered on His Ministration in the heavenly Sanctuary: see v. 23.

Observe the coincidence of time. The glory of the LORD appeared in the Tabernacle on the eighth day. The glory of the LORD appeared to the Apostles, when Christ arose on that day and showed Himself to them. The glory of the LORD appeared when the Holy Ghost came down on that day. The glory of the LORD appeared to St. John in Patmos, when he was in the Spirit on that day (Rev. i. 10). The glory of the LORD is ever appearing on that day; it is seen by the faithful in Christian assemblies gathered together on the Lord's Day; especially in the reading and hearing of His Holy Word, and in the breaking of bread (Luke xxiv. 35; cp. Hesych. here, p. 87).

9. poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar] Aaron does not seem to have carried the blood into the Sanctuary to sprinkle it before the veil, in this sin-offering for himself, and in that for the people (v. 15), as was to be done with all other sin-offerings offered after this time (see iv. 4—7, and 13—18).

As yet Aaron, though consecrated, had not access to the Sanctuary; that was to be obtained by means of this first sacrifice in the Court; another evidence of the infirmity of the Levitical Priesthood, and of the greater glory of the evangelical covenant, in which the veil of the Holy of Holies has been rent in twain, and we have free access through the blood of Jesus to the Throne of Grace (Heb. x. 19).

p ch. 1. 5. & 8. 19. Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, ^p which he sprinkled round about upon the altar. ¹³ ^q And they presented the burnt offering unto him, with the pieces thereof, and the head: and he burnt them upon the altar. ¹⁴ ^r And he did wash the inwards and the legs, and burnt them upon the burnt offering on the altar.

s ver. 3. ¹⁵ ^s And he brought the people's offering, and took the goat, which was the sin offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first.

t ch. 1. 3, 10. ¹⁶ And he brought the burnt offering, and offered it ^t according to the || manner.

|| Or, ordinance.

u ver. 4.

ch. 2. 1, 2.

† Heb. filled his hand out of it.

x Ex. 29. 38.

y ch. 3. 1, & 7.

¹⁷ And he brought ^u the meat offering, and [†] took an handful thereof, and burnt it upon the altar, ^x beside the burnt sacrifice of the morning. ¹⁸ He slew also the bullock and the ram ^y for ^v a sacrifice of peace offerings, which was for the people: and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled upon the altar round about, ¹⁹ And the fat of the bullock and of the ram, the rump, and that which covereth the inwards, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver: ²⁰ And they put the fat upon the breasts, ^z and he burnt the fat upon the altar: ²¹ And the breasts and the right shoulder Aaron waved ^a for a wave offering before the LORD; as Moses commanded.

z ch. 3. 5, 16.

a Ex. 29. 24, 26. ch. 7. 30, 31, 32, 33, 34.

b Num. 6. 23.

Deut. 21. 5.

Luke 24. 50.

²² And Aaron lifted up his hand toward the people, and ^b blessed them, and came down from offering of the sin offering, and the burnt offering, and peace offerings. ²³ And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, and came out, and blessed the people: ^c and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people.

c ver. 6.

Num. 14. 10 &

16. 19, 42.

16. the burnt offering—according to the manner] Described Lev. i. The Burnt-offering represents Christ our Great High Priest offering Himself to God; and, secondarily, it represents the duty of every Christian to present himself as a sacrifice to God; it displays the whole Christian life dedicated to God, and accepted by Him; and the Meat-offerings, presented as a sweet-smelling sacrifice to God, are works done in faith and rendered well pleasing to Him through Christ, who offered Himself a sacrifice of a sweet-smelling savour to God (see S. Cyril, de Ador. p. 439).

17. the meat offering] or minchah. See above, ii. 1. — of the morning] The daily sacrifice, repeated every morning and evening (Exod. xxix. 38—41).

18. peace offerings] The completion of all; in which God, the Priest, and the people, all had their part, and were joined in spiritual communion; a figure of that Peace which is consummated in the one Great Sacrifice; and which is continually represented and celebrated with joy in the Christian Church, in the Holy Eucharist (see iii. 1; viii. 14).

22. Aaron lifted up his hand—and blessed them] Aaron lifted up his hand and blessed the people, and then he went into the Holy Place to burn incense on the golden altar. So our Great High Priest Christ Jesus having been consecrated by His sufferings, and having risen on the eighth day (see on v. 1), when He was about to commence the work of His everlasting Priesthood in heaven, “lifted up his hands over His disciples, and while He blessed them He was parted from them and carried up into heaven” (Luke xxiv. 50), and entered with His own blood within the veil into the true Holy of Holies, where “He ever liveth to make intercession for us” (Heb. vii. 25).

— Aaron—blessed them] In the form of Benediction prescribed to be used by Aaron in blessing the people, the word JEHOVAH occurs three times (Num. vi. 23—26), and God calls this act of Benediction, “the putting of His NAME upon the children of Israel.” Therefore, this Benediction foreshadowed the Mystery of the Ever-blessed Trinity, and of the blessings to be given to the World in the Name of the Triune God.

So our Great High Priest, when He was about to ascend into heaven, commanded His Apostles to go and baptize all Nations “into the NAME” of the One God in Three Persons, “The Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost” (Matt. xxviii. 19. See on Gen. ii. 4; Exod. vi. 3).

— came down] From the slope which led up to the altar (Exod. xx. 26. Aug., Qu. 28; and Keil, on Exod. xxvii. 4).

23. And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle] Aaron went into the holy place to burn incense on the holy altar, as prescribed Exod. xxx. 7, 8. Moses went in with him to direct him according to the commandment given by God (Jarchi, Targum Jonathan).

Our Great High Priest, Jesus Christ, having been consecrated by suffering, went into the true Tabernacle, even into Heaven itself, which He consecrated with His own blood to be the eternal mansion of all true believers (see Heb. ix. 11. 23; Ps. xv. and xxiv. 3—8. Dean Jackson on the Creed, book ix. c. 35; book x. c. 46).

Aaron first goes into the Tabernacle of God, and then comes out and blesses the People, thus signifying that all priestly blessing is from God (Eph. i. 3); and Aaron went in with Moses, and they blessed the people, showing thereby the Royalty of Christ joined to His Priesthood; and that all blessings given by the ministry of earthly Priests come through them as representatives of Christ, our Priest and King, and proceed from Him (Hesych.).

— the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people] Cp. Num. xvi. 19; xx. 6. The glory of the Lord appeared, probably, in the cloud (Exod. xvi. 10; xl. 34; cp. 1 Kings viii. 10—12); and certainly in the fire mentioned in v. 24; as at Elijah's offering (1 Kings xviii. 38); and at the consecration of the temple of Solomon, when the fire came down from heaven and consumed the burnt-offering and the sacrifices, and the glory of the Lord filled the house, and when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the Lord upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement and worshipped (2 Chron. vii. 1—3). After that our Great High Priest had been consecrated by suffering, and had risen from the dead on the eighth day, and had blessed His disciples, and had entered into the Holiest of all, even into heaven itself (see on v. 22), then the glory of the Lord appeared to all the people in the descent of the Holy Ghost in tongues of fire from heaven (Acts ii. 17). God poured out of His Spirit upon all flesh (Joel ii. 28; Acts ii. 18). The fire of His grace and love came down from heaven, and the Shechinah of His glorious Presence descended on the Church of Christ to abide for ever with her even unto the end, according to Christ's promise (John xiv. 16). “The Lord is among us, as in the holy place of Sinai. Thou art gone up on high, Thou hast led captivity captive, and received gifts for men, yea, even for thine enemies, that the Lord God might dwell among them” (Ps. lxxviii. 17, 18); a prophecy applied to Christ's Ascension and to the coming of the Holy Ghost, by St. Paul (Eph. iv. 8; cp. S. Cyril, c. Julian. x. p. 343; and Hesych. here).

24 And ^d there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt offering and the fat: which when all the people saw, ^e they shouted, and fell on their faces.

X. ¹ And ^a Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, ^b took either of them his censer, and put fire therein, and put incense thereon, and offered ^c strange fire before the LORD, which he commanded them not. ² And there ^d went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them, and they died before the LORD. ³ Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the LORD spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them ^e that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be ^f glorified. ^g And Aaron held his peace. ⁴ And Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of ^h Uzziel the uncle of Aaron, and said unto them, Come near, ⁱ carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp. ⁵ So John 13. 31, 32. & 14. 13. 2 Thess. 1. 10.

g Ps. 39. 9.

h Ex. 6. 18, 22. Num. 3. 19, 30.

i Luke 7. 12. Acts 5. 6, 9, 10, & 8. 2.

d Gen. 4. 4.
Judges 6. 21.
1 Kings 18. 38.
2 Chron. 7. 1.
Ps. 20. 3.
e 1 Kings 18. 39.
2 Chron. 7. 3.
Ezra 3. 11.
a ch. 16. 1. & 22.
9.
Num. 3. 3, 4. &
26. 61.
1 Chron. 24. 2.
b ch. 16. 12.
Num. 16. 18.
c Ex. 30. 9.
d ch. 9. 21.
Num. 16. 35.
2 Sam. 6. 7.
e Ex. 19. 22. & 29
43. ch. 21. 6, 17,
21.
Isa 52. 11.
Ezek. 20. 41 &
42. 13.
f Isa. 49. 3.
Ezek. 28. 22.
g

24. there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt offering and the fat] of the sin-offering and peace-offering, in token of gracious acceptance; as probably at Abel's sacrifice (Gen. iv. 4), and at Manoa's (Judges vi. 21); and at Elijah's (1 Kings xviii. 38), and at David's (1 Chron. xxi. 26), and Solomon's (2 Chron. vii. 1—3).

This fire which came down from heaven was carefully to be watched and fed; so that it might never go out (see vi. 12, 13). "Quench not the Spirit," says the Apostle. "Stir up the grace that is in thee" (1 Thess. v. 19; 2 Tim. i. 6).

It has been questioned by some, whether the descent of this fire was any thing more than a testimony of God's acceptance of the sacrifice, and an authorization of the Levitical Priesthood, and an acknowledgment of the validity of Aaron's ministrations. That it had this purpose cannot be doubted. Cp. 2 Chron. vii. 1—3.

Was the fire, which came down from heaven, designed to be kept up continually? and was it kept up by the Priests?

The Rabbinical authorities maintain the affirmative. Some of them assert that it did not go out till the days of Manasseh (see Chazkuni in Ainsworth, p. 48; Buxtorf, on the Sacred Fire, e. 2; and Marck's Essay on Levit. vi. 13; and Pfeiffer, Dubia Sacra, p. 136).

The objections of some (cp. Keil, p. 66), that common fire must have been used previously in the consecration of Aaron, and that therefore there could be no reason against the use of common fire in the sacred ministrations, are of no validity. At Aaron's consecration, Moses, who was not a Priest, officiated, by God's command, as a Priest; but after that consecration, Aaron and his sons—and they alone—ministered in the Priest's office (see ix. 2). Common fire was used in Aaron's consecration, but after it, when the fire had come down from heaven, that fire was never to go out (vi. 12, 13); and it was for their sin in using other fire, that Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, were punished, as we read in what follows immediately after the mention of the descent of this fire from the Lord: see x. 1.

— they shouted, and fell on their faces] As they did afterwards when the fire came down from heaven and consumed the burnt-offering, at the dedication of the Temple of Solomon. 2 Chron. vii. 1—3.

The fire which came down at Sinai at the consecration of the Tabernacle, and at Jerusalem at the consecration of the Temple, was seen by the children of Israel, and they fell on their faces and worshipped and praised the Lord. That fire is now extinct. After the destruction of Solomon's Temple it was never renewed, as the Jews themselves allow (Talmud Babylon. Yoma. c. 1).

But the fire of the Holy Spirit, which came down in tongues at Pentecost on the Church of Christ, was still more glorious in its original manifestation; its effects were seen by devout men out of every nation under heaven (Acts ii. 5. 8—11). It has gone forth as a living fire into all lands, and, though no longer visible, it still lives and burns in the writings of the Apostles and Evangelists, and in the hearts of the faithful throughout the world; and having been once kindled, it will never be put out (John xiv. 16).

CHR. X. 1.] Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron] who had been honoured with special privileges, and had been called up into Mount Sinai, and had seen the God of Israel. They are supposed to be known to the reader of Leviticus from the previous mention of them in Exodus (Exod. xxiv. 1. 9, 10).

Perhaps they were "exalted above measure through the abundance of their revelations" (2 Cor. xii. 7), and were tempted by spiritual pride to imagine that they were not bound by ordinary rules, in the discharge of the duties of the priest's office.

It has been inferred by some ancient Jewish interpreters from the prohibition which immediately follows against the drinking of wine by the Priests when they went into the Tabernacle, "lest they should die" (see v. 9), that Nadab and Abihu had been betrayed into forgetfulness of themselves, and of the sacred duties of their office, by indulgence in wine; perhaps in drinking the drink-offerings and eating the peace-offerings mentioned in the foregoing chapters; and this is confirmed by the precept given in xxii. 2, that the Priests should abstain from the Lord's portion of the sacrifice (cp. Ainsworth, and Bp. Patrick here; Graves on the Pentateuch, p. 67; Blunt, Coincidences, p. 61).

This record of their sin—the sin of the sons of Aaron, the brother of Moses—is another proof of the veracity of the sacred historian.

— censer] or fire-pan. See Num. xvi. 6.

— offered strange fire] Fire not taken from the holy altar (i. 7; vi. 12; ix. 24), in defiance of the divine command, "Ye shall offer no strange incense" (Exod. xxx. 9). Whenever God appoints a special thing to be used in His service, the substitution of any other thing in its place is sinful (ep. xvi. 12).

2. And there went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them] as by lightning; their bodies were not consumed (see v. 4). God had just before manifested His love by fire (ix. 24), and now He manifests His anger by fire. Fire is His minister, whether for mercy or judgment. Let no one worship fire, but let all fear its Creator and Lord, Who "is a consuming Fire" (Heb. xii. 29).

By fire they sinned, and by fire also they were punished. Pharaoh sinned by water (commanding the children of Israel to be cast into the Nile), and by water he was punished. So Korah and his company sinned with fire, and by fire they were consumed (see Num. xvi. 35). "Per quod quis peccat, per idem quoque plectitur idem."

The destruction of Nadab and Abihu for offering strange fire is used by the Christian Fathers as a warning against strange doctrines; as the destruction of Dathan and Abiram (Num. xvi. 32) is against schism. "Hæretici alienum ignem offerentes ad altare Dei, id est, alienas doctrinas, a caelesti igni comburentur, quemadmodum Nadab et Abihud; qui vero alteros adhortantur contra Ecclesiam Dei, remanent apud inferos voragine terræ absorpti, quemadmodum qui circa Core, Dathan, et Abirou" (S. Irenæus, iv. 43). See also S. Cyprian, de Unit. Eccl. p. 116, who says that they who decline from the rules of God's appointment, in doctrine or worship, and bring into the Church of God strange opinions and human inventions, are followers of Nadab and Abihu, and expose themselves to their punishment; cp. Theodoret, Qu. 9, in Levit.; and Hesych., p. 88; and Bede, Qu. 8, who say that these sons of Aaron offering strange fire at God's Altar, represent those who neglect the commands of God, and seek after strange doctrines and human inventions.

3. I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me] See 1 Pet. iii. 15, "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts;" and as the same Apostle says, "Judgment begins at the house of God" (1 Pet. iv. 17), so it was here. Cp. our Lord's words, Luke xii. 47.

— Aaron held his peace] He did not murmur against God. "I was dumb (says David), and opened not my mouth, for it was Thy doing" (Ps. xxxix. 9). In his afflictions, "Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly" (Job i. 22).

4. Mishael and Elzaphan] Chiefs of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites. Num. iii. 19. 30.

— carry your brethren] Mishael and Elzaphan were their father's cousins: on this use of the word "brethren" for near they went near, and carried them in their coats out of the camp; as Moses had said.

⁶ And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, ^k Uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes; lest ye die, and lest ^l wrath come upon all the people: but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel, bewail the burning which the LORD hath kindled. ⁷ ^m And ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: ⁿ for the anointing oil of the LORD is upon you. And they did according to the word of Moses.

⁸ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, saying, ⁹ ^c Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations: ¹⁰ And that ye may ^p put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean; ¹¹ ^q And that ye may teach the children of Israel all the statutes which the LORD hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses.

k Ex. 33. 5.
ch. 13. 45. & 21.
1. 10.
Num. 6. 6, 7.
Deut. 33. 9
Ezek. 24. 16, 17.
1 Num. 16. 22, 46.
Josh. 7. 1. & 22.
18. 20.
2 Sam. 24. 1.
m ch. 21. 12.
n Ex. 28. 41.
ch. 8. 30.
o Ezek. 44. 21.
Luke 1. 15.
1 Tim. 3. 3.
Tit. 1. 7.

p ch. 11. 47. & 20.
25.
Jer. 15. 19.
Ezek. 22. 26. &
44. 23.
q Deut. 24. 8.
Neh. 8. 2, 8, 9, 13.
Jer. 18. 18. Mal. 2. 7.

kinsmen, see Bp. Pearson, Art. iii. p. 175. If this command had not been given to their cousins, it is probable that their brethren, Eleazar and Ithamar, would have thought themselves bound by ties of natural affection to bury their dead—Nadab and Abihu—and thus they would have been disqualified for attendance on the Priest's office at the Passover, which was now at hand.

It seems probable that this act of burial disabled the Levites from keeping the Passover (see Num. ix. 6, 7; and Blunt, Coincidences, xiv. p. 63).

6, 7. Uncover not your heads] Literally, make not your heads loose, which the Sept., Vulg., Syriac, and Kimchì explain by "do not bare your heads" (Gesen., p. 690); "do not shave your heads;" others, by "do not let your hair flow loosely" (cp. xiii. 45. Keil, p. 69; and so Arabic and Onkelos. Cp. Buxtorf, Synagog. p. 706).

The first interpretation seems preferable; "do not bare your heads," do not put off your priestly turbans; and be not like mourners for the dead (see below, xiii. 45). Here is a clear evidence of the uncleanness of sin, and of the misery of its fruit, death—apart from Christ. Here it is expressly commanded, that a father, who is a Priest, should not mourn for a dead son; and a brother, who is a Priest, may not touch a dead brother, lest he die; they may not put on the garments of mourning for him, they may not quit the Tabernacle to go and weep at his grave, "for the anointing oil of the Lord is upon them."

On the prohibition of mourning to the Priests, see below, chap. xxi. ; and S. Jerome, Epist. ad Fabiolam de Veste Sacerd. ii. p. 574.

Such was the command of Moses to Aaron and his sons; "and they did according to the word of Moses" (v. 7). These commands—stern and severe as they seem—are indeed merciful, even in their sternness and severity; for they teach what all men need to know, the foulness of Sin, and the uncleanness of Death, in our natural state.

They show the inability of the Levitical Law to stem the tide of impurity, when they exhibit to us Aaron and his sons forbidden to bury and mourn over children and brethren; they show the impassable gulf between Death and Life, and between Sin and God, in the natural state of man, and under the Levitical Law. And thus they give us some notion of the debt of thankfulness and love which we owe to Jesus Christ, who is "the Resurrection and the Life;" and to His blessed Gospel which brought Life and Immortality to light.

The Son of God has taken our nature. The WORD was made flesh and dwelt among us (John i. 14). The Son of God Himself has become the Son of Man, the second Adam; EMMANUEL, God with us (Matt. i. 23), God manifest in the flesh (1 Tim. iii. 16); and He is our great and merciful High Priest who brings us near to God, Aaron and his sons, the Levitical Priests, were not able to bury their sons and brethren, lest they should be made unclean thereby, and be disabled for ministering to God in holy things. But Jesus Christ our High Priest—our Father and Brother, our All in All—came and touched the bier of the widow's son at Nain, and said, "Young man, I say unto thee, Arise" (Luke vii. 14). He took the damsel by the hand, and said Talitha cumi, and she arose. He was not made unclean by the touch of Death. No; he gave Life thereby. The Levitical Law testified to the uncleanness of death, the fruit of sin, but could not take it away. Christ, in whom is the Life (John i. 4), and in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead (Col. ii. 9), who is JEHOVAH, the EVERLIVING ONE, the All-holy One, has come and touched us all by His Incarnation, and by our Incorporation in His mystical body, and has vivified and cleansed us thereby. He has died for us; He has been buried, He has lain in the grave, He has risen again, He has ascended into heaven; and we His members rise in faith and hope by the Resurrection of Him who is our Head, and we ascend by His Ascension into heaven. Thus He has taken away the curse of Sin, He has sanctified Death, He has hallowed and beautified the Grave, and made it the bright path to a glorious Resurrection and to a blessed Immortality.

No longer, therefore, under the Gospel, is Death an unclean thing. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord" (Rev. xiv. 13).

It is remarkable, that no sooner was Aaron inaugurated in his earthly Priesthood by his consecration and reception into the Tabernacle (ix. 1), than we hear of Death and Burial; and no sooner was Christ inaugurated in His heavenly Priesthood, by His ascension into heaven; and no sooner were the Apostles inaugurated in their Priesthood by the unction of the Holy Ghost, sent down by Christ from heaven, than we hear again of Death and Burial.

But how great is the contrast between the former cases, as recorded here in Leviticus, and the latter cases, as recorded in the Acts of the Apostles! Here Death is an unclean thing, and defiles; but there it is a holy thing. For Christ has died, been buried, and risen from the dead. He has taken away the sting of Death (1 Cor. xv. 55), and has sanctified the Grave. Therefore, after the Ascension of Christ, and His inauguration in His Priesthood, and after the giving of the Holy Ghost, we read that "devout men carried Stephen to his burial" (Acts viii. 2). Holy men collected the bones of Martyrs from the funeral pile (Martyr Polycarp, 18), and they were interred in Christian Churches, beneath the Altar of God, where the holy mysteries are celebrated by Christian Priests, which give to the Christian worshipper the gracious pledges of Resurrection and Life Eternal, when he kneels there and receives the Holy Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ (cp. below, on Acts viii. 2).

Thus the Levitical Law, in its precepts here rehearsed, concerning Death and Burial, when read by the light of the Gospel, reveals to us the true character of our own condition by nature, and shows us the wretchedness of our unregenerate state, and displays to us the blessings we receive from Him who is "the RESURRECTION and the LIFE."

7. the anointing oil of the LORD is upon you] In a spiritual sense this is true of all Christians, who by virtue of their membership in Christ our Divine Aaron partake of His chrism or unction. "Ye have an unction from the Holy One" (1 John ii. 20. 27). All Christians are Priests in a certain sense (Rev. i. 6; v. 10), and all have need to remember this.

9. Do not drink wine] See above, on v. 1.
— strong drink] Hebrew, shecar, whence the Greek σικερα (Luke i. 15), whether wine (Num. xxviii. 7), or beverage from barley (Herod., ii. 77), or from honey and dates (S. Jerome, iv. p. 364. Gesen., p. 823. Jahn, Archæol. § 144).

11. that ye may teach] It was, therefore, the Priest's duty to teach, as well as to offer sacrifice. "The Priest's lips should ¹² And Moses spake unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons that were left, Take ^r the meat offering that remaineth of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and eat it without leaven beside the altar: for ^s it is most holy: ¹³ And ye shall eat it in the holy place, because it is thy due, and thy sons' due, of the sacrifices of the LORD made by fire: for ^t so I am commanded.

r Ex. 29. 2.
ch. 6. 16.
Num. 18. 9, 12.
s ch. 21. 22.

t ch. 2. 3. & 6. 16.

¹⁴ And ^u the wave breast and heave shoulder shall ye eat in a clean place; thou, and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee: for they be thy due, and thy sons' due, which are given out of the sacrifices of peace offerings of the children of Israel. ¹⁵ ^x The heave shoulder and the wave breast shall they bring with the offerings made by fire of the fat, to wave it for a wave offering before the LORD; and it shall be thine, and thy sons' with thee, by a statute for ever; as the LORD hath commanded.

u Ex. 29. 21, 26, 27.
ch. 7. 31, 34.
Num. 18. 11.

x ch. 7. 29, 30, 34.

¹⁶ And Moses diligently sought ^y the goat of the sin offering, and, behold, it was burnt: and he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying, ¹⁷ ^z Wherefore have ye not eaten the sin offering in the holy place, seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you to bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the LORD?

y ch. 9. 3, 15.

z ch. 6. 26, 29.

¹⁸ Behold, ^a the blood of it was not brought in within the holy place: ye should indeed have eaten it in the holy place, ^b as I commanded. ¹⁹ And Aaron said unto Moses, Behold, ^c this day have they offered their sin offering and their burnt offering before the LORD; and such things have befallen me: and if I had eaten the sin offering to day, ^d should it have been accepted in the sight of the LORD? ²⁰ And when Moses heard that, he was content.

a ch. 6. 30.

b ch. 6. 26.

c ch. 9. 8, 12.

d Jer. 6. 20.
& 14. 12.
Hos. 9. 4.
Mal. 1. 10, 13.

keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth, for he is the messenger of the Lord of Hosts" (Mal. ii. 7. Cp. Ezek. xlv. 23). The Priests neglected this duty of teaching (Ezek. xxii. 26. Hos. v. 1), and the consequence was, that they were almost superseded in later days by the Scribes and Lawyers. Here is a warning for modern times. Is there not a danger, lest, by neglect of catechizing and of personal teaching in Parochial Churches and Schools, the Christian Priests may be superseded and supplanted by Schoolmasters?

^{12. the meat offering}] See ix. 17. Num. xviii. 9.
— it is most holy] A type of the living Bread that came down from heaven (John vi. 51), and with its drink-offering it prepared the way for the right understanding of the divine words, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you" (John vi. 53).

^{13. in the holy place}] Rather, a holy place (vi. 16).
^{14. wave breast}] Of the people's peace-offering (cp. Exod. xix. 24; above, vii. 30, 34; ix. 18—21; Num. xviii. 11).

The Wave-offering and Heave-offering pre-signified the gifts of praise, thanksgiving, and alms, which are presented by the devout worshipper in the Christian Shalem, or Holy Eucharist; and which being as it were heaved and waved before the Lord, with the grateful aspirations of a devout heart lifted up to Him, and owning Him to be the Author and Giver of all Good, sanctify the rest of the substance from which they are offered as firstfruits (cp. Mede's Discourse on the different kinds of sacrifices, Book i., Disc. 51, pp. 281—295); and they symbolized the Resurrection of Him, by whom we have peace with God; and showed forth His glorious Ascension, who fills all things (Eph. iv. 10), and to whom the devout worshipper in heart and spirit ascends. Therefore, in the Christian Shalem the Church says, "Sursum corda,"—

"Lift up your hearts."
"We lift them up unto the Lord."
"Let us give thanks unto our Lord God."
"It is meet and right so to do."

— a clean place] within the camp. Cp. Num. v. 2.
^{16. behold, it was burnt}] instead of being eaten by the Priests, according to the commandment vi. 29. Here is clear evidence of the symbolical significance of these Levitical Ordinances. If the burning and the eating of a sacrifice had not each of them a special meaning, it could not have been a matter of so grave importance, whether it was eaten or burnt. But Moses was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, because they allowed that part of the sin-offering to be burnt, which ought to have been eaten. The act of eating, as he himself explained it, signified that the Priest, by eating, bore the iniquity of the congregation (v. 17), "rescendō incorporabant quasi delictum, populique reatum in se recipiant" (Deyling, Obs. i. 45. 2. A Lapide); and thus they foreshadowed Christ, taking our sins upon Himself (1 Pet. ii. 24). For since the Priest was compassed with infirmity, and needed a sin-offering for himself (see viii. 14), it is evident that in this act of bearing the sins of others, and of receiving them into himself by eating, he represented some other Priest who was not compassed with infirmity, and who, being free from sin, and endued with divine power, could not only bear sin, but could also take it away (cp. Isa. liii. 6. John i. 29. Heb. v. 1, 2; vii. 11. 26, 27).

^{18. the blood of it was not brought in}] And therefore it was a sacrifice of such a kind that it ought to have been eaten. See vi. 30.

^{19. Aaron said unto Moses}] He pleads the cause of his sons, and his own. In remonstrating with Aaron's sons Moses had censured their father: but he had spared him for the sake of his office; and Aaron replies for them.

— this day] on which my sons have been taken from me, by an awful visitation from heaven.

— have they offered] They, the people of Israel, have brought near (hikribu). Some expositors suppose that they refers to Aaron's own sons; they offered their own sin-offering, and after the manifestation of the divine judgment, were so impressed with a sense of their own sinfulness that they did not feel in a fit state to eat the holy things (Baumgarten, Keil). But the former interpretation seems preferable.

— such things] as the sudden death of my children, by fire from the Lord. In the agony of his grief, and in his awe of the divine judgment, Aaron cannot bear to describe what things they were which had occurred to him. How natural and true this is!

— have befallen me] Literally, have called me (the verb here used, kara, to meet, to happen to, means in its primary sense, to cry, to call, and is connected with κράζω, κηρύσσω, cry, and is softened into καλέω), these things have cried out to me, as by a solemn voice from God: such is the nature of divine judgments: as the Prophet says, "The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, and the man of wisdom shall see Thy name: Hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it" (Micah vi. 9).

— if I had eaten the sin offering to day] When my sons have been taken from me by death, and I am filled with sorrow

XI. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying unto them,

^a Deut. 14, 4.
Acts 10, 12, 14.

² Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^a These are the beasts which ye shall for them, should it have been accepted in the sight of the Lord, who requires them to rejoice who eat before Him? (Deut. xii. 7. Cp. Deut. xxvi. 14.) This feeling is explained by the words of the prophet Hosea (ix. 4), "They shall not offer wine-offerings to the Lord, neither shall they be pleasing unto Him: their sacrifices shall be unto them as the bread of mourners; all that eat thereof shall be polluted: for their bread for their soul shall not come into the house of the Lord." This is the interpretation given by Maimonides and others (see Ainsworth, p. 51). Or perhaps the meaning may be—Inasmuch as such fearful things have happened to me, it is to be feared that I also am now an object of God's anger, and am therefore in a state of sin, and that my offerings have not been accepted for the remission of my sin; and being therefore in this state of sin, and estrangement from God, how could I eat that offering which would imply communion with Him (cp. Baumgarten and Keil)? And this interpretation seems preferable.

The incidents recorded in this chapter afford clear proofs of the temporary and preparatory character of the Levitical Priesthood.

Human Nature is God's work. Tears are a natural fountain gushing forth from our common humanity. Priests are men; and, as men, they must mourn when their children are taken from them. But Aaron is not permitted to mourn for his sons: their brethren may not bury them.

Here, therefore, we see the imperfect and provisional character of the Levitical Law. "That Law was added because of transgressions" (Gal. iii. 19). It was given to show man his own sinfulness, and the misery of his own state. It manifested the evil, but could not cure it; and by its inability to heal the disease, it showed the need of another Physician. It made man yearn for another Law, which could heal those wounds of suffering Humanity, which the Law had revealed. Sin was unclean, Death was unclean; they were the deadly fruits of the Fall. Even the Priest, who was dedicated to the daily service of a Holy God in the Holy Place, and who was appointed to be the Mediator of the people, and to offer their expiatory sacrifices for sin, was forbidden to bury the dead, and might not mourn for his own children. Thus, the corruption of Man's Nature was seen to be a bar to the exercise of the best feelings of humanity; and to have introduced a jarring discord into the music of that Nature which came from the hand of God.

The Levitical Law, therefore, by the very disabilities which it imposed on its own Ministers, proclaimed its own imperfection (Heb. vii. 11). Thus, also, it prepared the way for the Coming of that merciful High Priest, the ever-blessed Son of God, who is the Author of Human Nature, and who took that Nature and joined it to God in Himself, and who touched the bier of the Widow's son (Luke vii. 12, 14), and wept at the grave of Lazarus (John xi. 35), and has taken away the sting of Death, and has consecrated the Grave, and has restored the music of Humanity, and has given to it more than Paradaisaical sweetness, and has made sympathy with the mourner to be a part of His religion, and has made the Burial of the Dead to be an act of Christian love, and who says in the Gospel, "Blessed are they that mourn" (Matt. v. 4); "Blessed are ye that weep" (Luke vi. 21); and by His holy Apostles, "Weep with them that weep" (Rom. xii. 15); "Pure religion, and undefiled" (observe the statement, Mourning no longer defiles) "before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction" (James i. 27); and Who has made peace between God and man; and between Man and himself; and has joined all men together as children of God, and as fellow-members in Himself.

CHAP. XI.—PRELIMINARY NOTE.

On the Difference between Animals which may and which may not be eaten.

What is the connexion between this and the foregoing chapter? And what was the design of Almighty God in these prohibitions which follow?

The foregoing chapter prohibits the exercise of natural affections in certain cases, and thus it shows the evil effects of the corruption of Man's Nature, consequent on the Fall. This prohibition, as we have seen, has been removed by the Son of God, who has restored the harmony of Man's Nature by His Incarnation, Death, and Resurrection, and Ascension into heaven: see note above, on x. 6. 19.

These prohibitions of the Levitical Law, which affected those persons most painfully who were brought most near to God, namely, the Levitical Priests, were an evidence of the alienation of Man from God; and a proof that the Levitical Law was not designed to be perpetual, and was to be succeeded by a better Dispensation, for which it prepared the way.

The prohibitions in the present chapter follow naturally on those contained in the preceding.

Those prohibitions concerned the human affections.

These relate to the human appetite. The former restrained the exercise of the one; the latter control the indulgence of the other.

At the Creation, Man received Dominion from God over all the creatures (see Gen. i. 28; ii. 20).

But this Dominion over the creatures was forfeited by Man, in great measure, by the Fall, consequent on the vicious indulgence of the appetite.

After the Flood God gave to Noah a new grant of every living thing for meat (see Gen. ix. 3). But this grant was abused by man's sin.

The Levitical Law "was added because of transgressions." Its design was to manifest man's sin, and to show his need of a Redeemer (Gal. iii. 19; and see Introduction to Romans, p. 191).

One of the ways in which God showed his disapproval of man's sin, was, by forbidding him the use of certain of His creatures; and by imposing a rein on his carnal appetite, by which he had fallen from grace, and which he indulged, in an abuse of those creatures.

Hence the Levitical Law contained a prohibition of certain animals, as not to be eaten.

It is observed by Origen (in Num., Hom. 16), that many of the animals forbidden as unclean were used by heathens as instruments of enchantment and divination: such were serpents, eagles, ravens. "Pythonibus dracones, aliique serpentes servire dicuntur."

And this observation leads us to remark, that these prohibitions had also another use, that of distinguishing the Israelites from other Nations, and of keeping them apart as a peculiar people, and of fencing them off from the world, and deterring them from participation in idolatrous sacrifices, where many of the animals here mentioned were eaten; and of maintaining the knowledge of God among them as the depositaries of His truth (see St. Peter's speech to Cornelius, Acts x. 28; and cp. Gal. ii. 12).

Thus the Levitical prohibitions were a restraint upon idolatry, and a safeguard of true religion. They were like a social hedge by which the Ancient Hebrew Church was girt around, and was protected from worldly incursion. See v. 44—47, and Novalian, de Cibis Judaicis, c. 4.

It is also probable, as some of the Fathers observe, that Almighty God, in these prohibitions of the Levitical Law, designed to guard the Israelites against the creature-worship prevalent in Egypt, by denouncing as unclean many of the animals which were deified there.

These prohibitions had also a sanitary purpose: see Dr. Mead's Works, iii. p. 167.

But further, these prohibitions, like every thing else in the Levitical Law, had also a moral and spiritual meaning.

Our Lord Himself describes moral qualities of men by reference to the animal creation. False teachers are wolves (Matt. vii. 15. Cp. Acts xx. 29). The Jews are compared to serpents and vipers (Matt. xxiii. 33). An enemy of the truth is called "that fox" (Luke xiii. 32). Unclean persons, and heretical teachers, are called dogs (see Matt. vii. 6. Phil. iii. 2. 2 Pet. ii. 22). Christian prudence and Christian innocence are described in the Gospel by reference to the animal creation: "Be ye wise as serpents, and harmless as doves" (Matt. x. 16).

The Levitical prohibition of a certain class of animals had a moral use, in showing to man what kind of temper and habits he himself ought to eschew, and what kind of society he ought to shun; and the preference of certain other animals (those that part the hoof and chew the cud, v. 3) might well be a moral directory to him with regard to the spiritual dispositions and exercises which God approves and loves.

On this portion of the subject, see the speech of the High Priest Eleazar to Ptolemy Philadelphus, in Aristæus ap. Euseb., Præp. Ev. viii. 9. S. Barnabas, Epist. cap. 10. Theophil. Antioch., ii. p. 110. S. Irenæus, v. c. 8. Clemens Alexand., Pædagog. iii. p. 297; Stromat. v. p. 677. Origen, c. Cels. iv.

eat among all the beasts that are on the earth. ³ Whatsoever parteth the hoof, and is clovenfooted, and cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat. ⁴ Nevertheless these shall ye not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the hoof: as the camel, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you. ⁵ And the coney, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you. ⁶ And the hare, because

p. 225, and in Lev., Hom vii. Novatian, de Cib. Judaic. cap. 2 and 3. Euseb., Præp. Evangelica viii. 9. Theodoret, Qu. in Lev. xi. S. Cyril, c. Julian, p. 317; de Ador. lib. xiv. p. 503. S. Augustine, c. Faustun vi. 7; c. Adimantun Manichæum, c. 15 in Psalm 46. Prosper Aquitan., de Prom. ii. 7. Hesych., in Lev. p. 92. Bede, Qu. in Lev. c. 9. See also Wagenseil on the Mishna Sota, 1171, and the interesting Essay of the Rev. William Jones, of Nayland, entitled "Zoologia Ethica," on the Mosaic distinction of animals into clean and unclean, Works, ii. pp. 97—175; and especially Richard Hooker, E. P. IV. vi. 3.

Another main purpose of these prohibitions was to show the real character of the Levitical Law, and that it was a preparatory dispensation for a more perfect economy; and to make men look forward with faith, hope, and desire for the coming of Christ, who would restore Man to his place in Creation, and to the dominion over the creatures, which he had forfeited by Adam's fall; and would break down that fence which separated the Israelites from other nations (Eph. ii. 14); and by removing the Levitical distinctions between clean and unclean meats, would bring Men back again into one common family and household, and make them sit down together, as it were, at one common table, as children of one Father, in the Universal Church of God.

"The Earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof" (1 Cor. x. 26. 28). "Every creature of God is good" (1 Tim. iv. 4). "Nothing is unclean of itself" (Rom. xiv. 14). "To the pure all things are pure" (Titus i. 15). "Meat commendeth us not to God" (1 Cor. viii. 8). So says the Holy Spirit Himself by the mouth of the great "Hebrew of the Hebrews," St. Paul; and Christ Himself assures the world in the Gospel, that "there is nothing from without a man that coming into him can defile him" (Mark vii. 15).

It could not be, therefore, that a Law, such as the Levitical Code, could be designed by God to be perpetual, which proscribed the use of a large part of His creatures, and debarred man, whom He had created lord of Creation, from the exercise of his dominion over them.

These prohibitions, therefore, of the Levitical Law prepared the way for the Coming of the Second Adam, "Who is God blessed for ever" (Rom. ix. 5), the Creator and Lord of all, and Who by His Incarnation restored to man the dominion over the creatures, which he had lost in the first Adam, and gave to us the free and comfortable use of all the creatures. Therefore, in the Vision of Joppa, where St. Peter saw the sheet let down from heaven containing all manner of creatures, clean and unclean, the Divine voice said to St. Peter the Apostle of the Circumcision, "Rise, Peter, kill and eat" (Acts x. 13). Incorporate those creatures in thyself; "what God hath cleansed, that call not thou common" (see on Acts x. 15); and the Holy Spirit expresses the joy and triumph of emancipated and reinstated Humanity, when he says by St. Paul, "All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's" (1 Cor. iii. 21—23). "All things are lawful for me" (1 Cor. vi. 12, 13). "God hath created them to be received with thanksgiving by them that believe" (1 Tim. iv. 3). "It is good that the heart be established with grace, and not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein" (Heb. xiii. 9), inasmuch as these ordinances of meats and drinks were imposed on the Hebrew Nation "until the time of reformation" in Christ (Heb. ix. 10), in whom these restrictions are removed (Col. ii. 14. 16—20).

No longer now are the Jews to be kept separated from other nations. The wall of partition has been broken down. The fence has been removed. All Creation is enfranchised; and Man is raised to more than the original dignity which he had in Adam in Paradise (see Ps. viii. 4—9. Heb. ii. 6—8; and Bp. Sanderson's excellent remarks, quoted below, on 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23), which may serve as a comment on the design and scope of this chapter.

Thus, then, these prohibitions of the Levitical Law, when read by the light shed upon them from the Gospel, reveal to us the true relation of the Animal Creation to Man, in his material and unregenerate state, and display to us the blessings we have received from the Incarnation of the Son of God.

At the same time, let us not abuse God's grace into an occasion of sin, and pervert our liberty into licentiousness. On the one hand, St. Paul warns us against the Judaizing error of those who would require us to abstain, as of necessity, "from meats which God has created to be received with thanksgiving by them which believe and know the truth." So, on the other hand, he teaches us to sanctify the creatures to ourselves by a reverent and holy use. "Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving; because it is sanctified by the Word of God and Prayer" (1 Tim. iv. 3, 4. Hooker, II. iii.).

On this subject, in addition to the works above mentioned, the reader may refer to S. Cyril, de Adoratione, lib. xi. Spencer, de Legibus Hebræorum, lib. i. ep. vii. pp. 116—140. Lewis's Hebrew Republic, chap. xvi.—xix. References to modern works which treat on this subject, such as those of Michaelis, Vater, Iess, Oedmann, Seetzen, Lengerke, V. Bohlen, and the earlier ones of Maimonides, Reinkard, and Hottinger, may be seen in Winer, R. W. B. ii. pp. 492, 493; and Keil's Commentary on Leviticus. See, also, Dr. Hayman, in Dr. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, Art. "Unclean Meats," ii. p. 1587.

CII. XI. 1. the beasts] Heb. chayyah; literally, living creature, differing from behemah, cattle (the word rendered beasts, in the second clause), from baham, to be dumb.

God begins with declaring what may be eaten; and thus declares His own original design of beneficence to man. The prohibitions, consequent on man's sin, follow afterwards.

3. Whatsoever parteth the hoof, and is clovenfooted, and cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat] Not that which has a solid hoof, as the horse, nor that which parteth it, but not entirely, as the camel, but that which parteth the hoof into two, both above and beneath, as the ox; and not that which divideth the foot into claws, as the dog. Also, that which cheweth—literally, which makes to ascend—the cud, gerah, from garah in piel to stir up, and garar, to gargle; cp. garon, the throat, whence probably γέπαρος, and grus, crane, so called from the length of the throat; see Gesen., 178. 180.

In the classification of animals we may see an image of mankind. St. Peter's sheet, containing clean and unclean animals, represented Man, viz., the Jewish and Gentile world (Acts x. 28). That passage of the New Testament is the clue to the interpretation of this portion of the Old (Origen, Hom. vii.).

The act of eating the flesh represents communion in that which is eaten, and assimilation to it. We are hallowed by spiritual feeding on His flesh, and made like Christ in the Holy Eucharist (Origen).

The animals which part the hoof walk most surely; those who ruminant digest most easily, and thrive most by their food (cp. Jones, pp. 116—118).

In this combination of parting the hoof and chewing the cud the union of two moral and spiritual qualities is supposed to be symbolized, viz. sure walking, in the way of God's law (Rom. ii. 18; iii. 20—22. Gal. ii. 12—14. Eph. v. 15), and meditation upon it (Ps. i. 2; Theodoret, and other fathers, quoted on v. 1. S. Augustine, on Ps. xlvii., who says that the hearer of God's Word ought to be like those animals that chew the cud; he ought not only to feed on it, but to ruminant upon it. Cp. Ainsworth, Mather, and W. Jones, pp. 117—119).

— shall ye eat] May ye eat. The act of eating represents communion with, incorporation of, and so was significant, spiritually, of moral sympathy with those persons whose condition and qualities were symbolized by the animals specified—see on Acts x. 13—17.

4. camel] The camel chews the cud, but does not divide the hoof above and beneath; its foot is severed, but not cloven; it has a ball behind on which it treads (see Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 134); the swine divides the hoof, but does not chew the cud. Both are forbidden. Spiritual meditation and holy living are both necessary. Religious practice ought to be united with religious contemplation, as St. Peter and St. John were joined together: see Acts iii. 1; and v. 3.

6. the hare] Heb. arnebeth, found only here, and Deut.

he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you. ⁷ And the swine, though he divide the hoof, and be clovenfooted, yet he cheweth not the cud; ^b he is unclean to you. ⁸ Of their flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcase shall ye not touch; ^c they are unclean to you.

⁹ ^d These shall ye eat of all that are in the waters: whatsoever hath fins and scales in the waters, in the seas, and in the rivers, them shall ye eat. ¹⁰ And all that have not fins and scales in the seas, and in the rivers, of all that move in the waters, and of any living thing which is in the waters, they shall be an ^e abomination unto you: ¹¹ They shall be even an abomination unto you; ye shall not eat of their flesh, but ye shall have their carcases in abomination. ¹² Whatsoever hath no fins nor scales in the waters, that shall be an abomination unto you.

¹³ ^f And these are they which ye shall have in abomination among the fowls; they shall not be eaten, they are an abomination: the eagle, and the ossifrage, b Isa. 65. 4. & 66. 3, 17.

c Isa. 52. 11.
See Matt. 15. 11, 20.
Mark 7. 2, 15, 18.
Acts 10. 14, 15. & 15. 29.
Rom. 14. 14, 17.
1 Cor. 8. 8.
Col. 2. 16, 21.
Heb. 9. 10.
d Deut. 14. 9.
e ch. 7. 18.
Deut. 14. 3.

f Deut. 14. 12.

xiv. 7, translated δαρπύου by Septuagint (which changes the order of the verses here); and lepus, by Vulg., and so the other ancient Versions. There seems little doubt, therefore, that the animal here mentioned is the hare.

It has been objected by some that the hare is not a ruminating animal. Ehrenberg (Mammalia, Heft 3) says, that only the "mammifera bisulca" are found to chew the cud; and therefore it is alleged, that Moses has here fallen into a mistake.

But the poet Cowper—who kept hares and observed their habits diligently—says (Works, ii. 364) that one of his "three hares chewed the cud all day till evening."

We have similar statements in Bochart, Hierozoicon (ii. p. 403), ed. Rosenmüller, who refers to Linnaeus in support of the assertion that the hare appears to ruminate, and in fact does bring up from the œsophagus portions of its food and chews them; and see in the note of J. D. Michaelis here, who observes, "Although there may have been no genuine rumination in the strict sense of the term, yet the act of the hare munching its food went popularly by the name of rumination, or chewing again; and the Israelites were wont to call that habit of the hare, rumination." See also Kitto's Encyclopedia, Art. "Hare;" Mr. Tristram's Travels in Palestine, p. 251; and Kiel's note here, p. 74, who remarks, that although the hare has not the four stomachs of ruminating animals, yet a common observer would suppose from the movement of its mouth that it does ruminate, and Linnaeus classes it with ruminating animals, as Moses does, speaking from the popular opinion with regard to it.

The Hebrew Lawgiver's design—which is the main thing to be considered—was to prevent the Hebrew people from eating what was unclean.

It is evident that the Israelites might be led to infer from this appearance of rumination (which was all that they could judge by, for they are not supposed to be anatomists), that they were at liberty to eat the hare. The Legislator therefore calls their attention to another mark, and that an external one, which they could observe, namely, the hare's feet. He may be supposed to say to them, Let it be granted that the hare does ruminate; I allow that it seems to do so, and you may therefore be induced to suppose that it is a clean animal, and you may be tempted to eat it; but be on your guard; do not be deceived by its appearance; look at the other test which I have prescribed; observe its feet; it does not part the hoof; it is therefore unclean, and you must not eat of it.

It is hardly necessary, therefore, to resort to the treatises of natural Philosophers and Anatomists, who report from the result of the dissection of hares, that it has some of the internal marks of a ruminating animal. The candid interpreter of Holy Scripture will observe, that the Legislator builds nothing on the supposition of the hare's rumination; but, on the contrary, guards the Israelites against being misled by the semblance of rumination into a belief that the hare might be eaten, and that he refers to the criterion of its feet, by which they are to be deterred from eating as clean, what is proved to be unclean by the fact that it does not part the hoof.

7. the swine] Cp. 2 Pet. ii. 22.

8. carcase] What dies of itself: θηνηματιον, Sept.; 'cadaver,' Vulg.

9. in the waters] Christ compares men to good or bad fish (Matt. iv. 18); and thus teaches us to understand these Levitical prohibitions in a spiritual sense (Origen, Hom. vii.).

— fins and scales] In Egypt fishes without scales are still regarded with antipathy (Lane, Mod. Eg. p. 95).

Fins for guidance; scales for protection; an emblem of the Christian life, which has a sure guide and guard in God's grace (Jones).

Such fish as these are contrasted with those which do not swim in the pure water, but live like eels in the mud: and the former are emblems of holy life, unstained by the filth of carnal lust: Barnab., Ep. 10. Clem. Alex., Strom. ii. p. 464. Theodoret, Qu. ii. Origen, Hom. vii. Novatian, de Cib. Jud. c. 3. Hesych. ad loc. Unless men have the fins of faith, they cannot rise from the mud of unbelief and sin, and be drawn to the shore of everlasting life in the net of the Gospel (Origen).

Among the greater quadrupeds, all ravenous and rapacious beasts which tear the flesh of other live creatures, and feed on their blood, are regarded as unclean. Among those that live in the water, all snake-like fish, and slimy, scaly reptiles. Among the feathered tribes, the birds of prey, which attack the lives of other birds; those haunting marshes or fens, which feed on worms, carrion, and other impurities. Among the intermediate animals, the ostrich dwelling in the wilderness, and the bat flitting in the darkness. Lastly, of the smaller animals, down to the grass-eating, locust tribes, especially the snake-like lizards; because these creatures call to mind the old serpent, partly because they creep in the dust, or seek their nourishment in mud and mire, and suggest the idea of corruption by the slimy constitution of their bodies. Generally, all animals are regarded as unclean which more or less exhibit in themselves the darker type of sin, death, and destruction. On ethical grounds, these are not to be eaten by the people of Israel, who are called to holiness. We are unable indeed to perceive this type in many animals, e.g. the ass, the camel, &c., which are likewise called unclean; but we must recollect that the division into clean and unclean reaches far back into antiquity (Gen. vii. 2); and for the greater fish and quadrupeds, the Mosaic Law followed certain landmarks laid down by tradition received in primitive times; and the child-like, native intuition of the patriarchal age has apprehended the nature and character of animals with a reflective power and profound intelligence, far more wise and more real than we can command with our perceptions and reflections, which are so much disturbed by unnatural and ungodly culture (Keil).

13. these—ye shall have in abomination among the fowls] There are no criteria of clean birds specified in the Levitical Law; but the following are enumerated as unclean (and all others, says Maimonides, de Cibus vitibus i. 14, are lawful); such particularly are birds of prey, emblems of wild and savage and rapacious dispositions; and that feed on dead carrion, emblems of those who indulge in unclean and carnal lusts, and are given up to dead works: Barnab., Ep. 10. Clem. Alex., Strom. v. p. 677; Pæd. iii. p. 298. As Origen says (Hom. vii.), "These birds live upon carrion, and such is the life of those who love uncleanness, and fatten on the garbage of lust." Other birds here mentioned as unclean never come forth in the day, but are birds of night; as owls and bats. Such are they who "love darkness, and come not to the light, because their deeds are evil" (John iii. 20).

13—19. the eagle] See Winer, i. 21. On these birds, see Bochart, Hierozoic. ed. Rosenmüller, Lips. 1793. Michaelis, Mosaisch. Recht, Frankf. 1770—5; and Keil here, pp. 74—82, and the ospray, ¹⁴ And the vulture, and the kite after his kind; ¹⁵ Every raven after his kind; ¹⁶ And the owl, and the night hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind, ¹⁷ And the little owl, and the cormorant, and the great owl, ¹⁸ And the swan, and the pelican, and the gier eagle, ¹⁹ And the stork, the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

²⁰ All fowls that creep, going upon all four, shall be an abomination unto you. ²¹ Yet these may ye eat of every flying creeping thing that goeth upon all four, which have legs above their feet, to leap withal upon the earth; ²² Even these of them ye may eat; ^g the locust after his kind, and the bald locust after his kind, and the beetle after his kind, and the grasshopper after his kind. ²³ But all other flying creeping things, which have four feet, shall be an abomination unto you. ²⁴ And for these ye shall be unclean: whosoever toucheth the carcase of them shall be unclean until the even. ²⁵ And whosoever beareth ought of the carcase of them ^h shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

²⁶ The carcasses of every beast which divideth the hoof, and is not clovenfooted, nor cheweth the cud, are unclean unto you: every one that toucheth them shall be unclean. ²⁷ And whatsoever goeth upon his paws, among all manner of beasts that go on all four, those are unclean unto you: whoso toucheth their carcase shall be unclean until the even. ²⁸ And he that beareth the carcase of them shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: they are unclean unto you.

²⁹ These also shall be unclean unto you among the creeping things that creep upon the earth; the weasel, and ⁱ the mouse, and the tortoise after his kind, ³⁰ And the ferret, and the chameleon, and the lizard, and the snail, and the mole. ³¹ These are unclean to you among all that creep: whosoever doth touch them, when they be dead, shall be unclean until the even. ³² And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean; whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack, whatsoever vessel it be, wherein any work is done, ^k it must be put into water, and it shall be unclean until the even; so it shall be cleansed. ³³ And every earthen vessel, whereinto any of them falleth, whatsoever is in it shall be unclean; and ^l ye shall break it. ³⁴ Of all meat which may be eaten, that on which such water cometh shall be unclean: and all drink that may be drunk in every such vessel shall be unclean. ³⁵ And every thing whereupon any part of their carcase falleth shall be unclean; whether it be oven, or ranges for pots, they shall be broken down: for they are unclean, and shall be unclean unto you. ³⁶ Nevertheless a ^g Matt. 3. 4.

Mark 1. 6.

^h ch. 14. 8. & 15.
^{5.}
^{Num.} 19. 10, 22.
& 31. 24.

ⁱ Isa. 66. 17.

^k ch. 15. 12.

^l ch. 6. 28.
& 15. 12.

who observes that the notion that the eagle will not touch carrion is erroneous. Cp. Matt. xxiv. 28. On the moral dispositions symbolized by this class of birds, see Jones, p. 182.

— the ossifrage] or the sea eagle (Schultz).

— ospray] or bearded vulture (Keil).

14. vulture] or kite. See Winer, i. 403.

— kite] or vulture (Keil).

16. the owl] Literally, daughter of screaming (Bochart), or daughter of greediness (Gesen.); the ostrich, struthio: see Bochart, ii. 811, and Winer, ii. 540, and Keil.

17. the great owl] Perhaps the ibis, according to Oedmann, Oken, and others: see Winer, i. p. 352.

18. the swan] See Winer, ii. 436.

— pelican] See Winer, ii. 223.

19. the heron after her kind] It is remarkable that the Hebrew (eth) sign of the accusative case, which is prefixed to all the other animals in this list, is wanting here. Knobel supposes that the word rendered heron is an adjective, and designates some particular kind of stork.

— the bat] Always classified among birds by the Arabs.

22. the locust] See Matt. iii. 4. Hasselquist, Travels, p. 131. Robinson, ii. 628, and Keil here.

In Deut. xiv. 19 there is no mention of any locusts that may be eaten. Hence it is inferred by some (Knobel), that the Book of Deuteronomy was written in a later age than Leviticus, and at a time when locusts had ceased to be eaten—as if locusts did not continue to be eaten even to the times of the Baptist (Matt. iii. 4).

24. the carcase] The uncleanness consequent on touching the carcase of a dead animal, bespeaks the pollution which proceeds from the death of sin, and declares the need of the new birth in Christ (2 Cor. v. 17).

31. when they be dead] It is remarkable that no kind of living creature is defiled while it is alive, except man only. The creeping things defile not, till they are dead (Maimonides).

35—40. shall be unclean] All these enactments are evidences of the contaminating effect of that which brought death into the world—namely, sin.

† Heb. a gathering together of waters.

fountain or pit, † wherein there is plenty of water, shall be clean: but that which toucheth their carcase shall be unclean. ³⁷ And if any part of their carcase fall upon any sowing seed which is to be sown, it shall be clean. ³⁸ But if any water be put upon the seed, and any part of their carcase fall thereon, it shall be unclean unto you.

m ch. 17. 15.
& 22. 8.
Deut. 14. 21.
Ezek. 4. 14.
& 44. 31.

³⁹ And if any beast, of which ye may eat, die; he that toucheth the carcase thereof shall be unclean until the even. ⁴⁰ And ^m he that eateth of the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: he also that beareth the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

† Heb. doth multiply feet.

n ch 20. 25.
† Heb. souls.

⁴¹ And every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth shall be an abomination; it shall not be eaten. ⁴² Whatsoever goeth upon the belly, and whatsoever goeth upon all four, or whatsoever † hath more feet among all creeping things that creep upon the earth, them ye shall not eat; for they are an abomination. ⁴³ ⁿ Ye shall not make your † selves abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby. ⁴⁴ For I am the LORD your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ^o ye shall be holy; for I am holy: neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. ⁴⁵ ^p For I am the LORD that bringeth you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: ^a ye shall therefore be holy, for I am holy.

o Ex. 19. 6.
ch. 19. 2.
& 20. 7. 26.
1 Thess. 4. 7.
1 Pet. 1. 15, 16.
p Ex. 6. 7.
q ver. 44.

⁴⁶ This is the law of the beasts, and of the fowl, and of every living creature that moveth in the waters, and of every creature that creepeth upon the earth: ⁴⁷ ^r To make a difference between the unclean and the clean, and between the beast that may be eaten and the beast that may not be eaten.

r ch. 10. 10.

XII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a ^a woman have conceived seed, and born a man child: then ^b she shall be unclean seven days; ^c according to the days of the separation for

a ch. 15. 19.
b Luke 2. 22.
c ch. 15. 19.

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XII.

In this group of chapters (x.—xv.) the Levitical Law teaches in clear language the doctrine of original sin, consequent on the Fall. It shows that all around us and within us is tainted with corruption. In the tenth chapter it has displayed the consequence of sin in death, and the pollution which thereby contaminates mankind, and separates man from God (see above on x. 6, 7). In the next chapter, the eleventh, it has exhibited to us the animal creation itself impaired by man's sin, and brought under the bondage of corruption in its relation to man; so that the very animals which might have been for his food, become to him a cause of uncleanness (see above, xi. 1, Preliminary Note). And now, in the present chapter, the Levitical Law reveals Man to himself, as unclean in his birth,—unclean from his mother's womb.

Thus, then, in the Law of God, we hear the language of the great Hebrew Apostle, saying, that "the whole Creation groaneth and travaileth in pain, and yearns for deliverance into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Rom. viii. 21). "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. vii. 25).

The Divine Lawgiver had spoken in the last chapter concerning causes of uncleanness from without, and he now proceeds to speak of uncleanness from within; and thus displays the twofold danger which besets our unregenerate humanity, and makes us detest and abhor all that partakes of the nature of sin; and renders us more thankful for the remedy provided for this twofold impurity by the Incarnation and Death of Christ, and by the gift of the Holy Spirit obtained by Him for us after His Ascension into heaven. Thus the Levitical Law is "our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ." Cp. Theodoret, Qu. 14; Hengstenberg, Christologie iii. 592, 663.

The necessity of Purification after childbirth arises from the fact that all men are conceived and born in sin (Ps. li. 5. Job xxv. 4. John iii. 6. Rom. v. 12. 18. Eph. ii. 3). These Levitical enactments are like a divine testimony to the doctrine of original sin. S. Augustine, Qu. 40. Hence we see the need of baptism, and hence its benefits are recognized. See John iii. 5, 6. Tit. iii. 5.

Thus, then, these principles of the Levitical Law concerning childbirth,—when they are read by the light reflected upon them from the pages of the New Testament,—display to us the true nature of our moral and spiritual condition without Christ; and they display to us the inestimable blessings we receive from the Incarnation of the Son of God, and from His blessed Gospel, and from union with His mystical Body; and they inspire us with devout thankfulness for these benefits.

CH. XII. 1.] Here begins a new Parashah, or Proper Lesson, of the Law, as read in the synagogues, and extends to xii. 59.

The parallel Hapharah, or Proper Lesson of the Prophets, is 2 Kings iv. 42 to v. 19, where Elisha cleanses the pottage which had death in it (2 Kings iv. 40), and cleanses Naaman from the leprosy by his washing in Jordan.

2. and born a man child: then she shall be unclean] Here is a proof of original sin. "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one" (Job xiv. 4); "Behold, I was shapen in wickedness, and in sin hath my mother conceived me" (Ps. li. 5); and therefore it is worthy of remark, we never read in Holy Scripture that any of the ancient Saints ever celebrated their birthdays. Pharaoh kept his birthday (Gen. xl. 20); Herod kept his birthday (Mark vi. 21); and both of them stained their birthdays with blood (cp. Job iii. 3; xx. 14. Origen, Hom. viii.). The deathdays of Saints are their birthdays (see on Acts ii. 24. Rev. xx. 4). But we celebrate the Birthday of CHRIST. The Nativity of "God manifest in the flesh" has given a new character to birthdays, as having the earnest of new life, and pledges of immortality, by union with Him who is the Life. Hence we see the need of Baptism into Christ; hence we see the reason (says Origen, in the beginning of the third century) why it is "the practice of the Church to minister baptism to infants for the remission of sins; whereas baptism would be superfluous, if infants had nothing in them which stood in need of forgiveness" (Origen, Hom. viii.).

— seven days] And on the eighth day the man child received her infirmity shall she be unclean. ³ And in the ^d eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised. ⁴ And she shall then continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days; she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled. ⁵ But if she bear a maid child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.

⁶ And ^e when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, for a son, or for a daughter, she shall bring a lamb † of the first year for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtledove, for a sin offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest: ⁷ Who shall offer it before the LORD, and make an atonement for her; and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath born a male or a female. ⁸ ^f And if † she be not able to bring a lamb, then she shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons; the one for the burnt offering, and the other for a sin offering: ^g and the priest shall make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

XIII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, saying, ² When a man circumcision (see above, on Gen. xvii. 12; Luke i. 59; xxiv. 1), the type of the spiritual circumcision of the sacrament of Baptism, in which the old man is buried and the new man is raised up, which derives its efficacy from the death of Him who rose on the eighth day from the dead, and in which the Death, Burial, and Resurrection of Christ are visibly represented, and the benefits of that Death, Burial, and Resurrection are applied to the soul (see on Rom. vi. 3, 4. Col. ii. 12).

— for her infirmity] See xv. 19.

^{3. shall be circumcised]} Not that circumcision is of Moses, but of the fathers: see John vii. 22; and above, on Gen. xvii. 10—27.

The Circumcision of the child denoted its natural uncleanness, and it is a demonstration of the doctrine of original sin. The separation of the mother from the holy things denoted hers. The child which is born, and the mother who bears it, need to be cleansed, and find their cleansing in Christ, who is the Seed of the woman, and was Incarnate by the operation of the Holy Ghost; and is “Emmanuel, God with us,” “God manifested in the flesh.”

^{4. nor come into the sanctuary]} On the fortieth day she was clean, and came unto the sanctuary, and the man child was presented to the Lord. On the fortieth day after His Birth from the Blessed Virgin’s Womb, Christ, the Second Adam, our Emmanuel, was presented in the substance of our flesh; and on the fortieth day after His Resurrection, or Birth from the Grave (see Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5), He was presented in our flesh in the heavenly sanctuary, and we were presented in Him in the dress of a cleansed and glorified humanity (cp. Hesych., p. 99).

— until the days of her purifying be fulfilled] forty days in all: see on Luke ii. 22.

^{5. a maid child, then she shall be unclean two weeks]} Twice the time of uncleanness after the birth of a male. Some physiological reasons have been assigned for this (cp. Aristot., H. A. vi. 22, 7. Hippocrates, i. p. 393. Keil, p. 87). Was this a memorial of the greater culpability of Eve? St. Paul says, “Adam was not deceived, but the woman, being deceived, was in the transgression” (see 1 Tim. ii. 14), and woman was therefore condemned in special penalties (Gen. iii. 16).

^{6. for a burnt offering]} The sin-offering was offered first, and then the burnt-offering (Exod. xxix. 14. 18. Lev. viii. 14. 18; ix. 7, 8. 12. 15, 16). The sin-offering was for expiation of sin. The burnt-offering—wholly consumed by fire—denoted total dedication, and also acceptance with God: see above, Preliminary Notes to chap. i. and chap. iv.

^{8. she shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons]} As the blessed Virgin Mary did (Luke ii. 22. 24); and thus was shown “the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich” (2 Cor. viii. 9); rich in our deliverance from the bondage and corruption of sin, and from the punishment due to it; rich in our deliverance from the burden of the Law, which He has fulfilled by obedience and suffering; rich in the graces of the Holy Spirit, which He has procured for us; rich in the heavenly inheritance which He has purchased for us by His Blood: cp. Origen, Hom. 8.

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XIII.

The Divine Lawgiver, in the foregoing chapters, has shown us how, in man’s natural state, a defilement is attached to him in all his progress from birth to death. He has thus displayed the bitter fruits of Sin which brought all this pollution upon Man. He has impressed upon him a consciousness of his degradation and misery, and taught him a salutary lesson of sorrow and self-humiliation; and has also stirred up in him an earnest yearning and craving for the Advent of that Deliverer and Healer, who would emancipate him from this debasing bondage, and cleanse him from this foul disease.

Thus, the Levitical Law was a “schoolmaster to bring him to Christ” (Gal. iii. 24).

And now that we have been brought to Christ, the Law inspires us with fervent gratitude and love to the Son of God for His infinite condescension and tender compassion in coming down from heaven, and taking our Nature, and dying for us and rising again, and ascending into heaven, and so delivering us from “the body of sin and death,” and from the “bondage of corruption” into the glorious liberty of the sons of God (Rom. vii. 24; viii. 21).

Having spoken of the uncleanness consequent upon Death (the punishment of sin), and even from Birth itself, the Divine Lawgiver now proceeds to show the effects of Disease, another consequence of Sin, and a visible emblem of it, in its ravages on the person affected by it, and its infection and contagion so as to pollute and destroy others.

The disease which is selected as a specimen of those effects, is Leprosy. The different kinds and degrees of Leprosy typify different kinds and degrees of sinfulness; as is observed by Tertullian against Marcion (iv. 35), who cavilled at these provisions of the Levitical Law; and alleged that our Lord set it at nought when He healed the Lepers in the Gospel. See also Hesych. on this chapter, and Bede, Qu. cap. xii., who consider these forms of Leprosy, in a spiritual sense, as emblematic of unsound doctrine as well as of moral depravity.

St. Matthew’s Gospel was written for the special benefit of the Jews, to whom the Levitical Law was given; and it is remarkable, that the first miracle which our Lord is recorded in that Gospel to have wrought, after He had preached the Sermon on the Mount, and by which He set a Divine seal on His doctrine, was the cleansing of the leper,—“Jesus put forth His hand and touched him, saying, I will, Be thou clean” (Matt. viii. 3). By touching the leper, and cleansing him, Christ proved that He was above the Law (S. Ambrose, in Luc., lib. v.). Instead of contracting any defilement by touching the leper, as He would have done if He had not been above the Law, He healed the leper by His touch: thus He showed that He, God manifest in our flesh, is not only the Well-spring of life and health to body and soul, but that He, the Second Adam, the Lord from heaven, has stemmed and sent back in a reflux course that dark tide of Sin, Disease, and Death, which flows to us from the first Adam.

At the same time, by sending the Leper to the Priest, Christ took care not to disparage the Levitical Law written in this chapter, but acknowledged its heavenly origin, and set His own divine seal upon it (Matt. viii. 4. Cp. Luke v. 14; xvii. 14).

In our natural state, apart from Christ, Death and Disease are unclean and polluted things, being the fruits of sin; and they communicate uncleanness and defilement to man. But

^d Gen. 17. 12.
Luke 1. 59.
& 2. 21.
John 7. 22, 23.

^e Luke 2. 22.

[†] Heb. a son of his year.

^f ch. 5. 7.

Luke 2. 24.

[†] Heb. her hand find not sufficiency of.

^g ch. 4. 26.

¶ Or, swelling.
 a Deut. 28. 27.
 Isa. 3. 17.
 b Deut. 17. 8, 9.
 & 24. 8.
 Luke 17. 14.

shall have in the skin of his flesh a || rising, ^a a scab, or bright spot, and it be in the skin of his flesh like the plague of leprosy; ^b then he shall be brought unto Aaron the priest, or unto one of his sons the priests: ³ And the priest shall look on the plague in the skin of the flesh: and when the hair in the plague is turned white, and the plague in sight be deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a plague of leprosy: and the priest shall look on him, and pronounce him unclean. ⁴ If the bright spot be white in the skin of his flesh, and in sight be not deeper than the skin, and the hair thereof be not turned white; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague seven days: ⁵ And the priest shall look on him the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague in his sight be at a stay, and the plague spread not in the skin; then the priest shall shut him up seven days more: ⁶ And the priest shall look on him again the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean: it is but a scab: and he ^c shall wash his clothes, and be clean. ⁷ But if ^a the scab spread much abroad in the skin, after that he hath been seen of the priest for his cleansing, he shall be seen of the priest again: ⁸ And if the priest see that, behold, the scab spreadeth in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a leprosy.

⁹ When the plague of leprosy is in a man, then he shall be brought unto the priest; ¹⁰ ^d And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the rising be white in

c ch. 11. 25.
 & 14. 8.

d Num. 12. 10, 12.
 2 Kings 5. 27.
 2 Chron. 26. 20.

Christ came and touched the bier, and took the dead by the hand and raised him to life, and by dying and raising Himself He sanctified Death and the Grave (see above, on x. 6, 7). He also *touch*ed the leper, and healed him. Nor was this all. He acted on Death and on Disease at a distance by His Divine Will: He raised Lazarus without any touch (John xi. 43). He healed the ten Lepers without any touch (Luke xvii. 14). Thus He assured us of his power to forgive sin—the cause of death—and to give us pardon and grace, and newness of life, and spiritual health, although we see Him not with the bodily eye.

Thus the Levitical Law concerning Leprosy acquires new interest and importance, and gains fresh beauty for us Christians, who are enabled to read it by the light of the Gospel. It reveals to us the true nature of sin. It shows its hideousness and its foulness; and fills us with shame, hatred, and loathing for it. And it reveals to us the inestimable benefits we have received from the Incarnation of the Son of God, “the Sun of Righteousness with healing in His Wings” (Mal. iv. 2), and fills us with joy, thankfulness, and love to Him for His infinite goodness to us.

It is also, as we shall see, like a divine Directory to the Christian Church as to the course to be followed by Bishops and Priests in dealing with sinners, and in the exercise of spiritual discipline; and it is also a Spiritual Manual for the penitent soul in its religious exercises of humiliation before God; and therefore what an ancient Father says is very true, “Potest lex lepræ spiritualiter servari, quæ secundum literam non potest” (Origen, in Exod., Hom. xi. Cp. S. Cyril, de Ador. xv. p. 538).

On the various forms and phases of leprosy, the reader may consult the works of Michaelis, Mos. Recht, iv. 227. Murray, Historia Lepræ, Gott., 1794. Hensler, Sprengel, Frank, and others quoted by Winer, R. W. B. i. 114; and those of Pruner, Danielsen, Tobler, and others specified by Keil, p. 88; and cp. Bähr, Symbolik ii. 460. Jahn, Archæol. § 188, 189; and Dr. Hayman's Article in Dr. Smith's Bib. Dict., ii. 93—96, and the Rev. S. Clark's notes here.

On the spiritual meaning of the Law of Leprosy see notes below, and Mather on Types, p. 291—323 (an excellent work), and Fairbairn, Typology, ii. 412.

CH. XIII. 2. leprosy] Heb. tsaraah, from tsara, to strike down, a leper being as one stricken by God (Gesen. 719). Leprosy was regarded by the Hebrews as so clearly a scourge from God, that some of them were of opinion that it could not be healed by human skill, and that it was not even lawful to attempt the cure (R. Menachem, on Lev. xiii. See Ainsworth, on xiv. 4).

— he shall be brought unto Aaron the priest] A man often is not conscious of his own diseases, moral and spiritual, as well as natural, and needs the physician both for soul and body. “Who can understand his own errors?” (Ps. xix. 12.) The leper is sent to the Priest, the minister of the soul, and not to the physician, who is healer of the body; and thus God teaches here, that diseases are due to sin, and are emblems of it; and that, therefore, in sicknesses of body and soul we should resort to Christ, the Great Physician of both (*Theodore*t, Qu. 15).

Thou knowest that our Great High Priest, Emmanuel, being God, diligently examines us all, and receives those who are cleansed from sin, but puts out of the Camp those who are tainted with its leprosy (S. Cyril, de Ador. p. 540).

In like manner, in the Levitical Law concerning the leprosy of houses, it is not the Architect (who might naturally be supposed to know more of their structure and defects), but the Priest, who is required to examine the house (see xiv. 35, 36), and to order it to be pulled down if inveterately infected with leprosy (vv. 40—45), in order that men may recognize thereby, that the Levitical Law had a spiritual meaning, and that they may look to the Divine Priest, who also is Lord of the House, and can build up, pull down, and destroy.

3. the priest shall look] So, in a spiritual sense, the Minister of God must consider the state of the souls of those committed to his care; he must study their spiritual symptoms, and pronounce accordingly (Ezek. xxxiii. 7—9; xxxiv. 2—4); and warn others against those that are infected with sin, and separate them from communion with God in holy things: see on Matt. xviii. 17; and 1 Cor. v. 5. 1 John v. 16. 1 Tim. i. 20.

4. the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague] Literally, shall shut up the plague—or nega, from naga, to touch, which is more expressive. The Leper has himself become a plague; the sinner becomes, as it were, sin, and spreads it to others. He must therefore be shut up: separated from others for a time, lest they catch the infection and die of the plague. But he is under probation: he has a “locus penitentiae,” and may be restored at the end of the term prescribed.

The prescription of these terms of “seven days” is like a spiritual directory to the Christian Church, as to the course to be pursued by her in dealing with sinners, and in the exercise of spiritual discipline. Sinners are not to be excommunicated at once; but to be admonished privately at first, and to be dealt with tenderly and compassionately (see Matt. xviii. 15—17). St. Paul prescribes “two admonitions” before the rejection of a heretic (Titus iii. 10).

6. shall pronounce him clean] The Leper is to be pronounced clean after having been shut up for two successive periods of seven days. So, after a term of probation, the penitent is to be forgiven, comforted, and restored in a spirit of meekness (2 Cor. ii. 6, 7. Gal. vi. 1).

8. the priest shall pronounce him unclean] Here is a warning

the skin, and it have turned the hair white, and there be † quick raw flesh in the rising; ^{† Heb. the quickening of living flesh.} ¹¹ It is an old leprosy in the skin of his flesh, and the priest shall pronounce him unclean, and shall not shut him up: for he is unclean. ¹² And if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin, and the leprosy cover all the skin of him that hath the plague from his head even to his foot, wheresoever the priest looketh; ¹³ Then the priest shall consider: and, behold, if the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague: it is all turned white: he is clean. ¹⁴ But when raw flesh appeareth in him, he shall be unclean. ¹⁵ And the priest shall see the raw flesh, and pronounce him to be unclean: for the raw flesh is unclean: it is a leprosy. ¹⁶ Or if the raw flesh turn again, and be changed unto white, he shall come unto the priest; ¹⁷ And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the plague be turned into white; then the priest shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague: he is clean.

¹⁸ The flesh also, in which, even in the skin thereof, was a ^{e Ex. 9. 9.} boil, and is healed, ¹⁹ And in the place of the boil there be a white rising, or a bright spot, white, and somewhat reddish, and it be shewed to the priest; ²⁰ And if, when the priest seeth it, behold, it be in sight lower than the skin, and the hair thereof be turned white; the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague of leprosy broken out of the boil. ²¹ But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hairs therein, and if it be not lower than the skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days: ²² And if it spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague. ²³ But if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not, it is a burning boil; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

against the danger of relapse after repentance from sin. "Behold, thou art made whole; sin no more," John v. 14.

¹¹ shall not shut him up] The case is clear, "it is an old leprosy," or "the leprosy has become inveterate," and therefore there is no reason for the probationary trial prescribed in vv. 4 and 5. "He must dwell outside the camp," v. 46.

^{12, 13.} if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin—he shall pronounce him clean] If the leprosy is not harboured in the bodily constitution, but is ejected to the surface, and covers the skin with a white efflorescence, "wheresoever the Priest looketh," literally, to all the sight of the eyes of the Priest (and he is bound to examine the case carefully), then the crisis is past. Nature has made a great effort, a vigorous struggle, and has expelled the malady; the diseased matter turned into a scurf, which peeled off and died away; the Priest shall pronounce him clean; literally, shall make the plague clean.

This also may be understood spiritually—If the sinner does not cherish his sin in his heart, if he does not conceal it, but if he confesses it (1 Cor. xi. 31. 1 John i. 9), if he acknowledges that "there is no health in him" (Ps. xxxviii. 3; li. 3. Rom. vii. 18. 24), if he is penitent for his sins and makes restitution, if he makes public reparation for them (if they be open sins, like leprosy), then the Christian Priest has authority from the Great Head of the Church to pronounce the sinner to be clean; and by the application of the means, which the Great Physician has instituted in His Church—especially the Holy Communion of His blessed Body and Blood—to make him clean, and restore him to the society of the faithful by the ministry of reconciliation: see on Matt. xvi. 19; xviii. 18. Luke vii. 47, 48. John xx. 23. 2 Cor. v. 19. Cp. Origen, Hom. 8. Tertullian, de Pudic. c. 20. Theodoret, Qu. 16, who says, "that a heathen who proclaims his sin and unbelief, is less to be shunned than a false Christian (2 Thess. iii. 6. 1 Cor. v. 9; x. 21); and that mixtures of error with truth are far more dangerous to others than open heresy." Cp. xix. 19. Deut. xxii. 9; and Aug., Qu. 47.

Some of the Fathers suppose that this total leprosy—which is like death—is to be taken in the spiritual sense, according to which the Apostles speak, viz., of being dead unto sin (Rom. vi. 2. 1 Pet. ii. 24). Mortify your members (Col. iii. 5). Such a leprosy is health; such a death is life (S. Cyril, de Ador. pp. 512, 513).

The following remarks on this enactment are from Lord Bacon:—

"Take a view of the ceremonial law of Moses; you shall find, besides the prefiguration of Christ, the badge or difference of the people of God, the exercise and impression of obedience, and other divine uses and fruits thereof, that some of the most learned Rabbins have travelled profitably and profoundly to observe, some of them a natural, some of them a moral sense, or reduction of many of the ceremonies and ordinances. As in the law of the leprosy, where it is said, "If the whiteness have overspread the flesh, the patient may pass abroad for clean; but if there be any whole flesh remaining, he is to be shut up for unclean;" one of them noteth a principle of nature, that putrefaction is more contagious before maturity than after: and another noteth a position of moral philosophy, that men, abandoned to vice, do not so much corrupt manners as those that are half good and half evil. So in this, and very many other places in that law, there is to be found, besides the theological sense, much aspersions of philosophy." Bacon's Advancement of Learning, p. 49.

^{14.} raw flesh] Literally, living flesh; showing that the leprosy is not fully thrown out on the surface; the "living flesh" is unclean; being accompanied with other signs of leprosy, it shows that the disease is within. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper, but whose confesseth and forsaketh them, shall have mercy" (Prov. xxviii. 13. Cp. 1 John i. 8, 9).

^{18.} The flesh also] The minute details concerning the disease, and all its various symptoms, show a marvellous insight into its true character (as is observed by Michaelis, and Winer, R. W. B. i. 116); and doubtless the same Holy Spirit who directed Moses in this remarkable delineation of all the phases of Leprosy, has a clear insight into all the mysterious and subtle phenomena of its moral antitype—Sin. He perceives all the loathsome hatefulness of the foul disease; and none of the least efforts of the sinner to expel the plague from his spiritual system, escape His divine Eye; and He is ever ready to assist, with His divine grace, those endeavours, however feeble they may be.

The Levitical Priest was commanded to scrutinize all the phases of the leprosy, and to consider all its tendencies toward convalescence. So, we "have a merciful and faithful High Priest" (Heb. ii. 17), who "is touched with a feeling of our infirmities" (Heb. iv. 15). Even He Himself consented to be treated as a Leper by those whom He came to heal: see the wonderful Prophecy, Isa. liii. 4, where the words used, "stricken, smitten of God," are specially said of a Leper (Buxtorf, Lexic. Talmud., 724; and Rev. A. Codd's Lectures on that prophecy, p. 92). "He has compassion on the ignorant, and those who

† Heb. a burning of fire.

²⁴ Or if there be any flesh, in the skin whereof there is † a hot burning, and the quick flesh that burneth have a white bright spot, somewhat reddish, or white; ²⁵ Then the priest shall look upon it: and, behold, if the hair in the bright spot be turned white, and it be in sight deeper than the skin; it is a leprosy broken out of the burning: wherefore the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy. ²⁶ But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hair in the bright spot, and it be no lower than the other skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days: ²⁷ And the priest shall look upon him the seventh day: and if it be spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy. ²⁸ And if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not in the skin, but it be somewhat dark; it is a rising of the burning, and the priest shall pronounce him clean: for it is an inflammation of the burning.

²⁹ If a man or woman have a plague upon the head or the beard; ³⁰ Then the priest shall see the plague: and, behold, if it be in sight deeper than the skin; and there be in it a yellow thin hair; then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a dry scall, even a leprosy upon the head or beard. ³¹ And if the priest look on the plague of the scall, and, behold, it be not in sight deeper than the skin, and that there is no black hair in it; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague of the scall seven days: ³² And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the plague: and, behold, if the scall spread not, and there be in it no yellow hair, and the scall be not in sight deeper than the skin; ³³ He shall be shaven, but the scall shall he not shave; and the priest shall shut up him that hath the scall seven days more: ³⁴ And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the scall: and, behold, if the scall be not spread in the skin, nor be in sight deeper than the skin; then the priest shall pronounce him clean: and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean. ³⁵ But if the scall spread much in the skin after his cleansing; ³⁶ Then the priest shall look on him: and, behold, if the scall be spread in the skin, the priest shall not seek for yellow hair; he is unclean. ³⁷ But if the scall be in his sight at a stay, and that there is black hair grown up therein; the scall is healed, he is clean: and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

³⁸ If a man also or a woman have in the skin of their flesh bright spots, even white bright spots; ³⁹ Then the priest shall look: and, behold, if the bright spots in the skin of their flesh be darkish white; it is a freckled spot that groweth in the skin; he is clean.

† Heb. head is pilled.

⁴⁰ And the man whose † hair is fallen off his head, he is bald; yet is he clean. ⁴¹ And he that hath his hair fallen off from the part of his head toward his face, he is forehead bald: yet is he clean. ⁴² And if there be in the bald head, or bald forehead, a white reddish sore; it is a leprosy sprung up in his bald head, or his bald forehead. ⁴³ Then the priest shall look upon it: and, behold, if the rising of the sore be white reddish in his bald head, or in his bald forehead, as the leprosy appeareth in the skin of the flesh; ⁴⁴ He is a leprous man, he is unclean: the priest shall pronounce him utterly unclean; his plague is in his are out of the way" (Heb. v. 1, 2); and He is "able to succour them that are tempted, in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted" (Heb. ii. 18). Blessed be God for His infinite goodness to us—who are spiritual lepers—in Christ!

31. no black hair] The appearance of black hair was a sign of convalescence, v. 37.

44. unclean—utterly unclean] If the leprosy exhibit itself on the bald head or bald forehead—a figure (it has been supposed) of sin boldly and presumptuously displayed—"præfrictâ fronte, exserto capite"—as it is by those "whose glory is in their shame" (Phil. iii. 19). He is "unclean, utterly unclean," and is to be avoided as such.

head. ⁴⁵ And the leper in whom the plague is, his clothes shall be rent, and his head bare, and he shall ^f put a covering upon his upper lip, and shall cry, ^g Unclean, unclean. ⁴⁶ All the days wherein the plague shall be in him he shall be defiled; he is unclean: he shall dwell alone; ^h without the camp shall his habitation be.

f Ezek. 24. 17, 22.
Mic. 3. 7.
g Lam. 4. 15.
h Num. 5. 2.
& 12. 14.
2 Kings 7. 3.
& 15. 5.
2 Chron. 26. 21.
Luke 17. 12.

⁴⁷ The garment also that the plague of leprosy is in, whether it be a woollen garment, or a linen garment; ⁴⁸ Whether it be in the warp, or woof; of linen, or of woollen; whether in a skin, or in any [†] thing made of skin; ⁴⁹ And if the plague be greenish or reddish in the garment, or in the skin, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any [†] thing of skin; it is a plague of leprosy, and shall be shewed unto the priest: ⁵⁰ And the priest shall look upon the plague, and shut up it that hath the plague seven days: ⁵¹ And he shall look on the plague on the seventh day: if the plague be spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in a skin, or in any work that is made of skin; the plague is ⁱ a fretting leprosy; it is unclean. ⁵² He shall therefore burn that garment, whether warp or woof, in woollen or in linen, or any thing of skin, wherein the plague is: for it is a fretting leprosy; it shall be burnt in the fire.

† Heb. work of.

† Heb. vessel, or instrument.

i ch. 14. 41.

⁵³ And if the priest shall look, and, behold, the plague be not spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin; ⁵⁴ Then the priest shall command that they wash the thing wherein the plague is, and he shall shut it up seven days more: ⁵⁵ And the priest shall look on the plague, after that it is washed: and, behold, if the plague have not changed his colour, and the plague be not spread; it is unclean; thou shalt burn it in the fire; it is fret inward, [†] whether it be bare within or without. ⁵⁶ And if the priest look, and, behold, the plague be somewhat dark after the washing of it; then he shall rend it out of the garment, or out of the skin, or out of the warp, or out of the woof: ⁵⁷ And if it appear still in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin; it is a spreading plague: thou shalt burn that † Heb. whether it be bald in the head thereof, or in the forehead thereof.

45. the leper—his clothes shall be rent] as in mourning (x. 6. Gen. xxxvii. 29. 2 Kings vi. 30).

This, and the other signs which follow, represent the leper as mourning over himself as over one dead (Num. xii. 12); for he was as it were a "living corpse," "a walking sepulchre" (Joseph., iii. 11. 3. Bähr, Symb. ii. 460). How much more ought the sinner—the spiritual leper—to do so!

— his head bare] Literally, his head free from covering: see x. 6, and Ezek. xxiv. 17, "Make no mourning—bind the tire of thine head upon thee."

— put a covering upon his upper lip] Another sign of mourning: see Micah iii. 7, "The seers shall be ashamed, they shall all cover their lips; for there is no answer of God."

— Unclean, unclean] In Hebrew, tamé, tamé (a word connected with the Latin contamino. Gesen., p. 322). Unclean! Unclean! Therefore come not near me! Hence the lepers in the Gospel stood "afar off" (Luke xvii. 12).

46. he shall dwell alone] See Num. v. 2. 2 Kings vii. 3; xv. 5. 2 Chron. xxvi. 20. He is to be separated from his wife, lest the contagion should be propagated.

At the present day there are pest-houses in the East, set apart for lepers, outside the towns. There is one at Jerusalem within the Zion gate (Robinson, i. 359).

— without the camp] Cp. Num. v. 2; as Miriam was for seven days (Num. xii. 14).

So in the Christian Church, the sinner who is tainted with the leprosy of flagrant and notorious sin is commanded to be "put out of the camp"—to be cut off from communion with the faithful in holy things, by excommunication, and is to be avoided as such: see on Matt. xviii. 15—18. 1 Cor. v. 3—5. 11. 13. Heb. xii. 15. Titus iii. 10. 1 Tim. i. 20. 2 Thess. iii. 6. 2 John 10; and Theodoret, Qu. 16, 17. Isidor. Pelusiot., Epist. iii. 411; iv. 117. 141. Hesych. in loc. Abp. Cranmer, Catechism, p. 201, ed. Oxf. 1829; and the Expositors of the Thirty-nine Articles, Art. xxxiii.

By such provisions as these the Levitical Law witnessed to its own imperfection, and to its preparatory tendencies toward a more gracious dispensation. It shut the leper out of the camp; but it could not heal him. The Christian Church is commissioned by Christ to excommunicate the notorious sinner. But Excommunication itself is an act of mercy, and one of the means of grace. It is, as S. Augustine calls it (ad lit. Petilian, iii. 4), "terribilis lenitas, charitatis severitas." Discipline is a Christian privilege. A Church which withholds it is cruel; a Christian who forfeits it is miserable (Augustine). "Knowing the terror of the Lord," says St. Paul, "we persuade men" (2 Cor. v. 11). In apostolic times the sinner was excommunicated in order that his "spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord" (1 Cor. v. 5. 1 Tim. i. 20); and that others, admonished by this example, might be the more afraid to offend. Excommunication was designed to be a rehearsal of the dread transactions of the Great Day, and a preparation for them. And when the sinner is thereby warned of his danger, and awakened to a sense of sin, the Christian Church pours the oil and wine of spiritual grace into his wounds, and restores him to spiritual health and joy (2 Cor. ii. 7—11. Gal. vi. 1). How many lost souls at that awful Day may rue the misery due to the neglect of spiritual discipline!

47. The garment also] Even the clothes of the leper are tainted, and under certain circumstances are to be burnt. Here is another proof of the infection and hatefulness of the moral leprosy of sin. The fire of divine wrath is prepared for the gay robes of sin. Here, also, is a warning against all communion with it; and a lesson of tender compassion to sinners; and to "save them with fear, pulling them out of the fire, hating even the garment spotted by the flesh" (Jude 23). Compare the act of the Ephesian converts, casting their magical books—the garments of their former leprosy—into the fire (Acts xix. 19). See also the doom threatened to all the golden attire of the spiritual harlot—the purple and fine linen, and scarlet and silk—mentioned in the lamentations of the Kings of the Earth over the smoke of her burning (Rev. xviii. 9—18).

wherein the plague is with fire. ⁵⁸ And the garment, either warp, or woof, or whatsoever thing of skin it be, which thou shalt wash, if the plague be departed from them, then it shall be washed the second time, and shall be clean.

⁵⁹ This is the law of the plague of leprosy in a garment of woollen or linen, either in the warp, or woof, or any thing of skins, to pronounce it clean, or to pronounce it unclean.

XIV. ¹ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, ² This shall be the law of the leper in the day of his cleansing: He ^a shall be brought unto the priest: ³ And the priest shall go forth out of the camp; and the priest shall look, and, behold, if the plague of leprosy be healed in the leper; ⁴ Then shall the priest command to take for him that is to be cleansed two ||birds alive and clean, and ^bcedar wood, and ^cscarlet, and ^dhyssop: ⁵ And the priest shall command that one of the birds be killed in an earthen vessel over running water: ⁶ As for the a Matt. 8. 2, 4.

Mark 1. 40, 44.
Luke 5. 12, 14.
& 17. 14.

|| Or, sparrows.

b Num. 19. 6.
c Heb. 9. 19.
d Ps. 51. 7.

58. it shall be washed the second time, and shall be clean] So, there is a second washing to the true penitent. He was washed once in his baptism. And for sins committed after baptism, there is also the washing of Repentance. We dwell here on earth (as S. Ambrose says, de Abraham. i. 9) in a spiritual Mesopotamia, between the two rivers of Baptism and Repentance; the "lavaerum Gratiae et fletum Penitentiae." Both these streams derive their virtue from one fountain—the blood of Christ crucified (Zech. xiii. 1). In the former we are washed but once; but there is a second washing in the other, during all our sojourn upon earth: see on Heb. vi. 3—6. Cp. Rev. vii. 14; and Origen, Hom. 8, in Lev. ad fin.

CHR. XIV. 1.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, as read in the Synagogues, and extends to xv. 33.

The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is 2 Kings vii. 3—20; which describes the entrance of the four Lepers into the camp of the Syrians, and the report which they bring to Samaria of their flight.

2. He shall be brought unto the priest] Not to the Physician, but to the Priest. The Priest was commanded to examine the leper, and to determine whether he was healed or no. This Divine enactment (which was sanctioned by Christ Himself, who sent the lepers, whom He had healed, "to the Priest," Matt. viii. 2—4. Luke xvii. 14) was designed to show that all disease is to be regarded as a punishment inflicted by God for sin; and that every disorder of the body is to be considered an external index of the ravages made upon the soul by sin. Therefore, all these laws concerning leprosy have a spiritual meaning, and are to be applied spiritually. They show what sin is, how it is to be treated; and they display the inability of man, in his natural state, to provide a remedy for it; and they make him look for a cure from Him who alone has power to heal. Thus they prepared the way for Christ. They send Mankind (which is infected with Leprosy) "to the Priest"—to the One Great High Priest—who is not only able to examine the leper and to scrutinize his minutest symptoms, but is also able and willing to heal him. Cp. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Levit. lib. i. p. 354.

3. the priest shall go forth out of the camp—the leper] It would seem from this enactment, and from those in the foregoing chapter, that the Priests were mercifully preserved by God from the leprous contamination. They were commanded to examine minutely the body of the leper, and his clothes (xiii. 47—58); and we hear of no precaution provided for them against infection or contagion, by this close intercourse with the leper, or of any ceremonial uncleanness thereby contracted by them.

Leprosy was the scourge of God. The Priests were His Ministers. Perhaps here is another reason why they, and not the Physician of the body, were commissioned to execute the duties described in this chapter. He, whose Ministers they were, would protect them in discharging the duties which He commanded them to perform. They were to go forth out of the camp and examine the leper.

May we not also (as Hesychius suggests) see a figure here of the compassion of our Great High Priest, who has gone forth out of heaven itself, the Camp of angel hosts, and has come down to earth, not only to examine, but to heal the moral leprosy of sin—"to seek and to save the lost" (Luke xii. 10)—and who carefully examines and scrutinizes all the secrets of all hearts (Heb. iv. 12)? and He was exempt from all contagion of sin while He lived and moved among sinners (Matt. ix. 11. Luke xv. 1); and was "holy, harmless, and undefiled" (Heb. vii. 26).

4. take for him that is to be cleansed] Literally, for him that is cleansing himself. The verb is in the hitpael form (Gesen. 318).

—two birds alive and clean] These two birds, one of which is to be slain, and the other let free, are regarded by the best ancient Expositors as figures of the One Sacrifice for sin, in His two natures, the Human and Divine; the union of which was necessary to constitute an acceptable sacrifice for the cleansing of the moral leprosy of sin (see S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Levit. i. p. 356. Theodoret, Qu. 19; and Hesych., p. 108). If Christ had not been Man, He could not have suffered in the place of men; and if He had not been also God, His death could not have been an adequate satisfaction for the sins of men. Being Man, He was able to suffer: being God, He was able to satisfy. The Death of Him who was Very God and Very Man, was a "full and perfect sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction, for the sins of the whole world:" see below, on 1 John iv. 10; and on Rom. iii. 23—26; vi. 20.

A similar type of the One Christ was displayed in the two Goats on the Day of Atonement: see below, on xvi. 8.

—cedar wood] Fragrant, and not liable to corruption (Cyril, Theodoret, Hesych.). Such was the sacrifice of Him who died for us; see Ezek. xvii. 22, 23, where the cedar is a figure of Christ, "who saw no corruption" (Acts ii. 31; xiii. 37); and delivers us from it (Rom. viii. 21. 1 Cor. xv. 42. 57).

—scarlet, and hyssop] Scarlet was the colour of royalty and victory, the colour of joy and health as contrasted with the whiteness of the leper (see on Gen. xxxviii. 28. 30; and Josh. ii. 18. 21). It was the colour with which Christ was robed at His Passion (Matt. xxvii. 28). Hyssop was the plant used for purification: see Exod. xii. 22. Num. xix. 6. 18. Ps. li. 7.

These passages of Scripture, taken together, seem to show that it is no fanciful conceit in the ancient expositors who recognized here a type of the blood of Christ triumphing as a Royal Conqueror in His suffering. Indeed, St. Paul himself seems to justify the interpretation which regards the scarlet and hyssop of these Levitical Sacrifices as figurative of something more effectual; even of the sprinkling of the blood of Christ (see Heb. ix. 19. Origen, Hom. 8); and it is surely not unworthy of notice that a mention is made both of scarlet and of hyssop in the Gospel record of the Crucifixion of Christ (John xix. 29, 30). The hyssop, used as the instrument of cleansing, represents the personal application of the merits of the sacrifice of Christ to the individual soul, by the ministry of the Word and Sacraments. At the Crucifixion the vinegar was applied to the mouth of Christ by hyssop and a reed (John xix. 29. Matt. xxvii. 48. Mark xv. 36). And the blood of Christ crucified is applied to the cleansing of the Soul in the ministry of the Word and Sacraments, by weak agents and instruments; feeble reeds and lowly hyssops (1 Kings iv. 33); but the virtue of the blood of Christ is made more manifest even by the simplicity and feebleness of the means by which it is applied to the soul: see on Exod. xii. 22. 2 Cor. iv. 7.

The Psalmist, lamenting the moral leprosy of his own sin, and craving God's pardon, exclaims, "Purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean, wash me and I shall be whiter than snow" (Ps. li. 7); and thus he confirms the interpretation which regards Leprosy—described in this chapter and the foregoing—as an emblem of sin.

5. in an earthen vessel over running water] or living water; so that the blood might be mingled with the pure water in the earthen vessel. The slain bird was a type of Christ, sacrificed living bird, he shall take it, and the cedar wood, and the scarlet, and the hyssop, and shall dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water: ⁷ And he shall °sprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed from the leprosy ^fseven times, and shall pronounce him clean, and shall let the living bird loose † into the open field.

e Heb. 9. 13.
f 2 Kings 5. 10, 14.
† Heb. upon the face of the field.
g ch. 13. 6.

⁸ And he that is to be cleansed ^gshall wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, ^hand wash himself in water, that he may be clean: and after that he shall come into the camp, and ⁱshall tarry abroad out of his tent seven days.

h ch. 11. 25.
i Num. 12. 15.

⁹ But it shall be on the seventh day, that he shall shave all his hair off his head and his beard and his eyebrows, even all his hair he shall shave off: and he shall wash his clothes, also he shall wash his flesh in water, and he shall be clean.

¹⁰ And on the eighth day ^khe shall take two he lambs without blemish, and one ewe lamb † of the first year without blemish, and three tenth deals of fine flour for ^la meat offering, mingled with oil, and one log of oil. ¹¹ And the priest † that maketh him clean shall present the man that is to be made clean, k Matt. 8. 4.

Mark 1. 44.
Luke 5. 11.
† Heb. the daughter of her year.
l ch. 2. 1.
Num. 15. 4, 15.

for us; and from Him came forth blood mingled with water; and He comes to us with water and blood (see on John xix. 34. 1 John v. 6). We are baptized into His death (Rom. vi. 3); and it is His Blood which gives efficacy to the Water of Baptism, which is received in the earthen vessels of our souls and bodies, and thereby He washes us from the leprosy of original sin: see on Titus iii. 5; and S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Levit. p. 366; and Hesych., p. 108, whose words may be paraphrased thus—"We are earthen vessels; and the Only-begotten Son of God, whose two Natures, the one human and the other divine, the one passible and the other impassible, are symbolized by the two birds, the one killed, the other let free, is as it were slain for us over living waters—the waters of Baptism—and by the dipping as it were of the Divinity, and the shedding of the blood of the Humanity of Christ into those waters, and by the application of them by the hyssop of the Christian Ministry to our souls, we are cleansed from original sin, and are born anew. For, as St. Paul says, we are baptized into His death (Rom. vi. 3); and He saves us by the 'washing of regeneration' (Tit. iii. 5), which derives its virtue from the Passion of Him who suffered as Man, and who is impassible as God."

6. the cedar wood, and the scarlet, and the hyssop] These were bound together and attached to the wings and tail of the living bird (the figure of the Divine Nature in Christ), and were dipped in the living water and in the blood that were in the vessel (Maimonides on Leprosy, ch. xi.): and with them the hand and forehead of the leper was sprinkled seven times; and then the living bird was set free.

This cleansing ceremony signified the application, through the blood and water, of the virtue of the sufferings of Christ, both God and Man. The cedar, an emblem of incorruption; the scarlet wool, the emblem of royalty and victory triumphing in battle (Isa. lxiii. 1—3. See v. 4); the hyssop, representing the personal application of His blood by sprinkling on the soul in the ministry of the Word and Sacraments, are combined with the living bird—the emblem of His Divinity—and these together are dipped in the blood and water of the Christian Sacraments, in which the virtue of Christ's sacrifice is exhibited and applied to the penitent; and by the power of His Godhead, which cannot suffer, but gave infinite virtue to His sufferings, they are instrumental in the cleansing of the spiritual leper (Heb. ix. 14).

These two birds seem to be like to the two he-goats in the ritual of the Day of Atonement; both are types of Christ (see xvi. 8—21). The wood of the cedar is added here for purification. The Leprosy of sin cannot be purged except by the wood of the cross. The water is a figure of that, concerning which St. John speaks, "a soldier pierced His side, and forthwith came there out blood and water" (John xix. 34. Cp. 1 John v. 6. Origen, Hom. 8).

Theodoret thus writes:—

"We see here a type of the Passion. As one of the birds was killed, and the other, having been bathed in the blood of the slain bird, was set free, so our Lord Christ was crucified in His Humanity for the moral leprosy of the World; and His human flesh suffered death, while the Godhead united itself to the suffering of His humanity. As the leper was made bright when sprinkled with the blood of the slain bird, mingled with living water, with cedar, hyssop, and scarlet, so he who believes in Christ our Saviour, and is washed with the water of Holy Baptism, is cleansed from the spots of sin. The cedar represents the incorruptibility of Christ; the oil poured on the right hand, foot, ear, and head, signifies the consecration of all our members to God's service. The leper was to be without the camp; the impenitent sinner is to be put out of the Church" (Qu. on Levit. 19).

Another ancient Bishop and Father thus writes:—

"The Leper is without the camp; so we, when infected with the leprosy of sin, were aliens from the city of God. The Priest goes forth to the leper: Christ has come down from heaven to visit us. He has died to save us. This is what is signified by the two birds. They represent the two Natures of Christ. The birds are clean, and Christ is holy. When we read of two birds, let us not dream of two Christs. No! the Only-begotten Son of God took our Nature in the womb of the Virgin Mary; but in what manner He, who is truly One Person, consists of two Natures, the divine and human, far transcends our power of understanding. The Holy Scripture, contemplating these two Natures, speaks of two birds joined together. The cedar is an emblem of the incorruption of His holy flesh. The hyssop is dipped in living water, typifying the water of baptism. The living bird is dipped in the water, in which the blood of the other bird has been received, because One Christ was in death and above death; for 'He was put to death in the flesh, and was quickened by the Spirit' (1 Pet. iii. 18). As far as He was man He endured death, but in that He is the Life He conquered it" (S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Levit. p. 357).

This subject receives much light from a comparison of the ceremonial prescribed for the sacrifice of the Red Heifer: see Num. xix. 2—8.

— the living bird] is to be dipped in the blood of the slain bird. The union of Christ's Everliving Godhead with His Manhood is that which gives efficacy to His Blood, "which cleanses from all sin," because it is the blood of God: see on Acts xx. 28. 1 John i. 7. Origen, Hom. 8. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. p. 357. Theodoret, Qu. 19. 7. seven times] A perfect number (see iv. 6); ep. the washing of Naaman in Jordan (2 Kings v. 10. 14).

8. he that is to be cleansed shall wash his clothes] There must be a co-operation of man's will and work with divine grace. Every man that hath this hope in Him (Christ) purifieth himself, even as He is pure (1 John iii. 3. Origen, Hom. 8. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. pp. 355. 358).

10. the eighth day] the day of Resurrection: as Hesychius says, p. 109. The eighth day has the same virtue as the first day, for all time is distributed into weeks of seven days (cp. ix. 1).

— two he lambs] one for a trespass-offering (vv. 13, 14), the other for a burnt-offering (vv. 19, 20).

— one ewe lamb] for a sin-offering (v. 19).

— three tenth deals] of an ephah (Num. xxviii. 5), an omner for each of the three offerings above mentioned.

— meat offering] as an act of thanksgiving: see Matt. viii. 4. Luke v. 14.

— log of oil] About half a pint (cp. v. 15).

m ch. 5. 2, 18.
& 6. 6, 7.
n Ex. 29. 24.

o Ex. 29. 11.
ch. 1. 5, 11.
& 4. 4, 24.
p ch. 7. 7.

q ch. 2. 3. & 7. 6.
& 21. 22.

r Ex. 29. 20.
ch. 8. 23.

s ch. 4. 26.

t ch. 5. 1, 6.
& 12. 7.

u ch. 5. 7.
& 19. 8.
† Heb. his hand reach not.
‡ Heb. for a
waving.

w ch. 12. 8.
& 15. 14, 15.
x ver. 10, 11.

y ver. 12.

z ver. 14.

and those things, before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: ¹² And the priest shall take one he lamb, and ^m offer him for a trespass offering, and the log of oil, and ⁿ wave them for a wave offering before the LORD: ¹³ And he shall slay the lamb ^o in the place where he shall kill the sin offering and the burnt offering, in the holy place: for ^p as the sin offering is the priest's, so is the trespass offering: ^q it is most holy: ¹⁴ And the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass offering, and the priest shall put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot: ¹⁵ And the priest shall take some of the log of oil, and pour it into the palm of his own left hand: ¹⁶ And the priest shall dip his right finger in the oil that is in his left hand, and shall sprinkle of the oil with his finger seven times before the LORD: ¹⁷ And of the rest of the oil that is in his hand shall the priest put upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot, upon the blood of the trespass offering: ¹⁸ And the remnant of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall pour upon the head of him that is to be cleansed: ^r and the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD. ¹⁹ And the priest shall offer ^t the sin offering, and make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed from his uncleanness; and afterward he shall kill the burnt offering: ²⁰ And the priest shall offer the burnt offering and the meat offering upon the altar: and the priest shall make an atonement for him, and he shall be clean.

²¹ And ^u if he be poor, and [†] cannot get so much; then he shall take one lamb for a trespass offering [†] to be waved, to make an atonement for him, and one tenth deal of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering, and a log of oil; ²² ^w And two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, such as he is able to get; and the one shall be a sin offering, and the other a burnt offering. ²³ ^x And he shall bring them on the eighth day for his cleansing unto the priest, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, before the LORD. ²⁴ ^y And the priest shall take the lamb of the trespass offering, and the log of oil, and the priest shall wave them for a wave offering before the LORD: ²⁵ And he shall kill the lamb of the trespass offering, ^z and the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass offering, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot: ²⁶ And the priest shall pour of the oil into the palm of his own left hand: ²⁷ And the priest shall sprinkle with his right finger some of the oil that is in his left hand seven times before the LORD; ²⁸ And the priest shall put of the oil that is in his hand upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the

11. of the congregation] to which he was now restored: as the sinner is, on his repentance, to the Holy Communion.

12. a wave offering] Exod. xxix. 24. Lev. vii. 30; viii. 27, 29.

13. most holy] A figure of the Holy One (vii. 6).

14. tip of the right ear] See Exod. xxix. 20. The blood of Christ must first be applied for atonement and justification; then the oil of the Spirit for sanctification (see v. 17).

17. the oil—upon the blood of the trespass offering] The Blood must be applied first, then the Oil; and the Oil is to be poured upon the Blood, and they are to be applied to ear, hand, foot. Man needs Christ's cleansing blood and the Holy Spirit's grace in every organ and faculty. "Christ is made to us Righteousness," or Justification; and then He is made to us Sanctification (1 Cor. i. 30. See on 1 John ii. 20.

2 Cor. i. 21, 22). By His Sacrifice and Resurrection and Ascension, the gift of the Holy Ghost was purchased; the Oil is poured out from Heaven upon Sion where His blood was shed (Ps. lxxviii. 18). The word cleansed means declared clean.

19. the sin offering—and afterward—the burnt offering] for we must first be reconciled to God by Christ's atoning blood before we can be accepted by God in Him: see above, viii. 14; xii. 7, 8.

21. if he be poor] See v. 7; xii. 8.

— of fine flour] The symbol of human labour improving God's gifts; mingled with oil—the emblem of divine grace, co-operating with human labour and sanctifying it; and with frankincense, the type of Christ's sweet-smelling sacrifice and prevailing prayer; all combined together, and making an eucharistic offering to God: see above, ii. 1, 2.

23. the eighth day] See xii. 3.

great toe of his right foot, upon the place of the blood of the trespass offering :

²⁹ And the rest of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall put upon the head of him that is to be cleansed, to make an atonement for him before the LORD.

³⁰ And he shall offer the one of ^a the turtledoves, or of the young pigeons, such as he can get ; ³¹ Even such as he is able to get, the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, with the meat offering : and the priest shall make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed before the LORD. ³² This is the law of him in whom is the plague of leprosy, whose hand is not able to get ^b that which pertaineth to his cleansing.

³³ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, ³⁴ ^c When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I give to you for a possession, and I put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession ; ³⁵ And he that owneth the house shall come and tell the priest, saying, It seemeth to me there is as it were ^d a plague in the house : ³⁶ Then the priest shall command that they || empty the house, before the priest go into it to see the plague, that all that is in the house be not made unclean : and afterward the priest shall go in to see the house : ³⁷ And he shall look on the plague, and, behold, if the plague be in the walls of the house with hollow strakes, greenish or reddish, which in sight are lower than the wall ; ³⁸ Then the priest shall go out of the house to the door of the house, and shut up the house seven days : ³⁹ And the priest shall come again the seventh day, and shall look : and, behold, if the plague be spread in the walls of the house ; ⁴⁰ Then the priest shall command that they take away the stones in which the plague is, and they shall cast them into an unclean place without the city : ⁴¹ And he shall cause the house to be a ver. 22.

ch. 15. 15.

b ver. 10.

c Gen. 17. 8.
Num. 32. 22.
Deut. 7. 1.
& 32. 49.

d Ps. 91. 10.
Prov. 3. 33.
Zech. 5. 4.
|| Or, prepare.

34. When ye be come into the land of Canaan—and I put the plague of leprosy in a house] Here is a pre-announcement of, and a legislative provision for—a very remarkable phenomenon—the Leprosy of houses ; which seems to be a visitation not found, or very rarely found, in other countries. The salt-petre corrosion of Egypt, described by Volney, Travels i. 55 ; Michaelis, Mos. Recht, iv. 267, seems to be hardly a parallel to it. The Hebrew Expositors assert, that it was not seen elsewhere than in the land of Israel, and that the houses of heathens in that land were not visited by it. Maimonides on Leprosy, chaps. xiv. and xvi. So Abarbanel and other Rabbis. See Burtonf. Lex. Talmud. 1943 ; Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 36 ; A Lapide ; and Bp. Patrick here.

Here then is evidence of more than human foresight in this Code of Legislation.

— I put the plague of leprosy in a house] It was therefore a divine visitation, and it was designed (as Theodoret observes, Qu. 18) to serve a spiritual purpose ; to warn the Israelites by visible tokens, even in their houses, of the contagion and deadly character of the moral leprosy of sin ; and that it is able to ruin whole houses, however strong they may be, and to make it necessary that they should be abandoned, shut up, and pulled down, and their stones scattered to the winds.

Hereby (adds Theodoret) Almighty God gave a solemn warning to the whole Nation, “the House of Israel.” It was dedicated to Him : a holy house, a Temple of God. But let them take heed to sanctify themselves, let them shun the leprosy of sin. In the course of their history, the House of Israel was on several occasions demolished on account of its leprosy. It was destroyed by the Assyrians, by the Babylonians, by Antiochus. But God in His mercy restored it.

He raised up prophets to warn it of its danger. Turn unto thy God, O Israel ; behold, the plague is come unto thy house ; and if thou wilt not be converted, it shall abide on thee and thy children (cp. Zech. v. 3, 4). If, after these divine warnings and repeated visitations, they still allowed the plague to infect the walls of their national habitation, then the Great High Priest Himself would come and survey their house, and would command the national structure of Israel to be demolished, because it was tainted with leprosy. So it was. In the fulness of time, Christ, the Divine High Priest, came to examine the House. At the beginning and close of His Ministry He purged the Temple, which was His Father's House (John ii. 16. Matt. xxi.

12, 13). He would have healed that leprous house, if it would be healed. But it would not. It became inveterately polluted by leprosy ; therefore He pronounced its doom. He said to the Jews, “Your House is left unto you desolate” (Matt. xxiii. 38). “The abomination of desolation” was set up in it—even by their own hands (see on Matt. xxiv. 15). Therefore the house was to be demolished. “Not one stone shall be left upon another, that shall not be thrown down” (Luke xxi. 6).

On this typical meaning of the Law, see S. Cyril, Glaph. in Levit. lib. i. pp. 361—4 ; Theodoret, Qu. 18 ; and Hesychius here, who enlarge on this spiritual meaning. See also S. Jerome, on Zephaniah, c. i. ; and on Jerem. c. i.

Here then, in these enactments concerning the Leprosy of Houses, was a solemn prophetic warning to the House of Israel and to all Churches in all ages of the world. Let them ponder it well.

35. come and tell the priest] This reference to the Priest, and not to the Architect or Builder (who might be presumed to have more experience on the structure of houses, and more knowledge of the materials used in them), necessarily suggests that in this legislation concerning the leprosy of houses, we must look beneath the surface and see something sacred and spiritual—something which specially concerned the Priest to know, as the Minister of God, and as the Teacher of his people (see Deut. xxiv. 8). Take heed (says God to Israel) in the plague of leprosy that thou observe diligently and do all that the Priests the Levites shall teach you ; compare above, v. 2.

37. hollow strakes] Concavities, furrows. κοιλάδας, Sept. — lower than the wall] Beneath the surface.

39. And the priest shall come again] The process of examination, in the case of leprosy of a house, is more slow and minute than in that of a person ; and remedial measures are adopted, such as the removal of the stones infected, the plastering and scraping of the house, before the house is pronounced unclean.

So God deals with Nations and Churches.

He bare long with the Amorites (Gen. xv. 16). How merciful was He to the House of Israel, and to the House of Judah, and how compassionate and long-suffering is He to Christian Churches ! But, if they abuse His patience and resist His grace, then the sentence of demolition at length goes forth, and the house is broken down (cp. Rom. ii. 3—9). So it was with Jerusalem ; so will it be with the World (2 Pet. iii. 9—11).

41. And he shall cause the house to be scraped] In a spiritual sense, this is what the Christian Priests do when they endeavour scraped within round about, and they shall pour out the dust that they scrape off without the city into an unclean place : ⁴² And they shall take other stones, and put them in the place of those stones ; and he shall take other mortar, and shall plaister the house. ⁴³ And if the plague come again, and break out in the house, after that he hath taken away the stones, and after he hath scraped the house, and after it is plaistered ; ⁴⁴ Then the priest shall come and look, and, behold, if the plague be spread in the house, it is ^e a fretting leprosy in the house : it is unclean. ⁴⁵ And he shall break down the house, the stones of it, and the timber thereof, and all the mortar of the house ; and he shall carry them forth out of the city into an unclean place. ⁴⁶ Moreover he that goeth into the house all the while that it is shut up shall be unclean until the even. ⁴⁷ And he that lieth in the house shall wash his clothes ; and he that eateth in the house shall wash his clothes.

e ch. 13. 51.
Zech. 5. 4.

† Heb. in coming in shall come in, &c.

f ver. 4.

⁴⁸ And if the priest † shall come in, and look upon it, and, behold, the plague hath not spread in the house, after the house was plaistered : then the priest shall pronounce the house clean, because the plague is healed. ⁴⁹ And ^f he shall take to cleanse the house two birds, and cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop : ⁵⁰ And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water : ⁵¹ And he shall take the cedar wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times : ⁵² And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird, and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet : ⁵³ But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and ^g make an atonement for the house : and it shall be clean.

g ver. 20.

h ch. 13. 30.

i ch. 13. 47.
k ver. 34.
l ch. 13. 2.
m Deut. 24. 8.
Ezek. 44. 23.
† Heb. in the day of the unclean, and in the day of the clean.

a ch. 22. 4.
Num. 5. 2.
2 Sam. 3. 29.
Matt. 9. 20.
Mark 5. 25.
Luke 8. 43.
|| Or, running of the reins.

⁵⁴ This is the law for all manner of plague of leprosy, and ^h scall, ⁵⁵ And for the ⁱ leprosy of a garment, ^k and of a house, ⁵⁶ And ^l for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot : ⁵⁷ To ^m teach † when it is unclean, and when it is clean : this is the law of leprosy.

XV. ¹ And the Lord spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^a When any man hath a || running issue out of his flesh, because of his issue he is unclean. ³ And this shall be his uncleanness in his issue : whether his flesh run with his issue, or his flesh be to reform a Church which is in a corrupt state. They scrape the walls, and cast forth the dust. This is what St. Paul did when he scraped off the scurf of Judaizing dogmas from the walls of the Church (Hesychius). This is what the Church of England did at the Reformation. She did not pull down her house, and build a new Church : heaven forbid ! but she scraped the walls of the old, from the scurf of corrupt accretions, and restored them to their primitive purity. This is what is to be done in other Western Churches, such as those of Italy, France, and Spain. Not a work of building a new Church, but of purifying the old. This is genuine Reformation.

^{42. they shall take other stones}] Another process in true Reformation of Churches—to take out old stones that are decayed, and put new ones in their place. We must cast out unsound dogmas, and place sound doctrine in their stead (Hesych.).

^{45. he shall break down the house}] if, after all his endeavours, there is no hope of its recovery : see on vv. 31. 39.

^{46. he that goeth into the house}] A warning against communion with heresy (Hesych.).

^{49. And he shall take}] The house is cleansed in the same manner as the person ; see vv. 4. 7. There is no cleansing for Churches or for Nations, any more than there is for individuals, except by the sacrifice of Christ, God and Man, dying for sin, and rising again for our Justification. Faith in Christ is the only safeguard of States against moral pollution ; it is the only remedy of social corruption ; and if they renounce Christianity, they cannot escape condemnation and demolition.

^{49—53. two birds}] See on vv. 4—7.

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XV.

This chapter displays additional proofs of the unclean and miserable state of Man by nature, and of his need of such cleansing as the Law prefigured, but could not provide.

By the various kinds of uncleanness here described, the foul source of which was in Man himself, and some of which were wholly involuntary (2—15), others natural (16—24), others contrary to his will and most repugnant to it (25—31), and not to be healed by human skill (cp. Luke viii. 43) ; and by consequence of which he was disqualified for approaching God (xxii. 4), and he was even (for some of them) to be put out of the camp (Num. v. 2) ; the inveterate deep-rooted malady of original Sin is displayed to man in the Levitical Law.

But the GREAT HIGH PRIEST has come down from heaven. The Woman, who had been diseased with a bloody issue twelve years, came behind Him, and touched the hem of His garment, (she could not touch His holy person in her uncleanness,) she touched with faith, and virtue went out of Him to heal her, and she was made whole from that hour, and received a blessing from Him ; “ Daughter, be of good comfort ; thy faith hath made thee whole ” (Matt. ix. 20—22. Mark v. 34. Luke viii. 43—48).

Thus, then, in reading these precepts of the Levitical Law, and in comparing them with the gracious dispensation revealed to us in the Gospel, we learn to comprehend the misery of our state by nature, and to appreciate the blessedness of our condition by grace ; and to feel something of the debt of thankfulness stopped from his issue, it is his uncleanness. ⁴ Every bed, whereon he lieth that hath the issue, is unclean: and every † thing, whereon he sitteth, shall be unclean. ⁵ And whosoever toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, ^b and bathe ^b himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ⁶ And he that sitteth on any thing whereon he sat that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ⁷ And he that toucheth the flesh of him that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ⁸ And if he that hath the issue spit upon him that is clean; then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ⁹ And what saddle soever he rideth upon that hath the issue shall be unclean. ¹⁰ And whosoever toucheth any thing that was under him shall be unclean until the even: and he that beareth any of those things shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ¹¹ And whomsoever he toucheth that hath the issue, and hath not rinsed his hands in water, he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ¹² And the ^c vessel of earth, that he toucheth which hath the issue, shall be broken: and every vessel of wood shall be rinsed in water. ¹³ And when he that hath an issue is cleansed of his issue; then ^d he shall number to himself seven days for his cleansing, and wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in running water, and shall be clean. ¹⁴ And on the eighth day he shall take to him ^e two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, and come before the LORD unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and give them unto the priest: ¹⁵ And the priest shall offer them, ^f the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering; ^g and the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD for his issue.

¹⁶ And ^h if any man's seed of copulation go out from him, then he shall wash all his flesh in water, and be unclean until the even. ¹⁷ And every garment, and every skin, whereon is the seed of copulation, shall be washed with water, and be unclean until the even. ¹⁸ The woman also with whom man shall lie with seed of copulation, they shall both bathe themselves in water, and ⁱ be unclean until the even.

¹⁹ And ^k if a woman have an issue, and her issue in her flesh be blood, she shall be † put apart seven days: and whosoever toucheth her shall be unclean until the even. ²⁰ And every thing that she lieth upon in her separation shall be unclean: every thing also that she sitteth upon shall be unclean. ²¹ And whosoever toucheth her bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, † Heb. ressel.b ch. 11. 25.

& 17. 15.c ch. 6. 28.
& 11. 32, 33.d ver. 28.
ch. 14. 8.

e ch. 14. 22, 23.

f ch. 14. 30, 31.

g ch. 14. 19, 31.

h ch. 22. 4.
Deut. 23. 10.

i 1 Sam. 21. 4.

k ch. 12. 2.

† Heb. in her separation.

which we owe to our Heavenly Father, and to His Ever-Blessed Son, who became Man for our sakes.

CR. XV. 4. Every bed] See a figure here of the contagious effects of sin: he that toucheth pitch shall be defiled therewith (Ecclus. xiii. 1).

8. if he that hath the issue spit upon him that is clean] The spittle of the unclean person conveyed uncleanness with it. But Christ Himself, the Holy One, was reviled as unclean. He was called a Samaritan by the Jews, who said that He had a devil (John viii. 48). It was not therefore without good reason and divine wisdom, that on three several occasions He employed spittle as an instrument in healing diseases. "He spit, and healed the deaf and dumb" (Mark vii. 33). He spat on the eyes of the blind, and restored his sight (Mark viii. 23). He spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, and sent him to wash in the pool of Siloam; and he went and washed and came seeing (John ix. 6, 7).

He thus refuted the calumnies of the Jews, His enemies, to whom the Levitical Law was given, and proved His Divine Power.

If He had been unclean—as they alleged—then, according to that Law, His spittle was unclean. But He was the Holy One of God; He was God manifest in the flesh, and He employed that which was an efflux of His humanity as an instrument for the exercise of His Omnipotence. He mingled it with the clay of the earth, and used it as a healing unction, and sent the blind man to Siloam to wash; and thus He showed that He had come to sanctify the elements themselves, to consecrate the earth of our old Adam, and to wash us from our sins by the means of grace, which derive their virtue from the Incarnation and Death of Him who is Emmanuel, God with us (see on John ix. 6, 7).

14. on the eighth day] the day of Resurrection to new life: see above, ix. 1; xiv. 10.

15. the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering] See viii. 4; xiv. 22.

16. be unclean] Hence we may infer the doctrine of original sin, and the consequent necessity of Baptism for Infants (Hesychius).

19. if a woman have an issue] See above, v. 1. Woman was a principal cause of Sin and Death to Man (see 1 Tim. ii. 14): and her uncleanness in nature is specially displayed in this part of the Levitical Law (ep. xii. 2. 5). How merciful there and be unclean until the even. ²² And whosoever toucheth any thing that she sat upon shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ²³ And if it be on her bed, or on any thing whereon she sitteth, when he toucheth it, he shall be unclean until the even. ²⁴ And ¹if any man lie with her at all, and her flowers be upon him, he shall be unclean seven days; and all the bed whereon he lieth shall be unclean.

† See ch. 20. 18.

m Matt. 9. 20.
Mark 5. 25.
Luke 8. 43.

²⁵ And if ^m a woman have an issue of her blood many days out of the time of her separation, or if it run beyond the time of her separation; all the days of the issue of her uncleanness shall be as the days of her separation: she shall be unclean. ²⁶ Every bed whereon she lieth all the days of her issue shall be unto her as the bed of her separation: and whatsoever she sitteth upon shall be unclean, as the uncleanness of her separation. ²⁷ And whosoever toucheth those things shall be unclean, and shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even. ²⁸ But ⁿ if she be cleansed of her issue, then she shall number to herself seven days, and after that she shall be clean. ²⁹ And on the eighth day she shall take unto her two turtles, or two young pigeons, and bring them unto the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ³⁰ And the priest shall offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for her before the LORD for the issue of her uncleanness.

n ver. 13.

³¹ Thus shall yé ° separate the children of Israel from their uncleanness; that they die not in their uncleanness, when they ^p defile my tabernacle that is among them.

o ch. 11. 47.
Deut. 24. 8.
Ezek. 44. 23.
p Num. 5. 3.
& 19. 13, 20.
Ezek. 5. 11.
& 23. 38.
q ver. 2.
r ver. 16.
s ver. 19.

³² ^q This is the law of him that hath an issue, ^r and of him whose seed goeth from him, and is defiled therewith; ³³ ^s And of her that is sick of her flowers, and of him that hath an issue, of the man, ^t and of the woman, ^u and of him that lieth with her that is unclean.

t ver. 25.
u ver. 24.

a ch. 10. 1, 2.

XVI. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses after ^a the death of the two sons fore was the dispensation of God in making the Seed of the Woman to be the source of Eternal Life and Health to Man!

^{30.} the priest shall offer the one for a sin offering] The issue of blood, of the corrupt nature derived from the old Adam, was unclean and sinful, and needed a sin-offering and a burnt-offering; the one for atonement, the other for acceptance into favour with God. We see therefore the uncleanness of man by nature, and the weakness of the Law, and the power of Faith in Christ. The touch of the faithful woman in the Gospel made her whole (Luke viii. 48); she did not defile Him, but He cleansed her. His divine Love responded to the Touch of Faith, and virtue went forth from Him to heal her, and to bless her in soul and body. And why? Because He is the Fountain opened for sin and uncleanness (Zech. xiii. 1). The streams of life and health which flow from this Fountain have power to cleanse the dark waters of pollution which issue from the first Adam, and to stem the dark foul tide, and to turn it backward, and to fill the channels of Human Nature with the refreshing waters of salvation. "He is the Lord who hath washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and hath purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof" (Isa. iv. 4).

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XVI.

In the foregoing chapters (x.—xv.) the Holy Spirit has revealed the evidence afforded by the Levitical Law of Man's manifold uncleanness in his natural condition by reason of Sin. He has displayed the defilement of Death, the consequence of sin (x. 6). He has unfolded the relation of the Animal Creation to Man, apart from Christ (ch. xi.). He has shown us our uncleanness from our natural Birth, and the uncleanness produced by it (ch. xii.). He has exhibited the uncleanness of Disease, the figure of sin, communicating itself by contagion and infection to all around, even to garments and houses (xiii. 2—48). He has opened to our eyes a view of the livid waters of the dark fountain within us (xv. 2—33). He now proceeds to display to us a brighter and more joyous spectacle; He lifts up the Veil of the Holy of Holies, and reveals to us God sitting on the Mercy-seat between the Cherubim, and reconciled to Man by the Sacrifice of the Death of Christ, our Divine Victim, and Eternal High Priest, who has entered into the heavenly Holy of Holies with His own blood, "where He ever liveth to make intercession for us" (Heb. vii. 25).

This chapter displays a clear evidence of the true scope and meaning of the Levitical Law.

The Law of the Great Day of Atonement is declared here to be "a statute for ever," "an everlasting statute" (see vv. 29. 31. 34).

In what sense is it everlasting? Not certainly in a literal sense: not certainly as celebrated in the Tabernacle or in the Temple, but as perpetuated in the "everlasting Gospel" of Christ.

It is well said by an ancient Christian Father: "We who are in Christ's Church, believe Moses; we read his writings, as well knowing that he was a Prophet, and that by the revelation of God he described future mysteries, which we see fulfilled in their season. But they who do not read them in their spiritual sense, how can they believe Moses to be a prophet? The Levitical Law, as St. Paul has taught us, and all things that are in it, were 'imposed until the time of reformation' (Heb. ix. 10). They were like moulds of a statue: but now the statue is made, the use of the mould ceases. Jerusalem was once a royal city, and it had a magnificent temple. But He has now appeared who is the True Temple of God, and who said, 'Destroy this Temple' (John ii. 19). He has built the heavenly Jerusalem. And now that the heavenly city is built, the need of the earthly has ceased. Of old there was a High Priest who cleansed the people with the blood of bulls and goats, but now that the true High Priest is come, the former Priesthood is no more.—It is a providential dispensation of God, that the City and Temple of Jerusalem have been destroyed; for if they were still standing, of Aaron, when they offered before the LORD, and died; ² And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he ^b come not at all times into the holy place within the veil before the mercy seat, which is upon the ark; that he die not: for ^c I will appear in the cloud upon the mercy seat. ³ Thus shall Aaron ^d come into the holy place: ^e with a young bullock for a sin offering, and a ram for a burnt offering. ⁴ He shall put on ^f the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments; therefore ^g shall he wash his flesh in water, and so put them on. ⁵ And he shall take of ^h the congregation of the children of Israel two kids of the goats for a sin offering, and one ram for a burnt offering.

b Ex. 30. 10.
ch. 23. 27.
Heb. 9. 7. & 10. 19

c Ex. 25. 22.
& 40. 34.
1 Kings 8. 10,
11, 12.
d Heb. 9. 7, 12, 24, 25.
e ch. 4. 3.
f Ex. 28. 39, 42,
43.
ch. 6. 10.
Ezek. 44. 17, 18.
g Ex. 30. 20.
ch. 8. 6, 7.
h See ch. 4. 14.
Num. 29. 11.
2 Chron. 29. 21.
Ezek. 45. 22, 23.

Fzra 6. 17.

some who are weak in faith might be dazzled by the outward splendour of the literal types, and not cleave by faith to the spiritual antitypes. If there are any, therefore, who in considering the Levitical ritual of the Great Day of Atonement, and in looking at the two he-goats,—the one sacrificed; the other let go, charged with sins, into the wilderness,—do not recognize the One Christ, who died for our sins, and who took away our sins; and do not see there ^{the everlasting statute} of which God here speaks by Moses, let him go up thrice a year to Jerusalem, and there search for the Altar which has crumbled in the dust, and offer up his victims there without a Priest. But no: thanks be to God, the earthly Temple and Priesthood are abolished, that we may raise our hearts to the heavenly, and look up with faith and love and joy to Him who offered Himself once for all, and who ever liveth to make intercession for us: see Origen, Hom. x.

Here begins a new Parashah, or Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xviii. 30.

The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Amos ix. 7—15, which pre-announces the restoration of the Tabernacle of David; a prophecy applied by St. James—the Bishop of Jerusalem—at the first Council of the Christian Church, to the raising up of the Jewish Church in Christ, and to the union of all Nations therein (Acts xv. 16, 17). Perhaps St. James may have been induced to cite specially that prophetic Scripture, because it had been associated, in the public readings of the Synagogues, with this portion of Leviticus, which displays, in a figure, the work of Christ, our Great High Priest, entering into the heavenly Holy of Holies, and reconciling the World to God by His own Blood (Heb. ix. 7—12. 24—28).

CH. XVI. 1. the two sons of Aaron] Nadab and Abihu (x. 1). The Divine Legislator, having exhibited the various evidences of man's uncleanness, which are implied in the Levitical enactments contained in the foregoing chapters, proceeds now, in natural order, to speak of the remedy provided for sin, the source of all uncleanness; and reveals in a figurative shadow the Atonement, to be made by Christ, entering with His own blood into the heavenly Holy of Holies.

He connects this revelation with the sin of Nadab and Abihu, because it showed the uncleanness of Death, the common heritage of sin: see x. 4—6; and because it showed also the necessity of faith and undeviating obedience to God's commands.

2. that he come not at all times into the holy place] the Holy of Holies; but only once a year, on the day of Atonement or Expiation (see vv. 16—18. Exod. xxx. 10; and Heb. ix. 7), the fifth day before the Feast of Tabernacles; the tenth day of the seventh month, Tisri (Num. xxix. 1—11. Josephus, Ant. iii. 103). On the ceremonial of this day, see the treatise Yomah (Tract xvi.), in the Mishna (Seder Moed). Lightfoot, Temple Service, chap. xiv. vol. i. p. 961. Reland, Antiq. Sacr. iv. 6; and the learned essay of Bähr, Symbolik ii. 664—698. Cp. Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 655. Rev. S. Clark, in Dr. Smith's Bib. Dict. i. 135. Fairbairn, Typology, ii. 353.

On the typical meaning of this day's ritual, see Heb. ix. 1—15. 23—28; x. 12—23.

The High Priest under the Law was an express type of the Messiah and His priestly office; the Atonement which he made, was the representation of the propitiation effected by Christ for the sins of the world. For the making this Atonement, the High Priest was appointed once every year to enter into the Holy of Holies, and no oftener. For the Lord said unto Moses, "Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he come not at all times into the holy place within the veil before the mercy-seat, which is upon the ark, that he die not." None entered into that holy place but the High Priest alone; and he himself could enter thither but once in the year; and thereby showed that "the High Priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands," was to enter into the holy place, "having obtained eternal redemption for us" (Heb. ix. 11, 12). The Jews did all believe that the Tabernacle did signify this world, and the Holy of Holies the highest heavens; wherefore, as the High Priest did slay the sacrifice, and with the blood thereof did pass through the rest of the Tabernacle, and with that blood enter into the Holy of Holies; so was the Messiah here to offer up Himself, and being slain, to pass through all the courts of this world below, and with His blood to enter into the highest heavens, the most glorious seat of the majesty of God. Thus Christ's Ascension was represented typically (Bp. Pearson, Art. vi. p. 504. Cp. Origen, Hom. in Levit. 9. S. Cyril, de Ador. ix. p. 311; and Glaphyr, in Levit. ii. p. 369. Theodore, Qu. in Levit. 22. Deyling, Obs. Sacr. ii. 75). The High Priest could only go once a year into the Most Holy Place; and he went alone. Aaron could not obtain admission there even for his own sons. But our Great High Priest, Jesus Christ, has consecrated for us a new and living way into the holiest, so that we have boldness to enter in, by His blood (Heb. x. 19, 20). — the mercy seat] See Exod. xxv. 21, 22.

3. with a young bullock] The sacrifices offered on this day were fifteen: the two daily sacrifices; a bullock and two rams and seven lambs, all of them for burnt-offerings; and two goats for sin; the one eaten, the other burnt; the High Priest's bullock for sin, which is burnt. And the service of all these sacrifices offered on this day is done by the High Priest alone. And all the other services of this day, the burning of incense, the trimming of the lamps, is done by the High Priest only (Maimonides on the Day of Atonement, chap. i.).

Thus the High Priest prefigured Christ, who accomplished the work of Atonement "alone, and of the People there was none with Him; His own arm brought salvation" (Isa. lxiii. 5).

— a sin offering] and after it a burnt-offering; the sin-offering must precede the burnt-offering; for there is no acceptance of any offering without the previous atonement made for sin by the blood of Christ: see viii. 14; ix. 7.

4. the holy linen coat] See Exod. xxviii. 39, 42, 43. All these garments of linen were emblematic of the righteousness in which our Great High Priest is clothed (cp. Rev. xix. 8). The Priest was first attired in pure linen garments, and so entered into the Holy of Holies, and finally left them there (v. 23), where he put on other garments, which were called golden garments (Maimonides on the Day of Atonement, iii. 7—11; iv. 2), and came forth to the tabernacle.—The first were garments of holiness and grace, the second were robes of splendour and glory. Such was the act of our Great High Priest. He put on Holiness and was transfigured to Glory. And so are His Saints transfigured also.

It is observed by some of the Fathers, that the garments, which were first put on by the High Priest, were such as were common to other Priests, and not special to the High Priest alone; and the reason which they suggest was, that it was not proper that Aaron should appear as a type of Christ, when he was sacrificing for his own sins. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. pp. 372, 373.

— shall he wash his flesh] So Christ was baptized at His inauguration into His Priesthood (Matt. iii. 16). And here we may see the duty of all Christians, who in a large sense are made Priests to God in Christ (Rev. i. 6), to "have their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and their bodies washed with pure water" (Heb. x. 22), and so to approach God.

5. two kids] rather, he-goats; in the original the word is sair, (literally, hairy, hirtus, whence Latin hircus). It is remarkable

1 ch. 9. 7.
Heb. 5. 2.
& 7. 27, 28.
& 9. 7.

† Heb. Azazel.

⁶ And Aaron shall offer his bullock of the sin offering, which is for himself, and ¹ make an atonement for himself, and for his house. ⁷ And he shall take the two goats, and present them before the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁸ And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the LORD, and the other lot for the † scapegoat. ⁹ And Aaron shall bring that the Vatican edition of the Septuagint here has χιμάρους throughout the chapter, not πράγους, though that word is found in the Frankfort edition of the Sept., 1597 (Trommius, in v. πράγους). Perhaps the word πράγους was avoided as offensive to Greek ears; χιμάρους also occurs in iv. 23, 24; ix. 3. 15; x. 16. Num. vii. passim; and xv. passim.

⁶ And Aaron shall offer his bullock of the sin offering] for himself and his house; showing the inability of the Levitical Priesthood to take away sin.

This was the first offering that was peculiar to this day—the day of Atonement. It began with a profession of faith in a greater High Priest and a holier sacrifice, to come hereafter.

— make an atonement] The Septuagint has ἐξιδάσται. The Apostles adopt the word ἰδασκεσθαι, and apply it to Christ (Heb. ii. 17), and call His atonement ἰασθήριον (Rom. iii. 25), and ἰασμός (1 John ii. 2; iv. 10).

⁷ the two goats] mentioned in v. 5.

⁸ shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the LORD, and the other lot for the scapegoat] Both of them, like the two birds (in xiv. 4. 49), were figures of Christ, but in different respects.

As the sacrifice of the one goat, and the escape of the other, were determined by the lot, which was “cast into the lap” by men, “but the whole disposal of it was of the Lord” (Prov. xvi. 33); so in the work of the Crucifixion, men were agents, but all that was done therein was foreknown by God; and although in the means used they sinned against Him, “and with wicked hands crucified and slew the Prince of Life,” yet the salvation of the world thereby was foreordained by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God (see on Acts ii. 23; iv. 28).

The two goats were presented before the Lord, and one goat was “to be offered for a sin-offering,” upon which the lot of the Lord should fall; and that lot of the Lord was lifted up on high in the hand of the High Priest, and then laid upon the goat which was to die; so the hand of God is said to have determined what should be done unto our Saviour, whose Passion was typified by that Sin-offering (Bp. Pearson, Art. iv. p. 185).

— for the scapegoat] Heb. for Azazel: a word found only in this chapter (vs. 8. 10. 26); and in each case it is preceded by the Hebrew prefix, signifying to or for.

The word Azazel is, probably, derived from the root azal, to remove, to ward off, to send away (Gesen., pp. 6. 17; Hengstenberg, Moses and Egypt, p. 160), and it may therefore express the sense of removing, carrying away the sin of the people and its consequences. Therefore, the words “for Azazel” may mean “for carrying away,” or “for removal” (so Bähr, Symb. ii. 668; Tholuck, in Hebr. ii. p. 80; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 659, 660), and the Septuagint has in v. 10, εἰς ἀποποιήν: and this sense is adopted by Philippson and others. Cp. Davidson, Int. p. 269.

Some Expositors have assigned to it the same meaning as belongs to the words ἀλεξίκακος, averruncus, ἀποπομπᾶιος, in an active sense; and it is rendered ἀποπομπᾶιος by Sept. It is translated ἀπερχόμενος by Symmachus, ἀφιέμενος by Theodotion, and ἀπολελυμένος by Aquila, and “emissarius” by Vulg., which last word has been understood by some to have a passive sense, though this is not necessary. The emissary of a lake is that which emits or lets out the water from it, as well as is let out from it. And the “hircus emissarius” is not only the goat which is sent out, but which sends forth and carries away the sin and guilt of Israel. The Arabic version interprets Azazel as the place to which the goat was sent, and so many of the Rabbis (cp. Deyling, Observ. Sacr. i. 84; Bochart, Hieroz. i. p. 561; Bähr, Symb. ii. 666; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 658). The Syriac version renders Azazel as equivalent to the mighty God. Others have derived the word Azazel from ez, a she-goat, and azal, to remove (Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 136), where is a learned essay on the subject. But this opinion seems now to be generally abandoned. Others regard Azazel as an Evil Genius, the opposite of Jehovah, and suppose that the goat was destined for him. So some of the Rabbis, and Origen, c. Celsum vi. p. 305. S. Irenæus says (i. 12), that the Valentinian heretics gave that name to the Evil One. See also S. Cyril, Glaphyr. p. 374; c. Julian. v. 9. Theodoret, Qu. 22. Cp. Spencer, de Leg. Heb. iii. 8. 3. Ammon., Rosenmüller, and Hengstenberg, Christol. i. l. 36; and on Egypt and Moses, pp. 159—172, where this opinion is maintained; and Keil, p. 104, and Davidson, Intr. p. 268, who attributes this Levitical requirement to a dualistic theory, as if the Divine Legislator could countenance an error contravening His own supremacy, and make it the grand work of His own commands. The later Jews called the Evil Spirit by the name Azazel (Book of Enoch, viii. 1; x. 12; and see Bähr, Symb. ii. pp. 667—669. Ewald, Israel. Alterthum, p. 370. Milton (Par. Lost, i) gives the name of Azazel to one of the spirits of Pandemonium. Some have thought that the Azazel represented the wicked sent into outer darkness. Cp. Bede, Qu. p. xv. Radulph. Flaviac., in Levit. p. 160).

The truth seems to be (as many of the Ancient Expositors affirmed) that Christ Himself was typified by the Azazel. “He was numbered with the transgressors.” “He bore our iniquities, and the chastisement of our peace was upon Him. God laid upon Him the iniquities of us all” (Isa. liii. 6. 11, 12. 1 Pet. ii. 24). And as the Azazel was sent away, loaded with the sin of the people, into the wilderness, and as he carried their sins into a land not inhabited (v. 22), so Christ took away the sins of the world (John i. 29). Cp. Bp. Andrewes, i. 26; and Bp. Pearson quoted in the foregoing note. Deyling, Obs. Sacr. i. 84.

The mysterious awe, with which the Jews regarded the Azazel, is very observable. He was considered as accursed. He was even regarded as a personification of evil itself. His name, Azazel—the emblem of all good to man—was by a remarkable transfer applied to the Evil One. No wonder. For the sins of the people were laid upon the Azazel. He was the living incorporation of their sin and guilt before God. In this respect he was the type of Christ. The prophet says of Christ, “We hid as it were our faces from Him; we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted” (Isa. liii. 3, 4); and the Apostle says, “God made Him to be sin for us, Who knew no sin” (2 Cor. v. 21). “He was made a curse for us” (Gal. iii. 13). “Christ being made in the likeness of sinful flesh” (Rom. viii. 3), and dying for sin on the cross, was typified by the serpent itself (John iii. 14), the type of the evil one. Thus, by a mysterious combination, Christ joined in Himself the very image of evil, and yet was the essence and origin of all good to man. He seemed to be an incorporation of evil, and yet He took away evil. He endured death, the wages of our sin; and by dying He opened to us the gate of everlasting life.

It is in this sense that the Christian Fathers speak of CHRIST as our Azazel; see S. Barnabas, Epist. § 7. Tertullian, c. Jud. ad finem, and contra Marcion. lib. iii. 7. Justin Martyr, c. Tryphon. c. 40. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Levit. p. 373. Theodoret, Qu. 22. Cp. Dean Jackson on the Creed, ix. c. xxiv. Ainsworth on v. 22. Mather on the Types, p. 457. Bp. Patrick on v. 10. Some were of opinion that the live goat represented Christ in His Divine Nature, while the goat that was slain symbolized Him in His suffering humanity. See Hesychius, in Levit. p. 122. Cp. above, the ceremonies used in the purifying of the leper by means of the two birds, the one slain, the other let free, xiv. 4—6. 49—52. Those two interpretations of the Ancient Expositors do in fact run up into one: for it was as man that Christ suffered death; and as God, He raised Himself by His Divine Power, and abolished our sins.

It is a mistake to suppose that the words in the text, “one goat for the Lord, the other goat for Azazel,” imply an opposition as between two persons, the Lord and Azazel. Both the goats were for the Lord; both were presented to Him (vs. 7. 10); both (as the Talmudists say) were to be exactly alike in age, size, stature, and value; they were to be like twins—or as two in one; but one was to be received by the Lord as a sacrifice, the other to be sent away into the wilderness.

As an ancient Father says, “Some erroneously imagine that one of the goats was destined for an evil and unclean spirit, and was sent to him into the wilderness;” but this opinion is to be rejected as false, and as savouring of heathen superstition. What then was the meaning of this ceremony? Two goats were taken by the Priest, both were alike in age and beauty, and lots were cast upon them; one was sacrificed; the other, after Aaron had laid his hands upon it, and made a confession of sin over it, the goat upon which the LORD's lot † fell, and offer him for a sin offering. † Heb. went up.

¹⁰ But the goat, on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat, shall be presented alive before the LORD, to make ^k an atonement with him, and to let him go for ^{k 1 John 2. 2.} a scapegoat into the wilderness.

¹¹ And Aaron shall bring the bullock of the sin offering, which is for himself, and shall make an atonement for himself, and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin offering which is for himself: ¹² And he shall take ¹ a censer ^{1 ch. 10. 1. Num. 16. 18, 46. Rev. 8. 5.} full of burning coals of fire from off the altar before the LORD, and his hands full of ^m sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the veil: ¹³ ⁿ And he shall put the incense upon the fire before the LORD, that the cloud of the incense may cover the ^o mercy seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not: ^{m Ex. 30. 34. n Ex. 30. 1, 7, 8. Num. 16. 7, 18, 46. Rev. 8. 3, 4. o Ex. 25. 21.}

was to be sent free into the wilderness. Christ was typified by both these goats. The goats being alike in nature and size, prefigured one and the same Christ. But they signified two different acts of Christ. One was sacrificed; so Christ was sacrificed for us. The other was let free; and He, Christ, was also let free. He died for our sins, according to the Scriptures, and He also rose again, and ascended into "a land not inhabited by us"—even into heaven itself—bearing our sins and carrying them away. A similar type is seen in the two Birds at the cleansing of the leper. Christ was typified by both (see above, on xiv. 4). One was sacrificed, the other was let free. Christ died, and Christ lives for ever. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. p. 273. Cp. Theodoret, Qu. 22. Cp. Tertullian, c. Marcion. iii. 7, "Duo hirci utrumque ordinem Christi figurant;" i. e. one represents Him in His humiliation, the other in His glory.

On the whole, it seems most reasonable to concur with those who interpret the words "for Azazel" as meaning "to be an Azazel," or carrier away, a bearer off of the sins of the people.

The two goats of the Great Day of Expiation represent the double work of Christ in making Atonement for the sins of the world, and not only dying, but also rising again and living for ever, and thus showing that our sins are taken away and we are justified. He died for our sins, and rose again for our justification (Rom. iv. 25). He was crucified through weakness, but liveth by the power of God (2 Cor. xiii. 4). He was dead, and behold He liveth for evermore (Rev. i. 18). He was put to death in the flesh, and was quickened in the spirit (1 Pet. iii. 18). He bare our sins as our Sin-offering, and reconciled us to God. But He did something more than this, He also rose again and carried them away. As Bengel and Matthew Henry say, "The two he-goats prefigured Christ. The slain one was a type of Christ sacrificed for our sins; the other that was let go, was a type of Christ rising again for our justification, and the living surety of our forgiveness. As a single goat was insufficient for both purposes, two were used."

In looking at the goat on whose head Aaron laid both his hands, and confessed "over him the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions, and all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat" (v. 21), and in following with our eyes the goat as he is sent into a land not inhabited, and goes forth into the wilderness and so disappears from the sight, we see God's mercy and love in Christ not only in forgiving our sins, but in putting them away (Heb. ix. 26), in blotting them out for ever, in abolishing "the whole body of sin" (Rom. vi. 6), in hiding our transgressions from His own eyes and ours, and covering all our sins (Ps. xxxiii. 1, 2; lxxxv. 2), so that He casts them behind His back and remembers them no more (Ps. xxix. 7. Isa. xxxviii. 17; xlv. 22). As far as the east is from the west, so far hath He removed our transgressions from us (Ps. ciii. 12): they are cast into the depths of the sea (Micah vii. 19), so that "though our sins be sought for, they cannot be found" (Jer. l. 20).

Here also is a representation of our own duty.

If our sins are put away, let us not recall them and cherish them in our hearts (2 Cor. v. 19. Heb. ix. 26. Rom. vi. 2. 6. 12). Christ "gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Tit. ii. 1-4. Cp. Theodoret, Qu. 22. Bp. Andrewes, i. 26).

Lastly, it may be observed, that as it is with the ineffable Name JEHOVAH, so it is also with two names, SHILOH and AZAZEL, which designate our adorable Redeemer.

Both of them have baffled the powers of critical analysis

(with regard to Shiloh, see on Gen. xlix. 10). We may approximate to their meaning, but we cannot pronounce confidently upon it. We know of Whom they speak, but we cannot exactly define their significance.

Is there not a moral and spiritual lesson here? May we not thus be reminded of the limits of our own intellectual powers, and be taught to exercise humility in spiritual things?

Even in many matters of mere chronological and geographical detail we are often at fault. We do not know the exact day nor year of Christ's birth. The sites on which His miraculous actions were performed are unknown to us. We cannot trace the route of the Israelites in the wilderness. The place of the burial of Moses is hidden from us. We cannot analyze the words SHILOH and AZAZEL, Names of Christ, Who "hath a Name written which no man knoweth but He Himself" (Rev. xix. 12). We see only the skirts of His glory. We may learn knowledge from our ignorance. We may learn to know ourselves better, and to seek for knowledge not in ourselves, but in Him.

May we not also learn another profitable lesson? The doctrine of the Messiahship of Christ our Shiloh, and the doctrine of Christ our Azazel, and of the Atonement made by Him on the Cross, are divine mysteries; mysteries to be treated with deep reverence and humility. If we cannot analyze the Name, how can we expect fully to apprehend the thing itself? The Cherubim spread their wings over the Mercy-seat; the Angels desire to look into the mysteries of Christ's Incarnation, and of that priceless Blood sprinkled on the Mercy-seat (1 Pet. i. 12). Let us learn a lesson of reverential awe and devout humility from them.

9. And Aaron shall bring the goat upon which the LORD's lot fell] This goat is to be sacrificed first, before the other is let go. The death of the one goat precedes the dismissal of the other: Christ first bears our sins, and then He carries them away.

10. the goat, on which the lot fell] to be the scapegoat, or rather to be Azazel (or carrier away), shall be presented alive before the Lord, and be consecrated to God. Here is a refutation of the Rabbinical notion that Azazel is a name of the Evil One; see v. 8, and cp. Theodoret, Qu. 22. He was presented before the Lord, in order to make Atonement (Cyril, p. 373). Literally, to cover, i. e. to cover sins) with him (i. e. with the he-goat) and to send him for a carrier away (i. e. of sin) into the wilderness far from man's abode, and so that he might be seen no more. Here is another proof that this goat, as well as the other, is a type of Christ, Who alone (αὐτός) "is the propitiation for our sins" (1 John ii. 2).

11. the sin offering, which is for himself] See v. 6.

— and shall make an atonement for himself] For Aaron was a sinner; but Christ was without sin; and Christ sanctified the sanctuary itself; and takes away sin (S. Cyril).

12, 13. he shall take a censer] Lit. the censer, from the brazen altar of burnt offering in the outer court. The censer, which was used on this day, was a golden censer (Maimonides on the Day of Atonement, ii. 5), and to this censer probably the Apostle refers, when he is describing the ritual of this day as typical of the sacerdotal ministry of Christ entering within the veil, into the true Holy of Holies: see note on Heb. ix. 3, 4.

Before Christ entered into the Most Holy Place with His own blood, He sanctified Himself by prayer (John xvii. Matt. xxvi. 36).

This sweet incense, beaten small in the golden censer

p ch. 4. 5.
Heb. 9. 13, 25.
& 10. 4.
q ch. 4. 6.
r Heb. 2. 17. & 5.
s ver. 2.
t & 9. 7, 28.
u Heb. 6. 10.
& 9. 3, 7, 12.

t See Ex. 29. 36.
Ezek. 45. 18.
Heb. 9. 22, 23.

† Heb. dwelleth.

u See Ex. 34. 3.
Luke 1. 10.

14 And ^phe shall take of the blood of the bullock, and ^qsprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy seat eastward; and before the mercy seat shall he sprinkle of the blood with his finger seven times. 15 ^rThen shall he kill the goat of the sin offering, that is for the people, and bring his blood ^swithin the vail, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon the mercy seat, and before the mercy seat: 16 And he shall ^tmake an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins: and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation, that [†]remaineth among them in the midst of their uncleanness. 17 ^uAnd there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel. 18 And he shall go out unto the altar brought within the veil, so that the cloud of the incense might cover the Mercy-seat, prefigured the prevailing prayer of our Divine Mediator, "who ever liveth to make intercession for us;" which ascends in a cloud of sweet incense before the Throne of Grace (cp. Rev. viii. 3. Ps. cxli. 2. Heb. ix. 24).

14. And he shall take of the blood of the bullock] Into the Holy of Holies; as the Apostle says, "Into the second (i. e., the most holy place) went the High Priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself and for the errors of the people; the Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first Tabernacle was yet standing: which was a figure (παραβολή) for the time then present, in which (Tabernacle) were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience; which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances imposed on them until the time of reformation. But Christ, being come an High Priest of the good things to come, by the greater and more perfect Tabernacle not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building, neither by the blood of goats and of calves, but by His own blood He entered in once for all into the Holy Place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh: how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God? And for this cause He is the Mediator of the New Testament (or Covenant), that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament (or Covenant), they which are called might receive the promise of the eternal inheritance. For Christ entered not into holy places made with hands, which are figures of the true; but into Heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us: nor yet that He may offer Himself often, as the High Priest entereth into the holy place every year with the blood of others; for then must He often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once for all in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. And inasmuch as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was once offered to bear (ἀνεγκεῖν) the sins of many; and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb. ix. 7—15. 24—28).

— and sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy seat eastward; and before the mercy seat] The blood of the bullock for the sins of the Priest himself, and the blood of the goat for the sins of the people (v. 15), are to be sprinkled upon the mercy-seat (so Fulg.; literally, at the face of the mercy-seat) eastward, that is, toward the door, showing its relation to the people, and also toward, and on, the mercy-seat, as showing its relation to God. The efficacy of the blood was twofold; to cleanse the people, and to propitiate God.

Such is the virtue also of Christ's blood. It is the blood of sprinkling which cleanses us; and it is the blood of Atonement which reconciles us to God. And this was to be done seven times, a perfect number. The mercy-seat upon the Ark was the Throne of God's presence, where He was seated between the Cherubim. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission" (Heb. ix. 22). "It is the blood that maketh atonement for the soul" (Lev. xvii. 11). And this sprinkling of the blood by the Priest upon the Mercy-seat, and before the Mercy-seat, was—as we know from the Holy Spirit Himself speaking in the Epistle to the Hebrews—a figure of the act of Christ entering into God's presence in heaven with His own blood (Heb. ix. 11—14. 24) to make atonement for us, and to plead in His Father's presence the never-failing efficacy of that blood as a full and perfect sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction, for the sins of the whole world (see on Rom. iii. 1—26. 1 Cor. i. 30. Col. i. 14. 1 John i. 7; ii. 2; iv. 10).

15. within the vail] A type of heaven; "whither the forerunner is for us entered, even JESUS, made a High Priest for ever" (Heb. vi. 19, 20).

16. he shall make an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel] A proof of the hatefulness of sin in God's sight. Though the children of Israel never entered into the Holy Place, yet it needed an atonement, because of their sin. The Altar of incense itself needed an atonement for the same reason (vv. 18, 19). The Church is defiled by our sins, and cannot be cleansed except by the Blood of Him who has washed her (Eph. v. 26). The holiest acts of the holiest men need a sacrifice for sin. Cp. S. Augustine, Qu. 53. Theodoret, Qu. 22.

17. there shall be no man in the tabernacle] while he makes atonement: the whole work of atonement was done by Christ. "He trod the winepress alone, and of the people there was none with Him" (Isa. lxiii. 3). Before His Passion, "all His disciples forsook Him and fled," and left Him alone (Matt. xxvi. 56. John xvi. 32). "There is one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. ii. 5). We all like sheep have gone astray (Isa. liii. 6); we "are altogether become abominable; there is none that doeth good, no not one" (Ps. xiv. 3). "No man may deliver his brother nor make agreement unto God for him; for it cost more to redeem their souls, so that he must let that alone for ever" (Ps. xlix. 7, 8). No one was permitted by God to divide the honour and dignity of the Day of Atonement with Aaron the earthly High Priest, who was only a shadow of the true. Shall any one therefore dare to associate any creature in the great work of Atonement and Redemption and Intercession with Christ? Shall there be "Co-redemers," "Co-mediators" with Him? Yet that title is applied to created beings by some who call themselves Christians, and denounce all others as heretics: see the recent work of the Bishop of Mondovi ("Un Anello," Torino, 1863), where the title "Co-redemer" is given to the Blessed Virgin.

But let us shun such vanities, and let us ascribe all glory and praise to Him, and Him alone! "O priceless grace, O overflowing love! where sin abounded, grace did much more abound" (Rom. v. 20). "It is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners" (1 Tim. i. 15). Marvel not, O man, that thou hast ascended in Christ, and that thou, who wast once lying in shame, art now glorified in Him; for thy sake the Most Highest was made low, and suffered death, the death of the cross, and rose from the dead, and went up into heaven, within the veil, into the true holy of holies; and now thou thyself mayest have boldness to enter into the holiest, by the blood of Jesus (Heb. x. 19). O glorious King, what return can we make to Thee for this infinite love of thine? What sufficient thanks can we render to Thee who hast redeemed guilty man by Thine own blood, who art God? (Radulph. Flaviac., in Levit. lib. xii. p. 160).

18. shall go out] in order to return again into the Most Holy Place. The manifold riches of the love of our Saviour Christ, both God and Man, in His one act of suffering on the Cross, and that is before the LORD, and * make an atonement for it; and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about. ¹⁹ And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and ^y hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

x Ex. 30. 10.
ch. 4. 7, 18.
Heb. 9. 22, 23.

²⁰ And when he hath made an end of ^z reconciling the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the live goat: ²¹ And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, ^a putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of [†] a fit man into the wilderness: ²² And the goat shall ^b bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land [†] not inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness.

z ver. 16.
Ezek. 45. 20.

²³ And Aaron shall come into the tabernacle of the congregation, ^c and shall put off the linen garments, which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there: ²⁴ And he shall wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments, and come forth, ^d and offer his burnt offering, and the burnt offering of the people, and make an atonement for himself, and for the people. ²⁵ And ^e the fat of the sin offering shall he burn upon the altar.

a Isa. 53. 6.

† Heb. a man of opportunity.
b Isa. 53. 11, 12.
John 1. 29.
Heb. 9. 28.
1 Pet. 2. 24.
† Heb. of separation.

c Ezek. 42. 14.
& 41. 19.

d ver. 3, 5.

e ch. 4. 10.

in redeeming the world by that one Sacrifice, could not be represented in any one single type; but required a large combination and rich variety of images to present even a dim shadow of its wonderful comprehensiveness (see above, i. 1), as was seen in the various sacrifices of this great Day of Atonement.

In like manner, His one act of entering with His own Blood into the heavenly Holy of Holies, once for all, at His Ascension, to make intercession for us, could not be represented by one single entrance of the High Priest into the Holy of Holies, which was a figure of the true, but required several acts of going into the Holy Place within the veil (see vv. 1-4, 15, and Philo in Leg. ad Caium, p. 1035, who says that the High Priest went in thrice; cp. Bähr, ii. 670), in order to represent, even in a faint shadow, the manifold benefits procured for the Church Universal, by Christ's Ascension into heaven.

18, 19. and make an atonement for it] See v. 16.

21. Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat] Aaron shall lay both his hands, so as to make them rest, and lean on the head with hard pressure. This is the meaning of the word samach, here rendered lay (see Exod. xxix. 10. 15. 19. Lev. i. 4. Judg. xvi. 29. Amos v. 19. Ps. lxxxviii. 7. Cp. Gesen., p. 590); and it intimates that the sins of the people were laid as a burden or load on the head of the goat, and rested upon the goat, who was charged with their weight, and carried them away into the desert.

This act was accompanied with a confession of all the iniquities of the people (the form of which may be seen in Maimonides, iv. 2), and "all their transgressions in all their sins; and he shall put them (literally, he shall give them) upon the head of the live goat."

Here was a figure of Christ, who was made sin for us (2 Cor. v. 21), and who bare our sins and carried our sorrows, and on whom the iniquity of us all was laid (Isa. liii. 4—11. 1 Pet. ii. 24. See above, on v. 8), and who carried them away into a far-off land, so that they are no more remembered against us. The crown of thorns, which was placed on the head of Christ, has been regarded by some of the Fathers as an outward representation of the bearing of our sins by Him (Hesychius). Thorns are the fruit of sin (Gen. iii. 18). He wore them as His crown: He reigned in death, and by death, which He suffered for our sins; for by death He destroyed him that had the power of it, Satan (Heb. ii. 14), and procured for us eternal life.

— the live goat] The Sept. has τὸν χίμαρον τὸν ζῶντα— the living goat; as contrasted with the other that was sacrificed: the one represented Christ's death, and the other His resurrection to life.

— a fit man] Literally, an opportune, seasonable man, a man prepared and ready at hand; and the Hebrew word here used (itti), is from eth, time, season, perhaps connected with the Greek εἶρος.

Christ came "in the fulness of time" (Gal. iv. 4), and was delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God (Acts ii. 23). Nothing in His acts was done by chance. His Birth, His Passion, His Resurrection, His Ascension, were all foreseen, and pre-announced by God in types and prophecies. All was done, as it were, "by the hand of a fit, or seasonable man."

The goat was charged with sin, but he was not to be sacrificed, but to be let free, and to have a safe conduct into a land separate from man, where he would be safe from all pursuers.

In later ages the goat was cast down a rock by the man who carried it (Talmud, in Yoma, c. 6). But this was done in the same spirit of Jewish blindness as that which Isaiah describes in his fifty-third chapter. The Jews could not understand how the goat could be under a curse, and yet entitled to safe protection and life. We see the solution of this Mystery in Christ: see above, v. 8.

22. And the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited] Literally, into a land of separation; Heb. gezerah, from gazar, to cut off—a land cut off. The goat was let free, was conducted safely by a fit man, and yet was regarded as accursed, and he who conducted him away was unclean (v. 26. Cp. S. Jerome on Titus, c. iii.).

This mystery of the scapegoat bearing away sin, and yet regarded as under a curse; the means of pardon and life, and yet to be treated as communicating defilement, is explained by Christ, as bearing the weight of our sins, and as "made sin" for us; and "as being made a curse for us." He bore the character of one polluted, and accursed for sin, and He often speaks in that character in the Psalms (see below, on 2 Cor. v. 21); but yet, being "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners," He has a safe conduct; under the guidance of a fit man, He goes into a land separated from man, an inaccessible wilderness, where no enemy can follow him, and there He liveth for evermore. It is not without reason that the wilderness is made a type of heaven itself in the Gospel (Luke xv. 4).

23. shall put off the linen garments] See on v. 4.

— and shall leave them there] so that these linen garments might never be applied to any other use. These pure white linen garments represented the spotless holiness and righteousness in which our Great High Priest is clothed in the heavenly Holy of Holies (see v. 4).

The Hebrew High Priest left his linen garments within the Veil, and put on his other garments in which he usually ministered, and came out from the Holy of Holies; and in the next succeeding year he repeated the same ritual, and by this repetition he proved that the Levitical Law was not perfect in itself, as the Apostle declares (Heb. x. 1—3), but was preparatory to a better dispensation.

But our Great High Priest, the Mediator of the New Co-

f ch. 15. 5.
g ch. 4, 12, 21.
& 6, 30.
Heb. 13. 11.

²⁶ And he that let go the goat for the scapegoat shall wash his clothes, ^f and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp. ²⁷ ^g And the bullock for the sin offering, and the goat for the sin offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung. ²⁸ And he that burneth them shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

h Ex. 30. 10.
ch. 23. 27.
Num. 29. 7.
Isa. 58. 3, 5.
Dan. 10. 3, 12.

²⁹ And this shall be a statute for ever unto you: that ^h in the seventh month, on the tenth day of the month, ye shall afflict your souls, and do no work at all, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you: ³⁰ For on that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, to ⁱ cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sins before the LORD. ³¹ ^k It shall be a sabbath of rest unto you, and ye shall afflict your souls, by a statute for ever.

i Ps. 51. 2.
Jer. 33. 8.
Eph. 5. 26.
Heb. 9. 13, 14.
& 10. 1, 2.
1 John 1. 7, 9.
k ch. 23. 32.
l ch. 4. 3, 5, 16.
† Heb. fill his hand.
m Ex. 29. 29, 30.
Num. 20. 26, 28.
n ver. 4.
o ver. 6, 16, 17, 18, 24.

³² And the priest, whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall [†] ^m consecrate to minister in the priest's office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement, and ⁿ shall put on the linen clothes, even the holy garments: ³³ And ^o he shall make an atonement for the holy sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar, and he shall make an atonement for the priests, and for all the people of the congregation. ³⁴ ^p And this shall be an everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins ^q once a year. And he did as the LORD commanded Moses.

p ch. 23. 31.
Num. 29. 7.

q Ex. 30. 10.
Heb. 9. 7, 25.

XVII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them; This is the venant (Heb. ix. 15), has entered once for all into the true Holy of Holies, and He has done this "at the end of the world" (Heb. ix. 25, 26), that is to say, no other dispensation besides the Gospel is now to be expected from God; and having once entered within the Veil, it is not necessary that He should again come out of the Holy of Holies, as the Jewish High Priest did, in order to repeat the same act of atonement, the following year; for Christ hath obtained eternal redemption for us (Heb. ix. 12; v. 9), and having offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God (Heb. i. 3; x. 12); He there ever liveth to make intercession for us (Heb. vii. 25), and when He appears again, it will not be as our Priest, but as our Judge (Heb. ix. 27. Cp. Theodoret, Qn. 22).

The Jewish High Priest, clothed with pure linen garments, entered into the Holy of Holies and there left them, and came out. The linen garments were emblems of Christ's holiness and of the holiness of the saints, which they derive from Him, as St. John declares (Rev. xix. 8. John i. 16), for they who are baptized into Christ have put on Christ (Gal. iii. 27). Christ, our Great High Priest, not only entered Himself into the Holy of Holies, but has taken us with Him thither. By one offering He hath perfected (i. e., hath consecrated as Priests with Himself, τετελειωκεν) for ever them that are sanctified (Heb. x. 14). We therefore have entered, and are there, in Him, by virtue of His Incarnation and Passion, and of our baptismal Incorporation in Him. As the Apostle says, "Having boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which He hath consecrated for us through the Veil, that is to say, His flesh (i. e., by reason of His Incarnation and Death in our nature), let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith" (Heb. x. 19—22).

²⁶ he that let go the goat] See v. 8, and v. 22. He was commanded to wash his clothes and bathe his flesh; but (as S. Augustine observes, Qn. 55) it is not therefore to be supposed that the goat itself is to be regarded in an evil sense, as something devoted to the Evil One; he who burned the sin-offering (in v. 28) was also commanded to wash his clothes and bathe his flesh: the latter act explains the former.

²⁷ without the camp] as unclean, because loaded with sin: so it was with Christ loaded with our sin (Heb. xiii. 11—14).

²⁹ a statute for ever] Cp. v. 31. This statute is fulfilled and perpetuated in Christ, who remaineth a High Priest for ever (Heb. vii. 3; x. 12—24).

In a recently published version of a portion of the Mishna, it is said by the learned Jewish translators (De Sola and Raphall, p. 127), that the precepts there contained in the first seven chapters concerning the ritual of the Day of Atonement, which are derived from Lev. xvi. 1—34; xxiii. 26—32. Num. xxix. 7—11, are "at present in abeyance;" and are therefore not translated; yet the Law in this chapter is declared "to be a statute for ever."

Can then Judaism be true?
The same remarks may be applied to the Divine Law concerning the great Festival of the Passover. That also was an "ordinance for ever" (see Exod. xii. 14). If it is not fulfilled and perpetuated in Christ, and in the Gospel, it exists nowhere, and the Law is not from God, which declares it to be an ordinance "for ever." Will the Jews accept this consequence? God grant that the veil may be taken from their hearts, and that they may see the Passover in Christ, and the Day of Atonement in Him! See above, Preliminary Note to this chapter.

— on the tenth day] And on that day the Jubilee—the year of liberty and of release from the burden of debts—was proclaimed every fiftieth year: a type of "the acceptable year of the Lord," the year of Evangelical liberty wherewith Christ has made us free, and which is proclaimed by Christ (Luke iv. 18—21), as a consequence of His Suffering for the remission of our sins (cp. 2 Cor. vi. 2. 1 Cor. vii. 23). Cp. Levit. xxv. 9.

— ye shall afflict your souls] by fasting and self-mortification (xxiii. 27. 32), by diligent self-examination and godly sorrow for sin.

Here is a divine command to fast: this is to be expounded in a twofold sense. Let us fast from evil acts; fast from evil words; fast from evil thoughts; fast from false doctrine, and from false philosophy. Such is the fast which God now approves. He does not require fasting from those creatures which He has made to be received with thankfulness. Not that we would relax the rein of Christian abstinence. We have the forty days of Lent, set apart for fasting; we have the fourth and sixth days of the week on which we fast (Origen, circ. A.D. 230).

³¹ a sabbath of rest] See Exod. xvi. 23.
³² he] is impersonal here. On the linen clothes, see v. 4.

thing which the LORD hath commanded, saying, ³ What man soever there be of the house of Israel, ^a that killeth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it out of the camp, ⁴ ^b And bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer an offering unto the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD; blood shall be ^c imputed unto that man; he hath shed blood; and that man ^d shall be cut off from among his people: ⁵ To the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices, ^e which they offer in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest, and offer them for peace offerings unto the LORD. ⁶ And the priest ^f shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar of the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and ^g burn the fat for a sweet savour unto the LORD. ⁷ And they shall no more offer their sacrifices ^h unto devils, after whom they ⁱ have gone a whoring. This shall be a statute for ever unto them throughout their generations.

⁸ And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, ^k that offereth a burnt offering or sacrifice, ⁹ And ^l bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of a See Deut. 12. 5, 15, 21.

b Deut. 12. 5, 6, 13, 14.
c Rom. 5. 13.
d Gen. 17. 14.
e Gen. 21. 33. & 22. 2. & 31. 54. Deut. 12. 2. 1 Kings 14. 23. 2 Kings 16. 4. & 17. 10. 2 Chron. 28. 4. Ezek. 20. 28. & 22. 9. f ch. 3. 2. g Ex. 29. 18. ch. 3. 5, 11, 16. & 4. 31. Num. 18. 17. h Deut. 32. 17. 2 Chron. 11. 15. Ps. 106. 37. i Cor. 9. 20. j Ex. 34. 15. ch. 20. 5. Deut. 31. 16. Ezek. 23. 8. k ch. 1. 2, 3. l 1 ver. 4.

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XVII.

Having provided, in the Sacrifices of the Great Day of Atonement, an expiation for the sins of the Priests and the People, in which the One Great Sacrifice was prefigured, and the Ministry of Christ our Great High Priest entering with His own Blood into the heavenly Holy of Holies, and ever pleading the efficacy of that Blood before the Mercy-seat of God, was foreshadowed, the Divine Legislator proceeds to declare the necessity of unity in religious Worship.

It is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, that after the Ascension of Christ, which was typified in the ritual described in the foregoing chapter (Lev. xvi.), all the disciples "were with one accord in one place" (Acts ii. 1); and the Holy Ghost came down from heaven upon them gathered together in one.

So here, after a description of the ritual of the Day of Atonement prefiguring the Ascension, we have a declaration of the benefits of Unity in the public Worship of God.

All the Levitical sacrifices were to be brought to one Place; and to be offered by a divinely-appointed Priesthood (v. 6). And the Levitical Law contained denunciations of divine displeasure against those who separate themselves from the House of God and His Priesthood, and presume to be their own Priests, and to offer sacrifices in places of their own choosing (S. August., Qu. 56).

He that communicates with the Tabernacle and the Priesthood partakes in the benefits of the Atonement made by the blood of the sacrifice; but "whosoever bringeth not his sacrifice to the door of the tabernacle, to offer it unto the Lord," blood shall be imputed to him; he is as one guilty of murder (cp. Isa. lxvi. 3), and "shall be cut off from among his people" (v. 3. Cp. Deut. xii. 11, 13, 14). "Take heed that thou offer not thy burnt-offerings in every place that thou seest, but in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose to cause His Name to dwell there; thither thou shalt bring thy sacrifices, and there thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings." The great importance of this command is declared by its repetition and extension to Proselytes (v. 8, 10).

Here then is a prophetic protest against the sin of Jeroboam; and against all similar sins of Schism in the Church of God, and of separation from it, and also against idolatry (see v. 7).

The Church of God is now extended to all nations; and the prophecy of Malachi (i. 11), and the promise of Christ (John iv. 21—24), are fulfilled. Men are no longer bound to one place for offering sacrifice; "a pure offering is offered every where;" the Father is worshipped every where; but the offering must be pure, and worship must be addressed to the Father; it must be offered in spirit and in truth; that is, with inward devotion, and also with outward conformity to that true form of worship which He has prescribed; and this cannot be, unless it is done in a spirit of unity with Christ. "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me," says Christ (John xiv. 6). "Where two or three are gathered together in My Name," that is, in faith and obedience to Him, and in conformity to all His appointments, "there," He says, "am I in the midst of them" (Matt. xviii.

20); and He has prayed that all His disciples may be one, as He and the Father are one (John xvii. 21, 23); and His Apostles condemn schisms and divisions as carnal, and exhort all to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace (1 Cor. i. 10; iii. 3. Eph. iv. 3. James iii. 14, 16. Jude 19).

CH. XVII. 3. man—that killeth] or causeth to be sacrificed. — lamb] Heb. seh. Cp. v. 7.

5. in the open field] Literally, in the face of the field. — unto the door of the tabernacle] How then could Elijah be justified in offering on Mount Carmel? 1 Kings xviii. 36—39.

Doubtless he had a special commission from God to do so, "et cum Ille jubet, qui legem constituit, aliquid fieri, quod in lege prohibuit, jussio ipsa pro lege habetur" (S. Augustine, Qu. 56); and this is evident from the acceptance of Elijah's sacrifice by fire from the Lord (A Lapide).

6. the fat] the best of the sacrifice, to be given to the Lord (see iii. 3; iv. 31. Num. xviii. 17).

7. And they shall no more offer their sacrifices unto devils] Unto devils, Heb. seirim, literally, hairy animals, like goats, (from sair, a goat; Gesen. 792). Cp. 2 Chron. xi. 15, where the same word is used, and is translated devils; and Isa. xiii. 21; xxxiv. 14, where it is rendered by satyrs. Deities like satyrs and other wild and unclean creatures were worshipped by some heathen nations, especially the Egyptians, who worshipped Pan, represented as a goat (Joseph, c. Apion. ii. 7); and after them, the Greeks and Romans in their idolatries of Pan, Faunus, the Satyri, &c. (cp. Bochart, Hierozoic, ii. 844. Mainonides, More Nevoch. iii. 46; and Spencer, de Leg. Heb. pp. 350—355). The seirim were the gods after which the Israelites went a whoring in Egypt (Josh. xxiv. 14. Ezek. xx. 7; xxiii. 3, 8, &c.).

The Septuagint here uses the word maradous, vain things. The Vulgate has "daemonibus," in Deut. xxxii. 17, where the Hebrew text has shedim, destroyers; the Sept. has δαμονιοις, devils, which is adopted by St. Paul (1 Cor. x. 20, 21). In Ps. cvi. 37 the Israelites themselves are charged with sacrificing their sons and daughters to shedim, destroyers, devils. Some of the Israelites imitated the heathen in their desire to avert the wrath of evil spirits by sacrifices.

There is a tone of indignant disdain in the word employed here. The gods which the heathen worship are not angels, nor men, nor even beautiful animals—but wild, shaggy, uncouth satyrs. Such is the degradation of their worshippers.

— after whom they have gone a whoring] Treacherously deserting the Lord, who vouchsafes to represent His nearness to His people by the endearing relationship of Marriage, and going after another in His stead, is called fornication and adultery (see Hos. ii. 2, 19, 20; iii. 1. Cp. Exod. x. 5; xxxiv. 15. Lev. xx. 5, 6. Deut. xxxi. 16; and Gesen., 249). Hence the corrupt Church in the Book of Revelation is called πόρνη, the Harlot: see on Rev. xvii. 1. The Sept. uses the word εκτροπευειν here, and in numerous other places cited in that note.

8. of the strangers which sojourn] Rendered προσήλυτοι, proselytes, by Sept.: see vv. 10, 13; and above, on Exod. xii. 48, 49.

the congregation, to offer it unto the Lord; even that man shall be cut off from among his people.

m Gen. 9. 4.
ch. 3. 17.
& 7. 26, 27.
& 19. 26.
Deut. 12. 16, 23.
& 15. 23.
1 Sam. 14. 33.
Ezek. 44. 7.
n ch. 20. 3, 5, 6.
& 26. 17.
Jer. 44. 11.
Ezek. 14. 8.
& 15. 7.
o ver. 14.
p Matt. 26. 28.
Mark 14. 24.
Rom. 3. 25. & 5. 9.
Eph. 1. 7.
Col. 1. 14, 20.
Heb. 13. 12.
1 Pet. 1. 2.
1 John 1. 7.
Rev. 1. 5.
q Heb. 9. 22.
† Heb. that hunteth any hunting.
r ch. 7. 26.
s Deut. 12. 16, 24.
& 15. 23.
t Ezek. 24. 7.
u ver. 11, 12.
Gen. 9. 4.
Deut. 12. 23.
x Ex. 22. 31.
ch. 22. 8.
Deut. 14. 21.
Ezek. 4. 14.
& 44. 31.

¹⁰ And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that eateth any manner of blood; ⁿ I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people. ¹¹ For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar ^p to make an atonement for your souls: for ^q it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul. ¹² Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.

¹³ And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, † which ^r hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall even ^s pour out the blood thereof, and ^t cover it with dust. ¹⁴ For it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh: for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof: whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

¹⁵ And every soul that eateth † that which died of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger, ^y he shall

† Heb. a carcase. y ch. 11. 25.

10. eateth any manner of blood] See above, vii. 26. The repetition of these commands (vr. 10—15), and of the preceding one (vr. 1. 8, 9), declares their great importance, and the sin of violating them. All the Eastern Christians, as well as the Jews, regard the prohibition of blood as still obligatory. The barbarous Abyssinian devours flesh, even from the living animal (Bruce). The reason assigned for the precept, which was prior to the Law (see Gen. ix. 4), is that in the blood is the life, and it is the blood that maketh atonement, and is holy to God; and in the institution of the Holy Eucharist it was declared by Christ Himself, that His blood was shed for the remission of sins (Matt. xxvi. 28). On the continued observance of this precept in the East, see Dr. Thompson, "The Land and the Book," p. 95.

11. the life of the flesh is in the blood] See on Gen. ix. 4. Since the life is in the blood, it is evident that they who according to His command drink His Blood (Matt. xxvi. 27. Mark xiv. 23) partake of Christ's life—and in all its privileges of a glorious Resurrection and blessed Immortality (John vi. 53—57). God in the Levitical Law forbade the eating of blood; and the Son of God in the Gospel commands the drinking of His blood: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you" (John vi. 53); and the Apostle says, "The cup of blessing, which we bless, is it not the Communion of the blood of Christ" (1 Cor. x. 16)? If Christ were not God, how could He abrogate the divine Law? But, since He is God, His command is to be obeyed; and the reason which God gives for the prohibition of eating blood, under the Law, is, in Christ's case under the Gospel, the very reason for the performance of His command. We drink His blood, because in it is the life—life eternal—for it is the blood of Him who is "the Life," it is the blood of Him who is God (see Acts xx. 28). Therefore Christ Himself says, "Whoso eateth My flesh, and drinketh My blood, hath eternal life" (John vi. 54). He that eateth of this bread shall live for ever; he that eateth Me shall live by Me (John vi. 57, 58), and will be raised up at the last Day, by virtue of his communion in Him who is "the Resurrection and the Life." As the life is in the blood, so the life of our souls is in the mystical blood of Christ (S. Augustine, Qu. in Levit. 57).

— I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul] That maketh an atonement for the soul, nephesh—or perhaps it ought to be rendered by means of the life, nephesh (cp. Keil)—the same word as is rendered by life at the beginning of the verse. "The nephesh of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you upon the altar to make atonement for your nephesh; for the blood makes atonement for, or by, the nephesh." Accordingly, the Sept. uses the word ψυχή three times in this verse; and the Vulgate repeats the word "anima" three times.

This is a most important declaration. The blood is not to be eaten by man because in it is the nephesh; and that is due to God. Accordingly, "without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. ix. 22). And God says, that "He has given blood to be an Atonement upon His altar." It is a gift of His free grace. Further, the Holy Spirit expressly declares that "it is impossible for the blood of bulls and goats" (which were sacrificed on the Great Day of Atonement, see above xvi. 9. 11. 14. 18) "to take away sin" (Heb. x. 4). Therefore, the blood which God has promised as a gift for Atonement, must be some other blood than that of the Levitical sacrifices; and our Lord Himself has taught us what that blood is, by saying, "This is My Blood, which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. xxvi. 28); and again, "The Son of Man came . . . to give His life (ψυχήν, nephesh, soul) a ransom for many" (Matt. xx. 28). God hath set Him forth to be a propitiation (ἱλαστήριον, Atonement) through faith in His blood (Rom. iii. 25). In Him we have redemption through His Blood (Eph. i. 7. Col. i. 14), and peace through the blood of His Cross (Col. i. 20). The Good Shepherd giveth His life (ψυχήν) for (ὑπὲρ) the sheep (John x. 11). He gave Himself a ransom for, and in the stead of, all (ἀντὶ πάντων ὑπὲρ πάντων, 1 Tim. ii. 6), a text which with many others (see Heb. ix. 12. Col. ii. 16, 17. Heb. x. 1. 4) declares that the blood which God gave under the Levitical Law, especially on the Great Day of Expiation for an Atonement for sin, was figurative of and preparatory for the voluntary and vicarious shedding of the blood of the Son of God, in which the Spirit was (1 John v. 6: cp. Bp. Andrewes, iii. 354), and which cleanseth from all sin (1 John i. 7. 1 Pet. i. 18, 19. Rev. i. 5; v. 9); and of which the Holy Spirit speaks by the prophet Isaiah (liii. 10), "He made His soul (nephesh) an offering for sin." And therefore St. Paul calls our Lord's sacrifice "the Testimony," appointed for its proper season (καρπὸς ἰδίας), as fulfilling all the ritual of the Testimony in the Holy of Holies. See the note below on 1 Tim. ii. 6.

The blood of a beast cannot make atonement for the soul of man, which cannot die; and this is what the Apostle declares (Heb. x. 4). But that Mediator, Who was prefigured by all the Levitical sacrifices, has made an atonement for our souls, and doubtless His life is here signified (S. Augustine, Qu. 56).

13. cover it with dust] so that none may eat it; being covered, at God's command, it would not be imputed to him that shed it (see Job xvi. 18. Ezek. xxiv. 7, 8). Here therefore is a permission to eat animal food (cp. Gen. ix. 3, 4).

14. For it is the life] Literally, for the life of the flesh is its blood; it (the blood) is for (in the place of, or what constitutes) its life, nephesh: ψυχή (Sept.); anima (Vulg.). See above, v. 11. The word life = soul; the words the flesh = every flesh.

15. that which died of itself whose blood (which may not be eaten) is in it. See Theodoret here, and above, vii. 24, and Acts v. 20. 29, on the prohibition of things strangled, and Kalisch on Exod. xxii. 30.

both wash his clothes, ² and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even: then shall he be clean. ¹⁶ But if he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh; then ^a he shall bear his iniquity.

XVIII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^a I am the LORD your God. ³ ^b After the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do: and ^c after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do: neither shall ye walk in their ordinances. ⁴ ^d Ye shall do my judgments, and keep mine ordinances, to walk therein: I am the LORD your God. ⁵ Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my judgments: ^e which if a man do, he shall live in them: ^f I am the LORD.

⁶ None of you shall approach to any that is † near of kin to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD. ⁷ ^g The nakedness of thy father, or the nakedness of thy mother, shalt thou not uncover: she is thy mother; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness. ⁸ ^h The nakedness of thy father's wife shalt thou not uncover: it is thy father's nakedness. ⁹ ⁱ The nakedness of thy sister, z ch. 15. 5. a ch. 5. 1. & 7. 18. & 19. 8. Num. 19. 20. a ver. 4. Ex. 6. 7. ch. 11. 44. & 19. 4, 10, 34. & 20. 7. Ezek. 20. 5, 7, 19, 20. b Ezek. 20. 7, 8. & 23. 8. c Ex. 23. 24. ch. 20. 23. Deut. 12. 4, 30, 31. d Deut. 4. 1, 2. & 6. 1. Ezek. 20. 19. e Ezek. 20. 11, 13, 21. Luke 10. 28. Rom. 10. 5. Gal. 3. 12. f Ex. 6. 2, 6, 29. Mal. 3. 6. † Heb. remainder of his flesh. g ch. 20. 11. h Gen. 49. 4. i ch. 20. 17. 2 Sam. 13. 12. Ezek. 22. 11.

— torn with beasts] See Exod. xxii. 31.
¹⁶. he shall bear his iniquity] He shall bear his own sin: it shall not be borne by the sacrifice of atonement (xvi. 22).

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XVIII.

In the foregoing chapter Almighty God made provision for the unity of His Church in the true worship; He now makes enactments for its universality.

At the beginning God said to the first pair, when He blessed them, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth" (Gen. i. 28); and "for this cause shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife" (Gen. ii. 24). And after the flood God repeated the command to Noah and his sons, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth" (Gen. ix. 1). And when man refused to obey, and built Babel, He scattered them abroad upon the face of all the earth (Gen. xi. 8). His design and desire was that the whole earth should be peopled; and that the human race, diffused every where, should be united in the knowledge and worship of the one true God.

But this design and desire was thwarted by the Evil One. God revealed, at a very early period, His divine will that marriage should not be contracted within certain degrees of consanguinity and affinity. The Hebrews themselves confess that marriage within certain degrees was unlawful by the law of the sons of Noah (see Selden, de Jure Naturæ i. c. 10; Hooker, IV. xi. 7; Hammond's Works, i. p. 587). The marriages which are prohibited in this eighteenth chapter of Leviticus were forbidden by previous Divine Legislation; and this chapter is only a declaratory republication and reinforcement of an earlier code, binding upon all nations. This is evident from the fact, that the nations of Canaan are here said to have been guilty of heinous sin, and to have incurred the Divine wrath which required their extermination (see v. 24, 25), because they had transgressed the law contained in this chapter; which therefore must have existed before; for "sin is the transgression of the law" (1 John iii. 4), and "sin is not imputed where there is no law" (Rom. v. 13), and "where no law is, there is no transgression" (Rom. ix. 15).

The Heathen Nations of Antiquity fell into flagitious practices by the non-observance of God's original law.

Marriages of brothers with sisters were even said to be consecrated by the example of the Father of their gods (see Theocritus, xvii. 130, and Diodor. Sic., i. 27; on other like heathen enormities, S. Jerome, c. Jovinian. lib. ii. 7, and Theodoret, Qu. 24). Incestuous Marriages prevailed among some of those nations of the heathen world, which most gloried in their intelligence (see Clem. Alex., Strom. iii. p. 431; Euseb., Evangelic. Præpar. vi. 10; Keil, p. 115).

The contraction of such marriages was a contravention of the Divine Will that the human race should be diffused, and that the whole world should become a Church (cp. S. Augustine, de Civ. Dei xv. 16), and it was opposed to the express command of God.

In this respect, also, the Levitical Law of Marriage, which promulgated anew God's original decree on that subject, with fresh sanctions, and with a solemn warning grounded on the punishment inflicted on the Canaanites for transgressing that Law (see v. 28), was preparatory to the Christian dispensation, in which the Son of God takes to Himself a Bride from the Gentile world (Ps. xlv. 11), and commands His disciples "to go forth into all the world and teach all Nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matt. xxviii. 20).

Well therefore and wisely does the Christian Church regard this Eighteenth Chapter of Leviticus as part of the moral Law which God has given to all Nations; and which is to be maintained inviolably as such (see Concil. Toletan., Sess. ii. cap. 5; cp. the Canons of the Church of England of 1603, Canon xcix.; and Bp. Gibson, Codex Juris Anglicani; Burn, Eccles. Law ii. pp. 440—7, ed. Phillimore; and Reformatio Legum, p. 47, where our Reformers say, "Deus in his gradibus certum jus posuit in Levitici xviii. et xx. capite, quo jure nos et omnem nostram posteritatem teneri, certum est. Nec enim hæc præcepta veteris Israelitarum republicæ propria fuerant; sed idem autoritatis pondus habent quod religio nostra Decalogo tribuit, ut nulla possit humana potestas quicquam in illis secus constituere").

All the earlier Continental Reformers (Luther, Beza, Melanchthon) asserted the authority of this Code: see Gerhard de Conjugio, in his Loci Communes, vol. vii.

These "prohibited degrees" are also recognized by the Church of Rome, who however claims authority to make additions to their number, and to give dispensations releasing from obligation to them: see Concil. Trident., Sessio xxiv. Canon 3. Cp. A Lapide here.

The Rabbinical expositions and traditions in reference to this subject may be seen in Selden, Uxor Hebræa i. c. 1; cp. Michaelis, Mos. Recht ii. p. 206; Keil, Archæol. ii. p. 108.

CH. XVIII. 6. None of you shall approach] Literally, Man, man, you shall not approach; by which the obligation of this code to every individual is strongly marked; and so Sept., ἄνθρωπος, ἄνθρωπος . . . οὐ προσελεύσεται.

— to any that is near of kin to him] literally, to any flesh of his flesh: in the original, to any sheer of his basar. The word sheer is equivalent to basar, flesh (Gesen., pp. 146. 799; and Keil here: cp. Ps. lxxiii. 26; lxxviii. 20. 27. Prov. v. 11; xi. 17). Some have derived the word from shaar, to remain; and suppose it to signify residue.

— to uncover their nakedness] The word nakedness, erevah (from the root arah, to be naked, uncovered; Gesen., p. 653), signifies "membra inhonesta," those members in which man's shame is; and in which his real nakedness, or privation of God's favour and forfeiture of original grace, appears, by reason of sin (see Gen. iii. 7, 10, 11, 21), and in which was no shame as long as he was innocent (Gen. ii. 25). See the use of the word, Gen. ix. 22, 23; 1 Sam. xx. 30. The Sept. renders it by ἀσχημοσύνη; the Vulg. by 'turpilitudo.' Hence, whatsoever carnal conjunction is forbidden by the Law, for which a man is liable to "cutting off;" and which is spoken of in Leviticus xviii., every one of them is called "nakedness" (Maimonides, in his Treatise on Wives, i. 5).

8. thy father's wife] This was Reuben's sin: Gen. xxxv. 22;

the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home, or born abroad, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover. ¹⁰ The nakedness of thy son's daughter, or of thy daughter's daughter, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover: for theirs is thine own nakedness. ¹¹ The nakedness of thy father's wife's daughter, begotten of thy father, she is thy sister, thou shalt not uncover her nakedness. ¹² ^k Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's sister: she is thy father's near kinswoman. ¹³ Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister: for she is thy mother's near kinswoman. ¹⁴ ^l Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's brother, thou shalt not approach to his wife: she is thine aunt. ¹⁵ ^m Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy daughter in law: she is thy son's wife; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness. ¹⁶ ⁿ Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy brother's wife: it is thy brother's nakedness. ¹⁷ ^o Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter, neither shalt thou take her son's daughter, or her daughter's daughter, to uncover her nakedness; for they are her near kinswomen: it is wickedness. ¹⁸ Neither shalt thou take || a wife to her sister, ^p to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, beside the other in her life time.

k ch. 20. 19.

l ch. 20. 20.

m Gen. 38. 18, 26.
ch. 20. 12.
Ezek. 22. 11.

n ch. 20. 21.
Matt. 14. 4.
See Deut. 25. 5.
Matt. 22. 24.
Mark 12. 19.
o ch. 20. 14.

|| Or, one wife to another.
Ex. 26. 3.
p 1 Sam. 1. 6, 8.

cp. 1 Cor. v. 1; and was punishable by death: Lev. xx. 11; Deut. xxvii. 20.

— it is thy father's nakedness] The nakedness of the husband is uncovered in that of his wife, because man and wife are "one flesh" (Matt. xix. 6: see below, v. 14. 16). The union of husband and wife, so that "they twain are one flesh," has received additional strength and sanctity from the Incarnation of the Son of God, and from His mystical union with the Church, which is represented in marriage (Eph. v. 23—33).

This principle (viz., that the Husband and Wife are one, and that her relatives are his) is indispensable to be borne in mind for the right interpretation of the Levitical Law: see v. 18.

9. whether she be born at home, or born abroad] Whether she be the daughter of thy father by thy mother, or by a former wife, or another woman (Maimon., De Dieu). On the marriage of "comprivigni," a question which has been connected with this verse and verse 11, see the learned Essay in Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 138.

10. The nakedness] born of thee.

11. Thy father's wife's daughter] Absalom's sin: 2 Sam. xiii. 12. Cp. Ezek. xxii. 11.

14. the nakedness of thy father's brother] thy uncle's wife, called his nakedness, because man and wife are one flesh: see v. 8, and xx. 20. "If a man shall lie with his uncle's wife, he hath uncovered his uncle's nakedness" (cp. S. Augustine, Qu. 60).

15. thy daughter in law] Heb. callah, literally, a bride, so gotten from being crowned; from calal, to complete, to crown (Gesen. 399, 400): cp. νύμφη, nurus, nubo.

16. of thy brother's wife] Cp. xx. 21. Matt. xiv. 3; except when the brother has died without issue: see Deut. xxv. 5. Matt. xxii. 24. Gen. xxxviii. 8.

18. Neither shalt thou take a wife to her sister, to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, beside the other in her life time] The original words of this sentence are thus to be rendered literally, in the order in which they stand in the text, "And a wife to her sister thou shalt not take, to vex, to uncover her nakedness upon her in her lifetime."

The word rendered vex is tsarar, which properly means to bind (Prov. xxvi. 8; xxx. 4), to bind together (Exod. xii. 34. 1 Sam. xxv. 29. Latin, stringo). Thence, to compress, to distress by close pressure, to afflict, to vex by rivalry, jealousy, &c. (see Gesen., p. 719.) The Septuagint well paraphrases the verb by ὁ ἀλήψῃ ἀντίζηλον ἐπ' αὐτῆς.

This sentence forbids a married man to bring into his household another wife to vex her who is already his wife. Such a conjunction is compared to the binding of one thing on another thing; by which act the latter is compressed and distressed.

But what is the meaning of the word rendered sister?

In a table of affinity, like the present, where exactness of expression is required, it might naturally be anticipated that the word achoth, sister, would mean a sister by blood, as it does in v. 9. 11, 12, 13; and in xx. 17. 19.

If it has this sense here, then this sentence forbids a man to bring in another wife to her sister, to vex her in her life; that is, as long as she lives.

Such a conjunction had been seen in the house of their forefather Jacob, and might seem to be recommended to the Israelites by his example; and therefore the Legislator may have deemed it necessary to provide specially against it (S. Augustine).

It has been inferred by some, that the Legislator by prohibiting a man from bringing in a wife to her sister in her lifetime, allows him to marry his wife's sister, after his wife's death. But this deduction is not well grounded; and no one ought to act upon an inference which rests on so precarious a foundation.

Because a man may not take his wife's sister to wife while his wife is alive, it by no means follows that he may take his wife's sister to wife when his wife is dead. As Richard Hooker well says, "It is a mistake to suppose that a thing denied with special circumstance doth import an opposite affirmation when once that circumstance is expired" (Hooker, V. xlv. 2). "The manner of Scripture produceth no such inference as that" (Bp. Pearson, on Art. iii. p. 174. See note above on Gen. xlix. 10, and below on Matt. i. 25). If the Legislator is here speaking of two sisters by blood, his meaning is this—Thou shalt not take a wife to her sister, to vex her all the days of thy wife's life. Thou shalt not take a wife to her sister, however long thy wife may live; even though thy wife may be barren, aged, sickly, or ungracious; and though her sister may be younger than she is, and much more attractive in person—as Rachel was than Leah—and much more congenial to thee in temper and disposition than thy wife. Thou shalt bear patiently with all thy wife's infirmities of body and soul (1 Pet. iii. 7), however long she may continue to live. Besides "to uncover her nakedness" means to commit incest with her; and this incest is not affected by her sister's death.

But it is not certain that the word achoth is to be rendered here sister by blood.

It is remarkable that the phrases which would be literally rendered, "a woman to her sister" and "a man to his brother," occur more than thirty times in the Hebrew Bible, and never in these instances designate the blood relationship of two sisters or two brothers, but simply the addition of one person or thing to another of the same kind: see Forster on the Marriage of a Deceased Wife's Sister; and Dwight, Hebrew Wife, pp. 84—91, Glasgow, 1837, where the passages are cited and analyzed. Accordingly, in the margin of our Authorized Version, the words are rendered here "one wife to another." And so the words are here understood by Junius, Tremellius, Drusius, Calovius, Beza, Ainsworth, Willett, Hammond, Schleusner, Lex. V. T. v. ἀελφῆ: and ep. Dr. J. A. Hessey, in his letter on this verse, pp. 12. 19, Lond. 1855.

The sense of the passage is, as rendered in all the recent Versions, "thou shalt not take a wife to her sister" (whether that sister be a sister in blood, or a sister by nation), to vex her, and thou shalt not cohabit with her, as long as thy wife lives.

Here, however, it may be asked, if this is a prohibition against Polygamy, how is it that many of the ancient Hebrews were polygamists? How is it that Solomon, and even David, ch. 20. 10. Deut. 5. 18. & 22. 22. Prov. 6. 29, 32. Mal. 3. 5. Matt. 5. 27. Rom. 2. 22. 1 Cor. 6. 9. Heb. 13. 4.

¹⁹ ^a Also thou shalt not approach unto a woman to uncover her nakedness, as long as she is put apart for her uncleanness. ²⁰ Moreover ^r thou shalt not lie

q ch. 18. Ezek. 18. 6. & 22. 10. r Ex. 20. 14.

had more wives than one? Would this have been the case, if there had been a law of God against plurality of wives?

The answer is, that the practice of man is not a sure interpreter of the law of God. Let God be true and every man a liar (Rom. iii. 4). We may not say, some of the Kings were polygamists, and therefore God had not forbidden polygamy. No; God's Law says, the King shall not multiply wives to himself (Deut. xvii. 17). This is a prohibition of polygamy; and the words of the Old Testament which were quoted by our Lord as forbidding divorce, are as clearly prohibitory of polygamy; "A man shall cleave unto his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh" (Matt. xix. 5).

There is another argument in favour of the opinion, that this verse does not concern marriages of those who were connected by blood.

It is not inserted in the body of the Code, but it comes in as an appendage at the end, among precepts of a different kind.

One thing is clear, that no inference can be derived from this verse, taken by itself, as to the lawfulness of marrying a deceased wife's sister.

And when we come to examine the Code, taken as a whole, it is no less clear, by logical and necessary inference from the Code so taken, that such marriages are unlawful.

Observe the prohibitions of the Code. In it a man is forbidden to marry the mother of his deceased wife, and he is forbidden to marry the daughter of his wife, or the daughter of her son, or of her daughter. And why? Because, it is declared, they are near of kin to her, or, as the original expresses it, they are her flesh (v. 17; cp. xx. 14). And such marriages are described as wickedness. For they who are joined to him in such marriages are part of the flesh of her who had been made one flesh with him by marriage. And if they are part of her flesh, surely her sister also is part of her flesh. Indeed this point has been settled in this same Code, where it is expressly affirmed that a man may not marry the sister of his father. And why? Because (it is added) the sister is the near kinswoman of his father (v. 12); or, as the original expresses it, is the flesh of his father.

Hence, it is clear that a man may not marry his wife's sister, because his wife's sister is part of the flesh of her who, as God declares in both Testaments, was made by marriage to be one flesh with him.

The Word of God forbids a man to marry "any that is near of kin to him;" and mentions, in the following order, thirteen instances of persons directly or indirectly near of kin, viz.:—His Mother, his Stepmother or Father's Wife, his Sister, his Half-Sister, his own Granddaughter, his Father's Sister, his Mother's Sister, his Aunt or Father's Brother's Wife, his own Daughter-in-Law or Son's Wife, his Sister-in-Law or Brother's Wife, his Wife's Mother, his Wife's Daughter, his Wife's Granddaughter. Six of these women are blood relations. Seven (printed in Italics) are persons made relations by marriage only. The whole follow the words "near of kin" without break or distinction: except that after the charge not to marry his wife's relations there is added, "for they are her near kinswomen; it is wickedness." This last word is the translation of the Hebrew word used for the vilest kind of lewdness, in Judges xx. 6. Ezek. xvi. 43, and xxii. 11.

It is clear, from this list, that the death of the person through whose marriage the nearness of kin began, does not alter that nearness. "A step-son may not marry his father's widow; and yet there is no kin between them, except through the woman's former marriage with his father, who is now dead. The death of the person through whose marriage the bond of kindred began, must either dissolve that bond in all cases, or it dissolves it in none. It dissolves it in none" (Rev. W. Abner Brown).

It has indeed been said that we have no right to deduce any prohibition inferentially from this Code, but ought to be content with the prohibitions that are expressed. This allegation is refuted by the fact that it is nowhere expressed in the Code that a man may not marry his own daughter, or his own sister. Let us also observe, that a man may not marry his brother's widow; or, in other words, a woman is forbidden to marry her deceased husband's brother. This prohibition is repeated twice in Holy Scripture (Lev. xviii. 16; xx. 21), with a special malediction. And the reason stated for this prohibition is, that the wife of a brother is one flesh with him—"Fratris nuditas est, id est, una caro cum fratre" (Hammond)—and therefore thou canst not make her to be one with thyself, by marriage with her. But thy wife's sister is as near to thee as thy brother is to thy wife; and since thy wife is forbidden to marry thy brother after thy death, so art thou forbidden to marry her sister after her death. Bp. Jewel (in Strype's Parker).

In the New Testament (1 Cor. v. 1), a man may not marry his father's wife, because she is one flesh with his father: so he may not marry his wife's sister, because his wife is one flesh with him.

But here it has been alleged by some, that since in a certain case Almighty God commanded that a wife should be joined in marriage to a deceased husband's brother; namely, in case that her husband had died without issue (Deut. xxv. 5); and since God cannot be supposed to command any thing immoral, therefore the marriage of a wife with a deceased husband's brother cannot be sinful; and that therefore, by parity of reasoning, the marriage of a man with his deceased wife's sister cannot be immoral.

Is then God inconsistent with Himself? In His Word He has forbidden a woman to marry her husband's brother. In a special case, for a special reason, applicable only to the Jews, God was pleased to dispense with His own Law; and in the plenitude of His Omnipotence, to change the prohibition into a command.

But because God, Who is the Supreme Lord of all, and Who is the Fountain of Law, was pleased in a particular case to dispense with His own Law, surely it is not to be presumed that we can dispense with that Law. God is the "one Lawgiver, who is able to save, and to destroy" (James iv. 12). God cannot command any thing that is sinful. For sin is the "transgression of His Law" (1 John iii. 4), and whatever He commands is right. But it would be presumptuous to say, that we may dispense with God's Law concerning Marriage, because He in one case dispensed with it; as it would be impious to affirm, that murder is not immoral, and may be committed by us, because God, who is the sole Arbiter of life and death, commanded Abraham to slay his son Isaac; or that we may innocently commit theft, because God, who is the Lord of all the earth, commanded the Israelites to spoil the Egyptians (Exod. iii. 22; xii. 36).

Let us now consider how the Church of Christ has interpreted the Law of God in this matter. If Marriage with a wife's sister was lawful, many such marriages would have taken place. Let us look back to the past, to the time of Christ and of the Apostles. Not a single iota of testimony in favour of such marriages can be cited from any Christian writer of any note, for fourteen centuries after Christ. In the words of S. Basil, writing in the fourth century, and speaking not only in his own name, but bearing testimony to the judgment of his predecessors on this subject, "Our custom in this matter has the force of Law, because the statutes we observe have been handed down to us by holy men; and our judgment is this, that if a man has fallen into the sin of marrying two sisters, we do not regard such an union as marriage, nor do we receive the parties to communion with the Church until they are separated" (Basil, Epist. clx. tom. iii. p. 249, ed. Bened., Paris, 1730. Cp. Bingham, XVI. xi. 3). It is remarkable, that the Vatican Manuscript of the Septuagint (lately published by Cardinal Mai) contains a curse against those who lie with their wife's sister, in Deut. xxvii. 23. This was probably, at first, only a marginal note, and has passed from the margin into the text; but it is an important witness of the opinion of the early age in which that MS. was written.

Such is the testimony of Christian Antiquity; and such is the judgment of the Eastern Church to this day.

It has been said by some, that the Church of Rome allows such marriages, and that other Churches ought to do the same. But let it be observed, that the Church of Rome does not solemnize such marriages without a dispensation, and thus is still a witness to their illegality. She was tempted by the lust of lucre and of power, to swerve from the rule of her fathers, and to grant such dispensations, which she did first in the sixteenth century. The first dispensation of this kind was given A.D. 1500, by Pope Alexander VI. (Borgia), to Emanuel, King of Portugal.

In the next generation his family was extinct.

If it should be urged that some Protestant Communions do not censure these marriages, our only reply need be, that all their pious predecessors condemned those marriages. So Beza, Melanchthon, Luther, and Chemnitz. See Gerhard, Loci Commun. De Conjugio, § 347, vol. vii. p. 374; the Westminster Divines; and M. Henry. The judgment of our own Reformers is evident from the "Table of Degrees" set forth by them, and is clearly summed up in Reformatory Legum, fol. 23, where it is said that marriage with a deceased wife's sister, "communi doc- carnally with thy neighbour's wife, to defile thyself with her. ²¹ And thou shalt not let any of thy seed ^s pass through the fire to 'Molech, neither shalt thou "profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD. ²² ^x Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind: it is abomination. ²³ ^y Neither shalt thou lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith: neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto: it is ^z confusion.

²⁴ ^a Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things: ^b for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you: ²⁵ And ^c the land is defiled: therefore I do ^d visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself ^e vomiteth out her inhabitants. ²⁶ ^f Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations; neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you: ²⁷ (For all these abominations have the men of the land done, which were before you, and the land is defiled;) ²⁸ That ^g the land spue not you out also, when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you. ²⁹ For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be cut off from among their people. ³⁰ Therefore shall ye keep mine ordinance, ^h that ye commit not any one of these abominable customs, which were committed before you, and that ye ⁱ defile not yourselves therein: ^k I am the LORD your God.

s ch. 20. 2.
2 Kings 16. 3.
& 21. 6.
& 23. 10.
Jer 19. 5.
Ezek. 20. 31.
& 23. 37, 39.
1 Kings 11. 7.
33. Called,
Acts 7. 43,
Molech.
u ch. 19. 12.
& 20. 3. & 21. 6.
& 22. 2, 32.
Ezek. 36. 20, &c.
Mal. 1. 12.
x ch. 20. 13.
Rom. 1. 27.
1 Cor. 6. 9.
1 Tim. 1. 10.
y Ex. 22. 19.
ch. 20. 15, 16.
z ch. 20. 12.
a ver. 30.
Matt. 15. 13,
19, 20.
Mark 7. 21, 22, 23
1 Cor. 3. 17.
b ch. 20. 23.
Deut. 18. 12.
c Num. 35. 34.
Jer. 2. 7. & 16. 18.
Ezek. 36. 17.
d Ps. 89. 32.
Isa. 26. 21.
Jer. 5. 9, 29.
& 9. 9. & 14. 10.
& 23. 2.
Hos. 2. 13. & 8.
13. & 9. 9.
e ver. 28.
f ver. 5, 30. ch. 20. 22, 23.

g ch. 20. 22. Jer. 9. 19. Ezek. 36. 13, 17.

h ver. 3, 26.

ch. 20. 23. Deut. 18. 9.

i ver. 24.

k ver. 2, 4.

forum virorum consensu putatur in Levitico prohiberi." If some Protestant communities have now fallen away from the faith and practice of their forefathers, whose names they hold in reverence, we may humbly hope they will not censure us for proving our reverence for their forefathers by vindicating their wisdom, and by following their example.

It is evident that the Legislator did not intend to set down in explicit terms in this Levitical Code all the Degrees within which Marriage is unlawful. He had not even expressly forbidden a man to marry his own daughter, or his own sister. But his design was, that men should use their reason, in drawing logical inferences from the principles laid down in the Code. This is our moral probation. As is well said in the Reformatio Legum, p. 47, "In his Levitici capitibus diligenter animadvertendum est minimè ibi omnes non legitimas personas nominatim explicari; nam Spiritus Sanctus illas personas expressè posuit, ex quibus similia spatia reliquorum graduum possint conjectari." And our Reformers proceed to say with great wisdom, "In hoc, duas regulas magnoperè volumus attendi; quarum una est, ut qui loci viris attribuuntur eosdem sciamus feminis assignari, paribus semper propinquitatum gradibus. Secunda est, ut vir et uxor unam inter se carnem habere existimentur; et ita quo quisque gradu consanguinitatis quemquam contingit eodem ejus uxorem contingit affinitatis gradu, quod etiam in contrariam partem eadem ratione valet."

On this subject the reader may consult Dr. Pusey's volume, entitled "Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister prohibited by Holy Scripture, as understood by the Church for 1500 years," Oxford, 1849; and Lord Chancellor Hatherley's Speech, Lond. 1853.

19. Also thou shalt not approach] See xv. 19; xx. 18.

20. Moreover] See Exod. xx. 14.

The punishment for adultery was death to both parties. Deut. v. 18; xxii. 22.

21. Any of thy seed] thy son or thy daughter: see xx. 2; and Deut. xx. 2.

— pass through the fire to Molech] by burning: see Deut. xviii. 10; 2 Kings xvi. 3; 2 Chron. xxviii. 3. Some being actually burnt to death as a sacrifice, as is said to have been done by Ahaz (2 Chron. xxviii. 3. Cp. Jer. vii. 31. Ps. cvi. 37). They sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils: see Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 100; and Wright, in Smith's Bibl. Dic. ii. p. 402.

Whether the words in this place, "to make thy seed pass through fire," mean to burn them as sacrifices, has indeed been doubted by some of the Rabbinical writers (see Spencer, de Leg. Hebr. ii. 13, pp. 363—370, and Keil, p. 118; not so Winer, ii.

100, nor Gesenius, 477). Perhaps in the earliest time the worship of Molech was accompanied with a kind of lustration or baptism by fire, by which children were consecrated to his service (Theodore, Qu. 25), and this in process of time was followed by actual immolation.

The act of consecrating Children to Molech, and of endeavouring to propitiate him by sacrifices of them in the fire, was practised in the valley of Hinnom, to the south and west of Jerusalem (2 Chron. xxxiii. 6. Jer. xxxii. 35; and Gesen., p. 168; cp. 872), whence the word Gehenna for Hell (see on Matt. v. 30), and Tophet (see 2 Kings xxiii. 10. Jer. vii. 31; xix. 6. 13. Cp. Bonar, in Smith's Bibl. Dic. ii. 1564).

— to Molech] A name properly signifying King (cp. Baal), probably the same as the heathen Kronos or Saturnus (see Diocl. Sic., xx. 14. S. Aug., de Civ. Dei vii. 19), worshipped by all the Canaanitish Nations and by the Phœnicians and Carthaginians (cp. Selden, de Diis Syriis i. 6, p. 169. Winer, ii. p. 101; and below, note on Acts vii. 43). Jarchi and other Rabbis (on Jer. vii. 31) describe Molech as an "idol made of brass, having the face of an ox, with arms stretched out, in which the child was placed and burnt with fire while the Priests were beating drums" (wherefore some derive the name of Tophet from toph, a drum), in order to drown the noise of its shrieks, lest the father (who had kissed the idol, cp. Hos. xiii. 2), might be moved with pity thereby." Cp. Justin, xix. 1; Sil. Ital., iv. 767. Cp. Ainsworth here, p. 105. Wright, in Smith's Bibl. Dic. ii. 402. Bonar, ibid. p. 1563.

It is remarkable that this prohibition of the worship of Molech is inserted among precepts concerning adultery, fornication, and uncleanness. The reason doubtless of this combination is, that idolatry and all false worship is regarded in both Testaments as spiritual harlotry and adultery; see xvii. 7.

22. Thou shalt not lie, &c.] The sin of Sodom (Gen. xix. 5. Jude 7), and of some of the heathen nations, even those who most boasted of their own intelligence and civilization (Rom. i. 27. 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10). The punishment of it by God's law was death (Lev. xx. 13).

23. Neither shalt thou lie, &c.] A sin attributed even to their gods by the heathen nations of antiquity, who represented their deities (Jupiter, &c.) as tempting women to this enormity. Such was the corruption of mankind, even among those who called other nations barbarous; and such is the proof of the insufficiency of human reason to rescue men from the grossest corruption and most debasing degradation.

27. all these abominations have the men of the land done] Therefore the land itself spues them out (v. 28): here is an answer to those who cavil at the extirpation of the Canaanites. Will they also censure the destruction of Sodom?

XIX. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^a Ye shall be holy: for I the LORD your God am holy.

a ch. 11. 44.
& 20. 7, 26.
1 Pet. 1. 16.

³ ^b Ye shall fear every man his mother, and his father, and ^c keep my sabbaths: I am the LORD your God.

b Ex. 20. 12.
c Ex. 20. 8.
& 31. 13.

⁴ ^d Turn ye not unto idols, ^e nor make to yourselves molten gods: I am the LORD your God.

d Ex. 20. 4.
ch. 26. 1.
1 Cor. 10. 14.
1 John 5. 21.
e Ex. 34. 17.
Deut. 27. 15.
f ch. 7. 16.

⁵ And ^f if ye offer a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD, ye shall offer it at your own will. ⁶ It shall be eaten the same day ye offer it, and on the morrow: and if ought remain until the third day, it shall be burnt in the fire.

⁷ And if it be eaten at all on the third day, it is abominable; it shall not be accepted. ⁸ Therefore every one that eateth it shall bear his iniquity, because he hath profaned the hallowed thing of the LORD: and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

⁹ And ^g when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

g ch. 23. 22.
Deut. 24. 19, 20.
21.
Ruth 2. 15, 16.

¹⁰ And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger: I am the LORD your God.

¹¹ ^h Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, ⁱ neither lie one to another.

h Ex. 20. 15.
& 22. 1, 7, 10—12
Deut. 5. 19.

¹² And ye shall not ^k swear by my name falsely, ^l neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD. ¹³ ^m Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: ⁿ the wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all

i ch. 6. 2.
Eph. 4. 25.
Col. 3. 9.
k Ex. 20. 7.
ch. 6. 3.
Deut. 5. 11.

Matt. 5. 33. James 5. 12.

1 ch. 18. 21.

m Mark 10. 19.

1 Thess. 4. 6.

n Deut. 24. 14, 15. Mal. 3. 5. James 5. 4.

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XIX.

In the two foregoing chapters, having provided for the unity of the Hebrew Church in public worship (see xvii. 1), and for its diffusion, and for its separation from the Nations of Canaan and their sins (see xviii. 1), the Divine Legislator gives directions for the maintenance of its internal holiness and righteousness by the inculcation of the moral virtues of piety towards God, and love towards man, and of chastity and temperance.

CH. XIX. 1.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, as read in the Synagogues, and extends to xx. 27.

The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is Ezek. xx. 2—20, concerning the idolatries and rebellions of Israel in the wilderness, and Amos ix. 7—15, pre-announcing the future restoration of the Tabernacle of David—a prophecy quoted by St. James in the Council of Jerusalem (Acts xv. 16, 17), and applied by him to the conversion of the Gentiles to Christianity.

2. Ye shall be holy] Ye shall not be as the nations just mentioned (xviii. 27), whom I am now about to root up by your hands for their sins. This precept, enforced by the warning from the history of the Jews, is now addressed to Christians, under the Gospel: see 1 Pet. i. 14—16.

3. Ye shall fear every man his mother] The mother is placed before the father. In the former chapter God had displayed the evils consequent on the abuse of Woman, and here He inculcates reverence towards her, as the foundation of social happiness.

— and keep my sabbaths] He ascends from the mother to the father, and from the father to God: compare the parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets (see above on v. 1), where reverence for the Sabbath is strongly inculcated as the sign of God's people (Ezek. xx. 12, 13. 16. 20, 21. 24); the weekly Sabbath being that divine ordinance which concerned the whole Nation, and their proselytes, and even their cattle.

4. Turn ye not unto idols] Literally, unto the vanities (ha-elilim), the non-entities. Turn not from Elohim to the Elilim: “I am Jehovah your Elohim.” Compare St. Paul's words, “An idol is nothing” (1 Cor. viii. 4); and “What say I, that the idol is anything?” (something, ti)? No! (1 Cor. x. 19. See below on v. 31.)

5. ye shall offer it at your own will] Rather, so that it may be acceptable: see i. 3; and Sept., Vulg., Syriac, and Arabic.

This doubtless implies cheerfulness on the part of the offerer (cp. 2 Cor. ix. 7); but it includes something more, as is evident from the conditions stated in the next verses and above (xvii. 2—5)—viz., that it be not sacrificed in any place indifferently, but be brought to the Tabernacle to be sacrificed by the Priest (xvii. 4, 5).

6. it shall be burnt] See vii. 17—19.

8. shall be cut off] by the Magistrate, if the sin is known; if not, by God Himself.

9. thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field] Literally, thou shalt not complete the corner (pēah) of thy field—i. e., so as to clear it of corn. The word pēah, corner, or edge, signifies properly the quarter of heaven from which the wind blows, and is derived from the word paah, to blow (see Gesen., p. 664). The corner of the field was to be left to the poor: compare the Treatise in the Talmud, entitled Pēah.

This and the following precepts of mercy (vv. 9—18) are summed up in the general command, “Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself,” with the emphatic clause, “I am the Lord,” v. 18; and show that in moral respects, as well as in ceremonial, the Levitical Law was a precursor of the Gospel.

In the history of Ruth we see that the observance of this merciful precept by Boaz led to his marriage with her, whereby he became one of the Ancestors of David and of Christ (Ruth ii. 3. 8; iv. 21, 22. Matt. i. 6).

— the gleanings] leket, from lakat, to gather: cp. Gr. λέγω, Lat. lego, whence spicilegium, a gleanings of ears of corn.

10. every grape] Rather, the scattered grapes. Heb. peret, which is any thing scattered, from parat, to scatter; sometimes applied to words (cp. Amos vi. 5), to prate (Gesen., p. 689). It is rendered ‘falling grapes’ by Syriac, Arabic, Onkelos, Vulg. The Sept. has βῶγας.

11. Ye shall not steal] These precepts are an amplification of the Decalogue, and appear to have in view the order of its commandments. Thus the precept against stealing is followed by that against false witness, especially in oaths, and by that against covetousness.

— neither lie one to another] Hence we may conclude that God did not approve the falsehood of the midwives (Exod. i. 19, 20), or of Rahab (Josh. ii. 4; vi. 23), when He rewarded them for their mercy. S. Aug., Qu. 68.

13. the wages] Literally, the work of the hireling shall not

o Deut. 27. 18.
Rom. 14. 13.
p ver. 32.
Gen. 42. 18.
ch. 25. 17.
Eccles. 5. 7.
1 Pet. 2. 17.
q Ex. 23. 2, 3.
Deut. 1. 17.
& 16. 19. & 27. 19.
Ps. 82. 2.
Prov. 24. 23.
James 2. 9.
r Ex. 23. 1.
Ps. 15. 3.
& 50. 20.
Prov. 11. 13.
& 20. 19.
Ezek. 22. 9.
s Ex. 23. 1, 7.
1 Kings 21. 13.
Matt. 26. 60, 61.
& 27. 4.
t 1 John 2. 9, 11.
& 3. 15.
u Matt. 18. 15.
Luke 17. 3.
Gal. 6. 1.
Eph. 5. 11.
1 Tim. 5. 22.
2 Tim. 4. 2.
Tit. 1. 13. & 2. 15.
17, 19. Gal. 5. 20. Eph. 4. 31. James 5. 9. 1 Pet. 2. 1. y Matt. 5. 43. & 22. 39. Rom. 13. 9. Gal. 5. 14. James 2. 8. z Deut. 22. 9, 10. a Deut. 22. 11 night until the morning. ¹¹ Thou shalt not curse the deaf, ° nor put a stumblingblock before the blind, but shalt ^p fear thy God : I am the LORD.

¹⁵ ^q Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment : thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty : but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.

¹⁶ ^r Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people : neither shalt thou ^s stand against the blood of thy neighbour : I am the LORD. ¹⁷ ^t Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart : ^u thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbour, || and not suffer sin upon him. ¹⁸ ^x Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, ^y but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself : I am the LORD.

¹⁹ Ye shall keep my statutes. Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind : ^z thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed : ^a neither shall a garment mingled of linen and woollen come upon thee.

spend the night with thee ; or as the Sept. has it, " shall not sleep with thee." Hence St. James censures the rich men of Judea in his age : " Behold, the hire of the labourers which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth" (James v. 4).

14. Thou shalt not curse the deaf] Though he hears not, yet God hears thee, and will requite thee for thy sin. And therefore this is a precept against speaking evil of any man behind his back (Maimonides, in Sanhedrim, c. xxvii.).

— a stumblingblock before the blind] Cp. Deut. xxvii. 18. A precept against giving offence to weak brethren (Rom. xiv. 13; xvi. 17. 1 Cor. viii. 9—13).

15. thou shalt not respect the person of the poor] See Exod. xxiii. 3.

16. Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer] Literally, thou shalt not walk about for slander—recil, from raacal, to go about, as a merchant for traffic (1 Kings x. 15. Ezek. xxvii. 15, 17).

— neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbour] in order to shed his blood, or to withhold thy help from him when he is in danger; cp. Prov. i. 16; Isa. lix. 7, 8; Rom. iii. 13, 15, where St. Paul seems to refer specially to these precepts of the Lord.

This precept was broken by the Sanhedrim encouraging false witnesses to stand up against the blood of the Prince of Life, and giving money to him who "betrayed the innocent blood" (Matt. xxvi. 60; xxvii. 4).

17. not suffer sin upon him] or rather (as Sept. and Fulg., Syriac, Arabic, and Onkelos), not bear sin for him, or on his account, not be partaker in his sin, by conniving at it in silence, or by not seeking to deliver a soul from death (James v. 20), or by being an accomplice with him: and to this command St. Paul seems to refer, "Neither be partaker of other men's sins" (1 Tim. v. 22). This precept, therefore, implies what is expressed in our Authorized Version, but it includes something more. (Cp. Lev. xxii. 9. Num. xviii. 22.)

18. thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself] ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον ὡς σεαυτὸν, Sept.; adopted verbatim in the New Testament as the second great commandment (Matt. xix. 19; xxii. 39. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 14. James ii. 8).

19. Ye shall keep my statutes] the decrees fixed by Mo. The word chok, a statute, from root chakak, to carve, engrave, seems to signify what God ordains by special revelation, in clear terms, like royal decrees engraven on stone or metal, and openly promulgated by Him (see Gesen. 300, 301, and R. Menachem here).

These words are prefixed as a preamble to the following ordinances,—which might seem to be less important,—in order to warn the Israelites against any disparagement of them.

— Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind] With a diverse kind, in Heb. kilayim, a word in the dual number, which signifies literally two separate or diverse things, two diversities. Compare Deut. xxii. 9, and the Treatise iv. in the Talmud, entitled Kilayim.

What are the reasons of the prohibition in this verse, with regard to mixtures in the animal and vegetable creation, and in the dress of the Israelites?

(1) God created every thing in the beginning after His kind (Gen. i. 11, 12. 21. 24, 25; vi. 20; vii. 14; viii. 19). Each thing had its proper kind (Heb. min; γένος, Sept.); and God would not have any disturbance or confusion to be introduced into the kinds, γένη, as originally created by Him. Such an act of mixture is an act of presumption, as overstepping the limits assigned to each genus by the Creator, and as endeavouring to alter the shape and nature of the creatures, and to add to the work of creation (R. Menachem here). God seems to have set His displeasure on such attempts, and to have imposed restraints upon them by not giving to hybrids the power of propagation.

(2) But doubtless there is also a moral and spiritual meaning in these prohibitions; see Theodoret, Qu. 27. S. Cyril, de Ador. viii. S. Gregory Nyssen, de Scopo Christiano iii. 267. Hesychius, p. 134. Cp. A Lapide here, and Gerhard, de Ecclesiâ; and Lord Bacon, de Unitate Ecclesiæ iii.: "Deus est zelandus, cultus Ejus non fert mixturam." Bp. Andrewes on the Decalogue, p. 101. God will not be served with Maleham (Zeph. i. 5). No man can serve two masters; ye cannot serve God and mammon (Matt. vi. 24).

Men are ever attempting to overpass the bounds which God has fixed in ethics and religion. They have been ever impatient of the restraints which God's Law imposes.

This has been shown in the violation of the primitive Law of Marriage (Gen. ii. 24. Matt. xix. 5), by proneness to Polygamy, and by the facilities which are claimed for Divorce.

In religious matters, this spirit has evinced itself in a neglect and violation of those laws which God has been pleased to reveal for the constitution of His Church. It showed itself in the sin of the sons of Aaron offering strange fire (Lev. x. 1). It showed itself in the sin of Korah and his company invading the Priest's office (Num. xvi. 1—35). It has shown itself by mixtures of Truth with Error, in faith and practice: such as the Judaizers introduced into the churches of Galatia (Gal. iv. 17—31). It shows itself in connivance at error, and in compromises and confusions of doctrine and discipline; and in latitudinarian encouragements of Heresy, and in that spurious liberalism which would destroy Creeds and Confessions of Faith, and would remove the landmarks of Doctrine and Regimen, and in the name of Peace, Toleration, and Comprehension, would make a wilderness of God's Church. It has always been the policy of Error to flatter Truth in order to insinuate its own poison, and to produce a confusion between what is true and what is false. Satan was the first, in the Gospel, who confessed Jesus to be the Christ. "I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God" (Mark i. 24). But Christ would not accept that confession from Satan, although it was true, lest Satan might thus gain credence for his own blasphemies; or by mixing up the Gospel with those blasphemies, might prevent its reception by the world in its simple unadulterated purity (see Mark i. 34; iii. 11. Luke iv. 34).

In like manner Satan flattered St. Paul and Silas at Philippi, and said, "These men are the servants of the Most High God, which show unto us the way of salvation" (see Acts xvi. 17). Christ is not content with a niche in the Pantheon of Indifference. "St. Paul was grieved, and said to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her."

This spirit of adulteration of truth with error shows itself also in associations of creatures with God as objects of divine

²⁰ And whosoever lieth carnally with a woman, that is a bondmaid, ||† betrothed to an husband, and not at all redeemed, nor freedom given her; ||† she shall be scourged, they shall not be put to death, because she was not free. ²¹ And ^b he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, even a ram for a trespass offering. ²² And the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass offering before the LORD for his sin which he hath done: and the sin which he hath done shall be forgiven him.

|| Or, abused by any.
 † Heb. reproached by, or, for man.
 † Or, they.
 † Heb. there shall be a scourging.
 b ch. 5. 15. & 6. 6.

²³ And when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised: three years shall it be as uncircumcised unto you: it shall not be eaten of. ²⁴ But in the fourth year all the fruit thereof shall be † holy ^c to praise the LORD withal. ²⁵ And in the fifth year shall ye eat of the fruit thereof, that it may yield unto you the increase thereof: I am the LORD your God.

† Heb. holiness of praises to the LORD.
 c Deut. 12. 17, 18, 11, 14.
 Prov. 3. 9.

²⁶ ^d Ye shall not eat any thing with the blood: ^e neither shall ye use enchantment, nor observe times. ²⁷ ^f Ye shall not round the corners of your heads, neither d ch. 17. 10, &c.

 Deut. 12. 23.
 e Deut. 18. 10, 11, 14.

1 Sam. 15. 23. 2 Kings 17. 17. & 21. 6. 2 Chron. 33. 6. Mal. 3. 5. f ch. 21. 5. Isa. 15. 2. Jer. 9. 26. & 48. 37.

honour and adoration in the public worship of His Church. It shows itself in a disregard for that constitution of the Church, and for those laws which Christ Himself prescribes for the ministry of the Word and Sacraments, and which were received from Him and from the Holy Spirit sent by Him to lead His Apostles into all truth.

Against such hollow truces, and pernicious syncretisms, and spurious adulterations of the Truth, in morals, doctrine, and Church-government, these precepts are like a divine protest; and the Holy Spirit clearly enforces them in the New Testament. "Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers: what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness?" (2 Cor. vi. 14—18.) "Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils" (1 Cor. x. 21). "We are not," says St. Paul, "as the many, who adulterate the word of God" (see on 2 Cor. ii. 17). "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump" (Gal. v. 9). False doctrine "eats as doth a canker" (2 Tim. ii. 17. Cp. 1 John ii. 23). "If any man bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 10; and see also Rom. xvi. 17, and 1 Cor. v. 11; xvi. 22). "If any man love not the Lord Jesus, let him be anathema." And the Apostle says, "Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity" (ἀφρασία, Eph. vi. 24. Cp. 2 Tim. iii. 5. Titus ii. 7).

As Richard Hooker says (Serm. v. 7), "Solomon took it for an evident proof that she did not bear a motherly affection to the child which yielded to have it cut in divers parts" (1 Kings iii. 16—28). Compare the interesting and instructive Sermon of S. Augustine, Serm. 10, on this subject (1 Kings iii. 16). "He cannot love the Lord Jesus with his heart who lendeth one ear to His Apostles and another to false teachers; and who can brook to see a mingle-mangle of religion and superstition. . . . No; we have no Lord but Jesus; no doctrine but the Gospel; no teachers but His Apostles" (Hooker).

On the difference of obligation between such precepts as these and such as those in v. 18, see Bp. Sanderson, de Consc., Lect. iv. § 16. In the former the spirit and not the letter, in the latter both the spirit and the letter are to be observed.

— not sow thy field with mingled seed] See the foregoing note, and Deut. xxii. 9. Our Lord in His Parable of the tares and the wheat supplies a comment on this Law by representing the sowing of the tares among the wheat as the work of the Enemy (Matt. xiii. 28); and by explaining to us that the tares sown with the wheat are the children of the wicked one (v. 38).

— mingled of linen and woollen] Heb. shaatenez (a kind of cloth made of two sorts of threads), explained Deut. xxii. 11; perhaps from a Coptic word, signifying 'byssus fimbriatus' (Jablonski, Förster): the Sept. renders it κισθελον, adulterated (cp. Gesen. 842). This is a precept against conformity to heathen usages (Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 139), and in spirit it obliges all. See the foregoing notes.

²⁰ betrothed] Heb. necherepheth, from charaph, to pluck (carpo), and it seems to mean one who is as a flower that is plucked. Compare the idea expressed by Catullus (Carmen Nuptiale, lx. 43), "flos tenui carptus defloruit ungui."

— she shall be scourged] rather, there shall be animadversion, visitation (bikoreth: Gesen., pp. 136—7) and punishment upon both parties: so Sept., and Fulg., "vapulabunt ambo;" and so Arabic: cp. Keil here.

— they shall not be put to death] they shall be punished, but they shall not be put to death, as they would have been if she were free (Deut. xxii. 22—24). This law shows that the Israelites, both men and women, being free, were subject to grave responsibilities consequent on their freedom; and that if they sinned, being free, they were to be punished more severely, on account of their freedom. Here there is a lesson of holiness to those whom Christ has made free.

Slavery was a fact which the Law had to deal with, and it could not at once eradicate the evil, but must endeavour to mitigate it, and prepare the way for a better Dispensation, which would strike at its root by giving new dignity to human Nature, and by admitting all nations on equal terms to the favour of God. See below, the Introduction to St. Paul's Epistle to Philemon, pp. 334, 335.

²³ ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised: three years] A proof that the rest of the Creation partook in the curse of the fall of Man, and is affected by his sin (see on Gen. iii. 17. Rom. viii. 22). But now, by the Incarnation, Christ, the Second Adam, has sanctified the creatures (1 Tim. iv. 4. Titus i. 15. See on 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23); and so all the fruit thereof is "holy to praise the Lord withal." See above, Preliminary Note to chap. xi.

On this Law see the treatise "Orlah" (or uncircumcised), in the Talmud, which relates to trees newly planted, the fruits of which may not be eaten during the first three years, and are consecrated in the fourth.

²⁶ the blood] See xvii. 12—14.

— neither shall ye use enchantment] See on Gen. xxx. 27; xlv. 15. The word there used, nachash, is the same as here; and it also occurs in Deut. xviii. 10, and it probably means divination by serpents, from nachash, a serpent (Bochart, Hierozoic. i. 21. Keil, 123). Others suppose it to signify properly to hiss, or whisper, as sorcerers do (Ps. lviii. 5. Deut. xviii. 10).

"There are various kinds of Enchantment mentioned in the Scripture, which are the workings of the Evil Spirit; whatever they be, let the man of God beware of them, lest haply, if he makes use of the operation of evil spirits here, he may be consigned to their society hereafter. All such arts are forbidden by God in Holy Scripture (Lev. xix. 31. Deut. xviii. 9—12). Melius est ignorare, quam a dæmonibus discere. Nos nihil ab iis discere jubet, ne efficiamur consortes ipsorum. Si Paulus testimonium sibi spiritum Pythonis dare non patitur (Act. xvi. 17, 18), sed dolet super hoc, quanto magis dolere debemus, si quando decipi videmus animos ab iis qui velut divino alicui spiritui Pythonis, aut ventriloco, aut divino, aut auguri, vel aliis quibuslibet hujusmodi dæmonibus credunt." Origen, in Num. Hom. 16; where are some interesting remarks on ancient practices of divination. A warning to modern times. Cp. below on v. 31.

— nor observe times] not count one day lucky, and another unlucky, as the heathen did. Hesiod, Opera et Dies, 765. Virgil, Georg. i. 276—286. Cp. Maimonides on Idolatry, xi. 8.

g ch. 21. 5.
Deut. 14. 1.
Jer. 16. 6.
& 48. 37.

h Deut. 23. 17.
† Heb. profane.

i ver. 3.
ch. 26. 2.
k Eccles. 5. 1.
l Ex. 22. 18.
ch. 20. 6, 27.
Deut. 18. 10.
l Sam. 28. 7.
l Chron. 10. 13.
Isa. 8. 19.
Acts 8. 16.
m Prov. 20. 29.
l Tim. 5. 1.
n ver. 14.
o Ex. 22. 21.
& 23. 9.
|| Or, oppress.
p Ex. 12. 48, 49.
q Deut. 10. 19.

r ver. 15.

s Deut. 25. 13, 15.
Prov. 11. 1.
& 16. 11. & 20. 10.
† Heb. stones.

shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard. ²⁸ Ye shall not ^e make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor print any marks upon you : I am the LORD.

²⁹ ^h Do not † prostitute thy daughter, to cause her to be a whore ; lest the land fall to whoredom, and the land become full of wickedness.

³⁰ ⁱ Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and ^k reverence my sanctuary : I am the LORD.

³¹ ^l Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them : I am the LORD your God.

³² ^m Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man, and ⁿ fear thy God : I am the LORD.

³³ And ^o if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not || vex him.

³⁴ ^p But the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and ^q thou shalt love him as thyself ; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt : I am the LORD your God.

³⁵ ^r Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in meteyard, in weight, or in measure. ³⁶ ^s Just balances, just † weights, a just ephah, and a just hin, shall

The word here used is from anan, to cover, connected with anan, a cloud. Some suppose that it signifies properly to observe the clouds and other phenomena of the heavens, as astrologers do (Robertson). Gesen. supposes (644) that it means to act covertly, to use secret arts. The Rabbis derive it from ayin, the eye : and so Holemann, and Keil (p. 123), with reference to the evil eye, and art of fascination.

²⁷. Ye shall not round the corners of your heads] Rather, thou shalt not round any corner (peak), thou shalt not shave it so as to be round, as some of the Arab tribes did (Herod. iii. 8). This and the following precept forbid imitation of heathen and idolatrous nations, especially in mourning (cp. Jer. ix. 26 ; xxv. 23 ; xlix. 32. Maimonides on Idolatry, cap. xii. Theodore, Qu. 28. Augustine, Qu. 71. S. Cyril, de Adoratione xvi.). The things which are here mentioned were usual among those nations, and in themselves were indifferent ; but they were not indifferent when used as signs of immoderate and hopeless lamentation for the dead . . . What are these precepts, but in effect the same which the Apostle doth more plainly express, "Sorrow not even as others which have no hope?" (1 Thess. iv. 13. Hooker, IV. vi. 3.)

— neither shall thou mar the corners of thy beard] Rather, a corner (peak), any corner by shaving : see xxi. 5. Thou shalt not shave the corner of thy beard upon the cheeks before the ears—the whiskers—as the Egyptians did (Gesenius, 664) ; and as was the custom of the heathen priests (Maimonides, on Idolatry, xii.). Such shaving was also used by heathens in mourning (Isa. xv. 2. Cp. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 139). The Hebrews might trim or poll their beards with scissors, but not shave them with a razor (cp. Acts xviii. 18). And such was the usual rule of the ancient Church for the secular clergy. Concil. Carthage, c. 44, "Clericus ne barbam radat." See A Lapide ; and cp. Clem., Alex., Præd. iii. 3. Epiphan., Hæres. 80.

²⁸. Ye shall not make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead] as the heathens did. Herod., iv. 51 ; Xenophon, Cyrop. iii. i. 13 ; iii. 3. 67. Cp. Lev. xxi. 5. Deut. xiv. 1. Jer. xlvi. 37.

— nor print any marks upon you] by tattooing, as the heathens did, in honour of their deities : whence St. John in the Revelation speaks of the χαρᾶγμα τοῦ θηρίου. See the notes below on Rev. xiii. 18, and cp. Gal. vi. 17. Tattooing is still much practised in Egypt. Lane, Mod. Egypt, pp. 39. 531.

²⁹. Do not prostitute] The reason of the insertion of this precept in this place seems to be, that what is here condemned was made an act of religion by the heathen, who dedicated their daughters to their gods for this flagitious use : see Gen. xxxviii. 21. Cp. on Acts xv. 20.

³¹. Regard not them that have familiar spirits] Literally, do not look to the oboth ; oboth, the plural of ob, literally, a bottle of skin (Job xxxii. 19. Gesen., p. 18), and supposed to be applied to diviners and necromancers (who professed to hold communion with the spirits of the dead, and to be able to evoke them), because they inflated themselves in the act of divination, as if filled with inspiration from supernatural powers (Aben Ezra). Cp. Virgil, Æn. vi. 48,— "——— pectus anhelum,

Et rabie fera corda tument ; majorque videri,
Nec mortale sonans, adflata est numine quando
Jam propiore Dei."

The word ob here used is found in xx. 6. 27. Deut. xviii. 11. 1 Sam. xxviii. 7, 8. 2 Kings xxi. 6 ; xxiii. 24. 1 Chron. x. 13. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 6. Isa. xxix. 4. It is usually rendered εγγαστριμυθος, or ventriloquist, by Sept. (cp. Joseph., Ant. vi. 14. 2), and ἐντερομάντις by Theodore (Qu. 29), who says that this name was given them because it was believed that some evil spirit spoke from within them.

This word oboth, ἀσκόι, skins blown out like bladders, may have been used here in holy indignation and disdain against these sorcerers, as the word searim, the shaggy ones, shaggy, is used for the idols of the heathen (xvii. 7. 2 Chron. xi. 15) ; and elilim, nonentities, vanities, for their gods (xix. 4 ; xxvi. 1. Isa. x. 10 ; xix. 3) ; and as the Cretans are called γαστέρες ἀργαί by Epimenides, quoted by St. Paul (Titus i. 12), and as the vain-glorious sophists of Greece, puffed out with pride and boasting, are called by the Poet, κενῆς οὐχίστιος ἔμπλεοι ἀσκόι.

A necromancer is said to have an ob in him or her (xx. 27), and to be able to divine by the ob (1 Sam. xxviii. 8) ; and the ob is said to have a voice muttering from the earth (Isa. xxix. 4). The Holy Spirit therefore in the Old Testament seems to ascribe an objective reality to the ob itself, and this is in harmony with what is said of the damsel at Philippi—viz., that she had a spirit of Python (Acts xvi. 16). It is well known that the famous oracular Python (the word used in the Acts) was a serpent, and that word seems to be connected with the Hebrew phethen, a serpent, which is applied to Satan himself, the old serpent, in the prophecy of Psalm xci. 13 (see on Matt. iv. 6). May not the Hebrew ob be connected with the Greek ὄφης, the word applied to the Evil One, the Old Serpent, in the New Test. ? (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9 ; xx. 2.)

On these Sorcerers, see Maimonides on Idolatry, vi. 2. Selden, de Diis Syr., Synt. i. c. 2. Buxtorf, Lex. Talmud. pp. 39. 670. 937. 1875. Fuller, Miscell. i. 16. Iffeffer, p. 140. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 626. Böttcher, de Inferis, p. 101. Gesenius, p. 18. Farrar, in Smith, B. D. i. 443.

— wizards] Literally, those who pretend to supernatural knowledge ; the Hebrew word here used is from yada, to know ; cp. xx. 27. Deut. xviii. 11 ; and Iffeffer, Dubia, p. 140.

Here therefore is another divine warning against any dealings with familiar spirits, whether they be supposed to be spirits of the departed, or any other spiritual agencies : see above (c. 26). A warning necessary for these latter days. (Cp. xx. 6. 27.)

³². rise up before the hoary head] Cp. Gen. xxxi. 35, where Rachel excuses herself for not rising up before her father ; and Lam. v. 12, where it is specified as one of the miseries of Jerusalem, that the "faces of the elders were not honoured."

³³. a stranger] See Exod. xxii. 21.

³⁶. Just balances, just weights] Literally, balances of Justice, weights of Justice, &c. Cp. the opposite in Luke (xvi. 8 ;

ye have: I am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt.

³⁷ Therefore shall ye observe all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: I am the LORD.

t ch. 18. 4, 5.
Deut. 4. 5, 6.
& 5. 1. & 6. 25

XX. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Again, thou shalt say to the children of Israel, ^b Whosoever he be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn in Israel, that giveth any of his seed unto Molech; he shall surely be put to death: the people of the land shall stone him with stones.

a ch. 18. 2.

³ And ^c I will set my face against that man, and will cut him off from among his people; because he hath given of his seed unto Molech, to ^d defile my sanctuary, and ^e to profane my holy name. ⁴ And if the people of the land do any ways hide their eyes from the man, when he giveth of his seed unto Molech, and ^f kill him not: ⁵ Then ^g I will set my face against that man, and ^h against his family, and will cut him off, and all that ⁱ go a whoring after him, to commit whoredom with Molech, from among their people. ⁶ And ^k the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people.

b ch. 18. 21
Deut. 12. 31.
& 18. 10.
2 Kings 17. 17.
& 23. 10.
2 Chron. 33. 6.
Jer. 7. 31.
& 32. 35.
Ezek. 20. 26, 31.
c ch. 17. 10.
d Ezek. 5. 11.
& 23. 38, 39.
e ch. 18. 21.

⁷ Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy: for I am the LORD your God. ⁸ And ye shall keep my statutes, and do them: ^a I am the LORD which sanctify you. ⁹ For every one that curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death: he hath cursed his father or his mother; ^p his blood shall be upon him. ¹⁰ And ^q the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

f Deut. 17. 2, 3, 5.
g ch. 17. 10.
h Ex. 20. 5.
i ch. 17. 7.
k ch. 19. 31.

¹¹ And the man that lieth with his father's wife hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

l ch. 11. 44.
& 19. 2.
m Pct. 1. 16.
n ch. 19. 37.
o Ex. 31. 13.
ch. 21. 8.
Ezek. 37. 28.
p Ex. 21. 17.
Deut. 27. 16.
Prov. 20. 20.
Matt. 15. 4.
q ver. 11, 12, 13, 16, 27.
2 Sam. 1. 16.
r ch. 18. 20.
Deut. 22. 22.
John 8. 4, 5.

For every one that curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death: he hath cursed his father or his mother; his blood shall be upon him.

And the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

And the man that lieth with his father's wife hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

r ch. 18. 8.
Deut. 27. 23.

xviii. 6), where the genitive is used as here. Weights; literally, stones. The Hebrews preferred stones to iron for weights, as not habit to rust (Maimon.): see Deut. xxv. 13. Prov. xi. 1; xvi. 11. 37. statutes, and all my judgments] chukkothim ve mishpatim. See v. 19; and Exod. xxi. 1.

CH. XX. 2. unto Molech] See xviii. 21. 3. will cut him off] This and many other similar denunciations in this chapter (see v. 6, 17, 18, 20, 21), are proofs of the divine origin of the Law, and of the divine authority of the Pentateuch.

Almighty God pledges Himself to intervene by special judgments in special cases of heinous delinquency. He promises to take the cause into His own hands, and to punish the offender. If such visitations had not actually followed, the Book itself which contained them would not have been received by the Jews as divinely inspired, but would have been rejected as an imposture; but if they did occur, then they were evidences of its divine origin. The universal reception of the Pentateuch as divine, by the Jewish Nation, is a proof that these judgments were executed by God; and consequently is an evidence also of the divine origin and authority of the Pentateuch.

6. that turneth after such as have familiar spirits] or, that turneth after the oboth. See note on xix. 31, and Deut. xviii. 11. — wizards] See xix. 31. "Those who evoke the dead by incantations and magical songs, in order to give answers as to future or doubtful things (1 Sam. xxviii. 7. 2 Kings xxi. 6); and the word denotes also the soothsaying demons, or familiar spirits, by which these persons were believed to be possessed (1 Sam. xxviii. 8); and it also means the dead persons themselves who were raised up (Isa. xxix. 4)." Gesenius, 18.

Intercourse with familiar spirits is here connected by Almighty God with some of the worst forms of Idol-worship, even with the savage rites of Molech, and is threatened with a similar punishment: ep. v. 27; and above, xix. 26. 31.

Surely this may well be a warning to those who deal in what they call "spirit-rapping," and profess to hold communion with the souls of the dead, or resort to them for revelations,—which was precisely the sin of those who "turned to the oboth." The foregoing description of the oboth, condemned in Scripture, is a correct representation of what is now professed to be done by many, who appear to have little fear of the divine displeasure denounced against such practices.

— I will even set my face against that soul] This judgment was executed by God against Saul, who turned to an ob (1 Sam. xxviii. 7, 8), and who was deprived of his kingdom, and was cut off by God because he did so (1 Chron. x. 13, 14).

7. Sanctify yourselves therefore] Resort not to evil spirits, but be ye holy. How much more is this incumbent on Christians, who are members of the Holy One, and temples of the Holy Spirit! (1 Cor. vi. 15, 19.)

9. every one that curseth his father] or, speaketh evil of. The Hebrew word kalah, here used, signifies to be light, to be despised; and, in piel, to speak evil of, to curse; and in this text it is rendered κακολογεῖν by Matt. xv. 4; and the Sept. has here "whosoever speaks evil of his father" (ὅς ἐν κακῷ εἶπη τὸν πατέρα). Such a person was punished by death, namely, by stoning (Exod. xxi. 17. Deut. xxi. 21).

— his blood shall be upon him] he is guilty of his own death by his own sin.

Wherever it is said in the Law, "his blood shall be upon him," the meaning is "he shall be stoned" (see Maimon. and Jarchi here).

10. with his neighbour's wife] This addition of the word "neighbour," after "another man," teaches that every one is our neighbour. "Proximus omnis homo homini," Augustine, Qu. 74. Cp. Luke x. 29—37.

— the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death] either by stoning (see John viii. 4, 5; and cp. Deut. xxii. 24), or by strangling (Maimon., in Sanhed. xv. 13). A solemn warning to those who commit this sin, or encourage it by making it an occasion for giving facilities to Divorce, and for a second marriage. Cp. Matt. v. 32; xix. 9. Mark x. 11. Luke xvi. 18. Heb. xiii. 4.

11. the man that lieth, &c.] The sin of Reuben (Gen. xlix. 4. See xviii. 8. Deut. xxii. 30; xxvii. 20. 1 Cor. v. 1).

s ch. 18. 15.

¹² ^s And if a man lie with his daughter in law, both of them shall surely be put to death: 'they have wrought confusion; their blood shall be upon them.

t ch. 18. 23.

u ch. 18. 22.
Deut. 23. 17.
See Gen. 19. 5.
Judg. 19. 22.

¹³ ^u If a man also lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

x ch. 18. 17.
Deut. 27. 23.

¹⁴ ^x And if a man take a wife and her mother, it is wickedness: they shall be burnt with fire, both he and they; that there be no wickedness among you.

y ch. 18. 23.
Deut. 27. 21.

¹⁵ ^y And if a man lie with a beast, he shall surely be put to death: and ye shall slay the beast. ¹⁶ And if a woman approach unto any beast, and lie down thereto, thou shalt kill the woman, and the beast: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

z ch. 18. 9.
Deut. 27. 22.
See Gen. 20. 12.

¹⁷ ^z And if a man shall take his sister, his father's daughter, or his mother's daughter, and see her nakedness, and she see his nakedness; it is a wicked thing; and they shall be cut off in the sight of their people: he hath uncovered his sister's nakedness; he shall bear his iniquity. ¹⁸ ^a And if a man shall lie with a woman having her sickness, and shall uncover her nakedness; he hath † discovered her fountain, and she hath uncovered the fountain of her blood: and both of them shall be cut off from among their people.

a ch. 18. 19.
See ch. 15. 24.† Heb. made naked.

b ch. 18. 12, 13.

¹⁹ ^b And thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister, nor of thy father's sister: 'for he uncovereth his near kin: they shall bear their iniquity. ²⁰ ^d And if a man shall lie with his uncle's wife, he hath uncovered his uncle's nakedness: they shall bear their sin; they shall die childless.

c ch. 18. 6.

d ch. 18. 14.

e ch. 18. 16.
† Heb. a separation.

²¹ ^e And if a man shall take his brother's wife, it is † an unclean thing: he hath uncovered his brother's nakedness; they shall be childless.

f ch. 18. 26.
‡ 19. 37.
g ch. 18. 25, 28.

²² Ye shall therefore keep all my 'statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: that the land, whither I bring you to dwell therein, ^g spue you not out.

h ch. 18. 3, 24, 30.

²³ ^h And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nation, which I cast out before you: for they committed all these things, and 'therefore I abhorred them.

i ch. 18. 27.
Deut. 9. 5.k Ex. 3. 17.
‡ 6. 8.

²⁴ But ^k I have said unto you, Ye shall inherit their land, and I will give it unto you to possess it, a land that floweth with milk and honey: I am the LORD your God, 'which have separated you from other people.

l ver. 26.
Ex. 19. 5.
‡ 33. 16.

Deut. 7. 6. & 14. 2.

1 Kings 8. 53.
m ch. 11. 47.
Deut. 14. 4.
n ch. 11. 4:.

²⁵ ^m Ye shall therefore put difference between clean beasts and unclean, and between unclean fowls and clean: "and ye shall not make your souls abominable by beast, or by fowl, or by any manner of living thing that

12. if a man lie, &c.] The sin of Judah, though committed ignorantly (Gen. xxxviii. 24—26). Cp. v. 17.

These condemnations of sins committed by the Patriarchs show the impartiality of the Law.

14. if a man take a wife and her mother, it is wickedness: they shall be burnt with fire] It cannot, therefore, be a safe thing to take a wife and her sister: see on xviii. 18.

15. ye shall slay the beast] Compare the curse upon the serpent (Gen. iii. 14). "Pecus jussit interfici, quia tali flagitio contaminata indignam reficiat facti memoriam" (Augustine).

17. his sister] See Gen. xx. 2. 10—12, the case of Abraham. Here again, the sovereign independence and divine authority of the Lawgiver is visible, in the condemnation of acts which had been committed, and of a marriage contracted, by Abraham, the father of the faithful; a marriage, from whose issue the promised seed was to come.

The Levitical Law of Marriage (as before observed, xviii. 1) was a republication of the primitive Law, and is therefore obligatory on all; and the deviations of the Patriarchs, even of Abraham himself, from the primitive Law of Marriage (cp. our Lord's words, Matt. xix. 4. 8), is an evidence that oral tradition is a precarious medium of communication, even with all the advantages of patriarchal longevity; and that the practice of the Patriarchs cannot be accepted as an unerring exponent and interpreter of the primitive Law, with regard to Marriage, or the Sabbath, or any other institutions. The primitive Law fell almost into oblivion, and therefore sin was not imputed to them; and a necessity arose for its republication, by writing, in the Levitical Code.

20. they shall die childless] The Divine Lawgiver says, that he will not give them children, or that the children will soon be taken from them. Who could speak in such terms as these but God? Here then is an evidence of the divine origin of the Law: see above, on v. 3. The civil magistrate might not put the children to death (Maimonides, quoted by Ainsworth, p. 123; and Jarchi). God reserved this and other similar cases to Himself.

21. if a man shall take his brother's wife] See on xviii. 18. — they shall be childless] See v. 20. Or, the children shall not be regarded as legitimate (Aug., Qu. 76).

24. which have separated you from other people] These words (repeated in v. 26) are a divine clue to many of the provisions of the Levitical Code (see on xi. 2); and they show that the Levitical Code—so far as it concerned the Jews as a distinct people—was only preparatory to another dispensation, which God had revealed to Abraham, in whose seed all nations were to be blessed (Gen. xii. 3; xviii. 14); and that these Levitical precepts have fulfilled their purpose, now that the wall of separation between Jew and Gentile has been broken down by Christ (Eph. ii. 14), in whom there is no difference between Jew and Greek (Rom. x. 12— Gal. iii. 28. Col. iii. 11).

|| creepeth on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean. ²⁶ And ye shall be holy unto me: °for I the LORD am holy, and ^p have severed you from other people, that ye should be mine.

²⁷ ^a A man also or woman that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death: they shall stone them with stones: ^r their blood shall be upon them.

XXI. ¹ And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron, and say unto them, ^a There shall none be defiled for the dead among his people: ² But for his kin, that is near unto him, that is, for his mother, and for his father, and for his son, and for his daughter, and for his brother, ³ And for his sister a virgin, that is nigh unto him, which hath had no husband; for her may he be defiled. ⁴ But || he shall not defile himself, being a chief man among his people, to profane himself. ⁵ ^b They shall not make baldness upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corner of their beard, nor make any cuttings in their flesh. ⁶ They shall be holy unto their God, and ^c not profane the name of their God: for the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and ^d the bread of their God, they do offer: therefore they shall be holy. ⁷ ^e They shall not take a wife that is a whore, or profane; neither shall they take a woman ^f put away from her husband: for he is holy unto his God. ⁸ Thou shalt sanctify him therefore; for he offereth the bread of thy God: he shall be holy unto thee: ^g for I the LORD, which sanctify you, am holy.

|| Or, moveth.
o ver. 7.
ch. 19. 2.
1 Pet. 1. 16.
p ver. 24.
Tit. 2. 14.
q Ex. 22. 18.
ch. 19. 31.
Deut. 18. 10, 11.
1 Sam. 28. 7, 8.
r ver. 9.
a Ezek. 44. 25.
|| Or, being an husband among his people, he shall not defile himself for his wife, &c. See Ezek. 24. 16, 17. b ch. 19. 27, 28. Deut. 14. 1. Ezek. 44. 20. c ch. 18. 21. & 19. 12. d See ch. 3. 11. e Ezek. 44. 22. f See Deut. 24. 1, 2. g ch. 20. 7, 8.

27. A man also or woman that hath a familiar spirit] Literally, in whom there is an ob. It is observable that the Vulgate here renders ob by "Spiritus Pythonicus," the same words as those used in the Acts (xvi. 16, πνεῦμα Πύθωνος), a spirit of Python; and the Targum of Onkelos here has Bidin Pythons. Cp. note above, on xix. 31.

The Lawgiver ascends from precepts for the holiness of the People (enunciated in the foregoing chapters) to enactments for the holiness of the Priests. The People had been forbidden to resort to familiar spirits and wizards (xix. 26, 31); God provides them a holy oracle in the Urim and Thummim on the breastplate of the High Priest for the revelation of His will. He raises our eyes to the Great High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus (Heb. iii. 1), and reminds us of our Christian Priesthood in Him (1 Pet. ii. 5, 9. Rev. i. 6; v. 10), and our consequent obligations to holiness: see v. 4.

Here begins a new Parashah, or Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xxiv. 23. The parallel Haphtarah, or Proper Lesson of the Prophets, is Ezek. xlv. 15—31, which contains ordinances for the priests, and is the best commentary on the present chapter.

CH. XXI. 1. There shall none be defiled for the dead among his people] Cp. Ezek. xlv. 25, which repeats the enactment in this and the following verses. Consider the blessed change wrought in these respects by Christ: see on x. 4—6. The Priests typified Him who is the Life, and who by dying "swallowed up death in victory;" and therefore they are not to be mourners for the dead (Cyril, de Ador. xii. p. 430). 4. being a chief man] A chief man; Heb. baal, a lord or master (Judg. xix. 22), from baal, to rule (Gesen. 130); whence Baal, Bel, Belus, Hanni-bal (i. e., grace of Baal), Hasdru-bal (i. e., help of Baal), Baal-zephon, possession of Typhon (Exod. xiv. 2. 9. Num. xxxiii. 7). In some Versions it is rendered "for a chief man;" that is, he shall not defile himself by mourning for a prince (so Syriac, Arabic, and Vulgate). The Sept. has ἐξάρνα, suddenly, as if the original word were not Baal, but bahal. Some suppose the words to mean that he shall not defile himself as a husband and lord of a family, by contracting a vicious marriage, or by bringing up his children ill; and that the sentence refers to what follows in v. 7 (Keil). The Authorized Version is supported by the Targum of Onkelos and some of the Rabbis, and this seems the best interpretation; and so Baumgarten (p. 217), "He being the head over the people, is not to be defiled; for if he is defiled, the people are defiled also." Cp. v. 10. These enactments have a spiritual meaning. The letter of them is cancelled in Christ; but they are enlarged, perpetuated, and spiritualized in Him. Death represents Sin and its effects,—its guilt, its pollution, its punishment. The Christian is a priest to God (Rev. i. 6). In a certain sense, the Christian Church forms a "kingdom of priests" (ep. Exod. xix. 6). The Christian must be "purged from dead works to serve the living God" (Heb. ix. 14). He may not communicate with those "who are dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph. ii. 1. Col. ii. 13). "Let the dead bury their dead" (Matt. viii. 22). To the Christian Bishop and Priest it is said, "Keep thyself pure" (1 Tim. v. 22. Cp. 1 Tim. iii. 2). And, inasmuch as, in a larger sense, Christ has made us all to be Priests to God (see on Rev. i. 6), the spirit of these precepts in this chapter concerns all Christians, who are built up as lively spiritual stones into a holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ (1 Pet. ii. 5). And therefore the Apostle adopts the words of the Levitical Law, and teaches us to Christianize them: "As He which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation, because it is written" (Lev. xix. 2; xx. 7), "Be ye holy, for I am holy" (1 Pet. i. 15, 16). See below, vv. 10, 17; and S. Cyril, de Ador. xii. p. 430; Theodorct, Qu. 30. Christ is the Baal or Chief Man among His People. As Man, He was conceived by the Holy Ghost in the Womb of the Virgin Mary; He was visibly anointed with the Holy Spirit, as our Prophet, Priest, and King, at His Baptism in the river Jordan. And for our sakes He sanctifies Himself, that we also may be sanctified through the truth (John xvii. 19); and that, by being partakers and imitators of His Holiness, we may be inheritors of His Glory. 5. not make baldness] as the heathens did. S. Jerome, in Ezek. xlv. 7. They shall not take a wife, &c.] So the Apostle lays down rules concerning the wives of Christian Priests and Deacons (1 Tim. iii. 2. 11. Titus i. 6). The soul that is espoused to Christ, our Great High Priest, must be holy, chaste, and true to Him. Cp. below, vv. 13, 14. 8. Thou shalt sanctify him therefore] Here the act of sanctification is ascribed to Moses; but it is added, "I, the Lord, which sanctify you;" Moses sanctified as God's Minister, God sanctifies by divine power. Here then the question arises (says Augustine), "Does God sanctify without the ministry of man?"

t Gen. 33. 24.

9^h And the daughter of any priest, if she profane herself by playing the whore, she profaneth her father: she shall be burnt with fire.

i Ex. 29. 29, 30.
ch. 8. 12. & 16.
32.
Num. 35. 25.
k Ex. 28. 2.
ch. 16. 32.
l ch. 10. 6.
m Num. 19. 14.
See ver. 1. 2.
n ch. 10. 7.
o Ex. 28. 36.
ch. 8. 9, 12, 30.

10ⁱ And he that is the high priest among his brethren, upon whose head the anointing oil was poured, and ^k that is consecrated to put on the garments, shall not uncover his head, nor rend his clothes; 11 Neither shall he ^m go in to any dead body, nor defile himself for his father, or for his mother; 12ⁿ Neither shall he go out of the sanctuary, nor profane the sanctuary of his God; for ^o the crown of the anointing oil of his God is upon him: I am the LORD. 13 And ^p he shall take a wife in her virginity. 14 A widow, or a divorced woman, or profane, or an harlot, these shall he not take: but he shall take a virgin of his own people to wife. 15 Neither shall he profane his seed among his people: for ^q I the LORD do sanctify him.

p ver. 7.
Ezek. 44. 22.

q ver. 8.

16 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 17 Speak unto Aaron, saying, Whosoever he be of thy seed in their generations that hath any blemish, let him not ^r approach to offer the || bread of his God. 18 For whatsoever man he be that hath a blemish, he shall not approach: a blind man, or a lame, or he that hath a flat nose, or any thing ^s superfluous, 19 Or a man that is brokenfooted, or brokenhanded, 20 Or crookbackt, or || a dwarf, or that hath a blemish in his eye, or be scurvy, or scabbed, or ^t hath his stones broken; 21 No man that hath a blemish of the seed of Aaron the priest shall come nigh to ^u offer the offerings of the LORD made by fire: he hath a blemish; he shall

r ch. 10. 3.
Num. 16. 5.
Ps. 65. 4.
|| Or, food,
ch. 3. 11.
s ch. 22. 23.

|| Or, too slender.

t Deut. 23. 1.

u ver. 6.

Does He ever sanctify by invisible grace without visible sacraments? God can do all things; but He never sanctifies with invisible grace those persons who despise the visible sacraments which He has instituted for the conveyance of invisible grace. Therefore Cornelius, who had received invisible grace, was baptized with the visible sacrament: see on Acts x. 41—48 (S. Augustine, Qu. 84).

9. the daughter of any priest, if she profane herself, &c., shall be burnt with fire] Therefore the Jewish Church, having been false to God, was consumed; the Temple was burnt with fire (Hesych.). And the corrupt Church of the Apocalypse, who is guilty of spiritual harlotry, will be consumed with fire: see Rev. xvii. 1, 2, 5, 16; xviii. 9.

10. And he that is the high priest] Literally, and the great priest among his brethren, on whom the oil of anointing is poured, and hath filled his hand [see Exod. xxix. 7; and Lev. viii. 27]. The Sept. has τετελειωμένος here; cp. Heb. ii. 10; v. 9; vii. 28; x. 14, in which passages the Apostle uses the word τελειώνω, to perfect, to invest in the sacred mysteries (τέλειον), to consecrate. Those passages cannot adequately be understood by the English reader unless he bears in mind that the word to perfect has the sense of consecrate, and is derived by the Apostle from the Septuagint Version of the Hebrew words, which signify to fill the hands, in order to consecrate. Hence also in the passages of the Epistle to the Hebrews (xi. 40; xii. 23), where the word to perfect (τελειώνω) is applied to Christian believers, there is a reference to their consecration as priests, by reason of the Priesthood of Christ their Head, from whom the holy oil of anointing flows down upon them (Ps. cxxxiii. 2. John i. 16. See above on Exod. xxix. 9. Lev. viii. 12, 27).

— not uncover his head] See x. 6, and S. Cyril (de Ador. xii. p. 432), who observes that in these respects the High Priest was a type of Christ, in whom there was no stain of pollution to be found, and who could not be disqualified for attendance to the work of God.

The Priest who was dedicated to God, was to be devoted entirely to His service; he was to know nothing of any earthly relations, or any other love, in comparison with the love of God. No earthly affection for father, or mother, or brethren, was to draw him off from attendance at the Sanctuary. Here is a lesson to all Christian priests, and to all Christians who, in a certain sense, are priests to God (see on v. 4). "If any man come to Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also" (in comparison with the love he bears to Me), "he cannot be My disciple" (Luke xiv. 26). Cp. what our Lord says (Matt. viii. 21, 22. Luke ix. 60) on the necessity of undivided love and devotion to God.

See S. Jerome (Epist. Crit. ad Fabiol. de vest. Saer., p. 574), who says, "We are a royal priesthood, and must give our whole affections to that Father who never dies, and to Him who died for us, that we might live for ever."

— nor rend his clothes] in mourning (x. 6. Cp. Gen. xxxvii. 34). Yet Caiaphas rent his clothes at the words of Him who is the Resurrection and the Life (Matt. xxvi. 65. Cp. S. Leo, Sermon. 55).

11. nor defile himself for his father] Such was the evidence of the uncleanness of sin and of its fruit, death. But the Grave has now been hallowed by Christ; and Christian saints and martyrs are buried by Christian Priests and Bishops in the Church of God, and even near the altar of God. What a change has been wrought in the world by the Incarnation, Death, Burial, and Resurrection of Christ! (See above, on x. 4—6.) There is a moral truth of perpetual obligation involved in this precept; which is, that no earthly ties of affection are to be put in comparison with duty to God. Every Christian in a certain sense is a priest; and when God calls him, he must know no other Father than Him; and this is strongly enforced by Christ in the Gospel (Matt. viii. 22. Luke ix. 62), as Tertullian observes (c. Marcion. iv. 23).

13. he shall take a wife in her virginity] His wife shall be a virgin; such is the Bride of Christ, and such is every faithful soul, espoused to Him in Baptism: see note on 2 Cor. xi. 2, "I have espoused you as a chaste virgin to Christ;" cp. S. Cyril, de Ador. xii. p. 434, who says, "Christ will not consort with unholy souls, but unites Himself in mystical wedlock with the pure, as with a chaste Virgin."

Here then is a lesson of faith and holiness to the Christian. Cp. S. Jerome, ad Fabiol. p. 578.

17. that hath any blemish] Blemish, in Heb. mum, spot, stain; in Greek ωμός. The spirit of these Laws is to be applied to the Christian Clergy, and indeed to all the faithful, who are made priests unto God in Christ (see above, on v. 4); and therefore the Church of Christ is described, in her state of glory, as "not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but holy, and without blemish" (ἁμωμος, Eph. v. 26, 27); and the saints of God are described in the Apocalypse as "without blemish" (ἁμωμοι) before the throne of God" (Rev. xiv. 5), for they are members of Christ, who offered Himself a victim without blemish, ἁμωμον (see Heb. ix. 14); and He our Great High Priest and future Judge, is said μορφοποιεῖν πάντα, that is, to examine the spiritual sacrifices offered by Christians, whether they have blemishes or no. See S. Polycarp, ad Philipp. 4, and below, on Heb. iv. 13. Here therefore is a solemn warning to all, especially to Christian Priests, to take good heed to themselves to sanctify their affections, and dedicate them wholly to God, and not come nigh to offer the bread of his God. ²² He shall eat the bread of his God, both of the *most holy, and of the ^vholy. ²³ Only he shall not go in unto the vail, nor come nigh unto the altar, because he hath a blemish; that * he profane not my sanctuaries: for I the LORD do sanctify them.

x ch. 2. 3. 10. &
6. 17. 29. & 7. 1.
& 24. 9.
Num. 18. 9.
y ch. 22. 10, 11, 12.
Num. 18. 19.
z ver. 12.

²⁴ And Moses told it unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

XXII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, that they ^a separate themselves from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they ^b profane not my holy name in those things which they ^c hallow unto me: I am the LORD. ³ Say unto them, Whosoever he be of all your seed among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things, which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, ^d having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be cut off from my presence: I am the LORD. ⁴ What man soever of the seed of Aaron is a leper, or hath ^e a ^f running issue; he shall not eat of the holy things, ^g until he be clean. And ^h whoso toucheth any thing that is unclean by the dead, or ⁱ a man whose seed goeth from him; ^j Or ^k whosoever toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, or ^l a man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath; ^m The soul which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he ⁿ wash his flesh with water. ⁷ And when the sun is down, he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of the holy things; because ^o it is his food. ⁸ ⁿ That which dieth of itself, or is torn with beasts, he shall not eat to defile himself therewith: I am the LORD. ⁹ They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, ^o lest they bear sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it: I the LORD do sanctify them.

a Num. 6. 3.
b ch. 18. 21.
c Ex. 28. 38.
Num. 18. 32.
Deut. 15. 19.
d ch. 7. 20.
e ch. 15. 2.
f Heb. running of the reins.
g ch. 14. 2. & 15. 13.
h Num. 19. 11, 22
i ch. 15. 16.
j ch. 11. 24, 43, 44.
k ch. 15. 7, 19.

l ch. 15. 5.
m Heb. 10. 22.
n ch. 21. 22.
Num. 18. 11, 13.
o Ex. 22. 31.
ch. 17. 15.
Ezek. 41. 31.

p Ex. 28. 43.
Num. 18. 22, 32.

q See 1 Sam. 21. 6.

¹⁰ ^p There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing: a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing. ¹¹ But if the priest buy any soul ^q with his money, he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house: ^r they shall eat of his meat. ¹² If the priest's daughter also be married unto ^t a stranger, she may not eat of an offering of the holy things. ¹³ But if the priest's r Heb. with the purchase of his money.

q Num. 18. 11, 13
t Heb. a man a stranger.

pray for the cleansing grace of the Sanctifier, and to set a watch upon their hearts and lips in their religious approaches to God (cp. 1 Tim. iv. 12. 1 Pet. i. 15, 16. S. Basil, de Baptism. lib. ii. S. Greg. Nazian., Orat. i. S. Jerome, ad Fabiol. de vest. Sacerdot., Ep. 128).

22. of the most holy, and of the holy] On the difference between these, see above, on ii. 3.

CH. XXII. 2. that they separate themselves from the holy things] Rather, that they abstain from the holy things of the children of Israel which they consecrate unto me, that they profane not my holy name.

This precept is directed to the Priests, in order that they might not profanely covet the Lord's portion of the offering, as the sons of Eli did (see 1 Sam. ii. 12—17); and also that they might not drink the wine of the Drink-offerings in the Tabernacle, which was probably the sin of Nadab and Abihu (see above, on x. 1; and cp. Ezek. xlv. 21; and Num. xviii. 32).

Some Expositors suppose that this precept means that the Priests should not eat of the holy things when they themselves are unclean (A Lapide; cp. Keil, p. 131; Baumgarten, p. 219); but the former interpretation seems preferable; and the latter applies rather to what follows.

3. goeth unto the holy things—having his uncleanness] A precept which, in spirit, is applicable to all persons in every age of the Church. "I will be sanctified in them that come nigh Me" (x. 3. Cp. Ps. xxvi. 6; lxxiii. 12; lxxxix. 7. 1 Pet. i. 15), especially by those who come to the Holy Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ (1 Cor. xi. 28).

4. unclean by the dead] Literally, unclean by a soul. This use of the word soul (nephesh) for the dead body, is seen in

xix. 28; xxi. 1. Cp. Bp. Pearson, on the Creed, Art. v. p. 232, and note there.

5. any creeping thing] when dead: see xi. 31.

8. That which dieth of itself] See Levit. xvii. 15. Ezek. xlv. 31, the parallel Haphtarab to this Parashah: see above, xxi. 1.

10. no stranger] who is not of the Priest's family, shall eat of the "holy thing"—i. e., of the heave-offerings, much less of the "most holy:" see iii. 3.

— a sojourner] one who is not a continual inmate of the household.

These precepts show that the Law was only preparatory for another Dispensation, when it would be said to all God's family, by the Great High Priest, who instituted the Christian Festival (foreshadowed by the Hebrew Peace-offering, Meat-offering, and Drink-offering), the festival of the Holy Eucharist, "Drink ye all of it" (Matt. xxvi. 27), for ye are "no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God" (Eph. ii. 19).

This may also be understood spiritually. In order to feed on Christ worthily, we must not be mere sojourners, but citizens, united in heart and soul to the heavenly Jerusalem; and not hirelings, mercenaries, bondsmen; but we must love Christ freely for His own sake (S. Cyril, de Ador. xii. pp. 424—427; Hesych. here).

11. he that is born in his house: they shall eat of his meat] Here is a foreshadowing of good things to come. All Nations are now born by Baptism "in the house of the Priest," even in the house of the Great High Priest, Jesus Christ, which is the Church of God; and all are now invited to eat of His meat, even to feed on Himself, and to live for ever through Him, who is the Life (Matt. xxvi. 27. John vi. 53—56).

12. married unto a stranger] The soul is, as it were, a child of God, and if it falls away from Him, it is as it were married

r Gen. 28. 11.

s ch. 10. 14.
Num. 18. 11, 19.

t ch. 5. 15, 16.

u Num. 18. 32.

|| Or, tade themselves with the iniquity of trespass in their eating.
x ver. 9.y ch. 1. 2, 3, 10.
Num. 15. 14.

z ch. 1. 3.

a Deut. 15. 21. & 17. 1.

Mal. 1. 8, 14.

Eph. 5. 27.

Heb. 9. 14.

1 Pet. 1. 19.

b ch. 3. 1, 6.

c ch. 7. 16.

Num. 15. 3, 8.

Deut. 23. 21, 23.

1's. 61. 8. & 65. 1.

Eccles. 5. 4, 5.

|| Or, goats.

d ver. 20.

Mal. 1. 8.

e ch. 1. 9, 13.

& 3. 3, 5.

|| Or kid.

f ch. 21. 18.

g Num. 15. 15, 16.

h ch. 21. 6, 17.

i Mal. 1. 14.

k Ex. 22. 30.

|| Or, she goat.

l Deut. 22. 6.

daughter be a widow, or divorced, and have no child, and is 'returned unto her father's house, ' as in her youth, she shall eat of her father's meat: but there shall no stranger eat thereof. ¹⁴ 'And if a man eat of the holy thing unwittingly, then he shall put the fifth part thereof unto it, and shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing. ¹⁵ And "they shall not profane the holy things of the children of Israel, which they offer unto the LORD; ¹⁶ Or ||suffer them *to bear the iniquity of trespass, when they eat their holy things: for I the LORD do sanctify them. ¹⁷ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁸ Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, 'Whatsoever he be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his vows, and for all his freewill offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt offering; ¹⁹ ^z Ye shall offer at your own will a male without blemish, of the beeves, of the sheep, or of the goats. ²⁰ ^a But whatsoever hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer: for it shall not be acceptable for you. ²¹ And ^b whosoever offereth a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD 'to accomplish his vow, or a freewill offering in beeves or ||sheep, it shall be perfect to be accepted; there shall be no blemish therein. ²² ^d Blind, or broken, or maimed, or having a wen, or scurvy, or scabbed, ye shall not offer these unto the LORD, nor make ^e an offering by fire of them upon the altar unto the LORD. ²³ Either a bullock or a || lamb that hath any thing ^f superfluous or lacking in his parts, that mayest thou offer for a freewill offering; but for a vow it shall not be accepted. ²⁴ Ye shall not offer unto the LORD that which is bruised, or crushed, or broken, or cut; neither shall ye make any offering thereof in your land. ²⁵ Neither ^g from a stranger's hand shall ye offer ^h the bread of your God of any of these; because their ⁱ corruption is in them, and blemishes be in them: they shall not be accepted for you.

²⁶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁷ ^k When a bullock, or a sheep, or a goat, is brought forth, then it shall be seven days under the dam; and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the LORD. ²⁸ And whether it be cow or ||ewe, ye shall not kill it ^l and her young both in one day.

to a stranger, and loses its right to feed on divine and spiritual food. And in a special sense, the Hebrew Synagogue was like a Priest's daughter; but it has left its Father's house, and has joined itself to a stranger, and has forfeited its filial right to partake of its Father's table, and of the bread from heaven, which is Christ (S. Cyril).

13. divorced] Heb. gerushah, expelled, from garash, to drive out. Gesen. 182.

— is returned unto her father's house] In a spiritual sense, this describes the condition of the human soul which has lapsed into heresy or sin, but may return by true repentance to the communion of the Church of God, and may be restored to participation in its holy mysteries, especially at the Lord's table. And this describes the future happy condition of the Jewish Nation after its restoration to its Father's house (S. Cyril, de Ador. pp. 426—8).

14. put the fifth part] to the principal; to the holy thing—the heave-offering eaten by him in ignorance. Cp. v. 15, 16.

15. which they offer] Literally, what they shall heave up. It is a different word from that rendered "offer" in v. 18. The former is from rum, to lift up, to heave, whence teramoth, heave-offerings (Gesen., p. 761); the other is from karab, to approach, and in hiphil, to cause to approach, to bring near, whence korban (Gesen., p. 741).

18. his vows] Heb. nedarim, from nadar, to drop down (whence nadir), and to vow (Gesen. 536), on which see the Treatise of the Talmud, entitled "Nedarim" (Lib. iii. Tract. 5).

19. at your own will] rather, for your favourable acceptance (see i. 3. Cp. ver. 20, 23).

These precepts provide that the offering should be of such a kind (i. e., without blemish) as to be favourably accepted. "If ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil?" (Mal. i. 8. 13;) and therefore they are applicable, in spirit, to the Clergy and Laity of the Christian Church in every age and country. Christ offered Himself for us, a "Lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Pet. i. 19); and He cleansed "His Church with His own blood, that He might present her to Himself glorious, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that she should be holy and without blemish" (Eph. v. 27).

22. Blind, or broken—ye shall not offer] but the first, and best: these defects represent spiritual and moral blemishes. S. Cyril, pp. 522—4. Tertullian, Apol. 13, charges the heathen of his age with offering mean and diseased victims to their gods.

27. it shall be seven days under the dam] that the Sabbath might pass over it (R. Menachem here); but it is observable that the eighth day, here prescribed, is commonly a day of consecration in the Law, being figurative of our Lord's Resurrection to glory: see above, ix. 1. Exod. xxii. 30; and Lev. i. 14. And this preservation of the animal beyond the eighth day might perhaps be significant of the truth, that no offering is acceptable to God except by virtue of Christ's death and resurrection (S. Cyril, p. 359).

— from the eighth day] When it had become more valuable, and might have some qualities then discernible which might tempt the owner to reserve it to himself (Theodoret).

28. ye shall not kill it and her young both in one day] A general precept of humanity and mercy (Exod. xxiii. 19. Deut. xxii. 6, 7). "As our Father in heaven is merciful, so be ye merciful on earth" (Targum Jonathan here).

²⁹ And when ye will ^m offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving unto the LORD, offer it at your own will. ³⁰ On the same day it shall be eaten up; ye shall leave none of it until the morrow: I am the LORD.

³¹ Therefore shall ye keep my commandments, and do them: I am the LORD. ³² Neither shall ye profane my holy name; but I will be hallowed among the children of Israel: I am the LORD which hallow you, ³³ That brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD.

XXIII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, Concerning the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, even these are my feasts.

³ Six days shall work be done: but the seventh day is the sabbath of rest, an holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein: it is the sabbath of the LORD in all your dwellings.

⁴ These are the feasts of the LORD, even holy convocations, which ye shall proclaim in their seasons. ⁵ In the fourteenth day of the first month at even is the LORD's passover. ⁶ And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread unto the LORD: seven days ye must eat unleavened bread. ⁷ In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein. ⁸ But ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the

m ch. 7. 12.
Ps. 107. 22.
& 116. 17.
Amos 4. 5.

n ch. 7. 15.

o ch. 19. 37.
Num. 15. 40.
Deut. 4. 40.
p ch. 18. 21.

q ch. 10. 3.
Matt. 6. 9.

Luke 11. 2.
r ch. 20. 8.

s Ex. 6. 7.
ch. 11. 45.

& 19. 36.
& 25. 38.

Num. 15. 41.
a ver. 4. 37.

b Ex. 32. 5.
2 Kings 10. 20.

Ps. 81. 3.
c Ex. 20. 9.

& 23. 12. & 21. 15.
& 34. 21.

ch. 19. 3.
Deut. 5. 13.

Luke 13. 14.
d ver. 2. 37.

Ex. 23. 14.
e Ex. 12. 6, 14.

18 & 13. 3, 10.
& 23. 15. & 34.

18.
Num. 9. 2, 3.

& 28. 16, 17.
Deut. 16. 1—8.

Josh. 5. 10.
f Ex. 12. 16.

Num. 28. 13, 25.

The precepts of the Levitical Law, "not to seethe a kid in his mother's milk;" not to kill an animal and its offspring in the same day; not to take the dam and the young ones together (Deut. xxii. 6), show that God, the Creator, is also the Preserver. He does not will Death, but Life; He does not approve the extermination of any species that He has made (Wisdom i. 14). These precepts are doubtless also of a spiritual kind, and are designed to show God's tender regard for the natural affections, even among animals; and, a fortiori, to indicate His tenderness for His own people, whom He loves, as a mother does her offspring (Isa. xlix. 15. Matt. xxiii. 37), especially for the little ones of Christ's flock, whom He has redeemed and blessed (Mark x. 13—16); and to engage all men to show their love to the Divine Shepherd who died for them, by loving the sheep and lambs for whom He died (John xxi. 15—17. Cp. Clem. Alex., Strom. ii. p. 477).

In another spiritual sense this precept may have been like a prophetic intimation, that though God might deal severely with the Mother—the Jewish Synagogue—yet a remnant would be saved; and the Christian Church, the youthful offspring, would flourish even out of its ruins (S. Cyril, p. 360). See further below, Deut. xxii. 6.

²⁹. at your own will] See v. 19.

³⁰. On the same day it shall be eaten up] See vii. 16; and Exod. xii. 8. 10.

CHAPTER XXIII.—THE FEASTS.

Having delivered precepts concerning holy Persons, the Sacred Lawgiver now proceeds to speak of holy Seasons.

2. the feasts] The Hebrew word Moëd, a feast, from yada, to appoint, signifies properly any thing that is fixed or appointed, and thence it comes to signify either a fixed time, as a feast-day; or a fixed place of assembly, as the temple (Gesen., pp. 355. 457).

— convocations] The Hebrew mikra, a convocation, from kara, to call, to cry out, in order to convoke: cp. Greek, κηρύσσω, to proclaim; and see the other derivatives (κράζω, crier, cry), in other languages, in Gesen., p. 739.

From the etymology of these two words, it appears that fixed times, such as Holydays and Festivals, were appointed by God, in order that His people might be convoked and meet together for united prayer and praise in fixed places. This is important to be observed, especially in connexion with the doctrine of the Sabbath, which is put first among these fixed days, and is called a holy convocation (v. 3), and is therefore shown to be in its original institution, not merely a day of rest, but of worship. The appointment of the holy convocation did not imply that all were obliged to attend at the Tabernacle on that Day, but that they were to meet for worship in stated places; whence afterwards synagogues arose in all parts of Palestine.

As to the bearing of this principle on Christian Festivals and Holy days, see S. Augustine, de Civ. Dei x. 3. Hooker, V. lxx. Bp. Andrewes, iv. 400.

It has been alleged by some (Huyfeld and Knobel) that these two verses (v. 2, 3) are recent interpolations, on account of the repetition of the words, these are feasts of the Lord, in v. 4, and also because holy meetings are not prescribed for the Sabbath in Num. xxviii. and xxix. Neither of these allegations are of any weight: the first is refuted by the frequency of such repetitions, and the second by the evident intention of the author of Num. xxviii. xxix. to give only a supplementary recapitulation of the Levitical Code.

3. sabbath of rest] See Exod. xx. 8—10.

— no work] This was the Law of the Sabbath, and of the Day of Atonement (v. 23. 30), that no work should be done therein. On the other feasts, such work as was not servile work might be done (see v. 7, 8. 21. 25. 35, 36). They might dress their food on those other holy days; but not on the Sabbath, and Day of Atonement (cp. Exod. xii. 16; xvi. 23. Lev. xvi. 29). Hence appears the special dignity of the Sabbath.

— in all your dwellings] in all places; but the other holy days were to be kept "before the sanctuary." The Sabbath was to be kept every where. Here was a providential dispensation for the future propagation of the Gospel. For, by the dispersion of the Jews, and by the erection of Synagogues, in all countries where they dwelt, and by the observance of the Sabbath as a moëd and mikra, that is, as a fixed day of holy convocation, recurring weekly, in the Synagogues throughout the world, and by the reading of the books of the Law and the Prophets in those Synagogues on every Sabbath Day (Acts xiii. 15. 27; xv. 21), it came to pass that the Apostles and first Missionaries of the Gospel found places of religious assembly made ready for them in all parts of the world. Wherever they went, they found Synagogues, in which they might address the assembled congregation on the weekly Sabbath, and in which they might prove from the Scriptures publicly read in those Synagogues that "Jesus is the Christ." See below, Introduction to the Acts of the Apostles, p. 8.

4. which ye shall proclaim] The Hebrew word here used is from the same word, kara, as that from which the word mikra, a convocation, is derived: see v. 2. The original sentence is well rendered by the Sept., κλητά ἑορτά ἐς καλέσετε.

5. In the fourteenth day of the first month] Abib. See Exod. xii. 2.

— at even] between the two evenings: see Exod. xii. 6. The Sept. here has ἀναμέσον τῶν ἑσπερινῶν. In Exod. xii. 6, it has πρὸς ἑσπέραν, which would seem to show that these two portions of the Pentateuch in that Version were not translated by the same hand.

— the LORD's passover] The Passover to the Lord. See Exod. xii. 27.

6. unleavened bread] See Exod. xii. 15. 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.

7. no servile work] Literally, no work of service; no laborious work, such as ploughing and sowing (see Exod. xii. 16).

LORD seven days : in the seventh day is an holy convocation : ye shall do no servile work therein.

⁹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁰ Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ⁶ When ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof, then ye shall bring a \parallel † sheaf of ^b the firstfruits of your harvest unto the priest : ¹¹ And he shall ¹ wave the sheaf before the LORD, to be accepted for you : on the morrow after the sabbath the priest shall wave it. ¹² And ye shall offer that day when ye wave the sheaf an he lamb without blemish of the first year for a burnt offering unto the LORD.

¹³ And the meat offering thereof shall be two tenth deals of fine flour mingled with oil, an offering made by fire unto the LORD for a sweet savour : and the drink offering thereof shall be of wine, the fourth part of an hin. ¹⁴ And ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears, until the selfsame day that ye have brought an offering unto your God : it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

¹⁵ And ¹ ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering ; seven sabbaths shall be complete : ¹⁶ Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye

g Ex. 23. 16, 19.
& 34. 22, 23.
Num. 15. 2, 18.
& 28. 26.
Deut. 16. 9.
Josh. 3. 15.
|| Or, handful.
† Heb. omer.
h Rom. 11. 16.
i Cor. 15. 20.
James 1. 18.
Heb. 14. 4.
j Ex. 29. 21.
k ch. 2. 11, 15, 16.

l Ex. 34. 22.
ch. 25. 8.
Deut. 16. 9.

No servile work was to be done on the first and the seventh day of the Passover; the first and the eighth of the Feast of Tabernacles; and on the Feast of Weeks or Pentecost; but only such work as is requisite for the preparation of food. Cp. Exod. xii. 16 (see Maimonides, in yom tob, or “good day,” chap. i. 1, and the 18th Treatise of the Mishna, with that title, the seventh of the book entitled “Seder Moëd”). Not merely no servile work, but no work at all might be done on the weekly Sabbath, nor on the Great Day of Atonement.

¹⁰. and shall reap the harvest] the barley harvest. Cp. Ruth i. 22, where it is said that Ruth came to Bethlehem in the beginning of barley harvest, which the Chaldee paraphrase explains by “the beginning of the Passover.” Cp. Exod. ix. 31, 32; and so Josephus, iii. 10. 4. Cp. Robinson, Palestine ii. 504; and Bachmann, die Festgesetze des Pentat., 1858, on these festivals generally.

— the harvest] the barley harvest, which began about the middle of April. Robinson, Pal. ii. 263. 278. Cp. below on Ruth i. 22; ii. 23.

¹¹. he shall wave the sheaf—on the morrow after the sabbath] That is, on the morrow (not of the seventh-day Sabbath, but) of the 15th of Abib, which was called the Sabbath of the Passover. Cp. vv. 32. 39; and Num. xxviii. 17; and see Josh. v. 11, and Targum of Jonathan here; and Onkelos; and Light-foot, Hebr.; and Talm. Ex. on Matt. xii.

The first day of the Passover and the seventh day were Sabbaths. Cp. vv. 7, 8.

The waving of the sheaf on the 16th of Abib was a public act of recognition that the Harvest was the Lord’s gift; and it was a consecration of it to Him by the presentation of the Firstfruits to Him in His house; and it was the pledge and earnest of the Harvest, which was begun with this act of religious elevation and consecration to God : see Exod. xxix. 27. Lev. xiv. 21.

The act of waving was an act of elevation, but it was an act of extension also. The waving of the one sheaf was a dedication of the whole harvest.

Previously to this evening, the Harvest was unholy, and it could not be gathered by the People of God; but by this solemn act of waving, it was hallowed, and the work of ingathering was commenced.

The Wave-sheaf of the Passover, which was lifted up and waved by the Priest before the Lord, was a type of JESUS CHRIST, our Great High Priest and Head, who lifted up Himself from the dead (see 1 Cor. xv. 20; and on Matt. xxviii. 1), and who, in lifting up Himself before God, lifted up us also, and consecrated the whole Harvest. “Christ is risen from the dead,” says St. Paul, “and is become the Firstfruits of them that slept” (1 Cor. xv. 20. 23). He is the Wave-sheaf of the Harvest. His Resurrection was the pledge and earnest of the great and glorious Harvest of the Resurrection of all the faithful, whose bodies “are sown in dishonour, but will be raised in glory; and who are sown in weakness, but will be raised in power” (1 Cor. xv. 42—44). Their “life is hid with Christ in God” (Col. iii. 3); and “if the firstfruits are holy, the lump also is holy” (Rom. xi. 16); and “as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive” (1 Cor. xv. 22. 45). Behold here (says an ancient Father) a figure of the incorruptible firstfruits of our nature, regenerate and renewed in Christ, who was the “firstborn from the dead,” and His Resurrection was the seal and earnest of ours. He is the Sheaf waved as a holy oblation to God the Father; raised even to heaven itself, to be a pledge of our Ascension thither : see S. Cyril, de Ador. xvii. p. 611. Christ’s body, raised from the grave, was the Sheaf, the firstfruits of us, who are the Spiritual Harvest; and He, our Great High Priest, has waved it before the Lord. He raised Himself by His own divine power (Iesychius, p. 153. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, ii. 213. 329. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. v. p. 259).

¹². an he lamb without blemish] as a Burnt-offering, was to be brought with the Wave-sheaf; and thus Christ’s Death was pre-figured together with His Resurrection. If the Lamb of God were not slain for our sin, there could be no hope of our rising to glory (see Rom. iv. 24, 25). It is “the Lamb that had been slain” who is revealed in the Apocalypse as the Author of Redemption and Glory (Rev. v. 6, 9, 10).

Christ is the firstfruits of the harvest; and He is also the firstling of the flock; “in all things He has the pre-eminence” (Col. i. 18). He is “the firstborn of every creature;” “the firstborn among many brethren;” and “the firstborn from the dead” (Rom. viii. 29. Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5).

¹³. two tenth deals of fine flour, mingled with oil] two tenths of an Ephah, and equal therefore to two omers. This was twice as much as was ordinarily offered with a lamb (cp. Exod. xxix. 40. Num. xv. 2—5; xxviii. 9), and was peculiar to this lamb which accompanied the wave-sheaf, and betokened the abundance of grace and gladness, symbolized by the oil, procured by Christ’s Resurrection.

This Meat-offering of flour, and Drink-offering of wine, together with the Lamb, symbolized the sacramental representation of Christ, the Lamb of God, in the elements of Bread and Wine in the Holy Eucharist, wherein we have a pledge of a glorious Resurrection and of eternal life through Him (John vi. 54); and which commemorative sacrifice is specially celebrated on the Lord’s Day, the day of His Resurrection. Cp. Iesychius here.

— an hin] equal to twelve logs. Cp. Exod. xxix. 40; xxx. 24.
¹⁴. ye shall eat neither bread] Ye have no right to the fruits of the earth, till ye have made an offering to the Great Giver of all (xxv. 23). Ye have no hope of a glorious Resurrection, except through the Death of the Lamb, and by the waving of the true Wave-sheaf by Him who is our Great High Priest, and who alone makes you and your offerings to be acceptable as a pure minchah to God, by the oil of His grace, and the sweet incense of His prayers,—by the fine flour of His perfect obedience, and by the outpouring of His precious blood: see above, on Lev. ii. 1—16; and S. Cyril, de Ador. pp. 611, 612.

¹⁵. from the morrow after the sabbath] that is, from the 16th day of the month Abib.

— seven sabbaths] or rather, seven weeks, as the Sept. trans-number ^m fifty days; and ye shall offer ⁿ a new meat offering unto the LORD. ^m Acts 2. 1.

ⁿ Num. 28. 26

¹⁷ Ye shall bring out of your habitations two wave loaves of two tenth deals: they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baked with leaven; they are ^o the firstfruits unto the LORD. ^o Ex. 23. 16, 19. & 22. 29. & 34. 22, 26. Num. 15. 17—21. & 28. 26. Deut. 26. 1, 2.

¹⁸ And ye shall offer with the bread seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock, and two rams: they shall be for a burnt offering unto the LORD, with their meat offering, and their drink offerings, even an offering made by fire, of sweet savour unto the LORD. ¹⁹ Then ye shall sacrifice ^p one kid of the goats for a sin offering, and two lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of ^q peace offerings. ^p ch. 4. 23, 25. Num. 28. 30. ^q ch. 3. 1.

²⁰ And the priest shall wave them with the bread of the firstfruits for a wave offering before the LORD, with the two lambs: ^r they shall be holy to the LORD for the priest. ^r Num. 18. 12. Deut. 18. 4.

²¹ And ye shall proclaim on the selfsame day, that it may be an holy convocation unto you: ye shall do no servile work therein: it shall be a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations.

lates these words: cp. Deut. xvi. 9; whence the Feast at their close was called the Feast of Weeks (Exod. xxxiv. 22. Num. xxviii. 26). And in v. 16 sabbath ought to be week.

^{16. fifty days}] whence the Greek name Pentecost (whence German Pfingsten, and probably English Whitsun), Acts ii. 1, where see the notes with regard to the purport of this feast; and cp. Joseph., iii. 10. 6; and Winer, R. W. B. ii. 242. Jahn, Archæol. § 354; and the treatise in the Mishna, called Chagigah.

The days are to be counted from the sabbath of the evening of the wave-sheaf, in order to show the connexion between Christ's Death and Resurrection, and the Gift of the Holy Ghost. The coming of the Third Person of the Ever-Blessed Trinity was the Consummation of the Incarnation, the Passion, and the Resurrection of the Second Person of the Ever-Blessed Trinity.

^{17. two wave loaves}] At the Passover it was a sheaf of barley—the first ripe corn—that was waved; but now, at Pentecost, two loaves of fine flour of wheat—not unleavened bread, but such as was commonly eaten—their “daily bread.” Here was a figure of the work of the Holy Spirit carrying on, and perfecting, the work of Christ. Perhaps the two loaves represent the sanctification of both the Jew and the Gentile to God, by the outpouring of the Spirit “on all flesh” (Acts ii. 17. S. Cyril, de Ador. p. 613). Cp. Hesych., p. 154, who compares them to the two Dispensations, the Law and the Gospel.

The whole family of Mankind was then to be prepared by Apostolic hands to be what the holy Martyr, S. Ignatius, calls himself, “bread of God” (S. Ignat. ad Rom. § 4). This feast ushered in the wheat harvest; and it coincided in time with the delivery of the Law on Mount Sinai: see above, on Exod. xix. 11; and below, on Acts ii. 1; and it prefigured the gift of the Holy Ghost at this time, when the Law was written by the Spirit on the heart of the Christian Church (Rom. viii. 2); and the Apostles and other Preachers of the Gospel were enabled to go forth and reap that which the Prophets had sown, and to gather the Lord's harvest into His heavenly garner (John iv. 35—38).

It has been alleged by some that Maimonides, in the 13th century, was the first to connect the Feast of Pentecost with the delivery of the Law on Mount Sinai. That connexion had been observed nearly a thousand years before by S. Jerome.

This feast was not, like the feast of the Passover and of Tabernacles, extended to several days, but concentrated in one. The restriction of the ceremonial within the limits of one day secured a more general concourse at one time “in one place;” and it is specially noted of the Disciples, “when the Day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place” (Acts ii. 1). Perhaps the fruit of the Spirit joining all together in one, may have been thus presignified.

— with leaven] Cp. vii. 13.

The offering of the two loaves—such as were eaten as daily bread (not unleavened bread), and have symbolized the grateful offering of all their food to God, and the sanctification of all by Him. Perhaps, also, it prefigured the work of the Holy Spirit in the Church, putting “the leaven into three measures of meal until the whole is leavened” (Matt. xiii. 33. Luke xiii. 21).

These loaves were to be baked with leaven, not the leaven of sin, but that leaven of the Gospel, to which our Lord compares the Kingdom of God (S. Cyril, p. 614). After the Coming of the Holy Ghost, at the Feast of Weeks or Pentecost, the Woman in the Parable of the Gospel—namely, the Church of Christ—was gifted with new powers of diffusing the Word of God. She put the leaven of the Gospel into the two loaves, the Gentile as well as the Jewish world, and offered them “as firstfruits to God.”

— firstfruits unto the LORD] So the Saints in the Apocalypse are said to be “redeemed from among men, being the firstfruits unto God, and to the Lamb” (Rev. xiv. 4).

^{18. seven lambs}] A perfect and sacred number representing the lambs of Christ's flock, offered to God since the day of Pentecost, and sanctified with the sevenfold gifts of the Spirit. (Isa. xi. 2.) Hesychius. Such an offering is made in the administration of Baptism, and of the Apostolic rite of Confirmation; which have ever been connected by the Church with the Festival of Pentecost.

— one young bullock] Not only our tender age is to be offered to God (as figured by the seven lambs), but also our health and strength.

— two rams] Figures of complete growth and mature age. These offerings together display the Church of Christ consecrating every age to God. S. Cyril, de Ador. pp. 614, 615.

With the addition of the sacrifices mentioned in Num. xxviii. 26—30, there are (as the Hebrew Expositors observe) besides, the morning and evening sacrifices, three bullocks, three rams, and fourteen lambs for a burnt-offering; and two goats for a sin-offering; and two lambs for a peace-offering, and the meat-offering of the two loaves (Maimon. in Tamidin, i. e., the Daily Sacrifices, viii. 1). And this concentration of all these various sacrifices in one day, seems to have symbolized the consummation of all the benefits of Christ's sacrifice by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, whom He sent to abide with His Church for ever, after He Himself had suffered, arisen, and ascended into heaven, as the appointed fruit and witness of His own glorification, and the consecration and sanctification of the whole human race offered to God through Him.

— for a burnt offering] Here is a burnt-offering; in v. 16 is a meat-offering; in v. 19, a sin-offering and a peace-offering; in v. 20, a wave-offering, all of them figures of Christ's sufferings and sacrifice, in different respects (see i. 1); and these ordinances declared, that, after the Day of Pentecost, the Church is to be conformed to Him in the likeness of His sufferings (Col. i. 24; Phil. iii. 10; 1 Pet. iv. 13); and if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him (2 Tim. ii. 11, 12). Cp. S. Cyril, pp. 615, 616.

^{19. for a sin offering}] See iv. 1—35.

— peace offerings] or thank-offerings (iii. 1—7). This peace-offering of the Day of Pentecost was the only one appointed for the whole congregation (Maimonides). With much fitness might the whole Church of God thank Him on the festival which pre-announced the gift of the Holy Spirit to dwell in the Church Universal for ever (see John xiv. 16). Perhaps the Editor of this volume may be allowed to refer to his sermon on “The Holy Ghost the Teacher of the Church,” in further explanation of his meaning, Occasional Sermons, No. xx.

^{21. an holy convocation}] Whence this feast was called Asartha: see v. 36.

s ch. 19. 9.

t Deut. 24. 19.

u Num. 29. 1.

x ch. 25. 9.

y ch. 16. 30.
Num. 29. 7.

z Gen. 17. 14.

a ch. 20. 3, 5, 6.

† Heb. rest.

h Ex. 23. 16.
Num. 29. 12.
Deut. 16. 13.
Ezra 3. 4.
Neh. 8. 14.

22 And ^s when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not make clean riddance of the corners of thy field when thou reapest, ^t neither shalt thou gather any gleanings of thy harvest: thou shalt leave them unto the poor, and to the stranger: I am the LORD your God.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 24 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, In the "seventh month, in the first day of the month, shall ye have a sabbath, ^x a memorial of blowing of trumpets, an holy convocation.

25 Ye shall do no servile work therein: but ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 27 ^y Also on the tenth day of this seventh month there shall be a day of atonement: it shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall afflict your souls, and offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD. 28 And ye shall do no work in that same day: for it is a day of atonement, to make an atonement for you before the LORD your God. 29 For whatsoever soul it be that shall not be afflicted in that same day, ^z he shall be cut off from among his people. 30 And whatsoever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day, ^a the same soul will I destroy from among his people. 31 Ye shall do no manner of work: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings. 32 It shall be unto you a sabbath of rest, and ye shall afflict your souls: in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even, shall ye [†] celebrate your sabbath.

33 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 34 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^b The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles for seven days unto the LORD. 35 On the first day shall be an holy Zech. 14. 16. John 7. 2.

22. not make clean riddance] This precept is repeated here (cp. xix. 9), because the Feast of Weeks, or Pentecost, introduced the Wheat Harvest, and because mercy and love to the poor were a fit accompaniment to the Feast which prefigured the coming of the Spirit of Love.

24. In the seventh month] Tisri; called also Ethanim (1 Kings viii. 2), which was originally the first of the year, and continued to be the first of the civil year. See on Exod. xii. 2, and the treatise in the Mishna, entitled Rosh-hashanah, or New Year, where it is said that there "are four beginnings of the year; on the first of Nisan, for computation of the reign of kings, and for festivals; the first of Elu, for tithes of cattle, as some say; the first of Tisri is New Year's Day for the civil year, and for the computation of Sabbatical years, and of the jubilee; and the first of Sebat (as some say) for trees" (cp. Lev. xix. 23; and Allen's Modern Judaism, ch. xx. pp. 366—390).

The sacred character of the number seven is shown in the fact, that the seventh month, as well as the seventh day, and the seventh year, and the seven times seventh year, are all distinguished by special ceremonials. See Bähr, Symbolik ii. 530. 537. 540. 562. 577. 581. 606.

— the first day] or new moon.

— a sabbath] a festival. See on v. 10.

— of blowing of trumpets] Teruah, a loud sound, from rua, to make a loud noise (Ezra iii. 11. Gesen. 762), to sound an alarm, and this was with trumpets (so Sept. here and Fulg.; cp. Num. x. 5), at the New Moon (Num. x. 10; Ps. lxxxii. 3). The trumpet, Heb. shophar, blown at this solemnity (see Num. xxix. 1), was a trumpet of a curved shape, cornu (lituus, cornet), either made of horn, or resembling a horn (S. Jerome on Hos. v. 8, where it is rendered cornet in our version), and is rendered κεπαρίων by Sept. (see Gesen., 811. 846). This was the trumpet used at the Jubilee (xxv. 9), and which was used at the siege of Jericho (Josh. vi. 4), and by Gideon (Judg. vii. 8). It is to be distinguished from the silver trumpets in Num. x. 2.

The blowing of trumpets on the New Year's Day was a prelude of the sound of the Gospel calling all men to repentance and newness of life (cp. Isa. lviii. 1; Hos. viii. 1; Joel ii. 1. 15—17), and of the voice of the Archangel and trump of God, which will sound on the New Year's Day of Eternity, and awaken all men from their graves (cp. Zech. ix. 14).

Concerning the sacrifices of this New Year's Day, see Num.

xxix. 1—6, and the treatise Rosh-hashanah in the Mishna, Tract viii. of the second book, or Seder Moëd.

When we hear of this blowing of Trumpets, let us remember the sound of the Trumpet at the delivery of the Law (Exod. xix. 16. 19; xx. 18, where the word is shophar), and the terrors of that delivery, and let us think of the last trump which will summon us to judgment (cp. S. Cyril, p. 617).

The shophar was used especially for the sounding of alarm; sometimes by persons raised up by God's Spirit, like the Judges, to awaken the people from their slumber. See Judg. iii. 27; vi. 34; vii. 8. Cp. 2 Sam. ii. 28; vi. 15; xv. 10; xviii. 16; xx. 1; 1 Kings i. 34; Job xxxix. 24; Isa. lviii. 1; Jer. iv. 5; vi. 1; li. 27; Ezek. xxxiii. 3; Amos iii. 6; Zeph. i. 16; in all which places the word shophar is used.

27. a day of atonement] See above, xvi. 1—34.

— afflict your souls] by self-examination, confession of sin, fasting, and prayer; see xvi. 29, and S. Barnabas, Epist. § 7, on the necessity of due preparation on man's part by sincere contrition and self-mortification for the profitable application of the Blood of Atonement: "Whatever soul shall not be afflicted on that same day shall be cut off" (v. 29); and for the trial of the Great Day, pre-announced by the sound of the Trumpets, see v. 24.

34. the feast of tabernacles] Succah, from the root sacac, to weave, to protect, to cover (Gesen. 586), is not to be confounded with ohel, a tent. The word succah is one of general import, and signifies any dwelling (tectum). It is applied to booths made with boughs, branches, and leaves of trees, and also to tents made with curtains, as temporary booths for cattle (Gen. xxxiii. 17; Lev. xxiii. 42; 2 Sam. xi. 11); to the tabernacle of God (Ps. xviii. 11; 2 Sam. xxii. 12); and to pavilions of kings (1 Kings xx. 12. 16).

The word succoth being thus one of wide signification, was fitly adapted to describe the dwellings of the Israelites in the wilderness (see v. 42, 43), which were of different kinds, some being booths of branches and bushes (as is customary with the Bedouins in the Sinaitic peninsula, Burckhardt, p. 588), others being tents of goats' hair and of other materials (cp. McCaul on Colenso, p. 46). The word included the leafy arbour of the poorest Israelite as well as the more sumptuous tent of his richer brethren. God tabernacled in Israel, and spread the wings of His fatherly protection over the poor as well as the rich; Christ took our nature in the womb of a poor maiden at Nazareth: and "to the poor the Gospel is preached" (Matt. xi. 5) in the Church of God.

convocation : ye shall do no servile work therein. ³⁶ Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD : ° on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you ; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD : it is a †^d solemn assembly ; and ye shall do no servile work therein.

e Num. 29. 35.
Neh. 8. 18.
John 7. 37.

³⁷ ° These are the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, a burnt offering, and a meat offering, a sacrifice, and drink offerings, every thing upon his day :

† Heb. day of restraint.
d Deut. 16. 8.
2 Chron. 7. 9.
Neh. 8. 18.
Joel 1. 14. & 2. 15
e ver. 2, 4.

³⁸ † Beside the sabbaths of the LORD, and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your freewill offerings, which ye give unto the LORD.

f Num. 29. 39.

³⁹ Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have ° gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days : on the first day shall be a sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a sabbath.

g Ex. 23. 16.
Deut. 16. 13.

⁴⁰ And ^h ye shall take you on the first day the † boughs of goodly trees, h Neh. 8. 15.

† Heb. fruit.

Besides, it would have been difficult and useless for all the Israelitish families in cities to provide themselves with tents at this festival, in order to commemorate the wanderings of their forefathers, but every one could make an arbour of boughs, as the Jews now do (Buxtorf, Synag. Jud. c. xxi. ; Allen's Judaism, p. 413).

The Feast of Succoth, or Tabernacles (in Greek, σκηνοπηγία, Deut. xvi. 13, Sept. Version ; John vii. 2), was also denominated the feast, the great feast, by the later Jews (as Josephus, Antiq. viii. 4. 1 ; xi. 5. 5), and by the Talmudists.

For a description of its ceremonial the reader may consult the Mishna, Succah, Tract vi. in the Seder Mo'ed. Lightfoot, Temple Service, ch. xvi., Works, vol. i. p. 974 ; cp. Winer, ii. 6—9. Jahn, Archæol. § 355, and the notes below on John vii. 2. 37.

The Temple at Jerusalem, which was a figure of Christ's body (John ii. 19. 21), succeeded to the itinerant Tabernacle of the wilderness as the dwelling-place of God ; and it is worthy of remark, that it was dedicated by Solomon with great solemnity at the Feast of Tabernacles ; and the Ark, which was God's throne, was then brought into it (2 Chron. v. 2—7).

This Festival of Tabernacles was in a remarkable manner typical of the Incarnation of Him who was with the ancient Church in the Shechinah, in the Tabernacle in the wilderness of Sinai (see 1 Cor. x. 9), and who, in the fulness of time, pitched His Tabernacle (ἐσκήνωσεν) in our Nature (see John i. 14), and who, in the days of His earthly ministry, was met by the crowd at Jerusalem, bearing the palm-branches of that festival (John xii. 13 : see Lev. xxiii. 40), and was saluted with the Hosannas used at the Feast of Tabernacles (see on Matt. xxi. 8, 9 ; John xii. 12, 13), and who, in His triumphal entrance to the gate of Jerusalem and the Temple, then fulfilled the prophecy of the 118th Psalm, which was sung at that great festival, "Open me the gates of righteousness. This is the gate of the Lord ; the righteous shall enter into it. The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner. This is the day which the Lord hath made" (the Lord's Day, Palm Sunday), "let us rejoice and be glad in it. HOSANNA, JEHOVAH, Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of JEHOVAH. God is Jehovah, which hath shewed us light : bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar" (Ps. cxviii. 19—27, the last Psalm sung at the Feast of Tabernacles : see Mishna, tract Succah, cap. 3). And then it was that our Blessed Lord explained the spiritual meaning of the pouring out of the water from Siloam on the altar, which was done at that Festival (see ibid. and on John vii. 37), and thus He has taught us to connect that Festival with His own Incarnation, and with the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, consequent on His Coming into the world (see below on John vii. 2, and the note at the end of that chapter, and on Rev. vii. 13—17).

The gradual diminution of the sacrifices to be offered on the successive days of this Festival may be hence explained (see Num. xxix. 17).

S. Cyril seems to confirm this explanation, when he dilates on the Feast of Tabernacles, with its beautiful trees and fair fruits, and joyful Hosannas, and the drawing of water from the river, as representing the restoration of man's Paradiisaical state, which Adam lost, by the Incarnation of Christ (see S. Cyril, de Ador. xvii. pp. 619—629).

S. Augustine regards this Feast of Tabernacles as a figure of the rest and unity of the Christian Church (c. Faust. vi. 9). S. Methodius treats it as representing the restoration of human Nature at the Resurrection (de Resur., p. 300) ; and the Jews, and some early Christian Fathers, regarded it as a type of the peace and blessedness of the Millennial state (see S. Jerome in Isa. liv., and see his commentary on Zecl. xii. and xiv.). All these interpretations have some elements in common ; and they confirm the belief that the spiritual meaning of the great Festival of Tabernacles, the consummation of the sacred year of the Hebrews, commemorating their sojourn in the wilderness, the type of the earthly pilgrimage of the Church, and celebrating the ingathering of all the fruits of the earth, and presignifying the dwelling of God the Son tabernacling in our Nature, will be fully revealed and understood at the final consummation of all things, when all the harvest of the world will be gathered in, and when the faithful will stand before the throne of Him who deigned to tabernacle in our flesh, with palm-branches in their hands (Rev. vii. 9), and sing everlasting hallelujahs before Him ; and when the Lord God Himself will tabernacle for ever upon them and with them (σκηνώσει ἐν' αὐτοῖς : see below, note on Rev. vii. 13—17, and σκηνώσει μετ' αὐτῶν, see Rev. xxi. 3).

Therefore perhaps it is, that the Holy Spirit, speaking by the Prophet Zechariah, declares, that all true Israelites "shall keep the Feast of Tabernacles" (Zecl. xiv. 16—19).

³⁶ the eighth day] The Day of Resurrection, Beatitude, and Glory (see on Matt. v. 2 ; xxvii. 52. Luke xxiv. 1), when the Lord will tabernacle in His People for ever : see the foregoing note. A solemn assembly, Heb. atsereth (Gr. asartha), from root atsar, to shut in, by an enclosure (atrium), to assemble, to gather together ; and thus the idea is rather that of enclosing, than of shutting out, as some suppose, who think that the word means a restraint from worldly business (as Michaelis and Iken). See Gesen., p. 648. The word atsereth signifies assembly, Jer. ix. 2 ; and here the Chaldee Targum paraphrases the word thus, "Ye shall be gathered together." The opinion of Gesenius is also favoured by the translation of the word in the Sept., which renders it by παρήγορις (Amos v. 21). In the present text, and in five other places, the Sept. translates it by ἐξόδιον ; and it is supposed by some (as Keil) to designate properly the close or last day of the Feast.

Josephus calls the Feast of Pentecost asartha (iii. 10. 6), a word derived from the Hebrew atsereth (Mishna).

³⁹ Also—when ye have gathered] Surely—when ye gather.

⁴⁰ boughs of goodly trees] Literally, fruit of the tree of beauty, which the Hebrew expositors suppose to be the citron ; so Targum of Onkelos, and Jonathan, and Maimonides in Shophar and Succah ; and the Syriac and Arabic Versions favour that interpretation. Others suppose them to be the branches of olives and myrtles, mentioned in Neh. viii. 15.

Accordingly, we find that in the days of Josephus it was the custom to carry citrons or oranges in the hand at this Festival, as well as boughs of trees tied together : see Josephus, Antiquities iii. 10. 4 ; and the treatise Succah, in the Mishna, c. 3. Lightfoot, Temple Service, ch. xv. p. 976 ; and this is still the custom among the Jews. Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. xxi. p. 459. Allen, Modern Judaism, p. 414.

The word peri, fruit, is of a wide signification (connected with φῆρω, bear, fruges, fructus. Gesen. 687) ; and here it seems to signify generally produce of the trees ; and as the design of the Festival was to commemorate what protected the Israelites, and not what they ate, it can hardly be doubted that the words "fruit of goodly trees" are a general description of what is afterwards more specifically expressed by branches of branches of palm trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; ¹ and ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God seven days. ⁴¹ ^k And ye shall keep it a feast unto the LORD seven days in the year. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations: ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month. ⁴² ¹ Ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths: ⁴³ ^m That your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God. ⁴⁴ And Moses ⁿ declared unto the children of Israel the feasts of the LORD.

i Deut. 16. 14, 15.
k Num. 29. 12.
Neh. 8. 13.

i Neh. 8. 14, 15,
6.
n Deut. 31. 13.
Ps. 78. 5, 6.

n ver. 2.

a Ex. 27. 20, 21.

† Heb. to cause to ascend.

b Ex. 31. 8. & 39. 37.

c Ex. 25. 30.

d 1 Kings 7. 43.
2 Chron. 4. 19.
& 13. 11.
Heb. 9. 2.

e Num. 4. 7.
1 Chron. 9. 32.
2 Chron. 2. 4.

f 1 Sam. 21. 6.
Matt. 12. 4.
Mark 2. 26.
Luke 6. 4.
g Ex. 29. 33.
ch. 8. 31. & 21. 22.

XXIV. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² ^a Command the children of Israel, that they bring unto thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, † to cause the lamps to burn continually. ³ Without the veil of the testimony, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall Aaron order it from the evening unto the morning before the LORD continually: it shall be a statute for ever in your generations. ⁴ He shall order the lamps upon ^b the pure candlestick before the LORD continually.

⁵ And thou shalt take fine flour, and bake twelve ^c cakes thereof: two tenth deals shall be in one cake. ⁶ And thou shalt set them in two rows, six on a row, ^d upon the pure table before the LORD. ⁷ And thou shalt put pure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on the bread for a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD. ⁸ ^e Every sabbath he shall set it in order before the LORD continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant. ⁹ And ^f it shall be Aaron's and his sons'; ^g and they shall eat it in the holy place: for it is most holy unto him of the offerings of the LORD made by fire by a perpetual statute.

¹⁰ And the son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel: and this son of the Israelitish woman and a palm-trees, &c.; and that, therefore, the Authorized Version is correct. Cp. Keil, p. 142, who supposes the word fruit to mean the shoots and branches of the trees, as well as the flowers, blossom, and fruit upon them.

— branches of palm trees] Sept. φοινίκων, the same word as is used by St. John in his description of Our Lord's Triumphal Entry into Jerusalem (John xii. 13; see above, v. 34), and in the Apocalyptic vision of the saints in glory (Rev. vii. 9).

— boughs of thick trees] Literally, boughs of trees interwoven, —both, from abath, to weave. Cp. Greek ἄπλω (Gesen. 604).

— willows] The Hebrew ereb, from the root arab, which signifies to mingle, to twine, and also to be white; perhaps the tree is called from the whiteness of its colour (Gesen. 651).

In the Festival of Tabernacles, the Israelites not only dwell in booths made of branches of trees on the roofs of their houses, and in their courts (Neh. viii. 15—17), but also carried boughs in their hands, called lulabim (i. e., one of palm, two of willow, and one of myrtle: see the tract Succah, in the Mishna), in processions of joy, passing round the Altar in the Temple, and shouting Hosanna, whence the Festival was called the great Hosanna (Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. c. xxi.).

At this festival the water of Siloam was drawn in a golden vessel, and poured on the altar,—a type of the outpouring of the living water of the Spirit (cp. Succah, cap. 4, with John vii. 37). At this festival the Women's Court in the Temple was illuminated with lights, which diffused their splendour over the whole city (Mishna, Succah, cap. 5); and at about the time of this festival, Christ, the Seed of the Woman, called Himself "the Light of the World" (see on John viii. 12). And at this festival, in the sabbatical year, the Book of the Law was publicly read through by God's command in the ears of the people (Deut. xxxi. 11. Neh. viii. 18); and thus it was a divinely-instituted ordinance for the publication and preservation of the Pentateuch, and a preparation for the first Advent of Him who came to fulfil the Law (see v. 34); and also for His Second Advent, when there will be a great ingathering of the fruits of the earth from all parts of the world (Mark xiii. 27. Matt. xiii. 24—30. 34—39; xxiv. 31). That will be the Day of Universal Harvest; the Day of the World's Vintage (Rev. xiv. 14—19); and then the true Israelites will rejoice before Him, with palm-branches in their hands, and sing Hosannas to His Name.

CH. XXIV. The Preparation of the HOLY LAMPS and of the SHEWBREAD in the SANCTUARY.

2. pure oil olive beaten] See Exod. xxvii. 20.

— for the light] for the Light-holder. Heb. maor—i. e., the Golden Seven-branched Candlestick, or rather Lamp-stand (λυχνία), the figure of the Universal Church, illuminated by the Spirit of God: see on Exod. xxvii. 20, 21. Rev. i. 20; xi. 4.

— to cause the lamps to burn] Literally, to cause the lamp (Heb. ner) to ascend. The light of the Church is heavenward, not earthward.

5. twelve cakes] another figure of the Church Universal; the true Israel of God (Gal. vi. 16), in her Patriarchal and Apostolic fulness, presenting herself to God, and sanctified by Him.

These two expressive emblems of the Universal Church of God (the SEVEN-BRANCHED CANDLESTICK, or LAMP-STAND, and the TWELVE LOAVES of the SHEWBREAD—the one representing the Light which she dispenses, the other the Food which she ministers to the World in the Word of God and the Sacraments) are introduced appositely here, after the precepts for the sacred seasons in the foregoing chapter, which commemorated the blessings conferred by God on the Ancient Church in the wilderness, in her pilgrimage from Egypt to Canaan, the type of heaven, and which prefigured the far greater benefits communicated to the Church Universal, in those Mysteries of the Gospel which the Church preaches to all Nations, and whereby she prepares them for the rest and joys of Eternity. On these two emblems of the Church, see the notes above, at Exod. xxv. 30; xxvii. 20, 21; and Hesychius here, p. 159.

7. frankincense] the symbol of prayer; the necessary adjunct to the ministry of the Word and Sacraments, represented by the Light, and the Bread.

man of Israel strove together in the camp; ¹¹ And the Israelitish woman's son "blasphemed the name of the LORD, and ¹ cursed. And they ^k brought him unto Moses: (and his mother's name was Shelomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan :) ¹² And they ¹ put him in ward, †^m that the mind of the LORD might be shewed them. ¹³ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁴ Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp; and let all that heard him ⁿ lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation stone him. ¹⁵ And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Whosoever curseth his God ^o shall bear his sin. ¹⁶ And he that ^p blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death. ¹⁷ ^q And he that † killeth any man shall surely be put to death. ¹⁸ ^r And he that killeth a beast shall make it good; † beast for beast. ¹⁹ And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour; as ^s he hath done, so shall it be done to him; ²⁰ Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again. ²¹ ^t And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it: "and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death. ²² Ye shall have ^x one manner of law, as well for the stranger, as for one of your own country: for I am the LORD your God. ²³ And Moses spake to the children of Israel, ^y that they should bring forth him that had cursed out of the camp, and stone him with stones. And the children of Israel did as the LORD commanded Moses.

XXV. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses in mount Sinai, saying, ² Speak

h ver. 16.
i Job 1. 5, 11,
22. & 2. 5, 9, 10.
Isa. 8. 21.
k Ex. 18. 22, 27.
l Num. 15. 31.
† Heb. to expound unto them according to the mouth of the LORD.
m Ex. 18. 15, 17.
Num. 27. 5. & 36.
5, 6.
n Dent. 13. 9. &
17. 7.
o ch. 5. 1.
& 20. 17.
Num. 9. 13.
p 1 Kings 21. 10,
13.
Ps. 74. 10, 18.
Matt. 12. 31.
Mark 3. 28.
James 2. 7.
q Ex. 21. 12.
Num. 35. 31.
Dent. 19. 11, 12.
† Heb. smiteth the life of a man.
r ver. 21.
† Heb. life for life.
s Ex. 21. 24.
Dent. 19. 21.
Matt. 5. 38.
& 7. 2.
t ver. 18.
Ex. 21. 33.
u ver. 17.
x Ex. 12. 49.
ch. 19. 34.
Num. 15. 16.
y ver. 14.

11. blasphemed] The word here used for to blaspheme is nakab, which properly signifies to hollow out, to bore through (Gen. xxx. 28. 2 Kings xii. 9), to thrust through (Habak. iii. 14), whence to curse (Gesen. 564).

— the name of the LORD] The words "of the Lord" are not in the Hebrew here, or in v. 16; the original has only "THE NAME," the One Adorable Name; and accordingly the Septuagint here has the words τὸ ὄνομα. These words, thus used, supply a strong argument for the doctrine of the Godhead of CHRIST; for the writers of the New Testament adopt the words τὸ ὄνομα, "THE NAME," and apply them to Him (see on Phil. ii. 9. 3 John 7). Assuredly, they never would have done this if Christ were not God. Indeed, if Christ were not God, then they themselves would have incurred the punishment inflicted in the history before us. They would have been guilty of blasphemy, by giving to Him a title which belongs to Jehovah, and of robbing God of what is His due (see Matt. xxvi. 65. Mark ii. 7; xiv. 64. Luke v. 21).

The words "THE NAME" often occur in the writings of the Hebrew Doctors, instead of "JEHOVAH:" see Buxtorf, Lex. Talmud. p. 2432.

12. that the mind of the LORD might be shewed] A clear assertion of God's intercourse with Moses, and of His direct communication with him in all hard questions (cp. Exod. xviii. 19. Num. xxvii. 1—5). Here therefore is a proof that in the decrees of Moses is contained the judgment of God. And we find that the people of Israel were persuaded of the reality of this divine communication, for they acted upon it: v. 23.

14. Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp;—and let all the congregation stone him] Cp. v. 16. In execution of this Law, as the Jews deemed, the first Martyr, St. Stephen, was "cast out of the city and stoned" (Acts vi. 11—14; vii. 57—59); and if they had had their will, the Jews would have stoned Jesus Christ for blasphemy, as they attempted to do several times (John viii. 59; x. 31; xi. 8).

But it had been foreshadowed in the Passover that "not a bone of Him would be broken" (Exod. xii. 46. Cp. John xix. 36); and it had been foretold by Prophecy that the hands and the feet of the Messiah would be pierced (Ps. xxii. 16). These types and prophecies would have failed of their fulfilment, if He who was charged with blasphemy by the Jews, and condemned for blasphemy by their Sanhedrim, had died by the punishment of stoning which their Law imposed upon blasphemy; and therefore, both in the manner in which He did not die, as well as the manner in which He did die, we may recognize the overruling providence of God, showing that Jesus is the Christ.

— all the congregation] by their appointed representatives. Cp. Exod. iii. 16. Deut. i. 1.

16. he that blasphemeth] The Sept. has here "he who nameth the Name of the Lord;" and so in v. 11; and so Targum of Onkelos, and Syriac. "From this passage" (says Gesenius, p. 564) "arose the opinion of the Jews, that it is forbidden to pronounce the name of JEHOVAH," except in the Sanctuary, when the Priest blesses the people (Num. vi. 23—27). Maimonides on Prayer, xiv. 10. Cp. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 141; Keil, p. 146; and see note above, on Gen. ii. 4.

17. he that killeth any man] Literally, a man (ish) that smiteth the soul of a man (adam—man or woman) shall die the death—a remarkable precept coming after the putting to death of a man by the whole congregation, and showing that he was not killed by men, acting independently, but in obedience to the command of God.

Thus also with the fear of God we are taught to join the love of man (Procop. Gaz.).

Our Lord, when He has declared the duty of love to God and to man in God, intimates the connexion of these duties by declaring the two doctrines of His own Godhead and of His own Manhood: see Matt. xxii. 40—45; and St. Peter says, "Honour all men; love the brotherhood; fear God; honour the king" (1 Pet. ii. 17).

20. Breach for breach] See on Exod. xxi. 23, 24; xxii. 1—6.

CHAP. XXV.—ON THE SABBATICAL YEAR, AND JUBILEE.

Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xxvi. 2.

The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Jer. xxxii. 6—27, concerning the buying of Hanameel's field by Jeremiah in faith that the Jews would be restored to Jerusalem.

Here is a prophetic commentary on the law of Jubilee, and it points the attention of the devout reader to the time of the Evangelic Jubilee, when Israel will be restored to its inheritance in Christ.

1. in Mount Sinai] that is, in the region of Sinai, in the Tabernacle (Num. x. 11; see above, Lev. i. 1).

† Heb. rest.
a Ex. 23. 10.
See ch. 26, 34, 35.
2 Chron. 36. 21.

b 2 Kings 19. 29.

† Heb. of thy separation.

† Heb. loud of sound.
c ch. 23. 24, 27.

unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land which I give you, then shall the land † keep ^a a sabbath unto the LORD. ³ Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof; ⁴ But in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the LORD: thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard. ⁵ ^b That which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes † of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land. ⁶ And the sabbath of the land shall be meat for you; for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee, ⁷ And for thy cattle, and for the beast that are in thy land, shall all the increase thereof be meat.

⁸ And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years. ⁹ Then shalt thou cause the trumpet † of the jubilee to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, ^c in the day of atonement shall

4. a sabbath of rest] a figure of that "Sabbatism which remaineth to the people of God" (Heb. iv. 9). The Sabbatical year had the spiritual effect of weaning the affections of the people from this world (cp. 1 Cor. vii. 30); it made them trust in God (cp. Matt. vi. 31, 34), and exercised their charity and bounty to the poor (see Exod. xxiii. 11; and Theodoret, Qu. 35).

— thou shalt neither sow] an act of faith in God: they were to imitate the fowls of the air, who neither sow nor reap, nor gather into barns, but God feedeth them (Matt. vi. 26; Luke xii. 24).

5. its] This is the only place in our Version where its (not his) occurs; and here the original edition of 1611 has "it owne."

— the grapes of thy vine undressed] Literally, the grapes of thy nazir, or separation, that is, which are separated from thy use, and sanctified to God, who is the owner of all, for the free use of all (see Exod. xxiii. 11).

6. the sabbath—shall be meat for you] Although it may seem to be loss to thee in temporal and worldly respects, yet it will be meat to thee; meat for thy body; for there will be abundance in the sixth year (v. 21). In Palestine, especially in the plains of Esdraelon, and in the table-land of Galilee, large quantities of wheat and other grain are self-sown, and yield a considerable overflow of produce. And much more, it will be meat for thy soul. For thus thou wilt be reminded that the Earth is the Lord's, and that thou dost not live by means of thy own toil, but by His blessing; and that He can support thee without any labour on thy part; and thus thou wilt learn a lesson of faith and thankfulness, and of hope—of hope and yearning for the Sabbath of Eternity.

Here is a beautiful description of the true character of the Christian Sabbath. It is meat for the true Israelite. They who duly observe the religious rest of the Lord's Day, and do not "labour for the meat that perisheth;" they find refreshment and food in it for soul and body, and gain that "meat which endureth unto eternal life." See our Lord's words in John vi. 27. The Septuagint here has the words ἔσται τὰ σάββατα τῆς γῆς βρώματά σοι, and our Lord there uses the words βρώσις ἐργάσεθε μὴ τὴν βρώσιν τὴν ἀπολλυμένην, ἀλλὰ τὴν βρώσιν τὴν μένουσαν εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον.

On the Sabbatical year, see the Treatise Sabbath, in the Mishna, Tract v.; Jahn, Archæol. § 349; Bähr, Symbolik ii. 530, 569, 601; Winer, R. W. B. ii. 349; Keil, Archæol. § 79.

— for thee, and for thy servant] that is, for all alike; not for thyself alone. This communion of enjoyment of the fruits of the earth by all, in the Sabbatical year, was a figure of the communion of spiritual blessings "of the common faith" (Titus i. 4), and "common salvation" (Jude 3), freely bestowed upon all in the Gospel of Him who is the true Sabbath, and in whom there is no distinction of persons (Col. iii. 11); and of the free enjoyment of all things by all, in the Sabbath of Eternity.

7. And for thy cattle, and for the beast] Here was a perpetually-recurring miracle. The promise was, that the sixth year would bring forth the fruit of three years (v. 20—22). Either this came to pass, or it did not; if it did not, then the Book in which this perpetually-recurring miracle is promised would never have been received as of divine authority by the Hebrew nation; if it did, then He who spake by Moses is no other than the Ruler of the seasons, the Sovereign Lord of the universe.

The Pentateuch was received, and is received to this day by the Jews, as divinely inspired; this passage is read as such, year after year, in their Synagogues. Our Blessed Lord and His Apostles took part in that public reading of the Law in the synagogues; they acknowledged the Law to be, what the Hebrew Nation believe it to be, the Word of the Living God. Therefore, this promise did not fail of its effect: and here, therefore, is another proof that the Pentateuch is from God.

8. thou shalt number seven sabbaths] or, weeks. The Sabbatical year did not begin on the first day of Abib, or Nisan, but on the first day of Tisri—called New Year's Day (see Mishna, Rosh-hashanah, Book Seder Moëd, Tract viii., and above, on xxiii. 24. Keil, p. 148).

— forty and nine years] the forty-ninth year was a Sabbatical year, and so two sacred years came together. The fiftieth year (not as some have supposed, the forty-ninth) was the Jubilee (cp. Josephus, Ant. iii. 12. 3; Philo, de Septenario, p. 1178; and Jahn, Archæol. § 350; Gesenius, p. 340; Keil, Archæol. § 80).

As the seventh-day Sabbath of Rest, the day of Christ's blessed rest in the Grave, was followed by the Eighth Day, the Day of His glorious Resurrection (cp. above, on Lev. ix. 1); so the 7 × 7, or 49th year, the Sabbatical year, was followed by the year of Jubilee.

The union of the forty-ninth or Sabbatical year with the fiftieth or Jubilee, which followed it, is very expressive of what every true believer enjoys in Christ; namely, first, a Sabbath of rest, and next a jubilee of joy. Every believer in Christ has in Him a Sabbath of rest: for Christ says, "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. xi. 28), and they have in Christ a Sabbath of rest in the grave, for "blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, for they rest from their labours" (Rev. xiv. 13). And they will have in Christ a jubilee of joy in the Resurrection, when the trumpet of the Eternal Jubilee will sound and call them to liberty and glory, and to the possession of their heavenly inheritance.

This union of the seventh sabbatical year followed by the Jubilee, was fulfilled in Christ's human Body, which rested in the grave on the sabbath or seventh day, and rose from the dead on the following day; and by means of His Death and Resurrection, it will be fulfilled in His mystical Body, the Church.

9. Then shalt thou cause the trumpet—to sound] Literally, thou shalt make to pass the cornet. Shophar: see above, on xxiv. 24; and Gesenius. 811. 846. The trumpet will remind thee or the delivery of the Law on Sinai (Exod. xix. 13—19; xx. 18). It was also a prophetic preparation for the Lord's Coming in glory, and for future Resurrection and Judgment. (1 Thess. iv. 16. 1 Cor. xv. 52. Epiphanius, Hær. 51). As at Mount Sinai the people were summoned to the Mountain by the Yobel of the Shophar, to hear God's Law, which proclaimed His Covenant with them, and declared their duties; so at the end of every seventh sabbatical year, the Shophar was to sound the blast of Jubilee, in which God announced His gracious blessings to those who were in covenant with Him, and who obeyed His Law.

ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land. ¹⁰ And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and ^dproclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubile unto you; ^eand ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family. ¹¹ A jubile shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ^fye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed. ¹² For it is the jubile; it shall be holy unto you: ^gye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field. ¹³ ^hIn the year of this jubile ye shall return every man unto his possession. ¹⁴ And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ⁱye shall not oppress one another: ¹⁵ ^kAccording to the number of years after the jubile thou shalt buy of thy neighbour, and according unto the number of years of the fruits he shall sell unto thee: ¹⁶ According to the multitude of years thou shalt increase the price thereof, and according to the fewness of years thou shalt diminish the price of it: for according to the number of the years of the fruits doth he sell unto thee. ¹⁷ ^lYe shall not therefore oppress one another; ^mbut thou shalt fear thy God: for I am the LORD your God.

¹⁸ ⁿWherefore ye shall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; ^oand ye shall dwell in the land in safety. ¹⁹ And the land shall yield her fruit, and ^pye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety. ²⁰ And if ye shall say, ^qWhat shall we eat the seventh year? behold, ^rwe shall not sow, nor gather in our increase: ²¹ Then I will ^scommand my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years. ²² ^tAnd ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of ^uold fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits d lsa 61. 2. & 63. 4.

Jer. 34. 8, 15, 17.
Luke 4. 19.
e ver. 13.
Num. 36. 4.
f ver. 5.
g ver. 6, 7.
h ver. 10.
ch. 27. 24.
Num. 36. 4.
i ver. 17.
ch. 19. 13.
1 Sam. 12. 3, 4.
Mic. 2. 2.
1 Cor. 6. 8.
k ch. 27. 18, 23.
l ver. 14.
m ver. 43.
ch. 19. 14, 32.
n ch. 19. 37.
o ch. 26. 5.
Deut. 12. 10.
Ps. 4. 8.
Prov. 1. 33.
Jer. 23. 6.
p ch. 26. 5.
Ezek. 34. 25, 27, 28.
q Matt. 6. 25, 31.
r ver. 4, 5.
s See Ex. 16. 29.
Deut. 28. 8.
t 2 Kings 19. 29.
u Josh. 5. 11, 12.

— of the jubile] Heb. teruah, a loud sound. See above, xxiii. 24.

— of the seventh month] It was the seventh and also the first. See xxiii. 24.

— in the day of atonement] Though it was not on that day of the civil year, but on the tenth day, yet, as all blessings date from the Atonement which it typified, the trumpet was blown, and the release began on that day.

And though it was a strict Fast-day (the Good Friday of the Hebrew Church), yet “on that day (says God) ye shall make the trumpet to sound throughout the land;” because by the atoning sacrifice which was prefigured on that great day of Expiation, Liberty to the captives—the captives of Satan—was procured “to all the land,” even to the whole world.

10. proclaim liberty] The word used by the Septuagint here is ἀφεσις, and the year of liberty is called ἔνιαυτος ἀφέσεως, and this word ἀφεσις is adopted by our Lord in the Gospel (Luke iv. 18), where He proclaims the fulfilment of the type in the Evangelic Antitype, and announces the acceptable year of the Lord, and thus teaches us the spiritual sense of the words ἔνιαυτος ἀφέσεως, used by Sept.

— it shall be a jubile] Heb. Yobel: probably so called from the sound; Gesenius, who compares yabal, ἀλλορίζω, ἀλαλάζω, ἰάλεμος, See above, Gen. iv. 21; and Keil, p. 151. Cp. Pfeiffer, Dubia, pp. 142. 340. But it may be also connected with the root yabal, to flow (Keil). Cp. above on Gen. iv. 20, 21.

On the ceremonial of the year of Jubilee, see Joseph., Ant. iii. 12. 3. Philo, ii. 391. Bähr, Symbolik ii. 572, and p. 603. Jahn, Archæol. § 350. Winer, R. W. B. i. 623. Keil, Archæol. § 80. Clark, in Dr. Smith's Dict. of the Bible, i. 1149.

— ye shall return every man unto his possession—every man unto his family] Cp. v. 13. Even so Mankind was restored in Christ to its possession and family, even to its heavenly possession, and to the household of God. Cp. Isa. xxvii. 13; lxi. 2; lxiii. 4, with Luke iv. 18—22. John iv. 34—36. Eph. i. 14. 1 Pet. i. 4.

The Septuagint has εἰς τὴν πατριὰν αὐτοῦ, and this word is adopted by St. Paul, who says that of Him (the Father) the whole family, or rather every family (πᾶσα πατριὰ), in heaven and earth is named in Christ (see Eph. iii. 15).

There were four things characteristic of the year of Jubilee.

(1) The sounding of the Trumpet on the Day of Atonement (v. 9).

(2) The emancipation of slaves.

(3) The restoration of lands.

(4) The rest from tillage of the earth, and the communion of its fruits equally enjoyed by all.

These things are now fulfilled in part by Christ in the Gospel, and will be wholly consummated in the Eternal Sabbath of that heavenly rest which remaineth to the People of God, when there will be a “restitution of all things:” see Acts iii. 21. See S. Hilar., in Ps. 118, Lit. v. tom. ii. p. 495; and Hesychius, in Levit. p. 163.

There was also a release of debts at the end of the Sabbatical year (Maimon., in Jobel x. 10), which coincided with the beginning of the Jubilee.

11. A jubile shall that fiftieth year be unto you] The fiftieth year was the Jubilee. So the fiftieth day, or Pentecost, was a Jubilee to the Christian Church. It was counted from the morrow of the Sabbath of the wave-sheaf, the type of Christ's Resurrection (see xxiii. 11); it coincided with the time in which the trumpet sounded from Mount Sinai, when the Law was given (see on Acts ii. 1); and it brought with it a proclamation of freedom in the Gospel to all the World: see Bp. Andrewes, iii. 299.

— the grapes—of thy vine undressed] Literally, the grapes of thy separation; the grapes separated from thy use, and sanctified to God—τὰ ἡγιασμένα, Sept.: see on v. 5.

12. out of the field] but not out of the barn; for thou shalt not store up anything in that year: see v. 5; and Exod. xxiii. 11.

15. According to the number of years] So that, in fact, the Land itself was not sold, for the Land belonged to God (v. 23), and the Israelites were His tenantry, but only its produce was sold.

17. Ye shall not oppress one another] See Bp. Sanderson, ii. pp. 352—354; and Kalisch on Exod., p. 393.

20. Behold, we shall not sow] Man lives by faith and obedience. Ye shall not sow on the seventh year; but God will make “the sixth year bring forth fruit for three years;” cp. Exod. xxxiv. 23, 24, where God promises safety from their enemies while they go up to His house for the solemn festivals; and see Mal. iii. 10, where He promises them abundance; if they pay their tithes; and compare Matt. iv. 4; vi. 33, where

† Or, to be quite cut off.
 † Heb. for cutting off.
 x Deut. 32. 43.
 2 Chron. 7. 20.
 Ps. 85. 1.
 Joel 2. 13. & 3. 2.
 y 1 Chron. 29. 15.
 Ps. :9. 12. & 119. 19.
 1 Pet. 2. 11.
 z Ruth 2. 20. & 4. 4, 6.
 a See Ruth 3. 2, 9, 12.
 Jer 32. 7, 8.
 † Heb. his hand hath attained and found sufficiency, ch. 5. 7.
 b ver. 50, 51, 52.

c ver. 13.

come in ye shall eat of the old store. ²³ The land shall not be sold ||† for ever: for ^x the land is mine; for ye ^{are} ^y strangers and sojourners with me. ²⁴ And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a redemption for the land. ²⁵ ^z If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if ^a any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold. ²⁶ And if the man have none to redeem it, and † himself be able to redeem it; ²⁷ Then ^b let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession. ²⁸ But if he be not able to restore it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it until the year of jubile: ^c and in the jubile it shall go out, and he shall return unto his possession.

²⁹ And if a man sell a dwelling house in a walled city, then he may redeem it within a whole year after it is sold; within a full year may he redeem it. ³⁰ And if it be not redeemed within the space of a full year, then the house that is in the walled city shall be established for ever to him that bought it throughout his generations: it shall not go out in the jubile. ³¹ But the houses of the villages which have no wall round about them shall be counted as the fields of the country: † they may be redeemed, and they shall go out in the jubile. ³² Notwithstanding ^d the cities of the Levites, and the houses of the cities of their possession, may the Levites redeem at any time. ³³ And

† Heb. redemption belongeth unto it.
 d See Num. 35. 2. Josh. 21. 2, &c.

Christ promises all things to those who seek first His Kingdom and its righteousness; and in Matt. xix. 29, all blessings are guaranteed by Him to those who leave earthly things for His sake; and the Apostle says that Godliness has the promise of this life and of a better (1 Tim. iv. 8).

^{23.} for ever] Literally, for extinction. Heb. tsemithuth, from tsamath, to be silent, to reduce to silence, to cut off (Gesen. 713). The same word is used in v. 30.

— the land is mine] Compare David's language; "All that is in the heaven and the earth is thine,—both riches and honour come of thee." 1 Chron. xxix. 11—15; and Ps. xxiv. 1. 1 Cor. x. 26.

— ye are strangers and sojourners] as your forefathers professed themselves to be (Gen. xxiii. 4. Heb. xi. 13), before the land came into your possession; and even when ye are entered into it, remember that it is not yours, and that ye are only strangers and sojourners in it: it is only a figure of your heavenly inheritance, and therefore even David confessed, "I am a stranger and a sojourner, as all my fathers were" (Ps. xxxix. 12). Here we have no continuing city (Heb. xiii. 14); therefore let us live as strangers and pilgrims (1 Pet. ii. 11), desiring the better country, our heavenly and eternal inheritance (Heb. xi. 16. 1 Pet. i. 4).

^{25.} If thy brother be waxen poor] which was the condition of all Mankind when our Redeemer came. "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich" (2 Cor. viii. 9). "Man cannot redeem his brother;" but "God shall redeem our souls" (Ps. xlix. 7, 8). The Son of God by becoming Man has redeemed our possession, and reinstated us in it.

— if any of his kin come to redeem it] Literally, if its redeemer (goël) come; the man who is near to him. The Redeemer is called goël, which is the active participle of the verb gaal, to redeem, or buy back (see on Ruth iii. 12; iv. 4. G), and is a word (says Gesenius, p. 151) often applied to God as redeeming man, especially Israel, as out of the bondage of Egypt (Exod. vi. 6), from Babylon and dispersion (Isa. xliii. 1; xlv. 22; xlviii. 20).

The word is used by the Patriarch Job in that remarkable prophecy of Christ and the Resurrection (Job xix. 25), "I know that my Redeemer (my Goël) liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

Christ is the Redeemer of all, as being "near of kin" to all by His Incarnation (Heb. ii. 14. 16), and as redeeming all, and restoring all to their inheritance which they lost in Adam (Eph. i. 7—14; see Bp. Andrewes, ii. 239).

^{27.} Then let him count the years—and restore the overplus] or residue. If a man have sold his possession for a certain sum, and he that has bought it has eaten of the fruits of it some years, and there remain some years to the Jubilee; and if he who sold it would redeem it, he has a right to redeem it on paying a less sum for it than the purchase-money he received for it, according to the number of years during which the buyer has had the fruits of it (Maimonides, in Jobel xi. 5).

^{29.} a dwelling house in a walled city] If a house within a walled town was not redeemed by the seller, within a year after the sale, it belonged to the buyer for ever, and did not revert at the Jubilee to the seller. The privileges of houses in walled cities were less than those of tenements in the country; perhaps the reason was, that the Israelites might not be induced to concentrate themselves in cities; and because houses in towns were the works of man's hands, and did not belong to the land which was God's (v. 23). The houses here specified were houses in towns that have a wall, a phrase which seems to denote that the inhabitants of such places might be disposed to look to their walls and bulwarks—the works of their own hands, for defence and protection against their enemies; whereas the faithful Israelite should rather look to God as his fortress and tower of strength (Ps. cxlv. 2; Prov. xviii. 10); and this feeling of trust was cherished in the country where God was their "wall round about them." "Salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks" (Isa. xxvi. 1).

^{30.} walled city] There is a variety of reading here: the text has lamed with aleph, i. e., not; the margin has lamed with vau (to him, or to it). A similar variety is found in Exod. xxi. 8, and Lev. xi. 21.

^{31.} the houses of the villages which have no wall] See on v. 29. The word here used for village is chatzar, an enclosure (Gesen. 300): ep. Gen. xxv. 16; Isa. xlii. 11; Cant. i. 5, where it is applied to the villages of nomad tribes, dwelling in tents.

^{32.} the cities of the Levites] who are the Lord's inheritance, returned to them at the Jubilee, and the right of repurchasing them was never lost: their lands might not be sold even for the term of years until the Jubilee, v. 34.

In the Acts of the Apostles it is noted, that Barnabas, a Levite, of Cyprus, having land, sold it, and brought the price of it to the Apostles. This land was perhaps not in Palestine; but the mention of the circumstance by the Holy Spirit in that inspired record appears to denote that the civil enactments of the Levitical Law were then being superseded by the Gospel, if || a man purchase of the Levites, then the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, ° shall go out in the year of jubile: for the houses of the cities of the Levites are their possession among the children of Israel. ✓³⁴ But † the field of the suburbs of their cities may not be sold; for it is their perpetual possession.

³⁵ And if thy brother be waxen poor, and † fallen in decay with thee; then thou shalt †[†] relieve him: yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee. ³⁶ ^h Take thou no usury of him, or increase: but † fear thy God; that thy brother may live with thee. ³⁷ Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase. ³⁸ ^k I am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Canaan, and to be your God.

³⁹ And † if thy brother that dwelleth by thee be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee; thou shalt not † compel him to serve as a bondservant: ⁴⁰ But as an hired servant, and as a sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of jubile: ⁴¹ And then shall he depart from thee, both he and his children ^m with him, and shall return unto his own family, and ⁿ unto the possession of his fathers shall he return. ⁴² For they are ° my servants, which I brought forth out of the land of Egypt: they shall not be sold † as bondmen. ⁴³ ^p Thou shalt not rule over him ^q with rigour; but † shalt fear thy God. ⁴⁴ Both thy bondmen, and thy bondmaids, which thou shalt have, shall be of the heathen that are round about you; of them shall ye buy bondmen and bondmaids. ⁴⁵ Moreover of ° the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy, and of their families that are with you, which they begat in your land: and they shall be your possession. ⁴⁶ And † ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for a possession; † they shall be your bondmen for ever: but over your brethren the children of Israel, ^u ye shall not rule one over another with rigour.

⁴⁷ And if a sojourner or stranger † wax rich by thee, and ^x thy brother that dwelleth by him wax poor, and sell himself unto the stranger or sojourner by thee, or to the stock of the stranger's family: ⁴⁸ After that he is sold he may be redeemed again; one of his brethren may ^y redeem him: ⁴⁹ Either his

|| Or, one of the Levites redeem them.
e ver. 28.

f See Acts 4. 36, 37.

† Heb. his hand faileth.
† Heb. strengthen.
g Deut. 15. 7, 8.
Ps. 37. 26. & 41. 1. & 112. 5, 9.
Prov. 14. 31.
Luke 6. 35.
Acts 11. 29.
Rom. 12. 10.
1 John 3. 17.
h Ex. 22. 25.
Deut. 23. 19.
Neh. 5. 7.
Ps. 15. 5.
Prov. 28. 8.

Ezek. 18. 8, 13, 17. & 22. 12.
i ver. 17.
Neh. 5. 9.

k ch. 22. 32, 33.
l Ex. 21. 2.
Deut. 15. 12.

m 1 Kings 9. 22.
n 2 Kings 4. 1.
Neh. 5. 5.

o Jer. 34. 14.
† Heb. serve thyself with him with the service, &c.
ver. 46.

Ex. 1. 14.
Jer. 25. 14. & 27. 7. & 30. 8.

m Ex. 21. 3.
n ver. 28.
o ver. 55.

Rom. 6. 22.
1 Cor. 7. 23.
† Heb. with the sale of a bondman.

p Eph. 6. 9.
Col. 4. 1.
q ver. 46.

Ex. 1. 13.
r ver. 17.
Ex. 1. 17, 21.

Deut. 25. 18.
Mal. 3. 5.
s Isa. 56. 3, 6.

t Isa. 14. 2.
† Heb. ye shall serve yourselves with them, ver. 39.

u ver. 43.
† Heb. his hand obtain, &c.
ver. 26.

x ver. 25, 35.
y Neh. 5. 5.

and that the Apostles had then succeeded to the place of the Levitical Priesthood in the Church of God. See note below on Acts iv. 36, 37.

— the Levites] This mention of the Levites as a well-known order of men in Israel, is one of the many silent signs of the unity of the Pentateuch.

We have heard nothing hitherto in the Book of Leviticus, of the existence of "the Levites;" but they are supposed to be well known to the hearer and reader of the Book. Moses takes for granted here, that his hearers and readers will know what is said concerning their ordination, office, and inheritance, in the Book of Numbers. See Num. i. 50; iii. 9. 12. 45; vii. 6; viii. 6—26; xxxv. 2—8.

33. if a man purchase of the Levites] Literally, if any man redeems; a word which is to be explained from the fact that the Levitical cities and lands originally belonged, not to them, but to the tribes in which they were situated; and the purchase of them by another Israelite in that tribe who was not a Levite, might be regarded as a redemption. Some render it If any of the Levites redeem (cp. v. 25) what has been sold by a Levite—

35. yea, though he be] These words are not in the original, which has simply ger ve toshab, a stranger and a sojourner, shall live with thee—much more thy brother. See Deut. xv. 7, 8. Cp. James ii. 15, 16, who seems to refer to this law; and it was obeyed in the largest sense by the Christians at Antioch (Acts xi. 29, 30), and by the Churches of Asia and Greece, at the exhortation of St. Paul, sending alms to the poor brethren at Jerusalem (Rom. xv. 25, 26; 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2; 2 Cor. ix. 2, 12).

36. Take thou no usury of him] See on Exod. xxii. 25, and the learned Treatise in Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 143.

39—41. be sold] for debt. On these enactments, see Exod. xxi. 2; xxii. 3.

42. they are my servants] So St. Paul teaches with regard to bondsmen under the Gospel; "they are the Lord's freemen" (1 Cor. vii. 22). What was true of the Israelites under the Law, is true of all men under the Gospel. In Christ the wall of separation has been broken down, and there is no longer any difference between Jew and Greek; all are children of Abraham in Him in whom all families of the earth are blessed (see Gal. iii. 28. Col. iii. 11).

Here is the true principle of all legislation for the emancipation of slaves, and gradual abolition of Slavery: see below, the Introduction to St. Paul's Epistle to Philemon, pp. 333—6.

47. if—thy brother—sell himself unto the stranger or sojourner] The case of Hebrew slaves under heathen masters in Palestine. They were under the protection of the civil magistrate, and could not be compelled to serve beyond the Jubilee; and the Sanhedrim might compel his nearest kinsman to redeem him. Cp. Neh. v. 8. Maimonides, de Servis ii. 7.

48. one of his brethren may redeem him] The Son of God became our brother—the firstborn among many brethren (Rom. viii. 29), in order to redeem us. "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John viii. 36).

uncle, or his uncle's son, may redeem him, or any that is nigh of kin unto him of his family may redeem him; or if ² he be able, he may redeem himself. ⁵⁰ And he shall reckon with him that bought him from the year that he was sold to him unto the year of jubile: and the price of his sale shall be according unto the number of years, ^a according to the time of an hired servant shall it be with him. ⁵¹ If there be yet many years behind, according unto them he shall give again the price of his redemption out of the money that he was bought for. ⁵² And if there remain but few years unto the year of jubile, then he shall count with him, and according unto his years shall he give him again the price of his redemption. ⁵³ And as a yearly hired servant shall he be with him: and the other shall not rule with rigour over him in thy sight. ⁵⁴ And if he be not redeemed || in these years, then ^b he shall go out in the year of jubile, both he, and his children with him. ⁵⁵ For ^c unto me the children of Israel are servants; they are my servants whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

z ver. 26.

a Job 7. 1.
Isa. 16, 14, &
21. 16.

|| Or, by these means.
b ver. 41.
Ex. 21. 2, 3.
c ver. 42.

a Ex. 20. 4, 5.
Deut. 5. 8, & 16.
22. & 27. 15.
Ps. 97. 7.
|| Or, pillar.
|| Or, figured stone.
† Heb. a stone of picture.
b ch. 19. 30.
c Deut. 11. 13, 14, 15, & 28. 1—14.
d Isa. 30. 23.
Ezek. 34. 26.
Joel 2. 23, 24.

e Ps. 67. 6. & 85. 12. Ezek. 34. 27. & 36. 30. Zech. 8. 12. f Amos 9. 13.

XXVI. ¹ Ye shall make you ^a no idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a || standing image, neither shall ye set up any ||† image of stone in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the LORD your God. ² ^b Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the LORD.

³ ^c If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them; ⁴ ^d Then I will give you rain in due season, ^e and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit. ⁵ And ^f your threshing

As Bp. Pearson says, "We were all enslaved by sin and brought into captivity by Satan, neither was there any possibility of escape but by way of redemption. Now it was the law of Moses, that if any were able, he might redeem himself (Lev. xxv. 49); but this to us was impossible, because absolute obedience in all our actions is due unto God, and therefore no act of ours can make any satisfaction for the least offence. Another law gave yet more liberty, that he which was sold might be redeemed again; one of his brethren might redeem him (Lev. xxv. 48). But this in respect of all the mere sons of men was equally impossible, because they were all under the same captivity. Nor could they satisfy for others, who were wholly unable to redeem themselves. Wherefore there was no other brother but that Son of Man, who was like unto us in all things, sin only excepted, which could work this redemption for us. And what He only could, that He did freely perform. For the Son of Man came to give His life a ransom for many (Matt. xx. 28); and as He came to give, so He gave Himself a ransom for all (1 Tim. ii. 6); so that in Him we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins (Eph. i. 7)." Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. ii. p. 74).

⁵⁴. he shall go out in the year of jubile] The year of Jubilee preached a lesson of faith, and trust, and love. It proclaimed God's sovereign lordship over all, and His fatherly care for all; and it prepared the way for the Advent of Him by whom all things were made (John i. 1—3), and who gave the Levitical Law with the sound of the trumpet on Mount Sinai, and who came in the fulness of time to "preach the gospel to the poor; to heal the broken-hearted; to preach deliverance to the captive; recovery of sight to the blind; to set at liberty them that are bruised; to preach the acceptable year of the Lord" (Luke iv. 18, 19. Isa. lxi. 1, 2), and who is gone up to heaven in our nature, and who will come again at the time of the restitution of all things (Acts iii. 21), to liberate all Creation from the bondage of corruption, and to redeem His people from the bondage of Sin, Satan, and Death, unto the glorious liberty of the children of God, and to settle them for ever in the new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness: see Luke xxi. 28. Rom. viii. 19—23. 2 Cor. v. 2. 4. Col. i. 12. 1 Pet. i. 4. 2 Pet. iii. 13.

CH. XXVI. This Chapter, which comprises a summary of Divine PROMISES and WARNINGS, and which might have begun with more propriety at v. 3, contains a moral recapitulation, shewing that the sum and substance of the Levitical Law is not in ritual observances, but in love of God.

The Book of the Covenant, which is the moral essence of the Sinaitic legislation, had been summed up with a declaration of Promises to obedience, and a denunciation of threats against disobedience (Exod. xxiii. 20—33). In like manner the ritual Code, contained in Leviticus, which was delivered by God to Moses in the Tabernacle, and which concerns the worship of God, and the inner spiritual life of the Church of God, and prefigures in types and shadows the doctrine and worship of the Church of Christ, even to the end, is summed up with an announcement of Blessings and Maledictions, and thus passes onward from the delivery of the Law on Sinai to the transactions of the Great Day, when Christ will pronounce blessings and curses from His Judgment-seat to all the Human Race gathered before Him (Matt. xxv. 31—46).

Some recent critics (as Ewald) have denied the Mosaic authorship of this chapter, and have assigned it to a later age—the age of Hezekiah—because, in their opinion, it evinces clearer foresight of the future than they concede to the great Hebrew Lawgiver. Such an allegation as this is tantamount to a denial of His prophetic character and divine inspiration; and could only have proceeded from a want of perception of the true character of the whole Book of Leviticus, which breathes the atmosphere of the Gospel: see above, the Introduction to this Book.

1. idols] Heb. elilim. See xix. 4; cp. Exod. xx. 4, 5; xxi. 23.

— graven image] matstsebah (see Exod. xxiii. 24).

— standing image] pesel (Exod. xx. 4).

— image of stone] figured stone (see Num. xxxiii. 52).

3. If ye walk in my statutes] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and it reaches to the end of Leviticus.

The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is Jer. xvi. 19—xvii. 14; which contains warnings against idolatry, and curses against distrust and disobedience, and proclaims the blessings of faith and obedience to God.

4. rain] Literally, rains, that is, the former and the latter rain (Deut. xi. 14). The former rain falls after the autumnal equinox in the end of October or beginning of November. The rains do not come suddenly, but by degrees, and give the husbandman opportunity of sowing his wheat and barley. They fall heavily in November and December. The latter rain falls in March, to swell the corn before the harvest in March, and is of shorter duration (Robinson, Pales. ii. 97).

5. your threshing shall reach unto the vintage] The threshing comes between the reaping of corn and treading of grapes: reaping shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time : and ^e ye shall eat your bread to the full, and ^h dwell in your land safely. ⁶ And ⁱ I will give peace in the land, and ^k ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid : and I will [†] rid ^l evil beasts out of the land, neither shall ^m the sword go through your land. ⁷ And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword. ⁸ And ⁿ five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight : and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword. ⁹ For I will ^o have respect unto you, and ^p make you fruitful, and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you. ¹⁰ And ye shall eat ^q old store, and bring forth the old because of the new. ¹¹ And I will set my tabernacle among you : and my soul shall not ^r abhor you. ¹² And I will walk among you, and ^s will be your God, and ye shall be my people. ¹³ ^w I am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bondmen ; ^x and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

¹⁴ ^y But if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments ; ¹⁵ And if ye shall ^z despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant : ¹⁶ I also will do this unto you ; I will even appoint [†] over you ^a terror, ^b consumption, and the burning ague, that shall ^c consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart : and ^d ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it. ¹⁷ And ^e I will set my face against you, and ^f ye shall be slain before your enemies ; ^g they that hate you shall reign over you ; and ^h ye shall flee when none pursueth you. ¹⁸ And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, then I will punish you ⁱ seven times more for your sins. ¹⁹ And I will ^k break the pride of your power ; and I ^l will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass : ²⁰ And your ^m strength shall be spent in vain : for ⁿ your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits. ²¹ And if ye walk ^{||} contrary unto me, and will not hearken unto me ; I will bring seven times more plagues upon you according to your sins. ²² ^o I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number ; and ^p your high ways shall be desolate. ²³ And if ye ^q will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me ; ²⁴ Then will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins. ²⁵ And ^r I will bring a sword

g ch. 25. 19. Deut. 11. 15. Joel 2. 19, 26. h ch. 25. 18. Job 11. 18. Ezek. 34. 25, 27, 28. i 1 Chron. 22. 9. Ps. 29. 11. & 147. 14. Isa. 45. 7. Hag. 2. 9. k Job 11. 19. Ps. 3. 5. & 4. 8. Isa. 35. 9. Jer. 30. 10. Ezek. 34. 25. Hos. 2. 18. Zeph. 3. 13. † Heb. cause to cease. l 2 Kings 17. 25. Ezek. 5. 17. & 14. 15. m Ezek. 14. 17. n Deut. 32. 30. Josh. 23. 10. o Ex. 2. 25. 2 Kings 13. 23. p Gen. 17. 6, 7. Neh. 9. 23. Ps. 107. 38. q ch. 25. 22. r Ex. 25. 8. & 29. 45. Josh. 22. 19. Ps. 76. 2. Ezek. 37. 26, 27, 28. Rev. 21. 3. s ch. 20. 23. Deut. 32. 19. t 2 Cor. 6. 16. u Ex. 6. 7. Jer. 7. 23. & 11. 4. & 30. 22. Ezek. 11. 20. & 36. 28. w ch. 25. 38, 42, 55. x Jer. 2. 20. Ezek. 34. 27. y Deut. 28. 15. Lam. 2. 17. Mal. 2. 2. z ver. 45. 2 Kings 17. 15. † Heb. upon you. a Deut. 28. 65, 66, 67, & 32. 25. Jer. 15. 8. b Deut. 28. 22. c 1 Sam. 2. 33. d Deut. 28. 33, 51. Job 31. 8. Jer. 5. 17. & 12. 13. Mic. 6. 15. e ch. 17. 10. f Deut. 28. 25. Judg. 2. 14. Jer. 19. 7. g Ps. 106. 41. h ver. 36. Ps. 53. 5. Prov. 28. 1.

takes place in April, May, and June ; the vintage is in September and October. The promise is that the harvest will be so heavy, that it will take three or four months to tread out the grain. In very abundant seasons I have seen threshing prolonged to October (see Dr. Thomson, the Land and the Book, pp. 218—220). In a similar strain the Prophet says, “The ploughman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed” (Amos ix. 13) ; i. e., the ploughman will continue his work until that which was first sown is ready for the sickle ; the threshing follows the reaping, and will extend to the vintage ; and the treading of grapes will reach to the time for sowing the first crop. Thus these three promises spread over the whole year of the husbandman (Dr. Thomson).

8. five of you shall chase an hundred] Cp. Josh. xxiii. 10.

10. because of the new] Rather, before the new.

11. I will set my tabernacle among you] Literally, I will give My tabernacle ; a promise fulfilled in the highest sense in Christ, who tabernacled in us (John i. 14), and raised up the Tabernacle of David (Acts xv. 16), and through whom we become Temples of God the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. iii. 16, 17 ;

vi. 19), and God is reconciled to us, and will “tabernacle for ever” with them, and upon them (Rev. vii. 15 ; xxi. 3).

Accordingly, the Holy Spirit Himself, speaking by St. Paul, declares that the promise contained in this and the following verse has been accomplished in the Church of Christ (see 2 Cor. vi. 16), “Ye are the temple of the living God ; as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they shall be My people,” where the Apostle adopts the words of the Septuagint here. See also the interesting application of the text as a promise to Christians individually, by the holy Martyr, S. Ignatius, when standing before the Emperor Trajan (Ignat., Martyr. § 2, and by S. Irenæus, Frag. p. 471, Grabe ; and Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. x. 4 ; and cp. Bp. Andrewes, v. 463).

14. But if ye will not hearken] Cp. Deut. xxviii. 15—68.

18. seven times] There is a gradual ascent here in the scale of punishment ; 1. barrenness (18—20) ; 2. extermination of cattle by beasts of prey, and childlessness ; 3. war, plague, famine ; 4. overthrow of idols ; 5. overthrow of cities ; 6. desolation of the land ; 7. dispersion of the inhabitants. These punishments are upon you, that shall avenge the quarrel of my covenant: and when ye are gathered together within your cities, 'I will send the pestilence among you; and ye shall be delivered into the hand of the enemy. ²⁶ ^u And when I have broken the staff of your bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and they shall deliver you your bread again by weight: and ^x ye shall eat, and not be satisfied.

²⁷ And ^y if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me; ²⁸ Then I will walk contrary unto you also ^z in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins. ²⁹ ^a And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat. ³⁰ And ^b I will destroy your high places, and cut down your images, and ^c cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols, and my soul shall ^d abhor you. ³¹ ^e And I will make your cities waste, and ^f bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will not smell the savour of your sweet odours. ³² ^s And I will bring the land into desolation: and your enemies which dwell therein shall be ^h astonished at it. ³³ And ⁱ I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you: and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste. ³⁴ ^k Then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths. ³⁵ As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did not rest in your ^l sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it. ³⁶ And upon them that are left alive of you ^m I will send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and ⁿ the sound of a † shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth. ³⁷ And ^o they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth: and ^p ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies. ³⁸ And ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up. ³⁹ And they that are left of you ^q shall pine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them. ⁴⁰ ^r If they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their

t Num. 14. 12.
Deut. 28. 21.
Jer. 14. 12. & 24.
10. & 29. 17, 18.
Amos 4. 10.
u Ps. 105. 16.
Isa. 3. 1.
Ezek. 4. 16. & 5.
16. & 14. 13.
x Isa. 9. 20.
Mic. 6. 14.
Hag. 1. 6.
y ver. 21, 24.
z Isa. 59. 18. &
63. 3. & 66. 15.
Jer. 21. 5.
Ezek. 5. 13, 15. &
8. 18.
a Deut. 28. 53.
2 Kings 6. 29.
Lam. 4. 10.
Ezek. 5. 10.
b 2 Chron. 34. 3, 4.
7. Isa. 27. 9.
Ezek. 6. 3, 4, 5,
6, 13.
c 2 Kings 23. 20.
2 Chron. 34. 5.
d Lev. 20. 23.
Ps. 78. 59. & 89.
38.
Jer. 14. 19.
e Neh. 2. 3.
Jer. 4. 7.
Ezek. 6. 6.
f Ps. 74. 7.
Lam. 1. 10.
Ezek. 9. 6. &
21. 2.
g Jer. 9. 11. &
25. 11, 18.
h Deut. 28. 37.
1 Kings 9. 8.
Jer. 18. 16. & 19.
18.
i Ezek. 5. 15.
1 Deut. 4. 27. &
28. 64.
Ps. 44. 11.
Jer. 9. 16.
Ezek. 12. 15. &
20. 23. & 22. 15.
Zech. 7. 14.
k 2 Chron. 36. 21.
l ch. 25. 2.
m Ezek. 21. 7, 12, 15.
n ver. 17.
Job 15. 21.
Prov. 28. 1.
† Heb. driven.
o Isa. 10. 4.
See Judg. 7. 22.
p 1 Sam. 14. 15, 16.
p Josh. 7. 12, 13.
Judg. 2. 14.
Zech. 10. 9.
q Deut. 4. 27. & 28. 65. Neh. 1. 8. Jer. 3. 25. & 29. 12, 13. Ezek. 4. 17. & 6. 9. & 20. 43. & 24. 23. & 33. 10. & 36. 31. Hos. 5. 15.
r Num. 5. 7. 1 Kings 8. 33, 35, 47. Neh. 9. 2. Prov. 28. 13. Dan. 9. 3, 4. Luke 15. 18. 1 John 1. 9.

recorded in order from v. 18—40, and increase in number and intensity in regular succession.

²⁶. I have broken the staff of your bread] On this phrase, see Ezek. iv. 16, and Theodoret here; and Bp. Andrewes, v. 417. 508.

— ten women shall bake your bread in one oven] by reason of scarcity. Theodoret, Qu. 36: cp. Ezek. iv. 16, 17.

²⁹. ye shall eat the flesh of your sons] Cp. Deut. xxviii. 53—57; Ezek. v. 10. This was fulfilled in the time of King Jehoram (2 Kings vi. 28, 29), and in the siege of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans (Lam. ii. 20; iv. 10), and in the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans; Josephus, B. J. v. 10. 2. Euseb., H. E. iii. 16.

³⁰. high places] for worship and sacrifice (2 Chron. i. 3; xi. 15; Jer. xxxii. 35). This was fulfilled by Josiah (2 Kings xxiii. 15).

— images] Heb. chammanim; literally, images to the sun, chammah (cp. Job xxxvi. 26. Isa. xxx. 26. 2 Kings xxiii. 11. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 5). Aben Ezra, Jarchi, Bochart. Gesenius, p. 287. Movers, Phönizier i. 343; and Jahn, Archæol. § 406, concerning the worship paid to the sun by the kings of Judah.

Here is a remarkable prophecy of that strange idolatry; and the texts just cited show that the prophecy was fulfilled. The striking fulfilment of these and other prophecies contained in this chapter has caused the sceptical critics of the Pentateuch, who deny the reality of its preternatural inspiration, to assign it to a later age. This allegation itself is a testimony to the accordance of the facts with the prophecy.

— cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols] Another remarkable prophecy fulfilled by King Josiah (2 Kings xxiii. 20. 2 Chron. xxxiv. 5. Ps. lxxix. 1—3). Cp. Clem. Alex., Strom. i. p. 390.

Your dead bodies shall be cast on the dead bodies of your idols, whom ye have preferred to the Living God, and they will then be proved to be mere corpses, dead carcases, fit only to be buried or burnt.

— your idols] Heb. gillulim, properly round blocks of wood or stone, from galal, to roll; connected with γάλα, ἔλσσω, κυλίω, κούλος, εἰλεῖ, οἶλος, volvo, — Gilgal, Golgotha, &c. Cp. Deut. xxix. 17. 1 Kings xxi. 26. Gesen., p. 171.

³¹. and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation] fulfilled in the destruction of the Temple by the Babylonians (cp. Ps. lxxiv. 7; lxxix. 36. Lam. ii. 7), and its desolation by Antiochus Epiphanes (1 Macc. i. 54), and utter ruin by the Romans, for the rejection of Christ. Cp. our Lord's prophecy, Matt. xxii. 37; xxiv. 2. 15. Hesych.

³⁴. Then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths] which will have been neglected, as they were: see 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21; cp. here, v. 43. The word used is from ratsah (εὐδοκεῖν), to take pleasure in: cp. v. 41.

The fulfilment of this prophecy is recorded in 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21, which says, that the seventy years' captivity at Babylon represented the seventy sabbatical years, from the time of Saul to the beginning of that captivity. Theodoret, Qu. 37.

³⁵. it shall rest; because] Rather, it shall rest (the time) which—

³⁸. ye shall perish among the heathen] fulfilled in the dispersion of the Jews: see note on Acts ii. 9—11.

^{40—45}. If they shall confess their iniquity] A promise of reconciliation and restoration, yet to be fulfilled; see Rom. xi. 1, 2. 5. 23. 28, 29. May the Lord hasten the time!

— and the iniquity of their fathers] God requires us to confess not only our own sins, but those of our fathers. David did so (Ps. evi. 6). Jeremiah did so (Jer. iii. 25). Daniel did trespass which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me; ⁴¹ And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then their ^s uncircumcised hearts be ^t humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity: ⁴² Then will I ^u remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will ^x remember the land.

⁴³ ^y The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity: because, even because they ^z despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes. ⁴⁴ And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, ^a I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the LORD their God. ⁴⁵ But I will ^b for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors, ^c whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt ^d in the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God: I am the LORD.

⁴⁶ ^e These are the statutes and judgments and laws, which the LORD made between him and the children of Israel ^f in mount Sinai by the hand of Moses.

XXVII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^a When a man shall make a singular vow, the persons shall be for the LORD by thy estimation. ³ And thy estimation shall s See Jer. 6. 10. & 9. 25. 26. Ezek. 44. 7. Acts 7. 51. Rom. 2. 29. Col. 2. 11. t 1 Kings 21. 29. 2 Chron. 12. 6, 7, 12, & 32. 26. & 33. 12, 13. u Ex. 2. 24. & 6. 5. Ps. 106. 45. Ezek. 16. 60. x Ps. 136. 23. y ver. 34, 35. z ver. 15.

a Deut. 4. 31. 2 Kings 13. 23. Rom. 11. 2.

b Rom. 11. 28.

c ch. 22. 33. & 25. 33.

d Ps. 98. 2. Ezek. 20. 9, 14, 22.

e ch. 27. 34. Deut. 6. 1. & 12. 1. & 33. 4.

f ch. 17. John 1. 17. f ch. 25. 1.

a Num. 6. 2. See Judg. 11. 30, 31, 39. 1 Sam. 1. 11, 28.

so (Dan. ix. 5, 6), and we must do so. Bp. Sanderson, iii. 86.

— with their trespass which they trespassed against me] See the interesting and important reference to these words in the Dialogue of S. Justin Martyr with Trypho the Jew, in which Justin affirms that the evils which the Jews suffer are the penalty of their sins, especially in rejecting Jesus Christ; and that these penalties will not be remitted, till they confess their sins in this respect, and “look on Him Whom they have pierced” (Zech. xii. 10). (Justin Martyr, Dialog. c. 16, 17.)

41. and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity] or, willingly bear it; or rather be well-pleased, and even rejoice in it (εὐδοκῆσαι, Sept.), because it has taught them humility, and brought them to repentance, and thus restored them to God. Cp. 2 Cor. vii. 10, on the blessed fruits of godly sorrow. The word here used, and repeated in v. 43, is the same as that translated enjoy in vv. 34 and 43; and there is a connexion between the two passages.

The word translated punishment of iniquity is avon, which properly signifies perversity, sin, from avah, to bend aside (Gesen. 611. 614), but sometimes means penalty for sin (Isa. v. 18. Cp. Gen. xix. 15. Lev. xv. 17, 19, 20; and Isa. xl. 2). Ainsworth, p. 173. Cp. Keil, p. 164.

44. And yet] Heb. ve aph. The Jews read this passage with special delight, because it promised them freedom and restoration; and the German Jews call it “the golden age,” because it begins with the word aph (see Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 145; Glass, Phil. Sacr. iii. Tract 7, p. 805). Wherein their real hopes of restoration rest, and what their restoration will be, is well stated by Pfeiffer, p. 145. Cp. Ezek. xxxvii. 22. Eph. ii. 11. Gal. iv. 26.

45. I will—remember the covenant of their ancestors] This is what St. Paul says of the Jews: “They are beloved for the fathers’ sakes; for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance” (Rom. xi. 28, 29); and therefore it is evident that the virtues of the saints of God exercise an influence for good on their descendants many centuries after their departure from this world. Cp. 2 Kings xiii. 23; and Theodoret, Qu. 37.

46. These are the statutes] It is observable, that in this recapitulation of the enactments of the Law, and in this enunciation of blessings for obedience, and of cursings for disobedience, there is no reference to the joys and miseries of a future and eternal state; although at the same time, by types and shadows, especially by the sabbatical year and the Jubilee (described in the foregoing chapter), it prefigured the rest and joy of Eternity.

By its silence on this subject the Levitical Law proclaimed that it is not designed to be of permanent and universal obligation, but preparatory to another Dispensation. The Gospel of Christ, in which “Life and Immortality are brought to light” (2 Tim. i. 10)—i. e., in which a clearer light is shed upon them—claims to be that Dispensation (John i. 17. Gal. iii. 24); and it exhibits the substance of what the Levitical Law revealed in figurative types and shadows.

— in mount Sinai] in the Tabernacle there, in the first month of the second year of their deliverance from Egypt: see above, on i. 1.

— by the hand of Moses] for the children of Israel were not able to receive them directly from God, by reason of their manifold sins. Therefore Moses was their Mediator. A proof of man’s sin and of God’s love; and a type of Christ (cp. Gal. iii. 19. 1 Tim. ii. 5. Heb. viii. 6; ix. 15; xii. 24), who is our Peace (Eph. ii. 14).

PRELIMINARY NOTE TO CHAPTER XXVII.

On Vows and Tithes.

Having given directions in this book for the ordinances of Divine Service, the Legislator now speaks of provision for its maintenance, whether by voluntary offerings, or by tithes.

In this chapter we have an expression of the divine will on this subject; and from the precepts herein contained, it may be concluded, that a system of Church Polity which provides for the support of the Ministers of Religion, and for the maintenance of religious fabrics, and for the regular performance of holy offices in public worship, by means of settled endowments, such as Tithes (vv. 30—34), aided by freewill-offerings (1—27), is that which is most in accordance with the will of God.

The Legislator begins with Vows, or Freewill-offerings, which were applied to the support of the sanctuary. Cp. 2 Kings xii. 4, 5.

CH. XXVII. 2. shall make a singular vow] Heb. shall separate a vow (neder); that is, exempt it from common uses, and dedicate it to God.

On the subject of vows, see the treatise Nedarim, in the Mishna, Tract v. of “Seder Nashim;” and Jahn, Archæol. § 392—394; and Winer, R. W. B. i. 405. Keil, Archæol. i. 319; and Phillott, in Dr. Smith’s Bib. Dict. ii. 1687.

— by thy estimation] by the estimation, or according to the valuation, of thy person. He uses the singular number here in addressing “the Children of Israel,” because the vowing of a vow was a personal thing, done freely by the individual, and because the estimation varied according to the age (vv. 5—7) and station (v. 8) of the individual.

Others suppose that the words “thy estimation” are ad-

b Ex. 30. 13.

be of the male from twenty years old even unto sixty years old, even thy estimation shall be fifty shekels of silver, ^b after the shekel of the sanctuary. ⁴ And if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be thirty shekels. ⁵ And if it be from five years old even unto twenty years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male twenty shekels, and for the female ten shekels. ⁶ And if it be from a month old even unto five years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male five shekels of silver, and for the female thy estimation shall be three shekels of silver. ⁷ And if it be from sixty years old and above; if it be a male, then thy estimation shall be fifteen shekels, and for the female ten shekels. ⁸ But if he be poorer than thy estimation, then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

† Heb. according to thy estimation, O priest, &c. c ver. 15, 19.

⁹ And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD shall be holy. ¹⁰ He shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy. ¹¹ And if it be any unclean beast of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest: ¹² And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: † as thou valuest it, who art the priest, so shall it be. ¹³ ^c But if he will at all redeem it, then he shall add a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.

d ver. 13.

¹⁴ And when a man shall sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand. ¹⁵ ^d And if he that sanctified it will redeem his house, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

|| Or, the land of an homer, &c.

¹⁶ And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD some part of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: || an homer of barley seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver. ¹⁷ If he sanctify dressed, through Moses, to the Priest, who was to make the assessment, and to receive the value set upon the person or thing vowed to the Lord: see v. 12.

The "estimation," erec, or taxation, τάξις, from the verb arac, to set in order (a word connected with ἀρέγω, rego, to direct, regular, rule), determined the sum of money which a man was to pay to the sanctuary when he had vowed himself to the Lord (cp. v. 15); and the vow was conceived in this form (says Aben Ezra):—"If God do so to me, then I will give myself to Him; and I will redeem myself by a payment equivalent to what I am valued at—my estimation." And see the treatise of Maimonides, entitled "Eracim," or Estimations, who says (vi. 20), "He that sanctifieth himself, sanctifieth his own price, and is bound to give the price of himself"—i. e., to the sanctuary.

— thy estimation] He speaks to each Israelite individually, and says to the man, "If thine age is between twenty and sixty years, thou shalt pay fifty shekels of the sanctuary to the Lord's House, for thy redemption;" and to the woman (v. 4), "Thou shalt pay thirty shekels." On the value of that shekel, twenty gerahs (v. 25), see Winer, R. W. B. ii. 444, and note on Exod. xxx. 13; Matt. xxvii. 3.

The Septuagint interprets the word shekel by two drachmas, διδραχμα: and so Theodoret, Qu. 37.—διδραχμα is the word used by St. Matt. xvii. 24; but St. Matthew is speaking of the half-shekel; and therefore it has been supposed that the Septuagint is following the Alexandrine computation, according to which the Attic Drachma was only reckoned as half the Alexandrine. Cp. Joseph., Ant. iii. 8. 2. Wetstein, N. T. i. p. 438. Schleusner, in v. διδραχμα. See Jahn, Archæol. § 392—394, and Winer, R. W. B. i. 405, Art. "Gelübde."

4. if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be thirty shekels] Perhaps the price for which He was betrayed who redeemed the world (see Zech. xi. 12, 13; Matt. xx. 14—16); the value of a slave: cp. Exod. xxi. 32.

5. if it be from five years old] According to this and the following enactment, the value of persons varied with age and sex. The infant had no estimation before it was a month old (cp. Num. xviii. 16). The child was of little worth, the aged were depreciated, the women were inferior in value to the men.

Such was the condition of Mankind by nature, and previously to, and independently of, the Incarnation of Him, who being born of a woman has dignified woman, and has consecrated infancy from its mother's womb, and has beautified childhood, and has hallowed old age, and has knit together all, as fellow-members in His own body, where there is neither "male nor female, but all are one in Him" (Gal. iii. 28).

8. if he be poorer than thy estimation] So poor as not to be able to pay for his redemption what he would be expected to pay at his age. The Sept., Vulg., Arabic, and Syriac, Onkelos, omit the pronoun, or change it into the third person.

10. then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy] Both shall be given to the Lord; so that he shall be a loser by his covetousness (cp. v. 33).

13. But if he will at all redeem it] If he change his mind, and will not have the beast sold for the benefit of the sanctuary, but desires to retrieve it for himself, and reserve it for his own use, he shall pay the sum at which it is valued by the Priest, and add a fifth part to that sum.

14. sanctify his house] by vowing it to the Lord. — so shall it stand] This shall be the value of it, at which it may be sold; but if the owner would redeem it for himself, he must add a fifth to the price (v. 15).

16. field of his possession] That which came to him by inheritance, not purchase (Maimon.: ep. v. 22), or which is let to him on lease.

his field from the year of jubile, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

¹⁸ But if he sanctify his field after the jubile, then the priest shall ^e reckon e ch. 25. 15, 16. unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubile, and it shall be abated from thy estimation. ¹⁹ ^f And if he that f ver. 13. sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him. ²⁰ And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more. ²¹ But the field, ^g when it goeth out in the g ch. 25. 10, 28, 31. jubile, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field ^h devoted; ⁱ the possession h ver. 28. thereof shall be the priest's. i Num. 18. 14. Ezek. 44. 29.

²² And if a man sanctify unto the LORD a field which he hath bought, which is not of the fields of ^k his possession; ²³ ^l Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubile: and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD. ²⁴ ^m In the year l ch. 25. 10, 25. 1 ver. 18. of the jubile the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong. ²⁵ And all thy estimations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary: ⁿ twenty gerahs shall be the shekel. n Ex. 30. 13. Num. 3. 47. & 13 16. Ezek. 45. 12. † Heb. firstborn, &c. o Ex. 13. 2, 12. & 22. 30. Num. 18. 17. Deut. 15. 19. p ver. 11, 12, 13.

²⁶ Only the [†] firstling of the beasts, which should be the LORD's firstling, no man shall sanctify it; whether it be ox, or sheep: it is the LORD's. ²⁷ And if it be of an unclean beast, then he shall redeem it according to thine estimation, ^p and shall add a fifth part of it thereto: or if it be not redeemed, then it shall be sold according to thy estimation. q ver. 21. Josh. 6. 17, 18, 19.

²⁸ ^q Notwithstanding no devoted thing, that a man shall devote unto the LORD of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the LORD. ²⁹ ^r None devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; r Num. 21. 2, 3. but shall surely be put to death.

³⁰ And ^s all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the s Gen. 28. 22. Num. 18. 21, 24. 2 Chron. 31. 5, 6, 12. Neh. 13-12. Mal. 3. 8, 10.

18. the priest shall reckon] If, for example, a man vow to the Lord a field, when there remain eight years to the Jubilee, then if a person will buy it, he must give for the seed of every homer of barley, which it would yield, a certain price; the Hebrew expositors say, eight shekels and eight half-gerahs; and if the owner will redeem it for himself, he must add a fifth to this price (see Maimonides in Eracim, iv. 5—7, and Jarchi here).

20. or if he have sold the field] That is, the field has been sold—the pronoun is used impersonally. The man who had vowed it could not sell it; but it might be sold by the Treasurer of the Sanctuary for the benefit of the Lord's house (Jarchi).

Others suppose that the owner himself might sell it, that is, lease it till the Jubilee.

22. which he hath bought] That is, not of his inheritance, and of which therefore he was only, in fact, the lessee; for it returned to the owner at the Jubilee (cp. v. 24).

25. shekel of the sanctuary] See v. 3.

28. devoted thing] Heb. cherem; properly, a thing shut up, as in a net (Hab. i. 16, 17); hence the word harem, the women's apartment in Eastern palaces, and derivatively a thing closed off from common use, and devoted to God; and also a thing devoted for sacrifice and destruction (Exod. xxii. 20), as Jericho was (Josh. vi. 17), and Amalek (Deut. xxv. 19; 1 Sam. xv. 3. Gesen. 305).

— most holy unto the LORD] As the Levites were, and as Samuel was (1 Sam. ii. 25—28).

29. shall surely be put to death] Captives taken in war of a city before devoted, as Jericho. The objections of some persons who allege that this passage countenances human sacrifices, have been refuted by Dr. Waterland, Script. Vind. p. 95.

“It is observable, that almost all the pagan countries have offered human sacrifices (vide Euseb., Præp. Evang. lib. v. cap.

16, p. 155, &c.), the Phœnicians, Canaanites, Egyptians, Arabians, Athenians, Lacedæmonians, Romans, Carthaginians, Scythians, Gauls, and Britons. The Jews, in a manner, were the only nation that never admitted the practice, because they had been taught better by God Himself: and it has been owing chiefly, not to infidels, but to Christianity and Christian Priests (vid. Euseb., Præp. Evang. lib. v. cap. 17, p. 208, and lib. iv. cap. 17, p. 163), that that diabolical custom began to be laid aside (about the time when oracles also ceased), and that we are not sacrificing our sons and daughters unto devils at this day. All this is fact; and yet this unrighteous man (Tindal), instead of commending Revelation as he ought to do, for these inestimable benefits which we enjoy by it, is pleased to charge it as faulty in that very article where it deserves his highest praises” (Dr. Waterland). To this it may be added, that the devotion by ban (cherem) of any object or person was not to be done by private persons, at their own will, but was performed by the Civil Magistrate, under known conditions and laws: e. g. the cities of idolaters, such as Jericho, were so devoted, and the inhabitants, by command of God Himself, who made His people to be the executioners of His judgments against inveterate idolatry (see Deut. xiii. 13; Josh. vi. 17).

30. the tithe] Heb. maâser, from eser, ten (Gesen. 498. 659. Cp. Gen. xiv. 20; xxviii. 22), from which it is evident that the payment of tithes was an institution prior to the promulgation of the Levitical Law. Cp. Selden de Decimis, c. 3, and the authorities quoted below.

Here follow rules for the settled maintenance and endowment of the Levitical Ministry, and what was due to them was counted as the Lord's: “it is the Lord's; it is holy to the Lord,” and therefore to defraud them of their tithe was to rob the Lord (see Mal. iii. 8).

On the various kinds of Tithe, see below, Num. xvi. 21;

t ver. 13.

fruit of the tree, is the LORD'S: it is holy unto the LORD. ³¹ † And if a man will at all redeem ought of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof. ³² And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever ^u passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the LORD. ³³ He shall not search whether it be good or bad, * neither shall he change it: and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed.

u See Jer. 33. 13.
Ezek. 20. 37.
Mic. 7. 14.
x ver. 10.

v ch. 26. 46.

³⁴ † These are the commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses for the children of Israel in mount Sinai.

xviii. 21; Deut. xii. 6—11; xiv. 22. 28; Neh. x. 37; Ecclus. xxxv. 9; and the treatise Maaseroth (or Tithes) in the Mishna, Treat. vii.; and Maaser Shenî (Second Tithe), Treat. viii. Jahn, Archæol. § 389. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 722. Phillott, in Dr. Smith's Bib. Diet. iii. 15. 17. Keil, Archæol. i. p. 335.

On the obligation of Tithe under the Christian Dispensation, see above, Gen. xiv. 20; xxviii. 22; below, 1 Cor. ix. 14; ep. S. Iren., iv. 27 and 34. S. Hilary on Matt. xxiv. Origen in Num. xi. Lord Bacon, Adv. of Learning, p. 251, ed. Lond. 1828: "God demandeth a tenth of our substance." Hooker, vii. 23. 6; and v. 79. 12. Joseph Mede's Works, book i. Discourse xix. pp. 70—73, and the works of Bp. Andrewes, Prideaux, Leslie, and others; and Bp. Barlow's Remains, p. 167.

³². whatsoever passeth under the rod] of the shepherd. As they went of their own accord out of the fold they were to be counted, and every tenth of the increase was to be given to the Lord. Maimon. on Firstfruits, vii. 1; and see Jer. xxxiii. 13; Ezek. xx. 37. Bochart, Hierozoic. i. 508. Hottinger de Decimis, i. 231.

³³. and if he change it at all] he shall forfeit both that which he originally paid, and also what he substituted for it (ep. v. 10).

³⁴. the LORD commanded Moses for the children of Israel in mount Sinai] See i. 1. This subsidiary chapter is appended to the book, by the repetition of this formula (ep. xxvi. 46), in the same manner as the last chapter of St. John's Gospel is appended to it by means of the repetition in xxi. 25, compared with xx. 30. There is a somewhat similar double ending in Rom. xvi. 20. 24—27.

NUMBERS

I. ¹ AND the LORD spake unto Moses ^a in the wilderness of Sinai, ^b in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying, ² ^c Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls; ³ From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies. ⁴ And with you there shall be a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

a Ex. 19. 1.
ch. 10. 11, 12.
b Ex. 25. 22.

c Ex. 30. 12. &
38. 26.
ch. 26. 2, 63, 64.
2 Sam. 24. 2.
1 Chron. 21. 2.

CH. I. 1. And the LORD spake] This Book, like the Book of Exodus, begins with the conjunction van, and, which marks its connexion with the preceding Book. Indeed, all the Books of the Pentateuch form one continuous whole (see above, Introduction to the Pentateuch, p. xxviii). It does not appear that the writer gave them any distinctive names. The names they bear are derived from the Greek translation of them. The Hebrews, as is well known, call them by their initial words; e. g., they call the present Book, "And He spake," Vayedaber. The Masorites sometimes call it Bammidbar, "in the wilderness," or Pekudim, "musterings" (Carpzov, Int. p. 120). For some preliminary remarks on this Book, see above, Introduction, p. xxxi.

Here begins a new Parashah, or Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to iv. 20. The parallel prophetic Haphtarah is Hos. ii. 1—21, which describes the disobedience and punishment of Israel, and foretells God's future reconciliation to them. ". . . I will betroth thee unto Me for ever" (Hos. ii. 19). This forms an appropriate sequel to the foregoing section of Leviticus (Lev. xxvi. 27—45).

— the wilderness of Sinai] To which they had come in the third month after the Exodus (Exod. xix. 1), and where they abode till the twentieth day of the second month of the second year after the Exodus (Num. x. 11). The numbering took place on the first day of that month (see v. 18).

— on the first day of the second month] The Tabernacle had been set up at Sinai on the first day of the first month, as we learn from the conclusion of Exodus (xl. 2. 17), and then God delivered to Moses, in the Tabernacle, the Laws which are contained in Leviticus (Lev. i. 1; xxvii. 34), and now God commands Moses to take the census of the people which is set down in Numbers; thus these three books are connected with each other.

2. Take ye the sum] Cp. Exod. xxx. 11, 12; xxxviii. 25. Having given the Moral Law from Mount Sinai in Exodus, and the Ritual Law in the Tabernacle in Leviticus, and having instituted the Priesthood, and provided for its maintenance in that book, the Legislator now sets in order the Commonwealth; and thus he shows the Divine Will that kingdoms should first provide for Religion, and for the public Worship of God, in order that they may have the Divine blessing, and enjoy peace and prosperity. See S. Augustine in Ps. ii.; de Civ. Dei, v. 24; Epist. ad Bonifac. 185. Hooker, v. 1. 2.

3. From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel] This is the true character of the Church of God; it is an Army of soldiers, who are mustered, that they may go forth to war; and Israel is not numbered till they have come to Sinai and received the Law, and the Tabernacle has been erected. All these things were "types of us." S. Cyril de Ador. iv. pp. 111. 116, and Origen, in Num. Hom. i., who says, "Ego me imparem judico ad enarranta mysteria quæ liber hic continet Numerorum, . . . ideo festinandum est ad Jesum, non illum filium Nave, sed ad Jesum Christum, prius tamen pædagogico utentes Moysæ (Gal. iii. 24); Moyses enim non multa bella compressit, Jesus autem bella universa compevit, pacem omnibus dedit; et terra repromissionis, terra quæ fluit lac et mel, ab JESU distribuitur."

— thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies] Thus God showed His care for each Israelite. "The Lord knoweth them that are His" (2 Tim. ii. 19). The Good Shepherd calleth His own sheep by name (John x. 3), and even "the hairs of the head" of the true Israel of God "are all numbered" (Matt. x. 30. Luke xii. 7); and the people are numbered by armies; for all true Israelites are soldiers of God (2 Cor. vi. 7; Eph. vi. 10; 1 Tim. vi. 12); and the Church of God is a spiritual Army (Cant. vi. 4).

4. a man of every tribe] Thus there were twelve Heads of Israel, besides Moses and Aaron; fourteen in all, as there were twelve Apostles besides Paul and Barnabas (Ainsworth).

The heads of the tribes are arranged in the following order: first, the sons of Leah (Reuben, Simeon, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun); next the sons of Rachel (Joseph, i. e., Ephraim and Manasseh, his children—and Benjamin); Dan, the son of Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; Asher, the second, and Gad the first son of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Naphtali, the son of Bilhah. Reuben is placed first, as the firstborn (Gen. xlv. 8), then Simeon his next brother. Levi is omitted, being numbered apart (i. 47—49). Judah and Issachar follow, as Leah's next sons in order (Exod. i. 2, 3). Joseph has a double portion in his two sons (Gen. xlviii. 5, 6; 1 Chron. v. 1, 2). Ephraim, the youngest son, is set before Manasseh the elder (Gen. xlviii. 19, 20). Here are silent practical confirmations of the truth of the narrative of Genesis, embodied in the institutions of the Hebrew Nation. The sons of the free-women are set before the sons of the maid-servants. Dan is the first of the children of the handmaids, as being the eldest (Gen. xxx. 6). Asher, the second son of Zilpah, is named next to Dan, Bilhah's son, and is placed next to his standard (ii. 25. 27). Gad, the firstborn of Leah's handmaid, was joined to the standard of Reuben, Leah's firstborn son (ii. 10—14), and comes next. Naphtali, the son of Bilhah, is named last, and was the last of the tribes which encamped about the Tabernacle (ii. 29).

⁵ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: of the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur. ⁶ Of Simeon; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai. ⁷ Of Judah; Nahshon the son of Amminadab. ⁸ Of Issachar; Nethaneel the son of Zuar. ⁹ Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon. ¹⁰ Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Elishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; Gamaliel the son of Pedabzur. ¹¹ Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideoni. ¹² Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai. ¹³ Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran. ¹⁴ Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of ^d Deuel. ¹⁵ Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan. ¹⁶ These were the renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, ^f heads of thousands in Israel.

¹⁷ And Moses and Aaron took these men which are expressed by their names: ¹⁸ And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls. ¹⁹ As the LORD commanded Moses, so he numbered them in the wilderness of Sinai.

²⁰ And the children of Reuben, Israel's eldest son, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ²¹ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Reuben, were forty and six thousand and five hundred.

²² Of the children of Simeon, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, those that were numbered of them, according to the number of the names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ²³ Those that were numbered of d ch. 2. 14, he is called Reuel.

e ch. 7. 2.

1 Chron. 27. 16.

f Ex. 18. 21, 25.

5. And these are the names] God chooses the twelve chiefs of the tribes, and calls them by name; so Christ chose and called His twelve Apostles (Matt. x. 1; cp. Rom. i. 1); and the Holy Spirit records the names of each.

These are the names, or as it is in the Septuagint, ταῦτα τὰ ὀνόματα, and the Evangelist St. Matthew seems to have intended to point out the analogy between these Twelve Heads and Fathers of the Twelve Tribes of the literal Israel, and the twelve Apostles, the twelve Heads of the spiritual Israel,—the Universal Church of God—by adopting these words, and prefixing them as a title to the list of the Apostles, τῶν δώδεκα ἀποστόλων τὰ ὀνόματα ἐστὶ ταῦτα (Matt. x. 2).

In all the lists of the Apostles in the Gospels, St. Peter stands first; and Judas Iseariot, "who was the traitor," stands last. See Matt. x. 2—4; Mark iii. 16—19; Luke vi. 14—16.

In the list of these Twelve Heads of the Twelve Tribes the first name is Elizur (see v. 5); the last name is Ahira.

The first name Elizur bears a remarkable analogy to Peter. It signifies My God is my Rock (Gesen. 51); and it might almost seem to be a prophetic interpretation of the meaning of that name. Peter signifies a stone (John i. 42), and Peter was a genuine stone, hewn out of Christ, and grounded upon Him, whom He confessed to be the Son of God, and who is the Rock of the Church. See below, on Matt. xvi. 18.

Ahira, who stands last, signifies my brother is evil, or brother of evil, i. e., evil brother (Gesen. 32), and such a name is an appropriate typical appellation of him whom Christ chose as a brother; "His own familiar friend, whom He trusted, who did eat of His bread, and who lifted up his heel against Him" (Ps. xli. 9), and became a traitor.

— Elizur] My God is a rock. See the foregoing note.

— Shedeur] Sender forth of light.

— Shelumiel] God is my reward.

— Zurishaddai] The Almighty is my rock.

7. Nahshon] Diviner; he was the father of Salmon, the husband of Rahab of Jericho, and the progenitor of Boaz of Bethlehem, the husband of Ruth; and hence his name is in the genealogy of Christ, who came from Judah through him (Matt. i. 4; Luke iii. 32).

— Amminadab] My people is willing. Cp. Ps. cx. 3, where these words occur, "Thy people (shall be) free-willings in the day of thy power."

8. Nethaneel] Gift of God.

9. Eliab] My God is my father.

10. Elishama] My God hears.

— Gamaliel] God is my reward.

— Pedabzur] The rock redeems.

11. Abidan] My father is judge.

12. Ahiezer] My brother is help.

13. Pagiel] Perhaps it may mean, God is my advocate. Cp. Isa. liiii. 12 (Ainsworth).

14. Eliasaph] God hath added.

15. Ahira] Brother of evil. See above, on v. 5.

16. These were the renowned] Or called; ἐπίκλητοι, Sept. — thousands] Heb. alaphim, from alaph, to join together; and therefore it signifies families (Judg. vi. 15), which is its meaning here. Cp. Gesen., p. 54. Keil, p. 185.

20. all that were able to go forth to war] The Tabernacle had now been set up; the Levitical Law, moral and ceremonial, had been promulgated by God. The twelve tribes of Israel, marshalled under their twelve Chiefs, were now to be mustered to go forth on their march to Canaan, to overcome their enemies. So the Church Universal, organized by Christ under the Apostles, received a commission from Him to go forth on its march as a spiritual army to subdue the world.

21. Reuben] the firstborn in number. He is only the seventh in order.

The numbers are as follows:—

1. Judah . . .	74,600	7. Reuben . . .	46,500
2. Dan . . .	62,700	8. Gad . . .	45,650
3. Simeon . . .	59,300	9. Asher . . .	41,500
4. Zebulun . . .	57,400	10. Ephraim . . .	40,500
5. Issachar . . .	54,400	11. Benjamin . . .	35,400
6. Naphtali . . .	53,400	12. Manasseh . . .	32,200

It is observable that in these numbers of the Tribes there is only one—that of Gad—which is not formed of thousands and hundreds. Gad alone consists of thousands, hundreds, and them, even of the tribe of Simeon, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

²⁴ Of the children of Gad, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ²⁵ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Gad, were forty and five thousand six hundred and fifty.

²⁶ Of the children of Judah, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ²⁷ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Judah, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

²⁸ Of the children of Issachar, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ²⁹ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Issachar, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

³⁰ Of the children of Zebulun, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ³¹ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Zebulun, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

³² Of the children of Joseph, namely, of the children of Ephraim, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ³³ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Ephraim, were forty thousand and five hundred.

³⁴ Of the children of Manasseh, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ³⁵ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Manasseh, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

³⁶ Of the children of Benjamin, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ³⁷ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Benjamin, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

³⁸ Of the children of Dan, by their generations, after their families, by the five tens; but in the numbers of the firstborn (see iii. 43) we have thousands, hundreds, tens, and units. Some expositors have supposed that the calculation was only an approximate one, and not designed to be strictly accurate; but why should there not be precision in one case as well as the other?

May there not rather be something of a moral and spiritual significance here? The Twelve Tribes, taken together, were a type of the Universal Apostolic Church. The number of the male soldiers at the Exodus had been 600,000 (Exod. xii. 37), and now they are 603,550; a round number, formed of twelve round numbers—perhaps a sign of God's benediction, as in Deut. xxxiii. 17, and a symbol of the symmetry and fulness of the Universal Church, sealed with the Seal of God: see Rev. vii. 4—8, where are no broken numbers; and cp. Baumgarten, p. 256. The same thing is observable in the number of God's own Tribe, the Levites, and of their constituent families (see iii. 22. 28 34. 39; and on iii. 43).

²⁶ Judah] of whom Shiloh was to come (Gen. xlix. 10), is the most numerous (Theodoret).

³² of Joseph] "Joseph is a fruitful bough" (Gen. xlix. 22). His two sons are adopted into the number of tribes, "as Reuben and Simeon they shall be mine," Gen. xlviii. 5; and they are more in number together than any tribe but Judah.

Thus God fulfilled the Patriarch's prophecy; and Moses and Aaron acted upon the directions of Jacob, by incorporating Ephraim and Manasseh among the tribes. Here is an evidence of truth and consistency in the prophecy and the history.

³³ Ephraim] is placed before his elder brother Manasseh in number and rank: he is made a standard-bearer (ii. 18). And so the prophecy of Jacob was fulfilled: "his younger brother shall be greater than he" (Gen. xlviii. 19).

³⁸ Dan] sixth in birth, but second in number. "Dan shall judge his people" (Gen. xlix. 16). He is placed the first of the sons of the handmaids, and is made a standard-bearer (ii. 25); but he afterwards fell away by idolatry (Judg. xviii. 1—31); and as a representative of idolatry and apostasy, is omitted from the list of the sealed in the Apocalypse: see the note on Rev.

house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ³⁹ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Dan, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

⁴⁰ Of the children of Asher, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ⁴¹ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Asher, were forty and one thousand and five hundred.

⁴² Of the children of Naphtali, throughout their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war; ⁴³ Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

⁴⁴ ^g These are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men: each one was for the house of his fathers. ⁴⁵ So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel; ⁴⁶ Even all they that were numbered were ^h six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

⁴⁷ But ⁱ the Levites after the tribe of their fathers were not numbered among them. ⁴⁸ For the Lord had spoken unto Moses, saying, ⁴⁹ ^k Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel: ⁵⁰ ^l But thou shalt appoint the Levites over the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof; and they shall minister unto it, ^m and shall encamp round about the tabernacle. ⁵¹ ⁿ And when the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down: and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: ^o and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death. ⁵² And the children of Israel shall pitch their tents, ^p every

g ch. 26. 64.

h Ex. 38. 26.
See Ex. 12. 37.
ch. 2. 32. & 26. 51.i ch. 2. 33.
See ch. 3. & 4.
& 26. 57.
1 Chron. 6. & 21. 6.
k ch. 2. 33. &
26. 62.l Ex. 38. 21.
ch. 3. 7. 8. & 4.
15, 25, 26, 27, 33.m ch. 3. 23, 29,
35, 38.
n ch. 10. 17, 21.o ch. 3. 10, 38, & 18. 22.

p ch. 2. 2, 34.

vii. 1—8, p. 197, where the order in which the tribes are enumerated in various places of Scripture is exhibited in a tabular view.

⁴⁶ six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty] On the marvellous increase of the Israelites in Egypt, see above, note, Gen. xli. 27. Exod. i. 7. 12; xii. 37. It is observed by Theodoret here (Qu. i.), that one of the purposes for which Almighty God ordered the people to be numbered was to show the truth of His own divine promise to Abraham, "I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore" (Gen. xxii. 17; cp. Isa. li. 2). This increase was more remarkable as a fruit of God's blessing, because, on the contrary, after their rebellions against God in the wilderness, their number at the end of forty years was less than it had been when this census was taken: see below, xxvi. 51. Such were the fruits of disobedience.

Here also is a proof of truth in the history. If (as some allege) Moses has exaggerated the number of the Israelites at the Exodus (see on Exod. xii. 37), how is it, that he tells us that they decreased under his own leadership in the Wilderness?

The sum of the numbers of the persons here specified coincides with that assigned to the persons and half-shekels which had been contributed by them in Exod. xxx. 14, and xxxviii. 25, 26. The half-shekels were paid before the Tabernacle was set up, which was "reared up in the first month of the second year." Cp. Exod. xxxviii. 25 with xl. 17.

Preparations had been made for the enumeration of the people, by the adoption of Jethro's recommendation (Exod. xviii. 25); and it has been supposed by some that all that was now done was to analyze the population already numbered by classifying them in families.

In the present numbering, the Levites, 22,000 men (i. 47; iii. 39), were not counted; and probably they were not included in the former census. See Kalisch on Exodus, p. 608.

Some suppose that the Levites were included in the former census, as not having been dedicated to God's service; and that the coincidence of numbers in the two lists was divinely ordered, in order to show that nothing is lost by giving to God. On this subject, see Hävernick, Einleitung, § 171 (or p. 306, English edition). Kurtz, Hist. of the Old Covenant, iii. p. 201. Keil, Comment. p. 175; and McCaul's Reply to Colenso, pp. 39—46.
92

⁴⁷ The Levites—were not numbered] that is, not numbered now; but the number of every male of them, from a month old and upward, is set down in another place (iii. 39).

They were not designed "to go forth to war" (cp. Exod. vii. 4), as all the other tribes were, who are counted from twenty years old, but to serve God in His sanctuary (Exod. xxxviii. 21); and they were not subject to taxation for the support of the sanctuary, as the others were (Exod. xxx. 14; xxxviii. 25).

Such is the condition of the Church militant on earth: there is a difference of condition and duty in it between the Clergy and Laity (see Clemens Rom., i. 40). But in the Church glorified in heaven, there will be no such distinction. Accordingly, Levi is numbered among the spiritual Israel of saints glorified in the Apocalypse: see Rev. vii. 7, and note there.

⁵¹ the stranger] that is, not of the tribe of Levi. Cp. xvi. 40; xviii. 22. Uzzah was punished for breaking this law (1 Chron. xiii. 10).

⁵² every man by his own camp] Cp. ii. 2. Since God's command was so peremptory and precise, with regard to the order and encampment of the literal Israel in their journeyings in the wilderness, it may be concluded that He is not indifferent to the order and discipline of the Spiritual Israel, the Church of God. Christ marshalled the crowds in order, before He fed them (see Mark vi. 40). "Let all things be done unto edifying;" "Let every thing be done decently and in order;" "God is not the Author of Confusion, but of Peace, as in all the Churches of the Saints," is the language of the Holy Ghost in the New Testament (1 Cor. xiv. 26. 33. 40).

man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts. ⁵³ ^a But the Levites shall pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there be no ^r wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel: ^s and the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of testimony. ⁵⁴ And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

II. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, ² ^a Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house: [†] ^b far off about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.

³ And on the east side toward the rising of the sun shall they of the standard of the camp of Judah pitch throughout their armies: and ^c Nahshon the son of Amminadab shall be captain of the children of Judah. ⁴ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred. ⁵ And those that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Issachar: and Nethaneel the son of Zuar shall be captain of the children of Issachar. ⁶ And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred. ⁷ Then the tribe of Zebulun: and Eliab the son of Helon shall be captain of the children of Zebulun. ⁸ And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred. ⁹ All that were numbered in the camp of Judah were an hundred thousand and fourscore thousand and six thousand and four hundred, throughout their armies. ^d These shall first set forth.

¹⁰ On the south side shall be the standard of the camp of Reuben according to their armies: and the captain of the children of Reuben shall be Elizur the son of Shedeur. ¹¹ And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were forty and six thousand and five hundred. ¹² And those which pitch by him shall be the tribe of Simeon: and the captain of the children of Simeon shall be Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai. ¹³ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred. ¹⁴ Then the tribe of Gad: and the captain of the sons of Gad shall be Eliasaph the son of || Reuel. ¹⁵ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and five thousand and six hundred and fifty. ¹⁶ All that were numbered in the camp of Reuben were an hundred thousand and fifty and one thousand

q ver. 50.

r Lev. 10. 6. ch. 8. 19. & 16. 46. & 18. 5.

1 Sam. 6. 19. s ch. 3. 7, 8. & 8. 24, 25, 26. & 18. 3, 4, 5. & 31. 30, 47.

1 Chron. 23. 32. 2 Chron. 13. 11. & ch. 1. 52.

† Heb. over against.

b Josh. 3. 4.

c ch. 10. 14. Ruth 4. 20. 1 Chron. 2. 10. Matt. 1. 4. Luke 3. 32, 33.

d ch. 10. 14.

|| Deut. ch. 1. 14. & 7. 42, 47. & 10. 20.

— every man by his own standard] See ii. 2.

CH. II. 2. Every man—shall pitch by his own standard] Having formed the muster-roll of the armies of Israel, the Divine Legislator now gives order for their encampment.

The principal tribes on the four sides of the camp, respectively, were Judah at the East; Reuben at the South; Ephraim at the West; Dan on the North. The standards of these four tribes are thus stated by Hebrew Expositors, Aben Ezra, Chazkuni, and others (see Mede's Works, pp. 437. 594, and Lightfoot's Works, i. p. 2058, and Ainsworth, p. 10; Lamy de Tabernac. p. 328, and note below on Rev. iv. 4, p. 183):

Of Judah, a lion (ep. Rev. v. 5, "the Lion of the tribe of Judah," and Gen. xlix. 8);

Of Reuben, a man;

Of Ephraim, an ox (ep. Deut. xxxiii. 17, "His glory is like the firstling of his bullock");

Of Dan, an eagle; and these four standards corresponded to the forms of the living creatures in the vision of Ezekiel (i. 26; x. 1); and of St. John in the Apocalypse (iv. 4—6); which represent the fourfold fulness of Christ, as King, as Man, as our Sacrifice, and as rising from the dead, and as preached in the fourfold Gospel to the four corners of the earth. See the passages from S. Irenaeus, S. Jerome, and others, quoted below in the note on Rev. v. 4, 5, p. 183.

— with the ensign] In Hebrew it is in the plural, othoth, from oth, a sign, from avah, to mark (Gesen., 19. 24). Each tribe had its degel, or banner (from dagal, to cover; Gesen. 189), and each family had its oth, or ensign.

According to some, Simeon had as an ensign a city; Gad, a troop; Manasseh, a unicorn (Deut. xxxiii. 17); Benjamin, a wolf (Gen. xlix. 27); Asher, an olive-tree (Gen. xlix. 20); Naphtali, a hind (Gen. xlix. 21). Cp. Lamy de Tabernaclo, p. 328.

3. on the east side—Judah] From whom came Jesus Christ, "the Lion of the tribe of Judah," "the Root and Offspring of David, the bright and morning star" (Rev. v. 5; xxii. 16); "the Day-spring from on high" (Luke i. 78); "the Sun of Righteousness" (Mal. iv. 2). Judah went foremost in the march (x. 14).

The name given to the saints of God—the children of light—in the Apocalypse is, "the kings from the East" (Rev. vii. 2; xvi. 12); or as the Psalmist expresses it, "from the womb of the morning" (Ps. cx. 3). Cp. Theodoret here, Qu. 3.

5. Issachar] Issachar and Zebulun, the brethren of Judah, are associated with Judah. So Ephraim and Manasseh, the two sons of Joseph, are associated with Benjamin his brother. And Reuben is joined to Simeon his brother, and Dan is also associated with Naphtali his brother. And so in the Christian Church we see brethren associated together as champions and standard-bearers of that spiritual Army. Christ chose three pairs of brethren to be among the twelve Apostles. See below, on Matt. iv. 18; x. 2—4.

10. on the south sides shall be the standard of the camp of Reuben] with Simeon his brother, and Gad, the son of his mother's handmaid.

14. Reuel] rather Deuel. See i. 14; vii. 42; x. 20; and this is the reading here of 118 MSS. in Kennicott, and De Rossi, and of the Samaritan, Vulg., and Arabic.

e ch. 10. 18.

and four hundred and fifty, throughout their armies. *And they shall set forth in the second rank.

f ch. 10. 17, 21.

¹⁷ ^f Then the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward with the camp of the Levites in the midst of the camp: as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place by their standards.

¹⁸ On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Ammihud. ¹⁹ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty thousand and five hundred. ²⁰ And by him shall be the tribe of Manasseh: and the captain of the children of Manasseh shall be Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur. ²¹ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred. ²² Then the tribe of Benjamin: and the captain of the sons of Benjamin shall be Abidan the son of Gideon. ²³ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred. ²⁴ All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were an hundred thousand and eight thousand and an hundred, throughout their armies. ²⁵ And they shall go forward in the third rank.

g ch. 10. 22

²⁵ The standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side by their armies: and the captain of the children of Dan shall be Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai. ²⁶ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred. ²⁷ And those that encamp by him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the captain of the children of Asher shall be Pagiel the son of Ocran. ²⁸ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and one thousand and five hundred. ²⁹ Then the tribe of Naphtali: and the captain of the children of Naphtali shall be Ahira the son of Enan. ³⁰ And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred. ³¹ All they that were numbered in the camp of Dan were an hundred thousand and fifty and seven thousand and six hundred. ^h They shall go hindmost with their standards.

h ch. 10. 23.

³² These are those which were numbered of the children of Israel by the house of their fathers: ⁱ all those that were numbered of the camps throughout their hosts were six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty. ³³ But ^k the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses. ³⁴ And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses: ^l so they pitched by their

i Ex. 38. 26.
ch. 1. 46. & 11. 21.

k ch. 1. 47.

l ch. 24. 2, 5, 6.

17. Then the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward] Thus according to God's appointment six Tribes encamped before the Ark, and six after it, and it might be truly said of the ancient Church, "God is in the midst of it" (Ps. lxxiv. 5), when she was stationary; and when she moved, God's presence, which was over the Ark, led the way; so, both in quietness and in action, Christ is with His Church, to comfort, enlighten, and lead her on her way: see below, Num. x. 33.

18. On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim] with his brother Manasseh and with Benjamin; and so Joseph and Benjamin, the two sons of Jacob, and his beloved wife Rachel, were knit together by the strongest ties.

The arrangement of the army of Miltiades on the field of Marathon, according to tribes (Herod., vi. 111), bore a striking testimony to the wisdom of the arrangement of the itinerant camp of Israel in the wilderness.

25. The standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side by their armies] with Asher the son of Zilpah, the handmaid of Leah, and with Naphtali, his own brother.

Perhaps Asher was most to the east of these three, and thus brought near to the children of Leah, the mistress of his mother Zilpah, who were on the east; and Dan, being in the centre, Naphtali would be to the south, and thus be brought near to Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin, the children of Rachel, the mistress of his mother Bilhah.

Dan, Asher, and Naphtali, three children of the handmaids, were on the northern and hindmost side.

26. Threescore and two thousand and seven hundred] This number has seemed incredible to some, who have assumed that Dan had only one son, because only one, Hushim, is mentioned (Gen. xlv. 23; cp. Num. xxvi. 42); but it must be carefully borne in mind, that it was no purpose of the Author of the Pentateuch to give complete genealogies. See iii. 27.

34. so they pitched by their standards, and so they set forward] according to all that the Lord commanded Moses. And the Holy Spirit described their order by the mouth of the prophet—"How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel! as the valleys are they spread forth, as gardens by the river side" (Num. xxiv. 5, 6).

If we compare the order of the encampment of Israel in the wilderness, with the description of the Church glorified in the Apocalypse, we shall see good reason to believe that in this divinely-instituted arrangement, there is a reflexion of the heavenly City. The Holy Spirit Himself seems to suggest that comparison, by calling the beloved City, passing upward to glory, "the camp of the saints" (Rev. xx. 9).

standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers.

III. ¹ These also are the generations of Aaron and Moses in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai. ² And these are the names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the ^a firstborn, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar. ³ These are the names of the sons of Aaron, ^b the priests which were anointed, † whom he consecrated to minister in the priest's office. ⁴ And Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office in the sight of Aaron their father.

⁵ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁶ Bring the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him. ⁷ And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do ^c the service of the tabernacle. ⁸ And they shall keep all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle. ⁹ And † thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel. ¹⁰ And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, ^e and they shall wait on their priest's office: ^h and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

¹¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹² And I, behold, ⁱ I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the firstborn that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine; ¹³ Because ^k all the firstborn are mine; ^l for on the day that I smote

a Ex. 6. 23.

b Ex. 28. 41.

Lev. 8.

† Heb. whic^hhand he filled.

c Lev. 10. 1.

ch. 26. 61.

1 Chron. 24. 2.

d ch. 8. 6. & 19. 2.

e See ch. 1. 50. & 8. 11, 15, 24, 26.

f ch. 8. 19. & 18. 6.

g ch. 18. 7. h ver. 38. ch. 1. 51. & 16. 40.

i ver. 41. ch. 8. 16. & 18. 6.

k Ex. 13. 2. Lev. 27. 26.

ch. 8. 16. Luke 2. 23.

1 Ex. 13. 12, 15. ch. 8. 17.

The heavenly City "lieth foursquare" (Rev. xxi. 16. Cp. Ezek. xlviii. 20). The form also of the encampment of Israel was quadrilateral. And as the Tabernacle was protected on its four sides, as by a wall, by the twelve tribes of Israel encamped under their standards and banners, so the heavenly city is revealed as having a wall with twelve gates, and names written thereon of the twelve tribes of Israel, and the wall hath twelve foundations, and in them were the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb (Rev. xxi. 12), who are the Twelve Patriarchs of the spiritual Israel. And as there were three Tribes on each of the four sides of the camp of Israel, so there are three Gates on each of the four sides of the heavenly city (Rev. xxi. 13). Thus the literal Israel was a figure of the Israel of God—the Church glorified.

CH. III. 1. These also are the generations of Aaron and Moses] Not only their lineal descendants, but their kindred. (Cp. Keil here, and on Gen. ii. 4; cp. Gen. v. 1.) Aaron is placed before Moses here, as the elder, and as the head of the priestly family, which occupies the first place here, and to which the Levites, now about to be enumerated, were subordinate.

2. these are the names of the sons of Aaron] by his wife, Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab (Exod. vi. 23).

3. whom he consecrated] that is, who were consecrated (see Lev. viii. 1—13), as the words are rendered by Onkelos; and the Sept. and Vulg. and Syriac have the plural number, "they consecrated."

4. Nadab and Abihu died] Lev. x. 1, 2; Num. xxvi. 61; 1 Chron. xxiv. 1, 2.

— in the sight of Aaron their father] While he was yet alive (cp. Gen. xi. 28). From them descended the families of the Priests, where David divided into twenty-four courses, sixteen of Eleazar, and eight of Ithamar (2 Chron. xxiv. 3).

7. they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation] They shall do what he commands them (see Lev. xviii. 30), and serve God and His people Israel (2 Chron. xxxv. 3). Cp. St. Paul's words to the Corinthians (2 Cor. iv. 5), "Ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake."

8. the instruments] The vessels—σκεῦη, Sept.; 'vasa, Vulg. 9. thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron and to his sons] Here we have three orders, the High Priest, the Priests, and Levites; and correspondent to them are the Bishop, Priests, and Deacons in the Church of Christ. Cp. Clem., Epist. i. 40. S. Ignat. ad Phil. § 9. S. Jerome ad Nepotian. Ep. 52. S. Cyril de Ador. xiii. p. 454. Procop. Gaz. here.

— are wholly given] Heb. nethinim (whence the name Nethinims, ch. viii. 19), from nathan, to give, which word is repeated here, they are given, given. So in the Christian dispensation. "God gave some Apostles, some Prophets" (Eph. iv. 11), and they are called "gifts to men" (Eph. iv. 8).

10. the stranger] That is, not of Aaron's seed (see xvi. 40).

12. I have taken the Levites] What specially commended them for this choice was their zeal for God, as described Exod. xxxii. 26. 29. Cp. Deut. xxxiii. 7.

The people of Israel committed at that time a great sin; and their firstborn were surrendered, and as it were renounced by God, and the Levites, who then distinguished themselves by holy zeal and courage for His honour and worship, were taken in their stead into His service.

— from among the children of Israel instead of all the firstborn that openeth the matrix] Before this separation of the Levites, the firstborn of every family had been sanctified to God, immediately after the Exodus, according to the Divine command (Exod. xiii. 2. 12. 15), "Sanctify unto me all the firstborn, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel: it is mine. The males shall be the Lord's. . . . And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would hardly let us go, that the Lord slew all the firstborn in the land of Egypt: therefore I sacrifice to the Lord all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the firstborn of my children I redeem."

Accordingly it is said here by God Himself (v. 13), "All the firstborn are mine; for on the day that I smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, I hallowed unto me all the firstborn in Israel, both man and beast: mine shall they be."

— firstborn that openeth the matrix] In Hebrew, becor peler rechem. These are important words. Becor is a all the firstborn in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the firstborn in Israel, both man and beast: mine shall they be: I am the LORD.

¹⁴ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying, ¹⁵ Number the children of Levi after the house of their fathers, by their families: ^m every male from a month old and upward shalt thou number them.

¹⁶ And Moses numbered them according to the † word of the LORD, as he was commanded. ¹⁷ ⁿ And these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari. ¹⁸ And these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; ^o Libni, and Shimei. ¹⁹ And the sons of Kohath by their families; ^p Amram, and Izechar, Hebron, and Uzziel. ²⁰ ^q And the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli, and Mushi. These are the families of the Levites according to the house of their fathers.

²¹ Of Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites. ²² Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them were seven thousand and five hundred.

²³ ^r The families of the Gershonites shall pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

²⁴ And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael. ²⁵ And ^s the charge of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation shall be ^t the tabernacle, and ^u the tent, ^x the covering thereof, and ^y the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, ^z the hangings of the court, and ^a the curtain for the door of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and ^b the cords of it for all the service thereof.

²⁷ ^c And of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izecharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites. ²⁸ In the number of all the males,

m ver. 39.
ch. 26. 62.

† Heb. mouth.

n Gen. 46. 11.
Ex. 6. 16. ch.

26. 57.
1 Chron. 6. 1, 16.
& 23. 6.
o Ex. 6. 17.

p Ex. 6. 18.
q Ex. 6. 19.

r ch. 1. 53.

s ch. 4. 24, 25, 26.

t Ex. 25. 9.
u Ex. 26. 1.
x Ex. 26. 7, 14.
y Ex. 26. 36.
z Ex. 27. 9.
a Ex. 27. 16.
b Ex. 35. 18.

c 1 Chron. 26. 23.

masculine substantive from bacar, to cleave, to break forth, hence to be early (compare the kindred root bakar, whence boker, the daybreak: Gesen. 120. 136); hence it signifies a firstborn son. The word peter is from patar, to open (Gesen. 672); and the words here used, col becor peter rechem, correspond precisely to those of the Gospel of St. Luke, πάν ἄρσεν διανοίγον μήτραν (Luke ii. 23), and find their perfect realization in Christ, of whom those words are there spoken, and of whom it is said, "I will make Him My firstborn, higher than the Kings of the earth" (Ps. lxxxix. 27). He is the first-begotten, and only-begotten of the Father (Heb. i. 6); the first-begotten of every creature (Col. i. 15); the first-begotten, and only-begotten of Mary (Matt. i. 25; Luke ii. 7); the first-begotten from the dead (Col. i. 18; Rev. i. 5); the firstborn among many brethren (Rom. viii. 29); the firstborn of the new creation, of whom the whole "Church of the firstborn" is called, whose names are written in heaven (Heb. xii. 23. Cp. James i. 18); and they wait on Him, who is their true Aaron, their great High Priest (as the Levites waited on the High Priest), and He is also their all-perfect sacrifice. "These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth; these were redeemed from among men" (as the firstborn were), "being the firstfruits unto God and to the Lamb" (Rev. xiv. 4).

13. mine shall they be: I am the LORD] So the Ancient Versions: these words are rendered by some modern biblical scholars, "they shall be to me, to me the Lord" (Gesen., Keil): cp. vv. 41. 45.

15. Number] Literally, visit.

— after the house of their fathers] not of their mother, because if a woman of the tribe of Levi married a man of another tribe, her son was not a Levite (Maimon).

— every male from a month old] because they were in the place of the firstborn, who were redeemed at that age (xvii. 15, 16).

23. The families of the Gershonites--westward] The Ko-hathites were southward, v. 23; the Merarites northward, v. 35; and to make up the square, Moses and Aaron with the Priests encamped eastward (v. 38).

27. of Kohath] or Kehath; Kadθ (Sept.), Caath (Vulg.). Kohath, the second son of Levi, was distinguished above his two brethren, Gershon and Merari, in several particulars: of him came Aaron, Moses, and Miriam, and all the Priests (Exod. vi. 18. 20. Num. xxvi. 58, 59), and his families had the charge of the holy things within the sanctuary, the Ark, the Table of Shewbread, the Golden Candlestick, and the Altars (v. 31); his children were more numerous than those of his brethren; and in the distribution of the Promised Land they had twenty-three out of the forty-eight cities of Levites (Josh. xxi.).

27, 28. the family of the Amramites--all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred] Hence it has been inferred by some, that Amram, the father of Moses, was a different person from Amram, the son of Levi; and that Moses has omitted several generations between the two. For, it is urged, since the Kohathites, consisting of four houses, number 8600 males, therefore the Amramites in all probability, being one of those four houses, amounted to a fourth part of them, i. e. to 2150 males. Moses himself had only two sons (Exod. xviii. 3, 4). And therefore if Amram, the father of Moses, was also the progenitor of the Amramites, Moses must have had 2147 brothers and nephews. (Tiele, Chronol. A. T. p. 36. Kurtz, ii. 20; and Keil on Exod. pp. 350, 351, and Kalisch, Pref. to Exod. pp. xi—xvii).

But this hypothesis of two Amrams is an arbitrary one, and is opposed to the plain meaning of the Sacred Text. See on Exod. vi. 16. It is grounded also on two gratuitous assumptions:

(1) That the Amramites were a fourth part of the Kohathites. This is nowhere stated.

(2) That we are competent to form an opinion as to the number of the sons of Amram and of his descendants.

Amram lived 137 years (Exod. vi. 20). He may have had from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary. ²⁹ ^d The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch ^{d ch. 1. 53.} on the side of the tabernacle southward. ³⁰ And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

³¹ And ^e their charge shall be ^f the ark, and ^g the table, and ^h the candlestick, and ⁱ the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and ^k the hanging, and all the service thereof. ³² And Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary. ^{e ch. 4. 15. f Ex. 25. 10. g Ex. 25. 23. h Ex. 25. 31. i Ex. 27. 1. & 30. 1. k Ex. 26. 32.}

³³ Of Merari was the family of the Mahlites, and the family of the Mushites: these are the families of Merari. ³⁴ And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred. ³⁵ And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari was Zuriel the son of Abihail: ¹ these ^{l ch. 1. 53.} shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle northward. ³⁶ And [†] ^m under the custody and charge of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto, ³⁷ And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords. ^{† Heb. the office of the charge. m ch. 4. 31, 32.}

³⁸ ⁿ But those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, even before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, ^o keeping the charge of the sanctuary ^p for the charge of the children of Israel; and ^q the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death. ³⁹ ^r All that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males from a month old and upward, were twenty and two thousand. ^{n ch. 1. 53. o ch. 18. 5. p ver. 7. 8. q ver. 10. r See ch. 26. 62.}

numerous sons. "Amram" (observes Dr. McCaul on Colenso, p. 110, 9th ed.) "must have had other children besides Moses and Aaron," and he assigns good reason for the opinion. And at a time when the Israelites "increased abundantly," literally, "swarmed," like fish, this is highly probable.

The census in the text was made when Moses was certainly younger than two of Amram's children. He was eighty years old. Suppose Amram married at twenty, and had a numerous issue, how many "brothers and nephews," and also grand-nephews and great-grand-nephews might not Moses have had, when he was eighty years old, i. e. when the census was taken?

It is important to remember that the genealogies in the Bible are not intended to be complete; and that no inference can be drawn from the silence of the Pentateuch, as to the non-existence of other children besides those that are mentioned. Cp. McCaul, ibid. p. 111.

^{30.} the chief shall be Elizaphan] who was of the youngest family of the Kohathites, and yet was preferred to be chief above his brethren; which the Hebrew Expositors suppose to have given occasion to the jealousy and rebellion of "Korah, the son of Izhar," of the elder branch. See below, xvi. 1.

^{32.} the oversight] Heb. pekkudah, visitation, rendered by Sept. επισκοπή, iv. 16; xvi. 29, and elsewhere; whence the word Episcopé has passed into the New Testament, to describe the Episcopal Office. See on Acts i. 20.

^{34.} six thousand and two hundred] So the Heb. MSS. and the Ancient Versions, with the exception of the Septuagint, which has six thousand and fifty—a confusion of the letter ν for σ. Origen introduced the words "two hundred and" before "fifty" from some of the other ancient Greek Versions.

^{38.} Moses, and Aaron] Moses was king in Jeshurun (Deut. xxxiii. 5); and Aaron, his brother, was the Priest (cp. Ps. lxxvii. 10); and this union of Moses and Aaron on the East and foremost side of the Tabernacle, figured the union of the Kingdom and Priesthood in Christ; and represented also that harmonious action which ought to subsist between the Temporality and Spirituality in His Church.

There is a pause in the MSS. between Moses and Aaron, to show, as the Hebrew expositors say, that Moses pitched in one place by himself, and Aaron with his sons in another place by himself.

^{39.} Aaron] There are some distinctive marks in the MSS. over Aaron's name here; indicating (says Jarchi) that Aaron himself was not one of the 22,000 who are numbered. The Syriac and Samaritan texts, and twelve MSS., omit Aaron's name, probably because the copyist thought that Moses only numbered the people.

— twenty and two thousand] Two questions arise here:

(1) This total does not coincide with the sum of the three constituent families of Levites specified above, viz. :—

Gershonites (v. 22)	7500
Kohathites (v. 28)	8600
Merarites (v. 34)	6200

Total 22,300

How is this discrepancy to be explained?

Some recent critics have supposed that there is an error of the copyists in the manuscripts here, and that we ought to read 8300 in v. 28 for 8600. Cp. Kurtz, iii. p. 202.

But this supposition seems to be too bold, being grounded on a presumptuous error, not only in the extant MSS., but also in all the MSS. from which the ancient versions were made, which agree with the extant MSS., except in a slight particular (see v. 34), and the total sum is shown to be correct by what is stated in v. 46.

Even if we could explain the cause of the difference, yet that difference itself is rather an evidence of truth than of error. A forger would have taken care that there should be no such discrepancy between the several items and the total; and if there were any, he would have taken care to account for it. But Moses, being conscious of his own veracity, and knowing all the facts of the case, states them unreservedly, and leaves a semblance of inconsistency on the surface of the narrative.

The Hebrew Expositors say, that the 300 which make the overplus were themselves firstborn, and were therefore already

s ver. 15.

t ver. 12, 45.

⁴⁰ And the LORD said unto Moses, * Number all the firstborn of the males of the children of Israel from a month old and upward, and take the number of their names. ⁴¹ * And thou shalt take the Levites for me (I am the LORD) instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel; and the cattle of the Levites instead of all the firstlings among the cattle of the children of Israel. ⁴² And Moses numbered, as the LORD commanded him, all the firstborn among the children of Israel. ⁴³ And all the firstborn males by the number of names, from a month old and upward, of those that were numbered of them, were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen.

dedicated to the Lord as such (Exod. xiii. 2; xxxiv. 20), and consequently not taken into the account.

This opinion of the Hebrew interpreters, which has been adopted by Tirinus, Munster, Oleaster, Castalio, Bp. Patrick, Lilienthal, Hävernick, and others, seems to be correct, and may safely be accepted, if it be supposed that those 300 represent the firstborn among the Levites, who had been born since the command given by God to sanctify the firstborn to Him (see above, on v. 9). These were already His, and it could not be said that they would fairly be set in the scale against the firstborn, so as to be taken as any part of compensation for them, since they themselves were firstborn; and therefore they must be excepted from the number of the Levites in that particular respect, for which they are specified in this verse, as is clear from what follows immediately,—"Number all the firstborn of the males of the children of Israel from a month old and upward . . . and thou shalt take the Levites for me (I am the LORD) instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel."

At the same time, inasmuch as these 300 were Levites, they were properly inserted in the lists of the three constituent races, the Gershonites, the Kohathites, and the Merarites, which lists were made independently of the Divine command "to take the Levites in place of the firstborn."

(2) The second question is this:

How happened it that the males of the tribe of Levi, of a month old and upward, amounted only to so small a number as 22,000; or, taking the aggregate of the three constituent families, 22,300?

The tribe of Judah numbered 74,600; the tribe of Dan 62,700; and the least numerous of the other ten tribes, Manasseh, reckoned 32,200; and this disproportion between Levi and any other tribe will appear greater, when we consider that all the males of Levi, from a month old, were numbered; whereas the numbers of the other tribes represent the males above twenty years old: so that to compare Levi and any other tribe, the population of Levi must be depressed to about 13,000. See Knobel; Baumgarten, pp. 258—264. Keil, p. 179. Kurtz, p. 203.

One observation naturally occurs here. This remarkable smallness in the numbers of the tribe of Levi is an evidence of the honesty of Moses. It is a proof that he had no wish to represent his own tribe as "great in Israel." Rather his language resembles the modest tone of Saul in his best days, "Am not I of the smallest of the tribes of Israel?" (1 Sam. ix. 21.)

We may also remark the consistency of the sacred records with regard to the tribe of Levi.

It is the smallest in number here; it produces only 8580 men fit for the service of God (iv. 48); and even in the reign of David it numbered only 38,000 men of thirty years old and upward, a less number than that of many of the tribes at the Exodus.

What was the cause of the smallness of the number of the Levites?

The following conjecture may perhaps be offered in reply to this question.

The Levites were chosen of God and advanced to the service of the Sanctuary, on account of their zeal on behalf of His honour, when the Divine Majesty and Holiness were outraged by the idolatrous rebellion of the people of Israel—that is, of the other tribes at Horeb (see Deut. xxxiii. 9). At that time the Levites remained faithful, and were zealous for the honour of God, at great peril of their own lives; even when the courage of Aaron failed, and when he swerved from his duty to God and made the molten calf in Horeb; when Moses said, "Who is on the Lord's side?" Then all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

"The children of Levi," we are informed, did then according to the word of Moses, "and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men" (Exod. xxxii. 26, 28). When we consider the circumstances of this act of the Levites,—when we remember that they were the members of only one tribe, and no other is mentioned as taking part with them, and that the other tribes numbered more than half a million men fit for war,—we can hardly imagine that this conflict, in which 3000 men of Israel fell, could have been waged by the Levites without great loss of life on their part. And the reason of their selection by God as His soldiers and servants was, that they hazarded their lives for Him; and (may we not reasonably suppose?) because a large number of them fell as Martyrs for Him.

Simeon and Levi were brethren; they had displayed their furious zeal together at Shechem (Gen. xxxiv. 25—30). The Simeonites were reduced to a very small number at the end of the wanderings in the wilderness—viz., from 59,300 to 22,200, after thirty-eight years (ep. i. 23; xxv. 14; xxvi. 14). This remarkable diminution of the tribe of Simeon has been accounted for by the ravages of the plague, which arose on account of the sin of Baal-peor, in which Zimri, the son of Salu, a prince of "a chief house of the Simeonites," is recorded as unhappily notorious, and was slain by Phinehas, of the family of Levi (see xxv. 6—15).

May not the diminution of the Levites have been due to a far nobler reason? May it not be ascribed to their self-sacrifice for God? The Levites, we know, were chosen by God on account of their zeal for Him in a time of general apostasy (Deut. xxxiii. 9); and those expositors and readers of Holy Scripture, who see in God's dealings with His Church an uniform display of wisdom and love, especially towards those who "fight the good fight of faith" with the sword of the Spirit against Unbelief and Heresy; and who not only act courageously, but also suffer cheerfully for Him in times of rebuke and blasphemy, will see in the divine choice of the Levites, the fewest of all the tribes, and probably made few by Martyrdom for Him, and in their advancement to places of nearness to the Ark of God, and of dearness to the Holy One whose presence dwelt upon it,—a beautiful and instructive picture of God's tenderness to His saints, who spend and are spent for Him (2 Cor. xii. 15), and who lose their life for Him in order that they may preserve it for ever (Matt. x. 39; xvi. 25. Mark viii. 35. Luke ix. 24; xvii. 33); and they may read a token of His wisdom and power in choosing "the weak things of this world to confound the strong, that no flesh should glory in His presence" (1 Cor. i. 27, 28).

For an additional confirmation of the conjecture proposed in this note, on the cause of the smallness of the number of the Levites, see note below, iv. 36, on the smallness of the number of a particular class of the Levites—viz., of the Kohathites, in the prime of life.

The number of the Levites, God's tribe, is 22,000, a perfect number; the number of the firstborn, the human firstborn, contrasted with them, and set against them, is a broken number, 22,273. Cp. above, on i. 21; and see Origen, Hom. 4, who asks, "Do you not suppose that there is some spiritual mystery here? In the number of the Levites there is nothing defective nor redundant." He observes the coincidence between the 22,000 Levites and the twenty-two letters which make up the Hebrew alphabet, and with which the Sacred Text is written; and the twenty-two generations from Adam to Jacob, the father of the twelve tribes; and he expresses an opinion of his age that there were only twenty-two primeval species.

⁴³ all the firstborn males—from a month old and upward—were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen] Only 22,273 firstborn males of a month old and upward, although the whole number of male Israelites above twenty years old was 603,550 (see i. 46); and therefore the whole number of males of a month old and upward could not have been short of 900,000; so that among about forty-five males was only one firstborn.

How is this to be explained?

1. It is to be remembered that the firstborn here spoken of are "males, who open the womb" (see v. 12).

2. Therefore, supposing the firstborn child to be a girl, there would be no firstborn, in the sense of the term as here used.

⁴⁴ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁴⁵ "Take the Levites instead of u ver. 12, 41. all the firstborn among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle; and the Levites shall be mine: I am the LORD.

⁴⁶ And for those that are to be ^{*}redeemed of the two hundred and threescore and thirteen of the firstborn of the children of Israel, ^y which are more than the Levites; ^z Thou shalt even take ^z five shekels apiece by the poll, after the shekel of the sanctuary shalt thou take them: (^a the shekel is twenty gerahs:)

⁴⁸ And thou shalt give the money, wherewith the odd number of them is to be redeemed, unto Aaron and to his sons. ⁴⁹ And Moses took the redemption money of them that were over and above them that were redeemed by the Levites: ⁵⁰ Of the firstborn of the children of Israel took he the money; ^b a thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary: ⁵¹ And Moses ^c gave the money of them that were redeemed unto Aaron and to his sons, according to the word of the LORD, as the LORD commanded Moses.

IV. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, ² Take the sum of the sons of Kohath from among the sons of Levi, after their families, by the house of their fathers, ³ ^a From thirty years old and upward even until fifty years old, all that enter into the host, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

⁴ ^b This shall be the service of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation, about ^c the most holy things: ⁵ And when the camp setteth

3. Suppose also the first child to die before it was a month old, there would be no firstborn in that case.

4. Suppose a man to marry a woman who had been married before, and had had a man-child, he would have no firstborn.

5. Suppose the case of Jacob. He had several wives and many children, yet he had but one firstborn (see Gen. xlix. 3, 4. Deut. xxi. 15); and if Dinah had been born before Reuben, he would have had no firstborn at all, though he had thirteen children.

Such considerations as these have been urged by many learned expositors and critics—e. g., Michaelis de Consibus Hebraicis, § ii. v. Hävernick, Einleitung, § 131, or p. 308, Engl. ed. Kurtz, ii. 345, or iii. 205, Engl. ed. McCaul on Colenso, pp. 84—90.

But, with all due respect for these distinguished names, it may be questioned, whether, in this solution, there may not be a misapprehension of the real question at issue.

The question is not what was the number of all the firstborn males above a month old in the whole population of Israel (with the exception of the Levites), but what was the number of firstborn males who had been born since the command given by God to sanctify the firstborn to Him—that is, little more than a year before (see Exod. xiii. 2, 12; and note above, v. 12). That command was not retrospective. The command was given at a particular crisis, and was grounded on a special deliverance—the deliverance from Egypt. "All the firstborn of the children of Israel are mine, both man and beast. On the day that I smote every firstborn in the land of Egypt, I sanctified them to myself" (Num. viii. 17; and see Exod. xiii. 2, 12—15; and note above, on v. 12).

The Law was not, "Every male that hath opened the matrix—from many years backward—shall be now made holy to the Lord;" but the Law was, "Every male that openeth"—that is, openeth henceforth—"shall be holy."

Let us observe also that the Law concerned both man and beast equally. "Sanctify unto Me all the firstborn, both of man and beast. It is Mine" (see also Exod. xxii. 29, 30. Lev. xvii. 26. Num. iii. 13; viii. 17. Deut. xv. 19).

Now, no one has ever imagined that an inquisition was made into all the flocks and herds of the Israelites, and that all the firstlings that could be found, of whatever age, were taken and sacrificed at once to God; but this must be supposed to have been done, if we imagine that all the firstborn of men, dating backwards for about a century, were reckoned in this number.

In both cases the law to sanctify the firstborn and to sanctify the Levites was prospective only; and this fact solves both the difficulties. It solves the difficulty arising from the supposed discrepancy between the Levites, reckoned in their three constituent elements anterior to their sanctification, in lieu of the firstborn (see above, on v. 39); and it solves the alleged difficulty in the paucity of the number of the firstborn, amounting to 22,273, which would represent satisfactorily the number of firstborn males of a month old, who had been born in the thirteen months, among all the children of Israel (except the Levites), since the Exodus. Compare Bp. Patrick's note, and the remarks of Keil, pp. 181, 182; and Lund on Colenso, p. 53.

51. the money of them that were redeemed] St. Peter contrasts our redemption by the Blood of Christ with this redemption of the firstborn by money. "Ye know that ye were not redeemed" (as the literal Israel were) "with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious Blood of Christ" (1 Pet. i. 18). And St. Paul says, we have "redemption through His blood" (Eph. i. 4).

CHR. IV. 2. Take the sum of the sons of Kohath] Who are placed first, though second in birth, because their charge was to bear the Ark of God.

3. From thirty years old and upward] At thirty years of age Joseph was advanced to be ruler of Egypt (Gen. xli. 46); at thirty years of age David began to reign over Judah (2 Sam. v. 4); and at thirty years of age Jesus Christ was publicly inaugurated by God in his ministerial office at the river Jordan (see below, on Luke iii. 23).

— until fifty] Here is seen the inferiority of the Levitical ministry; being mainly concerned with external ceremonies, it required physical force. But the greatest works of the Christian ministry, which is spiritual, have been done by a "Paul the aged" (Philem. 9), and by a Peter, when he was old (cp. John xxi. 18, and 2 Pet. i. 14); and by the beloved disciple St. John, tarrying in patience till Christ came to take him to Himself (John xxi. 23), and writing his gospel and confirming the Church by his testimony to the truth when he was a hundred years old. See the Introduction to St. John's Gospel, pp. 266—269. The examples also of St. John's two disciples, aged Bishops and Martyrs, S. Ignatius and S. Polycarp, are evidences of the same truth.

— to do the work] Heb. to war the warfare. Thus the ministerial office is likened to the life of soldiers in a camp and on the field. So the Holy Spirit exhorts the bishop of Ephesus to "war a good warfare" (1 Tim. i. 8), as a good soldier of Jesus Christ (2 Tim. ii. 3, 4), in the Church militant on earth, that he may wear the crown of victory in the Church triumphant in heaven.

x Ex. 13. 13.
ch. 18. 15.

y ver. 39, 43.

z Lev. 27. 6.
ch. 18. 16.

a Ex. 30. 13.
Lev. 27. 25.

ch. 18. 16.
Ezek. 45. 12.

b ver. 46, 47.

c ver. 48.

a See ch. 8. 24.
1 Chron. 23. 3, 24, 27.

b ver. 15.

c ver. 19.

d Ex. 26. 31. forward, Aaron shall come, and his sons, and they shall take down ^athe
e Ex. 25. 10, 16. covering vail, and cover the ^eark of testimony with it: ⁶ And shall put thereon the covering of badgers' skins, and shall spread over it a cloth wholly of blue, f Ex. 25. 13. and shall put in ^fthe staves thereof. ⁷ And upon the ^gtable of shewbread they
g Ex. 25. 23, 29,
30. shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the
Lev. 24. 6, 8. bowls, and covers to || cover withal: and the continual bread shall be thereon:
|| Or, pour out
withal.
h Ex. 25. 31. ⁸ And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same i Ex. 25. 37, 38. with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof. ⁹ And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the ^hcandlestick of the light, ⁱand his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuffdishes, and all the oil vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it: ¹⁰ And they shall put it and all the vessels thereof within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar. ¹¹ And k Ex. 30. 1, 3. upon ^kthe golden altar they shall spread a cloth of blue, and cover it with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put to the staves thereof: ¹² And they shall take all the instruments of ministry, wherewith they minister in the sanctuary, and put them in ^acloth of blue, and cover them with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put them on a bar: ¹³ And they shall take away the ashes from the altar, and spread a purple cloth thereon: ¹⁴ And they shall put upon it all the vessels thereof, wherewith they minister about it, even the censers, the fleshhooks, and the shovels, and the || basons, all the vessels of the altar; and they shall spread upon it a covering of badgers' skins, and put to the staves of it. ¹⁵ And when Aaron and his sons have made an end of covering the sanctuary, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, as the camp is to set forward; after that, ^lthe sons of Kohath shall come to bear it: ^mbut they shall not touch any holy thing, lest they die. ⁿThese things are the burden of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation.
p Or, bowls.
q Ex. 29. 40.
r Ex. 30. 23.
¹⁶ And to the office of Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest pertaineth ^othe oil for the light, and the ^psweet incense, and ^athe daily meat offering, and the ^ranointing oil, and the oversight of all the tabernacle, and of all that therein is, in the sanctuary, and in the vessels thereof.

1 ch. 7. 9. & 10.
21.
Deut. 31. 9.
2 Sam. 6. 13.
1 Chron. 15. 2, 15.
in 2 Sam. 6. 6, 7.
1 Chron. 13. 9,
10.
n ch. 3. 31.
o Ex. 25. 6.
Lev. 24. 2.
p Ex. 30. 34.
q Ex. 29. 40.
r Ex. 30. 23.

5. they shall take down the covering vail] Heb. the vail of covering, that conceals the Holy of Holies from the view [Exod. xxvi. 31; xl. 3. Heb. ix. 3; x. 20]; and with it they shall cover the Ark of the testimony, so that even in its marches the Ark was hidden from the eye. Such were the mysteries of the Old Dispensation. But the veil has been taken away by Christ, and the Church of God is now like a City set upon a hill (Matt. v. 14).

6. over it a cloth wholly of blue] Thus the Ark was distinguished above the other holy things, which were covered over with skins, but the outer covering of the Ark was blue, or jacinth. See Exod. xxv. 5.

7. the continual bread] Literally, bread of perpetuity. So the daily sacrifice is called the burnt-offering of perpetuity (tamid), xxviii. 6. Cp. Gesen. 867. The shewbread, or bread of faces (Exod. xxv. 30. Lev. xxiv. 5), was called the bread of perpetuity, because a continual supply was always set on the golden table on every succeeding Sabbath (Lev. xxiv. 8); and thus in its Twelve holy loaves, ever standing in the sanctuary before the Veil, and ever before the Face of God, and continually renewed, especially on the Lord's weekly holy day, it represented the Universal and Apostolic Church, ever standing in God's presence, and ever renewed by His Spirit, and preserved by His love and power, even unto the end (Matt. xvi. 18; xxviii. 20). The Table of Shewbread and the golden Candlestick were types of the Church fed and illumined by Christ. Even in its marches the Table had, the continual bread on it. Christ, "the living bread" (John vi. 35—48), is ever with His Church in all her wanderings through the world. On this subject see above, on Exod. xxv. 30. Lev. xxiv. 5.

8. a cloth of scarlet] The Table of Shewbread alone had a covering of scarlet, and it had three coverings, as had the Ark,—the other holy things had only two; but the outer covering of the Ark, the Throne of God, was "wholly blue" (v. 6); whereas the outer covering of the Table of Shewbread, representing the Church, was only of skins. The scarlet colour (κόκκινος, Sept.), in the Levitical Law, seems to have a special typical reference to the blood of Christ. See above, on Lev. xiv. 6. 49, and the scarlet cord in the history of the deliverance of Rahab of Jericho (see Josh. iii. 18). This scarlet covering of the Table of Shewbread may therefore have been a figure of the protection of the Church by the blood of Christ.

14. and put to the staves] Here the Septuagint version inserts a mention of the brazen laver, which stood in the outer Court of the Tabernacle (see Exod. xxx. 18), and introduces a command for the covering of it; but no such command is found in the original Hebrew, or in the Samaritan Pentateuch, or in the Targum of Onkelos, or in the Vulgate, Syriac, or Arabic Versions.

It is certainly well worthy of observation, that while precise directions are given for the covering of all the other holy things, even the bowls, and spoons, and tongs (v. 7. 9), the laver is left uncovered.

There is doubtless a reason for this. The maxim, "Nihil otiosum in sacra Scriptura," may be applied here. And it has been well suggested by some expositors, that by the perpetual exhibition of the laver left uncovered, in the marches of the Israelites, God may have designed to presignify the open preaching of the Gospel to all nations, and the Apostolic invitation to all, to be baptized into Christ in the laver of Regeneration (Titus iii. 5), according to Christ's commission to His disciples, "Go ye and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matt. xxviii. 19).

16. the oversight] See on iii. 32. The Septuagint here has a remarkable expression, ἐπίσκοπος Ἐλεάζαρ, "Episcopus Eleazar."

¹⁷ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, ¹⁸ Cut ye not off the tribe of the families of the Kohathites from among the Levites: ¹⁹ But thus do unto them, that they may live, and not die, when they approach unto ^{s ver. 4.} the most holy things: Aaron and his sons shall go in, and appoint them every one to his service and to his burden: ²⁰ But they shall not go in to see when the holy things are covered, lest they die.

²¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²² Take also the sum of the sons of Gershon, throughout the houses of their fathers, by their families; ²³ ^{u ver. 3.} From thirty years old and upward until fifty years old shalt thou number them; all that enter in [†] to perform the service, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation. ²⁴ This is the service of the families of the Gershonites, to serve, and for ^{||} burdens: ²⁵ And ^{*} they shall bear the curtains of the tabernacle, and the tabernacle of the congregation, his covering, and the covering of the badgers' skins that is above upon it, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, ²⁶ And the hangings of the court, and the hanging for the door of the gate of the court, which is by the tabernacle and by the altar round about, and their cords, and all the instruments of their service, and all that is made for them: so shall they serve. ²⁷ At the [†] appointment of Aaron and his sons shall be all the service of the sons of the Gershonites, in all their burdens, and in all their service: and ye shall appoint unto them in charge all their burdens. ²⁸ This is the service of the families of the sons of Gershon in

^t See Ex. 15. 21.
[†] Sam. 6. 19.

[†] Heb. to war the warfare.

^{||} Or, carriage.
^x ch. 3. 23. 26.

[†] Heb. mouth.

Eleazar was charged with the office of superintending the oil for the light,—the type of the Gospel light kindled by the Holy Ghost; and the sweet incense, the type of prayer; and the daily meat-offering, the type of the Holy Eucharist (see on Lev. ii. 1); and the anointing oil, which was figurative of the gift of the Holy Ghost, which is bestowed in the χρίσις τελειωτική (see Acts viii. 15—18), and in the Ordination of Priests. Thus Eleazar, the Priest, is a type of Christ, the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls (1 Pet. ii. 25), who is the source of all evangelical light, and of all spiritual grace.

Thus also in this verse we see a typical foreshadowing of episcopal duties, viz. :—To preach the word; to be constant in prayer (see Acts vi. 4), and in the ministration of the Holy Eucharist, and in the bestowal of spiritual gifts in Ordination and Confirmation; and in taking heed that the light of God's truth, and of sound evangelical doctrine, be not dimmed and obscured by error, but be kept brightly and clearly burning in the sanctuary of God's Church.

^{18.} Cut ye not off the tribe] Cut ye not off the stock (stirpem). Cause them not to perish by neglect of your own duty of supervision over them. A solemn admonition to those who have the oversight of others, whose destruction may be caused by remissness of godly discipline; as Hophni and Phinehas were encouraged in their sins by the laxity of Eli, the High Priest. 1 Sam. ii. 27—36; iii. 13. Cp. note on Rev. ii. 1.

^{19.} every one to his service] And not to intrude into that of any one else (Maimonides on the Instruments of the Sanctuary, iii. 10): cp. 1 Pet. iv. 15.

^{20.} they shall not go in to see] An evidence of the imperfection of the Levitical ministry; the Kohathites were appointed to carry the holy things, but they might “not go in to see” the things (e.g., the Ark and Cherubim) which they carried. The men of Bethshemesh looked into the Ark and were smitten with a great slaughter (1 Sam. vi. 19).

The ancient Hebrew Church bore the mysteries of the Gospel veiled in the Law, but could not clearly see their true meaning, which has now been unfolded in Christ. As our Lord declares to His disciples, Blessed are your eyes, for they see the things which prophets and righteous men had desired to see (Matt. xiii. 16). The mystery which was hid from ages and from generations is now made manifest to His saints (Col. i. 26. Cp. Eph. iii. 5, 10; and 1 Pet. i. 12), and the Veil which was on the heart of the Jews in reading the Old Testament is drawn off in Christ (2 Cor. iii. 14).

— when the holy things are covered] So Syriac, Arabic, Samaritan, Onkelos, Vulg. Literally, when the holiness (i. e., the Ark of God's presence: see 1 Kings viii. 8; 2 Chron. v. 9) is swallowed up. The Hebrew word here used is the Piel infinitive, from bala, to swallow (Gesen. 123), and seems to show the rapidity with which the vessels of the sanctuary were covered. Some render, “at a gulp,” i. e. an instant (Job. vii. 19).

At the same time this word is remarkable, because it often signified to abolish, to destroy (see Num. xvi. 30. 32; Job ii. 3; Isa. ix. 16); and in Isa. xxv. 7, 8 it describes Christ's glorious work in swallowing up Death in victory, and also in swallowing up, or drawing off, the covering or veil of blindness and ignorance from the hearts of all nations under the Gospel, in order that they may see Him with the eye of Faith.

Therefore this word, bala, thus used, exhibits the different characters of the Law and the Gospel.

Here, in the Book of Numbers, under the Law, the mysteries of God's holiness are covered, literally, are swallowed up by a covering, or Veil. But as Isaiah foretold, under the Gospel, the covering itself, or veil, which concealed those mysteries, is swallowed up; and the veil which was upon the hearts of the people, both Jew and Gentile, is swallowed up. See 2 Cor. iii. 14—16. Christ Himself, on the evening of His Resurrection, gave a remarkable specimen of this blessed work of absorption, when He walked to Emmaus and “opened the Scriptures” of the Old Testament to the two disciples (Luke xxiv. 26. 32), and also when He “opened the understandings” of His Apostles, that they might understand the Scriptures of the Old Testament concerning Himself (Luke xxiv. 44, 45). Then He, the risen “Sun of righteousness,” swallowed up the covering from the Scriptures and their hearts, as the sun drinks up the morning mists, and reveals the beautiful scenery of a wide landscape to the view.

— lest they die] Observe the difference of man's state under the Law and the Gospel. Under the Law, the uncovering of the holy things was followed by temporal death; under the Gospel this revelation is the cause of everlasting Life.

^{21.} And the LORD spake unto Moses] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to vii. 89. The parallel Haphtarah is Judges xiii. 2—25, describing the appearance of the Angel to Manoah at the Altar of Sacrifice, and the promise of the birth of Samson the Nazarite (xiii. 7). Thus by the collation of these Scriptures, the ancient Jewish Church has taught us to see in Samson an example of the Nazarite's vow described in chap. vi., and to read that history as a warning against the abuse of spiritual gifts, such as the Nazarites enjoyed.

^{22.} the sons of Gershon] The eldest son (see iii. 17).

^{23.} to do the work] Heb., to war the warfare (see on v. 3).

the tabernacle of the congregation: and their charge shall be under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

²⁹ As for the sons of Merari, thou shalt number them after their families, by the house of their fathers; ³⁰ ^y From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old shalt thou number them, every one that entereth into the † service, to do the work of the tabernacle of the congregation. ³¹ And ^z this is the charge of their burden, according to all their service in the tabernacle of the congregation; ^a the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and sockets thereof, ³² And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords, with all their instruments, and with all their service: and by name ye shall ^b reckon the instruments of the charge of their burden. ³³ This is the service of the families of the sons of Merari, according to all their service, in the tabernacle of the congregation, under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

y ver. 3.

† Heb. warjara.
z ch. 3. 36, 37.

a Ex. 26. 15.

b Ex. 38. 21.

c ver. 2.

³⁴ ^c And Moses and Aaron and the chief of the congregation numbered the sons of the Kohathites after their families, and after the house of their fathers, ³⁵ From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation: ³⁶ And those that were numbered of them by their families were two thousand seven hundred and fifty. ³⁷ These were they that were numbered of the families of the Kohathites, all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, which Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

d ver. 22.

³⁸ And those that were numbered of the sons of Gershon, throughout their families, and by the house of their fathers, ³⁹ From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation, ⁴⁰ Even those that were numbered of them, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers, were two thousand and six hundred and thirty. ⁴¹ ^d These are they that were numbered of the families of the sons of Gershon, of all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, whom Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the LORD.

⁴² And those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers, ⁴³ From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation, ⁴⁴ Even those that were numbered of them after their families, were three thousand and two hundred. ⁴⁵ These be those that were numbered of the families of the sons of

29. As for the sons of Merari] The Merarites, who were appointed to do the most laborious work, had more men between thirty and fifty years of age (v. 4) than the Kohathites (v. 35) and the Gershonites (v. 40), although the whole number of the Kohathites, and of the Gershonites, was considerably greater than that of the Merarites. See the next note.

36. And those that were numbered of them (viz., the Kohathites) by their families were two thousand seven hundred and fifty]

The numbers of the three classes of Levites were as follows:—

(1) Kohathites, in all (iii. 28)	8600
Between 30 and 50 years	2750
(2) Gershonites, in all (iii. 22)	7500
Between 30 and 50 years	2630
(3) Merarites, in all (iii. 34)	6200
Between 30 and 50 years	3200

This is a remarkable statement. It seems as if some special calamity must have befallen the Kohathites, who were advanced above their elder brethren, the Gershonites, and were specially privileged by God (see above, on iii. 27); and that they had been deprived by that calamity of the flower of their families.

The Kohathites were nearest to Moses by blood. May not they have been foremost in zeal and courage to answer his appeal, "Who is on the Lord's side?" when the people of Israel worshipped the golden calf. Exod. xxxii. 26. 28. May not the Kohathites have been the first to engage in that perilous conflict for the Lord's honour? and may not that battle have caused the loss of a large number of warriors among them? and may not the Martyrdom of the warriors of that family have been the reason for the advancement of the Kohathites among the Levites to the nearest place to God in the ministry and service of the sanctuary? We have already seen (in iii. 39) something very remarkable in the smallness of the number of the Levites

Merari, whom Moses and Aaron numbered ^e according to the word of the LORD e ver. 29. by the hand of Moses.

⁴⁶ All those that were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron and the chief of Israel numbered, after their families, and after the house of their fathers, ⁴⁷ ^f From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every f ver. 3, 23, 30. one that came to do the service of the ministry, and the service of the burden in the tabernacle of the congregation, ⁴⁸ Even those that were numbered of them, were eight thousand and five hundred and fourscore. ⁴⁹ According to the commandment of the LORD they were numbered by the hand of Moses, ^g every one according to his service, and according to his burden: thus were g ver. 15, 24, 31. they numbered of him, ^h as the LORD commanded Moses. h ver. 1, 21.

V. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Command the children of Israel, that they put out of the camp every ^a leper, and every one that hath an ^b issue, and whosoever is defiled by the ^c dead: ³ Both male and female shall ye put out, without the camp shall ye put them; that they defile not their camps, ^d in the midst whereof I dwell. ⁴ And the children of Israel did so, and put them out without the camp: as the LORD spake unto Moses, so did the children of Israel.

⁵ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁶ Speak unto the children of Israel, ^e When a man or woman shall commit any sin that men commit, to do a trespass against the LORD, and that person be guilty; ⁷ ^f Then they shall confess their sin which they have done: and he shall recompense his trespass e Lev. 6. 2, 3. ^g with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth part thereof, and give it f Lev. 5. 5. & 26. 40. unto him against whom he hath trespassed. g Lev. 6. 5. ⁸ But if the man have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the LORD, even to the priest; beside ^h the ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him. h Lev. 6. 6, 7. & 7. 7.

generally, as compared with all the other tribes; and yet, small as they were in number, they were promoted before all the other tribes, and were taken by God into His service, and were brought near to Him in His Sanctuary, instead of the firstborn of all the other Tribes; and it seems that this smallness specially commended them to God, and was therefore the result of their self-sacrifice for His honour. And as the Levites, the smallest among the tribes, were promoted before the rest, so the Kohathites,—whose warriors, proportionally to their whole amount, were the smallest in number among the Levites,—were advanced by God above the other Levites, and brought nearest to Him. May not self-sacrifice have been the cause of the divine preference in both these cases? At the same time, God thus intimated that “He seeth not as man seeth,” and that “He can save by many or by few” (1 Sam. xiv. 6). He afterwards rejected the many thousands of Gideon’s host, and chose out the three hundred men for the achievement of the victory over Midian (Judg. vii. 1—7), and by such means as those, He gave some pre-significations of the great work which He is ever performing in the world, that of overcoming it by means of publicans and fishermen, and other such weak instruments, whom He brought near to Himself, and chose as Apostles and Evangelists, in order that the excellency of the power of the Gospel might be seen not to be of man, but of God (1 Cor. i. 26. 2 Cor. iv. 7).

CH. V. 1. And the LORD spake] Having given order for the encampment and marches of His Church, Almighty God provides for the exercise of discipline in it (vv. 2—4). He promulgates laws against impurity and against unrighteousness, and for the exercise of righteousness and holiness; and lest it should be supposed that in the itinerant condition of His Church in the wilderness these laws might be dispensed with, which He had given in the Book of Leviticus, when the Ancient Church was stationary at Sinai, He repeats many of them here: see vv. 4. 7. It is an altogether arbitrary hypothesis of some that this repetition “betrays two different writers.”

It may at first sight seem surprising, that the Law concerning the Trial of Jealousy in this chapter, and that concerning the Nazarites in the next chapter, should not have been inserted in Leviticus, and should have been reserved for this place; but this is a mark of unity of authorship. The sacred writer takes for granted that his hearers and readers will compare one of his books with the other, and supply from each what is omitted in the other. Cp. below, vi. 22; and above, Lev. xxv. 32.

2. put out of the camp every leper] The Marcionites objected that the God of the Old Testament is at variance with the God of the New, inasmuch as this law is not binding under the Gospel; to which Tertullian replied, that it is binding in the spirit, because, in the Christian Church, it is said by the holy Apostle (1 Cor. v. 11), “I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator;” so the leper is put out of the camp (Tertullian c. Marcion. iv. 9. Cp. below, 2 John 10).

3. their camps] There were three camps: the Camp of the Lord, or Sanctuary; the Camp of the Levites; and the Camp of all Israel (Maimonides, Jarchi).

4. and put them out without the camp] See Lev. xiii. 3. 46; xv. 2; xxi. 1, an argument for the necessity of Church Discipline. Cp. Matt. xviii. 7. 1 Cor. v. 5. 13.

6. that men commit] for there is none righteous, save One (Isa. liii. 9. 1 Pet. ii. 22). Cp. Theodoret, Qu. 9.

7. Then they shall confess their sin] See Lev. v. 5; xxvi. 40. — he shall recompense his trespass] See Lev. vi. 2, 3. 6.

8. the ram of the atonement] This and the other provisions of this chapter suppose the people to be acquainted with the divine enactments promulgated in Leviticus: see there Lev. vi. 6; vii. 7. As in the Four Gospels, one Gospel supposes the reader to be acquainted with the Gospels written before it, so the later Books of Moses assume the Israelites to know the laws which are promulgated in the former Books; and as every successive Gospel supplies some new materials which fit in harmoniously to the other Gospel or Gospels, so each successive Book of the

|| Or, heave offering,
 i Ex. 29, 28.
 Lev. 6, 17, 18, 26.
 & 7, 6, 7, 9, 10, 14.
 ch. 18, 8, 9, 19.
 Deut. 18, 3, 4.
 Ezek. 44, 29, 30.
 k Lev. 10, 13.

l Lev. 18, 20.

m 1 Kings 17, 18.
 Ezek. 29, 16.

|| Or, being in the power of thy husband.
 Rom. 7, 2.
 † Heb. under thy husband.

n Josh. 6, 26.
 1 Sam. 14, 24.
 Neh. 10, 29.
 o Jer. 29, 22.

† Heb. fall.

p Ps. 109, 18.

q Deut. 27, 15.

9 And every ⁱ offering of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his. 10 And every man's hallowed things shall be his: whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be ^k his.

11 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 12 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man's wife go aside, and commit a trespass against him, 13 And a man ^l lie with her carnally, and it be hid from the eyes of her husband, and be kept close, and she be defiled, and there be no witness against her, neither she be taken with the manner; 14 And the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be defiled: or if the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be not defiled: 15 Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest, and he shall bring her offering for her, the tenth part of an ephah of barley meal; he shall pour no oil upon it, nor put frankincense thereon; for it is an offering of jealousy, an offering of memorial, ^m bringing iniquity to remembrance.

16 And the priest shall bring her near, and set her before the LORD: 17 And the priest shall take holy water in an earthen vessel; and of the dust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water: 18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and uncover the woman's head, and put the offering of memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy offering: and the priest shall have in his hand the bitter water that causeth the curse:

19 And the priest shall charge her by an oath, and say unto the woman, If no man have lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness || [†] with another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse: 20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee beside thine husband:

21 Then the priest shall ⁿ charge the woman with an oath of cursing, and the priest shall say unto the woman, ^o The LORD make thee a curse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth make thy thigh to [†] rot, and thy belly to swell;

22 And this water that causeth the curse ^p shall go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot: ^q And the woman shall say, Amen, amen.

23 And the priest shall write these curses in a book, and he shall blot them out with the bitter water: 24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse: and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

Pentateuch makes additions which harmoniously fit into what has been contained in the earlier Books; and so the five books of the Pentateuch make one Book.

9. every offering] Heb. terumah, or heave-offering: see Exod. xxix. 28. Lev. vi. 17, 18, 26; vii. 6, 7, 9, 10, 14.

12. If any man's wife go aside] On this subject see the treatise Sota, in the Mishna, lib. iii. cap. 7. Selden, Uxor Hebraica, iii. 13. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 146. Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 441. 445. Keil, Archæol. pp. 298—303. Kurtz, Mos. Opf. p. 326. Winer, R. W. B. i. 300.

13. it be hid] or, he be hid.
 — with the manner] These words are not in the original. The sense is, if she were not taken in the act. Cp. John viii. 4, where the Pharisees seem to refer to these words.

15. tenth part of an ephah of barley meal] meal, not flour; of barley, not wheat; no oil, nor frankincense—signs of absence of God's grace (Theodoret here; S. Cyril de Ador. xiv. p. 495. Bähr, p. 445). And if this was the case, even with her who had given occasion for suspicion by her conduct, how hateful must the sin itself be in God's sight!

Flour of wheat, the purest and best, was offered in many sacrifices, but barley-meal in none but the trial of jealousy, which was a domestic sorrow (Chrysost. adv. Jud. Orat. v. S. Jerome in Ezek. xvi.).

18. uncover the woman's head] for she had given occasion to suppose that she had broken her allegiance to her husband, and had spoiled herself of her glory. Cp. 1 Cor. xi. 5—10, and S. Cyril de Ador. xiv. 495, who observes that this uncovering denoted that all things, however secretly done, as men suppose, are naked and open to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do (Heb. iv. 13); and so Theodoret.

— the offering of memorial] that is, the handful: see vv. 15, 26; and cp. Lev. ii. 2.

— the bitter water that causeth the curse] bitter curse-bringing waters, made such by God Himself; and so called because they brought a curse on the guilty, when, as it is said in Ps. cxix. 18, "Let the curse come into his bowels like water." Cp. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 146.

19. the priest shall charge her by an oath] See Bp. Andrewes, v. 79, "on the lawfulness and form of swearing;" by the command of superiors in a solemn cause, on Jer. iv. 2; and see note below, on Matt. v. 34.

— to uncleanness with another] Rather, by uncleanness, from thy husband to another.

21. when the LORD doth make thy thigh to rot, and thy belly to swell] The punishment is on the members that sinned (Theodoret, Qu. 10. Cp. v. 27).

22. Amen, amen] doubled here, as always in St. John's Gospel.

23. in a book] or scroll. Cp. Deut. xxvi. 1. Matt. i. 1.

²⁵ Then the priest shall take the jealousy offering out of the woman's hand, and shall wave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar: r. Lev. 8. 27.

²⁶ ^s And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the memorial s Lev. 2. 2, 9. thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward shall cause the woman to drink the water.

²⁷ And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that, if she be defiled, and have done trespass against her husband, that the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot: and the woman shall be a curse among her people. ²⁸ And if the woman be not defiled, but be clean; then she shall be free, and shall conceive seed. t Deut. 28. 37. Ps 83. 9, 11. Jer. 24. 9. & 29. 18, 22. & 42. 18. Zech. 8. 13.

²⁹ This is the law of jealousies, when a wife goeth aside to another ^u instead of her husband, and is defiled; ³⁰ Or when the spirit of jealousy cometh upon him, and he be jealous over his wife, and shall set the woman before the LORD, and the priest shall execute upon her all this law. ³¹ Then shall the man be guiltless from iniquity, and this woman shall bear her iniquity. u ver. 19. x Lev. 20. 17, 19, 20.

VI. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When either man or woman shall separate || Or, make themselves Nazarites. a Lev. 27. 2. Judg. 13. 5. Acts 21. 23. Rom. 1. 1. themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to separate themselves unto the LORD:

²⁷ her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot: and the woman shall be a curse] Awful words, deserving to be pondered with solemn seriousness, deep self-abasement, and penitential sorrow, in an age like the present, when Adultery is encouraged by legal facilities given to Divorce.

²⁹ This is the law of jealousies] This Law of jealousy is one of the evidences of the divine origin of the Levitical Code.

If this ordeal failed, the cases of failure must have been known and revealed; and the Code in which it is contained could not have continued to be received as divine by the Jewish Church and Nation, and would not have been authenticated by Christ and His Apostles.

If it did not fail, then the Law must have been promulgated by the Searcher of hearts; and the Dispensation of which it forms a part must have been under the direct control of an Omniscient God. Surely therefore it is an altogether groundless and godless opinion of some recent critics, that the "ordeal here prescribed was an ancient test, which is retained by Moses in deference to popular superstitions."

³¹ Then shall the man be guiltless] because he did not connive at sin in his wife, or harbour jealousy without endeavouring to free himself from it.

— this woman shall bear her iniquity] It may be asked, if there was this divine ordeal for the punishment of Adultery, how came it to pass that Adultery prevailed among the Jews in our Lord's age? (cp. John viii. 9. James iv. 4.) Unhappily, the Jews by their traditions had made this Law of none effect. The Talmudists said that no woman could be forced to drink the water of jealousy, but might escape the trial; and they devised many compromises tending to favour divorce; indeed the facility of divorce almost superseded the punishment for adultery (see Maimonides in Sota, chaps. i. ii).

The Law displays in a clear light the divine wrath and indignation against the sin of Adultery.

It has also a spiritual significance.

Almighty God vouchsafes to represent His relation to His people under the figure of Marriage. Christ is the Bridegroom of the Church, which is His Spouse. Heresy in a Church is what Adultery is in a wife (see on 2 Cor. xi. 2; and Rev. xvii. 1), and the Levitical Law of jealousy exhibits in a striking manner the requirements which Christ makes for soundness of doctrine and purity of faith in His Church, and the fearful punishments which He has reserved for those who corrupt the sincerity of "the faith once delivered to the saints."

CH. VI. 2. When either man or woman] Women, as well as men, might be Nazarites; and the self-sacrifice of women, mortifying their love of this world by giving to God their hair, their ornament and glory, and devoting it to Him (see on v. 18), was in some respects more conspicuous than that of men.

That this Law concerning the Nazarite's vow was not (as some have alleged) an adoption of Gentile usages into the Levitical Code, but that (as Maimonides observes) it was designed rather as a means of separating the Israelites from Heathenism, has been well shown by Bp. Patrick on v. 18.

— shall separate themselves] The verb here used is different from that which is rendered separate in the latter part of the verse. The verb here is pala, to sever (cp. palag, Phaleg, peleg, a stream, pelagus: see on Gen. x. 25), and thence to consecrate; and also to distinguish as extraordinary and wonderful (πέλωρ, πελώριος, Gesen., p. 674).

The verb in the latter part of the verse is nazar, from a root signifying to vow, and connected with nadar, to vow; thence, to separate oneself by a vow of consecration to God; and also to abstain (Gesen., pp. 535. 542).

Hence also comes the word nezor, the mitre, or diadem, of separation, or sanctification of the High Priest (Exod. xxix. 6), and the crown of dignity of the King (2 Sam. i. 10).

These considerations serve to illustrate the true meaning of the Nazarite's Vow; the consecration of his hair to God was as it were like the reservation of all his strength to God's service; and the shaving off his hair at the door of the Tabernacle (v. 18) was the casting of his crown at the foot of God's throne (Rev. iv. 10). It was an act of self-abnegation; a recantation, and, as it were, shaving off, of self-love, and self-idolatry; a making of himself bald for God, a self-spoilation of beauty and glory for His service, a glad welcoming of shame and suffering, and scoffing and contempt, such as baldness often encountered (as the baldness of Elisha, 2 Kings ii. 23), for God's sake; a noble act which embodied the words of the Psalmist, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy Name give the praise" (Ps. cxv. 1); "For Thy sake have I suffered reproof, shame hath covered my face" (Ps. lxxix. 7); and of St. Paul, "I suffer the loss of all things, and count them dung, that I may win Christ. Yea, I count all things but loss, for the excellency of Christ Jesus my Lord" (Phil. iii. 8; cp. Rom. viii. 35—39). St. Paul was not only literally but spiritually a Nazarite; but the great Nazarite of all is JESUS CHRIST, who emptied Himself of His glory, and encountered shame, and wore a crown of thorns—such was His nezor—and sanctified Himself to the Father (John xvii. 19), and made us Nazarites in Himself.

Here it may be observed in reference to our Blessed Lord, that the word Nazarite is to be distinguished from Nazarene. The former word is from nazar, to separate (Gesen. 542); the latter is from Nelsar, a Branch. Jesus Christ was a Nalsarene, being the true Nelsar, or Branch, foretold by Isaiah as the Branch of Jesse (xi. 1), and by Jeremiah (xxiii. 5) as the righteous Branch of David, and by Zechariah as the Man whose name is the Branch (iii. 8; vi. 12) and as growing up as a tender Branch at Natsareth, the Town of branches (see below on Matt. ii. 23).

^b Amos 2. 12.
^c Luke 1. 15.

|| Or, Nazarite-ship.
 † Heb. wine of the wine.

^c Judg. 13. 5. & 16. 17.
¹ Sam. 1. 11.

d Lev. 21. 11.
 e Lev. 19. 11, 16.
 f Lev. 21. 1, 2.
 h Lev. 19. 6.

† Heb. separation.

f Acts 18. 18. & 21. 24.

g Lev. 5. 7. & 14. 22. & 15. 14, 29.

³ ^b He shall separate himself from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried. ⁴ All the days of his || separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the † vine tree, from the kernels even to the husk. ⁵ All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no ^c razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow. ⁶ All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD ^d he shall come at no dead body. ⁷ ^e He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die: because the † consecration of his God is upon his head. ⁸ All the days of his separation he is holy unto the LORD. ⁹ And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall ^f shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it. ¹⁰ And ^g on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: ¹¹ And the priest shall offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, and make an

At the same time, though our Blessed Lord and Saviour was not a Nazarite literally, as the Baptist was (cp. Matt. xi. 18, 19), yet in the spiritual and fullest sense He was a Nazarite, as being holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners (Heb. vii. 26), and as separated to God, and dedicated to Him by sanctification of the Holy Ghost; and in that sense He says, "I sanctify Myself." He dedicated Himself to God's will, and He exposed Himself to shame and contempt, that He might do that will, and redeem the world (John xvii. 19).

And further, by virtue of His Incarnation and of our incorporation in His body, He has become to us Sanctification (1 Cor. i. 30); and we all are spiritual Nazarites in Him, being under a Baptismal Vow of spiritual Nazaritism, and being sanctified through the truth (John xvii. 19), "for He that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of one; for which cause He is not ashamed to call them brethren" (Heb. ii. 11).

Samson, the Nazarite of the Old Testament, is represented as having his hair in "seven locks" (Judg. xvi. 13), and in them his strength was. Olrist had the sevenfold fulness of the Spirit (Isa. xi. 2), and the strength of the Christian Nazarite is in his self-dedication to God, and in the "sevenfold gifts of the Holy Spirit," "the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord" (Isa. xi. 2). Samson was shorn of his seven locks, but it was not till after he had allowed them to be woven into the web of Delilah (Judg. xvi. 13); so the Christian Nazarite cannot be deprived of his gifts, except by his own desecration of them, by allowing them to be entangled in the webs of worldly allurements.

Therefore in reading this chapter we must see the fulfilment of the Law of Nazarites in Christ, and in ourselves as members of Christ. Cp. Mather, Types, 110; Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 418.

On this spiritual significance of the Law, see S. Cyril de Ador. xvi. 576—589. On the Law of a Nazarite, see Mishna, tract Nazir, lib. iii. cap. 6. Lightfoot's Works, i. 1092. Spencer de Leg. Heb. iii. 6. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 141. Jahn, Archæol. § 394. Keil, Archæol. § 67. Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 416—440. Hengstenberg, Egypt, 190. Pusey on Amos ii. 11. Cp. below on Judg. xiii., xvi.; Acts xviii. 18; xxi. 24.

³. strong drink] Heb. shechar: Gr. σικερα. See Lev. x. 9. Judg. xiii. 4. Luke i. 15.

The Bishop of Jerusalem, St. James, is described as a Nazarite by Hegeippus (in Euseb., ii. 23): "He did not drink wine nor strong drink, and no razor came on his head."

The Nazarite must abstain from wine; the Christian Nazarite's strength is not from earthly aids, or artificial stimulants, but from the grace of God.

— no vinegar] Heb. chamets, from chamats, to be sharp; and rendered ἕξος by Sept., and acetum by Vulg., which signifies sometimes a light acid wine. Cp. Ruth ii. 14; Matt. xxvii. 34. 48. Horat., 2 Sermon. iii. 127, "Vile potet acetum."

⁵. shall no razor come upon his head] As was the case with Samson, a perpetual Nazarite (Judg. xvi. 17; cp. 1 Sam. i. 11). But though such an one might not shave his head with a razor, he might poll it, as Absalom did, 2 Sam. xiv. 26. Cp. Maimon. in Nazir, cap. i., and the notes on Acts xviii. 18; xxi. 24, where the difference between the two words, κελερθεα, to poll the hair, and εὐπαρθεα, to shave the head, is to be noted.

— and shall let the locks of his hair of his head grow] Which were the emblems of strength, the crown (nezzer) of man's glory, as is evident from the history of Samson, the scriptural specimen of a Nazarite (see Judg. xiii. 16. 25). The reservation of the hair of the head—the chief member of the body—for God, and the consecration of the hair at the sanctuary (see v. 18), signified the dedication of the human powers, both of body and soul, to God. Cp. S. Cyril, l. c. p. 579; Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 433, and Keil here.

⁶. All the days that he separateth himself] All the days of his vow (see on v. 2).

— he shall come at no dead body] By which he would be made unclean (Lev. x. 4—6).

⁷. He shall not make himself unclean for his father] In these two particulars of abstaining from wine and strong drink, and of not coming near the dead body even of his relatives, the Nazarite was like the High Priest (Lev. x. 9; and xxi. 10). The Christian Nazarite, who is devoted to God, must love God above all earthly objects, however dear to him (Matt. viii. 21; x. 37). S. Cyril.

Here is another proof of the misery and shame in which Man is by nature, and of the blessed change wrought for us by the Incarnation, Death, and Resurrection of Christ, and of our consequent duties of love, thankfulness, and obedience to Him (see above on Lev. x. 6).

⁸. he is holy unto the LORD] As Christ, "the Holy One," was, being a true Nazarite, not in the bondage and in the oldness of the letter, but in the freedom and newness of the spirit (Rom. vii. 6. 2 Cor. iii. 6).

He was a Nazarite, or separated, being separate from sinners (Heb. vii. 26). He was conceived by the Holy Ghost (Luke i. 34, 35), and under a vow of sanctification (1 Heb. x. 7). He overcame all the temptations of the Evil One, especially that of carnal appetites by which the first Adam fell (Matt. iv. 1—4). He was not defiled by Death, for He is the Resurrection and the Life (John xi. 25). He dedicated his strength and glory (symbolized by the hair, see v. 5) to God (John iv. 34), and He has taught us by His example to be Nazarites, to make a holy vow of self-renunciation in our baptism, to abstain from all carnal desires, and from all dead works, and to dedicate ourselves to God, to offer ourselves a living sacrifice to Him (Rom. xii. 1; 1 Cor. vi. 20), to be holy, for He is holy (1 Pet. i. 16).

⁹. he shall shave his head] In order to cleanse himself from the pollution he has contracted (cp. Lev. xiv. 8), and on the eighth day (cp. xix. 11) he shall begin afresh the term of days for which he made the vow of Nazariteship; all the days before the defilement counted as nothing (v. 12).

¹⁰. two turtles] As in the case of the uncleanness described Lev. xvi. 14.

¹¹. a sin offering—a burnt offering] The sin-offering must be offered first (see v. 16; cp. on Lev. iii. 1).

atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day. ¹² And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year ^h for a trespass offering: ^{h Lev. 5. 6.} but the days that were before shall [†] be lost, because his separation was defiled. ^{† Heb. fall.}

¹³ And this is the law of the Nazarite, ⁱ when the days of his separation are fulfilled: he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: ^{i Acts 21. 26.}

¹⁴ And he shall offer his offering unto the LORD, one he lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt offering, and one ewe lamb of the first year without blemish ^k for a sin offering, and one ram without blemish ^l for peace offerings, ^{k Lev. 4. 2, 27, 32.}

¹⁵ And a basket of unleavened bread ^m cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread ⁿ anointed with oil, and their meat offering, and their ^o drink offerings. ^{n Ex. 29. 2.} ¹⁶ And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, ^{o ch. 15. 5, 7, 10.} and shall offer his sin offering, and his burnt offering: ¹⁷ And he shall offer the ram for a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD, with the basket of unleavened bread: the priest shall offer also his meat offering, and his drink offering. ¹⁸ ^p And the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall take the hair of the head of his separation, and put it in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace offerings. ^{p Acts 21. 21.}

¹⁹ And the priest shall take the ^q sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and ^r shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the hair of his separation is shaven: ^{q 1 Sam. 2. 15.} ²⁰ And the priest shall wave them for a wave offering before the LORD: ^{r Ex. 29. 24.}

atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day. ¹² And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year ^h for a trespass offering: ^{h Lev. 5. 6.} but the days that were before shall [†] be lost, because his separation was defiled. ^{† Heb. fall.}

^{12.} the days that were before shall be lost] He that grows careless and lukewarm in his devotion must begin afresh: let him however not despair, Christ can restore him (S. Cyril).

^{13.} when the days of his separation are fulfilled] And his head is to be shaved at the door of the Tabernacle (v. 18): cp. Acts xxi. 23—26, where St. Paul is described as taking upon him the vow of a Nazarite for a certain term of days at Jerusalem, at the expiration of which he shaved his head at the door of the Temple, with others who had a similar vow.

His previous act at Cenchrea was a very different one (see Acts xviii. 18). It was that of a temporary Nazarite, but not the final one; it was an act of polling only, or cropping the hair (which might be done elsewhere than at Jerusalem), but it was not the act of finally shaving the head with a razor, which could only be done at Jerusalem. Cp. Mishna, vol. iii. p. 156, ed. Surenhus., and Maimon. on Nazir, viii. 3; and Lightfoot's Works, i. p. 1092.

^{14.} he shall offer] a burnt-offering (cp. Lev. i. 4. 10—13), a sin-offering, and a peace-offering (Lev. iii. 1); and also a meat-offering and a drink-offering (v. 17; cp. Lev. ii. 1), showing that though his vow of separation to God was accomplished, yet he still required a sacrifice of expiation and atonement for sin, and a sacrifice also of self-dedication, and one of thankfulness to God wherein to communicate with Him.

These four sacrifices, combined together, represented the fourfold fullness of the One Offering of Christ. He is our sin-offering, or Atonement; He is our burnt-offering, and by His total self-dedication in our Nature we are accepted by God; He is our meat-offering, in which human labour co-operated with divine grace, and in which the perpetual representation of His death and of its benefits, exhibited in the Holy Eucharist, was pre-signified; and He is our peace-offering, for by means of Him we are admitted to communicate with God. See above on Leviticus, Introduction, and also Preliminary Notes to chapters i., ii., iii., iv.

^{16.} sin offering] Observe, the sin-offering comes first; as in the offering at the Priest's consecration in Lev. ix. 3. 8, 12, and of the Levites below, viii. 12; and after the sin-offering came the burnt-offering with its meat-offering; then the peace-offering. No offering can be offered so as to be accepted by God, except first an expiation and atonement be made by Christ (signifying expiation and atonement).

^{18.} the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation] The hair of the head, the chief member of the body, was his natural ornament and crown, the flower and emblem of his strength (see above, v. 5), and the separation of it by a vow to God (Theodoret, Qu. ii.), and the shaving of it at the door of the Tabernacle, and the offering of it on God's altar, was a visible representation of the dedication of the health and strength, the beauty and glory of man (which are too often given up to the world), to the honour and glory of God.

The Baptismal Vow is our Christian Nazariteship, and the oblation and presentation of ourselves, our souls, and bodies, at God's altar to be a reasonable, holy, and lively sacrifice to Him, is a payment of that vow, which is ever to be continued unto our lives' end.

Our Blessed Lord, the true Nazarite (see v. 2), spoiled Himself of His glory on Calvary.

With reverence be it said, at that place, at Golgotha, "the place of a skull" (Matt. xxvii. 33. Mark xv. 22. John xix. 17), at Calvary (Luke xxiii. 33), the place of baldness, He "shaved His head." He put off the diadem of His heavenly glory, and offered the crown of His strength and beauty on God's altar—the Cross; and exposed Himself to the scorn of the World, and fulfilled His Vow; and He perfected God's will; and "for the joy that was set before Him, He endured the Cross, despising the shame" (Heb. xii. 2), and sanctified Himself as our Spotless Victim, and perfect High Priest, and became a pattern to all true Nazarites, the saints of God, who, though despised of men, are lovely in God's sight, and are washed in His blood, and become "purer than snow, and whiter than milk;" and "yet are ruddy as rubies," by that blood. Lam. iv. 7.

— and put it in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace offerings] which, the Jewish Doctors say, was done in a room assigned to the Nazarites in the s.e. corner of the Court of the Women: see Middoth, cap. 2, sect. 5: quoted by Lightfoot, i. 1092. The Peace-offering was the consummation of the other sacrifices; it was that in which the offerer himself, reconciled to God by the Sin-offering, and accepted in the Burnt-offering, was admitted into communion with Him, and was a partaker of the Sacrifice with God. The burning of the hair with the fire of the Peace-offering is imitated in that dedication which the Christian makes to God at the Offertory in the Holy Communion.

^{19.} the sodden shoulder] The left shoulder; the right shoulder was the priest's, and was heaved in thankful ascription of praise to God, the Giver of all (Lev. vii. 32).

^{20.} shall wave them] In acknowledgment that God fills all things with His goodness, and gives power and grace to will and to do what is good (Phil. ii. 13).

s EX. 29. 27, 28. ^s this is holy for the priest, with the wave breast and heave shoulder: and after that the Nazarite may drink wine. ²¹ This is the law of the Nazarite who hath vowed, and of his offering unto the LORD for his separation, beside that that his hand shall get: according to the vow which he vowed, so he must do after the law of his separation.

²² And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²³ Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons, saying, On this wise 'ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them,

²⁴ The LORD bless thee, and " keep thee :

²⁵ The LORD " make his face shine upon thee, and * be gracious unto thee :

²⁶ y The LORD lift up his countenance upon thee, and ^z give thee peace.

²⁷ a And they shall put my Name upon the children of Israel; and ^b I will bless them.

VII. ¹ And it came to pass on the day that Moses had fully ^a set up the t Lev. 9. 22.

 i Chron. 23. 13.
 u Ps. 121. 7.
 John 17. 11.
 w Ps. 31. 16.
 & 67. 1. & 80. 3.
 7. 19. & 119. 135.
 Dan. 9. 17.
 x Gen. 43. 29.
 y Ps. 4. 6.
 z John 14. 27.
 2 Thess. 3. 16.
 a Deut. 28. 10.
 2 Chron. 7. 14.
 Isa. 43. 7.
 Dan. 9. 18, 19.

b Ps. 115. 12. a Ex. 40. 18. Lev. 8. 10, 11.

21. beside that that his hand shall get] That is, in addition to the freewill-offerings that he may be enabled and disposed to make.

22. And the LORD spake unto Moses] The introduction of this formula of Priestly Benediction in this place proceeds on the supposition that the hearers and readers of this Book are acquainted with what has been said in another book (Lev. viii. 1—31) concerning the Consecration of the Priests. In like manner the mention of the Cities of the Levites in Leviticus (xxv. 32) is grounded on the assumption that the reader knows what is said concerning the ordination and office of the Levites in the Book of Numbers (Num. viii. 6—26). Thus one part of the Pentateuch is interwoven with another, and depends upon it, and together the several parts form one consistent whole. Cp. above, on ch. v. 1.

23. Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons] the Priests, whom the Lord chose to bless in His name: see Deut. xxi. 5. Lev. ix. 22. 1 Chron. xxiii. 13. "Not only the power to pray, to preach, and to give the Sacraments, but the power to bless God's people is annexed to the Priest's office. The power is committed, the act enjoined, and the very words prescribed by God here. Neither was this act Levitical only, or then first used: it was long before, while Levi was yet in the loins of Abraham (Heb. vii. 10). It was a part of the Priesthood of Melchizedek (the type of Christ), who blessed Abraham. The Benediction was given when the people were all together; and by it they were dismissed. And so the Apostle closed all his Epistles with blessing (see below, on 1 Thess. v. 28). And this he did by Christ's example. The last thing which Christ did in this world was, 'He lifted up His hands to bless His Disciples,' (Luke xxiv. 50), and so He went to heaven" (Bp. Andrewes, iii. 81).

— On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel] After the description of the vow of the Nazarite, which represents the separation of the faithful by a vow of renunciation of the world, the flesh, and the devil; and of holy obedience to God, and an exhibition of their self-oblation and of their sanctification to God the Father in Christ, the true spiritual Nazarite, filled with the Holy Ghost, the Conqueror of Satan and the world, separate from sinners, and devoting Himself to God, and incorporating all believers in Himself, and bestowing upon them the Holy Ghost, we are brought by a natural transition to the Priestly Benediction, in which (as the ancient Fathers, and many of the best modern divines agree, see Keil, p. 204) the doctrine of the BLESSED TRINITY is shadowed forth by the trine repetition of JEHOVAH, the Lord; and by the consummation of that repetition, and by its concentration into one, in the solemn word MY NAME—"they shall put MY NAME upon the children of Israel, and bless them."

This doctrine of the plurality of Divine Persons in the one Godhead, dimly revealed from heaven in such phrases as "Let us make man in our image and our likeness," and in other passages of Genesis (see Gen. ii. 26), received greater clearness here, where the plurality of persons begins to show itself as a TRINITY; and it is displayed in fuller light in the Seraphic TRISAGION, "HOLY, HOLY, HOLY, LORD of Hosts" (Isa. vi. 3); and is exhibited in all its glory in the commission given by Christ to His disciples after His Resurrection, "Go and teach all Nations, baptizing them in (or, rather, into) THE NAME of the FATHER, and of the Son, and of the HOLY GHOST" (Matt. xxviii. 19); and so the NAME of the Ever-blessed Trinity is "put upon us" in Baptism; and in the Apostolic Benediction of the New Testament, the counterpart of this Aaronical Benediction in the Old Testament (Num. vi. 24—27), "the grace of the Lord JESUS CHRIST, and the love of God, and the fellowship of the HOLY GHOST" (2 Cor. xiii. 14), where the Father's love is displayed as the Divine Well-spring of all grace, which comes to all through Jesus Christ, both God and Man (see John i. 14. 16), and is imparted to each man severally by God the Holy Ghost.

In this Aaronic Benediction, "The LORD bless thee and keep thee," is expressed the love of God the Father, "keeping through His own Name those whom He has given to the Son that they may be one;" and whom the Son commends to the Father that He may keep them from the evil (John xvii. 11. 15). "The LORD make His face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee," expresses the illumination of Man's Nature, and of the whole World, by the Incarnation of God the Son, "the Light of the World," in whom we have the fulness of grace and mercy (Theodoret). And lastly, "the LORD lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace," expresses the perpetual manifestation of divine light, and the endearing assurance of peace vouchsafed by the Spirit of Peace. On this subject, see note above, on Gen. xlvi. 15; below, on 2 Cor. xiii. 13; and Bp. Andrewes, v. 463, who says, "As Moses, speaking of the Author of our creation, reckons up the name of God three times; as in the blessings of the Law the name of God is thrice repeated; and as the angels cry there, 'Holy, Holy, Holy,' to teach that there are three Persons in the Godhead, which the heathen themselves have compassed; so Christ in the New Testament doth by these words, 'Kingdom, Power, and Glory,' signify those three Persons, which afterwards He expresseth by the name of 'Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.' If we consider them severally, although they may all be ascribed to any Person of the Deity, yet 'the Kingdom' is to be ascribed unto Christ, 'Power' to the Holy Ghost, and 'Glory' to the Father; that we setting ourselves in Christ's 'Kingdom'—that is, His Church—by the 'Power' of the Holy Ghost, may be partakers of that 'Glory' which God the Father hath prepared for us."

The forfeiture of the blessing by the literal Israel, the Jews, who have rejected the Ever-blessed Son of God, seems to be avowed even by themselves, not venturing to use the word JEHOVAH or LORD, even in this divinely-prescribed Benediction. At first they pronounced the Name in the Sanctuary only, and not elsewhere, but they substituted Adonai for it. And after Simeon the Just was dead (says Maimonides on Prayer, chaps. xiv. xv.) the Priests ceased to bless by the proper Name of God (JEHOVAH) even in the sanctuary, in order that light persons might not learn that Name. But the spiritual Israel has all blessings by faith in Christ, whom the Father sent to bless us (Acts iii. 26). "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Him" (Eph. i. 3).

THE OFFERINGS OF THE PRINCES.

CH. VII. 1. On the day that Moses had fully set up the tabernacle] That is, on the first day of the first month of the second year after their coming out of Egypt (Exod. xl. 17).

tabernacle, and had anointed it, and sanctified it, and all the instruments thereof, both the altar and all the vessels thereof, and had anointed them, and sanctified them; ² That ^b the princes of Israel, heads of the house of their fathers, who were the princes of the tribes, [†] and were over them that were numbered, offered: ³ And they brought their offering before the LORD, six covered wagons, and twelve oxen; a wagon for two of the princes, and for each one an ox: and they brought them before the tabernacle. ⁴ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁵ Take it of them, that they may be to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou shalt give them unto the Levites, to every man according to his service. ⁶ And Moses took the wagons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites. ⁷ Two wagons and four oxen ^c he gave unto the sons of Gershon, according to their service: ^{c ch. 4. 25.} ⁸ ^d And four wagons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari, according unto their service, ^e under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest. ^{e ch. 4. 28, 33.} ⁹ But unto the sons of Kohath he gave none: because ^f the service of the sanctuary belonging unto them ^g was that they should bear upon their shoulders. ^{f ch. 4. 15.} ¹⁰ And the princes offered for ^h dedicating of the altar in the day that it was anointed, even the princes offered their offering before the altar. ^{g ch. 4. 6, 8, 10, 12, 14.} ¹¹ And the LORD said unto Moses, They shall offer their offering, each prince on his day, for the dedicating of the altar. ^{2 Sam. 6. 13.} ^h See Deut. 20. 5 ⁱ Kings 8. 63. ^{2 Chron. 7. 5, 9.} ⁱ Ezra 6. 16. ^{Neh. 12. 27.} ^{Ps. 30, title.}

¹² And he that offered his offering the first day was ⁱ Nahshon the son of Amminadab, of the tribe of Judah: ^{i ch. 2. 3.} ¹³ And his offering was one silver charger, the weight thereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after ^k the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them were full of fine flour ^{k Ex. 30. 13.}

— and had anointed it] See Lev. viii. 10, and ix. 1; where Aaron and his sons are consecrated on the eightth day after the anointing of the Tabernacle, and see also Num. ix. 3, where the Passover is ordered to be kept on the fourteenth day of the first month for seven days; and the Tabernacle was removed from Mount Sinai on the twentieth day of the second month (x. 11).

2. the princes of Israel—offered] In the second month of the second year of the Exodus. See above, on Exod. xl. 2.

3. their offering] or Korban, for the service of the Tabernacle, and to provide means, “waggons and oxen,” for carrying it on its march through the wilderness to Canaan. So now, by the oblations of the faithful, the Church is aided in her home and foreign Missionary Work, as she marches onward through the wilderness of this world to the Canaan of her rest.

— covered wagons] So Aquila and Vulg., Arabic, and Onkelos; Sept. has ἀμάξας λαμπηρικὰς, from λαμπήρη, which Passow supposes to be a form of ἀπήρη, a covered waggon.

Gesenius and others are of opinion that the words mean literally waggons of going forth; waggons (egloth, from agal, to roll; cp. Gen. xlv. 19), of going forth (Heb. tsab, from tseba, to go forth, as a soldier to war; or from tsabab, to go forth as a stream, Gesen. 699, 700). If this etymology is correct, then these waggons were like military waggons, in which the sacred vessels of the Lord of Hosts were borne by the ancient Church militant in her march, “terrible as an Army with banners” (Cant. vi. 4); and the word here used describes also the stately and solemn ease with which it flowed forth, as a majestic River in its course.

The waggons were six, the oxen twelve; two to each waggon. So the Twelve Apostles went forth, yoked together in pairs, “two and two” (Mark vi. 7).

There are Twelve Oxen here bearing the tabernacle, and Twelve Oxen supported the laver in the Temple of Solomon, with eyes looking outward to the Four Quarters of the world (1 Kings vii. 25. 44. 2 Chron. iv. 15). So Christ sent His Apostles to bear the Gospel into all the world, and to baptize all in the laver of regeneration.

8. four wagons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari] Because their burden and charge was the heaviest. See iv. 31, compared with iv. 4—15, and iv. 25 (Ainsworth, Graves, Blunt, Keil).

9. upon their shoulders] And not in a waggon, as in 2 Sam. vi. 3. 7; 1 Chron. xv. 13.

10. the princes] The Twelve Heads of the Twelve Tribes representing the whole body of Israel; and prefiguring the work of the Twelve Apostles (see above, on i. 5), and of all Apostolic Churches offering to God themselves and their oblations in every age to His honour and service. Cp. Rom. xv. 16. Phil. ii. 17.

11. each prince on his day] Or, literally, one prince a day; a sentence which is expressed twice in the original, showing God's regard for order and method in all things which concern His service, and that He graciously receives and remembers the offerings of each of His faithful. Accordingly, all the offerings of each of the Princes are here registered by the Holy Spirit in God's Book as an encouragement to Christian liberality in all ages of the Church.

— for the dedicating] Chanuceah, from chanac (whence Enoch, or Chanoc, “dedicated:” see on Gen. v. 18—24). The Sept. has ἐγκαίνισμός: cp. “Encenia,” feast of Dedication (John x. 22). See Deut. xx. 5, on the dedicating of houses, and 2 Chron. vii. 5. 9, on the dedicating of the Temple and Altar by Solomon; and of the wall of Jerusalem by Nehemiah (xii. 27—43); and of the dedication of the Temple by the Maccabees after its defilement (1 Macc. iv. 51. 56—59).

12. the first day was Nahshon—of the tribe of Judah] Or, for the tribe: he was representative of the whole tribe (cp. i. 7—15). The order in which the offerings were made was that of their encampment. See ii. 3—31.

- | | |
|--------------|--|
| 1. Judah | } Tribes on the East of the Tabernacle
(ev. 12—24). |
| 2. Issachar | |
| 3. Zebulun | |
| 4. Reuben | } South (30—42). |
| 5. Simeon | |
| 6. Gad | |
| 7. Ephraim | } West (18—60). |
| 8. Manassah | |
| 9. Benjamin | |
| 10. Dan | } North (66—78). |
| 11. Asher | |
| 12. Naphtali | |

13. bowl] Heb. mizrak, from zarak, to scatter, or pour out: φιάλη, Sept.; “phiale,” Vulg. See Rev. v. 8; xv. 7; xvi. 1

l Lev. 2. 1.
 m Ex. 30. 34.
 n Lev. 1. 2.
 o Lev. 4. 23.
 p Lev. 3. 1.

mingled with oil for a ^lmeat offering: ¹⁴ One spoon of ten shekels of gold, full of ^mincense: ^{15 n} One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ¹⁶ One kid of the goats for a ^osin offering: ¹⁷ And for ^pa sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

¹⁸ On the second day Nethaneel the son of Zuar, prince of Issachar, did offer: ¹⁹ He offered for his offering one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ²⁰ One spoon of gold of ten shekels, full of incense: ²¹ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ²² One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ²³ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

²⁴ On the third day Eliab the son of Helon, prince of the children of Zebulun, did offer: ²⁵ His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ²⁶ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ²⁷ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ²⁸ One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ²⁹ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Eliab the son of Helon.

³⁰ On the fourth day Elizur the son of Shedeur, prince of the children of Reuben, did offer: ³¹ His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ³² One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ³³ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ³⁴ One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ³⁵ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Elizur the son of Shedeur.

³⁶ On the fifth day Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai, prince of the children of Simeon, did offer: ³⁷ His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ³⁸ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ³⁹ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁴⁰ One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ⁴¹ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two

— a meat offering] A meat-offering, a spoon filled with incense, a burnt-offering, a sin-offering, and peace-offerings (13—89), were offered by each of the Twelve Princes of the Twelve Tribes, severally, for the dedicating of the altar, and are specially recorded, and are carefully to be observed.

As has been already observed (Introd. to Leviticus, and Lev. i. 1), these four different kinds of sacrifice represent together the one perfect spotless sacrifice of Christ, as our Atonement, our Reconciliation, and Justification, and our Communion with Him, and the incense was a type of Prayer.

The Twelve Princes of the Twelve Tribes were representatives of the literal Israel, and were types of the Apostles and Apostolic Churches; and their offering to the service of the Tabernacle represented the work of Apostolic Churches, making requisite provision for the preaching of Christ, and for the ministry of the Sacraments, and for the continual offering of Prayer to God.

14. One spoon] Or rather; paten. Heb. cap̄h. Exod. xxv 29. Sept. has θυσιασθην.

— incense] For the golden altar.

19. He offered] From the beginning of this verse to the end of verse 83 there are no vowel-points in the Hebrew Bibles.

It is observable also that the words, he offered, are used here of the Prince of Issachar, but are not used of any other of the twelve Princes, concerning whom it is said, "his offering was."

For some attempts to explain these peculiarities, see Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 147, and the Targum of Jonathan as here quoted by Ainsworth, p. 48. The Arabic Version does not translate the text, which describes the offerings after v. 17, but is content with saying that the offering was like the former one, and so on oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

⁴² On the sixth day Eliasaph the son of Deuel, prince of the children of Gad, offered: ⁴³ His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, a silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ⁴⁴ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ⁴⁵ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁴⁶ One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ⁴⁷ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

⁴⁸ On the seventh day Elishama the son of Ammihud, prince of the children of Ephraim, offered: ⁴⁹ His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ⁵⁰ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ⁵¹ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁵² One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ⁵³ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Elishama the son of Ammihud.

⁵⁴ On the eighth day offered Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur, prince of the children of Manasseh: ⁵⁵ His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ⁵⁶ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ⁵⁷ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁵⁸ One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ⁵⁹ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

⁶⁰ On the ninth day Abidan the son of Gideoni, prince of the children of Benjamin, offered: ⁶¹ His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ⁶² One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ⁶³ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁶⁴ One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ⁶⁵ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Abidan the son of Gideoni.

⁶⁶ On the tenth day Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai, prince of the children of Dan, offered: ⁶⁷ His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ⁶⁸ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ⁶⁹ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁷⁰ One kid till v. 84. Perhaps the non-punctuation of the aforesaid verses in the Hebrew arose from a similar cause.

^{48. the seventh day}] There was no intermission on any of the twelve days; and the same order of offering was observed on the Sabbath as on the other days.

There is no intermission in the priestly work of Christ. His sacrifice is "for ever" (Heb. vii. 3; x. 12. 14), and He ever liveth to make intercession for us (vii. 25), and the Church will ever continue to minister His Word and Sacraments even till the end of time.

May not the identity of the offerings of the Twelve Princes (each charger weighed the same weight) have its spiritual significance? May it not intimate the duty of all Churches to offer the same pure worship to God and Christ, and to preach the same doctrine, and to minister the same Sacraments until the end?

of the goats for a sin offering: ⁷¹ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Aliezer the son of Ammishaddai.

⁷² On the eleventh day Pagiel the son of Ocran, prince of the children of Asher, offered: ⁷³ His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ⁷⁴ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ⁷⁵ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁷⁶ One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ⁷⁷ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Pagiel the son of Ocran.

⁷⁸ On the twelfth day Ahira the son of Enan, prince of the children of Naphtali, offered: ⁷⁹ His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering: ⁸⁰ One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense: ⁸¹ One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering: ⁸² One kid of the goats for a sin offering: ⁸³ And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Ahira the son of Enan.

⁸⁴ This was the dedication of the altar, in the day when it was anointed, by the princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold: ⁸⁵ Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary: ⁸⁶ The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels. ⁸⁷ All the oxen for the burnt offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat offering: and the kids of the goats for sin offering twelve. ⁸⁸ And all the oxen for the sacrifice of the peace offerings were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty. This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was ^aanointed.

⁸⁹ And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation ^rto speak with ^{||}him, then he heard ^ethe voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy seat that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims: and he spake unto him.

q ver. 1.

r ch. 12. 8.
Ex. 33. 9. 11.
|| That is, God.
e Ex. 25. 22.

84. twelve chargers] The Holy Spirit records specially each offering of each of the Princes of each of the Tribes by name, and then sums them up collectively. He testifies the divine remembrance of the faithful, and His gracious acceptance of them. God is not unrighteous to forget their work and labour of love (Heb. vi. 10). He is not weary of registering and recounting their offerings, although they are identical, and are repeated twelve times. He remembers all their offerings, and accepts their burnt sacrifice (Ps. xx. 3); and by uniting them together in this recapitulation and summary, He shows how acceptable to Him is the union and tribute of the heart and hands of the Church Universal of all true Israelites in their dedication of themselves and their substance to His honour and service.

89. the tabernacle of the congregation] Rather, the tabernacle of meeting—i. e., ohel mo'ed, the tabernacle of meeting with Jehovah; see Exod. xxv. 20—22.

— to speak with him] According to the divine promise, “There I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the Mercy-seat, from between the two Cherubims which are upon the Ark of the testimony” (see on Exod. xxv. 22). Therefore the Holy of Holies, where the Ark and Mercy-seat were, was called the Debir, or Oracle (1 Kings vi. 23).

This direct personal communion of God with Moses is referred to by God Himself (xii. 7, 8)—“My servant Moses is faithful in all Mine house. With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches;” and Exod. xxxiii. 9. 11, “The Lord talked with Moses . . . The Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend.”

Such affirmations as these in the Pentateuch, received as true by Christ Himself, afford the clearest evidence of the divine revelations vouchsafed to Moses, and of the truth of what is contained therein. Such articulate utterances as these from God Himself, speaking in the language of men, may well be regarded as preparations for the Incarnation of the Divine Logos, and for His converse as Man with men face to face on earth; and for the continual sounding forth of His own blessed words, as recorded by the Holy Spirit in the Gospel, in the ears of all — the voice of one speaking] Rather, the voice speaking.

VIII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto Aaron, and say unto him, When thou ^a lightest the lamps, the seven lamps shall give light over against the candlestick. ³ And Aaron did so; he lighted the lamps thereof over against the candlestick, as the LORD commanded Moses. ⁴ ^b And this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold, unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was ^c beaten work: ^d according unto the pattern which the LORD had shewed Moses, so he made the candlestick.

^a Ex. 25. 37. & 40. 25.

^b Ex. 25. 31.

^c Ex. 25. 18.
^d Ex. 25. 40.

⁵ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁶ Take the Levites from among the children of Israel, and cleanse them. ⁷ And thus shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them: Sprinkle ^e water of purifying upon them, and ^f let them shave all their flesh, and let them wash their clothes, and so make themselves clean. ⁸ Then let them take a young bullock with ^g his meat offering, even fine flour mingled with oil, and another young bullock shalt thou take for a sin offering. ⁹ ^h And thou shalt bring the Levites before the tabernacle of the congregation: ⁱ and thou shalt gather the whole assembly of the children of Israel together: ¹⁰ And thou shalt bring the Levites before the LORD: and the children of Israel ^k shall put their hands upon the Levites: ¹¹ And Aaron shall [†] offer the Levites before the LORD for an [†] offering of the children of Israel, that [†] they may execute the service of the LORD. ¹² ¹ And the Levites shall lay their hands upon the heads of the bullocks: and thou shalt offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, unto the LORD, to make an atonement for the Levites.

^e ch. 19. 9, 17, 18
^f Heb. let them cause a razor to pass over, &c.
^g Lev. 14. 8, 9.
^h Lev. 2. 1.

^h See Ex. 29. 4. & 40. 12.

ⁱ Lev. 8. 3.

^k Lev. 1. 4.

[†] Heb. wave.
[†] Heb. wave offering.
[†] Heb. they may be to execute, &c.
¹ Ex. 29. 10.

¹³ And thou shalt set the Levites before Aaron, and before his sons, and offer them for an offering unto the LORD. ¹⁴ Thus shalt thou separate the Levites from among the children of Israel: and the Levites shall be ^m mine.

^m ch. 3. 45. & 16. 9.

CH. VIII. 1. And the LORD spake] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xii. 16. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Zech. ii. 10 to iv. 7, concerning the investiture of Joshua, the High Priest, with fair garments, and his coronation with the fair mitre, and the restoration of the Church by Christ, THE BRANCH, and the vision of the Golden Candlesticks fed by the two olive-trees with pure oil, representing the Universal Church fed by the Oil of the Holy Spirit in the two Testaments, and diffusing their light to the World: see below, note on Rev. xi. 3, 4.

2. When thou lightest the lamps] Literally, when thou makest the lamps to ascend.

— over against the candlestick] that is, towards its central shaft. Cp. Exod. xxv. 34, 35 (Jarchi). The practice was to light the middle light from the altar; and the light of the Branches—beginning with the nearest to the centre—from the middle light (Maimon, on the Daily Sacrifice, iii. 12); and the Hebrew expositors say that the Branches and Lights upon them converged inward over against or toward the central shaft (Ainsworth, p. 51).

4. of beaten gold] solid, not hollow, but as it were of one piece (cp. Exod. xxv. 31—39; xxxvii. 17—24), signifying the Unity of that which the golden Candlestick represented—viz., the Christian Church (cp. note on Rev. i. 12, and xi. 3, 4). The Candlestick was made according to the pattern which God had shewed to Moses, and therefore exhibits what, in the divine will, a Church ought to be.

6. Take the Levites] who had not offered any thing among the Twelve Tribes in the Dedication of the Altar; but are themselves to be offered to God.

— cleanse them] “Be ye clean, ye that bear the vessels of the Lord” (Isa. lii. 11).

7. shave all their flesh] an emblem (as the Rabbis themselves own—e. g., R. Ben Gerson) of the spiritual freedom from worldly care and taint (see Lev. xiv. 8. Num. vi. 9), which ought to characterize God’s ministers. Compare St. Paul’s directions to Timothy, 2 Tim. ii. 4. 22. The Levites are sprinkled with water, but are not, like the priests, anointed with oil; nor do we read of any special dress appointed for the Levites, as for the Priests

Christians, who, in a large and comprehensive meaning, are dedicated to God’s service: see 1 Pet. ii. 5, “Ye are a holy priesthood,” to offer spiritual sacrifices. The sprinkling of water, the shaving off of the hair, the washing of the clothes, and all the other ceremonial of the Levitical consecration, are figurative of the work of regeneration, renewal, and sanctification which is begun in baptism, and is carried on through the Christian life by the operation of the Holy Ghost, not without the continual co-operation of the human will, “perfecting holiness in the fear of God” (2 Cor. vii. 1). See S. Cyril de Ador. xi. p. 408.

On the differences between the ceremonies used in the consecration of Priests (Exod. xxix. 5—14. Lev. viii. 2—21), and the setting apart of the Levites to be their ministers, see Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 177. 428.

In the three orders—the High Priesthood, the Priesthood, and the Leviteship of the Ancient Church of God—the earliest Christian Fathers saw a foreshadowing of the three orders of the Christian Ministry: see S. Clement, Epist. i. 40. S. Jerome ad Nepotian. i. p. 260, ed. Vallars; and cp. note below, on Luke x. 1; and on Acts vi. 3—6.

8. his meat offering] See Lev. ii. 1, and Num. xxviii. 12. 14. — a sin offering] Which was offered before the burnt-offering and meat-offering. See v. 12, and above, on vi. 16.

A Bullock was offered for a sin-offering, in three cases only, viz., for the High Priest, the Congregation (Lev. iv. 3. 13. 21), and the Levites. This showed the special need which the Ministers of God have of Christ’s atoning sacrifice for their sins. Their sins were regarded as tantamount to those of all the Congregation collectively.

10. the children of Israel shall put their hands upon the Levites] Probably by the Twelve Princes as their representatives, or, as some of the Rabbis suppose, by the firstborn; and by putting their hands upon them, they devolved on them their obligation to assist the Priests in the service of the sanctuary, and to make atonement for the children of Israel (p. 19).

11. shall offer the Levites] Literally, shall wave the Levites as a wave-offering to God from the people. The word here used is naph, to wave, to shake to and fro. Cp. Exod. xxix. 24. Lev. vii. 30, and see Gesenius, p. 540, who supposes that, at their consecration, the Levites were led to and fro before the altar.

¹⁵ And after that shall the Levites go in to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation: and thou shalt cleanse them, and ⁿ offer them for an offering. ¹⁶ For they are wholly given unto me from among the children of Israel; ^o instead of such as open every womb, even instead of the firstborn of all the children of Israel, have I taken them unto me. ¹⁷ ^p For all the firstborn of the children of Israel are mine, both man and beast: on the day that I smote every firstborn in the land of Egypt I sanctified them for myself. ¹⁸ And I have taken the Levites for all the firstborn of the children of Israel. ¹⁹ And ^q I have given the Levites as [†] a gift to Aaron and to his sons from among the children of Israel, to do the service of the children of Israel in the tabernacle of the congregation, and to make an atonement for the children of Israel: ^r that there be no plague among the children of Israel, when the children of Israel come nigh unto the sanctuary.

²⁰ And Moses, and Aaron, and all the congregation of the children of Israel, did to the Levites according unto all that the LORD commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did the children of Israel unto them. ²¹ ^a And the Levites were purified, and they washed their clothes; [†] and Aaron offered them as an offering before the LORD; and Aaron made an atonement for them to cleanse them. ²² ^u And after that went the Levites in to do their service in the tabernacle of the congregation before Aaron, and before his sons: ^{*} as the LORD had commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did they unto them.

²³ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁴ This is it that belongeth unto the Levites: ^v from twenty and five years old and upward they shall go in [†] to wait upon the service of the tabernacle of the congregation: ²⁵ And from the age of fifty years they shall [†] cease waiting upon the service thereof, and shall serve no more: ²⁶ But shall minister with their brethren in the tabernacle of the congregation, ^z to keep the charge, and shall do no service. Thus shalt thou do unto the Levites touching their charge.

IX. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the first month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying, ² Let the children of Israel also keep ^a the passover at his appointed

n ch. 11, 13.
o ch. 3, 12, 45.
p Ex. 13, 2, 12, 13, 15, ch. 3, 13.
Luke 2, 23.
q ch. 3, 9.
† Heb. given.
r ch. 1, 53, & 16, 46, & 18, 5.
2 Chron. 26, 16.
s ver. 7.
t ver. 11, 12.
u ver. 15.
x ver. 5, &c.

y See ch. 4, 3, 1 Chron. 23, 3, 24, 27, to wear the warfare of, &c.
1 Tim. 1, 18.
† Heb. return from the warfare of the service.
z ch. 1, 53.

a Ex. 12, 1, &c.
Lev. 23, 5.
ch. 28, 16. Deut. 16, 1, 2.

¹⁵. offer them] Wave them (see vv. 11, 13), so that this is the third time that this command is repeated, according to the number of the three classes of Levites (Jarchi).

¹⁶. instead of such as open every womb] See above, on iii. 12, 43—45.

¹⁷. on the day that I smote every firstborn in the land of Egypt I sanctified them] That is, all they that were born after that day—the firstborn males of man and beast—were then declared to be Mine (see above, on iii. 43—45). The word “day” includes the night, for the Egyptians were smitten at midnight. Cp. Mark xiv. 30.

¹⁸. And I have taken the Levites for all the firstborn of the children of Israel] On account of the faithfulness, zeal, and courage, which was shown by the Levites on behalf of My honour and worship, when the rest of the children of Israel rebelled against Me by idolatry, and when even Aaron lent himself to be a minister of their sin (see Exod. xxxii. 26, 29).

¹⁹. to make an atonement] Not as if the Levites could exercise the Priest's office, but because they ministered to the Priests who made atonement for the people, and because they ministered in those holy services of the Tabernacle, by which God's anger against sin was appeased, and because they did this in behalf of the people, whose representatives and substitutes they were. Thus Phinehas is said to have “made an atonement” for the children of Israel (Nun. xxv. 7, 8, 13).

— that there be no plague] In consequence of any act of omission or commission, from their ignorance of the prescribed ritual of the sanctuary.

²⁰. And Moses] Moses presented the Levites (v. 13), Aaron waved them (v. 11), the people put their hands on them (v. 10). Each party had his appointed work in their consecration.

²⁴. from twenty and five years] Cp. iv. 3, where they are described as entering on their office at thirty years of age, whence it is supposed by some that they had five years' probation before they were fully admitted to their ministry.

It is thought by others (Hengst., Keil), that when the age of thirty is mentioned, the reference is to the laborious work of carrying the furniture of the itinerant Tabernacle in its marches, and that the age of twenty-five is that at which the Levites were admitted to serve in it when stationary. At the close of David's reign they were admitted to serve in it at twenty years of age (1 Chron. xxiii. 24—27), and the reason stated for the change is, that God had given His people rest in Zion, and that it was no longer the duty of the Levites to carry the Tabernacle.

²⁵. from the age of fifty years] The Levites were then released from service. Not so the Priests, who continued their service as long as they lived.

CH. IX. 1. in the first month of the second year] And therefore before the numbering of the people, which was in the first day of the second month (i. 1, 2), but the mention of the Passover is inserted here, in connexion with the law for the iteration of the Passover in the second month, in certain special cases (vv. 6—11).

². keep the passover] Literally, do the passover; therefore the Sept. has ποιείτωσαν, whence our Lord says in the Gospels, ποιῶ τὸ πάσχα (Matt. xxvi. 18), and in the Christian Passover, season. ³ In the fourteenth day of this month, † at even, ye shall keep it in his appointed season: according to all the rites of it, and according to all the ceremonies thereof, shall ye keep it. ⁴ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should keep the passover. ⁵ And ^b they kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month at even in the wilderness of Sinai: according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did the children of Israel.

† Heb. between the two evenings. Ex. 12. 6.

b Josh. 5. 10.

⁶ And there were certain men, who were ^c defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day: ^d and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day: ⁷ And those men said unto him, We are defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel? ⁸ And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and ^e I will hear what the LORD will command concerning you. ⁹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁰ Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you or of your posterity shall be unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD. ¹¹ ^f The fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and ^g eat it with unleavened c ch. 5. 2. & 19. 11, 16. See John 18. 28. d Ex. 18. 15, 19 26. ch. 27. 2.

e ch. 27. 5.

f 2 Chron. 30. 2, 15. g Ex. 12. 8.

the Holy Eucharist, He says τοῦτο ποιεῖτε, do this in remembrance of Me—for commemoration of Me (Luke xxii. 19).

A question is raised here,

On the number of lambs killed at the Passover; and how three Priests (Aaron, Eleazar, and Ithamar) were able to do the work required of them at that festival? It seems probable that the blood of the lambs or kids was to be sprinkled on the altar (Lev. xvii. 3—6).

On these questions it may be observed:

(1) Children under ten or twelve years of age, and the sick, are not to be counted in the number of participants in the Passover; nor women, who were unclean from childbirth, nor men or women who were unclean in any respect. The number of those who partook in the Passover may be reckoned at 1,000,000.

(2) In the time of Josephus (B. J. vi. 9. 3) between ten and twenty persons partook together of a lamb. Many more might combine to do so; and in the wilderness, where lambs would not be plentiful, many more probably did so. The Jewish authorities state, that a man satisfied his paschal duty if he tasted a small morsel—even the size of an olive.

(3) The number of lambs or kids required at this time may have been about 50,000, or less (Benisch, p. 110).

(4) These lambs, or kids, were not all killed in the forecourt of the sanctuary; and if their blood was sprinkled by the Priests at the Altar, this was done with the help of the Levites (see 2 Chron. xxx. 16), “between the two evenings,” in the course of about three hours (see Exod. xii. 6).

(5) We know little of the arrangements for accomplishing this work in the Tabernacle in the wilderness, and all speculations concerning it rest on precarious data. But we do know as a matter of history from Josephus, that in his age the blood of not less than 250,000 lambs was sprinkled at the altar in Jerusalem, within the assigned limits of time, at the Passover (Josephus, B. J. vi. 9. 3). And if this could be done, then it is certain that the blood of a fifth of that number could be sprinkled at the Altar in the Tabernacle in the wilderness. Cp. Kurtz, iii. pp. 210—214. Keil, pp. 211, 212. Dr. McCaul on Colenso, pp. 59. 136—147. Dr. Benisch, pp. 107—109.

(6) It must be remembered that only one Passover was kept by the Israelites in the Wilderness (see above, Introd. to the Pent. pp. 31, 32; and below, on xv. 2); and at the expiration of those forty years, the number of Priests may have considerably increased, and have been amply sufficient for the service.

6. there were certain men, who were defiled by the dead body of a man] Perhaps Mishael and Elizaphan, who had buried Nadab and Abihu: see above, on Lev. x. 1—4.

This appears probable from the following considerations:—

The Tabernacle was set up on the first day of the first month (Exod. xl. 2), thirteen days before the Passover (Lev. xxiii. 5), and Aaron and his sons, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, were consecrated to minister in it; and the consecration lasted seven days (Lev. viii. 6. 12. 30. 33), and on the eighth day they offered sin-offerings for themselves and the people; and on that day two of Aaron’s sons, Nadab and Abihu, were cut off for offering strange fire (Lev. x. 1, 2).

From a comparison of the census taken and the number of half-shekels paid a little before the erection of the Tabernacle (Exod. xxxviii. 26), and of the census taken a little after its erection (Num. i. 1. 46), it appears that no Israelite had died above twenty years of age from the tribes which were included in the census, and that therefore the death here mentioned must have been from among the Tribe of Levi, which was not comprised in the census (Exod. xxxviii. 26).

We know that two persons of that tribe died in that interval—viz., Nadab and Abihu, and that they were buried by Mishael and Elizaphan (Lev. x. 4), who thus incurred ceremonial uncleanness for seven days (Num. xix. 11), and could not come into the sanctuary (Num. v. 2), nor eat of the holy things (Lev. vii. 20), and therefore could not keep the Passover (cp. Blunt, Coincidences, p. 62).

7. the dead body] Literally, the soul (nephesh); so the word nephesh is used v. 2; vi. 6. Lev. xix. 28; xxi. 1; xxii. 4. Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. v. p. 232.

8. Stand still, and I will hear] This reply, while it is a proof of the reverential modesty of Moses, is also an evidence of his faith in God’s promise that He would speak to him from the oracle (Exod. xxv. 22. Cp. Num. vii. 89); and the reception of this book of Numbers by the Hebrew Church, as a true and divinely-inspired history, is a demonstration that the people of Israel were convinced of the reality of the divine communion by oral intercourse with Moses.

10. in a journey afar off] The Hebrew expositors explain this by a distance of fifteen miles or more from the Tabernacle or Temple, on the 14th day of Abib, at sunrise (Maimon.).

There are special marks (“puncta extraordinaria”) over the word “rechokah,” afar off, in the Hebrew Bibles, intimating that it needs special consideration, or, as some think, that it is not genuine. Cp. Mishna, Pesach. ix. 2; and Drusius here.

To us Christians, who were “once afar off,” but are now brought near in Christ (Eph. ii. 1. 13), and who are able to offer “incense and a pure offering in every place, from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same” (Mal. i. 11), they suggest special motives for thankfulness, because no true Israelite is precluded from keeping the feast, and from feeding on Christ our Passover, who is sacrificed for us (1 Cor. v. 7).

But how can the literal Israelites keep the Passover? They are scattered throughout the world; they are in “a journey afar off” from Jerusalem, and even when they arrive there, they find no Sanctuary where they may kill the Passover. Is it not therefore certain that the Levitical Law has now been fulfilled? Is it not fulfilled in Christ? May God in His mercy enable them to see it there! See 2 Cor. xiii. 14—16; and above, on Exod. xii. 6. 14; and on Lev. xvi. 29.

11. unleavened bread] Exod. xii. 8.

h Ex. 12. 10.
i Ex. 12. 46.
John 19. 36.
k Ex. 12. 43.

l Gen. 17. 14.
Ex. 12. 15.
m ver. 7.

n ch. 5. 31.

o Ex. 12. 49.

p Ex. 40. 34.
Neh. 9. 12, 19.
Ps. 78. 14.
q Ex. 13. 21. & 40.
38.

r Ex. 40. 36.
ch. 10. 11, 33, 34.
Ps. 80. 1.

e 1 Cor. 10. 1.

† Heb. prolonged.

t ch. 1. 53. & 3. 8.

† Heb. was.

u Ex. 40. 36, 37.

x ver. 19.

bread and bitter herbs. ¹² ^h They shall leave none of it unto the morning, ⁱ nor break any bone of it: ^k according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it. ¹³ But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and forbearth to keep the passover, even the same soul ^l shall be cut off from among his people: because he ^m brought not the offering of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall ⁿ bear his sin. ¹⁴ And if a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ^o ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger, and for him that was born in the land.

¹⁵ And ^p on the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the tent of the testimony: and ^q at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire, until the morning. ¹⁶ So it was alway: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

¹⁷ And when the cloud ^r was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents. ¹⁸ At the commandment of the LORD the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the LORD they pitched: ^s as long as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents. ¹⁹ And when the cloud ^t tarried long upon the tabernacle many days,

then the children of Israel ^u kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not. ²⁰ And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed. ²¹ And so it was, when the cloud ^v abode from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed. ²² Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel ^w abode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed. ²³ At the commandment of the LORD they rested in the tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they ^x kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

X. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Make thee two trumpets of — bitter herbs] Exod. xii. 8.

12. unto the morning] Exod. xii. 10.

— nor break any bone] See Exod. xii. 46.

13. the same soul shall be cut off] See above, on Exod. xii. 15.

14. a stranger] a proselyte: see Exod. xii. 48.

15. on the day that the tabernacle was reared up] The first day of the first month of the second year after the Exodus: see Exod. xl. 1. 17.

— the cloud] Exod. xxxiii. 10; xl. 34. 1 Cor. x. 1.

In the New Testament Christ is described as clothed with a cloud (Rev. x. 1), and sitting on the cloud (Rev. xiv. 14—16), and as coming hereafter in a cloud (Luke xxi. 27).

— covered the tabernacle] namely, the tent of the testimony; or rather, covered the tabernacle to (or for, or towards) the tent of the testimony—that is, the position of the cloud was toward that part of the Tabernacle in which the Testimony, or Tables of Law, was—viz., the Holy of Holies, where the Glory of the Lord appeared in a cloud on the Mercy-seat. Cp. Exod. xxv. 16, 17. Lev. xvi. 2.

17. when the cloud was taken up] “In the day time He led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire” (Ps. lxxviii. 14). “Thou leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar, and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go” (Neh. ix. 12. Cp. Exod. xiii. 21, 22; and cp. Bp. Andrewes, v. 142), who observes that these and the following words to the end of this chapter are introductory to the next chapter, where God delegates the power to Moses of ordering the marches of the people by the sound of the silver trumpets.

22. or a month] These words must have been written after the first arrival at Kadesh, mentioned below (xiii. 26), and after their sentence of wandering for forty years in the wilderness (xiv. 34), for they might have reached the borders of Canaan in eleven days from Sinai (Deut. i. 2).

Chr. X. 2. Make thee two trumpets] The Hebrew word here used for trumpet is chatsotserah, which is of doubtful etymology. Some derive it from chatsar, to summon; others from chatsar, to be narrow; others suppose it to be a word intimating the sound (Gesen. 299).

This Trumpet, which was straight, differed from that which is signified by another word often rendered trumpet by our translators—viz., in the history of the delivery of the Law (Exod. xix. 16), the Jubilee (Lev. xxv. 9), the capture of Jericho (Josh. vi. 4, &c. Cp. Judg. iii. 27). That other word is shophar, a cornet (see above, Lev. xxiii. 24), buccina, lituus, which was curved (Joseph, Ant. iii. 12. 6. S. Jerome on Hos. v. 8). The word chatsotserah is generally found in connexion with the priests and joyful occasions (1 Chron. xv. 24. 28; xvi. 6. 2 Chron. v. 12; xiii. 12; xx. 28. Ezra iii. 10. Neh. xii. 35).

silver; of a whole piece shalt thou make them: that thou mayest use them for the ^acalling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps. ³ And ^a when ^b they shall blow with them, all the assembly shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁴ And if they blow ^c but with one trumpet, then the princes, which are ^c heads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee. ⁵ When ye blow an alarm, then ^d the camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward. ⁶ When ye blow an alarm the second time, then the camps that lie ^e on the south side shall take their journey: they shall blow an alarm for their journeys. ⁷ But when the congregation is to be gathered together, ^f ye shall blow, but ye shall not ^f sound an alarm. ⁸ ^h And the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets; and they shall be to you for an ordinance for ever throughout your generations. ⁹ And ⁱ if ye go to war in your land against the enemy that ^k oppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets; and ye shall be ^l remembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies. ¹⁰ Also ^m in the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months, ye shall blow with the trumpets over your burnt offerings, and over the sacrifices of your peace offerings; that they may be to you ⁿ for a memorial before your God: I am the LORD your God.

¹¹ And it came to pass on the twentieth day of the second month, in the

Probably the form of these silver trumpets was like the Jewish trumpets, which may still be seen on the Arch of Titus at Rome (cp. Keil, Archæol. ii. 186, 187).

On the various uses of trumpets, as described in Holy Scripture, see note on Rev. viii. 1.

For evidence of the compliance of the Israelites, in their subsequent history, with this Legislation concerning the Trumpets, see Hengstenberg, Authen. ii. p. 92.

For a Christian application of this text to the history of the Church in Christian times, the reader may consult the learned sermon of Bp. Andrewes (v. 141—168), "On the Right and Power of calling Assemblies," where he proves from the history of the Ancient Church that the authority of summoning Councils of the Church was not in the Bishop of Rome, and that after the Empire became Christian, they could not be gathered together without the consent of Christian Princes, and were usually summoned by their authority. Cp. Article XXI.

— of silver] giving the clearest and shrillest sound (Bp. Andrewes).

The Christian Church has the two silver trumpets of the Two Testaments, with which her Preachers summon her people from their own private habitations to her public assemblies, as the Israelites were summoned from their tents to the Tabernacle of the Lord (S. Cyril de Ador. v. p. 166. Bede, Quæst. in Num. 7).

— of a whole piece] Literally, beaten work, like the golden Candlestick (Exod. xxv. 31).

3. with them] with both of them; for if one only were blown, only the Princes assembled.

— all the assembly shall assemble themselves] to the door of the Tabernacle; to the presence of the Lord, their King, in whose name, and by whose guidance, all their doings were to be ordered.

5. an alarm] teruah, a loud sound: see Lev. xxiii. 24. Cp. v. 9.

— on the east] Judah, and his two associate tribes (ii. 3).

6. on the south] Reuben, and his two associate tribes (ii. 10). The other six tribes are not mentioned, but probably followed immediately after the Ark, which followed Reuben (see ii. 16, 17; and v. 21 of this chapter). The Ark was their signal.

The Septuagint inserts here a mention of those latter six tribes (cp. Joseph., Ant. iii. 12. 6; and Blunt, Coincidences, p. 76).

8. for ever] it is perpetuated in the "everlasting Gospel" (Rev. xiv. 6), which will never cease to sound in the world (Matt. xxiv. 14).

9. if ye go to war—blow an alarm] An alarm—i. e., "to arms." The different sounds of the trumpet had different significations. Hence the Apostle says, "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?"

(1 Cor. xiv. 8. Cp. Theodore here.) And since the trumpets are the instruments of the Church of God, and the blowing of the trumpets is to be "an ordinance for ever," hence the ministers of the Gospel may learn their duty not "to give an uncertain sound" in times of danger, when the enemies of the faith are assailing the camp; but to blow an alarm with power (Isa. lviii. 1. Ezek. xxxiii. 3. 6. Joel ii. 1. 15), and to remember the account they must give at the great day when "the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God" (1 Thess. iv. 16), to awaken them from their graves, and to summon them to give an account of the souls committed to their care.

— ye shall be remembered before the LORD . . . and ye shall be saved from your enemies] Hence the meaning of the Seven Trumpets of the Book of Revelation is to be explained—they are trumpets of alarm to the enemies of God and His Church, and of deliverance to His people; and they end with the last or seventh trumpet, which will awaken all from their graves, and all Christ's enemies will be overthrown, and all His people will be saved (see below, on Rev. viii. 1; xi. 15), and the voice will be heard, "The kingdom of this world has become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ."

In that solemn prophecy, the Holy Spirit recurs to this Mosaic history, where the first mention is made in Scripture of the making of the Trumpets, and raises our eyes from the view of the Church Itinerant in the Wilderness to the Church Glorified in Heaven. The Temple of God in heaven was opened, and the Ark of the Covenant of His people was made manifest (Rev. xi. 19).

10. day of your gladness] See Ps. lxxxi. 3. Cp. 2 Chron. v. 12, at the dedication of the Temple; and Ezra iii. 10, at the return from Babylon; and Neh. xii. 41, at the building of the wall of Jerusalem. Cp. above, on v. 2.

— your solemn days] feast-days: see Lev. xxiii.

— before your God: I am, &c.] Rather, before your God, (even) Me the Lord your God.

11. on the twentieth day] at the end of the second Passover (ix. 11).

The eating of the Passover was, by God's command, a preparation to two great movements in the ancient Hebrew Church in its march onward from Egypt towards the promised land.

The first Passover was the signal for the Exodus; the second Passover was the signal for another movement (after nearly a year's stay at Sinai), on her march toward Canaan.

The third Passover (eaten thirty-nine years after the second) was preparatory to the victorious campaign of Joshua in Canaan: see below, on Josh. v. 10.

All the movements of the Church of Christ derive their vigour and energy from the Blood of the true Passover; and no

o ch. 9. 17.

p Ex. 40. 36.
ch. 2. 9, 16, 24, 31
q Ex. 19. 1. ch.
1. 1. & 9. 5.
r Gen. 21. 21.
ch. 12. 16. & 13.
3, 26.
Deut. 1. 1.
s ver. 5, 6.
ch. 2. 34.
t ch. 2. 3, 9.
u ch. 1. 7.

x ch. 1. 51.

y ch. 4. 24, 31. &
7. 6, 7, 8.

z ch. 2. 10, 16.

a ch. 4. 4, 15. &
7. 9.
|| That is, the Gershonites and the Merarites:
see ver. 17.
ch. 1. 51.
b ch. 2. 18, 24.

c ch. 2. 25, 31.
Josh. 6. 9.

† Heb. These.
d ch. 2. 34.

e Ex. 2. 13.

second year, that the cloud ° was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony. ¹² And the children of Israel took ^p their journeys out of the ^q wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the ^r wilderness of Paran. ¹³ And they first took their journey ^s according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

¹⁴ In the first place went the standard of the camp of the children of Judah according to their armies: and over his host was ^u Nahshon the son of Amminadab. ¹⁵ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Issachar was Nethaneel the son of Zuar. ¹⁶ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Zebulun was Eliab the son of Helon. ¹⁷ And ^x the tabernacle was taken down; and the sons of Gershon and the sons of Merari set forward, ^y bearing the tabernacle. ¹⁸ And ^z the standard of the camp of Reuben set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elizur the son of Shedeur. ¹⁹ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Simeon was Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai. ²⁰ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Gad was Eliasaph the son of Deuel. ²¹ And the Kohathites set forward, bearing the ^a sanctuary: and || the other did set up the tabernacle against they came. ²² And ^b the standard of the camp of the children of Ephraim set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elishama the son of Ammihud. ²³ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Manasseh was Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur. ²⁴ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Benjamin was Abidan the son of Gideoni. ²⁵ And ^c the standard of the camp of the children of Dan set forward, which was the reaward of all the camps throughout their hosts: and over his host was Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai. ²⁶ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Asher was Pagiel the son of Ocran. ²⁷ And over the host of the tribe of the children of Naphtali was Ahira the son of Enan. ²⁸ [†] ^d Thus were the journeyings of the children of Israel according to their armies, when they set forward.

²⁹ And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of ^e Raguel the Midianite, Moses' devout Christian will venture to commence any great work, without first receiving the Holy Communion. No devout Christian will venture to march forward to meet danger and death, without partaking of the Holy Eucharist, his sacred viaticum for eternity.

— in the second year] after the Exodus: see ix. 1.

— the cloud was taken up] the signal for removal; and then the trumpets blew the alarm (v. 5. Cp. Deut. i. 6—8). Man must not blow the trumpet, except he have direction from God. Whatever God declares in His Word, that the Evangelical Priests must proclaim by their silver trumpets.

^{12. took their journeys}] from Sinai to Taberah and Kibroth-hattaavah (xi. 3. 34), thence to Hazeroth, and thence to the wilderness of Paran (xi. 35; xii. 16). Paran is mentioned by anticipation as the aim and end of the journey (Keil).

— the cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran] three days' journey (v. 33) north of Sinai, and not far from Beersheba and Kadesh, and the dwelling of Ishmael (Gen. xxi. 14, 21. Num. xiii. 4. 18. 27), lying between Egypt and Eden (1 Kings xi. 18. Cp. Deut. xxxiii. 2. Habak. iii. 3), where God is described as coming from Paran to Sinai.

Paran is the vast plateau or mountainous highland wilderness that is bounded on the east by the Wady Araba, which stretches itself from the southern extremity of the Dead Sea to the Ælanitic Gulf, and to the west by the wilderness of Shur, which extends from Egypt to Philistia, and to the south by the Deschebel-el-Tih, a spur of the Horeb range, and reaches towards the north to the mountains of the Amorites on the southern frontier of Canaan.

Thus in one march of three days they were brought near to the confines of Canaan, at which they failed to arrive till after thirty-nine years' wanderings; and into which only two (except Levites) entered of the two millions who had come out of Egypt. Such was the punishment for unbelief: Heb. iii. 16—19.

On the topography of Paran, see Williams, Holy City, Appendix, p. 466; and cp. Winer, R. W. B. ii p. 192. Keil.

^{13. They first, &c.}] Rather, they journeyed in precedence. ^{17. bearing the tabernacle}] that is, the boards of it, and the curtains, &c., on the six waggons mentioned in ch. vii. 5—9.

^{21. the sanctuary}] that is, the Ark, Golden Candlestick, Table of Shewbread, Golden Altar, &c., all which they carried on their shoulders (iv. 5—15).

— and the other did set up the tabernacle] The words “the other” are not in the Hebrew Text. This may be translated impersonally or passively: men set up the tabernacle; or, the tabernacle was set up; and so the Vulgate, “tandiu tabernaculum portabatur donec venirent ad erectionis locum” and Onkelos paraphrases it, “the tabernacle was being set up against their coming;” and so the Arabic Version.

^{22. Ephraim}] with Benjamin and Manasseh (ii. 18—24), followed immediately after the Ark, where was the Divine Presence; whence are to be explained the words of the Psalmist, “Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, Thou that leadest Joseph like a flock, Thou that dwellest between the Cherubim, shine forth; before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh stir up thy strength, and come and save us” (Ps. lxxx. 1, 2).

^{25. the reaward}] Literally, the gatherer. Heb. measseph, from asaph, to collect, to gather together the stragglers, to bring up the rear (Gesen. 67); like a shepherd who patiently and carefully gathers together the stragglers of the flock, and helps the weak and weary on the way; and therefore the word is applied to describe the loving-kindness of the Lord Himself by the prophet Isaiah (lii. 12; lviii. 8. Cp. Ps. xxvii. 10. Josh. vi. 9. 13).

^{29. Hobab}] Perhaps the same as Jethro, the father of Zipporah, and father-in-law of Moses: see above, on Exod. ii. 18: iii. 1; and compare Judg. iv. 11; xix. 4. Gesen., p. 315. So father in law, We are journeying unto the place of which the LORD said, ^f I will give it you: come thou with us, and ^g we will do thee good: for ^h the LORD hath spoken good concerning Israel. ³⁰ And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred. ³¹ And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us ⁱ instead of eyes. ³² And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that ^k what goodness the LORD shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.

³³ And they departed from ^l the mount of the LORD three days' journey: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD ^m went before them in the three days' journey, to search out a resting place for them. ³⁴ And ⁿ the cloud of the LORD was upon them by day, when they went out of the camp.

³⁵ And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, ^o Rise up, LORD, and let thine enemies be scattered; and let them that hate thee flee before thee. ³⁶ And when it rested, he said, Return, O LORD, unto the [†] many thousands of Israel.

the Sept., Onkelos, Syriac, and Jarchi. The Arabic and Vulgate translate it ambiguously. Aben Ezra supposes him to have been Zipporah's brother, and the son of Jethro or Reuel; and so Bp. Patrick, and Keil on Exod. ii. 16. Cp. Exod. xviii. 27. The word hobab signifies “beloved” (Gesen. 261).

— we will do thee good] This promise was afterwards fulfilled to the posterity of Jethro; see Judg. i. 16. Cp. 1 Sam. xv. 6.

^{30. I will not go}] Probably he feared the dangers of the way, and the enemies whom they would have to encounter in Canaan. This speech seems to be introduced as the language of the natural man, doubtful of God's power, and not believing His promises; and is contrasted with the faith and obedience of the true Israelite, who relies on God, and goes on his way rejoicing.

^{31. instead of eyes}] Literally, for eyes. Cp. Job xxix. 15. Moses therefore did not neglect or disparage natural means, although he had supernatural guidance.

Moses had already profited by Jethro's advice: see above, on Exod. xviii. 24.

This candid acknowledgment of Moses, that he might profit by Hobab's experience and knowledge of the desert, is an evidence that he was not “exalted above measure by the abundance of his revelations” (2 Cor. xii. 7), and was as free from fanatical enthusiasm as he was from spiritual pride and imperious haughtiness: it is also a strong proof of his honesty as an historian.

We may observe a similar modesty and sobriety in the greatest preachers of Christianity.

St. Paul was equal to the chiefest Apostles in spiritual gifts (2 Cor. xi. 5; xii. 11), yet he sends for his books and his parchments (2 Tim. iv. 13), and he commands Timothy, who had the gift of the Holy Ghost (1 Tim. iv. 14; 2 Tim. i. 6), to give attendance to reading (1 Tim. iv. 13); see below, on 2 Tim. iv. 13.

^{32. what goodness the LORD shall do unto us}] For the fulfilment of this promise, see Judg. i. 16.

^{33. from the mount of the LORD}] Sinai.

— three days' journey] These words are repeated in this verse. They departed from the mount of the Lord three days' journey; and the Ark of the Lord went before them in three days' journey, to search out a resting-place for them.

This term, “three days,” which is often synonymous with on the third day (see Matt. xxvii. 63, 64), is a time distinguished throughout Holy Scripture as bringing to some remarkable termination. On the third day Abraham with Isaac saw the place of sacrifice (Gen. xxii. 4). Moses asked Pharaoh for leave to make three days' journey into the wilderness, that he might sacrifice to the Lord (Exod. v. 3). The people found water in three days (Exod. xv. 22). The people are to be ready to receive the Law on the third day (Exod. xix. 15). They now journey for three days and find rest; within three days they pass over Jordan (Josh. i. 11). On the third day Jonah, the type of Christ, rises from his grave in the sea (Matt. xii. 40). After three days, Christ is found in the temple by His parents (Luke ii. 46). On the third day there is a marriage in Cana of Galilee (John ii. 1). On the third day He is perfected (Luke xiii. 32). On the third day He raised Himself from the dead (John ii. 19. Luke xxiv. 21. Matt. xxvii. 63, 64).

— the ark of the covenant of the LORD went before them]

In this their march from Sinai, the Ark went before them, as it did to lead them over Jordan (Josh. iii. 6). Probably, in the present march, the cloud of the Divine Presence was over the Ark.

^{34. the cloud—was upon them}] The cloud seems to have extended itself from its resting-place on the Ark, so as to become a covering to the host when they left the camp where they had been sheltered by their tents from the sun. Cp. Ps. cv. 38.

^{35, 36. Rise up, LORD . . . Return, O LORD}] Thus they began and ended their marches with prayer, and with the same prayers. And this prayer has ever since that march sounded from the lips of the Church of God: see Ps. exxxii. 8, and Ps. lxxviii., which opens with a reference to this march of God from Sinai through the wilderness: “O God, when Thou wentest forth before the people, when Thou wentest through the wilderness” (v. 7). And the divine Psalmist, full of the Holy Spirit, proceeds from this retrospective vision of the Church in the Wilderness, and of its goings forth from Sinai, to look forward to the glorious march of the Church of Christ through the World, after His Resurrection and Ascension into heaven. “The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels: the Lord is among them, as in the holy place of Sinai. Thou art gone up on high, Thou hast led captivity captive, and received gifts for men, yea, even for thine enemies, that the Lord God might dwell among them” (v. 18).

And the words, “Return, O Lord,” pre-announced the blessed time of rest and peace, when God would abide with His Church on earth, by the gift of the Holy Ghost (whence that Psalm is used on Whitsunday), and will tabernacle for ever with His people in heavenly rest and joy (Rev. vii. 15; xxi. 3).

The Holy Spirit thus teaches us to connect the march of God's Presence in the Ark of the Hebrew Church with the more august march of the Divine Glory in the Church of Christ universal through the world. Cp. the notable sermon of Bp. Andrewes, iii. 219—231. This typical character of the marches of the Hebrew Church, and of its subsequent victories under Joshua in Canaan, is interwoven with the scenery of the Apocalypse. See below, the Introd. to Revelation, p. 148.

An objection has been urged by some critics here. It has been alleged that there is an inconsistency in the sacred record, which describes the position of the Ark in the marches, and that it betokens difference of authorship.

The sacred historian here says that the Ark went before them. In another place it would appear that the Ark was in the middle of the host in its march. See ii. 17.

The passages are quite consistent. God had gone before His people in their Exodus (cp. Exod. xiii. 21), and when the Ark was made, the Mercy-seat was His abode. The Ark was in the middle of the host when they encamped; but when they were to move forward, the cloud of the Divine Presence on the Ark gave the signal, and the Ark went from “before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh” (see v. 21), and took the lead. Cp. Deut. i. 33. Josh. iii. 3—6; and Keil, p. 220.

There are some parenthetic marks in the Spanish and German MSS., enclosing v. 65, because this verse is inserted as a break in the series of the narrative. The Cabalists find a mystic meaning in these marks. Buxtorf, Tiberias, p. 169.

a Deut. 9. 22
 || Or, were as it were complainers.
 † Heb. it was evil in the ears of, &c.
 b Ps. 78. 21.
 c Lev. 10. 2.
 ch. 16. 35.
 2 Kings 1. 12.
 Ps. 106. 18.
 d James 5. 16.
 † Heb. sunk.
 † That is, A burning.
 Deut. 9. 22.
 c As Ex. 12. 38.
 † Heb. lusted a lust.
 † Heb. returned and wept.
 f Ps. 78. 18. & 106.
 14. 1 Cor. 10. 6.
 g Ex. 16. 3.
 h ch. 21. 5.

i Ex. 16. 14, 31.
 † Heb. eye of it as the eye of.
 k Gen. 2. 12.

l Ex. 16. 31.
 m Ex. 16. 13, 14.

n Ps. 78. 21.

o Deut. 1. 12.

p Isa. 40. 11.
 q Isa. 49. 23.
 1 Thess. 2. 7.
 r Gen. 26. 3. &
 50. 24. Ex. 13. 5.

XI. ¹ And ^a when the people || complained, † it displeased the LORD: and the LORD heard it; ^b and his anger was kindled; and the ^c fire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the uttermost parts of the camp. ² And the people cried unto Moses; and when Moses ^d prayed unto the LORD, the fire † was quenched. ³ And he called the name of the place || Taberah: because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

⁴ And the ^e mixt multitude that was among them † fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also † wept again, and said, ^f Who shall give us flesh to eat? ⁵ ^g We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick: ⁶ But now ^h our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes. ⁷ And ⁱ the manna was as coriander seed, and the † colour thereof as the colour of ^k bdellium. ⁸ And the people went about, and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and ^l the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil. ⁹ And ^m when the dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.

¹⁰ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent: and ⁿ the anger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased. ¹¹ And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me? ¹² Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, ^p Carry them in thy bosom, as a ^q nursing father beareth the sucking child, unto the land which thou ^r swarest unto their fathers? ¹³ Whence s Matt. 15. 33. Mark 8. 4.

CH. XI. 1. And when the people complained] Literally, and the people were as complainers of evil in the ears of the Lord; Gesen., p. 65; they murmured at the length of the way; they were changed into murmurers: ἦν ὁ λαὸς γογγύζων (Sept.). Cp. St. Paul's language (1 Cor. x. 10), where he adopts the words of the Sept., and see Jude 16. Thus the sin and punishment of those murmurers and complainers are represented in the New Testament as warnings to Christians.

— the fire of the LORD] The punishments inflicted after the giving of the Law are more severe than those with which they were visited before it (cp. Exod. xiv. 11—15; xv. 24; xvi. 2. 7; xvii. 2—5). How much more severe will God's judgments be upon those who live not only after the delivery of the Law, but of the Gospel! See Heb. x. 26. To them there is a "fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation . . . for our God is a consuming fire" (Heb. x. 27; xii. 29). The fire of Taberah is a faint specimen of the terrors of Gehenna (Mark ix. 43—48. Rev. xx. 14, 15; xxi. 8).

3. Taberah] Burning; from baar, to consume (Ps. lxxxiii. 14. Jer. xx. 9. Gesen. 132). It was not one of the stations in the wilderness.

4. the mixt multitude] Literally, the gathered. See on x. 25, the "reneward," and on Exod. xii. 38.

— fell a lusting] Literally, lusted with lust; the original word, avah, to lust (literally, to turn aside), is connected with the Latin aveo, to desire (Gesen. 19). How was it that they lusted for flesh when they had their cattle? This question is answered in part (v. 22), and it is probable that they lusted for other kind of meat than that. See Aug., Qu. in Exod. 62: "Credidit non eos carnes desiderare quas de pecoribus habere poterant, sed eas quæ deerant. Noverat Deus quid desiderarent, et desiderium eorum quo genere carnis satiaret." Indeed, the mention of fish ("we remember the fish") seems to suggest that this was the flesh for which they lusted. "There is one kind of flesh of beasts, another of fishes," says St. Paul (1 Cor. xv. 39).

5. We remember the fish] They forgot their bondage and their deliverance (cp. Ps. cvi. 21—25). On the abundance of fish in Egypt, see above, Exod. vii. 18, and Diod. Sic., i. 36; Herod., ii. 93; Strabo, xvii. 829; and on its fruitfulness in the vegetables here mentioned, see Plin., N. H. xix. 33; Herod., ii. 125; and the remarks of Hengstenberg, Egypt, i. 202—214; and Oedmann on Exod. xvi. 3; and others in Keil, pp. 223, 224. Hengstenberg (p. 208) supposes that the word rendered "leeks" means a clover-like grass, called "helbeh," which was a common food in Egypt; but this opinion is not authorized by any ancient version.

— freely] Gratis.

6. beside this manna] Angels' food (Ps. lxxxviii. 25), yet loathed as "light bread" (Num. xxi. 5) by carnal men.

Such are the Holy Scriptures and Sacraments to many— who prefer the fish and onions and garlick of the Egypt of worldly wisdom to that heavenly food—even to the living Bread which came down from heaven, and which, as Christ Himself teaches us, was typified by the manna. John vi. 32—35. 48—51: cp. 1 Cor. x. 3; and S. Basil de Spir. Sanct. c. 14; Prosper de Prom. i. 39, who makes this Christian application of this history.

7. And the manna was as coriander seed] See on Exod. xvi. 14. 31.

These words and the following are inserted here to show the sin and blindness of the murmurers, and to be a rebuke to those who, on account of their own sins, have not the eye of faith to discern, and the appetite of love to crave, the beauty and the sweetness of spiritual things. Cp. S. Jerome in Mausion, xiii.; and Bede, Qu. 8, in Num.

— the colour thereof as the colour of bdellium] Beautiful in colour like pearls (see Gen. ii. 12), and pleasant to the taste; yet they could not relish it, for their taste was vitiated. Therefore the spiritual manna is called "hidden manna" in Rev. ii. 17; it is only lovely to those who have their senses quickened by the Spirit of God.

9. when the dew] See Exod. xvi. 13, 14.

12. Have I conceived all this people?] Moses derives his metaphor from a mother, as St. Paul, in his great tenderness does, speaking of his own love to the Galatians, τεκνία μου, οὓς πάλιν ὠδίω (see Gal. iv. 19), and as St. James does, speaking of God's love to His children (see on James i. 18).

— as a nursing father] God Himself did what Moses cannot bear to do; see on Acts xiii. 18, where the true reading, ἐτροφοφόρησεν, is confirmed by this passage. Cp. St. Paul's affectionate language (1 Thess. iii. 7, 8).

should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat. ¹⁴ ^t I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me. ¹⁵ And if thou deal thus with me, "kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not *see my wretchedness.

¹⁶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me ^y seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and ^z officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee. ¹⁷ And I will ^a come down and talk with thee there: and ^b I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone. ¹⁸ And say thou unto the people, ^c Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for ye have wept ^d in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? ^e for it was well with us in Egypt: therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat. ¹⁹ Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days; ²⁰ ^f But even a [†] whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you: because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, ^g Why came we forth out of Egypt?

²¹ And Moses said, ^h The people, among whom I am, are six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month. ²² ⁱ Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them? ²³ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^k Is the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether ^l my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

²⁴ And Moses went out, and told the people the words of the LORD, and ^m gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round the tabernacle. ²⁵ And the LORD ⁿ came down in a cloud, and spake unto him,

15. if thou deal thus with me, kill me] So Elijah complains (1 Kings xix. 4, and Jonah iv. 3). Thus Moses in his candour ingenuously confesses his own weakness here as elsewhere. See on Exod. iv. 14, and Exod. iv. 24—26, and below, vv. 21—23.

16. Gather unto me seventy men] Moses sent twelve spies and ordained seventy elders; so Christ had twelve Apostles and seventy disciples (Euseb., Dem. Ev. iii. p. 93. Cp. Epiphan., Har. 4, on the Office and Work of the Holy Spirit, as shown by this chapter, and S. Athanas. ad Serapion., Ep. i. 4).

Some of the Fathers saw here a foreshadowing of the diffusion of the Holy Spirit among all nations; which were supposed by many of the Hebrews to have been originally seventy in number; see below, on Deut. xxxii. 8, and Bede, Qu. in Num. 9, who says, "descendente in nubes carnis Christo, diffusa est gratia Spiritus Sancti gratia super septuaginta gentium linguis electos." Hence perhaps it is, that this portion of this chapter to v. 30 is appointed to be read on Monday in Whitsun-week, as showing the work of the Holy Spirit in the ancient dispensation. See v. 26.

17. I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them] See the goodness of God; the Holy Spirit becomes ours when we receive Him (Augustine, Qu. 18). In like manner it is said, that the spirit of Elijah—the Holy Spirit which Elijah had, rested on Elisha (2 Kings ii. 15). God took of the spirit that was on Moses, and put it on the seventy elders; not as if the spiritual gifts of Moses were thereby lessened. As the Hebrew Expositors say, Moses was like the central light in the seven-branched golden candlestick which was lighted from God's altar (see viii. 2), and from which the other lights were lighted (cp. Theodore here, Qu. 18). All his gifts were from the Father of lights (James i. 17), who kindled their light at his light to do him honour, and to show the need of unity in government, both of churches and nations, without impairing his lustre. At the same time Almighty God thus showed that none are qualified to be leaders and rulers of a Church or nation, unless they have the gifts of the Spirit. Cp. Exod. xviii. 21. Deut. i. 13. Acts vi. 3. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, iii. 207.

It has been alleged by some modern critics (Vater, Knobel, and others), that this history of the election of the seventy elders is merely an iteration of the act done by Moses at the instance of Jethro (Exod. xviii.). Such objections betray the reckless scepticism of those who make them, and refute themselves. Cp. Keil here, and Ranke, Unters. d. Pent. ii. 183.

Some have supposed that this council of seventy was continued in uninterrupted succession from the time of Moses to the captivity, and revived after the exile, and became the Jewish Sanhedrim. Selden de Syned. i. 14; ii. 4.

20. and it be loathsome unto you] See Ps. lxxviii. 29; cvi. 15. Thus the fulfilments of the desires of the wicked are their destruction. See on the case of Caiaphas and the Jews (John xi. 48): but God, who loves the righteous, often denies their petitions (2 Cor. xii. 8, 9), though He always hears their prayers (Mark xi. 24).

22. Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them] Or rather, shall sheep and cattle be slain for them? Moses does not imply that the sheep were to be slain.

It would seem from this murmuring for want of flesh that they had now no great abundance of cattle. A considerable part of the lambs must have been slain at the Passover mentioned in ch. ix. 5.

This question supplies an answer to some objections against the veracity of one of our Lord's miracles (see on Matt. xv. 33). Here again Moses relates his own lack of faith—an evidence of truth. Compare the case of the Apostles "not considering" the miracles of the loaves (Matt. xvi. 9. Mark vi. 52).

t Ex. 18. 18.

u See 1 Kings 19. 4. Jonah 4. 3.

x Zeph. 3. 15.

y See Ex. 24. 1. 9

z Deut. 16. 18

a ver. 25. Gen. 11. 5. & 18. 21.

Ex. 19. 20.

b 1 Sam. 10. 6.

2 Kings 2. 15.

Neh. 9. 26.

Isa. 44. 3.

Joel 2. 28.

c Ex. 19. 10.

d Ex. 16. 7.

e ver. 5. Acts 7. 39.

f Ps. 78. 29.

& 106. 15.

† Heb. month of days.

g ch. 21. 5.

h Gen. 12. 2.

Ex. 12. 37. & 38.

26. ch. 1. 46.

i See 2 Kin. s

7. 2.

Matt. 15. 33.

Mark 8. 4.

John 6. 7. 9.

k Isa. 50. 2. &

59. 1.

l ch. 23. 19.

Ezek. 12. 25. &

24. 14.

m ver. 16.

n ver. 17.

ch. 12. 5.

q See 2 Kings
7. 15.
p See 1 Sam. 10.
5, 6, 10, & 19.
20, 21, 23.
Joel 2. 28.
Acts 2. 17, 18.
1 Cor. 14. 1, &c.
q See 1 Sam. 20.
26.
Jer. 36. 5.

r See Mark 9. 38.
Luke 9. 49.
John 3. 26.
s 1 Cor. 14. 5.

t Ex. 16. 13.
Ps. 78. 26, 27, 28.
& 105. 40.
† Heb. as it were the way of a day.

u Ex. 16. 36.
Ezek. 45. 11.

x Ps. 78. 30, 31.

† That is, *The
graves of lust.*
Deut. 9. 22.
y ch. 33 17.
† Heb. they were in, &c.

and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, ° when the spirit rested upon them, ^p they prophesied, and did not cease. ²⁶ But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them; and they were of them that were written, but ^a went not out unto the tabernacle: and they prophesied in the camp. ²⁷ And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp. ²⁸ And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses, ^r forbid them. ²⁹ And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? ^s would God that all the LORD's people were prophets, and that the LORD would put his spirit upon them! ³⁰ And Moses gat him into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

³¹ And there went forth a ^t wind from the LORD, and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, [†] as it were a day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, and as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth. ³² And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten ^u homers: and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp. ³³ And while the ^x flesh was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the LORD was kindled against the people, and the LORD smote the people with a very great plague. ³⁴ And he called the name of that place || Kibroth-hattaavah: because there they buried the people that lusted.

³⁵ ^y And the people journeyed from Kibroth-hattaavah unto Hazeroth; and [†] abode at Hazeroth.

25. did not cease] Rather, did not add (see Sept., Syriac): that is, they prophesied that day and no more (Exod. xi. 6. Deut. v. 22. Job xxxviii. 11. Gesen., 354. Keil, 227). This outpouring of the Spirit was only a temporary gift for the authorization of them in their office, but not for a continuance. (Cp. Theodore, Qu. 20.) It was like the gift of tongues to Cornelius and others before baptism; by which it was shown that Gentiles, as well as Jews, were to be received into the Church (see Acts x. 44—46); and like the gift of tongues to the twelve men at Ephesus, who were confirmed by St. Paul, and were a seal of his Apostleship (Acts xix. 6).

26. there remained two—Eldad and Medad] Some persons have alleged that here is a case of prophesying or preaching without a commission to do so; and that God owned Eldad and Medad as prophets, by giving them His Spirit, and that Moses vindicates them, in answer to the remonstrance of Joshua.

But it is expressly stated, that Eldad and Medad were of the men "that were written;" that is, were two of the seventy elders (see Jerus. Targum, and Ben Gerson), and therefore they had a commission to prophesy.

Whether they were disabled by ceremonial uncleanness or any other cause from going into the Tabernacle, or whether they declined to do so from modesty and humility (as S. Jerome supposes in Mansion. xiii.), or from any other less excusable motive, the Holy Spirit says nothing; and Moses did not excuse their not going to the Tabernacle to which they had been called; but he acknowledged the working of God's Spirit in them. They may have done amiss in not going to the Tabernacle. The Holy Spirit sometimes proves the sovereign freedom of His operations by speaking even by the lips of evil men, such as Balaam (Num. xxiv. 2—25), Saul (1 Sam. x. 12), and Caiaphas (John xi. 51). See below, on Mark ix. 40, and on Phil. i. 15—18.

The prophesying of Eldad and Medad apart from Moses, had the good effect of showing that it was not Moses who was the author of the spiritual gift, but the Holy Ghost, who spoke in him and them. (S. Cyril, Catech. 16.) So the speaking of Cornelius with tongues before baptism showed that it is the Holy Ghost who is the Author of the grace given ordinarily by means of Baptism. (See below, note on Acts x. 44—47.)

28. forbid them] Joshua desired that they should be forbidden to prophesy, because they did not prophesy in the same place as the rest. This desire was one of personal jealousy for the honour of Moses his master, and perhaps for his own. It was like the case of St. John in the Gospel, who forbade the man to cast out devils, "because he followeth not us" (see Mark ix. 38, 39. Luke ix. 49, 50). But our Lord reproved St. John, because the man was not casting them out in his own name, but in Christ's Name, and therefore was in spiritual communion with Christ, though not locally associated with Him.

29. Enviest thou] The spirit that dwelleth in us (says St. James, iv. 5) lusteth to envy, but He giveth more grace. Moses had more grace on account of his humility: see the next chapter (xii. 3, "The man Moses was very meek"). It has been supposed by some that St. James had his eye on this history.

— would God that all the LORD's people were prophets] "I wish (says Bp. Andrewes, iii. 314), with all my heart, as did Moses, that all God's people were prophets; but till they be so, I wish they may not prophesy. No more would Moses neither. Are all Prophets? Are all Apostles (1 Cor. xii. 29)? Then if all are not prophets, all may not prophesy."

— that the LORD would put his spirit upon them] As He did at Pentecost (Cyri, Cat. 46).

31. quails] See Exod. xvi. 13.

— two cubits high upon the face of the earth] Some interpret this that they flew at that height (see Vulg. and some of the Rabbis); but the meaning is, that they lay in such quantities about the camp as in some places to reach that height. Cp. Ps. lxxviii. 27. (Rosen., Keil.)

34. Kibroth-hattaavah] graves of the lusting. See above, v. 4. For a divine warning from these graves, see St. Paul's words, 1 Cor. x. 6; and cp. Ps. cvi. 14.

35. Hazeroth] The site of Kibroth-hattaavah and Hazeroth cannot accurately be determined; for the various opinions upon them, see Burckhardt, Syr. p. 808, who identifies Hazeroth with Hudhera (Robinson, i. 223); others (Eries, Kurtz, and Keil) suppose Hazeroth to have been near Bir-el-Themmed; and Kibroth-hattaavah near the southern mountain range of el Ti (the wanderings).

XII. ¹ And Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses because of the || Ethiopian || Or, Cushite. woman whom he had married: for ^a he had † married an Ethiopian woman. ² And they said, Hath the LORD indeed spoken only by Moses? ^b hath he not spoken also by us? And the LORD ^c heard it. ³ (Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth.) ^d ⁴ And the LORD spake suddenly unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and unto Miriam, Come out ye three unto the tabernacle of the congregation. And they three came out. ⁵ ^e And the LORD came down in the pillar of the cloud, and stood in the door of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam: and they both came forth. ⁶ And he said, Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I the LORD will make myself known unto him ^f in a vision, and will speak unto him

a Ex. 2. 21.
† Heb. taken.
b Ex. 15. 20.
Mic. 6. 4.
c Gen. 29. 33.
ch. 11. 1.
2 Kings 19. 4.
Isa. 37. 4.
Ezek. 35. 12, 13
d Ps. 76. 9.
e ch. 11. 25. & 16.
19.

f Gen. 15. 1. & 46.
2. Job 33. 15.
Ezek. 1. 1. Dan. 8. 2. & 10. 8, 16, 17. Luke 1. 11, 22. Acts 10. 11, 17. & 22. 17, 18.

CH. XII. 1. Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses] So that he had foes even in his own household. Miriam is placed first here, because (as may be inferred from her punishment, v. 10) she was foremost in guilt.

Zipporah was probably now dead, and perhaps Miriam the prophetess (Exod. xv. 20) hoped to have a powerful influence over the mind and acts of her brother Moses, and was disappointed at being supplanted by "an Ethiopian woman" (cp. Graves, Pt. i. Lect. iv. p. 66).

— because of the Ethiopian woman whom he had married: for he had married an Ethiopian woman] Supposed by some to be Zipporah, the daughter of Jethro, the priest of Midian (Exod. ii. 21; iv. 25; xviii. 2). But even though it be conceded that Zipporah, a woman of Midian, could be called a Cushite or Ethiopian, yet why should Miriam and Aaron speak against Moses at this time, on account of a marriage which he had contracted many years before? It seems much more probable that Zipporah was now dead, and that Moses had lately taken another wife, an Ethiopian woman (so Josephus, Philo, Kurtz, Ewald, Winer, Baumgarten, Keil).

God had forbidden the Israelites to make marriages with the daughters of Canaan (Exod. xxiv. 16), but not with those of Moab (see Ruth i. 4), or of Cush, or Ethiopia. Joseph had married a wife of Egypt, who became the mother of Ephraim and Manasseh (Gen. xli. 51, 52), who had been blessed by Jacob, and were admitted as heads of tribes among Jacob's own children (Gen. xlviii. 5. 20).

May we not also add, that, in the marriage of Moses, the Giver of the Law, first with a woman of Midian, and next with a woman of Ethiopia, we may recognize a providential dispensation, foreshadowing the future extension of God's gracious promises in the Old Testament to all Nations of the Earth, and the espousal of an Universal Church from the Gentile World by the Divine Bridegroom, Jesus Christ, to which glorious consummation the holy Psalmist of Israel looked forward with joy (Ps. xlv. 9—17)? This opinion is confirmed by an analogy. Miriam and Aaron, the elder sister and elder brother of Moses, murmured against him because he had married an Ethiopian woman; so the Jew, the elder brother in the Gospel, murmured at the reception of the younger brother, the Gentile, into his Father's house: see on Luke xv. 29.

The Jews, Christ's brethren according to the flesh, murmured against Christ (as St. Paul declares, 1 Thess. ii. 16. Acts xxii. 21, 22); and to this day they speak against Him, because He has married a wife from the Gentile world, whom they despise as "an Ethiopian woman;" and yet the beloved spouse pleads for herself in the Canticles, "The King hath brought me into His chambers: we will be glad, and rejoice in Thee, we will remember Thy love more than wine: the upright love Thee. I am black but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon. Look not upon me, because I am black. My mother's children were angry with me" (Cant. i. 4—6).

Accordingly, we find that many of the ancient Christian Fathers see, in this murmuring of Miriam against Moses for marrying an Ethiopian woman, a figure of the murmurs of the Jewish Synagogue against Christ for His marriage with the Church. So S. Irenæus, iv. 37. S. Ambrose, Apol. David, c. 4; Epist. 63, § 57; Ep. 82. S. Jerome ad Fabiol. Mans. 14, in Ezek. xlvii. See also particularly S. Cyril Alex., Glaphyr. in Nun. pp. 377—386; and Origen in Nun. Hom. 6, who says, "Miriam is the type of the ancient People of God. Moses, the figure of the Law, joins himself to the Ethiopian woman, the type of the Church gathered from the heathen world. Moses is the Law, in its spiritual sense; but Miriam, the carnal Synagogue, murmurs at this union, and is indignant at it, together with Aaron the Priest, as the Priesthood was in the days of Christ. But God interferes to justify Moses, and smites Miriam with leprosy, and casts her out of the camp, for her envy and murmuring." The Jewish Nation is now another Miriam, smitten with leprosy; but this leprosy is not perpetual; the period of its seven days' exclusion (see v. 14) will come to an end; when "the fulness of the Gentiles is come in" (Rom. xi. 25), Israel will be saved; the leprosy will depart from the face of the Jewish Miriam, and it will see the glory of God shining in the countenance of Christ (Origen. Cp. S. Prosper de Prædic. ii. 9. Bede in Num. Qu. 10; and S. Bernard in Cantica, Serm. 39).

The Hebrew traditions concerning the marriage of Moses with a princess of Ethiopia (see Joseph., ii. 10. Cp. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 111) seem to have arisen from this history.

². hath he not also spoken by us?] By me, the Priest who bears the Urim and Thummim (Exod. xxviii. 30); and by me the Prophetess, who am inspired by Him (Exod. xv. 20)?

— the LORD heard it] and marked it. So it is said of Reuben's sin, "Israel heard it" (Gen. xxxv. 22).

³. Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth] This is not a gloss inserted by a later hand, as some have supposed; nor does it supply any argument against the genuineness of the Pentateuch. Moses was inspired by the Holy Spirit. God had just spoken of the Spirit that was in Moses: "I will take of the Spirit that is upon thee" (xi. 17).

It is not so much that Moses here speaks of himself, but the Holy Ghost speaks by him, and speaks of him. God bears a tribute to his gentleness, which Moses does not claim as due to himself, but as a gift of God's grace. God here declares, that, by that grace, Moses, who had been admitted to converse with God face to face, "as a man speaketh unto his friend" (Exod. xxxiii. 11), and who had been twice admitted to the divine presence in the Mount for forty days, and had been made the mediator between God and His people—was humble and meek, not "exalted above measure by the abundance of his revelations" (2 Cor. xii. 7. Cp. S. Clement, Ep. i. 17). And though it is probable, that this very meekness had tempted some to presume upon his forbearance, and to murmur against him, yet he was enabled to restrain his anger, and to pray for his enemies (v. 13), although his foes were of his own household; and thus the history bears testimony to the power of God's Holy Spirit, and in the expressive words of the ancient Father, "He crowns His own gifts."

If there had been no adequate occasion for this vindication of Moses, the objections above specified might have been of some weight. But when, in addition to the burden he had to bear from the charge of an ungrateful people who had murmured against him (xi. 4, 5), he was assailed with reproaches from a brother and sister, for doing an act which showed a generous and large-hearted love for other nations, and a desire to impart to them the blessings of Israel, we may recognize in this plain-spoken apology an evidence of the guidance of the same Divine Spirit who afterwards dictated the eloquent apology of the holy apostle St. Paul, vindicating his own authority, and asserting his own apostolic claims to reverence and obedience in opposition to the disparagement and censure of the Judaizing teachers of Corinth: "Am I not an Apostle? Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?" (1 Cor. ix. 1.) "I laboured more abundantly than they all"—even than all the Apostles (as Moses says here

g Gen. 31. 10, 11. g
 i Kings 3. 5.
 Matt. 1. 20.
 h Ps. 105. 26.
 i Heb. 3. 2, 5.
 k 1 Tim. 3. 15.
 l Ex. 33. 11.
 m 1 Cor. 13. 12.
 n Ex. 33. 19.
 o 2 Pet. 2. 10.
 Jude 8.
 p Deut. 24. 9.
 q 2 Kings 5. 27.
 & 15. 5.
 2 Chron. 26. 19, 20.

in a dream. ⁷ ^h My servant Moses is not so, ⁱ who is faithful in all ^k mine house. ⁸ With him will I speak ^l mouth to mouth, even ^m apparently, and not in dark speeches; and ⁿ the similitude of the Lord shall he behold: wherefore then ^o were ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses? ⁹ And the anger of the Lord was kindled against them; and he departed. ¹⁰ And the cloud departed from off the tabernacle; and, ^p behold, Miriam became ^q leprous, white as snow: and Aaron looked upon Miriam, and, behold, she was leprous.

of himself compared with other men), "yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me (1 Cor. xv. 10). I suppose I was not a whit behind the very chiefest Apostles. I am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me" (2 Cor. xii. 11). So Aaron and Miriam compelled Moses to vindicate himself. On this subject see below, on 2 Cor. xi. 17, and Introduction to the Epistles to the Corinthians, p. 75.

We see another parallel instance in the history of Samuel the prophet. In his old age he was cast aside by an unthankful people, who desired to have a king. Samuel takes occasion therefrom to vindicate himself and his own integrity, and he reminds them of the benefits which the Lord had conferred upon them by Moses, by Gideon, by Jephthah, "and by Samuel" (1 Sam. xii. 1—11), and God sanctioned this language by a sign from heaven (1 Sam. xii. 18).

Be it also remembered that this same Moses, who here vindicates himself when there was good reason for doing so, does not fail to censure himself when needful. He recounts his own failings (see above, on Exod. iv. 24), and records the cause of his own exclusion from Canaan (see xx. 10—12). "Il se loue ici sans orgueil, il se blâme ailleurs avec humilité" (Calmet).

Yet further; we must not think of Moses as a common man, but as a providential Personage. He represents a Divine Dispensation; he is the head of the favoured people of God; he is the minister and representative of Jehovah, and therefore merciful above all men; kind to the unthankful and to the evil (cp. Luke vi. 35). Moses is a figure and a forerunner of CHRIST.

God Himself suggests this parallel in describing him "as faithful in all His house" (v. 7), and as one with whom He speaks "face to face." And in this sentence Moses utters, as it were, a prophetic declaration which foreshadows the divine calmness of Christ, "who, when He was reviled, reviled not again" (1 Pet. ii. 23), and who, when loaded with rebukes and reproaches from those whom He loved and came to save, was ready to bear the burdens of others, and took up the words of Moses and said, "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest: take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me, for I am meek (πραῦς, the word of the Sept. here) and lowly in heart" (Matt. xi. 28, 29). Compare S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Num. p. 382; S. Jerome in Zeph. c. iii.; Epist. ad Dardanum, p. 606; Prosper de Prom. ii. 9.

Here also we see an evidence—not of interpolation, as some have alleged—but of genuineness. No forger who had wished to personate Moses would have spoken thus of Moses. No fabricator of a counterfeited would have written thus. He would have coolly calculated the probable effect of such a sentence on the reader, and have carefully abstained from all language that might seem to expose the forgery. He would not have risen to the altitude of the true nobility of the dignified meekness of Moses. All Christian critics, who know that "every Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. iii. 16), and that they form together a consistent whole, dictated by one and the same Spirit, and that all the true saints of God (and Moses was one of the greatest, see v. 6—8) ascribe their graces to Him, and that the saints never imagine that a devout reader will suppose that in speaking of themselves they are praising themselves, and not praising God the Giver of all good,—will see nothing to offend them in this memorable sentence of Moses, but it will rather afford to them an additional proof of the genuineness and inspiration of the Pentateuch.

On this subject the reader may compare the remarks of Origen, Calmet, Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. p. 173; Baumgarten, p. 305; Keil, p. 233.

7. My servant Moses is not so] But much greater than a prophet, because I do not speak to him by visions or dreams, but mouth to mouth (v. 8).

Hence the Hebrew Expositors describe the "gradus Mosaiens" as more exalted than that of the prophets. Cp.

Maimonides in Mish. vii. 1—6, and J. Smith, of Cambridge, Discourses on Prophecy, ch. xi.

The special privileges of Moses, as the Hebrew Expositors note, were—

(1) That he was made partaker of the divine revelations per vigiliam, not in a dream or vision (see v. 6).

(2) That he prophesied without any mediation of angelical power, and by immediate inspiration from God, speaking to him "mouth to mouth," and "face to face" (Exod. xxxiii. 11).

(3) That whereas other prophets were troubled, and fainted at the divine visions, Moses was not so, but "God spake to him as a man to his friend" (Exod. xxxiii. 11).

(4) That he had the liberty of continual access to God, so that he could prophesy at all times (Exod. xxv. 22. Num. vii. 89).

In all these respects Moses, the mediator of the Law, was a faint type and shadow of the well-beloved Son, to whom the Father showeth all things that He Himself doeth (John v. 20).

Hence also we may see the force of the Apostle's argument, when he writes to the Hebrews, and declares to them the unspeakable dignity of Jesus Christ, who is so greatly superior to Moses himself. See Heb. iii. 2—7, where he aptly refers to this passage, and quotes it as it stands in the Septuagint. Cp. Heb. ix. 19; x. 28; and cp. S. Barnabas, Epist. § 14. God spake to Moses mouth to mouth (Exod. xxxiii. 11. Deut. xxxiv. 10), but "the only-begotten Son is in the bosom of the Father" (John i. 18), and "in Him dwelleth all the fulness of the God-head bodily" (Col. i. 19; ii. 9).

7. in all mine house] The house of Israel: the ancient Church of God. Cp. Heb. iii. 6, "whose house are we."

8. wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?] This speech of God to Miriam and Aaron may be applied (says Origen) to all who disparage the Pentateuch. "Some there are who ask, what is the Pentateuch to us? It belongs to the Jews, they say, and not to us Christians. Theirs is the temper of Miriam, who was punished by leprosy. The Pentateuch is a great deal to us, for it speaks to us of Christ; and if we desire that our faces should not be leprous, like that of Miriam, but should be radiant with glory, like that of Moses when he came from the Mount after communing with God, and when he was with Christ on the Mount of Transfiguration, we must see Christ in the Pentateuch" (2 Cor. iii. 13. Origen, Hom. 7).

10. the cloud departed] by reason of God's displeasure; but at the Transfiguration of Christ, a "bright cloud" came and overshadowed them; and behold a voice out of the cloud, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased" (Matt. xvii. 5. Cp. Origen in Num. Hom. 7).

— Miriam became leprous] as King Uzziah did when he invaded the priest's office (2 Chron. xxvi. 20).

Miriam is the type of the Jewish Synagogue murmuring against Christ, who fulfilled the Law of Moses, in uniting to Himself the Church of all nations; and Miriam's leprosy is a figure of the punishment of the Jews, who murmured against Moses when they rejected Christ, of whom Moses wrote; John v. 46. Cp. Rom. i. 2—5; xvi. 25, 26, where St. Paul declares that the Law and the Prophets pre-announced the preaching of the Gospel to all nations. The Jews murmur against Moses, when they murmur against Christ preaching the Gospel to all; and (adds Origen, Hom. 7) not only the Jews, but all heretics, who murmur against Moses and the Old Testament, resemble Miriam and her leprosy.

On the question why Aaron was not also punished, see S. Irenæus, Frag. p. 472, Grabe, who supposes that Miriam was the instigator of Aaron in this jealousy of Moses, and that if Aaron had been punished, the people generally would have been involved in the penalty by the cessation of his priestly ministrations. Cp. Theodoret, Qu. 23. Isidor. Pelusiot., Epist. iii. 152; and S. Chrys., Hom. 3, in Coloss.; and Salvian. de Gubern. Dei, i. p. 27, who observes that Aaron was humbled and put to shame by Miriam's punishment, and by being constrained to make a humble and public apology to Moses, and to sue to him ¹¹ And Aaron said unto Moses, Alas, my lord, I beseech thee, ^rlay not the sin upon us, wherein we have done foolishly, and wherein we have sinned. r 2 Sam. 19. 19. & 24. 10. Prov. 30. 32.

¹² Let her not be ^sas one dead, of whom the flesh is half consumed when he cometh out of his mother's womb. ¹³ And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, s Ps. 59. 4.

Heal her now, O God, I beseech thee. ¹⁴ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^tIf her father had but spit in her face, should she not be ashamed seven days? t See Heb. 12. 9.

let her be ^ushut out from the camp seven days, and after that let her be received in again. ¹⁵ ^xAnd Miriam was shut out from the camp seven days: and the people journeyed not till Miriam was brought in again. u Lev. 13. 46. ch. 5. 2, 3. x Deut. 24. 9. 2 Chron. 26. 20, 21.

¹⁶ And afterward the people removed from ^yHazereth, and pitched in the wilderness of Paran. y ch. 11. 55. & 33. 13.

XIII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² ^aSend thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ruler among them. a ch. 32. 8. Deut. 1. 22.

³ And Moses by the commandment of the LORD sent them ^bfrom the wilderness of Paran: all those men were heads of the children of Israel. ⁴ And these were their names: of the tribe of Reuben, Shammua the son of Zaccur. b ch. 12. 16. & 32. 8. Deut. 1. 19. & 9. 23.

⁵ Of the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat the son of Hori. ⁶ ^cOf the tribe of Judah, ^dCaleb the son of Jephunneh. ⁷ Of the tribe of Issachar, Igal the son of Joseph. c ch. 34. 19. 1 Chron. 4. 15. d ver. 30. ch. 14. 6, 30. Josh. 14. 6, 7, 13, 14. Judg. 1. 12. e ver. 16.

⁸ Of the tribe of Ephraim, ^eOshea the son of Nun. ⁹ Of the tribe of Benjamin, Palti the son of Raphu. ¹⁰ Of the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel the son of Sodi.

¹¹ Of the tribe of Joseph, namely, of the tribe of Manasseh, Gaddi the son of Susi. ¹² Of the tribe of Dan, Ammiel the son of Gemalli. ¹³ Of the tribe of Asher, Sethur the son of Michael. ¹⁴ Of the tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi the son of Vophsi. ¹⁵ Of the tribe of Gad, Geuel the son of Machi. ¹⁶ These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called for pardon; and we see that Moses, and not Aaron the priest, intercedes with God for Miriam.

^fOshea the son of Nun Jehoshua. f ver. 8. Ex. 17. 9. ch. 14. 6, 30.

^{12. when he cometh out of his mother's womb}] The Sept. here uses the remarkable word ἐκτρομα; and it is observable that St. Paul, who also, in self-vindication, glorified himself, as Moses does (see on v. 3), in his humility adopts this word, applied to Miriam here, and calls himself the ἐκτρομα among the Apostles: see below, on 1 Cor. xv. 8.

^{13. Moses cried unto the LORD}] A proof of his meekness. — ^{Heal her now, O God, I beseech thee}] The ancient Christian Fathers, who see in Miriam's murmuring, and jealousy of Moses, because he married an Ethiopian woman, a type and figure of the Synagogue murmuring against Christ, for espousing a Church from the Gentiles (see above, on v. 1), recognize in this prayer for Miriam's restoration, an intercession of Christ for the Jews, and a prayer for their conversion. See Origen in Num. Hom. 6, 7; and S. Jerome, Epist. ad Fabiol. l. c., Mans. 14. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. p. 386.

— ^{O God}] Heb. El-na. On this union of words, see Keil, p. 236. The name El is specially used in appeals for mercy: see Gen. xiv. 18; and R. Menachem there.

^{14. If her father}] If her earthly father had put her to shame for her insolence to his son, her own brother, should she not be humbled for seven days?—how much more when I, her heavenly Father, have made her leprous for her contumely to Me, in the person of my faithful servant in my house, her own brother Moses?

— ^{had but spit in her face}] A sign of repudiation. The Synagogue is rejected by God, who was both Father and Husband (Isa. liv. 5) to the Hebrew Nation, for its murmuring against Christ's goodness to the heathen (Origen).

^{15. Miriam was shut out}] An evidence of the honesty and veracity of the writer. Who would have ventured to assert this of Miriam, if it were not true? And the reception of this book by the Hebrew Church is a public testimony to its truth.

— ^{the people journeyed not}] While Miriam is shut out for leprosy, the people make no progress toward Canaan: but when the leprosy is taken away, they march onward to the Land of Promise. The time will come when the leprosy of the Synagogue will be healed, and then the Jewish People will march onward to their heavenly rest (Origen, Hom. 7).

— ^{was brought in}] Literally, was gathered; see on x. 25. ^{16. the wilderness of Paran}] See x. 12. The places where they pitched were Rithmah (xxxiii. 18), probably Wady Retemat, and Kadesh-barnea (see xiii. 2, 3, 26; xx. 16. Deut. i. 19), on the southern frontier of Canaan (ep. Keil, pp. 236. 276).

CHR. XIII. 1. ^{And the LORD spake}] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xv. 41. The parallel Haphtarah is Joshua ii. 1—24, containing the history of the reception by Rahab, at Jericho, of the two spies sent by Joshua from Shittim. Thus the history of Joshua's faithfulness here in the wilderness is connected with the history of its blessed results to Israel in Canaan.

^{2. Send thou men}] This command of God was in compliance with the desire of the people (Deut. i. 19—24); a circumstance which aggravated the sin of the people in murmuring against Him (xiv. 2).

— ^{of every tribe . . . a man}] Twelve spies, as afterwards twelve Apostles, who failed for fear in the hour of trial, as the spies did (Matt. xxvi. 56. Mark xiv. 50); but were afterwards endued with power and courage from on high (Luke xxiv. 49), and became new men, and spake the word of God with boldness (Acts iv. 13. 29. 31), when they had received the Holy Ghost, which the Law of Moses could not bestow.

The spies represent the weakness of the natural man, without spiritual grace. He may see miracles as the spies had done, but he will faint in the time of danger if he have not the Spirit of God (cp. 2 Tim. i. 7). The twelve spies show what the Law is without the Gospel; and what the twelve Apostles would have been without the Day of Pentecost.

^{16. And Moses called Oshea the son of Nun Jehoshua}] He had been called Joshua before by anticipation (Exod. xvii. 9. Num. xi. 28), but the name is imposed now, because now he became in an eminent degree a type of our divine JOSHUA, who has explored for us the heavenly Canaan, and has brought a true

17 And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way ^a southward, and go up into ^b the mountain: 18 And see the land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many; 19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents, or in strong holds; 20 And what the land is, whether it be ^c fat or lean, whether there be wood therein, or not. And ^d be ye of good courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. Now the time was the time of the firstripe grapes. 21 So they went up, and searched the land ^e from the wilderness of Zin unto ^f Rehob, as men come to Hamath. 22 And they ascended by the south, and came unto Hebron; where ^g Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmi,

g ver. 21.
h Gen 14, 10.
Judg. 1, 9, 19.

i Neh. 9, 25, 35.
Ezek. 34, 14.
k Deut. 31, 6, 7, 23.

l ch. 34, 3.
Josh. 15, 1.
m Josh. 19, 28.

n Josh. 11, 21, 22.
o 15, 13, 14.
Judg. 1, 10.

report of that good land in the Gospel, and will lead all faithful Israelites into it. See Justin Martyr, Dial. c. Tryphon. c. 75. 106. 113. 132. pp. 301. 365. 377 (Thirlby). Tertullian adv. Jud. c. 9; c. Marcion. iii. 16. Euseb., E. H. i. 3; Dem. Evang. iv. 37. Lactant. de Verâ Sap. iv. 37. S. Augustine c. Faust. xvi. 18. S. Cyril ad Julian. viii. p. 23. Theodoret, Qu. 25; and see below, the Introduction to the Book of Joshua.

Bp. Pearson thus writes (on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 131, ed. Camb. 1859): "His first name, then, imposed at his circumcision, was Osheah, or Hoseah; and the interpretation of this first name, Hoseah, is Saviour (or salvation: see Gesen., p. 220). Now we must not imagine this to be no mutation, neither must we look upon it as a total alteration, but observe it as a change not trivial or inconsiderable. And since Hoseah was a name afterwards used by some, and Jehoshuah, as distinct, by others, it will necessarily follow, there was some difference between these two names; and it will be fit to inquire what was the addition, and in what the force of the alteration doth consist.

"First, therefore, we observe that all the original letters in the name Hoseah are preserved in that of Joshua; from whence it is evident, that this alteration was not made by a verbal mutation, as when Jacob was called Israel, nor by any literal change, as when Sarai was named Sarah; nor yet by diminution or mutilation; but by addition, as when Abram was called Abraham. Secondly, it must be confessed that there is but one literal addition, and that, of that letter which is most frequent in the Hebrew names; but being thus solemnly added by Moses, upon so remarkable an occasion as the viewing of the land of Canaan was, and that unto a name already known, and after used, it cannot be thought to give any less than a present designation of his person to be a Saviour of the people, and future certainty of salvation, included in his name, unto the Israelites by his means. For it may be well thought that the letter yod is prefixed to make the name the same with the future hiphil, so that the word may signify, he shall save. Thirdly, though the number of the letters be augmented actually but to one, yet it is not improbable that another may be virtually added, and in the signification understood. For since the first letter of Hoseah will not endure a duplication, and if the same letter were to be added, one of them must be absorbed; it is possible another of the same might be by Moses intended, and one of them suppressed. If then unto the name Hoseah we join one of the titles of God, which is Jah, there will result from both, by the custom of that Hebrew tongue, Jehoshua, and so not only the instrumental, but also the original cause of the Jews' deliverance will be found expressed in one word, as if Moses had said, 'This is the person by whom God will save His people from their enemies.'" Gesenius also (pp. 339. 373) supposes the word to be compounded of Jehovah; and the latter part to be yeshua, salvation; and he compares the word Eli-shua. Ibid. p. 52; see also Keil, p. 239; and Minert, Lex. in v. Ἰησοῦς.

"Now since we have thus declared that Jesus is the same name with Josuah, and Joshua is called Jesus in the Sept. version, and in the Vulgate, and in the New Testament itself (Acts vii. 44, 45. Heb. iv. 8); since also the name of Josuah was first imposed by divine designation, as a certain prediction of the fulfilling to the Israelites, by the person which bare the name, all which was signified by the name; since JESUS was likewise named by a more immediate imposition from heaven, even by the ministrations of an angel, it followeth that we believe he was infallibly designed by God to perform unto the sons of men whatsoever is implied in his nomination. As therefore in Hoseah there was expressed salvation, in Josuah at least was added the designation of that single person to save, with certainty of preservation, and probably even the name of God, by whose appointment and power he was made a Saviour; so shall we find the same in JESUS. In the first salutation the angel Gabriel told the blessed Virgin she should conceive in her womb, and bring forth a son, and should call His name JESUS (Luke i. 31). In the dream of Joseph the angel of the Lord informed him not only of the nomination, but of the interpretation, or etymology: 'Thou shalt call His name JESUS; for He shall save His people from their sins' (Matt. i. 21). In which words is clearly expressed the designation of the person He, and the futurity of salvation certain by him, He shall save. Beside, that other addition of the name of God, propounded in Josuah as probable, appeareth here in some degree above probability, and that for two reasons. First, because it is not barely said that He, but as the original raiseth it, He himself shall save. Josuah saved Israel, not by his own power, not of himself, but God by him; neither saved he his own people, but the people of God; whereas JESUS Himself, by His own power—the power of God—shall save His own people, the people of God. Well, therefore, may we understand the interpretation of his name to be GOD the SAVIOUR."

17. southward] That is, into the southern part of Canaan. Heb. negeb, dry, distinguished from the well-watered region of Canaan (cp. Josh. xv. 19. Judg. i. 15).

On the region called Negeb, see the excellent work of the Rev. E. Willou, 1863.

— the mountain] the high land inhabited by Hittites, Jebusites, and Amorites, v. 29; xiv. 40. Deut. i. 7. 19. 44.

18. the land] used three times here (vv. 18—20) in three different respects; first, as to its people; secondly, as to its habitations; thirdly, as to its soil and produce.

20. the time was the time of the firstripe grapes] Toward the end of July, therefore; the spies returned (v. 25) at the end of August, or beginning of September.

21. from the wilderness of Zin] The northern district of the wilderness of Paran, Wady Murreh: cp. xx. 1; xxvii. 14; xxxiii. 26; xxxiv. 3. Deut. xxxii. 51. Josh. xv. 1—3 (Keil, 240. Winer, ii. 735).

— Rehob] Probably Beth-rechob, near Dan-Lais, in the tribe of Naphtali (Judg. xviii. 28), s.w. of Tell-el-kadhy (Robinson; Winer, i. 174).

— Hamath] on the Orontes, in the northern frontier of Palestine, at the foot of Hermon (Anti-libanus), called Epiphania by Josephus (Ant. i. 6. 2), now Hamah. Cp. Gen. x. 18. Josh. xiii. 5. Judg. iii. 3 (Keil, p. 211. Winer, i. 458).

22. and came] Heb. he came. Jarchi, and other Hebrew expositors say, that Caleb only came thither, to whom Hebron was afterwards given (cp. Josh. xiv. 9. 12. 14); but Chazkuni and others say, that the singular pronoun is here used to express the whole number considered as one body. Cp. Josh. viii. 19. The Sept., Vulg., and other ancient versions, have the plural.

— unto Hebron] where Abraham had built an altar to the Lord. See Gen. xiii. 18, and where "the three men" had appeared to him, and promised him the birth of a son from Sarah within a year from that time (Gen. xviii. 1—10); and where the bodies of Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, Jacob and Leah, were buried in faith that God would give the land to their seed, and in hope of a blessed Resurrection. Doubtless the remembrance of these things at Hebron inspired the heart of Caleb with courage, and moved him to say what he did (see v. 30, and xiv. 7); and as a reward for his faith, he received Hebron for an inheritance. See below, on Josh. xiv. 15.

^o the children of Anak, were. (Now ^p Hebron was built seven years before

^a Zoan in Egypt.)

²³ ^r And they came unto the || brook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff; and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs. ²⁴ The place was called the || brook || Eshcol, because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence. ²⁵ And they returned from searching of the land after forty days.

²⁶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, 'unto the wilderness of Paran, to 'Kadesh; and brought back word unto them, and unto all the congregation, and shewed them the fruit of the land. ²⁷ And they told him, and said, We came unto the land whither thou sentest us, and surely it floweth with "milk and honey; * and this is the fruit of it. ²⁸ Nevertheless ^y the people be strong that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled, and very great: and moreover we saw ^z the children of Anak there. ²⁹ ^a The Amalekites dwell in the land of the south: and the Hittites, and the Jebusites, and the Amorites, dwell in the mountains: and the Canaanites dwell by the sea, and by the coast of Jordan. ³⁰ And ^b Caleb stilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it. ³¹ ^c But the men that went up with him said, We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we. ³² And they ^d brought up an evil report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land, through which we have gone to search it, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof; and ^e all the people that we saw in it are † men of a great stature. ³³ And there we saw the giants, † the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight ^g as grasshoppers, and so we were ^h in their sight.

^o ver. 33.
^p Josh. 21. 11.
^q Ps. 78. 12.
^r Isa. 19. 11. &
 30. 4.
^s Deut. 1. 24, 25.
 || Or, valley
 ch. 32. 9.
 Judg. 16. 4.
 || Or, valley.
 || That is, A cluster of grapes.

^s ver. 3.
^t ch. 20. 1, 16. &
 32. 8. & 33. 36.
 Deut. 1. 19.
 Josh. 14. 6.
^u Ex. 3. 8. &
 33. 3.
^x Deut. 1. 25.
^y Deut. 1. 28. &
 9. 1, 2.

^z ver. 33.
^a Ex. 17. 8.
 ch. 14. 43.
 Judg. 6. 3.
 1 Sam. 14. 48. &
 15. 3, & c.

^b See ch. 14. 6, 24.
 Josh. 14. 7.
^c ch. 32. 9.
 Deut. 1. 28.
 Josh. 14. 8.
^d ch. 14. 36, 37.

^e Amos 2. 9.
 † Heb. men of statures.
^f Deut. 1. 28. &
 2. 10. & 9. 2.
^g Isa. 40. 22.
^h 1 Sam. 17. 42.

— Anak] son of Arba, from whom Hebron was called Kirjath-arba (Josh. xv. 13). Concerning the Anakim, see Deut. ii. 10; ix. 2; Josh. xiv. 15; xv. 13; xxi. 11. Winer, R. W. B. i. 326.

— Now Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt] This notice is inserted not only in proof of the antiquity of the city, but of the goodness of the soil, as chosen by the Anakim for their residence (Jarchi). On the name of Hebron, see Hengstenberg, Authentic, ii. pp. 187—192, and note above, Gen. xiii. 18.

— before Zoan] or Tanis, on the east side of the Tanitic mouth of the Nile; a residence of the Pharaohs in the time of Moses. Cp. Ps. lxxviii. 12. 43. Isa. xix. 11; xxx. 4. Ezek. xxx. 14. (Keil, Comment, i. p. 391. Winer, ii. 737.)

²³. Eshcol] Literally, a cluster (Gesen., p. 85). Cp. Cant. vii. 8. Isa. lxxviii. 8. Mic. vii. 1. Probably near Hebron, which was famous for its vines (Robinson).

— they bare it between two upon a staff] In Palestine bunches of grapes are still found weighing from eight to twelve pounds; and the grapes of Hebron were specially celebrated for their size and beauty (Tobler, Keil).

The word rendered staff is in Hebrew mot, which is translated bar in iv. 10. 12, and yoke in Nah. i. 13. S. Jerome sees a spiritual figure here,—“botrus refertur in ligno; et Christi breviter passio demonstratur” (Mans, xv.). “Christus est botrus qui pependit in ligno” (S. Augustine c. Faust. xii. 42). The cluster of grapes hanging from the wood, what was it but a figure of Him, Who in the last days hung as a cluster of grapes from the wood of the Cross, and has given His own blood to be the drink of eternal life to believers? Moses speaks of blood of grapes when referring to Christ (Gen. xlix. 11. S. Greg. Nyssen. de Vit. Mos. p. 24).

The Christian Fathers and hymn writers love to dwell on this resemblance. The cluster was the firstfruits of Canaan, and an evidence of the truth of God's promises concerning its fruitfulness. In Christ, all God's promises are “Yea and Amen” (2 Cor. i. 20). The one cluster was formed of many grapes; so Christ. The cluster was borne on a staff by two;

so the true faith of Christ crucified is borne by the two People, the Jew and the Gentile, in the Old and New Testaments. They who lived under the Old Testament carried it without seeing what they carried; but we who come after, carry the same Faith, and see what we carry. Bp. Andrewes, i. 237. Cp. S. Augustine c. Faust. xii. 31; and in Ps. viii. S. Greg. Nyssen. in Cantica, Hom. 3. Paulinus, Epist. 3, ad Sever. S. Prosper de Predict. ii. 9. Bede, Quaest. in Num. xi. S. Bernard in Cantica, Serm. 44. Maxim. Taurin., Hom. de Sanctis, p. 235.

²⁵. after forty days] an usual term of trial in Holy Scripture. See on Matt. iv. 2. 9; xxvii. 60. Mark i. 13; xvi. 19; Luke iv. 2. Acts i. 3. Cp. Ainsworth on Deut. xxv. 3.

²⁶. Kadesh] or Kadesh-barnea; see xii. 16. The wilderness of Paran, and Zin, and Hazeroth, and Kadesh-barnea, and Rithmah (xxxiii. 18), were near to one another (Chazkuni).

On the site of Kadesh, probably near Ain-Kades, south of Beersheba, on the frontier highland of Jebel Halal, “near the point where the longitude of Khulasah intersects the latitude of Ain-el-Weibeh,” see Williams, Appendix to Holy City, i. 468. Kurtz, Hist. iii. 217—211, Edin. 1859. Keil on Num. xx. 16, p. 236. Winer, p. 641. Wilton, Negeb, pp. 7. 80. This position is about eleven days' journey from Sinai, as Kadesh was (Deut. i. 2). It is a large plain, stretching from west to east, about twelve English miles E.S.E. from Moitahhi, and would have afforded ample room for the Israelitic encampment, and is supplied with water: see above, note on Gen. xiv. 7. ³⁰. Caleb] who spoke also for Joshua as well as for himself; as Joshua afterwards spoke for him (xiv. 6. 7).

³². eateth up the inhabitants] by their civil wars. The Amorites had conquered the Moabites (xxi. 28); and the Caphtorims had destroyed the Avims (Deut. ii. 23), so that its very fruitfulness being a cause of perpetual rivalry and contention, is a source of distress to its inhabitants (Rosenmüller).

³³. giants] Heb. nephilim. Cp. Gen. vi. 4. — were in our own sight as grasshoppers] But if we follow our Joshua in faith, our enemies will be as grasshoppers. Ori-gen, Hom. 7.

a ch. 11. 4.

b Ex. 16. 2 & 17.
c ch. 16. 41.
Ps. 106. 25.

c See ver. 28, 29.

d Neh. 9. 17.

e See Deut. 17. 16.
Acts 7. 39.

f ch. 16. 4, 22.

g ver. 24, 30, 38.
ch. 13. 6, 8.h ch. 13. 27.
Deut. 1. 25.i Deut. 10. 15.
2 Sam. 15. 25,
26. & 22. 20.
1 Kings 10. 9.
Ps. 22. 8. & 147.
10, 11.Isa. 62. 4.
k ch. 13. 27.
l Deut. 9. 7, 23,
24.m Deut. 7. 18. &
20. 3.

n ch. 24. 8.

o Heb. shadow.

Ps. 121. 5.

Isa. 30. 2, 3.

Jer. 48. 45.

p Gen. 45. 21.

q Ex. 33. 16.

Deut. 20. 1, 3, 4.

& 31. 6, 8.

Josh. 1. 5.

Judg. 1. 22.

r Chron. 13. 12.

& 15. 2. & 20. 17.

& 32. 8.

Ps. 46. 7, 11.

Isa. 41. 10.

Amos 5. 14.

Zech. 8. 23.

p Ex. 17. 4.

q Ex. 16. 10. &

24. 16, 17. & 40.

34.

Lev. 9. 22.

ch. 16. 19, 42. &

20. 6.

r ver. 23.

Deut. 9. 7, 8, 22.

s Ps. 95. 8.

Heb. 3. 8, 16.

t Deut. 1. 32. &

9. 23.

Ps. 78. 22, 32, 42.

& 106. 24.

John 12. 37.

Heb. 3. 18.

u Ex. 32. 10.

& 40. 38. ch. 10. 34.

XIV. ¹ And all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried; and ^a the people wept that night. ² ^b And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron: and the whole congregation said unto them, Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or ^c would God we had died in this wilderness! ³ And wherefore hath the LORD brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt? ⁴ And they said one to another, ^d Let us make a captain, and ^e let us return into Egypt.

⁵ Then ^f Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel. ⁶ ^g And Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, rent their clothes: ⁷ And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, ^h The land, which we passed through to search it, is an exceeding good land. ⁸ If the LORD ⁱ delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; ^k a land which floweth with milk and honey. ⁹ Only ^l rebel not ye against the LORD, ^m neither fear ye the people of the land; for ⁿ they are bread for us: their [†] defence is departed from them, ^o and the LORD is with us: fear them not.

¹⁰ ^p But all the congregation bade stone them with stones. And ^q the glory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

¹¹ And the LORD said unto Moses, How long will this people ^r provoke me? and how long will it be ere they ^s believe me, for all the signs which I have shewed among them? ¹² I will smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and ^t will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they. ¹³ And ^u Moses said unto the LORD, Then the Egyptians shall hear it, (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;) ¹⁴ And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: ^x for they have heard that thou LORD art among this people, that thou LORD art seen face to face, and that ^y thy cloud standeth over them, and that thou goest before them, by day time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night. ¹⁵ Now if thou shalt kill all this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will speak, saying, ¹⁶ Because the LORD was not ^z able to bring this people into the land which he swore unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

t Ex. 32. 10. u Ex. 32. 12. Ps. 106. 23. Deut. 9. 26, 27. 28. & 32. 27. Ezek. 20. 9, 14. x Ex. 15. 14. Josh. 2. 9, 10. & 5. 1. y Ex. 13. 21. & 40. 38. ch. 10. 34. Neh. 9. 12. Ps. 78. 14. & 105. 39. z Deut. 9. 28. Josh. 7. 9.

CH. XIV. 1. And all the congregation lifted up their voice,—and the people wept! “They despised the pleasant land, they believed not His word; but murmured in their tents, and hearkened not to the voice of the Lord; therefore He lifted up His hand against them to overthrow them in the wilderness” (Ps. evi. 24. 26).

On the conduct of the Israelites murmuring at the tidings of the spies, and on the difference between the ten spies and the two, as foreshadowing the unbelief of the Jews in the age of the true Joshua, Jesus Christ; and as a warning to the preachers of the Gospel, that they be not faithless and cowardly in times of danger, see the interesting homily of S. Cyril of Alexandria, Glaphyr. in Numeros, pp. 386—394; and Origen in Num. Hom. 8. The warning is applied to Christians by the Holy Spirit Himself (see Heb. iii. 7—19; iv. 1—11).

2. in this wilderness] Even at Taberah (xi. 1. 33).

4. Let us make a captain] For Moses will not lead us.

6. Joshua the son of Nun] Here placed first. Cp. xiii. 30.

10. bade stone them with stones] As their posterity would have stoned the true Joshua, Jesus Christ; and those who preached of Him (John viii. 59; x. 31. Cp. Luke xiii. 31. Acts vii. 58). — the glory of the LORD appeared] The cloud descended and settled on the Tabernacle. Sept.; Jerchi: cp. xvi. 42.

12. I will smite them—disinherit them, and will make of thee a greater nation] Cp. Exod. xxxii. 10. On two occasions when the Israelites united in rebelling against God, and in making for themselves another leader, God threatened to disinherit them, and to make of Moses a great nation in their place (cp. Exod. xxxii. 10). But in afterwards reminding the people of their guilt on those occasions, Moses describes God's wrath against them, but he mentions once only the divine offer so honourable to himself. On the other hand he frequently refers to his own offence against God, and his consequent exclusion from Canaan; and he also relates the substitution of Joshua in his own place. “The Lord was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither: but Joshua, the son of Nun, who standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: encourage him: for he shall cause Israel to inherit it” (Deut. i. 37, 38. Cp. Deut. ix. 14. 25; and Exod. xxxii. 10. Num. xiv. 12).

Here is silent evidence of the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch. Any other Hebrew writer would not have thus treated the character of Moses, who was ever held in such reverence by the Hebrew nation after his death. But such a treatment of the character of Moses was very fit and appropriate for Moses himself. It is like the expression “Matthew the publican,” which is found only in St. Matthew's Gospel, and is a silent evidence of its genuineness (see Matt. x. 3).

16. Because the LORD was not able to bring this people into the land] Moses is zealous for God's honour, and for the glory of His power and love (cp. Exod. xxxii. 12. Deut. ix. 28), but he never murmured, because he himself was not able to bring

¹⁷ And now, I beseech thee, let the power of my Lord be great, according as thou hast spoken, saying, ¹⁸ The LORD is ^a longsuffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty, ^b visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation. ¹⁹ ^c Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people ^d according unto the greatness of thy mercy, and ^e as thou hast forgiven this people, from Egypt even || until now.

a Ex. 34. 6, 7.
Ps. 103. 8. &
145. 8.
Jonah 4. 2.
b Ex. 20. 5.
& 34. 7.
c Ex. 34. 9.
d Ps. 106. 45.
e Ps. 78. 38.

|| Or, hitherto.

²⁰ And the LORD said, I have pardoned ^f according to thy word: ²¹ But as truly as I live, ^g all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD. ²² ^h Because all those men which have seen my glory, and my miracles, which I did in Egypt and in the wilderness, and have tempted me now ⁱ these ten times, and have not hearkened to my voice; ²³ ^k † Surely they shall not see the land which I swear unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it: ²⁴ But my servant ^l Caleb, because he had another spirit with him, and ^m hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereinto he went; and his seed shall possess it. ²⁵ (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley.) To morrow turn you, ⁿ and get you into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

f Ps. 106. 23.
James 5. 16.
1 John 5. 14, 15, 16.
g Ps. 72. 19.
h Deut. 1. 35.
Ps. 95. 11. &
106. 26.
i Heb. 3. 17, 18.
j Gen. 31. 7.
k ch. 32. 11.
l Ezek. 20. 15.
† Heb. If they see the land.
m 1 Deut. 1. 36.
Josh. 14. 6, 8, 9, 14.
n ch. 32. 12.

n Deut. 1. 40.

²⁶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, ²⁷ ^o How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? ^p I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me. ²⁸ Say unto them, ^q As truly as I live, saith the LORD, ^r as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you: ²⁹ Your carcases shall fall in this wilderness; and ^s all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me,

o ver. 11.
Ex. 16. 28.
Matt. 17. 17.

p Ex. 16. 12.

q ver. 23.
ch. 26. 65. & 32. 11.
Deut. 1. 35.
Heb. 3. 17.
r See ver. 2.
s ch. 1. 45. & 26. 64.

the people into the Land of Promise, and that Joshua, his own servant, was preferred to him (Deut. iii. 27, 28).

^{18.} by no means clearing the guilty, visiting the iniquity] See above, on Exod. xx. 5; xxxiv. 6, 7. Moses here appeals to the titles which God had then proclaimed as His own, and he does not pray for absolute pardon for all the offenders, lest God's righteous justice and divine majesty should be disparaged; but he entreats for mercy to those who are less guilty than the rest (cp. 1 John v. 16). He refers all to God's glory.

— all the earth] Read, and all the earth—no stop at “Lord.” ^{20.} according to thy word] Not absolutely; for all that generation which murmured was excluded from the Promised Land; but in this chastisement was mercy. It was a warning against disobedience, and by it the people were exercised in the wholesome discipline of repentance; thus temporal punishment may have saved many of them from eternal misery, and their very exclusion from the earthly Land of Promise, may have been instrumental to their admission into the heavenly Canaan.

^{21.} all the earth] Not only the Tabernacle and the Temple. Notwithstanding the murmuring and rebellion of unbelieving Israel, and of an unbelieving World, the Word of God will stand fast, and the Gospel be preached to all nations. S. Jerome on Isa. vi., and Theodoret, Qu. 27: see above on v. 1.

^{22.} these ten times] A general expression for many times; but it may be taken literally, for at this time they had tempted God ten times: at the Red Sea (Exod. xiv. 11), at Marah (xv. 23), twice with respect to the Manna (xvi. 20, 27), at Rephidim (xvii. 1—3), by the golden calf at Horeb (xxxii.), at Taberah (Num. xi. 1), at Kibroth-hattaavah (xi. 4). Ainsworth.

^{23.} Surely they shall not see] Literally, if they shall see. Cp. Ps. xcv. 11, with Heb. iii. 11, 18; and cp. Mark viii. 11, 12, with Matt. xvi. 4.

This declaration (as we know from the Epistle to the Hebrews) is to be extended to all who do not believe the Gospel of Christ. See Heb. iii. 7—19; iv. 1—11.

^{24.} his seed shall possess it] The fulfilment of this promise is recorded in Josh. xiv. 6—14.

^{25.} Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwell in the valley] Literally, And the Amalekites and Canaanites are sitting in the valley. There ought not to be any parenthesis; these words are a continuation of the words of God Himself to the Israelites.

The connexion is, Caleb was not afraid, but trusted in God, therefore he shall enter in, and conquer those giants, whom ye fear, and shall inherit their land. But ye, who do not rely on God's power, and who disbelieve His promise, and fear an arm of flesh, ye shall not enter in; no, nor shall ye advance any further; since ye think that God is weak, and that man is strong, therefore God will leave you to yourselves, man shall be strong against you (cp. vv. 8, 9). The Amalekite and the Canaanite are sitting (in ambush) in the valley, therefore do not advance, for they will destroy you, since ye have deprived yourselves of My presence and power, which ye have despised. Do not go forward and northward, no; but go southward and backward; to-morrow turn you toward the Red Sea; and be once more, as it were, at the beginning of your wanderings, and wander on in the wilderness for forty years. This exposition of the passage is confirmed by the ancient versions, especially Sept., Vulgate, Arabic.

The valley is probably that which is now called Wady Murreh. See xiii. 21.

— by the way of the Red sea] The way toward the Red Sea. Cp. Matt. iv. 15. The part of the Red Sea to which they turned was the “Ælaniaticus sinus,” or gulf of Acaba.

^{29.} Your carcases] The Hebrew peger, a carcase, is from pagar, to be exhausted (cp. piger, piger: Gesen. 666); see Gen. xv. 11. The Sept. has here κῶλα, which word is adopted by St. Paul, when he refers to these words, and implecates the warning thence applicable to Christians (Heb. iii. 17: cp. 1 Cor. x. 10).

— all that were numbered of you—from twenty years old and upward] This divine saying was fulfilled, and the fulfilment of it was displayed in the census taken in the plains of Moab, at the end of the wanderings in the wilderness. See xxvi. 63—65: “Among them that were then numbered, there was not a man of them whom Moses and Aaron the priest numbered when they numbered the children of Israel in the wilderness of Sinai” (Num. i).

Hence it appears that not only the numbers of the Israelites † Heb. lifted up my hand,

Gen. 14. 22.
† ver. 38. ch. 26.
65. & 32. 12.
Deut. 1. 36, 38.
u Deut. 1. 39.
x Ps. 106. 24.

y 1 Cor. 10. 5.
Heb. 3. 17.
|| Or, feed,
z ch. 32. 13.
Ps. 107. 40.
a See Deut. 2. 14.
b Ezek. 23. 35.
c ch. 13. 25.
d Ps. 95. 10.
Ezek. 4. 6.
e See 1 Kings 8.
56.
Ps. 77. 8. & 105.
42.
Heb. 4. 1.
|| Or, altering of my purpose,
f ch. 23. 19.
g ver. 27. 29.
h ch. 26. 65.
i 1 Cor. 10. 5.
h ch. 13. 31, 32.
i 1 Cor. 10. 10.
Heb. 3. 17.
Jude 5.
k ch. 26. 65.
Josh. 14. 6, 10.

³⁰ Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I †sware to make you dwell therein, 'save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun. ³¹ "But your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know the land which *ye have despised. ³² But as for you, †your carcasses, they shall fall in this wilderness. ³³ And your children shall ||^zwander in the wilderness ^aforty years, and ^bbear your whoredoms, until your carcasses be wasted in the wilderness. ³⁴ ^cAfter the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even ^dforty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, ^eand ye shall know my ||breach of promise. ³⁵ ^fI the LORD have said, I will surely do it unto all ^gthis evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die. ³⁶ ^hAnd the men, which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him, by bringing up a slander upon the land, ³⁷ Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land, ⁱdied by the plague before the LORD. ³⁸ ^kBut Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of the men that went to search the land, lived still.

were taken in each census, but also their names. In this prophecy we see a wonderful instance of the exactness of God's foreknowledge of individuals. Observe also the severity of His righteous retribution. These murmurers were destroyed in the wilderness, their names disappeared; they have no history. Such were the consequences of disobedience.

It was indeed a memorable thing, that no one above sixty years of age (the Priests and Levites excepted) was admitted into Canaan (except Caleb and Joshua); and this will appear more remarkable when it is considered that Caleb afterward was able to say, "Forty years old was I, when Moses the servant of the Lord sent me from Kadesh-barnea, to spy out the land . . . and now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, as He said, these forty and five years. . . . I am this day four-score and five years old; as yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me . . . and Joshua blessed him" (Josh. xiv. 7—13), and Joshua himself lived to the age of one hundred and ten years (Josh. xxiv. 29).

It is a strange thing that the rationalistic so-called intelligence of some (e.g. Knobel) should reject this statement as incredible, and should fail to apprehend the divine truth contained in this striking record of the Israelites, who are "figures of us" (1 Cor. x. 6. 11), and in their history, "which was written for our learning;" viz., that length of life, and eternal health in the heavenly Canaan is reserved only for the Calebs and Joshuas, who "wholly follow the Lord their God" (Josh. xiv. 8).

In support of that incredulity, it is alleged that all others, above sixty years of age, could not have been excluded from Canaan, inasmuch as Eleazar, the son of Aaron, must have been more than twenty years old, because he was consecrated as a Priest in the second year of the Exodus (Lev. viii. 2), and Eleazar entered into Canaan with Joshua (Josh. xiv. 1). These objectors overlook the fact that Eleazar belonged to the tribe of Levi, and that the Levites were not numbered at that census, but were specially exempted from it (Num. i. 47; ii. 33). The exception therefore of Eleazar makes the example more memorable.

The objection which is derived from the statements in Josh. xxiv. 7; Judg. ii. 7, that some then living in Canaan had seen the works of God in Egypt, is equally untenable; it is founded on the supposition that men of sixty or seventy years of age cannot remember the wonderful things which happened when they were under nineteen years of age.

^{30. save Caleb—and Joshua} Cp. xxxii. 11, 12: "Who are they that perish in the wilderness? They who do not believe and obey God. Who are they that are saved? They who love and obey Him like Caleb, the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua, the son of Nun; and they who are little ones in Christian simplicity without malice and guile." S. Irenæus, iv. 47.

^{31. your little ones} Your little ones; the new generation of Israel; a type of the Israel of God, who are circumcised by the circumcision of the Spirit, and are brought into the spiritual Canaan by the true Joshua. See below, on Josh. v. 2—11.

Here also is a warning to us. You who count yourselves strong shall fail; but the weak shall enter in. Your little ones will I bring in: this is also true in a spiritual sense. God shuts out the strong—the "wise and prudent"—from the sight of the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, and reveals them to babes (Matt. xi. 25). We must become as little children, if we would enter into the kingdom of God (Matt. xviii. 3). Specially true is this of the Pentateuch, in which the history is written of those things which are "examples to us," or types and figures of us (1 Cor. x. 6. 11). The strong in human intellect may carp and cavil at it, and are excluded from the sight of its beauty and its truth; "their carcasses fall in the wilderness" of unbelief (cp. Isa. xxix. 14. 1 Cor. i. 27; ii. 8. James ii. 5); but its mysteries are revealed to babes, they believe and obey God, and enter into the heavenly Canaan.

^{34. forty years} Aaron died on the first day of the fifth month of the fortieth year after the Exodus. See xx. 28; xxxiii. 38. The second numbering of the people took place after that. See xxvi. 2—63.

The forty years here described include the period of the year and a half which had already expired between the Exodus and the mourning of the people at this time (cp. Keil, p. 247); so that the time of wandering after the sentence of exclusion, and before admission into Canaan under Joshua, was thirty-eight years. These periods are deserving of notice in a Christian point of view. The whole period of the trial of the Israelites in the wilderness was forty years. The trial of the Jews after the crucifixion of Christ and the destruction of Jerusalem (an event disastrous to Jews, but favourable to the progress of Christianity, the religion of the spiritual Israel) was forty years. See below, on Acts, p. 29.

The Israelitish nation, after this sentence of exclusion, wandered, under the rule of Moses and the Law, for thirty-eight years, and then Joshua received them and led them into the Promised Land. The impotent man in the Gospel had lain in his sickness thirty-eight years under the shadow of Bethesda, the house of mercy, the pool of the five porches (and such the Law with its five books was to Israel), and there the true Joshua came and bade him "arise, take up thy bed, and walk" (see John v. 2—8).

— ye shall know my breach of promise] Rather, ye shall feel my turning away from you; ye shall feel, that because ye turned away from Me, therefore I am estranged and alienated from you, literally, broken off from you. The original word, temah, rendered breach of promise, is from the root no, to decline (whence the negative particles ne, non, no, not: Gesen. 537). This exposition is confirmed by the ancient versions, Sept., Vulg., Arabic: see also Waterland, Scrip. Vindicated, p. 100, who refutes the objection grounded by some on the rendering in our Authorized Version; and cp. Keil, p. 247.

^{37. those men—died by the plague before the LORD} Smitten suddenly, by a divine visitation, as Nadab and Abihu (Lev. x. 2), and Korah (Num. xvi. 32. 35), and Uzzah (1 Chron. xiii. 10).

³⁹ And Moses told these sayings unto all the children of Israel: ¹ and the people mourned greatly. ⁴⁰ And they rose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, ^m we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised: for we have sinned. ⁴¹ And Moses said, Wherefore now do ye transgress ⁿ the commandment of the LORD? but it shall not prosper. ⁴² ^o Go not up, for the LORD is not among you; that ye be not smitten before your enemies. ⁴³ For the Amalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and ye shall fall by the sword: ^p because ye are turned away from the LORD, therefore the LORD will not be with you. ⁴⁴ ^q But they presumed to go up unto the hill top: nevertheless the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and Moses, departed not out of the camp.

⁴⁵ ^r Then the Amalekites came down, and the Canaanites which dwelt in that hill, and smote them, and discomfited them, even unto ^s Hormah.

XV. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² ^a Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come into the land of your habitations, ^{40.} gat them up] armed: see Deut. i. 41. But without the armour of God's protection and help, and therefore they were routed (v. 43, 45).

— we have sinned] They confessed their sins, but did not obey, and were destroyed. Confession of sins, without obedience to God's law, is of no avail, but worketh death (2 Cor. vii. 10).

^{44.} they presumed] The Hebrew verb here is aphal, to swell up like a hill, to be haughty and lifted up (Hab. ii. 4), whence ophel, a hill (2 Chron. xxvii. 3; xxxiii. 14. Gesen. 645). They went up armed, thinking that they had satisfied God by mere lip-service (v. 40), and relying on themselves, and with a vain-glorious self-assurance of His favour; but Moses said, "Go not up," and he would not go with them. God was not among them; they went against His will; the Ark was not with them, they went up without the Lord, and without the signs of His grace; and the Amalekites and Canaanites came down and smote them and discomfited them to Hormah. A striking example of the sinfulness of spiritual pride and self-assurance, and of its consequences.

^{45.} unto Hormah] Chormah. The name was probably derived from the event, and means utter destruction, from charam, to destroy; whence cherem, an anathema, or curse (Gesen. 305). In Deut. i. 43, Moses refers to this presumption of Israel and to their destruction "unto Hormah."

All who disobey God and rely on themselves are discomfited "even unto Hormah:" for, says the prophet, "cursed is he that obeyeth not" (Jer. xi. 3); and "cursed is he that trusteth in man, and whose heart departeth from the Lord" (Jer. xvii. 5).

Some suppose that this is the same place as is called Hormah below, in xxi. 3. So Keil, p. 249.

At the end of the present chapter, and as a consequence of the mournful sentence of exclusion from Canaan, and of the forty years' wandering in the wilderness, the Ninetieth Psalm will present itself to the mind of the reader, as being ascribed in its title to "Moses the man of God;"—and with good reason. See Hengstenberg on the Psalms, ii. 120.

That Psalm is like a divine commentary on the events recorded in the present chapter, and is illustrated by them. It may at first seem surprising that Moses should describe the days of man as threescore years and ten (Ps. xc. 10).

But when it is remembered, that, in the second year of the pilgrimage in the wilderness, as related in this chapter, God declared that all those who had been recently numbered at Sinai should die in the wilderness, before the expiration of forty years, the lamentation of Moses on the brevity of human life becomes very intelligible and appropriate; and the Psalm itself acquires a solemn and affecting interest, as a penitential confession of the sins which had entailed such melancholy consequences on the Hebrew nation; and as a humble deprecation of God's wrath; and as a funeral dirge upon those whose death had been pre-announced by the awful voice of God. Let it be associated with such feelings as these on those solemn occasions—at the Burial of the Dead,—when it is appointed to be read in the Church, and it will have a deeper influence on those who hear it.

tions] This chapter begins a new period. The Israelites had arrived at Kadesh-barnea (see xiii. 26; xxxii. 8. Deut. i. 2, 19), and if they had obeyed God, they would then have entered "into the land of their habitation;" but they murmured against Him, and all their hopes of entering into Canaan were frustrated by their sin, and they were condemned to wander for thirty-eight years in the wilderness; and all who had been numbered at Mount Sinai, except Caleb and Joshua, were excluded from the Land of Promise (xiv. 21—33).

Having therefore a long period of Wandering before them, and having incurred a sentence of exclusion from Canaan, how were they to perform the requirements of the Levitical Law? Where would sacrifices be found in the Wilderness for the fulfilment of those injunctions? Was not the promulgation of the Levitical Law itself in Sinai frustrated by that exclusion from Canaan? Had not God defeated His own designs, and made His own Legislation to become abortive by their punishment?

Such probably were the thoughts of some of the Israelites at Kadesh-barnea.

These surmises receive an answer in the present chapter. "When ye be come into the land of your habitations," then ye shall offer the sacrifices required in the Levitical Law. He repeats in this chapter the requirements of that Law, and applies them to the Israelites whom He will mercifully bring into the Land of Promise.

He thus declares that His own design has not been frustrated; and He tempers justice with mercy; and displays a gracious gleam of hope and encouragement to the new generation of Israelites who were not involved in the sin of the murmurers: see xiv. 31.

God has thus also provided an answer to certain sceptical objections which have been raised against the veracity of the Pentateuch.

It has been asked by some,—
How could the Israelites find a sufficient quantity of cattle,—of oxen, sheep, and lambs; and of birds—doves and pigeons, in the wilderness, to fulfil all the requirements of the Levitical Law?

The answer to this question is, God promulgated that Law on Mount Sinai in order that it might be observed in Canaan; and when He gave it, the Israelites had not as yet incurred the sentence of exclusion, and they might—and if they had not been disobedient, they would—have been in Canaan within a fortnight of its delivery. The Levitical Law was given under the presumption that they would obey Him who gave it, and that they would be soon afterwards in Canaan, where they would be able to comply with that Law (cp. Deut. iv. 14). But they murmured against God at Kadesh-barnea; and thus they forfeited His favour. They, as it were, excommunicated themselves. They forfeited the privileges of obedience. They had kept one Passover at Mount Sinai (see ix. 5), but there is no evidence that they were ever permitted to keep another Passover during the whole term of their Wanderings. They themselves felt and acted as men under a ban; they did not even administer circumcision in the wilderness, nor until they were admitted into Canaan under Joshua; then—but not till then—they were again allowed to eat the Passover: see above, Introduction to the Pentateuch, p. 31; and Josh. v. 10, 11.

- b Lev. 1. 2, 3. which I give unto you, ³ And ^b will make an offering by fire unto the LORD, a burnt offering, or a sacrifice ^c in † performing a vow, or in a freewill offering, or
- c Lev. 7. 16. & 22. 18, 21. † Heb. separating, ^d in your solemn feasts, to make a ^e sweet savour unto the LORD, of the herd, or of the flock: ⁴ Then ^f shall he that offereth his offering unto the LORD bring ^g a meat offering of a tenth deal of flour mingled ^h with the fourth part of an hin of oil. ⁵ ⁱ And the fourth part of an hin of wine for a drink offering shalt thou prepare with the burnt offering or sacrifice, for one lamb. ⁶ ^k Or for a ram, thou shalt prepare for a meat offering two tenth deals of flour mingled with the third part of an hin of oil. ⁷ And for a drink offering thou shalt offer the third part of an hin of wine for a sweet savour unto the LORD. ⁸ And when thou preparest a bullock for a burnt offering, or for a sacrifice in performing a vow, or ^l peace offerings unto the LORD: ⁹ Then shall he bring ^m with a bullock a meat offering of three tenth deals of flour mingled with half an hin of oil. ¹⁰ And thou shalt bring for a drink offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD. ¹¹ ⁿ Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid. ¹² According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one according to their number. ¹³ All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD. ¹⁴ And if a stranger sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do. ¹⁵ ^o One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD. ¹⁶ One law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.
- o Ex. 12. 49. ch. 9. 14. ver. 29. ¹⁷ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁸ ^p Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you, ¹⁹ Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of ^q the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD. ²⁰ ^r Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering: as ye do ^s the heave offering of the
- p ver. 2. Deut. 26. 1. ¹⁹ Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of ^q the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD. ²⁰ ^r Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering: as ye do ^s the heave offering of the
- q Josh. 5. 11, 12. ¹⁹ Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of ^q the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD. ²⁰ ^r Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering: as ye do ^s the heave offering of the
- r Deut. 26. 2, 10. Prov. 3. 9, 10. s Lev. 2. 14. & 23. 10, 16. ¹⁹ Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of ^q the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD. ²⁰ ^r Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering: as ye do ^s the heave offering of the

Accordingly God said afterwards, by the Prophet Amos, "Did ye offer to Me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?" (Amos v. 25. See Acts vii. 42.) No; ye worshipped idols, instead of Me. Ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, instead of My tabernacle; and the star of your god Remphan—figures which ye made to worship them (Acts vii. 43).

It is also observed, as characteristic of the people in the wilderness, from this time till the end of their wanderings, that they "did every man whatsoever was right in his own eyes" (Deut. xii. 8); by which it is implied, that they did not observe the sacrificial rites of the Law.

The present chapter proceeds on the supposition that the observance of the Levitical Law, in regard to sacrifices, was now in abeyance. The Israelites were now, as it were, under a temporary ban of excommunication on account of their disobedience; but the Law was not repealed, but would revive in full force when "they had come into the land of their habitations" (v. 2. Cp. Heinyst., Auth. ii. 16—19). See also below, xix. 2; and cp. Dr. Benisch on Colenso, p. 68; and the excellent remarks of Mr. B. B. Rogers on "The Mosaic Records," pp. 1—13, Lond. 1865.

3. a burnt offering] He begins, as it were, afresh, with a repetition of the first laws of Leviticus: see Lev. i.

— a sacrifice in performing a vow] a peace-offering (see Lev. iii. Cp. Exod. xviii. 12. Lev. xvii. 5; xxiii. 37); the meat-offering and drink-offering, in v. 4, 5, were not added to the sin-offering and trespass-offering, except in the case of the Leper (Lev. xiv. 10). Maimon.

— a sweet savour] See Gen. viii. 21; and Lev. i. 17.

4. meat offering] See Lev. ii. 1; vi. 14; and Exod. xxix. 40.

— tenth deal] that is, a tenth part of an ephah. Cp. xviii. 5.

5. an hin of wine] See Exod. xxix. 40.

8. peace offerings] See Lev. iii. 1.

13. born of the country] Heb. ezerah, from zarah, to shoot forth (Gesen. 27); every Israelite born in the land. Cp. Lev. xvi. 29; xviii. 26.

14. a stranger] or proselyte, Sept. See Exod. xii. 49. Lev. xxiv. 22. Num. ix. 14.

18. When ye come into the land] See v. 2.

19. an heave offering] See Exod. xxix. 27. Lev. vii. 14.

20. Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough] Dough, in Heb. arisoth (plural), meal pounded (from aras, to pound), and mixed together, whence Sept. renders it by φύραμα, and Fulg. by pulmentum. Cp. Gesen. 654-5.

The former series of Laws in this chapter (vv. 3—16) foreshadowed the blessings flowing from the sacrifice of Christ, the central object of faith and love. This Law prescribes the acts of human duty, of thankful obedience consequent thereupon—viz., the duty of devoting the firstfruits of every thing in holy obedience to God, the One Giver of all good to body and soul, and of thus sanctifying all things to God; for "if the first-fruit be holy, the lump is also holy:" see Rom. xi. 16, where the Apostle refers to this Law, and adopts the very words of the Septuagint here, ἀπαρχή and φύραμα, another instance of the use of the Septuagint in imparting light and certainty to the interpretation of the Old Testament by means of the New.

The Apostles themselves (as St. Paul there intimates) and the first Christians were an ἀπαρχή of the spiritual φύραμα; and the offering of them to God was a sanctification of the threshing-floor, so shall ye heave it. ²¹ Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations.

²² And 'if ye have erred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses, ²³ Even all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward among your generations ; ²⁴ Then it shall be, "if ought be committed by ignorance † without the knowledge of the congregation, that all the congregation shall offer one young bullock for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, * with his meat offering, and his drink offering, according to the || manner, and † one kid of the goats for a sin offering. ²⁵ * And the priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them ; for it is ignorance : and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin offering before the LORD, for their ignorance : ²⁶ And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them ; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

²⁷ And ^a if any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she goat of the first year for a sin offering. ²⁸ ^b And the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him ; and it shall be forgiven him. ²⁹ ^c Ye shall have one law for him that † sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

³⁰ ^d But the soul that doeth ought † presumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the LORD ; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people. ³¹ Because he hath ^e despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off ; † his iniquity shall be upon him.

³² And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, ^g they found a man that gathered sticks upon the sabbath day. ³³ And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation. ³⁴ And they put him ^h in ward, because it was not declared

φάρμακον, and a pledge that the whole World, when leavened by the Gospel, would be consecrated to Him.

On the typical character of this offering, prefiguring Him who is the Bread of Life, see S. Cyril, Glaphyr. p. 394. Cp. above, on Lev. xxiii. 9, 10.

— of the threshing-floor] both the first corn when reaped, and the first bread when baked, by man's labour, was to be consecrated to God (Exod. xxiii. 19. Lev. xxiii. 10. Num. xviii. 12, 26. Dent. xxvi. 2, 10. Prov. iii. 9, 10).

21. in your generations] for ever; and therefore it was observed after the Babylonish exile (Neh. x. 37); and in spirit it is obligatory on all true Israelites in every age and country of the world.

22. if ye have erred, and not observed all these commandments] In these groups of laws God reiterates His divine injunctions, given in Leviticus, requiring faith and obedience; and He now repeats the promise of forgiveness of sins of ignorance and infirmity, and thus encourages the penitent, at the same time that He denounces a curse against the wilful, presumptuous, and obstinate sinner (v. 30, 31). It is observable that He not only repeats the laws previously given, but makes some additions to them: as, for instance, here He speaks of sins of omission, and their need of expiation, whereas in Lev. iv. 2, 13, He had spoken of sins of commission.

The Laws in Leviticus are sometimes repeated in Numbers; sometimes additions are made to them here. Leviticus and Numbers are woven together,—each illustrates the other, and is supplementary to it; and neither of them can be understood without the help of the other.

24. by ignorance] See Lev. iv. 2, 13. There the sin-offering was greater than here, the sin being one of commission.

— without the knowledge of the congregation] who have omitted something (see v. 22) through ignorance, which the Law of God required. This might happen in evil times, such as the Divine Legislator foresaw—as in those days of the Judges, when every man did what was right in his own eyes.

— a sin offering] See Lev. iv. 3. The word chattath is here written in some Heb. MSS. without an aleph; on which the Jewish Expositors offer some conjectures, particularly because here the burnt-offering is mentioned before the sin-offering, which is not usual: see Jarchi on Lev. v. 10, in Ainsworth, p. 93. Twenty MSS., in Kennicott, have the aleph, though he has not inserted it in the text, p. 306.

30. presumptuously] Literally, with a high hand; boldly, as if he were equal to God Himself, who is described as delivering His People with a high hand (Exod. xiv. 8).

— reproacheth] blasphemeth.

32. that gathered sticks] Cp. our Lord's remarks on the work of the Priests on the Sabbath-day in the Temple, where wood was cleft for the fire of the altar (Matt. xii. 5), and the comment of S. Irenæus (iv. 20) on the act of the man here mentioned, and their practice: "Sacerdotes in templo sabbatum profanabant et rei non erant. Quare ergo rei non erant? Quia cum essent in templo non secularia sed Dominica perficiebant ministeria, Legem adimplentes, non autem Legem prætereuntes quemadmodum is qui a semetipso arida ligna attulit in castra Dei jussu lapidatus est."

¹ Ex. 31. 14, 15.k Lev. 24. 14.
1 Kings 21. 13
Acts 7. 58.

what should be done to him. ³⁵ And the LORD said unto Moses, ¹The man shall be surely put to death: all the congregation shall ^kstone him with stones without the camp. ³⁶ And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the LORD commanded Moses.

Matt. 23. 5.

³⁷ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ³⁸ Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid ¹them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue: ³⁹ And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the LORD, and do

35. The man shall be surely put to death: all the congregation shall stone him] The punishment here inflicted at God's command is a proof that this was a presumptuous sin; it was a wilful transgression of a known command of God: and in such a case as that, the words of the Law just recited were to be applied, "Because he hath despised the name of the Lord, and hath broken His commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off."

It was not the act itself—the gathering of sticks—but the wilful and presumptuous resistance to God which it implied; it was the "reproach of the Lord" (v. 30), and the contemptuous defiance of His Will, and the outrage against His Majesty, which subjected the offender to this punishment.

God had already twice declared that the violator of the Sabbath should die (Exod. xxxi. 14; xxxv. 2); it was not therefore any ignorance of His Will in this respect that induced Moses and the People to pause before they executed judgment upon him; but they consulted God as to the manner in which the punishment of death, already adjudged, should be inflicted (Jarchi).

The first violations of God's laws are always punished severely, in order that others may be warned by the punishment, and may not incur it (Theodoret, Qu. 30. Isidor. Pel., Ep. i. 181; and see below, on Acts v. 5). Hooker V. lxxi. 8.

This example is inserted here in connexion with the presumptuous sins mentioned in v. 30; and also because it was necessary to warn the Israelites against the supposition that the Law of the Sabbath was to be in abeyance during their wanderings for thirty-eight more years in the wilderness.

In these wanderings, they were not able to offer all the sacrifices enjoined in the Levitical Law, and to satisfy its requirements in that respect. But there was therefore greater need of maintaining inviolate the sanctity of such laws as they could observe. One of the first and foremost of these was the weekly Sabbath; which was a sign between God and them throughout their generations (cp. Exod. xxxi. 13. Ezek. xx. 12. 20), and a witness and support of true religion among them.

Accordingly we find that when Moses repeats the Levitical injunctions for the Passover and other festivals, when the Israelites were about to enter Canaan (see xviii. 29), he does not reiterate the Law of the Sabbath, but only specifies the sacrifices which thenceforth were to be offered on that weekly festival (xxviii. 9).

The Sabbath also was their consolation in those thirty-eight years' wanderings in the wilderness. God had sworn in His wrath that they should not enter into the earthly and temporal rest of Canaan. But still their condition was not hopeless. He had not utterly cast them off. No: even now, if they would repent of their sins, and obey Him, they might and would enter the better and eternal rest of heaven. They had forfeited Canaan, the earthly type of it; but they still had a holy pledge and earnest of it, continually recurring after every six days' labour, in the weekly rest of the Sabbath; and by it they might be cheered in their pilgrimage, and by a right observance of it they might be prepared and qualified for that Sabbath which was to be vouchsafed in CHRIST, and for that everlasting Rest which remaineth to the People of God (Heb. iv. 9. Cp. S. Cyril de Ador. vii. 227. 230).

The importance of maintaining inviolable the sanctity of the Sabbath in the wilderness, not only as a stated day of rest from the world, and a day of religious worship of God, but also as a type and pledge of spiritual and eternal blessings in Christ, is evident. The man was stoned for profaning the Sabbath (says S. Cyril), because this judicial act was to be a solemn warning of the perpetual necessity of resting from sin, and of seeking for rest in God's spiritual promises.

Thus their exclusion was tempered with mercy. And this solemn judicial act, vindicating the sanctity of the Sabbath, was a salutary dispensation to them. Their exclusion from Canaan was to Israel in the wilderness what the destruction of the city of Jerusalem and the Temple was to their posterity. Both were acts of severe justice, but they had also the aspects of love. They were trials and exercises of their faith and hope. The exclusion from the literal Canaan, joined as that sentence of exclusion was with the law of the Sabbath, weaned their hearts from the earthly Canaan, in order to fix them on the heavenly; as the destruction of the material Temple and City raised their thoughts and aspirations to the Heavenly Temple, and to that glorious and eternal City whose builder and maker is God.

38. make them fringes] Here is another law, with which, as with that of the Sabbath, they could comply in the wilderness, and it is therefore inserted here.

As the Sabbath was a sign between God and every Israelite, so the fringes on their garments declared that they acknowledged His Law, and they were mementos to them of His commandments.

The fringes are in Hebrew called tsitsith; which word is from the root tsuts, to shine, to flourish as a flower (Isa. xxviii. 4), and is thence applied to the shining golden plate on the forehead of the High Priest (Exod. xxviii. 36—38; cp. Ps. cxxxii. 18); and is also used to designate a wing, and a fore-lock of hair (see Jer. xlvi. 9. Ezek. viii. 3), and thence is used, as here, to describe the shining fringed edges and borders—like wings and flowers—of the garments of the Israelites (Gesen. 709: cp. Deut. xxii. 12). They are called κράσπεδα by the Sept., a word adopted in the Gospels (see on Matt. xxiii. 5; and Lightfoot there; and Bähr, Symbolik, i. 329. 364; and Buxtorf, Synagog. Judaica. c. ix. p. 160; and Maimonides, Treat. Zizith).

— in the borders] Literally, on the wings. The original word is kanaph, a wing; πτερόγιον, Sept. See Gesen. 406; and cp. Deut. xxii. 12. Ruth iii. 9. 1 Sam. xv. 27.

39. that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments] This purpose of the fringes on the borders of their garments is repeated in v. 40, that ye may remember and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God.

The word tsits was the same as that of the High Priest's lamina, on which was inscribed "HOLINESS to the LORD;" and was designed to remind the Israelites that they were to be a kingdom of Priests (Exod. xix. 6), and to be holy unto their God. Being clothed in garments distinguished by these fringes, they wore, as it were, God's livery, and were distinguished from the heathen thereby as His servants (cp. Epiphanius, Hæret. xv., and S. Jerome in Matt. xxiii.; and A. Lapide here, and Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 150). The blue colour, the colour of the clear sky (δασυθινος), and also a holy and priestly colour (cp. Bähr, Symbolik, i. 303. 325. 329), was a memento to them of a similar kind, and taught them that earth was not their home, and that they should have "their conversation in heaven" (Phil. iii. 20): see S. Cyril de Ador. vii. p. 219; and cp. Theodoret here, and see note below on Rev. ix. 13—19, p. 209, on the significance of this colour (jacinth),—a difficult text which derives light from this passage.

These blue fringes were called wings. Might not this name suggest that their thoughts should soar upward to the deep-blue sky and to God? And may not many faithful men among them have been disciplined thereby for that blessed time, when—by reason of the Resurrection of Him who deigned to clothe Himself with our nature, and who arose "with healing in His wings" (Mal. iv. 2); and who in the days of His ministry had suffered the sick to touch the wings of His garment, and thus fulfilled the prophecy of Zechariah, viii. 23 (see note on Matt. xiv. 36; and cp. Matt. ix. 20. Mark vi. 56. Luke viii. 44), and has them; and that ye ^m seek not after your own heart and your own eyes, after which ye use ⁿ to go a whoring: ⁴⁰ That ye may remember, and do all my commandments, and be ^o holy unto your God. ⁴¹ I am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD your God.

XVI. ¹ Now ^a Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, and Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and On, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men: ² And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, ^b famous in the congregation, men of renown: ³ And ^c they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, † Ye take too much upon you, seeing ^d all the congregation are holy, every one of them, ^e and the LORD

m See Deut. 29. 19.
Job 31. 7.
Jer. 9. 14.
Ezek. 6. 9.
n Ps. 73. 27. & 106. 39.
James 4. 4.
o Lev. 11. 44, 45.
Rom. 12. 1.
Col. 1. 22.
1 Pet. 1. 15, 16.
a Ex. 6. 21.
ch. 26. 9. & 27. 3.
Jude 11.

b ch. 26. 9.

c Ps. 106. 16.

† Heb. It is much for you.

d Ex. 19. 6.
e Ex. 29. 45.
ch. 14. 14. & 35. 34.

clothed us with Himself in baptism (Gal. iii. 27), and has exhorted us to wear Him as our robe of righteousness (Rom. xiii. 14. Eph. iv. 24; cp. Rev. iii. 4; vi. 11; vii. 9), and has raised us in Himself to heaven (Eph. i. 20); and will come again on the clouds of heaven—the saints will be raised from their graves; and among them, we may well suppose, even many of those “whose carcasses fell in the wilderness,” will then mount up with wings as eagles (Isa. xl. 31), and be caught up to meet the Lord in the air?

Here was to be their comfort, by which the Israelites were to be cheered in their weary sojourn in the wilderness forty years. They had just forfeited their earthly Canaan; but they had the heaven above them; its clear blue sky was over their heads, and the blue fringes,—those azure wings on their garments, congenial to, and harmonizing with, the heavenly empyrean, might console them with the blessed thought that they had a country beyond the skies, the Jerusalem that is above; and that, if they were holy and obedient to God, their heavenly Father would welcome them to that everlasting home, to dwell with Him for evermore.

PRELIMINARY NOTE ON CHAPTER XVI.

Although the Passover was in abeyance in the wilderness after the exclusion from Canaan (see xv. 2. 34), and the offering of the bloody sacrifices required by the Law was suspended, till their entrance into Canaan, yet it is evident from this chapter that the offering of incense on the golden Altar in the tabernacle was continued. The provision of a sufficient number of lambs and cattle for the sacrifices of the Levitical Ritual would not have been possible without a miracle in the wilderness; but there was no such difficulty with regard to incense.

Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xviii. 32. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is 1 Sam. xi. 14 to xii. 22, where the Prophet Samuel at Gilgal asserts his own integrity, and rebukes the people for their murmuring against God, and appeals to the testimony of God in his own behalf (as Moses does here in behalf of the authority of the Aaronical Priesthood), and God answers the appeal by thunder from heaven.

In the heading of this chapter, in the Authorized Version, it is inadvertently said, “31, the earth swalloweth up Korah, and a fire consumeth others;” whereas the truth is, that the earth swallowed up Dathan and Abiram, and fire consumed Korah, and others; see on vs. 32 and 35.

CH. XVI. 1. Korah, the son of Izhar] And therefore of the elder branch of the Kohathites. Korah was envious, it would seem, of the younger branch, that of Uzziel, which had been preferred by Moses above the elder. See above, iii. 27. 30. Perhaps they imagined that Aaron had been elevated by Moses to the Priesthood because he was his brother.

This rebellion of Korah was a severer trial of the faith and courage of Moses, because Korah was his own cousin. Izhar and Amram were brothers (Exod. vi. 18. 1 Chron. vi. 2).

— and Dathan and Abiram . . . sons of Reuben] Jacob's firstborn. Those descendants of Reuben made common cause with Korah the son of Izhar; and they were probably envious of the children of Judah, who had been preferred above his elder brother Reuben, and to whom the chief place had been given by Moses, in the encampments of Israel. See ii. 3; x. 14.

Therefore the language of these Reubenites to Moses is, “Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, to kill us in the wilderness, except thou make thyself altogether a prince over us?” (v. 13.) They may also have supposed that the Priesthood belonged to them, as the descendants of the firstborn (Theodore, Qu. 32).

The Reubenites imagined that they had a common grievance with Korah and his family, and therefore conspired together with them against Moses.

The Reubenites encamped on the south side of the tabernacle (ii. 10), next to Korah and the Kohathites (iii. 29); and so, being neighbours, they had frequent occasions of communication and of taking secret counsel together, and associated themselves with them in evil; as some of the Jewish expositors have observed, e. g., Jarchi, who says, “Woe therefore be to the wicked, and woe to his neighbour also!” (Cp. Graves on the Pent. p. 68, Part i. Lect. iv.; and Blunt, Coincidences, p. 80.)

— took men] The word men is not in the original, and is not expressed in Sept., Vulg., Onkelos, Arabic, or Syriac; but it is probably to be supplied as in the Authorized Version (see Gesen., p. 441); but the verb here used in the original (lakah, to take) may imply something more;—he took men, and he took all that was requisite for his rebellion against Moses. And the verb, which is in the singular number, is to be supplied after each nominative case here specified; thus Korah took—and Dathan took—each did his part in the rebellion; each severally was guilty, as well as all collectively; and each was punished.

2. famous in the congregation] Literally, men called, or convoked of the congregation: so Sept., Onkelos, Syriac: cp. i. 16; xxvi. 9. They were deputies and representatives of the people; and their rebellion was more formidable on that account.

3. Ye take too much upon you, seeing] Literally, much for you, that—. The words “ye take too” are not in the original, and the sense seems to be rather, “Let it be enough for you,” as it is expressed in Sept., Vulg., and in some other Versions; and cp. Deut. iii. 26, where the same words occur; and see Gen. xlv. 28. Be satisfied with this, that all the congregation are holy. If ye are, as ye pretend to be, the Lord's servants, ye ought to rejoice in this manifestation of the Lord's favour to all His people; and not to thwart His will by restraining His graces to yourselves. Bitter indeed was this reproach of these men who “envied Moses in the camp, and Aaron the Saint of the Lord” (Ps. cvi. 16). It implied that Moses and Aaron were not only guilty of usurping the spiritual privileges of the people, but were rebelling against God. There was a semblance of pious zeal for Jehovah as well as for the rights of Israel. This spirit has often shown itself in the History of the Christian Church. (See Bp. Andrewes, iv. 54.)

— all the congregation are holy] A perversion of God's words, “Ye shall be to Me a kingdom of priests” (see Exod. xix. 6), and similar to that of those who argue against the necessity of the Christian priesthood, from such texts as, “Ye are a royal priesthood” (1 Pet. ii. 9), and “He hath made us unto our God kings and priests” (Rev. i. 6; v. 10). See the notes below on those passages.

The Reubenites joined with the Levites in this plea of zeal for religion; though probably the envy of the Reubenites (see v. 1) was on secular grounds, but they disguised their schemes of temporal ambition with the cloke of piety; a specimen of what is usually done by ambitious and restless men.

The priestly pre-eminence of Aaron and his sons over the Levites was shown by the judgment recorded in this chapter; the priestly pre-eminence of Aaron, as head of the Levites, over the rest of the congregation of the other tribes, was shown by the miracle of the rod that budded, in the next chapter. See xvii. 3.

is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?

f ch. 14. 5. & 20.
6.

⁴ And when Moses heard it, ^fhe fell upon his face: ⁵ And he spake unto Korah and unto all his company, saying, Even to morrow the LORD will shew who are his, and who is ^gholy; and will cause him to come near unto him: even him whom he hath ^hchosen will he cause to ⁱcome near unto him. ⁶ This do; Take you censers, Korah, and all his company; ⁷ And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to morrow: and it shall be that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take too much upon you, ye sons of Levi. ⁸ And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi: ⁹ Seemeth it but ^ka small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath ^lseparated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them? ¹⁰ And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: and seek ye the priesthood also? ¹¹ For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together against the LORD: ^mand what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?

g ver. 3.
Lev. 21. 6, 7, 8,
12, 15.
h Ex. 28. 1.
ch. 17. 5.
1 Sam. 2. 28.
Ps. 105. 26.
i ch. 3. 10.
Lev. 10. 3. & 21.
17, 18.
Ezek. 40. 46.
& 41. 15, 16.

k 1 Sam. 18. 23.
Isa. 7. 13.
l ch. 3. 41, 45. &
8. 14.
Deut. 10. 8.

m Ex. 16. 8.
1 Cor. 3. 5.

¹² And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab: which said, We will not come up: ¹³ ⁿ*Is it* a small thing that thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, to kill us in the wilderness, except thou ^omake thyself altogether a prince over us? ¹⁴ Moreover thou hast not brought us into ^pa land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou [†]put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up. ¹⁵ And Moses was very wroth, and said unto the LORD,

n ver. 9.

o Ex. 2. 14.
Acts 7. 27, 35.
p Ex. 3. 8.
Lev. 20. 24.

† Heb. bore out.

q Gen. 4. 4, 5.
1 Sam. 12. 3.
Acts 20. 33.
2 Cor. 7. 2.
s ver. 6, 7.
t 1 Sam. 12. 3, 7.

⁹ Respect not thou their offering: ^rI have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them. ¹⁶ And Moses said unto Korah, ^sBe thou and all thy company ^tbefore the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to morrow: ¹⁷ And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

¹⁸ And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron. ¹⁹ And Korah gathered all the congregation against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and ^uthe glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

u ver. 42.
Ex. 16. 7, 10.
Lev. 9. 6, 23.
ch. 14. 10.

4. fell upon his face] The refuge of Moses was in prayer and in humble confession of his own sins, and the sins of the people (cp. xiv. 5; xx. 6).

5. spake unto Korah] Korah, the Levite, is placed first: the Levite ought to have set an example of obedience; and therefore is regarded as the principal leader of the rebellion. "Judgment must begin at the house of God" (1 Pet. iv. 17).

— to morrow] Literally, in the morning—he mercifully gives them time to repent. Probably Korah's own sons, and also On, the Reubenite, profited by this interval and repented, and escaped punishment. See the second note on v. 32.

6. censers] Literally, pans, for burning incense; κυπεῖα, Sept. The original word machetiah is from the root chathah, to take, to receive (Gesen. 314). The word is rendered "firepan" by our translators in Exod. xxvii. 3, and "censer" in Lev. x. 1; xvi. 12.

7. put incense in them before the LORD] Which was a special function of the Priest's office (see Lev. xvi. 12, 13), typifying the work of Christ our great High Priest (Rev. viii. 3); and they who ventured to offer incense, not being Priests, were liable to be punished, as King Uzziah was (2 Chron. xxvi. 18, 21).

On the ceremonial used in burning incense see Lightfoot, Temple Service, ix. 5, vol. i. p. 945.

— ye take too much upon you] Literally, much for you.

Moses repeats the words which Korah had used (see v. 3). Let that be much for you; let that suffice you; let the proof thus given content you. So Sept., Arabic, Syriac.

9. hath separated you] See viii. 14. Deut. x. 8.

12. We will not come up] From our tents to the door of the Tabernacle. Cp. v. 25.

14. thou hast not brought us into a land] No; on the contrary, we have now received an intimation from God that we shall never enter the Promised Land, but shall wander about as exiles for forty years in this wilderness. See xiv. 33, 34.

— of these men] Or, rather, of those men, as Sept., Onkelos, and others render it. We will not come up to thee; thou wilt put out the eyes of those men, who have come up to thee, viz., of Korah and his company, and thou wilt put out our eyes also if we come up; therefore we will not come up. Moses does not reply to this presumptuous assertion.

15. I have not taken one ass] Cp. 1 Sam. xii. 3. The Septuagint renders it, "I have not taken any object of desire (ἐπιθυμητὰ) from them." Perhaps they had chamud (desired, pleasant), and not chamor, ass, in their MSS. See Gesen. 286. Others have said that this is one of thirteen places which the Septuagint paraphrased designedly in order to explain the sense more clearly to Greek readers (Ainsworth).

19. the glory of the LORD appeared] See v. 42, and xii. 5; xiv. 10.

²⁰ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, ²¹ * Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may ^v consume them in a moment. ²² And they ^z fell upon their faces, and said, O God, ^a the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation? ²³ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁴ Speak unto the congregation, saying, Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

²⁵ And Moses rose up and went unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him. ²⁶ And he spake unto the congregation, saying, ^b Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins. ²⁷ So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side: and Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children. ²⁸ And Moses said, ^c Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do all these works; for I have not done them ^d of mine own mind. ²⁹ If these men die [†] the common death of all men, or if they be ^e visited after the visitation of all men; then the LORD hath not sent me. ³⁰ But if the LORD [†] make ^f a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they ^g go down quick into the pit; then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

³¹ ^h And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them: ³² And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and ⁱ all the men that appertained unto Korah, and all their goods. ³³ They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation. ³⁴ And all Israel that were round about them fled at the cry of them: for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also. ³⁵ And there ^k came out a fire from the LORD, and consumed ^l the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

x ver. 45.
See Gen. 19. 17, 22.
Jer. 51. 6.
Acts 2. 40.
Rev. 18. 4.
y ver. 45.
Ex. 32. 10. & 33. 5.
z ver. 45. ch. 14. 5.
a ch. 27. 16
Job 12. 10.
Eccles. 12. 7.
Isa. 57. 16.
Zech. 12. 1.
Heb. 12. 9.

b Gen. 19. 12, 14.
Isa. 52. 11.
2 Cor. 6. 17.
Rev. 18. 4.

c Ex. 3. 19.
Deut. 18. 22.
Zech. 2. 9, 11. & 4. 9.
John 5. 33.
d ch. 24. 13.
Jer. 23. 16.
Ezek. 13. 17.
John 5. 30. & 6. 38.
+ Heb. as every man dieth.
e Ex. 20. 5. & 32. 34.
Job 35. 15.
Isa. 10. 3.
Jer. 5. 9.
+ Heb. create a creature.
Isa. 45. 7.
f Job 31. 3.
Isa. 28. 21.
g ver. 33.
Ps. 55. 15.
h ch. 26. 10. & 27. 3.
Deut. 11. 6.
Ps. 106. 17.
i See ver. 17. & ch. 26. 11.
l Chron. 6. 22, 37.

k Lev. 10. 2.
ch. 11. 1.
Ps. 106. 18.
l ver. 17.

24. the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram] Whose tents were near to one another on the south side of the Tabernacle (see v. 1).

25. unto Dathan and Abiram] Korah himself had quitted his tent on the south side of the Tabernacle, and had gone up to the door of the Tabernacle with the 250 men who offered incense (v. 19), and stood at the east end of the Tabernacle, where Aaron and the Priests then were, and where they encamped.

27. from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram] Some have supposed that Korah, Dathan, and Abiram made a common tabernacle in opposition to the Tabernacle (Blunt, p. 82). But this does not seem probable; the warning was, "Depart from the tents of these wicked men" (v. 26); and the people complied with the command, and separated themselves from the tent of Korah, and from the tent of Dathan, and the tent of Abiram. Korah was not in his tent, nor were his sons; but some of his family were (v. 31), and they, with his substance, were swallowed up (v. 32).

23. the LORD hath sent me to do all these works] in separating Aaron and his sons from the Levites, and in appointing them to the Priesthood; and in giving precedence to the children of Uzziel before those of Izhar; and to the tribe of Judah before that of Reuben (see v. 1); and in resisting the claim of Korah and his company.

— I have not done them of mine own mind] I have not preferred Aaron to the Priesthood, because he is my brother, but by God's command (Lev. viii. 1).

This appeal of Moses may apply to all the Mosaic legislation contained in the Pentateuch; and the answer of approval which God gave to this appeal of Moses, in the matter of Korah, was a divine sanction of that legislation as proceeding from Himself, and not from the mind of Moses.

32. swallowed them up] namely, Dathan and Abiram; not Korah himself, who was consumed by fire (v. 35). Cp. Ps. cvi. 17, 18: "The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the congregation of Abiram; and the fire was kindled in their company: the flame burnt up the ungodly."

The Reubenites, Dathan and Abiram, who coveted earthly precedence, and rebelled against the earthly ruler, were swallowed up by the earth; and Korah and the Levites, who aspired to spiritual pre-eminence and intruded into the sacred office of the priesthood, and presumed to take censures, and to put fire therein, and put incense in them before the Lord (see vv. 6, 7), were consumed by fire from the Lord. Cp. S. Irenæus, iv. 43. Theodoret, Qu. 33. The punishment was in each case suited to the sin. Dathan and Abiram rebelled against the earthly ruler, and were swallowed up by the earth; Korah and his company sinned by fire, and were consumed by fire. It was so with Sodom and Gomorrah; they sinned by the fire of unholy lust, and were burned with fire. It was so with Nadab and Abihu; they sinned by fire, and were burned with fire (Lev. x. 1, 2). Others sin by shedding blood; and have blood given them to drink (Rev. xvi. 6. Cp. Exod. vii. 20, 21).

— all the men that appertained unto Korah] not Korah himself (see v. 32. Cp. Deut. xi. 6), nor his sons (see xxvi. 11), but his goods. It seems also that On, the Reubenite (v. 1), escaped. Probably he and Korah's son repented (see v. 5). Some of his family became Psalmists (see Ps. xlii.)

— their goods] Cp. Deut. xi. 6, where it is said, "What God did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben, how the earth opened her mouth and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the living substance which followed them."

33. the pit] Heb. shéol, the grave (Ifeiffer, p. 151).

35. a fire from the LORD] Korah and his company were punished by the same element as that by which they sinned—

³⁶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ³⁷ Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for ^m they are hallowed. ³⁸ The censers of these ⁿ sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar: for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: ^o and they shall be a sign unto the children of Israel. ³⁹ And Eleazar the priest took the brasen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar: ⁴⁰ To be a memorial unto the children of Israel, ^p that no stranger, which is not of the seed of Aaron, come near to offer incense before the LORD; that he be not as Korah, and as his company: as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

⁴¹ But on the morrow ^q all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, saying, Ye have killed the people of the LORD. ⁴² And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, ^r the cloud covered it, and ^s the glory of the m See Lev. 27. 28.

n Prov. 20. 2.
Hab. 2. 10.

o ch. 17. 10. & 26.
10. Ezek. 14. 8.

p ch. 3. 10.
2 Chron. 26. 18.

q ch. 14. 2.
Ps. 106. 25.

r Ex. 40. 34.
s ver. 19.
ch. 20. 6.

fire (see v. 32), as Nadab and Abihu were (Lev. x. 2). "Per quod quis peccat, per idem quoque plectitur idem." Josephus (Ant. iv. 3. 3) correctly states this; and so the Samaritan Pentateuch.

37. Speak unto Eleazar] Why not unto Aaron? The reason seems to be (as some of the Hebrew Expositors have observed) that the work here required was one which, being concerned about the dead, would involve the doer of it in a ceremonial defilement, and therefore Aaron, the High Priest, was to be exempted from doing it; and this command is the more remarkable as intimating divine foresight and mercy, inasmuch as Aaron, the High Priest, was soon afterwards exercised in an act of sacerdotal ministrations and intercession in behalf of the people: see v. 46. Moses said unto Aaron, "Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the Altar, and put on incense, and go quickly into the congregation, and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the Lord; the plague is begun." Aaron could not have done this if he had been defiled by going among the dead. Compare the similar command in xix. 13.

Also by this command, "Speak unto Eleazar, the son of Aaron the Priest," God intimated His will that the Priesthood should descend in hereditary succession in the family of Aaron (S. Augustine).

38. broad plates] Literally, outspreadings of plates. The censers or fire-pans were of brass, and were to be made into a covering (περίθετα, Sept.) to the brazen altar, or altar of burnt sacrifice, from which fire was to be taken for kindling of incense to be offered on the golden altar of incense before the veil.

Thus Korah's act of sacrilege was converted into a warning against it. God's Altar was protected by the means which had been used to violate its sanctity. All usurpations of spiritual things, all outrages against God, will eventually be made ministerial to the greater manifestation of His power and glory. Even the censers of Korah and his company were made available for the adornment of God's altar.

Some of the ancient Fathers have taken occasion hence to observe that all the efforts of Heretics and Schismatics have been overruled by God's good providence, to the greater confirmation and illustration of the Faith. The heresies of Basilides and Marcion (says Origen here) have been confuted from Scripture, and have been made serviceable to the manifestation of the Truth, and to the advancement of God's honour and worship. Origen's words are very applicable to these latter days of doubt, disbelief, and distress, and may cheer the hearts of many at this time: "Si doctrina Ecclesiastica nullis hæreticorum dogmatum assertionibus cingeretur, non poterat tam clara et tam examinata fieri fides nostra; sed ideirco doctrinam catholicam contradicentium obsidet oppugnat, ut fides nostra non otio torposcat, sed exercitiis elimetur." As the Apostle says, "There must be heresies among you, that they who are approved may be made manifest" (1 Cor. xi. 19). The censers of the Korahs of heresy, and schism, and unbelief are used by the Christian Priests for the making of broad plates to adorn the altar of the Church (Origen, Hom. 9).

40. To be a memorial unto the children of Israel] and a warning to all future generations in the Church of God.

"These things were examples to us, and are written for our admonition" (1 Cor. x. 6. 11). It is evident that the sin of Korah may be committed in the Christian Church; the Apostle of Christ, St. Jude, speaks of false teachers under the Gospel who perish "in the gainsaying of Kore" (Jude 11). And though the fire may not now come out from the Lord to destroy those who, without being duly called and sent, intrude into holy things, and take upon themselves to minister the Word and Sacraments in the Church, yet there is reserved for them a judgment hereafter, unless they repent of their sins; as the sons of Korah probably did (see v. 5.). The fire of the Great Day will try every man's work of what sort it is (see on 1 Cor. iii. 13—15; and on Acts xiii. 1, 2; xix. 14). Therefore the Christian Fathers appeal to this history of Korah as a warning against Schism (S. Clemens, Epist. § 51. S. Iren., iv. 43. S. Cyprian, de Unit. Eccl. p. 116; Epist. 3. 69. 73, ed. Fell. S. Ambrose, Epist. 63, § 52): and this chapter is fitly appointed by the Church to be read as a Proper Lesson on the first Sunday after Easter, the Festival of Christ's Resurrection. When He had risen from the dead, Christ invested the Christian Priesthood with its spiritual powers, by breathing upon the Apostles and saying, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost: whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained" (see John xx. 22, 23), and He gave it a commission to go and preach the Gospel to all the world (Matt. xxviii. 19). Further, it deserves careful consideration that Korah was a Levite (not a layman), and that the sin for which he was punished was his intrusion into the office of Priest. Therefore this example is not only a warning to laymen, that they do not usurp priestly functions; but it is also applicable to all, who belong to a lower order in the ministry, usurp functions which belong to their superiors, and to those who place Presbyters on a level with Bishops, the successors of the Apostles. On this subject, we may profit by the remarks of Bp. Andrewes (v. 63): "No man could perish in the 'gainsaying of Korah' (Jude 11), under the Gospel, which St. Jude saith they may, if there were not a superiority in the Clergy; for Korah's mufiny was because he might not be equal to Aaron, appointed his superior by God (Num. xvi. 10). Which very humour, observe it who will, hath brought forth most part of the heresies since the time of the Gospel, that Korah might not be Aaron's equal. Now of these two orders, the Apostles have ever been reckoned the superior to the other till our times . . . (Luke ix. 49). In the place of the Twelve succeeded Bishops; and in the place of the Seventy Presbyteri, Priests, or Ministers; and that by the judgment of Irenæus (lib. iii. c. 3), who lived immediately upon the Apostles' age; of Tertullian (de Præscrip., c. 32); of S. Augustine (in Ps. 44); and this till of late was thought the form of fellowship, and never other imagined." Bp. Andrewes, v. 63. Cp. below, the notes on 1 Tim. iii. 1, pp. 444—446.

41. Ye have killed the people of the LORD] They imputed the punishment of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram not to their own sins, but to the prayers of Moses, who they imagined had exercised his influence with God out of private regard for his own temporal power, and the priestly pre-eminence of his brother Aaron (Josephus, Ant. iv. 4. 1).

LORD appeared. ⁴³ And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁴⁴ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁴⁵ 'Get you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And ⁴⁶ they fell upon their faces. ⁴⁶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: * for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun. ⁴⁷ And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation; and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people. ⁴⁸ And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed. ⁴⁹ Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, beside them that died about the matter of Korah. ⁵⁰ And Aaron returned unto Moses unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the plague was stayed.

XVII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod according to the house of their fathers, of all their princes according to the house of their fathers twelve rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod. ³ And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers. ⁴ And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation before the testimony, ^a where I will meet with you. ⁵ And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod, ^b whom I shall choose, shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, ^c whereby they murmur against you.

⁶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and every one of their princes gave him [†] a rod apiece, for each prince one, according to their fathers' houses, even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods. ⁷ And Moses laid up the rods before the LORD in ^d the tabernacle of witness.

† ver. 21, 24.

u ver. 22. ch. 20. 6.

x Lev. 10. 6. ch. 1. 53. & 8. 19. & 11. 33. & 13. f. 1 Chron. 27. 24. Ps. 106. 29.

a Ex. 25. 22. & 29. 42, 43. & 30. 36. b ch. 16. 5.

c ch. 16. 11.

† Heb. a rod for one prince, a rod for one prince.

d Ex. 38. 21. ch. 18. 2. Acts 7. 44.

46. And Moses said unto Aaron] See on v. 37. — Take a censer, and put fire therein] Rather, Take thou the censer,—thou, who art the Priest of God, do for the life of the people that act, which, when done by Korah and those who were not Priests, was the cause of their own death. Do thou it, and do it rightly; take fire from the altar, not strange fire, as thy sons who were priests, Nadab and Abihu, took, and were consumed by fire for their sins (Lev. x. 2).

Thus this history is a solemn warning both to Laymen and to Priests; to Laymen not to invade the Priests' office, and to Priests to fulfil their priestly functions in the way appointed by God.

47, 48. And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran—and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people. And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed] Aaron ran; so Christ came with cheerful alacrity to do God's will in the salvation of the world (Ps. xl. 10. Luke xii. 50. John iv. 34). Aaron stood between the dead and the living, exposing himself to the danger of the plague for the sake of the people: Christ delivered Himself to death itself. Aaron put sweet incense into his censer, and made an atonement for the people. Christ offered Himself as a sacrifice of a sweet-smelling savour (Eph. v. 2), and made intercession for the transgressors (Isa. liii. 12), and is ever offering the sweet incense of prayer and intercession to God in the golden censer of His own merits, not in the earthly tabernacle, but in the Holy of Holies in Heaven (Heb. vii. 22—26. Cp. S. Cyril de S. Trin. Dial. 1, pp. 402, 403).

Ch. XVII. 2. a rod] Heb. matteh, from natah, to stretch out, a branch, rod, or staff (Gen. xxxviii. 18. Exod. iv. 2), a sceptre (cp. Gen. xlix. 10), and also a tribe, as a branch of the people (Num. i. 4. 16). Gesen. 466. 546.

— twelve rods] To represent the twelve tribes, shooting forth like branches out of the one stem and root, that of their father Jacob.

— write thou every man's name upon his rod] So Ezekiel wrote the names of the tribes upon rods, which were joined together as one in his hand; and thus he signified the union of the tribes of Israel in Christ (Ezek. xxxvii. 16—28).

3. write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi] Aaron was the son of Amram, the son of Kohath, the second son of Levi; the eldest was Gershon (see Exod. vi. 16—20), yet Aaron's name is to be written on the rod of Levi.

The divine judgment upon Korah had decided that Aaron and his sons had been elevated by God to the Priesthood, above the Levites; the present miracle declares that Aaron, the head of the Levitical Priests, had the Priesthood, as distinguished from all other tribes, and was a refutation of the allegation that "all the congregation were holy" (xvi. 3).

— for one rod shall be] Although the house of Levi is divided into two families, namely, of Priests—Aaron and his sons,—and Levites, yet they have one head, they are not divided in origin, though they have separate duties. Aaron is the head of the Levites as well as of the Priests. So the one Head of all is Christ. He is the single source of all ministerial power in His Church (1 Cor. xi. 3. Eph. iv. 5. Col. i. 17, 18). He is the Rock on which the Church is founded, and from which every one—be he Bishop, Priest, or Deacon—is hewn, and on which all are built, and must build (see on Matt. xvi. 18).

4. lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation] Or rather, of the meeting with God (see Exod. xxv. 22; xxx. 36), and therefore it is added here, "there will I meet with you."

— before the testimony] Before the Ark in which the tables of the law were (see Exod. xxv. 16).

5. shall blossom] Shall bring forth, from the Hebrew parach, to burst forth, to sprout, to bud and blossom (ep. Isa. xvii. 11; xxxv. 1, 2. Ezek. vii. 10). Gesen. 689. On this act of Moses, see S. Clement, Epist. § 43.

⁸ And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness ; and, behold, the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds. ⁹ And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel : and they looked, and took every man his rod.

¹⁰ And the LORD said unto Moses, Bring ^e Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept ^f for a token against the [†] rebels ; ^g and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not. ¹¹ And Moses did so : as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

¹² And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish. ¹³ ^h Whosoever cometh anything near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die : shall we be consumed with dying ?

XVIII. ¹ And the LORD said unto Aaron, ^a Thou and thy sons and thy

e Heb. 9. 4.

f ch. 16. 38.
† Heb. children of rebellion.
g ver. 5.

h ch. 1. 51, 53.
& 18. 4, 7.

a ch. 17. 13.

8. behold, the rod of Aaron—was budded] Aaron's rod had been only a dead dry stick, but being laid up before God, it budded in the morning, and brought forth buds and bloomed blossoms, and yielded ripe fruits (almonds, shekedim, from the Hebrew word shaked, to awake), and was, as it were, awakened by the Spirit of God (see Jer. i. 11); and not only so, but it proved him to be the Priest appointed of God, who quickens the dead, and pours the sap of His grace into dry trees; and that Aaron was set apart for the sacred service of God, from among the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

The budding of the Rod was an emblem of the unfading permanence of the Priesthood. "Virga illa quid ostendit nisi quod sacerdotalis nunquam marcescat gratia?" (S. Ambrose, Ep. 63.) But how does it live? Not in Aaron; but in Him "who abideth a Priest for ever," and "who ever liveth to make intercession for us" (Heb. vii. 25).

Our Lord proved Himself to be the Messiah, the true High Priest over all the tribes of faithful Israelites, by coming forth as a Rod out of the stem of Jesse, when the house of David was in a low estate like a dead and sere stick, and "as a root out of a dry ground" (Isa. xi. 1; lii. 2), and He is "the man whose name is the BRANCH" (Zech. vi. 12), and in Him are fulfilled the prophecies, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch; in his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is His Name whereby He shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS" (Jer. xxiii. 6). "In that day shall the Branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious" (Isa. iv. 2: see below on Matt. ii. 23).

The figure was further fulfilled in the Resurrection of Christ from the grave, who was "declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the Resurrection from the dead" (see Rom. i. 4). Christ at His death had seemed for a time to be withered, and to have become like a dry tree (see on Matt. xxi. 21). But in the morning He awakened from the dead, and the BRANCH put forth, as an Almond-tree, the buds and blossoms and ripe fruits of life and immortality.

Yet further, His Priesthood is ever bearing buds and blossoms and ripe fruits of the Spirit in the ministration of the means of grace, and in the lives of His faithful people, who are snoots and offsets from His stem; and He will bear blossoms and fruit for ever in the blessed Resurrection of His saints. For with His dead body will they arise, and His dew is like the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead (Isa. xxvi. 19). See S. Augustine in A Lapide on v. 6, and S. Gregory, Moral. xiv. 19, who says, "Christus a mortuis resurgens est Virga per potentiam, Flos per fragrantiam, Fructus per saporis dulcedinem, Frondes per protectionem."

Thus, as the Fathers say, "Aaronis virga refluuit in Christo" (S. Ambrose, Ep. 4): cp. Origen in Numb. Hom. 9). "Verus Pontifex Christus est; Ipse solus, ejus Virga Crucis non solum germinavit, sed floruit, et omnes hos credentium populorum attulit fructus" S. Cyril, Hæres. Cat. 18, on this Rod as illustrating the doctrine of the Resurrection; and Epiphanius, Ancorat. § 97; S. Cyril Alex. de Adorat. x. p. 342; and Bede, Qu. 15, "Virga Aaronis Christus est post mortem resurgens."

10. Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token] As it was with the pot of manna (Exod. xvi. 33: see Heb. ix. 4). It seems to have not been preserved till Solomon's days (see 1 Kings viii. 9). But the rod of Aaron's divine Antitype, JESUS CHRIST, is preserved for evermore.

In the Holy of Holies were foreshadowed the mysteries of the Gospel: the Manna signifying the flesh of Christ, the Living Bread which cometh down from heaven (John vi. 31—33), and Aaron's Rod that budded, representing His glorious Resurrection and everlasting Priesthood, ever flourishing and putting forth blossoms and fruits of holiness and joy. "For the Temple was as a great Mirror, and the furniture as so many little glasses round about it. Take but the Ark, the epitome as it were of the Temple. The Two Tables in it, the type of the true treasures of wisdom and knowledge (Col. ii. 3), hid in Him; they were broken first,—there is soluite (John ii. 19), but they were new hewn and written over again—there is excitabo (Exod. xxxii. 19; xxxiv. 4. John ii. 19). 'The pot of Manna,' a perfect resemblance of Him—the urna, or the vessel, being golden (Heb. ix. 4), made of earth, so earthly; the Manna, the contents of it, being from heaven, so heavenly. The Manna, we know, would not keep past two days at the most (Exod. xvi. 20. 24), there is soluite; but being put into the urna, the third day it came again to itself, and kept in the pot without putrefying ever after, there is excitabo (Exod. xvi. 33). Aaron's Rod, the type of His Priesthood and of the rule of souls annexed to it, that rod was quite dead and dry, and revived again and 'blossomed;' yea, 'brought forth ripe almonds' (Num. xvii. 9). In every and in each of them is His destiny, whom they represented; soluite and excitabo in all" (Bp. Andrewes).

12. Behold, we die, we perish] Such is the voice of the people in the wilderness, excluded from Canaan for their sins, and whose carcases fell in the desert (Heb. iii. 17). They had beheld the death of Korah and his company, and of Dathan and Abiram, and of those who died in the plague. They see their own rods remain as dry sticks, and they vent their thoughts in sorrow. "Whosoever cometh anything near unto the tabernacle of the Lord shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?" No; the rod that budded shall give life to the rest. "The Priesthood shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary" is the answer given in the next chapter; and beyond all is the Priesthood of Christ visible to the eye of Faith. Let us look forward to Him, foreshadowed in the Priesthood of Aaron, bearing the censor and its fragrant incense, the type of His intercession; and though our bodies fall in the wilderness, though they be like sere and parched sticks, though they wither and moulder there, yet they also will be awakened from the dust, and put forth buds and blossom, and bear fruit for ever in heaven.

CH. XVIII. 1. the LORD said unto Aaron] This chapter and the preceding follow continuously after the rebellion of Korah against Aaron and the Priesthood, which furnished the occasion for stating clearly the prerogatives of the Priesthood, and for guarding it against similar aggressions after the entrance of Israel into Canaan (see re. 13. 20), and during the whole continuance of the Levitical Dispensation, even to the coming of Christ.

Therefore these chapters have a prospective character. They determine the state of the Levitical Priesthood.

But no privilege is without its corresponding responsibility. Aaron's right to the Priesthood was not "honor sine onere," or a "beneficium sine officio." No; the nearer he is to God, the greater his peril is, if he is untrue to God. The burden of the sins committed in the sanctuary lies upon him and his sons. We may compare here the divine warnings to the Angels of the Churches in the Apocalypse (see note on Rev. ii. 1, p. 171). The Head of the Church lays on the Angels the failings of their father's house with thee shall ^b bear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood. ² And thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be ^c joined unto thee, and ^d minister unto thee: but ^e thou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of witness. ³ And they shall keep thy charge, and ^f the charge of all the tabernacle: ^g only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, ^h that neither they, nor ye also, die. ⁴ And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: ⁱ and a stranger shall not come nigh unto you. ⁵ And ye shall keep ^k the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar: ^l that there be no wrath any more upon the children of Israel. ⁶ And I, behold, I have ^m taken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel: ⁿ to you they are given as a gift for the LORD, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁷ Therefore ^o thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for every thing of the altar, and ^p within the veil; and ye shall serve: I have given your priest's office unto you as a service of gift: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

⁸ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Behold, ^q I also have given thee the charge of mine heave offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel; unto thee have I given them ^r by reason of the anointing, and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever. ⁹ This shall be thine of the most holy things, reserved from the fire: every oblation of theirs, every ^s meat offering of theirs, and every ^t sin offering of theirs, and every ^u trespass offering of theirs, which they shall render unto me, shall be most holy for thee and for thy sons. ¹⁰ ^x In the most holy place shalt thou eat it; every male shall eat it: it shall be holy unto thee. ¹¹ And this ^y is thine; ^z the heave offering of their gift, with all the wave offerings of the children of Israel: I have given them unto ^a thee, and to thy sons and to thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: ^b every one that is Churches. Bishops and Priests "bear the iniquity of the sanctuary."

2. that they may be joined unto thee] An allusion to the meaning of the name Levi, joined (Gen. xxix. 34). It is repeated in v. 4.

Let not the Levites be separated from thee by rivalry (as Korah was), but be joined with thee in serving God: cp. xvii. 3, where it is said that there shall be one rod for the whole house of Levi, and the name of Aaron was to be written upon it. The Priests and Levites have different offices, but they are to be united together in one heart and soul in serving God. So the three orders of the Christian Ministry are to be strung together like chords of a harp—to adopt the beautiful figure of S. Ignatius, ad Eph. § 4)—in making sweet music to God.

3. they shall keep thy charge] Literally, shall watch thy watch,—the watch appointed by thee: see Num. iii. 6—10; iv. 15, 17—20. The rules prescribed for the watches of the Priests and Levites, in their courses in the Tabernacle and the Temple, are set down with much minuteness by the Hebrew writers, and a knowledge of them may serve for a better understanding of sundry passages of the New Testament, where the duty of watchfulness (Rev. iii. 2, 3), and of walking circumspectly (Eph. v. 15), and of taking heed to their garments (Rev. xvi. 15), are prescribed to the Christian Clergy, and indeed to all Christians, who, in a certain enlarged sense, are made Priests to God by Christ (Rev. i. 6): see Lightfoot, Temple Service, chap. vii., vol. i. pp. 915—918; and Maimonides in Ainsworth, p. 109.

5. that there be no wrath any more] Therefore God did not punish Korah and his associates willingly, but they drew down His wrath upon themselves.

6. to you they are given as a gift for the LORD] Not for your own glory, but God's: see iii. 9, 12; viii. 13—19.

7. within the veil] Exod. xxvi. 31: the first veil (Heb. ix. 1—6).

8. And the LORD spake unto Aaron] Having declared Aaron's duties, He now speaks of his privileges; and thus teaches the People what their own obligations are to provide maintenance for the Priesthood, and to show their gratitude to God in His Ministers; and to acknowledge Him as the Maker and Giver of all. Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 7—11.

— by reason of the anointing] See Lev. vii. 35; xxi. 10, 12. On this text, see Bp. Pearson's Sermon (Op. Post. ii. 69), "quo divina asseritur institutio Ministerii, et distinctio Ministrorum."

9. of the most holy things] He begins with those things of which the Priests only might eat: see Lev. vi. 17. Some oblations were holy (as the heave-offering, v. 11); some were most holy; as the residue of the meat-offering (Lev. ii. 3; vi. 16), the sin-offering of the People (Lev. vii. 1. 6), which the Priests only might eat in the Court of the Tabernacle (cp. Maimonides in Ainsworth, p. 43), and these are here specified first: see v. 10.

10. In the most holy place shalt thou eat it] Not in the Holy of holies (see Lev. xvi. Heb. ix. 7), nor in the tabernacle itself (Lev. vi. 16), but in the fore-court of it, which is called most holy, in comparison with the camp, where the holy things might not be eaten. Cp. Ezek. xlii. 13, 14.

Hence appears the grace and glory of the Gospel. By it we are all made Priests to God, and are all invited to eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Most Holy One in all parts of the World—in every place—in order that we may be nourished thereby unto everlasting life (John vi. 35, 50, 51. 1 Cor. x. 16. Heb. xiii. 10—15).

— every male] The priests' wives and daughters might not eat of the most holy things, but the males only; but in the Gospel all are invited to eat of the most holy; for in Christ there is neither male nor female, but all are one in Him (Gal. iii. 28).

11. And this is thine] Having spoken of the most holy things, he now proceeds to speak of the holy things. Cp. Lev. vii. 11, 30—34; x. 14; xxii. 10. Deut. xviii. 3.

— the heave offering] See Exod. xxix. 27.

b Ex. 23. 19.
Deut. 18. 4.
Neh. 10. 35, 36.
† Heb. Jat,
ver. 29.
c Ex. 22. 29.

d Ex. 22. 29. &
23. 19. & 34. 26.
Lev. 2. 14. ch. 15.
19. Deut. 26. 2.

e ver. 11.
f Lev. 27. 28.
g Ex. 13. 2. &
22. 29.
h Ex. 27. 26.
ch. 3. 13.
i Ex. 13. 13. &
34. 20.

i Lev. 27. 2, 6.
ch. 3. 47.
k Ex. 30. 13.
Lev. 27. 25.
ch. 3. 47.
Ezek. 45. 12.
* Deut. 15. 19.
m Lev. 3. 2, 5.

n Ex. 29. 26, 28.
Lev. 7. 31, 32, 34.
o ver. 11.

p Lev. 2. 13.
2 Chron. 13. 5.

q Deut. 10. 9. &
12. 12. & 14. 27,
29. & 18. 1, 2.
Josh. 13. 14, 33,
& 14. 3. & 18. 7.
Ps. 16. 5.
Ezek. 44. 28.

clean in thy house shall eat of it. ¹² ^b All the † best of the oil, and all the best of the wine, and of the wheat, ° the firstfruits of them which they shall offer unto the LORD, them have I given thee. ¹³ And whatsoever is first ripe in the land, ^d which they shall bring unto the LORD, shall be thine; ° every one that is clean in thine house shall eat of it. ¹⁴ ^f Every thing devoted in Israel shall be thine. ¹⁵ Every thing that openeth ^g the matrix in all flesh, which they bring unto the LORD, whether it be of men or beasts, shall be thine: nevertheless ^h the firstborn of man shalt thou surely redeem, and the firstling of unclean beasts shalt thou redeem. ¹⁶ And those that are to be redeemed from a month old shalt thou redeem, ⁱ according to thine estimation, for the money of five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, ^k which is twenty gerahs. ¹⁷ ¹ But the firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: ^m thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD. ¹⁸ And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the ⁿ wave breast and as the right shoulder are thine. ¹⁹ ° All the heave offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: ^p it is a covenant of salt for ever before the LORD unto thee and to thy seed with thee. ²⁰ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: ^q I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel. ²¹ And, behold, ^r I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service

r ver. 24, 26. Lev. 27. 30, 32. Neh. 10. 37. & 12. 44. Heb. 7. 5, 8, 9.

12. All the best] Literally, all the fat, as in v. 29. Cp. Gen. xxvii. 28; xlv. 18. Deut. xxxii. 14. Ps. lxxxi. 17; cxlvii. 14, where the fat is used for the best as here. Cp. Lev. iii. 3. On the moral and spiritual obligation of such precepts as these in Christian times, see the excellent remarks of Origen in Num., Hom. 11; and see note below on 1 Cor. ix. 14, "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel."

— the firstfruits] See Exod. xxiii. 19.

14. Every thing devoted] See Lev. xxvii. 28.

15. Every thing that openeth the matrix] See Exod. xiii. 2. 13; xxii. 29. Lev. xxvii. 26. Num. iii. 13. Here again appears the grace and glory of the Gospel. We are made to be God's firstborn in Christ (Heb. xii. 23), who is the Firstborn of every creature (Col. i. 15); the Firstborn of the house of David (Matt. i. 25. Luke ii. 7); and the Firstborn of the new Creation of our regenerate nature sanctified by the Holy Ghost, and made the Shechinah of the Deity by His Incarnation. He has presented us to God in Himself (Luke ii. 22, 23); and has joined us to the Church of the firstborn, whose names are written in heaven (Heb. xii. 23), and has redeemed us to Himself with the shekels of the sanctuary, even with His own most precious blood (1 Pet. i. 18, 19), so that we are not our own, but bought with a price (1 Cor. vi. 20; vii. 23), and are therefore bound to glorify Him in our bodies and spirits, which are His (1 Cor. vi. 20).

18. And the flesh of them shall be thine] It has been alleged that this is inconsistent with Deut. xii. 17, 18; and xv. 19, 20, where it is said that the flesh of the firstborn is to be given to those Israelites who offer it, to be eaten by them. S. Augustine (Qu. 18 in Deut.) adverts to this seeming contradiction, but does not propose any explanation of it. Michaelis, Jahn, and others have conjectured that the firstborn belonged to the Priests, and the secondborn to the people; but this is at variance with the text. Eichhorn (Einleitung, iii. p. 135) asserts that there is an error in the text. But (as Kalisch has observed on Exod., p. 221) the addition here, as the wave breast and as the right shoulder are thine, explains the whole matter clearly; that is, the firstborn are thine, under the conditions here annexed; which conditions are expressed in Lev. vii. 31. The fat and blood are to be given to God (v. 17), the breast and the right shoulder shall be thine (cp. Exod. xxix. 27. Lev. x. 14), but the rest shall be given to the Israelites who offer them.

The Septuagint well explains the passage, κατὰ τὸν βραχίονα τὸν δεξιόν, i. e., with respect to the right shoulder; cp. Hengst., Auth. ii. pp. 404—407.

Here is another of the many silent proofs of the unity of authorship of the Pentateuch. We must compare Exodus with Leviticus, and Numbers with Deuteronomy, in order to understand any one of them rightly. And the sacred Author has written each of them, under the presumption that we will compare them, and so attain to their right meaning. And may we not add, that this is our moral probation, designed for us by the Holy Ghost, who inspired Moses to compose the Pentateuch in the manner he has done?

19. a covenant of salt] So called, either from the incorruptible nature of salt, and therefore the words are rendered, "an everlasting covenant" by Sept.; or because salt was a token of hospitality, and "to eat salt" together, was a symbol of inviolable friendship (see on Lev. ii. 13. 2 Chron. xiii. 5).

20. Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land] God speaks to Aaron, not personally (for he died before they came into Canaan, xx. 28), but as the head and representative of the Priesthood (cp. Deut. x. 9; xiv. 27; xviii. 1). Thou shalt have no inheritance in the land. Thou shalt not be entangled with earthly things—farms and merchandise. I am thy landlord, and heaven is thy country (cp. 2 Tim. ii. 4). The Priests and Levites were, in this respect, the predecessors of the Christian Clergy, mingled with the Laity, and bound to be as "the salt of the earth, and the light of the world," and being entitled to receive maintenance from their flock; see below, on Josh. xiii. 14.

— I am—thine inheritance] κληρονομία (Sept.), whence clerici, clergy (S. Jerome ad Nepotian. S. Chrysos. in Act. i. 17). This promise was made in the Gospel to the Apostles and primitive disciples, and is extended to all who forsake earthly things for Christ. They are the Levites of the Gospel, He is their inheritance (see Matt. xix. 29; and S. Irenaeus, iv. 20).

21. all the tenth] This is the first tithe which the Israelites paid to the Levites. There was a second tithe which they ate before the Lord the first and second year; and in the third year they gave of it to the Levites and the Poor (Deut. xiv. 22—28).

The provision made by Almighty God for the Levites was very bountiful. Michaelis calculates (Mos. Recht, i. § 52) that every male adult Levite was supplied with as much as would maintain five grown-up persons. Hooker (vii. 23. 4) says that their worldly estate was four times as good as any of the tribes of Israel. Cp. Prideaux on Tithes, pp. 76. 84—99. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 722. Jahn, Arch. § 389. Dr. Smith, B. D. iii. 1517.

On the alleged discrepancy between this passage (v. 20—25) and Deut. xii. 6, see note there.

which they serve, even ^s the service of the tabernacle of the congregation. ^{s ch. 3. 7, 8.}
²² ^t Neither must the children of Israel henceforth come nigh the tabernacle of ^{t ch. 1. 51.}
the congregation, ^u lest they bear sin, ^{u Lev. 22. 9.} [†] and die. ^{† Heb. to die.} ^x But the Levites shall do ^{x ch. 3. 7.}
the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance. ²⁴ ^y But the tithes of the ^{y ver. 21.} children of Israel, which they offer as an heave offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, ^z Among the ^{z ver. 20.}
children of Israel they shall have no inheritance. ^{Deut. 10. 9. &} ^{14. 27, 29. & 18. 1}

²⁵ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁶ Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave offering of it for the LORD, even ^a a tenth part of the tithe. ²⁷ ^b And this your ^{a Neh. 10. 38.}
heave offering shall be reckoned unto you, as though it were the corn of the ^{b ver. 30.}
threshingfloor, and as the fulness of the winepress. ²⁸ Thus ye also shall offer an heave offering unto the LORD of all your tithes, which ye receive of the children of Israel; and ye shall give thereof the LORD's heave offering to Aaron the priest. ²⁹ Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave offering of the LORD, of all the [†] best thereof, even the hallowed part thereof out of it. ^{† Heb. fat,}
^{ver. 12.}

³⁰ Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, ^c then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the threshingfloor, and as the increase of the winepress. ³¹ And ye shall eat it in every place, ye and your households: for it is ^d your reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation. ³² And ye shall ^e bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the best of it: neither shall ye ^f pollute the holy things of the children of Israel, lest ye die. ^{e ver. 27.}
^d Matt. 10. 10.
¹ Luke 10. 7.
¹ Cor. 9. 13.
¹ Tim. 5. 18.
^e Lev. 19. 8. &
^{22. 16.}
^f Lev. 22. 2, 15.

XIX. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, ² This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a red heifer without spot, wherein is

25. the LORD spake unto Moses] The former part of these precepts was addressed to Aaron, the Priest; but what follows is directed to Moses, the Civil Ruler of Israel, because it concerns offerings to the priesthood, on which it was not for the Priests themselves to insist, but which ought to be secured to them by the Temporal Power.

26. ye shall offer up an heave offering of it for the LORD] and thus ye shall acknowledge the Lord as the Author and Giver of all the blessings you enjoy (Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 43).

32. ye shall bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the best of it] Is there not here a lesson to all holders of ecclesiastical property, that they are bound to consecrate the best part of it to God? else, they will "bear sin." Cp. vr. 1. 26. — neither shall ye] or, ye shall not pollute, &c., and not die.

CH. XIX. 1. And the LORD spake] Here begins a new Parashah, or Proper Lesson of the Law, as read in the Synagogue, and continues to xxii. 1. The parallel Haphtarah is Judg. xi. 1—33, concerning the history of Jephthah, his covenant with the Gileadites, his message to the king of Edom (cp. Num. xx. 14, 21), and to the Amorites (Num. xxi. 21—23), and his Vow.

THE INSTITUTION OF THE SACRIFICE OF THE RED HEIFER.

2. that they bring thee a red heifer] The Holy Spirit speaking by the Apostle to the Hebrews has taught us to see here a figure of CHRIST (see Heb. ix. 13, 14).

The heifer was to be brought by the children of Israel, to show the part they all had in it: so all Israelites have a share in Christ; He has taken the nature of all, and has redeemed all. The victim was a heifer—a young cow—not a male, as most other sacrifices were, but a female, and the water of purifying was to be made with her ashes (see v. 9). The female (says S.

Augustine) denotes the weakness to which Christ submitted in taking our flesh. Woman was "in the transgression," in Eve (1 Tim. ii. 14), and Christ was the seed of the Woman (Gen. iii. 15); He was made of a woman (Gal. iv. 4), according to the prophecy that the "Virgin should conceive and bear a son, and call His name Emmanuel" (Isa. vii. 14. Matt. i. 23). The body of Christ, which He, who is the seed of the Woman, took in the womb of the Virgin, was pierced on the cross, and sent forth blood and water for the purification of our sinful humanity (see on John xix. 34. 1 John v. 6).

The time at which the following precepts concerning the RED HEIFER were delivered, deserves careful attention.

The Israelites, who had murmured against God at Kadesh-barnea, had now been sentenced by God to banishment from the Promised Land, and had been doomed to a long wandering in the wilderness (see on Num. xiv. 34).

How could they provide sacrifices there? How could they comply with the Levitical Legislation with regard to the Passover, and other sacred solemnities in the wilderness?

This question has been already considered (see above, note on xv. 2).

Some merciful mitigations of their sentence have already been presented to our view; the weekly rest of the holy Sabbath—the type and pledge of an eternal rest in heaven, to the penitent and faithful (see on xv. 32—36), the blue fringes on their garments (xv. 38—41), the sacerdotal intercession of the Priesthood, and the offering of Incense on the golden altar (chap. xvi. xvii.). And now Almighty God provides another consolation for them—the sacrifice of the Red Heifer.

That sacrifice is not mentioned in Leviticus. It had not been instituted at Sinai. But it now occupies a prominent place. It was a merciful provision consequent on their sentence

a Deut. 21. 3.
& 1 Sam. 6. 7.
b Lev. 4. 12, 21.
& 16. 27.
Heb. 13. 11.

c Lev. 4. 6.
& 16. 14, 19.
Heb. 9. 13.
d Ex. 29. 14.
Lev. 4. 11, 12.

e Lev. 11. 4, 6, 49.

f Lev. 11. 25. &
15. 5.

no blemish, ^a and upon which never came yoke: ³ And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her ^b forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face: ⁴ And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and ^c sprinkle of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times: ⁵ And one shall burn the heifer in his sight; ^d her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn: ⁶ And the priest shall take ^e cedar wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer. ⁷ ^f Then the priest shall wash his clothes, of exclusion and banishment. They could not offer all the Levitical sacrifices in the wilderness; but wherever they were, the congregation could find one heifer, and lest even this contribution should be burdensome, this Law was so framed that the salutary effects of the one heifer, provided by all the congregation (see v. 2), should be permanent, and applicable to the whole congregation, and to the purification of individual Israelites (see v. 9), during their wanderings in the wilderness.

The circumstances above specified explain the reason why the Red Heifer was not mentioned in the Book of Leviticus, which had been dictated at Mount Sinai, when the people were in expectation of entering the Promised Land after a few days; and they explain also why the Red Heifer is not mentioned again below in chapters xxviii. and xxix.; there was no need of republication of this part of the Law, which was not—like the rest—in abeyance in the wilderness.

The Jewish Expositors assert that such was the permanence of the effect of the ashes of the Red Heifer, that only six Red Heifers were burnt from the time of the giving of this Law to the destruction of the Second Temple. See Drusius, and Pfeiffer, p. 153.

From its characteristics already specified, viz., the permanent effect of the sacrifice, it is readily seen that the Red Heifer (more than any one of the sacrifices of the Levitical Law) prefigures the universality and perpetuity of the benefits of the One Sacrifice offered once for all upon the cross. On the particular details of this sacrifice, see the treatise Parah, in the Mishna, vi. 269, ed. Surenhus.; Maimonides de Vaccâ Rufâ, ed. Zeller, Amst. 1711. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 152. Carpov, Dissertationes de Vaccâ Rufâ. Hengstenberg, Egypt, 173—180. Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 493. Jahn, Archæol. § 285. Malker on the Types, p. 306. Archæ. Freeman, ii. 232. Fairbairn, Typol. ii. 405.

A summary of the Patristic teaching on this subject, with reference to the Passion of Christ, typified by the Red Heifer, and the permanent effects of that sacrifice, may be seen in S. Clement, Epist. § 8. Theodoret, Qu. in Num. 35, and in Heb. xiii. S. Augustine in Num. Qu. 33. Particularly S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Num. pp. 400—407. S. Gregory, Moral. vi. 25. Bede, Qu. in Num. 16.

— red heifer] The heifer was red. So was Christ; red, as the second Adam, as very man formed of the earth, and red in His own blood (Isa. lxiii. 1. Rev. xix. 13). The heifer is red, and signifies the earthly body of Jesus Christ, the Second Adam; and the name of Adam signifies red earth. Theodoret, Bede, Qu. 16, “Vitula rufa caro est Salvatoris rosea sanguine passionis, ætatis integræ.” Red is also the colour of sin (Isa. i. 18), and in this respect may typify Him who was made sin for us (2 Cor. v. 21. Rom. viii. 3. Gal. iii. 13). S. Augustine, Qu. 33. Hengstenberg, pp. 177, 8.

— without spot] As Christ was (2 Cor. v. 21. 1 Pet. i. 19). Theodoret.

— upon which never came yoke] As Christ was; for His coming into the world, His incarnation, and His Death and Resurrection were all the free acts of His own will (John x. 17, 18), and He was not subject to any yoke of sin (1st Heb. vi. 26): see Theodoret and S. Augustine; and Bede, “quod non est inpositum super illam jugum, hoc ostendit, quod caro Christi non est subjecta peccato,” and His freedom in these respects has procured ours.

3. unto Eleazar] Not unto Aaron, who would have been rendered ceremonially unclean by the act here required (see v. 7), and so would have been disabled from officiating in the Tabernacle (xvi. 37).

— without the camp] As Christ was at His death. S. Augustine and Bede, “Quod apprehensam ejecerunt filii Israel extra castra, astante Eleazaro sacerdote, populum Judaicum significat et consensum sacerdotum in necem Domini, quem eiecunt extra Hierusalem crucifixerunt.” Cp. Heb. xiii. 10—14; iv. 12.

— one shall slay her before his face] And observe, not Eleazar, but another (Jarchi). So Christ was slain by others before the face of the Priests and people, at the great feast of the Passover at Jerusalem.

4. Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger] Christ is both Priest and Victim. He offered Himself as our Eleazar. He is the mediator of the “blood of sprinkling” (Heb. xii. 24. 1 Pet. i. 2), and takes His own blood with His finger—the finger of God, which is no other than the Holy Spirit of God, as the Holy Evangelists declare (see Matt. xii. 28, compared with Luke xi. 20),—and sprinkles it toward the Tabernacle of the Church Universal, showing thereby that the blood of Redemption and Sanctification is for all (see 1 Tim. ii. 6. 1 Cor. i. 30; vi. 11. Heb. ix. 11. 1 Pet. i. 20); and the sprinkling is with the finger, because the blood of Christ, and the spiritual benefits thence ensuing, are applied singly, and especially, to each individual believer by the Holy Spirit, in the administration of the Sacrament of Baptism, and of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper.

— seven times] A perfect number (Lev. iv. 6), expressive of the all-sufficient value of the One Sacrifice offered once for all upon the cross (Heb. x. 12. 14). S. Augustine. “Septem Spiritus Sancti charismata per Christi sanguinem super Ecclesiam populos distribuuntur” (Bede).

5. shall burn the heifer in his sight; her skin, and her flesh] Christ’s Passion, in which He offered Himself willingly, and endured the furnace of God’s wrath against sin, and also the scorching and withering scorn of the world, is thus presignified (S. Augustine): cp. Exod. xii. 8. Deut. xvi. 7. Lev. iv. 12. Ps. xxii. 14.

6. cedar] A fragrant wood which was emblematic of incorruption (see Lev. xiv. 6. 49). Though the Heifer was burnt, yet its ashes were to have a healthful and life-giving power. Such is the Cross of Christ: it is the Tree of Life and Immortality, it bears sweet flowers and fruits, and its leaves are for the healing of the nations (Rev. xxii. 2): cp. Theodoret, Qu. 35, who says, “the cedar wood was the symbol of the cross,” and so Bede.

— hyssop] By which the blood was to be sprinkled (see v. 18, and Ps. li. 7). The life-giving blood of Christ was shed for all, but it must be sprinkled upon each (cp. Exod. xii. 13), as the blood of the lamb was to be sprinkled on the door-post of each Israelite. “Typicè figurat lavacrum baptismi” (Bede). “Let us therefore draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water” (Heb. x. 22).

— scarlet] Emblematic of Christ’s blood. “Sanguinis Domini sacramentum” (Bede). See especially Lev. xiv. 6. 49. Josh. ii. 18. Heb. ix. 19.

The cedar denoted the fragrance and incorruptibility of Christ’s sacrifice on the cross; the hyssop, its personal application to the soul of each individual believer; the scarlet, the reality of Christ’s human nature, and the truth of His blood-shedding visible to all, and perhaps His royal dignity and martial victory in His suffering (see Matt. xxvii. 28), and triumphing gloriously thereby (see Isa. lxiii. 1—3, and on Col. ii. 15).

7. the priest shall wash his clothes] Hereby is intimated that this solemn ceremonial was only typical of another and better sacrifice. If it had been designed to be final, the Priest exercising his sacred office would not have incurred defilement, but would have been purified thereby. But the imperfection of the Levitical Sacrifice and Priesthood is thus clearly manifested; and since this ceremonial was prescribed by God Himself, with a view to man’s sanctification, it is evident that it had a prospective and preparatory reference to a better sacrifice, and a more perfect Priesthood; and the Gospel of Jesus Christ has revealed to us what that Sacrifice and Priesthood is, and has shed a heavenly light upon the type from the divine glory of the Antitype. Cp. Heb. vii. 27; x. 1—3.

and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even. ⁸ And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even. ⁹ And a man that is clean shall gather up ^g the ashes of the heifer, and lay them up without the camp in a clean place, and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel ^h for a water of separation: it is a purification for sin. ¹⁰ And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

g Heb. 9. 13.

h ver. 13, 20, 21.
ch. 31. 23.

¹¹ ⁱ He that toucheth the dead body of any [†] man shall be unclean seven days. ¹² ^k He shall purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean. ¹³ Whosoever toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, ^l defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because ^m the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; ⁿ his uncleanness is yet upon him. ¹⁴ This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent: all that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days. ¹⁵ And every ^o open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean. ¹⁶ And ^p whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

i ver. 16. Lev. 21.
1. ch. 5. 2. & 9. 6.
10. & 31. 19.† Heb. soul of man.
k ch. 31. 19.

l Lev. 15. 31.

m ver. 9. ch. 8. 7.

n Lev. 7. 20. &
22. 3.o Lev. 11. 32.
ch. 31. 20.

p ver. 11.

¹⁷ And for an unclean person they shall take of the [†] ashes of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and [†] running water shall be put thereto in a vessel: ¹⁸ And a clean person shall take ^r hyssop, and dip it in the water, and † Heb. dust.

q ver. 9.† Heb. living waters shall be given, Gen. 26. 19.
r Ps. 51. 7.

— the priest shall be unclean until the even] In a spiritual sense, the Levitical Priesthood was unclean until the Evening, but the Morning came to us in Christ, and we are cleansed by Him and in Him (Theodoret, who quotes Isa. ix. 8. Mal. iv. 2. Zech. vi. 12).

8. he that burneth her shall wash his clothes] Though the sacrifice of Christ has procured the life of the world, yet the agents in that sacrifice were guilty (Theodoret), and therefore the Apostle St. Peter exhorted them to wash themselves in the laver of baptism, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (see Acts ii. 23. 38; iii. 15—19). Cp. S. Clement, Epist. § 8.

9. it shall be kept for the congregation—for a water of separation] The ashes prepared as above (v. 6), with cedar, hyssop, and scarlet, were to be gathered by one who was clean, and they were to be preserved for a water of purification for the congregation of Israel.

So Christ's Sacrifice on the cross was offered once for all; but the ashes of it are kept; the memorial of it lives for ever in the Church. "Do this in remembrance of Me" sounds for ever in her ears (Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 24). The benefits of that One Sacrifice are preserved for ever in the Church, and are ever being imparted and applied to the washing away of sins in the ministry of the Word, and of the Sacraments of Holy Baptism and of the Lord's Supper.

They are laid up without the camp, in a clean place; that is, in the Universal Church: for Christ suffered without the camp, not for Israel only, but for all Nations (Rom. i. 16; ii. 9, 10; iii. 9. 29; ix. 24; x. 12; Gal. iii. 28).

10. unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger] What does this signify but that Baptism instituted by Christ, which is typified by the water of purification, would be available both to Jews and Gentiles? (S. Augustine, Qu. 33.) By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles (1 Cor. xii. 13).

— a statute for ever] The letter of this law is lost to the literal Israel; but the spirit of it is perpetuated for ever in the Christian Church (Matt. xxviii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 26).

11. He that toucheth the dead body] See on Lev. x. 4. Num. vi. 6.

12. He shall purify himself] by the water of purification, made with the ashes of the Red Heifer; so by the regenerating water of Baptism, which derives its virtue from Christ's death, and flows from His precious side, pierced upon the Cross, we are purified from dead works to serve the living God. Rom. vi. 3, 4. Col. ii. 12. Tit. iii. 5. Heb. vi. 1; ix. 14 (S. Augustine).

— on the third day] explained afterwards by Christ's Resurrection on the third day (Bede). Cp. Gen. xxii. 4. So let penitents rise from the death of sin to newness of life; therefore baptism is called by St. John "the first Resurrection:" see note on Rev. xx. 5, 6.

— on the seventh day] Typical of that eternal Rest which remaineth to the people of God (Heb. iv. 9). He that is purified ^r the third day, by the Sacrament of Regeneration, and is made partaker of Christ's Death, and keeps his baptismal vows, and washes his robes in Christ's Blood with sincere repentance and lively faith, and endures patiently unto the end, shall be clean on the seventh day, and shall enter into the purity, holiness, and joy of the everlasting Sabbath.

13. and purifieth not himself] If therefore God Himself has provided for us the water of purification in the Christian Church, where the cleansing efficacy of Christ's blood is applied to the soul, by His appointed means, namely, in the Sacraments of Baptism and of the Lord's Supper, the solemn words here pronounced are surely applicable to all who refuse to be cleansed thereby: "His uncleanness is upon him." Cp. note below, on John iii. 5 (a text here quoted by Theodoret), and John vi. 53; and on v. 20.

14. shall be unclean] Hence we may see the infection and contagion of sin—derived from the first Adam, in whom "we all die" (1 Cor. xv. 22), and the necessity of the new birth in Christ, by whom "we are made alive."

17. running water] Or, living water; prefiguring the gift of the Holy Ghost (John vii. 38, 39. Isa. xlv. 3).

18. And a clean person shall take hyssop] All these things were "shadows of the good things to come." This act of ministering was to be done by a man who is clean. Christ was the Second Adam, the New Man, who only is clean, and who is pure and undefiled, the Holy One of God; and He is present in sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave: ¹⁹ And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day: ^s and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even. ²⁰ But the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut off from among the congregation, because he hath defiled the sanctuary of the LORD: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him; he is unclean. ²¹ And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that he that sprinkleth the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even. ²² And ^u whatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean; and ^x the soul that toucheth it shall be unclean until even.

^s Lev. 14. 9.

^t ver. 13.

^u Hag. 2. 13.
^x Lev. 15. 5.

^a ch. 33. 36.

^b Ex. 15. 20.
^{ch.} 26. 59.

^c Ex. 17. 1.
^d ch. 16. 19, 42.

^e Ex. 17. 2.
^{ch.} 14. 2.
^f ch. 11. 1, 33. & 14. 37. & 16. 32, 35, 49.

XX. ¹ Then ^a came the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin in the first month: and the people abode in Kadesh; and ^b Miriam died there, and was buried there.

² ^c And there was no water for the congregation: ^d and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron. ³ And the people ^e chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died ^f when the ministration of His Word and Sacraments, and acts by His Ministers in His Word and Sacraments, and applies the sprinkling of His own blood by them. S. Augustine, Qu. 33.

CH. XX. 1. Then came the children of Israel—in the first month: and the people abode in Kadesh] In the first month of the fortieth year after the Exodus, as appears from v. 28 here, compared with xxxiii. 38 and Deut. ii. 1—7.

From the sending forth of the spies in ch. xiii. unto this time there is a gap of about thirty-eight years.

This wide interval between the events in the present chapter and the foregoing must be carefully noted. The children of Israel had been sentenced to wander in the wilderness for that period (see xiv. 29—34); and the Historian records nothing of their doings in that interval.

This is significant. The elder generation had sinned against God, and were under His displeasure; and the Holy Spirit passes by them in silence. He casts a veil of oblivion over them. The younger generation had not as yet begun to have a history. That history however may be said to begin now, when the Israelites are in Kadesh, or Kadesh-barnea, for the second time, and are soon about to enter Canaan under Joshua. Here is a solemn warning to all Nations and all Churches. The Israelites had been brought by God in triumph out of Egypt, and through the Red Sea. They marched to Sinai, and there they received the Law from God Himself. The Tabernacle was there set up; and God came and dwelt among them in the cloud of His Glory. They were mustered as His Army at Sinai; and they set forth from it on their march on the twentieth day of the second year of their deliverance from Egypt; and if they had obeyed God, they would have entered Canaan in a few days (Deut. i. 2). But they murmured, and rebelled against God at Kadesh-barnea; and they were punished by exclusion from Canaan; and the Nation was condemned to wander in the wilderness for thirty-eight years.

They then ceased to have a history. We know indeed that they existed. We have a list of all the stations at which they halted in those thirty-eight years, in the thirty-third chapter of Numbers; but we know nothing of them: their names are written in water; and at the end of that long wandering they are now again at Kadesh-barnea—no nearer to Canaan than they had been nearly forty years before.

Churches and Nations lose their place in God's history by infidelity and disobedience. They may perhaps imagine that they are going forward. They may even boast of their own supposed advancement, but they make no real progress; after a long, wearisome pilgrimage they are only again at Kadesh-barnea.

— desert of Zin] on the south-eastern frontier of Canaan: see xiii. 21.

— abode in Kadesh] They now had come to Kadesh, or Kadesh-barnea, the second time (Hengstl., Kurtz, Von Raumer), from which the spies had been sent about thirty-eight years before (xiii. 26. Cp. xxxiii. 36. Judg. xi. 16). It is supposed by some that Kadesh received its name from God's declaration that He would be sanctified (cp. v. 12, 13); and that it is derived from the Hebrew word kadash, to be holy (Gesen. 725). If so, then the name is used by anticipation in Gen. xiv. 7; xvi. 14; and it is probable that its ancient name was Barnea. Cp. xxxii. 8; xxxiv. 4. Deut. i. 2. 19; ii. 14; ix. 23. Josh. x. 41; and Keil, p. 276.

— Miriam died there] Miriam, the Prophetess, died in the earlier part of the fortieth year. Aaron, the Priest, died in the fifth month of the same year (xxxiii. 38); and Moses, the Law-giver, died in the latter end of the same year (Deut. i. 3; xxxiv. 5)—that is, in the last year of the wandering, and a little time before the entrance into Canaan under Joshua.

Prophecy, the Priesthood, and the Levitical Law prepared the way for the entrance of Israel into Canaan under Joshua; they brought Israel to the borders of the Land, but they could not bring them into it, nor could they enter into it themselves—this was reserved for Joshua to do.

These things were "figures of us." The Prophecies, the Priesthood, and the Law were preparatory to the Gospel. They led the way to the confines of our spiritual Land of Promise,—our heavenly Canaan,—but they cannot cross the borders. They all die on its confines; for their office is done when they are fulfilled; their work is then done, and it is Jesus alone, the True Joshua, who brings us into our eternal inheritance.

"Videtur mihi in Maria Prophetia mortua; in Moysse et Aaron Legi et Sacerdotio Judæorum finis impositus, quod nec ipsi ad terram reipromissionis transcendere valeant nec credentem populum de solitudine hujus mundi educere, nisi solus Jesus, Deus Salvator, verus Filius Dei," S. Jerome in Maus. 33; S. Augustine, Qu. 53 in Numeros, and Bede, Qu. 17.

Prophecy is, as it were, the Sister of the Priesthood and the Law; and Prophecy died first, being fulfilled in the Gospel. Then Aaron, the Priesthood, died; for it was merged in Him who is the true High Priest. The Law still lingered on for a while after the Crucifixion.

2. there was no water] This is related as a remarkable thing. Is it wonderful that they should have no water in the wilderness? The explanation is given by St. Paul. "They drank," or rather "they were drinking" (ἐπιπινον, observe the imperfect tense) of that spiritual Rock which followed them" (1 Cor. x. 4); they found water in their long pilgrimage. God gave them a constant supply of water out of the rocks in the wilderness (see Ps. lxxviii. 15; cv. 41. Neh. ix. 15. Isa. xlviii. 21. See note below on 1 Cor. x. 4). He now tried their faith by withholding the supply of water for a time.

3. the people chode with Moses] As they had done at Rephidim nearly forty years before (Exod. xvii. 1—3);

our brethren died before the LORD! ⁴ And ⁵ why have ye brought up the g Ex. 17. 3. congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle should die there? ⁵ And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

⁶ And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and ^h they fell upon their faces: h ch. 14. 5. & 16. 4, 22, 45. and ^l the glory of the LORD appeared unto them. ⁷ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁸ ^k Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and ^l thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink. i ch. 14. 10. k Ex. 17. 5. l Neh. 9. 15. Ps. 78. 15, 16. & 105. 41. & 114. 8. Isa. 43. 20. & 48. 21. m ch. 17. 10.

⁹ And Moses took the rod ^m from before the LORD, as he commanded him. ¹⁰ And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them, ⁿ Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of n Ps. 106. 33.

To mark the similitude of the two acts, and to show the obstinate temper of the people, both the places where they murmured for lack of water are called Meribah, contention (see Exod. xvii. 7; and here, v. 13). The former Meribah marked their sixth contention after the Exodus (see on xiv. 22), and their tenth station; the latter Meribah marked their sixth contention after their coming from Mount Sinai; the other five being at Taberah (xi. 1, 3), Kibroth-hattaavah (xi. 34); that after the report of the spies (xiv. 1, 2); then the rebellion of Korah and his company (xvi.); after it the murmuring of all the congregation for their death (xvi. 41).

— when our brethren died before the LORD] These brethren of theirs, as they call them, and who died, as they say, before the LORD, were smitten by Him with the plague for their sins (xvi. 49).

4. and our cattle] See v. 8 and 11; and xxxii. 4: cp. xxxi. 9. They own therefore that their cattle have been preserved during their long sojourn in the wilderness.

6. they fell upon their faces] As on the occasion of the murmuring at the evil report of the spies (xiv. 5), and at the rebellion of Korah (xvi. 4).

— and the glory of the LORD appeared] In answer to their prayer; see xiv. 10; xvi. 19. 42.

8. Take the rod] Thy rod (Sept. in some MSS.): cp. Exod. xvii. 5.

— gather thou the assembly together] That all may see the wonderful work.

— speak ye unto the rock] Do not smite it; as it was smitten by thee once at Rephidim, at My command (Exod. xvii. 6). Speak ye to the rock: probably the rock to which they must speak was pointed out by God. It was not, as some of the Rabbis imagined, the same Rock as had been smitten at Rephidim (see Buxtorf, Historia Petre in Deserto, Exercit. v. p. 422). This is not what St. Paul means when he says that “they drank (were drinking) of that spiritual Rock that followed them.” It was not any material rock which followed them, but it was the divine grace which made the material rock to pour out water for them, wherever they went. See below, on 1 Cor. x. 4, and Theodoret there.

The Rock of Rephidim is called tsur (Exod. xvii. 6); the Rock here at Kadesh is called sela (v. 8, 10, 11).

9. from before the LORD] with which he had wrought wonders in Egypt (Exod. xvii. 5).

10, 11. Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?] Moses here speaks unadvisedly with his lips (Ps. cvi. 33). He rebelled, in this respect, against God’s command to sanctify Him (xxvii. 14); and he did this in the presence of the whole assembly gathered together; therefore God was angry with him, saying, “Thou shalt not go in thither” (i. e., to Canaan, Deut. i. 37); “thou shalt not bring this people into the land which I have given them” (v. 12); and God refused to grant his prayer that he might enter into the Promised Land (Deut. iii. 23—26); and because Aaron his brother was a partner with him in his transgression, as may be inferred from the punishment, which shows that Aaron might and ought to have restrained Moses from smiting the rock twice, and that he did not remonstrate with him for doing so, therefore Aaron also was excluded from Canaan (v. 24: cp. Deut. xxxii. 48—51).

The sin of Moses consisted in two things:

(1) In calling the people’s attention to himself as if he were the Author and Donor of the gift of water, and saying, “Must we fetch you water out of the rock?” thus assuming to himself the power of bringing the water out of the rock, instead of raising their eyes to God, who vouchsafed to give the water through his ministry and instrumentality.

(2) In smiting the rock twice—literally, with two strokes, in his impatience, as if the water was to be elicited by the application of man’s strength, and not by God’s word, when he was commanded to speak to it once.

He thus showed want of faith, and was guilty of disobedience; and he sinned in these respects publicly, in the eyes of the people committed to his charge by God; a circumstance of aggravation on which God dwells (v. 12), “Because ye believed Me not, to sanctify Me in the eyes of the children of Israel, ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.”

On the sin of Moses at this time, see the remarks of Sulpic. Sever., Hist. i. 21. S. Cyril Alex. in Joan. p. 280. S. Chrysos., Hom. 3, in Acta Apost. Bede, Qu., who says well, “Moyses petram virgâ percutiens de Dei virtute dubitavit.”

Here is a solemn lesson, both of instruction and of warning, to the Christian Church,—especially to her Clergy.

We know from the Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, that these things are our ensamples (1 Cor. x. 6, 11), and that the Rock which followed the Israelites was a figure of Christ.

The Rock in the wilderness was to be smitten but once. We hear of no more smiting of the Rock by God’s command after Horeb. But still, wherever the Israelites were, they were to be refreshed by water from the Rock. How then was it to be educed? The Rock was to be spoken to (Num. xx. 8), but not to be smitten. The water was to be brought out by the Word, and not by the Rod, of Moses. And because, when the people murmured at Kadesh for lack of water, Moses “spake unadvisedly with his lips” (Ps. evi. 33), and said, “Must we fetch you water out of this Rock?” (v. 10)—arrogating to himself the power of producing the water; whereas he was only an instrument in God’s hands for its production; and because he smote the rock twice instead of speaking to it,—therefore he was not permitted to enter the Promised Land.

“The Rock,” says St. Paul, “was Christ.” It was a figure of Him. Christ acted in it and by it, and it typified Him, who is the Rock smitten for our sakes. And since Christ was to suffer once, and once for all (Heb. ix. 26, 28), therefore the Rock was to be smitten once, and only once. It was to be smitten at God’s command, by the Rod of Moses. So Christ was once smitten with the curse of the Law (Gal. iii. 10), which worketh wrath (Rom. iv. 15), and of which the Rod was the instrument. He was once smitten for our sakes (Isa. liii. 4—6), in order that all true Israelites, in every age of the Church, may drink the living waters of salvation from His wounded side. See John iv. 14. Cp. Joseph Mede, Works, p. 248. Mather on the Types, p. 143.

this rock? ¹¹ And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice : and ^o the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

¹² And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ^p ye believed me not, to ^q sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them. ¹³ ^r This is the water of || Meribah ; because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was sanctified in them.

¹⁴ ^s And Moses sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, ' Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath † befallen us : ¹⁵ ^u How our fathers went down into Egypt, ^v and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time ; ^x and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers : ¹⁶ And ^y when we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and ^z sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt : and, behold, we are in Kadesh, a city in the uttermost

o Ex. 17. 6.
Deut. 8. 15.
1 Cor. 10. 4.

p ch. 27. 14.
Deut. 1. 37.
& 3. 26.
& 32. 51.
q Lev. 10. 3.
Ezek. 20. 41.
& 36. 23.
& 38. 16.
1 Pet. 3. 15.
r Deut. 33. 8.
Ps. 95. 8.
& 106. 32, &c.
† That is, Strife.
See Ex. 17. 7.
s Judg. 11. 16, 17.
t Deut. 2. 4, &c.
& 23. 7.
Obad. 10, 12.
† Heb. found us,
Ex. 18. 8.
u Gen. 46. 6.
Acts 7. 15.
v Ex. 12. 40.
x Ex. 1. 11, &c.
Deut. 26. 6. Acts 7. 19.

y Ex. 2. 23. & 3. 7.

z Ex. 3. 2. & 14. 19. & 23. 20. & 33. 2.

And after that He had been once smitten, He was to be smitten no more. Christ, having died once, dieth no more (Rom. vi. 9), and He was offered once for all (Heb. ix. 28). He offered one sacrifice for sin (Heb. x. 12); and by one offering He hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified (Heb. x. 14), and there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins (Heb. x. 26).

Christ was once smitten. He, Who is the Rock, the Rock of ages, was smitten once, and there came forth from His wounded side blood and water.

Those sacrificial and sacramental streams, which were poured forth once for all on Calvary, are ever ready to flow from the Rock in every age of the pilgrimage of the Church to her heavenly Rest.

But how are they to be educated? How are they to be applied?

They are not to be had by smiting the Rock again. This is the error of the Church of Rome, which feigns that Christ is ever being smitten, ever being sacrificed. This is an error like that for which Moses was excluded from the Promised Land. Those streams of living water are not to be rightly had by smiting the Rock, which has been smitten once for all, for our sakes, and which is ever present, ever following us, by virtue of the divine energy of Christ, ever ready to pour forth living streams for the cleansing and refreshing of our souls.

But how are these streams to be had? What is the instrumentality which God has appointed for making them flow? The answer is—the Ministry of the Word. "Accedit Verbum ad Elementum, et fit Sacramentum" (S. Augustine).

The Rock is not now to be smitten again; but to be spoken to. The Christian Minister does not smite the Rock, but speaks to it, when he uses the divinely-appointed words, "I baptize thee in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;" and when he applies the sacramental water, which derives all its virtue from Christ's death, and flows, as it were, from His side, opened once for all, for the mystical washing away of sin.

Again, he does not smite the Rock, but he speaks to it, when he uses the divinely-appointed words, "This is My Body, this is My Blood," and exhibits that bread and dispenses that blood which derives its virtue from Christ's death, and flows from the Rock smitten once for all for our sakes.

Thus the punishment of Moses affords a double warning to Christ's Ministers;

(1) That they should not imagine that they themselves are sources of Divine Grace. They are only channels. Let them not say, Shall we fetch you water out of the Rock? The spiritual water which they supply is not the gift of men, but of Christ.

(2) That they should not smite the Rock which has been once smitten. They are not to suppose that Christ is to be again slain, or that the ever-to-be-repeated Sacrament of the Altar repeats or continues the One Sacrifice of Calvary. But they must continually speak to the Rock which has been once smitten. Their office is to elicit the streams of living water by the Ministry of the Word, and to dispense them for the cleansing and refreshing of the souls of all true Children of Abraham in every stage of the journey of the Church through the wilderness of the world. Thus discharging the duties of their Ministry they may escape the Massahs and Meribahs of controversy, and find a place of rest for their own souls in their heavenly Canaan.

11. He smote the rock twice] As if the water was to be educated by dint of human force, and not by virtue of the word of God : see the foregoing note.

— and the water came out abundantly] Let us not therefore deny that grace may follow from the Word and Sacraments of Christ, although they who minister the Word and Sacraments may be guilty of error and sin in their administration, and may be excluded on that account from the Promised Land. The unbelief of man does not make the faith of God to be of none effect. "Let God be true, and every man a liar" (Rom. iii. 3, 4). He who is baptized by a Judas may be saved, although he who baptizes him may perish. The Word and Sacraments of Christ, administered by some who are in heresy and schism, may be efficacious to salvation, although the schism and heresy of those who minister them endanger the salvation of those who are guilty of those sins : see below, notes on Matt. x. 4 (on the choice of Judas to be an Apostle); and on 1 Cor. iii. 12—15; and on Phil. i. 18, on the case of those who preach in schism.

— the congregation drank] This wonderful work is here stated to have been done publicly in the sight of the assembly of the children of Israel, gathered together in the sight of the Rock (v. 8); and this narrative, be it observed, relates the sin of Moses and of Aaron, and also of the people rebelling against God; and this was in the fortieth, or last year of their wanderings, so that it took place in the presence of multitudes, the new generation which afterwards entered into Canaan. And this record was received as true and divinely inspired, by the whole ancient Hebrew Church, and is received as such by the Jews, and by the Universal Church of Christ from the time of our Lord and His Apostles to this day. What stronger evidence could be desired of its truth and inspiration?

12. to sanctify me] By faith in your hearts (1 Pet. iii. 15), and by obedience in your acts.

— ye shall not bring this congregation into the land] Neither Moses, nor Aaron, nor Miriam could bring the people into Canaan; but Joshua brought them in. Neither the Law, nor the Priesthood, nor the Prophets could bring us into heaven—they all led us toward it, and brought us to its confines, but Jesus only could bring us in; see on v. 1.

Here is another proof of the truth of the Pentateuch.

Moses does not disguise his own sin and punishment, and that of Aaron. He relates it fully here; and oftentimes refers to it. Cp. xxvii. 14. Deut. i. 37; iii. 23—26; xxxii. 48—51.

But the Jewish historian, Josephus, desirous to do honour to Moses, and to the Jewish nation, omits it, and does not mention the sin of Aaron and the people in the matter of the Golden Calf at Horeb.

13. of Meribah] contention (see Exod. xvii. 7); and called also Meribah-kadesh, to distinguish it from the former Meribah, at Rephidim (cp. Deut. xxxii. 51). On the difference of the circumstances between the two events, which some recent critics have alleged to be merely one, see Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. 378. Keil, p. 275.

14. unto the king of Edom] of the posterity of Esau, Jacob's brother (Gen. xxv. 30), who occupied the country between Kadesh and Canaan. This friendly message was sent by Moses to the king of Edom, by God's command (Deut. ii. 1. Cp. Deut. xxiii. 7); and the repulse which it met with from the Edomites was an offence against God, and was remembered against Edom many centuries afterwards; see Judg. xi. 16—18. Obad. 10—12.

16. an angel] probably Christ Himself: see Exod. iii. 2; xiv. 19; xxii. 20. Cp. Masius and Bp. Patrick here.

of thy border: ¹⁷ ^a Let us pass, I pray thee, through thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's high way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders. ¹⁸ And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword. ¹⁹ And the children of Israel said unto him, We will go by the high way: and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, ^b then I will pay for it: I will only, without doing any thing else, go through on my feet. ²⁰ And he said, ^c Thou shalt not go through. And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand. ²¹ Thus Edom ^d refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel ^e turned away from him.

^a See ch. 21. 22.
^b Deut. 2. 27.

^b Deut. 2. 6, 28.

^c Judg. 11. 17.

^d See Deut. 2.
27, 29.
^e Deut. 2. 4, 5, 3
Judg. 11. 18.

²² And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from ^f Kadesh, ^g and came unto mount Hor.

^f ch. 33. 37.
^g ch. 21. 4.

²³ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying, ²⁴ Aaron shall be ^h gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ⁱ ye rebelled against my [†] word at the water of Meribah. ²⁵ ^k Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor: ²⁶ And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there. ²⁷ And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation. ²⁸ ^l And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and ^m Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount. ²⁹ And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron ⁿ thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

^h Gen. 25. 8.
ch. 27. 13.
& 31. 2.
Deut. 32. 50.

ⁱ ver. 12.
[†] Heb. mouth.
^k ch. 33. 38.
Deut. 32. 50.

^l Ex. 29. 29, 30.

^m ch. 33. 38.
Deut. 10. 6.
& 32. 50.

ⁿ So Deut. 34. 8.

XXI. ¹ And when ^a king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came ^b by the way of the spies; then he fought against

^a ch. 33. 40.
See Judg. 1. 16.
^b ch. 13. 21.

17. of the wells] but we will only drink of the rivers.

— the king's high way] See also v. 19; and xxi. 22.

18. Edom said . . . Thou shalt not pass by me] For this and other acts of unfriendliness, the name Edom has become odious in Holy Scripture, as a name of the enemies of God and of His Church; who will be vanquished and destroyed by Christ: see below, on xxiv. 18; and cp. Ps. lx. 8; cviii. 9, 10; cxxxvii. 7. Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? (Isa. lxiii. 1. Ezek. xxv. 12.) And Edom was, by the ancient Jewish expositors, often used as a name for Rome: see the passages in Mede's works, pp. 902, 903; and it is a name which may be applied to the Romish Church as far as she obstructs the way of the Spiritual Israelites toward their heavenly Canaan, and denies them access to the spiritual wells of salvation in the Holy Scriptures: see on Rev. xi. 9.

On the supposed discrepancy between this account and that in Deut. ii. 29, see the note there; and Hengstl., Auth. ii. 283.

19. on my feet] using it simply as a road to travel on quickly (Vulg.). Cp. Deut. ii. 4—6. 27, 28, where the same phrase occurs. Cp. the Arabic Version here.

21. Israel turned away from him] and journeyed eastward, and compassed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab; and came by the east side of the land of Moab, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, but came not within the border of Moab (Judg. xi. 16—18).

22. mount Hor] on the borders of Edom (xxxiii. 37), not far from Petra (Joseph., Ant. iv. 4. 7), and now called Jebel Nabi Harun—i. e., “Mountain of the Prophet Aaron,” on the n.w. of Wady Musa (Burckhardt, Robinson, Schubert, Ritter, Wiener, R. W. B. ii. 512. Keil, p. 277).

In Deut. x. 6 it is said that Aaron died at Mosera. How is this to be explained? See the note there.

24. Aaron shall be gathered unto his people] An intimation of the life of the soul after death, and of the future resurrection of the body: see on Exod. iii. 6; and cp. Deut. xxxii. 50, where the same words occur.

26. strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son] This command of God to strip Aaron of his priestly garments (see Exod. xxviii. 2. Lev. viii. 7—9), and to invest Eleazar his son with them, is an evidence of the infirmity of the Levitical Priesthood, in which “were many Priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death,” as the Apostle observes (Heb. vii. 11. 23); and also of God's will that it should be continued in hereditary succession, until it had fulfilled the purpose for which it was instituted, which has now been accomplished by Christ, who “is made a Priest for ever”—“not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life” (Heb. vii. 16, 17); and “who is perfected (i. e., consecrated, τετελειωμένος) for evermore” (Heb. vii. 28); and who is both our Moses and our Aaron, uniting the Priesthood with the Kingdom—being, as the Prophet declares, “a Priest upon his Throne, and the counsel of peace is between them both” (Zech. vi. 12, 13).

Moses, the Lawgiver, is commanded to strip Aaron, the Priest—that is, the Law itself testified to the insufficiency of the Levitical Priesthood, and to the perfection of the future Priesthood of Christ (Gal. iii. 24. Rom. iii. 21; x. 4).

29. Aaron was dead] They mourned for him when dead, against whom while living they had rebelled (v. 2). Aaron died on the first day of the fifth month (i. e., August) of the fortieth year after the departure from Egypt, when he was 123 years old, xxxiii. 37—39. Cp. Exod. vii. 7; and Deut. x. 6, where his burial is mentioned.

Cfr. XXI. 1. king Arad] or, the King of Arad. Arad is probably the name of the country—in the south of Palestine—of which he was king. Cp. xxxiii. 40. Josh. xii. 14. Judg. i. 16. Euseb., Jerome, who says that it was twenty miles south of Hebron; perhaps now called Tell-Arad. Robinson. Cp. Wilton, Negeb, pp. 198, 199.

— by the way of the spies] So Vulg., Onkelos, Syriac. Perhaps the original word, atharim, rendered spies, may be from

c Gen. 28. 20.
Judg. 11. 30.
d Lev. 27. 28.

Israel, and took some of them prisoners. ^{2 c} And Israel vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then ^d I will utterly destroy their cities. ³ And the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place || Hormah.

|| That is, Utter destruction.
e ch. 20. 22. & 33. 41.
f Judg. 11. 18.
|| Or, grieved.
† Heb. shortened.
Ex. 6. 9.
g Ps. 78. 19. & h Ex. 16. 3. & 17. 3.
i ch. 11. 6.

⁴ And ^e they journeyed from mount Hor by the way of the Red sea, to ^f compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much || † discouraged because of the way. ⁵ And the people ^g spake against God, and against Moses, ^h Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and ⁱ our soul loatheth this light bread. ⁶ And ^k the LORD sent ^l fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died. ^{7 m} Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned, for ⁿ we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee; ^o pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people. ⁸ And the LORD said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live. ⁹ And ^p Moses

k 1 Cor. 10. 9.
l Deut. 8. 15.

m Ps. 78. 34.

n ver. 5.

o Ex. 8. 8, 28.
l Sam. 12. 19.
1 Kings 13. 6.
Acts 8. 24.

p 2 Kings 18. 4.
John 3. 14, 15.

athar, a track. The Sept. preserves the original Hebrew word atharim. Gesenius (p. 96) supposes it to be a proper name, so called from athar, a place, a region, and renders the word thus, "on the way toward Atharim."

If the rendering of the Authorized Version is correct, then it must be supposed that the Israelites endeavoured to enter Canaan from Kadesh, by the way in which the spies had entered it (see xiii. 17, 21, 22); and that the circumstances here mentioned belong to a period prior to the death of Aaron: see xx. 21; so Kurtz and Fries. Cp. Keil, p. 272; and Mr. B. B. Rogers's valuable volume, "Mosaic Records," p. 197.

But it seems more probable that this event took place in the order in which it is related—namely, after the death of Aaron at Mount Hor: see xxxiii. 40, where it is so placed; and this being the case, it must be supposed that the king of Arad came out against the Israelites when they were encamped in that region.

— prisoners] Literally, a captivity; αιχμαλωσιαν, Sept. Cp. note below, on Rev. xiii. 10.

2. Israel vowed a vow—I will utterly destroy their cities] The better translation would be, Israel vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou wilt give this people into my hand, I will devote their cities (the Sept. rightly has ἀναθεματιῶν); and the Lord heard the voice of Israel, and gave up the Canaanite; and he (Israel) devoted them (the Sept. has ἀναθεματίσεν αὐτοῦν) and their cities.

We are not to suppose that the Israelites at this time passed the Canaanitish frontier, and destroyed any cities near Hebron.

Nor are we to imagine with some, that this sentence was not written by Moses, but was inserted by some later hand; and that it describes the destruction which took place some time after the death of Moses, and of which we read in Josh. xii. Judg. i. 16, 17.

What we are to gather from this narrative is, that the king of Arad made a sally southward from his own country, and attacked the Israelites, and carried some of them away captive; and that the Israelites fought against him, and vowed to the Lord that if He gave them success against the king of Arad, and enabled them to overcome him and the people that were with him, and to rescue the captives, they would not take any of the spoil to their own use, but devote them and their cities to God (cp. Lev. xxvii. 28). God heard their prayer, and delivered the king and his forces into their hand; and they devoted their cities to destruction, because they had come out against Israel. This is all that is related here. The fulfilment of the vow is related in Joshua (xii. 14. Judg. i. 17). Cp. Hengst., Auth. ii. 220. Kurtz, ii. 421. Keil, 279. Schultz, Deuter. p. 151.

On the objections raised against this act, on moral considerations, see Waterland, Serip. Vind. pp. 102—106.

3. he called the name of the place Hormah] that is, the place where the vow of devotion was made: it was called Hormah, or Chormah (that is, devotion, anathema, Sept. and Vulg.), from charam, to devote (cp. Gesen., pp. 305, 306). The place also in Canaan, where the vow was executed, was appropriately called by the same name (Josh. xii. 14; xv. 30. Judg. i. 16, 17: and cp. Willon, Negeb, p. 201).

4. by the way of the Red sea] towards the Red Sea—that is, toward Ezion-geber, on the Ælantic branch of the sea, along Wady Arabah.

— to compass the land of Edom] See xx. 18—21.

5. spake against God] St. Paul says, that in so doing they tempted Christ (1 Cor. x. 9). S. Ambrose, de Spir. Sancto, iii. 8, observes also that the Holy Ghost is said by the Apostle to utter the ban of exclusion from Canaan: "when your fathers tempted Me" (Heb. iii. 7. 9); and he thence argues for the plurality of Persons in the Trinity, and for the divinity of the Son and of the Holy Ghost.

— this light bread] this bread that is kelokel, Heb., from katal, to be light, to be lightly esteemed, to be despicable (Gesen. 734). Thus they speak of "angels' food" (Ps. lxxviii. 23—25); and in so doing, they resemble those who murmur against Christ (as St. Paul teaches); and who despise Him who is the true Manna, the "living Bread that cometh down from heaven," and feedeth all true Israelites with divine food unto life eternal (John vi. 48—51). Such are they who think and speak lightly of His Holy Word and Sacraments (see above, xi. 5, 6). And the punishment of these murmurers, who died by the bite of fiery serpents, is a warning of that spiritual death which awaits those who are wilfully guilty of such a sin.

6. fiery serpents] Cp. Heb., nechashim seraphim; the former word, the plural of nachash, a serpent, from nachash, to hiss (Gesen. 544); the latter the plural of saraph, a πρηστήρ, or κάβων, a serpent which swallows, or consumes with fire (Gesen. 795). Cp. Deut. viii. 15. Isa. xiv. 29; xxx. 6.

The same word is sometimes applied to holy angels (Isa. vi. 2. 6). The fundamental idea seems to be that of burning and shining, like fire. The love and zeal of a seraph may degenerate into rage and exasperation, under the baneful influence of the Evil Spirit, and become like the malignant fury of a fiery serpent; and, on the other hand, the angry passions of a Boanerges and a Saul may, under the corrective control of the ever-blessed Comforter, be refined and sanctified into the holy love and zeal of a St. John and a St. Paul.

8. the LORD said . . . Make thee a fiery serpent] Heb. saraph: the word is nachash in the following verse.

— upon a pole] Heb. nes; properly, a standard, σημεῖον (Sept.); signum, Vulg.; a banner, from nasas, and nasa, to lift up (Gesen. 552, 568). Compare the word Jehovah-nissi, "the Lord is my banner" (Exod. xvii. 15). This word is very appropriate to that on which the brazen serpent was lifted up, being, as that serpent was, a figure of Christ (as Christ Himself declares, John iii. 14), very God and very man, lifted up on the cross—the banner of the Church of God. Lifted up there He is our "Jehovah-nissi" (John xii. 32; viii. 28), for, as the Prophet says, "He who is the root of Jesse is set up for an ensign to the People, and to it shall the Gentiles seek" (Isa. xi. 10); and He is the "Lord our Righteousness" (Jer. xxiii. 6; xxxiii. 16).

made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole, and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

¹⁰ And the children of Israel set forward, and ^a pitched in Oboth.

q ch. 23. 43.

¹¹ And they journeyed from Oboth, and ^r pitched at ||Ije-abarim, in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sunrising.

r ch. 33. 44.
|| Or, Heaps of Abarim.

¹² From thence they removed, and pitched in the valley of Zared. ¹³ From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for ^t Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites. ¹⁴ Wherefore it is said in the book of the wars of the LORD, s Deut. 2. 13.

t ch. 22. 36.
Judg. 11. 18.

9. Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole] The faithful among the Jews themselves saw in the brazen serpent a symbol of salvation, σύμβολον σωτηρίας, as the author of the Book of Wisdom calls it (xvi. 7), who says, "He that turned himself toward it was not saved by the thing that he saw (or, looked at, τὸ θεωρούμενον), but by Thee, that art the SAVIOUR of all," and the SAVIOUR Himself has explained the mystery. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up (ὄψωθῆναι), that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life" (John iii. 14). "And I, if I be lifted up (ὄψωθῶ) from the earth, will draw all men unto Me" (John xii. 32).

The serpents of fire were the cause of the death of the people; and Moses was ordered to make a serpent of brass, and to set it upon a standard to be an instrument of life to all who looked at it.

The old Serpent was the cause of sin and death to all, and was therefore cursed by God (Gen. iii. 14).

Christ crucified was like the serpent of brass upon the pole, to which the Israelites looked and lived. He was like the serpent, because, as the Apostle says (Rom. viii. 3), He was made in the likeness of sinful flesh; or, as it is literally, in the likeness of the flesh of sin; "He took away the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is he that hangeth on a tree" (Gal. iii. 13); and He was like the serpent of brass, which, though like a serpent of fire, did not bite, but was innocent, and dead, and healed; for He was "harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners" (Heb. vii. 26); and by being lifted up in death on the cross He condemned sin in the flesh, and He who knew no sin was made sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him (2 Cor. v. 21). And as the Apostle to the Hebrews says, By death He overcame death, and destroyed him that had the power of it—the Devil (Heb. ii. 14: cp. Col. ii. 15), and became the giver of health and everlasting life in body and soul to all true Israelites, who have been bitten by the old serpent in their pilgrimage through the wilderness of this world to their heavenly Canaan, and who look with faith to Jesus Christ crucified, "evidently set forth before their eyes" (Gal. iii. 1: cp. 1 Cor. i. 23, 24).

On this subject see also the remarks of S. Clement. Epist. § 12, who says, "Moses in making the brazen serpent made a type of Jesus, and of His Crucifixion, who gives life by His death, although He seemed to have been destroyed thereby. Sin came by the serpent through Eve; and the serpents bit the people, and they died; and Moses sets a serpent on the pole and summons the people and bids them look at it, that they may live." See also Justin Martyr quoted below, in the notes on John iii. 14, and on Gal. iii. 13. Col. ii. 15; and Tertullian, adv. Judæos, c. 5; de Idol. c. 5; and S. Cyril, Glaphyr. pp. 407—409; S. Augustine on Ps. 73, and 118. Serm. 6. 26. 253; de Civ. Dei, x. 8; c. Faust. xii. 30. S. Cyril Hierosolym., Cat. 13. S. Ambrose on Ps. 108. S. Greg. Nyssen. de Vit. Mosis, p. 245. S. Greg. Naz., Orat. 2, de Paschate; and Theodore here, who says, "The brazen serpent was a type of the life-giving Passion of Christ. For by the serpent came sin, and he therefore was cursed by God; and the serpent was a figure of sin and malediction. Since then our Lord Jesus Christ appeared in the likeness of sinful flesh, as the holy Apostle testifies (Rom. viii. 3), for He took a real human body, but did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth; therefore we see in the brazen serpent an image of the death of Christ. For as the brazen serpent was like a serpent, but had not the venom of a serpent, so the only-begotten Son of God took our flesh, but without spot of sin. And as the Israelites, bitten by the fiery serpents, looked at the serpent of brass on the pole, and were healed, so they, who are wounded by sin, looking with steadfast faith to the Passion of our Saviour, become stronger than death, and inherit eternal life (Theodore, Qu. 38). See also Prosper de Prom. ii. 11. Bede, Qu. 19. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 154. Buxtorf, Hist. Serpentinis, Exc. p. 458. Vitringa, Obs. i. 403; and Mather on the Types, p. 145; and Deyling de Serpente aeneo, Obs. ii. 207. Hengst. on John iii. 14. Sach, Apologetik, p. 355. Kurtz, Gesch. ii. p. 438. Keil, p. 281.

On the subsequent history of the brazen serpent, especially in the days of Hezekiah, see below, 2 Kings xviii. 4.

10. Oboth] Literally, bottles: cp. Lev. xix. 31; and see below, xxxiii. 43. They were passing through Wady el Ithn, into the southern part of the Araba, and were marching northward, and pursued their journey along the eastern side of Mount Seir (cp. Deut. ii. 3—6).

11. Ije-abarim] See xxxiii. 44. Probably near Kalat el Hassa.

11—20. Ije-abarim—Bamoth] If we compare the places here mentioned with the list of the stations below, in xxxiii. 41—49, we find that, instead of the seven places here specified (viz., Zared, the other side of Arnon,—Beer, Mattanah, Nahaliel, Bamoth, in the valley of Moab to Pisgah), only three are set down there, viz.: Almon-diblathaim, mountains of Abarim, and Nebo, i. e., a height of Pisgah (see Deut. xxxiv. 1). This is to be explained from the fact that in the list in chapter xxxiii., the historian purports to give those halting-places where the whole body of the people rested for a considerable time, and the Tabernacle was set up, and does not take into consideration whether any thing of importance occurred there or not: but in the present chapter he mentions places where either something of importance happened, or where the people were encamped for a short time, and then passed on. Hence may be explained that in this chapter fewer places are mentioned than in chapter xxxiii., between Mount Hor and Ije-abarim; and more between Ije-abarim and the plains of Moab. Cp. Kurtz, ii. 463. Keil, p. 288.

12. Zared] See on xxxiii. 44. Perhaps El-Ahsy (Robinson, Ewald, Ritter), a small stream which flows through the mountains into the southern end of the Dead Sea. Others suppose it to be the brook Saide (Knoebel); others, Wady Kerek (Rammer, Kurtz, Keil).

13. From thence they removed] Having received a command from God to cross the river Arnon, and to take possession of the land of Sihon, king of the Amorites (Deut. ii. 24).

— Arnon] now Balua.

14. Wherefore it is said] This is quoted from the old national song of victory—a triumphal hymn like that of Moses and Miriam, on the overthrow of the Egyptians, and the deliverance of Israel at the Red Sea (Exod. xv.: cp. the national song below, v. 27), and it is adduced to show that they had a right to the country here mentioned. What was done by Israel in the passage of Arnon, and in the overthrow of their enemies, was not done of their own mind, and by their own might, but by the will and power of God; and Moses intended to show by this testimony that the Israelites had a just claim to this territory, which, though it had formerly been part of the land of Moab, with whom the Israelites might not meddle (Deut. ii. 9); yet it was occupied by Sihon, king of the Amorites (vv. 28, 29), against whom the Israelites were commanded by God to wage war, and whom they were enabled by Him to overcome. See Deut. ii. 24, and Jephthah's reference to these facts (Judg. xi. 12, 13—27).

On the book here cited, and for a refutation of some criticisms, which have assigned it to a post-Mosaic age, see Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 155. Hengstenberg, Authentie, ii. 223—225. Baumgarten, p. 341. Keil, 281. Cp. Lee on Inspiration, App. D. p. 465.

¶ Or, Vahab in Suphah.

|| What he did in the Red sea,
And in the brooks of Arnon,
15 And at the stream of the brooks
That goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, u Dent. 2. 18, 20.

† Heb. leaneth.

u And † lieth upon the border of Moab.

x Judg. 9. 21.

16 And from thence they went ^x to Beer: that is the well whereof the Lord spake unto Moses, Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

y Ex. 15. 1.
Ps. 105. 2. & 103.
12.

17 ^y Then Israel sang this song,

† Heb. Ascend.
|| Or, answer.

† Spring up, O well; || sing ye unto it:

18 The princes digged the well,

The nobles of the people digged it,

z Isa. 33. 22.

By the direction of ^z the lawgiver, with their staves.

And from the wilderness they went to Mattanah:

19 And from Mattanah to Nahaliel: and from Nahaliel to Bamoth: ²⁰ And — What he did in the Red sea] The Hebrew words are eth vahab, be suphah ve eth hannechalim Arnon, that is, probably, “(the Lord came) to Vahab, (the proper name of a place belonging to the Amorites,) in storm, and to the torrents of Arnon.” Vahab is rendered Zoob by Sept., and was perhaps a strong fortress of the Amorites (cp. Ainsworth, p. 135. Pfeiffer, 156. Hengstenberg; Baumgarten; Keil: Gesen, p. 236). The words be suphah signify, in tempest or storm; cp. Nahum i. 3. Job xxi. 18. Isa. xvii. 13. Hos. viii. 7. Gesen. 582. On the word nachal, a torrent, see Gesen. 543.

The Authorized English Version follows the Vulgate “sicut fecit in Mari rubro,” which proceeds on the supposition that suphah is connected with suph, the word from which the Red Sea derived its name, Yam Suph, Exod. x. 19. But this version seems to be erroneous.

15. And at the stream of the brooks] Literally, and the outpouring of the torrents (nechalim, the same word as in v. 14), which slopes down toward the dwelling of Ar, and leans upon (i. e. terminates in, lieth upon) the borders of Moab (saw the works of the Lord).

The word here rendered outpouring is eshed, from ashad, to pour out, to shed; whence ashedah is a low place at the foot of mountains, into which springs fall; also the root of a hill. See Dent. iii. 17, Ashdod-pisgah. Gesen. 83. Keil, pp. 286, 411.

Ar, probably a town in the country of Moab, on the borders of Arnon, at the frontier of Moab: see v. 28, and Isa. xv. 1, and called Areopolis by the Greeks, and near Aroër (Dent. ii. 36. Josh. xiii. 9).

16. to Beer] well; so called because God gave them water here, no longer out of the rocks of the wilderness, but out of the soil of the earth, in answer to the prayer of the Princes, who digged the well. This was an intimation and earnest of the possession of the country which He would deliver into their hands, and would make ministerial to their maintenance, by the instrumentality of their labour and prayer. “I will give them water,” says God: the water is His gift: but let them pray and labour for it; therefore they write in the song, “Spring up, O well, sing ye unto it,” and God answers the prayer, and water gushes up. The record of the gift runs thus: The Princes digged the well, they did their part; the nobles of the people digged it, and they did this by the Lawgiver; that is, at the command of God, declared by Moses (see v. 18), with their staves—the badges of authority and power. (See Gen. xlix. 10. Num. xvii. 2, 3. Ps. xxiii. 4; ex. 2.)

Here is a symbolical picture of the ordinary work of the Church of God in the dispensation of the living waters of the Gospel (John iv. 14; vii. 38, 39. Isa. xli. 17; xlv. 3), in the Word and Sacraments of Christ.

The Water is God’s gift; but men must do their part; they must unite in prayer and praise to God for the living element of Divine Grace. . . . They must sing this song, “Spring up, O well;” and they must dig for it with human labour and industry, in the diligent study and constant preaching of God’s Word (1 Tim. iv. 13; v. 17, 18. 2 Tim. iv. 2); and they must do all this with prayer to God and in God’s appointed way, by the direction of the Lawgiver (Isa. xxxiii. 22); and they must do it with their staves, that is, with due commission and legitimate authority, and invested with visible badges of their sacred office.

In after-ages this Well was called Beer-elim, the Well of the Princes, Isa. xv. 8. Such are the wells of Salvation (Isa. xii. 2, 3), flowing with living water, opened out by the ministry of God, to refresh the thirsty Israelites in their pilgrimage to their heavenly rest.

Wells, in Scripture, are figures of Spiritual blessings. In Origen’s works there is an interesting and beautiful homily on the numerous events recorded in connexion with Wells of Water in the Bible, and on the Spiritual instruction to be derived from them (Origen, Hom. 12 in Numeros). Abraham digged a well at Beer-sheba (Gen. xxi. 31). God revealed himself to Hagar at a Well (Gen. xxi. 19). Abraham’s servant met Rebekah at a Well (Gen. xxiv. 13). Isaac reopened the Wells which his father’s servants had digged (xxvi. 15). Jacob met Rachel at a Well (xxix. 10). Jacob gave a Well at Sichem to his children (John iv. 5, 12). Moses met his future wife at a Well, and became a shepherd, and fed the flock of Jethro at Horeb, and had a vision of God (Exod. ii. 15; iii. 1). The Israelites came to Elim, where were twelve Wells of water (Exod. xv. 27). Christ came to the Well of Jacob, at Sichem, and revealed Himself as the Messiah to the woman of Samaria (John iv. 6, 26). “Perceure omnem Scripturam (says Origen), puteum requirens, et perveni usque ad Evangelia, et ibi invenies puteum supra quem noster Salvator sedebat; tunc quæ esset in Scripturis puteorum virtus exponitur, et comparatio fit aquarum ubi et divini mysterii panduntur arcana.” See John iv. 14; vii. 38, “He that believeth on Me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.” In Him is fulfilled the promise of the Spirit, “With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of Salvation” (Isa. xii. 3).

On the marches of the Israelites at this time and their stations, compare below, xxxiii. 41—48.

— the Lord spake unto Moses, Gather the people together, and I will give them water] Moses gathers the people, and God gives the water.

This is a work which God is ever doing in His Church. Moses, in the Old Testament, gathers God’s people together, and God gives them there the waters of life in His Holy Word, and in the cleansing waters which flow from the rock, in His Blessed Son, of whom Moses wrote, and in the living waters of the Holy Spirit whom Christ sent. See Origen, Hom. 12, who says, “Ad istum puteum nos Moyses congregat. Potest fieri ut ad istum puteum aliquis venire videatur, sed nisi per Moysen congregetur, non est acceptus Deo. Marcion venisse sibi videtur ad istum puteum, et Basilides et Valentinus; sed quia non venerunt per Moysen, nec receperunt Legem et Prophetas, non possunt laudare Deum de fontibus Israel.” May not these words be applied to some readers of the Old Testament in these later days?

19. Mattanah] gift: in the valley of the Arnon, twelve Roman miles s.e. of Medeba.

— Nahaliel] or the bourne, or torrent, of God: probably now called Encheileh, the name of the Ledschum, after it has received the waters of the Balua (Arnon), till its junction with the Saide (Burckh.).

from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the † country of Moab, to the top of † Heb. field.
 || Pisgah, which looketh ^a toward || Jeshimon.

²¹ And ^b Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying, ^c Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards; we will not drink of the waters of the well: but we will go along by the king's high way, until we be past thy borders. ²³ ^d And Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: ^e and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel. ²⁴ And ^f Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

²⁵ And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the † villages thereof. ²⁶ For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.

²⁷ Wherefore they that speak in proverbs say,
 Come into Heshbon,
 Let the city of Sihon be built and prepared:

²⁸ For there is ^g a fire gone out of Heshbon,
 A flame from the city of Sihon:
 It hath consumed ^h Ar of Moab,
 And the lords of the high places of Arnon.

²⁹ Woe to thee, Moab!
 Thou art undone, O people of ⁱ Chemosh:
 He hath given his sons that escaped,
 And his daughters, into captivity

|| Or, The hill.
 a ch. 23. 28.
 || Or, The wilderness.
 b Deut. 2. 26, 27.
 Judg. 11. 19.
 c ch. 20. 17.
 d Deut. 29. 7.
 e Deut. 2. 32.
 Judg. 11. 20.
 f Deut. 2. 33. & 29. 7.
 Josh. 12. 1, 2. & 24. 8.
 Neh. 9. 22.
 Ps. 135. 10, 11. & 136. 19.
 Amos 2. 9.
 † Heb. daughters.
 g Jer. 48. 45, 46.
 h Deut. 2. 9, 18.
 Isa. 15. 1.
 i Judg. 11. 24.
 1 Kings 11. 7, 33
 2 Kings 23. 13.
 Jer. 48. 7, 13.

20. Bamoth] or, high places, i. e. of Baal, near Dibon (see Josh. xiii. 17. Isa. xv. 2), between Wady Walé and Wady Modsheb, and about a mile south of Heshbon. (Cp. xxii. 4; xxxiii. 49; and Hengstenberg, Bileam, p. 242.) It is now called Myan, which is probably a corruption of Beth-Baal-Meon.

— Pisgah] Literally, part, or cutting: from pasag, to cut, to divide (perhaps connected with the Greek πάσχαλον, σπάραλον). Pisgah was a ridge of the land of Moab, which was the division between it and the kingdom of Sihon, king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon. (Josh. xii. 1, 2. Judg. xi. 19.)

— Jeshimon] that is, the wilderness (so Sept.); the plain now called Ghor el Belka, on the N.E. of the Dead Sea (Seetzen, in Keil, p. 288).

Balaam was brought by Balak to the top of Peor, which overlooked this plain (xxiii. 28).

21. Israel sent messengers] See Deut. ii. 26. Judg. xi. 19, 20.

— unto Sihon] who dwelt in Heshbon and ruled from Aroer, which is on the bank of the river Arnon, and from the middle of the river, and from half of Gilead even unto the river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon. (Josh. xii. 1, 2.)

23. And Sihon would not suffer] See Deut. ii. 32. Judg. xi. 20.

— and he came to Jahaz] between Medaba and Dibon (Euseb.), probably near the opening of Wady Walé.

24. from Arnon] now Modsheb.

— Jabbok] now Zerka (Gen. xxxii. 22); its original feeder is Nahr Amman, called the Upper Jabbok.

25. in all the villages thereof] Literally, in all the daughters thereof. (Cp. Ezek. xvi. 44—48. Josh. xiii. 15—28.) Heshbon was their metropolis, or mother city.

27. they that speak in proverbs] in national songs and ditties, of which we have here four short stanzas: see above, v. 14.

Mashal, the original word here, is not only a proverb, but a song, a poem. The root of the word is mashal, to make like; and it is very fitly applied to Hebrew poems, which were antistrophical, and where one verse was made like, or parallel, to another. as here (Gesen., p. 517). Cp. xxiii. 7. 18, where the word is applied to “Balaam’s Parable,” which was a prophetic hymn.

It would seem that as the Israelites approached nearer to the Land of Promise, the hearts of the People were more warmed with thankfulness, and gave vent to their feelings in hymns of praise. They had entered the wilderness after their deliverance from Egypt with songs of victory, and now they approach Canaan after their weary pilgrimage with psalms of joy.

So it was after their deliverance from Babylon. “When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, then were we like unto them that dream: then was our mouth filled with laughter and our tongue with joy” (Ps. cxxvi. 1).

How joyful will be the songs of the true Israel, when they come to their heavenly Canaan, and to the Jerusalem that is above!

27—30. Come into Heshbon] The first part of this song describes the victory of Sihon over the Moabites; and the latter part of it celebrates the victory of Israel over Sihon himself (see Chazkuni on v. 23; and cp. Judg. xi. 12, 13—27). Come unto Heshbon, and let there be prepared and built a city of Sihon—that is, let it no longer be a city of Moab, but of Sihon, king of the Amorites.

For a fire is gone forth from Heshbon, and a flame from the city of Sihon hath devoured Ar of Moab, the lords of the high places of Arnon—that is, hath destroyed their cities, and even the high places of their idols, and their idols themselves.

29. Woe to thee, Moab! Thou art undone, O people of Chemosh] the deity of Moab (1 Kings xi. 7. 33. Jer. xlvi. 7. 46), and of Ammon (Judg. xi. 24).

He hath given (that is, thy false god Chemosh—which means conqueror—could not save thee, but hath given up) his sons to be fugitives (literally, escapers by flight, not conquerors in battle), and his daughters into captivity to Sihon, king of the Amorites.

Chemosh is represented on the coins of Areopolis as a Sun-god, standing on a column; and as an armed Warrior (Eckhel, iii. 504) he was worshipped with sacrifices of children in times of distress: see 2 Kings iii. 27.

Unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

³⁰ We have shot at them;

Heshbon is perished even ^k unto Dibon,

And we have laid them waste even unto Nophah,

Which reacheth unto ^l Medeba.

³¹ Thus Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites. ³² And Moses sent to spy out ^m Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

³³ ⁿ And they turned and went up by the way of Bashan: and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he, and all his people, to the battle ^o at Edrei. ³⁴ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^p Fear him not: for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land; and ^q thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon. ³⁵ ^r So they smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

XXII. ¹ And ^a the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab on this side Jordan by Jericho.

² And ^b Balak the son of Zippor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

³ And ^c Moab was sore afraid of the people, because they were many: and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel. ⁴ And Moab said unto ^d the elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time. ⁵ ^e He sent messengers therefore unto k Jer. 48. 18, 22.

l Isa. 15. 2.

m ch. 32. 1.
Jer. 48. 32.

n Deut. 2. 1. &
29. 7.

o Josh. 13. 12.

p Deut. 3. 2.

q ver. 24.
Ps. 135. 10, 11. &
136. 20.
r Deut. 3. 3, 4,
&c.

a ch. 33. 48.

b Judg. 11. 25.

c Ex. 15. 15.

d ch. 31. 8.
Josh. 13. 21.

e Deut. 23. 4.
Josh. 13. 22. &
24. 9. Neh. 13. 1, 2. Mic. 6. 5. 2 Pet. 2. 15. Jude 11. Rev. 2. 14.

³⁰. We have shot at them] This is the triumphant language of the Israelites. God has given us the victory. We have conquered those who conquered others; we have cast them down.

This seems to be the true interpretation of the words, and is confirmed by the parallel, we have laid them waste, in the following clause. The Hebrew word used here is niram, the first person plural from jarah, to cast, to shoot (see Exod. xv. 4; xix. 13. Cp. Ainsworth, p. 138. Keil, p. 291. Gesen. 366), with the pronominal suffix. Other Versions suppose niram to be from nir, a lamp, or a yoke. Cp. Gesen. 548.

Heshbon is perished, even unto Dibon, and we have laid them waste unto Nophah, which (reacheth) unto Medeba. The Sept. seems to have read esh (fire), for asher (which) here; and the letter r in asher is marked by the Masorites as doubtful; and the Sept. has fire (came) unto Medebah; and so the Samaritan text; and this may perhaps lead to the true reading and sense, with fire unto Medebah (so Baal-hattarim and Keil). Medeba was about eight miles south-east of Heshbon, and is now called Medaba (Burckhardt and Raumer). The prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah seem to refer to this national song of victory (Isa. xv. 1, 2. Jer. xlvi. 18, 22, 45, 46).

— Dibon] weeping: called Dibon Gad, because it was afterwards allotted to that tribe (xxxii. 34; xxxiii. 45). Here was an idol temple of Moab (Hesyeh); it is now called Diban (Burckh.).

³². Jaazer] ten miles west of Rabbatammon, and fifteen north of Heshbon (S. Jerome), probably now called Es-Zir (Seetzen).

³³. Bashan] north of Heshbon: see Deut. iii. 1—13; xxix. 7. Josh. xiii. 12. The Psalmist therefore mentions first their conquests over Sihon, king of the Amorites, and then that over Og, the king of Bashan (Ps. cxxxv. 11; cxxxvi. 17—20. Cp. Neh. ix. 22).

— Edrei] i. e., strong (Gesen. 15). Hence we are not to be surprised that there should be two cities of that name in Bashan (cp. Deut. i. 4), the former, now called Draah, on the south-west frontier of Bashan (Seetzen, Burckh.), the other, further north, Zorah or Edrah, on the north-west frontier of Bashan.

Cir. XXII. 1. in the plains of Moab] the plains which had belonged to Moab, and afterwards to Sihon, and had now been conquered by Israel: see xxi. 25—30. Their encampment extended from Beth Jeshimoth (house of wilderness) to Abel Shittim (meadow of acacias): see xxxiii. 49. Cp. Keil, p. 294; 154 and see below, xxv. 1. Here they remained till the death of Moses. Cp. xxxiii. 49; xxxv. 1; xxxvi. 13. Deut. xxxiv. 1—8; and see Josh. ii. 1, where the spies are sent from Shittim.

— Jordan by Jericho] Or, the Jordan of Jericho: i. e. facing it. ². Balak the son of Zippor] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and reaches to xxv. 9. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Micah v. 6—vi. 8, which foretells the victory of Christ and the Gospel over the idols of the heathen, and refers to the Exodus from Egypt, and to the prophecy of Balaam,—“O my people, what have I done unto thee, and wherein have I wearied thee? For I brought thee out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants: and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. O my people, remember now what Balak, king of Moab, consulted, and what Balaam, the son of Beor, answered him, from Shittim unto Gilgal, that ye may know the righteousness of the Lord” (Micah vi. 3—5).

— to the Amorites] who were Moab's enemies. Israel had received a command not to hurt Moab, who were allied to the Israelites by their descent from Lot (Gen. xix. 36. See Deut. ii. 9). But they had now lapsed into idolatry, and worshipped Chemosh (xxi. 29), and feared and hated their own kindred, the people of God.

⁴. Moab said unto the elders of Midian] who were descendants of Abraham by Keturah (Gen. xxv. 1, 2), and would not have been injured by Israel; but the Midianites had now, like the Moabites, fallen into idolatry, and worshipped Baal-peor (xxv. 17, 18), and they joined with Moab against Israel: see v. 7; and xxv. 1. 6.

We find afterwards that Balaam perished among the Midianites (xxxii. 8), who dwelt to the east of Moab; either in his way to his own place, or in his return from it: see xxiv. 25.

⁵. unto Balaam] Heb. Bileam. On the origin of the name from bala, to swallow, to destroy, and am, people (Simonis, Hengstl.), see on Rev. ii. 6. 14; and on his character and conduct as a warning to Christians, see notes there, and on 2 Pet. ii. 15. Jude 11; and Origen, Homilies in Num., Hom. 13 to Hom. 20, vol. x. pp. 142—241, ed. Lommartz, Berlin, 1840. Theodoret, Qu. in Numer. 39—44. S. Augustine, Qu. in Numer. 46—51. Bede, Qu. in Numer. 22. Ip. Butler's Sermon vii. Waterland, Sermon on the History and Character of Balaam, Works, ix. 397. S. Ambrose to Chromatius; and Dr. Newman's Parochial Sermons, vol. iv.

Balaam the son of Beor to 'Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, they cover the † face of the earth, and they abide over against me: ⁶ Come now therefore, I pray thee, ⁵ curse me this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed. ⁷ And the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with ^h the rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak. ⁸ And he said unto them, ⁱ Lodge here this night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me: and the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

f See ch. 23. 7.
Deut. 23. 4.

† Heb. eye.
g ch. 23. 7.

h 1 Sam 9. 7, 8.

i ver. 19.

⁹ ^k And God came unto Balaam, and said, What men are these with thee? ¹⁰ And Balaam said unto God, Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying, ¹¹ Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: come now, curse me them; peradventure † I shall be able to overcome them, and drive them out. ¹² And God said unto Balaam, Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people: for ¹ they are blessed.

k Gen. 20. 3.
ver. 20.

† Heb. I shall prevail in fighting against him.

l ch. 23. 20.
Rom. 11. 29.

¹³ And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land: for the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you. ¹⁴ And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.

¹⁵ And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they.

On the history of Balaam, see Joseph., Ant. iv. 6. 5. Dealing de Balaamo, Obs. iii. 102. Bp. Sherlock (Works, vol. v.). Waterland, Ser. Vindicated, pp. 107—111. Keble, Christ. Year (Second Sun. after Easter). Hengstenberg, Gesch., Bileams, &c., Berlin, 1842. Hävernick, Einleit. iii. p. 505. Tholuck, Verm. Schrift. i. 406. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 183. Kurtz, Gesch. des A. B. ii. 456—464. Leathes in Dr. Smith's Dict. i. p. 162. Keil, p. 295.

Balaam, the Prophet, comes forth like Melchizedek, the Priest, a mysterious personage, without any previous notice—an evidence of the worship of the true God in the regions of the East; and a proof that God had not left Himself without a witness among the heathen. It is evident also, that he had been acquainted with some of the deeds of might and mercy which God had wrought for Israel (see xxiii. 22); and perhaps with the prophecies of Jacob (see xxiii. 24; xxiv. 9). Cp. Hengstenberg, p. 12. But in Balaam, as in Laban, in the same country (see on Gen. xxx. 27; xxxi. 19. 30. 53), the knowledge of the true God was tainted with idolatry, superstition, and sorcery. His was an equivocal, ambiguous, and composite person, having some elements of the true prophet and seer, mingled with others of the magician and enchanter; and, as in his prophetic, so in his moral character, he was a man of shifts and compromises, actuated and influenced by the love of money, "the root of all evil;" in this respect also like Laban, a covetous man, "holding the truth in unrighteousness" (Rom. i. 18). Like Laban, he is also overruled in his evil designs, and is made to become an instrument of God's glory. Balaam does unwillingly, what Melchizedek, the type of Christ, came forth spontaneously to do (Gen. xiv. 18); he blesses the people of God (xxiv. 9).

The connexion of the history of Balaam with that of Christ and His people, and with the full and final victory of Christ (see xxiv. 17—19), is marked by the Church in the appointment of this and the three following chapters, to be read on the first and second Sunday after Easter—the festival of Christ's Resurrection.

— son of Beor] called son of Bosor, according to a common Chaldeeism, by St. Peter (2 Pet. ii. 15). See the note there, and Keil, p. 296.

— to Pethor] in Aram Naharaim or Mesopotamia (cp. xxiii. 7. Deut. xxiii. 4), where Abraham had dwelt (Gen. xxiv. 4. 10.

Acts vii. 2), and where "Jacob served for a wife" (Hos. xii. 12), and where all the Patriarchs, except Benjamin, were born (Gen. xxxv. 26). The Moabites, who were descended from Lot, who came from Mesopotamia (Gen. xi. 27; xii. 5), seem to have kept up a connexion with that country. Cp. Blunt, Coinc. p. 89.

— the river] Euphrates (Gen. xv. 18. Josh. xxiv. 2. 15); and so the Targum of Onkelos paraphrases the word here.

⁶. Come now therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people] "Because they hired Balaam against Israel that he should curse them, therefore the Ammonite and Moabite shall not come into the congregation of God for ever; but God turned the curse into a blessing" (Deut. xxiii. 3, 4. Neh. xiii. 1, 2).

⁷. with the rewards of divination] the wages of unrighteousness (2 Pet. ii. 15). The Hebrew word here is kesanim, from kasam, to divine (Gesen. 736).

⁹. God came unto Balaam] Cp. v. 20, as He did to Abimelech (Gen. xx. 3) and to Laban (xxx. 24). It is observable that Balaam speaks of Jehovah often (see vv. 8. 13. 18, 19); but it is never said that Jehovah comes to him; but God (Elohim) comes to him (see vv. 10. 12. 20), and God's anger is kindled against him (v. 22), and God met him (xxiii. 4); but the Angel of the Lord withstood him (xxii. 23—27); and the Lord opened the mouth of the ass to reprove him (v. 28), and opened the eyes of Balaam (v. 31) to see his own folly.

¹². thou shalt not curse the people: for they are blessed] a plain and peremptory answer; but Balaam was tempted by love of money to tamper with it, and to endeavour to persuade God to change His mind; and he received a righteous reward for his iniquity, by being allowed to follow his own devices to his ruin (v. 20).

¹³. the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go] Thus he tempted them to return to him, or to induce Balak to send other messengers for him.

¹⁴. Balaam refuseth to come] God had spoken plainly to Balaam, but Balaam had told the princes less than God had said to him; and they told Balak less than Balaam had said to them; so the word of God is corrupted by transmission through evil hands.

¹⁵. princes, more, and more honourable] Balaam's answer, instead of silencing Balak, had stimulated him to make other and richer overtures to Balaam, and to urge him more earnestly to come.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, † Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from coming unto me: 17 For I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: ^m come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people. 18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, ⁿ If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, ^o I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more. 19 Now therefore, I pray you, ^p tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 ^q And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them; but ^r yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab. 22 And God's anger was kindled because he went: ^s and the angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him. 23 And ^t the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field: and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way. 24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side. 25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall: and he smote her again.

+ Heb. Be not thou telled from, &c.

m ver. 6.

n ch. 24. 13.

o 1 Kings 22. 14.
2 Chron. 18. 13.

p ver. 8.

q ver. 9.

r ver. 35. ch. 23.
12, 26. & 24. 13.

s Ex. 4. 24.

t See 2 Kings 6.
17. Dan. 10. 7.
Acts 22. 9.
2 Pet. 2. 16.
Jude 11.

13. If Balak would give me his house full] He adds hypocrisy to covetousness. He pretends that he will not disobey God on any consideration; and yet he laboured with all his might to do that which God had forbidden him to do. See xxiii. 4, 5.

— the LORD my God] Thus it would appear that the name JEHOVAH was known to Balaam, as it was known to Laban (Gen. xxxi. 49).

19. tarry ye also here] Thus he tampers with his own conscience and tempts God to change His mind—whom he knew and declared to be immutable. See xxiii. 19.

— that I may know] He knew well enough that God does not change His mind (see xxiii. 19). "That which is called considering what is our duty, is often nothing but endeavouring to explain it away." Bp. Butler, Sermon. vii. p. 67.

20. go with them] God punishes him in anger (v. 22), by letting him have his will.

As Origen well says (Hom. 13), "Molestus est Balaam Deo, et extorquet sibi propemodum ut eat; et quia presistit in desiderio pecuniæ, indulgens Deus arbitrii libertati, ire permittit."

God often deals thus with the wicked. He chooses their devices, and lets them walk in their own counsels (Ps. lxxxi. 12), and chastises them with their sins. "They have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their own abominations. Therefore I will choose their delusions" (Isa. lxvi. 4). "Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know therefore and see, that it is an evil thing and bitter that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that My fear is not in thee, saith the Lord of Hosts" (Jer. ii. 19): ep. Bp. Butler, Sermon. vii. p. 62.

21. and went] Literally, because he was going. The participle brings out more clearly the cause of God's anger. Balaam not only set out (a single act), but continued deliberately and presumptuously going a long journey from Mesopotamia to Moab.

We have here a very wicked man, under a deep sense of God and religion, persevering still in his wickedness upon the cool motives of worldly advantage (Bp. Butler).

22. the angel of the LORD stood in the way] Thus God gives him another opportunity of retrieving himself; but does not force him to retreat. He tries him whether he will use his reason aright, and obey his conscience enlightened by God's word; but the love of money is too strong for all.

Observe the transition from the name GOD (ELOHIM) to the name LORD (JEHOVAH) in this passage. It marks the sin of Balaam obstinately struggling against more and clearer revelations of the Divine power and mercy, and thus preparing the way for severer punishment to himself, and for a greater manifestation of the Divine glory.

There is an excellent Homily of Origen here (Hom. 14), showing how God uses evil men well, and makes the Balaams of this world to be ministerial to His own purposes. "Malitiam Deus non fecit, sed cum inventam possit prohibere, non prohibet, sed utitur eâ bene: per malos, claros efficit bonos. Deus non solum bonis utitur, ad opus bonum, sed et malis; et hoc verè mirabile est quod vasis malis utitur Deus ad opus bonum." Origen exemplifies this in the instances of Joseph's brethren selling him into Egypt—Pharaoh oppressing Israel—Judas betraying Christ; and the Jews crucifying Him. If there were no death, there would be no crowns of martyrdom; if no cross of Christ, no defeat of the Devil, no Resurrection to glory.

— his two servants were with him] witnesses of the miracle; as Saul's companions were (Acts ix. 7); but in both cases the objects of the miracle, Balaam and Saul, were pointed out by some special circumstances.

23. the ass saw the angel] The dumb ass, on which Balaam rode, was more clear-sighted than the Seer who had been sent for from Mesopotamia to Moab by a king, on account of his prophetic clear-sightedness. Balaam was blinder than the ass on which he rode. And why? Because his inner eye was clouded by evil desires; he was punished with blindness because he followed those desires and disobeyed God.

When prophets and wise men disobey God, and follow their own devices, when they will not humbly bend their own will to God's will, and do not meekly seek for grace and illumination from Him, but rely on their own intellectual powers, then "the sun goeth down over the Prophets and the day is dark over them" (Micah iii. 6), they grope in the noonday as in the night (Job v. 13, 14).

Here is the explanation of the mysterious phenomenon which often meets the eye in these latter days. Men of great scientific attainments, learned biblical critics, are offended at the simplicity of the Scriptures, and deny their truth and inspiration. God hides the mysteries of His kingdom from the wise and prudent, and reveals them unto babes (Matt. xi. 25). The ass saw the angel, whom the prophet, riding on it, could not see. A young ass carried Christ into Jerusalem, which rejected and crucified Him. "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace unto the humble" (James iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5).

The editor may perhaps be allowed to refer here to his sermon "on Spiritual Blindness," Oxf., 1857.

— Balaam smote the ass] If Balaam had done justly, he would have spared the ass, and corrected himself; the prophet sins, and the ass must bear the fault. So it is with the animal creation generally. Man sinned and fell, and the creatures suffered by his fall, and were made subject to vanity (Rom. viii. 20: see Bp. Sanderson, iii. 155).

²⁶ And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left. ²⁷ And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she fell down under Balaam: and Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff. ²⁸ And the LORD " opened the mouth of the ass, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done u² Pet. 2. 16. unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times? ²⁹ And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I would there were a sword in mine hand, * for now would I kill thee. ³⁰ y And the ass said unto Balaam, x Prov. 12. 10. y² Pet. 2. 16.

23. the LORD opened the mouth of the ass] The Lord reproved the madness of the prophet, by the dumb ass on which he rode; as St. Peter declares, 2 Pet. ii. 16. "Aperit os asinae, ut arguatur per eam Balaam, et voce muti pecudis confutetur is, qui divinus videbatur et sapiens" (Origen).

That this was a real historical event, is there plainly asserted by the holy Apostle. The dumb ass (as St. Peter says emphatically), speaking with man's voice, forbade the madness of the prophet: "The LORD opened the mouth of the ass," and by her rebuked the prophet. "Bestiam ei constituit magistram" (Calvin).

God thus showed His own divine power, and that He it is who maketh man's mouth (Exod. iv. 11); and He showed also how blind and brutish the wise and learned of this world become, when they do not receive God's Word meekly and humbly as little children, and conform themselves to His will, but tamper with that Word, and endeavour to make it bend to their own wishes and designs. Then the lowest animals of creation are more clear-sighted than the wise of this world; for the animals obey the law which God has given them. "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, My people doth not consider." "The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times, and the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but My people know not the judgment of the LORD" (Isa. i. 3. Jer. viii. 7).

"The LORD opened the mouth of the ass." The Holy Spirit here assures us of the fact; and every Christian reader will also remember, when he hears any sceptical cavils against this history, that the Apostle St. Peter, whose eyes were illumined by the Holy Ghost, and who was inspired by His breath, and was enabled by God to speak with tongues, to heal the sick, to raise the dead (Acts ii. 4; iii. 7; ix. 34, 40), and to discern the spirits, as in the case of Ananias (Acts v. 3), and to foretell future events, as, for instance, to predict the death of his wife—has referred to this history, and accepts it as true, and reminds us how by this signal example the Lord, who opened the mouth of the ass, taught this salutary truth by this most appropriate instrument, and preached by the mouth of the ass a sermon to the proud; and declared to all generations that the unlettered peasant and the village child, who love, revere, and believe the Holy Scriptures, are wiser than the learned critic who cavils at them, and that the most despised of the brute creation are more clear-sighted than a disobedient prophet or a sceptical philosopher.

The literal truth of this history, guaranteed by the Holy Spirit speaking by St. Peter, has been accepted by all Christian Antiquity, and by the best divines of the Church of England, and by many of the ablest critics of Germany, such as Baumgarten, O. Von Gerlach, Kurtz, Keil. Others suppose that what is here related is a history of a vision—an opinion which is contradicted by the letter of the Sacred Text.

It is alleged by some others, that this narrative is "unhistorical;" that it is "legendary and mythical;" and it is asked by them, "What adequate cause can be assigned for such a miracle as this?" And they allege that it is not said that the ass gave any information to Balaam, but only that she spake. This very objection itself suggests a good reason for the miracle;

These self-confident critics, who carp at this portion of Holy Scripture (which has been received as true by Christ Himself, and by the Holy Ghost, and by the universal Church), or at other similar passages of God's Word, and who discard them as "mythical and legendary," may see their own condemnation pronounced by the ass, who saw the angel that withstood Balaam with the drawn sword in his hand, while Balaam, her master, saw him not; and who rebuked Balaam for smiting her in his wrath, and who told him that there was good cause for what she had done, in endeavouring to turn him aside from his evil way; and who in this respect acted more wisely than he did; and by whom (if he had received the rebuke) he might have been restored to God's favour, and to a clear sight of God's will and word, and so have escaped perdition and have inherited eternal life.

In the opening of the mouth of the ass to rebuke Balaam, God foreshadowed, as by a figure, what He is ever doing under the Gospel, where "He chooses the foolish things of the world to confound the wise" (1 Cor. i. 27), and that He hides the mysteries of the faith "from the wise and prudent, and revealeth them unto babes" (Matt. xi. 25). S. Augustine. Cp. Natal. Alex., Hist. Eccles. ii. 13. Waterland, Ser. Vind. pp. 107—111. The self-idolizing sciolism of the critic who rejects this or any other portion of Scripture is condemned by the child-like faith of those who receive it; as the madness of Balaam, the prophet, was rebuked by the voice of the ass on which he rode.

Here also we have a striking proof of the sovereign power of divine inspiration. God, who made the ass to speak with a human voice, against nature, made Balaam to speak the language of prophecy and of blessing, against his will. Theodorët, Qu. 44. The Holy Ghost spake by, or rather, through (διὰ) the prophets (see Matt. i. 22; ii. 17. 23). The words which the ass spake (says Bp. Pearson, p. 8) were as much the ass's words as those which Balaam spake, were his; "the Lord opened the mouth of the ass," and "the Lord put a word in Balaam's mouth" (xxiii. 5), and not only so, but a bridle with that word, "only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak" (xxii. 35: cp. 2 Pet. i. 21).

29. And Balaam said unto the ass] How is it that Balaam expressed no astonishment at the miracle which God wrought, when He opened the mouth of the ass? The answer is, because he was hardened by sin; and God thus teaches us that miracles are not to be expected to work upon those "whose way is perverse" before Him (v. 32). If men will not listen to God's Word and obey His Will, miracles will have little effect upon them. This is precisely their punishment for disobedience. Pharaoh's heart was hardened by his sins, and the miracles, which God wrought by Moses, had no permanent effect upon him.

This was the case with the Jews in the days of Christ, as St. John declares, "though He had done so many miracles, yet they believed not on Him;" that the saying of Esaias, the prophet, might be fulfilled, which he spake, "Lord, who hath believed our report, and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?" (Isa. liii. 1.) Therefore, they could not believe, because that Esaias saith again, "He hath blinded their eyes and hardened their heart" (John xii. 37—40). And our Lord Himself says, "If they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead" (Luke xvi. 31). As Augustine says (Qu. 50), "Balaam was hurried on by such a fit of madness, that he was not astonished by so great a miracle, but answered the ass as if he were speaking to a man, when God Almighty had not indeed endured the ass with reason, but made words to proceed from the mouth of the ass to restrain the madness of the Prophet."

Homer, a good judge of human nature, has not represented Achilles as astonished by the voice of his horse, whose mouth was opened by Heré; but has made him reply to the horse without any notice of the prodigy. Achilles was in too eager and impetuous a mood to do any thing else (Hom., Iliad, xix. 404—420).

Almighty God made the dumb ass to be the Prophet's prophet, because the prophet was debasing himself below the ass on which he rode, by disobeying Him, Whose prophet he was.

It was not till the Lord opened Balaam's eyes that he saw the Angel; and the same judicial retribution—the consequence of disobedience—which had blinded his eyes, so that he had not seen the Angel standing in the way with the drawn sword before him, hardened his heart against any impression from the miracle which God wrought in the ass on which he rode. Here is another evidence of the miserable effects of disobedience to God's Will and Word.

† Heb. who hast ridden upon me.
 || Or, ever since thou wast, &c.
 z See Gen. 21. 19.
 2 Kings 6. 17.
 Luke 24. 16, 31.
 a Ex. 34. 8.
 || Or, bowed himself.

† Heb. to be an adversary unto thee.
 b 2 Pet. 2. 11, 15.

c 1 Sam. 15. 24, 30. & 26. 21.
 2 Sam. 12. 13.
 Job 34. 31, 32.
 † Heb. be evil in thine eyes.
 d ver. 20.

c Gen. 14. 17.
 f ch. 21. 13.

g ver. 17.
 ch. 24. 11.

h ch. 23. 26. & 24. 13.
 1 Kings 22. 14.
 2 Chron. 18. 13.
 || Or, A city of streets.

i Deut. 12. 2.

a ver. 29.

b ver. 14, 30.

c ver. 15.

d ch. 24. 1.

|| Or, he went solitary.
 c ver. 16.

f ver. 16.
 ch. 22. 35.
 Deut. 18. 18. Jer. 1. 9.

Am not I thine ass, † upon which thou hast ridden || ever since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay. ³¹ Then the LORD ^z opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he ^a bowed down his head, and || fell flat on his face. ³² And the angel of the LORD said unto him, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out † to withstand thee, because thy way is ^b perverse before me: ³³ And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I had slain thee, and saved her alive. ³⁴ And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, ^c I have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it † displease thee, I will get me back again. ³⁵ And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, Go with the men: ^d but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak.

So Balaam went with the princes of Balak. ³⁶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, ^e he went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, ^f which is in the border of Arnon, which is in the utmost coast. ³⁷ And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore camest thou not unto me? am I not able indeed ^g to promote thee to honour? ³⁸ And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have I now any power at all to say any thing? ^h the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

³⁹ And Balaam went with Balak, and they came unto || Kirjath-huzoth. ⁴⁰ And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

⁴¹ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the ⁱ high places of Baal, that thence he might see the utmost part of the people.

XXIII. ¹ And Balaam said unto Balak, ^a Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven oxen and seven rams. ² And Balak did as Balaam had spoken; and Balak and Balaam ^b offered on every altar a bullock and a ram. ³ And Balaam said unto Balak, ^c Stand by thy burnt offering, and I will go: peradventure the LORD will come ^d to meet me: and whatsoever he sheweth me I will tell thee. And || he went to an high place. ⁴ ^e And God met Balaam: and he said unto him, I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram. ⁵ And the LORD ^f put a word in

34. if it displease thee] As if it had not been just said to him by God, "Thy way is perverse before Me" (v. 32)! He is therefore punished again by being allowed to go on in his own way (v. 35).

39. Kirjath-huzoth] or Kiryath-chuzoth, city of streets, from kiryah, a town (from karah, to build: Gesen. 743), and chutz, a wall, a street (Gesen. 266). Perhaps the site of this city was at Keriot, at the foot of Jebel Attarus (Knobel).

40. Balak offered oxen] as a sacrifice and a feast, to welcome Balaam (cp. xxv. 2), to whom he sent probably a part of the sacrifice, and to the princes that were with him.

41. on the morrow] The act of Balaam was therefore a deliberate act; he had ample time to reflect in the course of his journey from Mesopotamia to Moab. And now, having sinned wilfully and presumptuously against God, he is brought up to the high places of Baal (see Rom. xi. 4), in order to curse God's people, whom He had forbidden him to curse, and whom He had declared to be blessed (v. 12). Cp. below, xxiii. 28.

— that thence he might see] Rather, and thence he saw.

CH. XXIII. 1. Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams] A sacred number of altars and victims. He endeavours to win God over by sacrifice (cp. v. 29: Theodoret, Qu. 42), though he knew well that God required "obedience rather than sacrifice," and said to Balak, as Micah declares (vi. 4), "Shall I come before God with burnt-offerings, with calves of a year old? . . . What doth God require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly before thy God?" Such is the deceitfulness of sin, and the miserable state of man when blinded by it.

2. Balak did] The king of Moab is ready to join Jehovah with Chemosh in worship, provided he can gain his end (cp. 2 Kings xvii. 28). But God denounces a woe on those who join faith and falsehood together in religion, and swear by the Lord and by Malcham (Zeph. i. 5).

4. I have prepared seven altars] He pleads his merit before God; and yet he was seeking enchantments (xxiv. 1), but God overrules him. Observe what follows:

The Lord put a word in Balaam's mouth. Here is the clue to the right understanding of Balaam's speech. It is not Balaam who utters it, of his own mind; but God speaks by Balaam's mouth.

5. the LORD put a word in Balaam's mouth] God who had Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

⁶ And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt sacrifice, he, and all the princes of Moab. ⁷ And he ^s took up his parable, and said,

Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from Aram,

Out of the mountains of the east, saying,

^h Come, curse me Jacob,

And come, ⁱ defy Israel.

⁸ ^k How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed?

Or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

⁹ For from the top of the rocks I see him,

And from the hills I behold him:

Lo, ^l the people shall dwell alone,

And ^m shall not be reckoned among the nations.

¹⁰ ⁿ Who can count the dust of Jacob,

And the number of the fourth part of Israel?

Let [†] me die ^o the death of the righteous,

And let my last end be like his!

¹¹ And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? ^p I took thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

¹² And he answered and said, ^q Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my mouth?

¹³ And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see but the utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all: and curse me them from thence. ¹⁴ And he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of || Pisgah, ^r and built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar. ¹⁵ And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt offering, while I meet the LORD yonder.

¹⁶ And the LORD met Balaam, and ^s put a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus. ¹⁷ And when he came to him, behold, he

g ver. 18.
ch. 24. 3. 15, 23.
Job 27. 1. & 29. 1.
1's 78. 2.
Ezek. 17. 2.
Mic. 2. 4.
Hab. 2. 6.
h ch. 22. 6, 11, 17.

i 1 Sam. 17. 10.

k Isa. 47. 12, 13.

l Deut. 33. 28.

m Ex. 33. 16.
Ezra 9. 2.
Eph. 2. 14.
n Gen. 13. 16.
& 22. 17

† Heb. my soul,
or, my life.
o Ps. 116. 15.

p ch. 22. 11, 17.
& 24. 10.

q ch. 22. 28.

|| Or, The hill.
r ver. 1, 2.

s ver. 5.
ch. 22. 35.

opened the mouth of the ass, in a manner contrary to her nature, now opens Balaam's mouth in a manner contrary to his own will (Deut. xxiii. 5: see on xxii. 28), and makes him to be an instrument of promoting God's glory, even while he is seeking his own. So God overrules evil for good, and makes Satan do His work (S. Cyril).

Observe, Balaam's prophecies reach to the Amalekite, Kenite, and Assyrian; they comprehend the condition of Israel, their victories and isolated character; the coming of Christ; the overthrow of the heathen, and rebellious Jew. Thus the constrained predictions of the perverse and sordid prophet bear witness to the great power and wisdom of God, Who is magnified even by means of a Balaam, a Saul, a Caiaphas, and a Judas (cp. Davison on Prophecy, 211).

On other similar instances of God's controlling power over evil men, made by Him subservient to good, see above, on xx. 22; and Bp. Sanderson, iii. pp. 342, 343.

⁷. his parable] masnal (see xxi. 27), a similitude, a proverb, a poem, a prophecy (Gesen. 517).

On this prophecy, and its spiritual meaning, see Origen in Numeros, Hom. 15, 16, and 17.

— from Aram] The Aram which is by the Euphrate: (Targum Jonathan), Mesopotamia (see Deut. xxiii. 4).

— Jacob-Israel] The prophet rises from the contemplation of Jacob, to the contemplation of Israel: this gradation from Jacob to Israel is observed here, and in v. 21, and in v. 23, and culminates in the prophecy concerning Christ (xxiv. 17), "There shall come a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall arise out of Israel." God is the God of Jacob, and the Lord (Jehovah) of Israel: cp. above, on Gen. xxxii. 28.

— defy] Heb. zaam [to foam in anger], a word of the same origin as Schaum, écume, scum (Gesen. 250: cp. Micah vi. 10. Zech. i. 12. Mal. i. 4)

⁸. God—the LORD] The prophet rises from contemplating Elohim, the Creator, to the contemplation of Jehovah, the Redeemer and Sanctifier of Israel.

⁹. the people shall dwell alone] doth dwell alone, yet safe, like the Ark in the midst of the waters; for God is with them; and therefore this blessing is repeated by Moses himself (Deut. xxxiii. 28), "Israel shall dwell alone in confidence and safety." This is the condition of Christ's Church in this world. She is the Woman in the wilderness, in the Apocalypse (xii. 6. 14).

Here is a reproof from God, speaking by Balaam's mouth (see v. 5), to Moab, for engaging the Midianites to conspire with them against Israel.

— shall not be reckoned] Rather, is not reckoned.

¹⁰. the fourth part] Even one of the four sides of the encampment of Israel. See ii. 3—31.

— Let me die the death of the righteous, And let my last end be like his!] A holy prayer, uttered by an unholy man, when engaged in an act of unholiness, which brought him to an unholy end (xxxii. 8); for his end was according to his works (2 Cor. xi. 5), and his prayer was an abomination (Prov. xxviii. 9): it showed that he knew what was good (Micah vi. 8), and sinned against the light. A holy life is the only safe way to a happy death.

¹⁴. he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of Pisgah] The field of Zophim, the spies, or watchmen (and so Sept.), who looked forth around to see if any enemies approached the city (Jarchi). This field was a lofty plain on the range of Pisgah, west of Heshbon (xxi. 20); one of the summits of which range was Nebo (Deut. iii. 27; xxxiv. 1).

— Pisgah] How striking is the contrast between Balaam on Pisgah and Moses at Pisgah (Deut. xxxiv. 1)! both prophets, both about to die; one faithless, the other faithful; one going to shame, the other to glory. See below on xxxi. 8.

stood by his burnt offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken? ¹⁸ And he took up his parable, and said,

t Judg. 3. 20.

¹ Rise up, Balak, and hear;

Hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor:

u 1 Sam. 15. 29
Mal. 3. 6.
Rom. 11. 29.
Tit. 1. 2.
James 1. 17.

¹⁹ " God is not a man, that he should lie;
Neither the son of man, that he should repent:
Hath he said, and shall he not do it?

Or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

x Gen. 12. 2. &
22. 17.
Num. 22. 12.
y Rom 4. 7, 8.

²⁰ Behold, I have received commandment to bless:
And ^x he hath blessed; and I cannot reverse it.

²¹ ^y He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, Neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel:

z Ex. 13. 21. &
29. 45, 46. & 33.
14.
a Ps. 89. 15.

^z The LORD his God is with him,

^a And the shout of a king is among them.

b ch. 24. 8.

²² ^b God brought them out of Egypt;
He hath as it were ^c the strength of an unicorn.

c Deut. 33. 17.
Job 39. 10, 11.

²³ Surely there is no enchantment || against Jacob,
Neither is there any divination against Israel:
According to this time it shall be said of Jacob
And of Israel, ^d What hath God wrought!

d Ps. 31. 19. &
44. 1.

²⁴ Behold, the people shall rise up ^e as a great lion,
And lift up himself as a young lion:

e Gen. 49. 9.

^f He shall not lie down until he eat of the prey,
And drink the blood of the slain.

f Gen. 49. 27.

²⁵ And Balak said unto Balaam, Neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all. ²⁶ But Balaam answered and said unto Balak, Told not I thee, saying, g ver. 12. ch. 22. 38.

1 Kings 22. 14.

^g All that the LORD speaketh, that I must do?

19. God is not a man] Thus Balaam is constrained to pronounce sentence of condemnation on himself, in endeavouring to persuade God to change His mind. See v. 12: cp. 1 Sam. xv. 25.

21. He hath not beheld] Their iniquities were forgiven, and their sin covered (Ps. xxxii. 1, 2. Jer. i. 7. Jer. i. 20).

— iniquity] Heb. aven; literally, vanity; and especially applied to idols, which are vain; and therefore rendered "idolum" by Vulg. and Onkelos (cp. Gesen. 21).

— perverseness] Heb. amal; literally, labour; vexation of spirit, sorrow (Gesen. 639); it is supposed by some to mean sin, guile, here and in Isa. x. 1; and so Onkelos, Syriac, and Arabic. The Vulgate here has μῆχος καὶ νόσος, labour and pain.

God, speaking by Balaam (see v. 5), here condemns those who, like Balak and Balaam himself, weary themselves in the way of wickedness, toiling in vain by corrupt plans and devices, as worldly men do, against God and the truth (Isa. xlii. 13. Ezek. xxiv. 12).

— the shout] or the alarm (teruah). It is the same word as that which expresses the sound of the silver trumpet (see Lev. xxiii. 24; above, x. 5, 6, 9), to which Balaam probably refers; cp. 2 Chron. xiii. 12, and the effects of the trumpets in the destruction of Jericho (Josh. vi. 16, 20); and see Josh. vii. 20.

So Christ, our King, is in His Church, sounding the silver trumpets of the Gospel, and overthrowing thereby the strongholds of the enemy (2 Cor. x. 3—5). The shout of a King is with her.

22. God brought them out of Egypt] Here again God, speaking by Balaam, corrects the words of Balak, who had said "there is a people come out of Egypt" (xxii. 5), and pronounces a condemnation on Balaam himself; for if God did this for them, who is Balaam that he should resist Him and curse His people, as he desired and endeavoured to do? (Deut. xxiii. 5.)

— He hath as it were the strength of an unicorn] The strength, Heb. toaphoth, a plural noun, which is supposed by some to be from yaaph, to be swift (Gesen., pp. 358. 859), and to signify literally swiftness; by others it is supposed to be from yapha, to shine, and to signify glories (Sept.).

The word rendered unicorn is the Heb. reem, from raam, to be high (Gesen., p. 751), with horns; and supposed by some to be the rhinoceros (Vulg., and so Shaw); by others, the unicorn; by others (Schullens, De Wette, Gesenius), to be the buffalo; others (Bochart, Rosenmüller) suppose it to be the antelope. It is always rendered unicorn in our version: see Dent. xxxiii. 17. Ps. xxii. 21; xxix. 6; xcii. 10. Job xxxix. 9, 10. Isa. xxxiv. 7, where the margin has rhinoceros.

23. enchantment] Heb. nachash: see on Gen. xxx. 27; xlv. 5. Lev. xix. 26.

— divination] Heb. kesem. See xxii. 7; xxiv. 1. Deut. xviii. 10. Josh. xiii. 22, where Balaam is called Kosem. Cp. 1 Sam. vi. 2; xv. 23; xxviii. 8. Isa. xlv. 25. Ezek. xiii. 6—9; xxi. 21.

— According to this time] or, rather, in its appointed season. It shall be told to Jacob and Israel, What hath God wrought! How great things hath God done! It is God who works in Israel and by Israel. The Israelites themselves are not able to do those mighty works by their own power. This prophecy had a partial fulfilment in the victories gained in Canaan by God's power working by Joshua in the literal Israel; but its perfect accomplishment is in the true Joshua, JESUS CHRIST, God manifest in the flesh, "in the fulness of time" (Gal. iv. 4. Eph. i. 10), and executing all God's promises to Israel in their "due season" (Luke i. 20. Rom. v. 6. 1 Tim. ii. 6. Titus i. 3).

24. as a young lion] Naturally, from what precedes (see foregoing note) Balaam goes on to speak here, and in xxiv. 9, of the people as a great lion, because their strength, as seen in the appointed time, was in him who is the Lion of the tribe of Judah: see above, Gen. xlix. 9. Rev. v. 5. Here (says Origen in Num., Hom. 16) is a prophetic declaration of the strength and victory of the true Israel of God which believes in Christ. Cp. S. Cyprian c. Jud. i. 21.

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, ^h Come, I pray thee, I will bring thee unto another place; peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me them from thence. 28 And Balak brought Balaam unto the top of Peor, that looketh ⁱ toward Jeshimon. 29 And Balaam said unto Balak, ^k Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams. 30 And Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

XXIV. 1 And when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as at ^a other times, [†] to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness. 2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel ^b abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and ^c the spirit of God came upon him. 3 ^d And he took up his parable, and said,

Balaam the son of Beor hath said,

And the man [†] whose eyes are open hath said:

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God,

Which saw the vision of the Almighty,

^e Falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

5 How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob,

And thy tabernacles, O Israel!

6 As the valleys are they spread forth,

As gardens by the river's side,

^f As the trees of lign aloes ^g which the LORD hath planted,

^h ver. 13.
ⁱ ch. 21. 20.
^k ver. 1.

a ch. 23. 3. 15.
[†] Heb. to the meeting of enchantments.
b ch. 2. 2, & c.
c ch. 11. 25.
1 Sam. 10. 10. & 19. 20, 23.
2 Chron. 15. 1.
d ch. 23. 7, 18.

[†] Heb. who had his eyes shut, but now opened.

e See 1 Sam. 19. 24.
Ezek. 1. 28.
Dan. 8. 18. & 10. 15, 16.
2 Cor. 12. 2, 3, 4.
Rev. 1. 10, 17.

f Ps. 1. 3.
Jer. 17. 8.
g Ps. 104. 16.

28. And Balak brought Balaam] See v. 14. This was the third attempt; the first was on the high places of Baal (xxii. 41); the second was on the top of Pisgah (xxiii. 14); this on the top of Peor is the last.

In this struggle Satan, who worked in the king of Moab, and the covetous Prophet, shifted his ground three times, and was foiled three times—as was afterwards the case at the temptation of Christ. Matt. iv. 1—11. Luke iv. 1—13; so it will be at the end of all things.

— unto the top of Peor] the high place of Baal-peor, the idol of Moab (xxv. 2, 3. 18. Deut. iii. 29. Josh. xiii. 15. 20). It was a high eminence in the northern part of the range of the mountains of Abarim, opposite Jericho (Euseb.).

Balaam—the prophet of Jehovah—had consented to follow Balak to the high places of Baal (xxii. 41); and when God would not allow him to curse Israel there, and thus showed His divine power, overruling him in the sanctuary of Baal, and manifesting His superiority to Baal, the idol of Moab, the unhappy man, loving the wages of iniquity, is drawn up to another shrine of idolatry; but there he is constrained to prophesy of CHRIST (xxiv. 17). A glorious triumph of truth and of God. By means of this prophecy of Balaam (the enemy of God's people—the agent of Satan himself), the tidings of Christ's coming were preached to the Eastern World, and a way was prepared for bringing the Wise Men of the East—the firstfruits of the Gentiles—to the cradle of Christ at Bethlehem (Origen, Hom. 13, 14).

“Unto the top of Peor.” There it was also that the Evil Spirit suggested to Balaam that he should counsel Balak to tempt the Israelites to a double harlotry (xxx. 16), to join themselves to Baal-peor (xxv. 3. Ps. cv. 28), and to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab (xxv. 1—3), for which he is consigned to perpetual infamy in Holy Scripture (Rev. ii. 14).

— Jeshimon] See xxi. 20.

29. seven bullocks and seven rams] on the hill of Peor, the idol of Moab. No wonder that, as we learn from the New Testament, “Balaam taught Balak” to tempt the Israelites “to eat things sacrificed to idols” (Rev. ii. 14).

CHR. XXIV. 1. as at other times] Whence it is evident that in his former devices and doings, Balaam, while professing zeal for God by altar and sacrifice, and even pleading before God for acceptance on that account (see xxiii. 4), was in his own private mind desirous of overreaching God by means of enchantment.

— to seek for] Literally, to the meeting of—εἰς συνάντησιν (Sept.). He went forth to meet them as friends, and to entertain them; a significant description of a deceiver, holding intercourse with familiar spirits.

VOL. I. PART II.—161

— enchantments] Heb. nechashim. See xxiii. 23.

— toward the wilderness] Where the Israelites were encamped. The Targum of Onkelos, and the Jerusalem Targum, suggest in their paraphrases that Balaam turned his eyes thither, to remind God of the idolatry of Israel in the wilderness, in making the calf at Horeb, and in order to become their accuser with Him, and to exasperate Him against them,—a fit work for one who was an agent of the Devil (διάβολος, or calumniator), the “accuser of our brethren” (Rev. xii. 10).

2. the spirit of God came upon him] Showing the sovereign power of the Spirit, prophesying even by evil men, as Saul (1 Sam. xix. 19, 20—23), and Caiaphas (John xi. 15).

Therefore it is not prophecy, nor any other supernatural gift, which can profit men, unless they have charity; i. e., love of God, and of man in God (1 Cor. xiii. 1—3). Balaam had neither of these; and therefore, though he blessed Israel, and prophesied of Christ, he himself was a castaway (2 Pet. ii. 15. Rev. ii. 14). “Prophetavit Caiaphas, prophetat Balaam de Christo; ideo nemo extollatur etiamsi prophetet, sed redeat ad Apostoli dictum (1 Cor. xiii. 8. 13), super prophetiam, super scientiam, super fidem, super ipsum martyrium charitas habenda est, quia ‘Deus charitas est’” (1 John iv. 16). Origen.

“Many will say unto Me (our Lord declares) in that day”—the day of judgment—“Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you. Depart from Me, ye that work iniquity” (Mark vii. 22, 23).

3. he took up his parable] See xxiii. 7. On this prophecy, and its spiritual meaning, see Origen in Numer., Hom. 17, 18, and 19. Theodoret, Qu. 44.

— the man whose eyes are open] Open, Heb. shethum, which occurs only in this place, and in v. 15; but there seems little doubt that it is rightly rendered in the Authorized Version, and that it signifies literally unclosed. See Gesen., p. 853; and so Sept., Vulg., Syriac, Arabic, and Targum of Onkelos: cp. Ps. xl. 8.

4. Falling] The words “into a trance” are not in the original; but they are implied by it, and something more: the word falling intimates that he who speaks, does not stand on the ground of his own reason or intelligence; but is, as it were, a captive in the hands of God. Compare the case of Saul, who fell down (1 Sam. xix. 24), and of Daniel (viii. 17, 18), and of St. John (Rev. i. 17), and see below, v. 16.

6. As the valleys] The valleys, with brooks flowing in them; as the original signifies.

— lign aloes] Heb. ahalim. See Ps. xlv. 9. Prov. vii. 17. Cant. iv. 14; and Gesen. 17; Rosen.; Keil. The framers of many of the Ancient Versions (Sept., Vulg., Arabic, and

And as cedar trees beside the waters.

7 He shall pour the water out of his buckets,
And his seed shall be ^h in many waters,
And his king shall be higher than ⁱ Agag,
And his ^k kingdom shall be exalted.

8 ^l God brought him forth out of Egypt;
He hath as it were the strength of an unicorn:
He shall ^m eat up the nations his enemies,
And shall ⁿ break their bones,
And ^o pierce them through with his arrows.

9 ^p He couched, he lay down as a lion,
And as a great lion: who shall stir him up?

^q Blessed is he that blesseth thee,
And cursed is he that curseth thee.

10 And Balak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and he ^r smote his hands together: and Balak said unto Balaam, ^s I called thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times. ^t Therefore now flee thou to thy place: ^u I thought to promote thee unto great honour; but, lo, the LORD hath kept thee back from honour. ^v And Balaam said unto Balak, Spake I not also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying, ^w If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak? ^x And now, behold, I go unto my people: come therefore, and ^y I will advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people ^z in the latter days. ^{aa} And he took up his parable, and said, h Jer. 51. 13.

Rev. 17. 1, 15.

i 1 Sam. 15. 9.

k 2 Sam. 5. 12.
1 Chron. 14. 2.

l ch. 23. 22.

m ch. 14. 9. &
23. 24.

n Ps. 2. 9.

Isa. 38. 13.

Jer. 50. 17.

o Ps. 45. 5.

Jer. 50. 9.

p Gen. 49. 9.

q Gen. 12. 3. &
27. 29.

r Ezek. 21. 14, 17.
& 22. 13.

s ch. 23. 11.

Deut. 23. 4, 5.

Josh. 24. 9, 10.

Neh. 13. 2.

t ch. 22. 17, 37.

u ch. 22. 18.

x Mic. 6. 5.

Rev. 2. 14.

y Gen. 49. 1.

Dan. 2. 28. &
10. 14.

z ver. 3, 4.

Syriac seem to have supposed that the word was from ohel, a tent; and render it tabernacles, or tents; not so Onkelos, who renders it spices.

7. He shall pour the water] shall stream with water. An image of the diffusion of Israel flowing from one source into many streams, and irrigating and fertilizing the world (cp. Isa. xlviii. 1. Ps. lxxviii. 27), and a beautiful picture of the true Israel of God, flowing forth from Christ the Divine Fountain of Grace, pouring out the living waters of salvation, the pure streams of the Spirit (Isa. xii. 3. John iii. 5; iv. 10; vii. 38, 39), and making the wilderness of the world to rejoice and be glad, and to blossom as the rose (Isa. xlv. 1). The Jerusalem Targum itself expressly applies this prophecy to "King Messias, the Redeemer."

— higher than Agag] The official title of the kings of the Amalekites (Hengstl., Keil), the most bitter enemies of the literal Israel (Exod. xvii. 6. Deut. xxv. 17. 12. 1 Sam. xv. 30; xxviii. 18), and the type of the enemies of Christ and His Church.

— his kingdom shall be exalted] A prophecy fulfilled in David and Solomon, and above all, in Christ (Isa. ix. 6, 7. Luke i. 31. Rev. xi. 15; xvii. 14; xix. 16).

8. God brought him forth out of Egypt] Here is a parallel between Israel—"God's firstborn" (Exod. iv. 22), and Christ, of both of whom it is said, "Out of Egypt I called My Son" (Hos. xi. 1. Matt. ii. 15): see Origen, Hom. 17, who applies these words, in a secondary sense, to Christ.

— unicorn] See xxxiii. 22.

— He shall eat up the nations his enemies] A prophecy which was fulfilled in part under David; but its final and complete accomplishment will be in Christ (Ps. ii. 4—12; xlv. 6; ex. 2. 1 Cor. xv. 25), as is manifested in the Book of Revelation (vii. 5—17; xix. 11—21); and therefore Balaam fitly proceeds to speak of the lion, the standard of Judah, floating before his eyes in the encampment of Israel—typical and prophetic of the universal conquest which will be achieved by Him who is called in the Apocalypse, "the Lion of the tribe of Judah" (v. 5).

— shall break] Or suck them, of their marrow (Sept.).

— pierce—with his arrows] A Bow and Arrows are in the hand of Christ, riding on the White Horse, the horse of victory, conquering, and to conquer (see below, on Rev. vi. 2). Ps. xlv.

6, "Thine arrows are very sharp in the heart of the king's enemies."

9. He couched, he lay down as a lion] This also is applicable to Israel, God's firstborn, and much more to Christ, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the first-begotten from the dead. See Origen, Hom. 17, who says, "Requievit Christus ut Leo, cum in cruce positus principatus et potestates exiit, et triumphavit eas in ligno crucis (Col. ii. 15), ut catulus autem Leonis, cum resurrexit a somno mortis." Cp. S. Cyril, Cat. 14. S. Basil, Hom. 25. S. Chrys., Hom. 67 in Joan.; and see the notes above on Gen. xlix. 9, where Jacob prophesied of Christ, "Judah is a lion's whelp: from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?"

— Blessed is he that blesseth thee] This blessing was extorted from Balaam, who desired to curse Israel (Deut. xxxiii. 4, 5. Josh. xxiv. 9, 10. Neh. xiii. 2). So God will overrule all things for the glory of His own name, and for the good of His people (Rom. viii. 27. 1 Pet. iii. 13).

This also is applicable, in the highest sense, to Christ. "Benedicentes Christo benedicti sunt, qui autem maledicunt, maledicti" (Origen).

10. he smote his hands together] In grief and rage (see Ezek. xxi. 17), and despair (Job xxvii. 28. Lam. ii. 15).

14. I go unto my people] As he imagined; but he was slain with the sword (xxxi. 8. Josh. xiii. 22).

— I will advertise thee] Advertise, Heb. yaats, to consult, to advise, and thence to declare, to predict, as here (see Gesen., p. 357. Cp. Isa. xlii. 28). Some ancient Versions and Paraphrases render this word by I will give counsel, and suppose that it refers to the evil advice which Balaam gave to Balak (xxx. 16. Rev. ii. 14). But this is not probable, for Balaam was now speaking by the Spirit of God.

— in the latter days] Literally, in the end of the days, rendered ἐν ἑσχατοῦ τῶν ἡμερῶν by Septuagint—a phrase adopted by the writers of the New Testament to signify the days of the Messiah (see Heb. i. 2. 2 Pet. iii. 3. Cp. Acts ii. 17. 1 Pet. i. 5. 1 John ii. 18); and Baal-hattarim here acknowledges that Balaam is speaking of the times of the Messiah. Dr. Davidson says (p. 332), "Balaam's view stretches into the

- Balaam the son of Beor hath said,
 And the man whose eyes are open hath said :
 16 He hath said, which heard the words of God,
 And knew the knowledge of the most High,
Which saw the vision of the Almighty,
 Falling into a trance, but having his eyes open :
 17 ^a I shall see him, but not now :
 I shall behold him, but not nigh :
 There shall come ^b a Star out of Jacob,
 And ^c a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel,
 And shall || smite the corners of Moab,
 And destroy all the children of Sheth.
 18 And ^d Edom shall be a possession,
 Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies ;
 And Israel shall do valiantly.
 19 ^e Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion,
 And shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

a Rev. 1. 7.

b Matt. 2. 2.
 Rev. 22. 16.
 c Gen. 49. 10.
 Ps. 110. 2.
 || Or, smite
through the princes of Moab,
 2 Sam. 8. 2.
 Jer. 48. 45.
 d 2 Sam. 8. 14.
 Ps. 60. 8, 9, 12.

e Gen. 49. 10.

distant future, far beyond David ; his aspirations become, in a wide sense, Messianic : they long for and foretell a glorious time of conquest, of which David's was but the prelude."

17. I shall see him] Rather, I see him,—I behold him.
 — There shall come] Literally, there came as by a path (derech). The past tense is used with beauty and sublimity. The prophet sees the thing already done; he beholds the Star as already risen. Compare the noble example of the same use in the words of Enoch, speaking of the last Day, and of Christ coming to judgment, ἤλθε κύριος, "the LORD came," Jude 14, and note there; and Rev. x. 6, ἐτελέσθη, "it was finished;" and Rev. xxi. 6.

— a Star] "I am the root and the offspring of David," says Christ, "the bright and Morning Star" (Rev. xxii. 16).

The Targum of Onkelos shows in a remarkable manner the sense of the ancient Jewish Church itself concerning this prophecy; it paraphrases Balaam's words thus, "A king shall arise from the horn of Jacob, and the Christ shall be anointed from the house of Israel." And this is confirmed by what follows in v. 19, "Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion." In like manner the Targum of Jerusalem and Jonathan apply this prophecy to the Messiah, as do many of the Rabbis.

It was probably also this prophecy, and the current Jewish interpretation of it, which induced the pretender to the title of the Messiah in the days of the Emperor Adrian, to take the title of Barcochbas, or "Son of a Star;" see Euseb., H. E. iv. 6. 8; and thus even the imposture of a false Christ is an argument for the application of this prophecy to the true Christ.

The ancient Christian Fathers are unanimous in applying this prophecy to JESUS CHRIST. Justin Martyr (Apol. i. 32, p. 206, Otto; and Dialog. c. Tryphon. § 106, p. 359); and so Irenæus, iii. 9, who says, "The Son of God was born of the Virgin of the house of David, and is the Emmanuel of whose Star Balaam prophesied, saying, A Star shall arise out of Jacob." So S. Basil, and others, quoted by Feuardent., p. 213, ed. Grabe. Cp. Origen here, Hom. 13. Euseb., Dem. Ev. ix. p. 417. S. Ambrose, in Luc., cap. ii. S. Basil, Hom. 25. S. Cyril c. Julian. viii. p. 262; and Bp. Andrewes, i. 237. 240. 254.

It was probably the record of this prophecy which brought the Wise Men from the East to Judea in the days of Herod, saying, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen His Star in the East, and are come to worship Him!" see Origen, Hom. 13. 18; and below, the notes on Matt. ii. 1, 2.

It is observable that some eminent recent critics (as Hengstenberg), who once questioned the application of this prophecy to Christ, have now changed their minds, and contend for the truth of that application, which is asserted by Rosenmüller, Baumgarten, Delitzsch, Kurtz, Tholuck, and Keil.

— And shall smite the corners of Moab] fulfilled primarily and partially by David (2 Sam. viii. 2), and perfectly and finally by the Son of David, the Christ, and King of kings, who has already made great conquests by His Gospel over the whole world, and will eventually put all Moabites—the enemies of His Israel—under His feet (Origen, Hom. 16. Hengstenberg).

"Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah?" (Isa. lxiii. 1—14.) is a prophecy of Christ's Passion, and of the victory gained thereby over all His enemies,—Death, Sin, and Satan, and the Heathen world, and is generally accepted as such. The words of the Holy Spirit speaking here by Balaam have a similar import; and doubtless the Psalmist's prophecy (Ps. lx. 6—9; cviii. 7—10), "God hath spoken in His holiness, I will rejoice and divide Sichern, and mete out the valley of Succoth; Gilead is mine, and Manasses is mine; Ephraim is the strength of my head; Judah is my lawgiver; Moab is my washpot; over Edom will I cast out my shoe. Philistia, be thou glad of me. Who will lead me into the strong city? who will bring me into Edom?"—true in a primary and subordinate sense in David, will have its complete consummation in Christ.

— all the children of Sheth] all the sons of men (Onkelos). The Septuagint, Vulgate, Arabic, and Syriac all have Seth, which some think to be synonymous with all the world (Theodoret), for all are now Seth's sons, Cain's descendants having been drowned in the flood (Bp. Andrewes, i. 254).

Other interpreters suppose the word sheth to mean tumult, and to be a contracted form of shēath, or shaath, used in Lam. iii. 47. Jer. xlvi. 45; and that Jeremiah refers to this passage, where he says that "a flame from the midst of Sihon shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the children of tumult (shaath)," and this seems to be the most probable interpretation (see Gesen. 853. Hengst., Keil.)

18. Edom shall be a possession: Seir also shall be a possession] This prophecy also, fulfilled primarily in David (2 Sam. viii. 14. 1 Kings xi. 15, 16. 1 Chron. xviii. 12, 13), has its perfect accomplishment in the Son, and Lord of David the king of Israel, Christ. Edom, the name of the enemies of the literal Israel, is used in Holy Scripture to designate the enemies of Christ and His Church, the Spiritual Israel. (see above, xx. 17); and Christ's victory over those enemies is described as a victory over Edom: see the passages cited in the foregoing note, especially Isa. lxiii. 1—4, which is conclusive as to this point; for of David could not be said, what the Conqueror of Edom there says in reply to the question, "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, this that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of His strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. . . . I have trodden the vinepress alone, and of the people there was none with Me. . . . therefore Mine own arm brought salvation unto Me:" see also v. 7. But how appropriate is this to Christ, conquering by His death and passion! The Church of England has declared her own judgment on this matter, by appointing that prophecy to be read as the Epistle on the Monday before Easter.

19. Out of Jacob] See v. 17. The Helrew Expositors themselves (e. g., Jarchi, who refers to Ps. lxxii. 8, His dominion shall be from sea to sea) own that this is said of Christ (Bp. Pearson, p. 363).

20 And when he looked on Amalek, he took up his parable, and said,
Amalek was || the first of the nations;
But his latter end || shall be that he perish for ever.

|| Or, the first of the nations that warred against Israel, Ex. 17. 8
|| Or, shall be even to destruction, Ex. 17. 14.
1 Sam. 15. 3, 8.

21 And he looked on the Kenites, and took up his parable, and said,
Strong is thy dwelling place,
And thou puttest thy nest in a rock.

† Heb. Kain,
Gen. 15. 19.

22 Nevertheless † the Kenite shall be wasted,
|| Until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.

|| Or, how long shall it be ere Asshur carry thee away captive?

23 And he took up his parable, and said,
Alas, who shall live
When God doeth this!

f Gen. 10. 4.

Dan. 11. 30.

g Gen. 10. 21, 25.

24 And ships shall come from the coast of 'Chittim,
And shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict ^e Eber,
And he also shall perish for ever.

h See ch. 31. 8.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and ^h returned to his place: and Balak also went his way.

n ch. 33. 49.

Josh. 2. 1.

Mic. 6. 5.

XXV. ¹ And Israel abode in ^a Shittim, and ^b the people began to commit b ch. 31. 16. 1 Cor. 10. 8.

20. he looked on Amalek] Balaam, speaking by the Spirit of God, represents the Judge of all promising blessings to the righteous, and then denouncing woe on the wicked.

— Amalek was the first of the nations] or, rather, beginning of nations Amalek; and so Sept., Vulg., and Arabic; and this is explained by Onkelos to mean that Amalek was the beginning of the Gentiles who warred against Israel in the wilderness (Exod. xvii. 8—16), and therefore Amalek is a principal type and specimen of the enemies of God and His Church: see Exod. xiv. 14.

This interpretation is confirmed by the contrast here presented, between Amalek's beginning and his "latter end." As Israel is the firstfruits of God's children and creatures (cp. James i. 18), so Amalek is regarded as the firstfruits of the children of the Wicked One, who boldly rebel against God, and cruelly persecute His people—their beginning is in wrath and fury against God and His Church, and their "end will be that they perish for ever."

21. the Kenites] The Kenites are called Salmians by Onkelos, cp. Gen. xv. 19; and he supposed Balaam to refer to the Kenites there mentioned as among the tribes whose land was promised by God to Abraham's seed. The Kenites were friendly to Israel at the Exodus (1 Sam. xv. 6), and were in amicable relation with David (1 Sam. xxx. 29); and Jethro, the priest of Midian, father-in-law of Moses, belonged to that tribe (Judg. i. 16. Cp. Judg. iv. 11. 17; v. 24).

The Kenites are here mentioned after the Amalekites; and in Exod. xviii. 1—27, Jethro, the Kenite, the father-in-law of Moses, comes on a friendly visit to the Israelites, and blesses the Lord their God (v. 10), immediately after the treacherous and cruel attacks upon them by Amalek (Exod. xviii. 8—16). It seems as if the Spirit of God, speaking here by Balaam, was taking note of that contrast between Amalek and the Kenite, and was led thereby to pass from denouncing judgments on the one to speak of blessings to the other.

We find afterwards a similar contrast between Amalek and the Kenites in 1 Sam. xv. 6. Saul said unto the Kenites, "Go and depart from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them; for ye showed kindness to all the children of Israel."

— nest] Heb. ken: a fit simile for the abode of Kenites, in a rock, like the eagle's. Obad. 4. Hab. ii. 9.

22. Nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted, until] or, rather, the Kenite shall not be for a prey to feed upon, until. On this sense of the particles Ki-im rendered "nevertheless" in the Authorized Version, see Noldii Part., p. 379; and Keil; and cp. Onkelos here. This is a prophecy of a long continuance to the Kenites, as friends of Israel; they were friends to them in the wilderness, and they will be partners of their prosperity and of their adversity (cp. Onkelos here, and Keil). This was fulfilled in the history of the Kenites in Canaan under the Judges, and afterwards (i. 16; iv. 11. 17. 1 Sam. xv. 6; xxx. 29. 1 Chron. ii. 55).

— Asshur shall carry thee away captive] We have no express record of the fulfilment of this prophecy. It is probable that the Assyrians who carried away captive the ten tribes of Israel (2 Kings xvii. 6), and the Babylonians who destroyed Jerusalem (2 Kings xxv. 2 Chron. xxxvi.), did not spare the Kenites, some of whom we know took refuge in Jerusalem (Jer. xxxv. 5—11); but the Kenites returned after the captivity (1 Chron. ii. 55).

23. Alas, who shall live] An exclamation of sorrow for the afflictions of his people. Who shall escape God's anger, displayed in the destruction of His enemies? S. Ireneus (Frag. p. 469, Grabe) supposes this exclamation to be a prophecy of the world's unbelief and rebellion against Christ.

24. ships . . . Chittim] Chittim therefore must be beyond the sea; and the Vulgate renders it Italy. Chittim was one of the sons of Javan, the son of Japhet: see Gen. x. 4. The term Chittim was applied to the isle of Cyprus, of which one of the most ancient towns was called Citium (Plin., v. 35. Strab., xv. 682), and thence was extended to Greece and Italy: see Dan. xi. 30. Cp. Josephus, Ant. viii. 5. 3; and Kalisch on Gen., p. 244.

— shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict Eber] Asshur and Eber, the Eastern and the Western branches of the family of Shem: see Gen. x. 21. As to Asshur, the father of the Assyrians, see Gen. x. 22; and Eber, the progenitor of the Hebrews, see Gen. x. 22—24.

This prophecy has had a partial fulfilment in the invasion of Assyria, Asia, and Palestine by the armies of Alexander the Great (1 Macc. i. 1; viii. 5); and in the taking of Jerusalem by the Roman armies. But in a larger and spiritual sense, Eber was afflicted by the ships of Chittim, when "the King of the Jews," the Head of the family of Eber, JESUS CHRIST, was put to death by the representative of Rome, according to the prophecy of Christ: see on Matt. xxiv. 1—4. Luke xv. 20, 21. 24.

— And he also shall perish for ever] Chittim, or Rome, the destroyer of others, shall himself be destroyed; a prophecy which seems to be a dim delineation of what is traced out more clearly and fully by Daniel in his prophecies concerning the four monarchies of the world (Dan. ii. 31—45; vii. 2—27; xiii. 2—24); and by St. John in the Apocalypse, in his prophecies concerning Rome, baathen and papal; see below, on Rev. xiii. 1. 5; xvii. 10—18; xviii. 1—24.

25. Balaam rose up] It has been supposed by some that Balaam first went to the camp of Israel, and communicated to Moses his prophecies, and endeavoured to obtain from him the gifts and honours which Balak denied him; and that being disappointed there, he gave the counsel to Balak described in the next chapter.

— to his place] See xxxi. 8, where it is said that he was slain by the sword of Israel, perhaps after he had gone back to Aram, and had come again to see the effect of his counsel (xxxi. 16. Rev. ii. 14), and had heard of the plague which was its consequence. There is something still more significant in the words "his own place" applied here to Balaam, and afterwards applied to Judas, the Traitor: see on Acts vi. 25.

CH. XXV. 1. in Shittim] So called from its acacias, situate in whoredom with the daughters of Moab. ² And ^c they called the people unto ^d the sacrifices of their gods: and the people did eat, ^e and bowed down to their gods. ³ And Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor: and ^f the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel. ⁴ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^g Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, ^h that the fierce anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel. ⁵ And Moses said unto ⁱ the judges of Israel, ^k Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor. ⁶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, ^l who were weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. ⁷ And ^m when Phinehas,

c Josh. 22. 17.
Ps. 106. 28.
Hos. 9. 10.
d Ex. 34. 15, 16.
e 1 Cor. 10. 20.
f Ex. 20. 5.
g Ps. 106. 29.
h Deut. 4. 3.
i Josh. 22. 17.
h ver. 11.
Deut. 13. 17.
i Ex. 18. 21, 25.
k Ex. 32. 27.
Deut. 13. 6, 9, 13, 15.
l Joel 2. 17.
m Ps. 106. 30.

a land of palm-trees, about seven miles east of the Jordan, at a place afterwards called Abila (Joseph., Ant. iv. 8. 1), probably in Wady Eshtab, north of Wady Hesban. From this place the Israelites marched under Joshua into Canaan to Gilgal (see Josh. ii. 1; iii. 1; iv. 20). Therefore, God called to the remembrance of Israel, by the prophet Micah, what had befallen them from "Shittim to Gilgal, that they might know the righteousness of the Lord" (Micah vi. 5).

— began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab] and of Midian (v. 6. 17), through the counsel of Balaam (xxx. 16), "who taught Balak, to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things offered unto idols, and to commit fornication" (Rev. ii. 14).

"God's people (says Origen) was strong, not by its own strength, but by obedience to God. If thou desirest to overcome them (said Balaam to Balak), make them disobey God." "Si vis eos vincere, pudicitiam eorum dejice, et sponte vincuntur" (Origen, Hom. 20). Therefore in respect of their name, and also because they encouraged the people of God in dissoluteness of life, and thus prevailed over them, to their ruin, the Nicolaitans are compared to Balaam in the New Testament. "So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans" (Rev. ii. 15). See note there, and cp. Origen, in Numeros, Hom. 20, and Waterland, vi. p. 110.

Balaam, angry at Israel, whom he would fain have cursed, yea, and angry at God Himself, who had voided his hopes, and restrained him from pay and honour, as if he would be avenged both of God and them, imagined a device against them full of cursed villainy; he gave the Moabites and Midianites counsel to send the fairest of their daughters among them to inveigle them with their beauty, to entice them first to corporal and then to spiritual whoredom; that so Israel, by disobedience, might forfeit the protection of God, and bring themselves under the curse which Balaam by his sorcery could not bring upon them. Bp. Sanderson, ii. 243.

Surely that impious counsel which Balaam gave to Balak against Israel was a greater piece of wickedness than if he had cursed them in words. Bp. Butler, p. 65.

It is worthy of remark, that in the same region where Balaam, the prophet, was guilty of unfaithfulness, there three examples were afterwards given of intrepid courage, and noble disinterestedness, and steadfast allegiance to God. There, on Mount Nebo, Moses, the faithful servant, died. Not far from that hill, Elijah, the prophet, went up to heaven; and near this spot, the forerunner of Christ, the Elijah of the Gospel—John the Baptist,—finished his noble testimony to the truth, and died, in the prison of Macherus.

They began to commit whoredom. This history may also be applied in a spiritual sense; and thus it is as a warning against false doctrine, which is compared in Scripture to harlotry. The Christian soul (says Origen) is espoused to Christ, and is joined to Him by the bonds of spiritual wedlock; as St. Paul teaches (2 Cor. xi. 2, 3); all corruption of the Christian faith is a breach of that marriage-bond; it is spiritual harlotry and adultery; and this history presents a solemn warning against it. Origen, Hom. 20.

^{2. unto the sacrifices of their gods}] Baal-peor. Cp. xxiii. 28. 30.

— did eat] And thus partook of the worship of idols, contrary to the command of God (Exod. xxxiv. 14: cp. 1 Cor. x. 18).

^{3. joined himself unto Baal-peor}] Literally, was coupled as in a yoke; the sense of the Hebrew verb, tsamad, as here used, and in Ps. cvi. 28, "they joined themselves unto Baal-peor," is best illustrated by the derivation tsemed, a yoke of oxen (Judg. xix. 3. 10. 1 Sam. xi. 7), and St. Paul seems to refer to this sense of it, as employed here, when he says, "Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers" (2 Cor. vi. 14). Ainsworth.

On Baal-peor see xxiii. 28. Josh. xxii. 17. Hos. ix. 10. His worship was characterized by impure and lewd excesses, which were even made a part of that worship (cp. S. Jerome ad Hos. iv. 14).

^{4. the heads}] Such as were leaders by their rank and sin.
— hang them up] Fix them on a stake (Genes. 363), after they had been put to death; in order that they may be a public example and warning; and as a satisfaction to the divine justice and honour, which had been publicly outraged by them (Keil).

— before the LORD] As sinners against Him, their God and King, and as punished by his law (see 2 Sam. xxi. 6. 9). This was done by legal process (see v. 5), "Moses said unto the judges."

^{5. his men}] Those under his government (Exod. xviii. 25), not others.

^{6. brought}] Literally, brought near; in order to commit whoredom with her (cp. Gen. xx. 4. Lev. xviii. 6, as to the sense of the word). He did this in the sight of Moses. A presumptuous and flagrant outrage; an impious defiance of God, after the order just given by Moses; and it was aggravated by the circumstance that he did it also in the sight of the people who were weeping in penitential sorrow before the door of the Tabernacle.

— his brethren] The Simeonites (see v. 14).

^{7. And when Phinehas}] This act of Phinehas, whose name is very expressive, and means, mouth of brass, was the act of a Priest, an officer of God, and it is commended by God Himself in Holy Scripture (v. 11—13, and Ps. cvi. 30, 31), and therefore we may be sure, that it was done either by order of God through Moses, or by the special inspiration of the Holy Ghost. See S. Cyril's answer to the Emperor Julian's objections to the act of Phinehas, and to the praise he received from God, c. Julian. v. p. 161; and S. Optat. de Schism. Donat. iii. 5.

This act is therefore no precedent for irregular acts of zeal without any such commission and warrant. See Bp. Sanderson's excellent sermon on the text (Ps. cvi. 30, Works, ii. pp. 240—271), and Bp. Andrewes's sermon on the same text (v. pp. 223—234), who observes (p. 233) that every man is to be a Phinehas to himself (cp. 2 Cor. vii. 11), and to mortify and kill his own sinful affections and lusts; and then the plague of God's wrath will cease.

Phinehas was a figure of Christ, the true Priest, who was consumed with zeal for God (John ii. 17. S. Hilar. in Ps. 118), and in a certain sense he is an example to all, that they should give no quarter to sin and to blasphemy against God. See Origen in Num. Hom. 20, ad fin. Especially in a spiritual sense is Phinehas, the Priest, an example to the Christian Priesthood. Fornication in Scripture is a figure of false Doctrine (see above on v. 1), and the duty of the Christian Priest is to drive away false doctrine; to destroy it "with the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God" (Eph. vi. 17). In the vigorous and eloquent language of Origen (Hom. 20),—"Tibi, qui a Christo redemptus es, et cui datus est gladius Spiritus, arripere hunc gladium; et si vides Israeliticum sensum cum Midianiticis scortantem mulieribus, id est, cum diabolicis se cogitationibus voluptantem, nolo parcas, nolo dissimules, sed statim percute, statim perime,—ipsam vulvam, ipsum peccandi fomitem deseca, ne ultra concipiat, ne ultra generet, et maledicta peccatorum soles Israelitica castra contaminet. Hoc si facias, sedabis iracundiam Domini, et securus venies ad judicii Diem: et ideò oremus ut

n Ex. 6. 25.

"the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand; ⁸ And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. So ^o the plague was stayed from the children of Israel. ⁹ And ^p those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

o Ps. 106. 30.

p Deut. 4. 3.
1 Cor. 10. 8.

q Ps. 106. 30.

¹⁰ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹¹ ^a Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous [†] for my sake among them, that I consumed not the children of Israel in ^r my jealousy. ¹² Wherefore say, ^s Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace: ¹³ And he shall have it, and ^t his seed after him, even the covenant of "an everlasting priesthood; because he was ^x zealous for his God, and ^y made an atonement for the children of Israel. ¹⁴ Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri, the son of Salu, a prince of a [†] chief house among the Simeonites. ¹⁵ And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cozbi, the daughter of ^z Zur; he was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

† Heb. with my zeal.
See 2 Cor. 11. 2.
r Ex. 20. 5.
Deut. 32. 16, 21.
1 Kings 14. 22.
Ps. 78. 53.
Ezek. 16. 38.
Zeph. 1. 18. & 3. 8.
s Mal. 2. 4, 5.
& 3. 1.
t See 1 Chron. 6. 4, &c.
u Ex. 40. 15.
x Acts 22. 3.
Rom. 10. 2.
y Heb. 2. 17.
† Heb. house of a father.
z ch. 31. 8. Josh. 13. 21.

inveniamus semper paratum istum gladium Spiritus, per quem exterminantur semina et conceptacula peccatorum, et propitius nobis fiat Deus per verum Phinees, Dominum Nostrum, JESUM CHRISTUM." How seasonable is such courageous language as this, in days of lukewarmness and apostasy!

8. the tent] Or, kubbah, the al-cove, from kabab, to hollow out (whence al-cove is derived), to vault over with an arch (Gesen. 720). It was not therefore an ordinary tent, but a fornex (whence the word fornication is derived: cp. Juvenal, iii. 156), and it is therefore rendered κἀμωσ by Sept., and lupanar by Vulg., and the definite article prefixed to it (the kubbah) seems to show that it was the alcove which had been constructed specially for these vile purposes.

— belly] Rather the μήτρα, Sept.; and Vulg., "in locis genitalibus," the instruments of sin.

9. that died—were twenty and four thousand] St. Paul says that there fell in one day three and twenty thousand (1 Cor. x. 8). Moses reckons all who died of the plague.

10. And the LORD spake] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and reaches to xxx. 1, and is called "Phinehas" by the Jews. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is 1 Kings xviii. 46—xix. 21, containing the history of Elijah at Horeb, and of the anointing of Elisha.

11—13. while he was zealous for my sake—I give unto him the covenant of an everlasting priesthood] As long as the Priesthood of Aaron shall endure, which was to be fulfilled and superseded by Him who remains a Priest for ever (see Heb. vii. 11—28), and so Phinehas was a type of Him of whom it is written, "The zeal of Thine house hath eaten Me up" (Ps. lxxix. 9. John ii. 17); "He was clad with zeal as with a cloke" (Isa. lix. 17).

Phinehas was blessed with a long life (see Judg. xx. 28), and though for some reason that is not known (some of the Rabbis say that it was because the Priest of his line did not interfere to prevent the sacrifice of Jephthah's daughter: see Judg. xi. 34—50, and Selden de Success. Pont. i. 2), the Priesthood was translated for a time from the line of Phinehas, and was conferred on Eli, who was of the line of Ithamar; yet this translation was only for a short interval, and the Priesthood was restored to the line of Phinehas by Solomon (see 1 Sam. xxii. 18. 1 Kings ii. 27, compared with 1 Sam. iv. 17), and the descendants of Phinehas were High Priests till the captivity (1 Chron. vi. 4), and after the return, Ezra was of his lineage (Ezra vii. 1. 5: cp. Selden de Success. Pontif. i. 2—5; Pfeiffer, p. 157).

There is a remarkable contrast between Phinehas and Eli in character and destiny. The zeal of Phinehas against harlotry, and the dishonour of God's name, is here commended and rewarded. Eli's sons made themselves vile by sins of harlotry at the door of the tabernacle (cp. above, v. 6), and he restrained them not (1 Sam. ii. 22; iii. 13), and therefore God pronounced the sentence of condemnation and degradation upon him and his family (1 Sam. ii. 30—36; iii. 12—14). One of Eli's sons was a Phinehas in name; but how different was his life and his end!

14. Zimri, the son of Salu] The name Zimri signifies celebrated. Literally, renowned in song (Gesen. 248); and Salu means lifted up, exalted.

— the Simeonites] Zimri was a prince of a chief house of the Simeonites, and he brought near the Midianitish woman unto his brethren (v. 6), in order that he might be guilty of sin in the place described in v. 8; it is therefore probable that his brethren the Simeonites were partners with him in sin; and certainly they connived at it; and fell victims to the plague which was sent as its punishment.

In accordance with this circumstance we find that the tribe of Simeon, which had numbered 59,300 men above twenty years of age, in the census of Sinai, more than thirty-eight years before, was diminished in the census taken soon after this sin and the plague consequent upon it, to 22,200: see below, xxvi. 1. 14. In perfect harmony with all this, it is observable that Moses in his farewell address and prophecy after these events, gives a blessing to all the tribes of Israel, except Simeon (Deut. xxxiii. Cp. Ainsworth, p. 67, and Blunt, p. 94).

There is a remarkable contrast between the two brethren, Simeon and Levi, who had been coupled together under a denunciation of woe in Jacob's prophecy (Gen. xlix. 5—7). Levi stands forth as an example of repentance, zeal, recovery, and consequent reward; but Simeon is presented to us as an example of defection and punishment.

Levi holds a high place in the blessings of Moses, uttered just before his death. Simeon is passed over in silence. (See Deut. xxxiii. 8.)

15. Cozbi, the daughter of Zur] Cozbi signifies lying, falsehood (Gesen., p. 389); and Zur signifies a stone, a rock (Gesen., p. 706).

Why are these names here recorded in Holy Scripture?

Balaam is brought before us in the New Testament as a representative of a false teacher (see Rev. ii. 14. 2 Pet. ii. 15. Jude 11), and as a figure of Antichrist.

False doctrine and worship are often described as harlotry in Holy Writ; and the corrupt Church, which is represented in the Apocalypse, is called the Harlot (see on Rev. xvii. 1. 5. 15).

The harlot, by whom Balaam is represented here as seducing Israel, is specified by name as Cozbi (a lie), the daughter of Zur (a rock).

She was a woman of the Midianites, who were descended from Abraham, and they had had a Jethro among them (Exod. ii. 15), and must have known God's dealings with Israel in Egypt and the wilderness; but they had fallen away from the faith of Abraham, and had lapsed into idolatry: see vv. 1—3.

The history of the sin and punishment of Cozbi, the daughter of Zur, is related with such minuteness by the sacred Historian, as to confirm the belief that it is not only a true history, but has also a spiritual meaning. It may therefore be submitted for the reader's consideration, whether (as Origen has suggested) this Cozbi, the daughter of Zur, may not be a figure of a corrupt Church? May she not perhaps foreshadow

¹⁶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁷ ^a Vex the Midianites, and smite them: ¹⁸ For they vex you with their ^b wives, wherewith they have beguiled you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, their sister, which was slain in the day of the plague for Peor's sake.

XXVI. ¹ And it came to pass after the plague, that the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying, ² ^a Take the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, ^b from twenty years old and upward, throughout their fathers' house, all that are able to go to war in Israel. ³ And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them ^c in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying, ⁴ Take the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward; as the LORD ^d commanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt.

⁵ ^e Reuben, the eldest son of Israel: the children of Reuben; Hanoch, of whom cometh the family of the Hanochites: of Pallu, the family of the Palluites: ⁶ Of Hezron, the family of the Hezronites: of Carmi, the family of the Carmites. ⁷ These are the families of the Reubenites: and they that were numbered of them were forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty. ⁸ And the sons of Pallu; Eliab. ⁹ And the sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram, which were ^f famous in the congregation, who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the LORD: ¹⁰ ^g And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah, when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty in her sin and punishment that particular Church, which, for many generations and in many parts of the world, seduces and has seduced God's people to spiritual harlotry? May she not perhaps be a type of the Church of Rome? The Church of Rome has fallen away from the pure faith of primitive Christianity, as the Midianites did from Abraham's faith; and she is not perhaps in the hands of that Antichristian spirit of Balaam, which covets worldly gain and temporal power; and which tempts God's people to swerve from God, by hiding the Scriptures from them, and allures them to commit the spiritual harlotry of creature-worship and of idolatry, and beguiles them by new and corrupt doctrines.

Is not also the Church of Rome like a spiritual Cozbi, the daughter of Zur, even in her name? She professes to be built upon a rock—the Pope, the so-called successor of St. Peter; whom she sets in opposition to Christ, the True Rock (Matt. xvi. 18); and thus she deceives many. Indeed this assertion of hers is her πρωτον ψευδος, her prime lie; on it her whole system is based; and by it she propagates error, and entices many to believe the lie (τῆ ψεῦδει, 2 Thess. ii. 11), and destroys souls.

Is it therefore altogether without some prophetic meaning that the Midianitish harlot's name is here given, Cozbi (a Lie), the daughter of Zur (a Rock)? May not a spiritual warning be conveyed to us by this name? And may not the punishment of the Midianitish harlot, together with the Israelite joined to her, by the zeal of Phinehas, a type of Christ, the Everlasting Priest (see vv. 11—13), be a lesson to all Preachers of the Gospel, that they be zealous in refuting the heresies of Rome "with the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God" (Eph. vi. 17); and be also a presignification of the divine judgment on the spiritual Harlot, and on those who join themselves to her in acts of spiritual fornication?

Perhaps also the name of her companion in sin is given not without reason. "He was a prince of a chief house in Israel;" and his name was Zimri, renowned, the son of Salu, an exalted one (see v. 14). And in the Apocalypse it is specially noted of the spiritual harlot, the Church of Rome, that the mighty and lofty ones of the earth—those who are renowned in this world—the kings of the earth (Rev. xvii. 2; xviii. 3, 9), commit fornication with her; and their punishment is foretold in the divine prophecy of the Apocalypse (Rev. xix. 19).

^{17.} Vex the Midianites] Cp. xxxi. 2. Rev. xviii. 6. The sin of the Midianites was greater, because they were the posterity of faithful Abraham, and, as such, ought to have feared and obeyed Abraham's God, and to have loved His people, their own kindred; and they had sufficient opportunities of knowing God and His works in Egypt and the Wilderness: see above, v. 15. They therefore represent in their sin and punishment a corrupt and apostate Church; and God's people have a message from Him against their wives and sins (Rev. xviii. 6).

CH. XXVI. 1. after the plague] This numbering therefore of the people has some relation to the loss of life by that judgment; and thus attention is called to the fact above noticed, with regard to the diminution of the number of the Simonites (see xxv. 14). It may also be inferred from this expression, that the deficiency, or want of increase in some other tribes, as compared with the former census taken at Mount Sinai more than thirty-eight years before (see above, i. 2), is to be accounted for by sins among them which subjected them to God's displeasure.

The decrease in some others, of whom no special sin is reported, may perhaps be assigned to their own courage in war—for example, against the Canaanites and the Midianites: it may be the decrease, not of sin, but of martyrdom (cp. note on iii. 39). Perhaps this may have been the case with the Ephraimites—the tribe of Joshua (see vv. 35—37).

— Eleazar] The priest, in the room of Aaron his father, who had numbered the people at Mount Sinai (Num. i. 3; xxvi. 64), and was now dead (xx. 26—29). Eleazar was afterwards associated with Joshua in dividing the land of Canaan among the tribes, for their inheritance (Josh. xiv. 1).

^{2.} from twenty years old] As in the former census (vv. 1, 3). — throughout their fathers' house] This list is to be compared with Gen. xvi. 8—27. See note there (v. 21).

^{3.} in the plains of Moab] Heb. Arboth Moab: see Gesen., p. 552; and above, xxii. 1; and below, v. 63.

^{5—7.} Reuben] had now decreased by 2770 (see i. 21). The Reubenites had been guilty of rebellion against Moses and Aaron, to which reference is made in vv. 9, 10.

h ch. 16. 38.
See 1 Cor. 10. 6.
2 Pet. 2. 6.
i Ex. 6. 24.
1 Chron. 6. 22.
k Gen. 46. 10.
Ex. 6. 15,
Jemuel.
1 1 Chron. 4. 24,
Jarib.
m Gen. 46. 10,
Zohar.

men: ^h and they became a sign. ¹¹ Notwithstanding ¹ the children of Korah died not.

¹² The sons of Simeon after their families: of ^k Nemuel, the family of the Nemuelites: of Jamin, the family of the Jaminites: of ¹ Jachin, the family of the Jachinites: ¹³ Of ^m Zerah, the family of the Zarhites: of Shaul, the family of the Shaulites. ¹⁴ These are the families of the Simeonites, twenty and two thousand and two hundred.

n Gen. 46. 16,
Ziphon.

¹⁵ The children of Gad after their families: of ⁿ Zephon, the family of the Zephonites: of Haggi, the family of the Haggites: of Shuni, the family of the Shunites: ¹⁶ Of ^{||} Ozni, the family of the Oznites: of Eri, the family of the Erites: ¹⁷ Of ^o Arod, the family of the Arodites: of Areli, the family of the Arelites.

|| Or, Ezbon,
Gen. 46. 16.
o Gen. 46. 16,
Arodi.

¹⁸ These are the families of the children of Gad according to those that were numbered of them, forty thousand and five hundred.

p Gen. 38. 2, & c.
& 46. 12.
q 1 Chron. 2. 3.

¹⁹ ^p The sons of Judah were Er and Onan: and Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. ²⁰ And ^q the sons of Judah after their families were; of Shelah, the family of the Shelanites: of Pharez, the family of the Pharezites: of Zerah, the family of the Zarhites. ²¹ And the sons of Pharez were; of Hezron, the family of the Hezronites: of Hamul, the family of the Hamulites. ²² These are the families of Judah according to those that were numbered of them, threescore and sixteen thousand and five hundred.

r Gen. 46. 13.
1 Chron. 7. 1.
|| Or, Phuvah.
|| Or, Job.

²³ ^r Of the sons of Issachar after their families: of Tola, the family of the Tolaites: of ^{||} Pua, the family of the Punites: ²⁴ Of ^{||} Jashub, the family of the Jashubites: of Shimron, the family of the Shimronites. ²⁵ These are the families of Issachar according to those that were numbered of them, threescore and four thousand and three hundred.

s Gen. 46. 14.

²⁶ ^s Of the sons of Zebulun after their families: of Sered, the family of the Sardites: of Elon, the family of the Elonites: of Jahleel, the family of the Jahleelites. ²⁷ These are the families of the Zebulunites according to those that were numbered of them, threescore thousand and five hundred.

t Gen. 45. 20.
u Josh. 17. 1.
1 Chron. 7. 14, 15.

²⁸ ^t The sons of Joseph after their families were Manasseh and Ephraim. ²⁹ Of the sons of Manasseh: of ^u Machir, the family of the Machirites: and Machir begat Gilead: of Gilead come the family of the Gileadites. ³⁰ These are the sons of Gilead: of ^x Jeezer, the family of the Jeezerites: of Helek, the family of the Helekites: ³¹ And of Asriel, the family of the Asrielites: and of Shechem, the family of the Shechemites: ³² And of Shemida, the family of the Shemidaites: and of Hephher, the family of the Hephherites. ³³ And ^v Zelophehad the son of

x Called, Abiezer,
Josh. 17. 2,
Judg. 6. 11, 24,
84.

y ch. 27. 1. & 36.
11.

10. a sign] Heb. nes, a banner, or ensign. See xxi. 8: cp. xvi. 40.

11. the children of Korah died not] Therefore God does not visit the sins of the fathers on the children, unless the children follow the fathers in sin (see on Exod. xx. 5). The children of Korah profited by the sign (v. 10), and mention is made of their posterity (1 Chron. vi. 22—38), and many Psalms are entitled, “To the sons of Korah” (see Ps. xlii.; xlv.; xlix.; lxxxiv.; lxxxv.; lxxxvii.; lxxxviii.).

12—14. Simeon] had decreased 37,100: for the probable cause of this, see on xxv. 14.

— Nemuel] The same as Jemuel in Gen. xlv. 10; Yod and Nun being often interchanged (Gesen.).

13. Zerah] Light, sunrise, the same as Zohar, in Gen. xlv. 10; which also signifies light.

15—18. Gad] had decreased 5150. We see therefore that all the three first-mentioned tribes, Reuben, Simeon, Gad, had decreased since the former census, more than thirty-eight years before. All these three tribes encamped near together on the south side of the Tabernacle (ii. 10), and were probably influenced by one another’s example (cp. 1 Cor. xv. 33).

16. Ozni] The same as Ezbon (Gen. xlv. 16).
On this decrease of population see below (v. 51).

19—22. Judah] had increased by 1900 (see i. 27). The other tribes, Issachar and Zebulun, which encamped next to Judah on the east side of the Tabernacle (ii. 2—9), increased also. “Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise” (Gen. xlix. 8). Observe therefore the contrast between Reuben (vv. 5—8), the firstborn, disinherited for his sin, and Judah (cp. 1 Chron. v. 1), the ancestor of Christ, the true firstborn, the “Lion of the tribe of Judah” (Rev. v. 5).

21. of Pharez] Judah had five sons, who were to be heads of families (cp. Gen. xxxviii. 3. 1 Chron. ii. 2—4), but two of them, Er and Onan, died childless (xxxviii. 7—10), and two of his grandchildren were taken in their stead, viz. Hezron and Hamul (see Gen. xlv. 12).

23—25. Issachar] under Judah’s standard, increased by 9900 (see i. 29).

24. Jashub] The same as Job in Gen. xlv. 13, having the same meaning; from the Arabic root, signifying to return.

26, 27. Zebulun] under Judah’s standard, increased 3100 (see i. 31).

28. Joseph] had increased in Manasseh by 20,500 (see i. 35), the greatest increase of any. Cp. Gen. xlix. 22, “Joseph is a fruitful bough.”

33. Zelophehad] See xxvii. 1; xxxvi. 11. Josh. xvii. 3.

Hepher had no sons, but daughters: and the names of the daughters of Zelophehad were Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah. ³⁴ These are the families of Manasseh, and those that were numbered of them, fifty and two thousand and seven hundred.

³⁵ These are the sons of Ephraim after their families: of Shuthelah, the family of the Shuthalhites: of ^z Becher, the family of the Bachrites: of Tahan, the family of the Tahanites. ³⁶ And these are the sons of Shuthelah: of Eran, the family of the Eranites. ³⁷ These are the families of the sons of Ephraim according to those that were numbered of them, thirty and two thousand and five hundred. These are the sons of Joseph after their families.

³⁸ ^a The sons of Benjamin after their families: of Bela, the family of the Belaites: of Ashbel, the family of the Ashbelites: of ^b Ahiram, the family of the Ahiramites: ³⁹ Of ^c Shupham, the family of the Shuphamites: of Hupham, the family of the Huphamites. ⁴⁰ And the sons of Bela were ^d Ard and Naaman: of Ard, the family of the Ardites: and of Naaman, the family of the Naamites. ⁴¹ These are the sons of Benjamin after their families: and they that were numbered of them were forty and five thousand and six hundred.

⁴² ^e These are the sons of Dan after their families: of || Shuham, the family of the Shuhamites. These are the families of Dan after their families. ⁴³ All the families of the Shuhamites, according to those that were numbered of them, were threescore and four thousand and four hundred.

⁴⁴ ^f Of the children of Asher after their families: of Jimna, the family of the Jinnites: of Jesui, the family of the Jesuites: of Beriah, the family of the Beriites. ⁴⁵ Of the sons of Beriah: of Heber, the family of the Heberites: of Malchiel, the family of the Malchielites. ⁴⁶ And the name of the daughter of Asher was Sarah. ⁴⁷ These are the families of the sons of Asher according to those that were numbered of them; who were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

⁴⁸ ^g Of the sons of Naphtali after their families: of Jahzeel, the family of the Jahzeelites: of Guni, the family of the Gunites: ⁴⁹ Of Jezer, the family of the Jezerites: of ^h Shillem, the family of the Shillemites. ⁵⁰ These are the families of Naphtali according to their families: and they that were numbered of them were forty and five thousand and four hundred.

⁵¹ ⁱ These were the numbered of the children of Israel, six hundred thousand and a thousand seven hundred and thirty.

^z 1 Chron. 7. 20.
Bered.

^a Gen. 46. 21.
1 Chron. 7. 6.
^b Gen. 46. 21,
Ehi.
1 Chron. 8. 1,
Aharah.
^c Gen. 46. 21,
Muphim and Huphim.
^d 1 Chron. 8. 3,
Addar.

^e Gen. 46. 23.
|| Or, Hushim.

^f Gen. 46. 17.
1 Chron. 7. 30.

^g Gen. 46. 24.
1 Chron. 7. 13.

^h 1 Chron. 7. 13.
Shallum.

ⁱ See ch. 1. 46.

35—37. Ephraim] had decreased by 8000 (see i. 33).

Manasseh had increased more than any of the tribes since the last census (v. 28), and Ephraim, his brother tribe, had decreased more than any, except Simeon and Naphtali. How remarkable therefore is the prophecy of Moses, that Ephraim should far excel Manasseh (see Deut. xxxiii. 17)! How can this be accounted for except by faith in Jacob's prophecy (Gen. xlviii. 20), notwithstanding the then present appearance of probabilities against its fulfilment; and by the illumination of the Holy Spirit which enabled Moses to foresee the future?

38—41. Benjamin] Had increased by 10,200 (see i. 37). Manasseh, Ephraim, and Benjamin encamped together on the east side of the Tabernacle (ii. 18—22).

40. Ard and Naaman] called sons of Benjamin, Gen. xlv. 21.

42, 43. Dan] had increased by 1700 (see i. 39).

44—47. Asher] had increased by 11,900 (see i. 41).

48—50. Naphtali] had decreased by 8000 (see ii. 43). These three last-named tribes, Dan, Asher, and Naphtali, encamped together on the north side of the Tabernacle (ii. 25—31).

51. These were the numbered of the children of Israel] They had decreased on the whole by 1820, since the census taken at Sinai more than thirty-eight years before (see ii. 32).

When the Israelites were suffering persecution in Egypt they "multiplied exceedingly" (Exod. i. 7. 20), but after their deliverance from Egypt they rebelled against God, and "He consumed their days in vanity and their years in trouble" (Ps. lxxviii. 33), and "because they thought scorn of that pleasant land" which He had promised them (Ps. cvi. 24), He condemned all those who had been numbered at Sinai, except Joshua, Caleb, and the Levites, to die off by degrees in the wilderness (see xiv. 22—34).

Here then is comfort and warning to the Church, and to every soul in it; comfort in time of affliction, and warning in days of prosperity: comfort, derived from a consideration of God's blessing to Israel when suffering persecution in Egypt; and warning, in the remembrance of the remarkable fact that the same nation, which had increased so rapidly in about 200 years in Egypt, and had grown from a small number to about two millions of souls, did not increase at all in the forty years of their wandering in the wilderness, but were fewer in number at the end of it, than they had been at the beginning. Here is a striking lesson to nations, that their temporal prosperity depends on obedience to God.

May we not also recognize here another proof of the k Josh. 11. 23. & 14. 1.

l ch. 33. 54.
† Heb. multiply his inheritance.
† Heb. diminish his inheritance.
m ch. 33. 54. & 34. 13.
J Josh. 11. 23. & 14. 2.

⁵² And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁵³ ^k Unto these the land shall be divided for an inheritance according to the number of names. ⁵⁴ ^l To many thou shalt † give the more inheritance, and to few thou shalt † give the less inheritance: to every one shall his inheritance be given according to those that were numbered of him. ⁵⁵ Notwithstanding the land shall be ^m divided by lot: according to the names of the tribes of their fathers they shall inherit. ⁵⁶ According to the lot shall the possession thereof be divided between many and few.

n Gen. 46. 11.
Ex. 6. 16, 17, 18, 19.
I Chron. 6. 1, 16.

⁵⁷ ⁿ And these are they that were numbered of the Levites after their families: of Gershon, the family of the Gershonites: of Kohath, the family of the Kohathites: of Merari, the family of the Merarites. ⁵⁸ These are the families of the Levites: the family of the Libnites, the family of the Hebronites, the family of the Mablites, the family of the Mushites, the family of the Korathites. And Kohath begat Amram. ⁵⁹ And the name of Amram's wife was ^o Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi in Egypt: and she bare unto Amram Aaron and Moses, and Miriam their sister. ⁶⁰ ^p And unto Aaron was born Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar. ⁶¹ And ^q Nadab and Abihu died, when they offered strange fire before the LORD. ⁶² ^r And those that were numbered of them were twenty and three thousand, all males from a month old and upward: ^s for they were not numbered among the children of Israel, because there was ^t no inheritance given them among the children of Israel.

o Ex. 2. 1, 2. & 6. 20.

p ch. 3. 2.

q Lev. 10. 1, 2. ch. 3. 4.
I Chron. 24. 2.
r See ch. 3. 39.

s ch. 1. 49.

t ch. 18. 20, 23, 24.
Deut. 10. 9.
Josh. 13. 14, 33. & 14. 3.

u ver. 3.

x ch. 1.
Deut. 2. 14, 15.

y ch. 14. 28, 29.
I Cor. 10. 5, 6.

z ch. 14. 30.

⁶³ These are they that were numbered by Moses and Eleazar the priest, who numbered the children of Israel ^u in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho. ⁶⁴ ^x But among these there was not a man of them whom Moses and Aaron the priest numbered, when they numbered the children of Israel in the wilderness of Sinai. ⁶⁵ For the LORD had said of them, They ^y shall surely die in the wilderness. And there was not left a man of them, ^z save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

a ch. 26. 33. & 36. 1, 11.
Josh. 17. 3.

XXVII. ¹ Then came the daughters of ^a Zelophehad, the son of Hephher, the veracity of the Pentateuch? Some modern critics, and some recent historians of the Jews, have alleged that Moses has greatly exaggerated the numbers of the Israelites at the time of the Exodus (see above, on Exod. xiv. 6).

If Moses had been disposed to exaggerate the numbers of the Israelites, is it likely that he would have informed us that their numbers actually decreased under his own leadership, during the forty years' march in the wilderness? The diminution of numbers in this case is a strong evidence that there is no exaggeration in the other.

⁵⁷. the Levites] increased by 1000 in the wilderness (see v. 62, compared with iii. 39).

⁵⁹. her mother] Not in the original. The Vulg., Onkslos, Syriac, Arabic, render the words thus, "Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, who (i. e., Jochebed) was born to him (Levi) in Egypt." Jarchi and Aben Ezra render it, "Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom his wife bare to Levi in Egypt." See on Exod. ii. 1; vi. 16. 20. For a similar ellipsis see I Chron. iv. 17.

⁶⁰. unto Aaron was born] Moses omits the names of his own sons, Gershon and Eliezer.

⁶⁴. not a man of them whom Moses and Aaron the priest numbered] A fulfilment of the prophecy in xiv. 29—33. Here is a remarkable proof of the divine origin of the Mosaic dispensation. Moses states in xiv. 30, that it was announced to the people at Kadesh-barnea about thirty-eight years before this census, that of the 600,000 souls, who had been numbered, from twenty years of age and upward, at Sinai, not one would be alive at the end of the wandering of forty years in the wilderness except two, whose names were then mentioned (xiv. 30).

This is now fulfilled. Who could have revealed it but God?

CH. XXVII. 1—4. Then came the daughters of Zelophehad] Zelophehad, a name which means a first breaking forth, i. e.

firstborn (Gesen. 711). He was the son of Hephher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh; and he had no sons, but daughters; see Josh. xvii. 1—4, which confirms the truth of this history.

This history follows naturally after what had been said at the close of the foregoing chapter. The men, who had been numbered more than thirty-eight years before, in the census at Sinai, died in the wilderness because they did not believe God's promise, that He would bring them into Canaan (see xiv. 22—35; xxvi. 65). But these women not only believed that God would bring the Israelites into Canaan, but that He would enable them to subdue it; and said, "Give unto us a possession among the brethren of our father." And Moses asks counsel of God, who approves their request, which afterwards received effect under Eleazar and Joshua (see Josh. xvii. 3, 4).

Like the faithful and loving Mary at Bethany, who anointed Christ for His burial, when some of His disciples murmured against her (Matt. xxvi. 8), and like the faithful women in the Gospel, who came to the Cross and Sepulchre of Christ (John xix. 25. Matt. xxvii. 55, 56. 61), when the disciples were afraid and had forsaken Him and fled (Matt. xxvi. 56. Mark xiv. 50), these women are an example of the power of God's grace, perfecting itself in human weakness, and choosing the "weak things of this world to confound the strong" (1 Cor. i. 27). And since the inheritance of Canaan was a figure of the heavenly possession, the answer of God in their case, like His divine declaration at Kadesh-barnea, that the "little ones" should enter into Canaan, from which the men of maturer age were excluded (xiv. 31), may be a prophetic intimation that in Christ Jesus the feeble and the simple things, which the strong and wise of this world despise, may be more pleasing to God than they are who despise them; and that in Christ Jesus there is "neither male nor female," but women are accepted no less than man, and son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of Manasseh the son of Joseph: and these are the names of his daughters; Mahlah, Noah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Tirzah. ² And they stood before Moses, and before Eleazar the priest, and before the princes and all the congregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying, ³ Our father ^b died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the LORD ^c in the company of Korah; but died in his own sin, and had no sons. ⁴ Why should the name of our father be [†] done away from among his family, because he hath no son? ^d Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.

b ch. 14. 35. & 26. 64, 65.
c ch. 16. 1, 2.

† Heb. diminished.
d Josh. 17. 4.

⁵ And Moses ^e brought their cause before the LORD. ⁶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ⁷ The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: 'thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them. ⁸ And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter. ⁹ And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren. ¹⁰ And if he have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren. ¹¹ And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his kinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel ^g a statute of judgment, as the LORD commanded Moses.

e Ex. 18. 15, 19
f ch. 36. 2.

¹² And the LORD said unto Moses, ^h Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel. ¹³ And when thou hast seen it, thou also ⁱ shalt be gathered unto thy people, as Aaron thy brother was gathered. ¹⁴ For ye ^k rebelled against my commandment in the desert of Zin, in the strife of the congregation, to sanctify me at the water before their eyes: that is the ^l water of Meribah in Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin.

h ch. 33. 47.
Deut. 3. 27, & 32. 49. & 34. 1.

i ch. 20. 24, 28. & 31. 2.
Deut. 10. 6.
k ch. 20. 12, 24.
Deut. 1. 37 & 32. 51.
Ps. 106. 32.
l Ex. 17. 7.

¹⁵ And Moses spake unto the LORD, saying, ¹⁶ Let the LORD, ^m the God of

m ch. 16. 22.
Heb. 12. 9.

are Abraham's seed in Him, and heirs according to the promise (Gal. iii. 28, 29). And these five virgin daughters of Zelophehad, praying for an inheritance in Canaan, are like the five wise Virgins ready to go in with the Divine Bridegroom to the Marriage (Matt. xxv. 1—10). S. Jerome in Mans. xlii. p. 604.

^{3.} died in his own sin] as others did in the wilderness; but he was not an instrument, as Korah was, in destroying others by bad example.

^{7.} thou shalt surely give them] Here, the pronoun them is in the masculine gender; the daughters of Zelophehad are treated as men (Chazkuni).

On the law here promulgated, see Selden de Successionibus, Lond. 1636, and Keil, Archæol. ii. § 142.

^{8.} unto his daughter] It seems to have been God's design in the Levitical dispensation to elevate woman from the degradation into which she had fallen, and to prepare her gradually for that state of dignity and grace to which she is now advanced in the Gospel by the Incarnation of the Son of God, the Seed of the woman, who has consecrated and beautified marriage, by making it a similitude of the union betwixt Himself and the Church (Eph. v. 25—32).

^{12.} the LORD said unto Moses] This command is introduced here in a striking manner after the promise of an inheritance in Canaan to the daughters of Zelophehad. Moses has just told us that women believed, and enter in (see vv. 1—4). The great Lawgiver himself next gives an account of his own disobedience, and relates that he was excluded from Canaan on that account. Is there not an evidence of humility, meekness, and truth, and of genuine magnanimity in this contrast? It is like the veracity of the Evangelists not disguising their own weakness at the Betrayal and Crucifixion of Christ, and recording the affectionate faithfulness and courage of the women, standing at the Cross and coming early to the Sepulchre. We may well revere and love such historians as write thus, and we may recognize the work of the Holy Spirit in their hearts and bearing fruit in their writings.

— mount Abarim] Literally, mountain of regions beyond (Gesen. 604). On this range was Nebo,—so called from nabaḥ to be lofty (see Gesen. 526), over against Jericho (Euseb.). Nebo is sometimes called a mountain of Abarim (Deut. xxxii. 49: cp. Num. xxxiii. 47); sometimes an eminence of Pisgah (Deut. iii. 27; xxxiv. 1—3). There Moses had a view of Canaan (cp. Deut. xxxii. 49; xxxiv. 1—3), and there he died (Deut. xxxiv. 5).

— see the land] Moses may see the land, but not enter it. This was the condition of the Law. It led men to "see the promises afar off, and to embrace them" (Heb. xi. 13), and it brought them to the borders of Canaan, but could not bring them into it; that was reserved for Joshua, the type of Jesus. "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ" (Gal. iii. 24). The Law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ (John i. 17).

^{13.} shalt be gathered unto thy people] A sentence of love. Therefore, though Moses was excluded from Canaan, the type of heaven, he was received into the antitype; and though he was not permitted to enter Canaan when alive, yet after his death he was brought into Canaan, to be with Christ in glory at the Transfiguration (Matt. xvii. 3).

^{14.} ye rebelled] See xx. 12. 24.

^{15.} And Moses spake unto the LORD] Another evidence of the magnanimity of Moses. Just before this, "the Lord said unto Moses, Get thee up unto this Mount Abarim," and God had

n Deut. 31. 2.
1 Sam. 8. 20. &
18. 13.
2 Chron. 1. 10.
o 1 Kings 22. 17.
Zech. 10. 2.
Matt. 9. 36.
Mark 6. 34.

p Gen. 41. 28.
Judg. 3. 10. &
11. 29.
1 Sam. 16. 13, 18.
q Deut. 34. 9.
r Deut. 31. 7.
s See ch. 11. 17, 28.
1 Sam. 10. 6, 9.
2 Kings 2. 15.
t Josh. 1. 16, 17.
u See Josh. 9. 14.
Judg. 1. 1. & 20.
18, 23, 26.
1 Sam. 23. 9. &
30. 7.
x Ex. 28. 30.
y Josh. 9. 14.
1 Sam. 22. 10, 13.
15.

z Deut. 3. 28. &
31. 7.

the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation, ¹⁷ ⁿ Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the LORD be not ^o as sheep which have no shepherd.

¹⁸ And the LORD said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man ^p in whom is the spirit, and ^q lay thine hand upon him; ¹⁹ And set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation; and ^r give him a charge in their sight. ²⁰ And ^s thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, that all the congregation of the children of Israel ^t may be obedient. ²¹ ^u And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask counsel for him ^x after the judgment of Urim before the LORD: ^y at his word shall they go out, and at his word they shall come in, both he, and all the children of Israel with him, even all the congregation.

²² And Moses did as the LORD commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation: ²³ And he laid his hands upon him, ^z and gave him a charge, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

XXVIII. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Command the children reminded him of the cause for which he was excluded from Canaan. And now Moses spake unto the Lord, and prayed Him to provide a successor to lead the people into Canaan.

Who (says Origen) was more competent to choose a leader than Moses was? yet he does not venture to do so, but prays to God to make the choice. Let the heads of Churches hence learn not to choose persons of their own family to be rulers in God's Church, but to refer the matter to God, that He may appoint them according to His own will (Origen, Hom. 22).

The thoughts of Moses are not for himself, but for the people and for God's glory. He cheerfully receives his own dismissal, and does not ask to name a successor of his own family or tribe, but prays to God that He will set a man over the congregation of the Lord, that they might not be as sheep without a shepherd (Theodoret, Qu. 47).

What resignation, disinterestedness, and truth are here!

The genuine work of the Law of Moses is beautifully displayed in this speech by Moses himself. It looks forward to the Gospel. It prays for the coming of Jesus; and God grants its prayer. It lays its hands on Jesus, and then departs in peace.

The death of Moses and the succession of Joshua presignified the continuance of the Law till Jesus came, by whom all are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the Law. Moses must die that Joshua may succeed (Acts xiii. 39). Bp. Pearson, p. 76: cp. Origen, Hom. 22. S. Irenaeus (Frag. p. 470, Grabe), and Augustine, Qu. 53, who observes, that Aaron died before Moses, because no legal sacrifices are continued in the Gospel, and that Moses was permitted to have a view of the land, because the Levitical Law had a more intimate connexion with the Gospel than the Levitical Priesthood had. Jesus Himself, our Great High Priest, was born under the Law, and kept the Law, and fulfilled it.

¹⁸. Take thee Joshua] Our Joshua was born under the Law (Gal. iv. 4), and fulfilled all righteousness (Matt. iii. 15).

— Joshua] Jesus, or Saviour: see on Exod. xvii. 13, 14; xxiv. 13. Num. xiii. 8. 16; and the Introduction below to the Book of Joshua.

— in whom is the spirit] Cp. Deut. xxxiv. 9. Thus Joshua was a figure of Him who was conceived by the Holy Ghost (Luke i. 35), and was anointed by the Spirit (Acts x. 38); and who sent the Spirit from heaven to abide for ever with His Church.

— lay thine hand upon him] Although it has just been said by God that "in him is the Spirit," and Joshua had a special promise of God's presence and help (see Deut. xxxi. 23), yet there is to be imposition of the hands of Moses upon Joshua.

Why was this?

In order that we may know that an outward mission, from those who have authority to send, is necessary, as well as an inward call: see Theodoret and Augustine, who says (Qu. 54), "Notandum est, quod cum jam haberet in seipso Spiritum Jesus Nave, jussus est tamen Moyses ei manus imponere, ne quisquam laqueo, qualibet præpollens gratiâ, sacramenta consecrationis audeat recusare." See also below, on Acts xiii. 1—3; and compare the case of Cornelius, who was baptized, although he had the Spirit (Acts x. 47). Even Christ Himself, though He was full of the Holy Ghost, yet did not glorify Himself to be made a High Priest; but had an outward, visible, and audible mission from God, and was anointed by the Holy Ghost descending upon Him: see Heb. v. 5.

²⁰. may be obedient] Literally, may hear; and so Joshua was a figure of Him of whom the voice from heaven said, "Hear ye Him" (Matt. xvii. 5. 2 Pet. i. 16, 17).

²¹. Urim] See on Exod. xxviii. 30.

— shall they go out] God here adopts the metaphor used by Moses, that of a shepherd (see v. 17), at whose command the sheep go out of the fold, and come in; and our blessed Lord Himself, the true Shepherd, the divine Joshua, takes up the words, and applies them to Himself in the Gospel, "I am the Good Shepherd." The Good Shepherd putteth forth His sheep, and leadeth them out, and goeth before them, and they follow Him, for they know His voice. He is the Door: "by Him if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture" (John x. 3—9).

The parallel will appear more striking to the reader if he will compare verses 17 and 21 in the Septuagint Version here, with the above-quoted passage of St. John's Gospel in the Greek original. Here is another example of the manner in which the Septuagint helps us to see the force of the words of our blessed Lord Himself illustrating and fixing the sense of the Old Testament: see above, Preface to Part I, p. xiv—xvi.

²³. he laid his hands upon him] See above, v. 18; and below, Deut. xxxi. 23.

CH. XXVIII. 2. Command the children of Israel] The following repetition of Laws concerning the annual festivals confirms the arguments already adduced (see on Num. xv. 2) to show that the Ceremonial Law, which had been delivered more than thirty-eight years before at Sinai, and which is referred to in this repetition (see v. 6), had been, in a great measure, in abeyance since the time of the sentence of exclusion from Canaan, which was pronounced on those who had been numbered at Sinai, and who incurred that sentence by their rebellion at Kadesh-barnea: see xiv. 29—35.

The elder generation of Israelites, to whom the Law had been originally given on Mount Sinai, was now dead (see xxvi. 64, 65); and the new generation was about to enter the Promised Land under Joshua, whose appointment to the leadership of Israel has just been described (xxvii. 22, 23).

Therefore the Law of Sacrifices, to be offered on the great annual festivals, is now promulgated anew.

In further confirmation also of the observations already made concerning the obligation to keep the weekly Sabbath in the wilderness (see xv. 32), as contrasted with the Passover, which was in abeyance, it may be observed that there is not any repetition here of the Law for the observance of the Sabbath, but only a specification of the sacrifices to be then offered. Nor is there any iteration here of the Law concerning the Red of Israel, and say unto them, My offering, and ^a my bread for my sacrifices made by fire, for [†] a sweet savour unto me, shall ye observe to offer unto me in their due season.

a Lev. 3. 11. & 21. 6, 8.
Mal. 1. 7, 12.
† Heb. a savour of my rest.

³ And thou shalt say unto them, ^b This is the offering made by fire which ye shall offer unto the LORD; two lambs of the first year without spot [†] day by day, for a continual burnt offering. ⁴ The one lamb shalt thou offer in the morning, and the other lamb shalt thou offer [†] at even; ⁵ And ^c a tenth part of an ephah of flour for a ^d meat offering, mingled with the fourth part of an ^e hin of beaten oil. ⁶ It is ^f a continual burnt offering, which was ordained in mount Sinai for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD. ⁷ And the drink offering thereof shall be the fourth part of an hin for the one lamb:

b Ex. 29. 38.
† Heb. in a day
† Heb. between the two evenings, Ex. 12. 6.
c Ex. 16. 36. ch. 15. 4.
d Lev. 2. 1.
e Ex. 29. 40. f Ex. 29. 42.
See Amos 5. 25.

in the holy place shalt thou cause the strong wine to be poured unto the LORD for a drink offering. ⁸ And the other lamb shalt thou offer at even: as the meat offering of the morning, and as the drink offering thereof, thou shalt offer it, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

g Ex. 29. 42.

⁹ And on the sabbath day two lambs of the first year without spot, and two tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, and the drink offering thereof: ¹⁰ This is ^h the burnt offering of every sabbath, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

h Ezek. 46. 4.

¹¹ And ⁱ in the beginnings of your months ye shall offer a burnt offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, seven lambs of the first year without spot; ¹² And ^k three tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, for one bullock; and two tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, for one ram; ¹³ And a several tenth deal of flour mingled with oil for a meat offering unto one lamb; for a burnt offering of a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD. ¹⁴ And their drink offerings shall be half an hin of wine unto a bullock, and the third part of an hin unto a ram, and a fourth part of an hin unto a lamb: this is the burnt offering of every month throughout the months of the year. ¹⁵ And ^l one kid of the goats for a sin offering unto the LORD shall be offered, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

i ch. 10. 10.
1 Sam. 20. 5.
1 Chron. 23. 31.
2 Chron. 2. 4.
Ezra 3. 5.
Neh. 10. 33.
Isa. 1. 13, 14.
Ezek. 45. 17. & 46. 6.
Hos. 2. 11.
Col. 2. 16.
k ch. 15. 4—12.

l 1 ver. 22.
ch. 15. 24.

¹⁶ ^m And in the fourteenth day of the first month is the passover of the LORD.

m Ex. 12. 6, 18.
Lev. 23. 5.
ch. 9. 3. Deut. 16. 1. Ezek. 45. 21.

Heifer. That was not in abeyance; indeed it had been instituted after the sentence of exclusion had been pronounced (see on xix. 1), and it was instituted as a provisional substitute for those sacrifices, which were then in abeyance: see notes above, xix. 2—22.

— My offering] Let no one suppose that what he offers is his own. “Nemo suum offert Deo, sed quod offert, Domini est, cui reddit quæ sua sunt” (Origen).

The offering, the power and will to offer, the offerer himself, all belong to God.

— my bread] that which was consumed by the fire on the Altar is called God’s bread (cp. Lev. iii. 11).

The holy Martyr, S. Ignatius, when his body was about to be ground like wheat by the teeth of lions in the Colosseum at Rome, speaks of himself as σῖτος Θεοῦ, corn of God: ἄπρος Χριστοῦ, bread of Christ (S. Ignat. ad Rom. 4).

^{3. continual burnt offering}] offered every morning and evening (cp. Exod. xxix. 42. Lev. i. 1—13).

^{4. The one lamb}] in the morning, the other in the evening; the continual burnt-offering, a figure of the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world (John i. 29. Cp. Rev. xiii. 8), offered once for all, εἰς τὸ διαρκές (Heb. vii. 3; x. 12. 14), to be in its effect “a continual burnt-offering,” inasmuch as the virtue of that one Sacrifice is ever applied, especially in the Holy Sacrament of His Body and Blood, to the cleansing of the soul, and to the impetration of pardon and grace from God to all penitent and faithful members of Christ.

— at even] See Exod. xxix. 38—42.

^{5. a tenth part}] that is, an omer (Exod. xvi. 36).

— flour] fine flour, of wheat (Exod. xxix. 2).

— fourth part of an hin] about a quart. Cp. Exod. xxix. 40. Lev. xiv. 10.

— beaten oil] beaten in a mortar and strained, so that it might be quite pure. Cp. Exod. xxvii. 20; xxix. 40. Lev. xxiv. 2.

^{6. which was ordained in mount Sinai}] Here is a reference to the first promulgation of the Ceremonial Law, which is now renewed, for the reason stated above on v. 2. Cp. Exod. xxix. 38—45.

^{9. on the sabbath day}] supposed to be already known and observed by this new generation of Israel (see xv. 32), although not accompanied with the sacrifices here prescribed.

— two lambs] besides those of the daily sacrifice. A precept by which it is declared that the worship due to God on every day should be enlarged on the weekly festival of the Church.

^{11. in the beginnings of your months}] These also were known by the blowing of trumpets, which could be easily continued in the wilderness (see x. 10), though not celebrated there with the sacrifices here commanded.

^{16. And in the fourteenth day of the first month is the passover of the LORD}] The Law of the Passover, which had been in abeyance for more than thirty-eight years (see on xiv. 2), is now promulgated afresh to the new generation of Israelites, who crossed the Jordan soon after this republication, and were then circumcised, and kept the Passover at Gilgal, immediately after that passage, and before the capture of Jericho: see below, on n Lev. 23. 6. ¹⁷ And in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast: seven days shall unleavened bread be eaten. ¹⁸ In the ^o first day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no manner of servile work therein: ¹⁹ But ye shall offer a sacrifice made by fire for a burnt offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, and seven lambs of the first year: ^p they shall be unto you without blemish: ²⁰ And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil: three tenth deals shall ye offer for a bullock, and two tenth deals for a ram; ²¹ A several tenth deal shalt thou offer for every lamb, throughout the seven lambs: ^q And ²² one goat for a sin offering, to make an atonement for you. ²³ Ye shall offer these beside the burnt offering in the morning, which is for a continual burnt offering. ²⁴ After this manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven days, the meat of the sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: it shall be offered beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering. ^r Ex. 12. 16. & 13. 6. Lev. 23. 8. ²⁵ And ^r on the seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work. ^s Ex. 23. 16. & 34. 22. Lev. 23. 10, 15. Deut. 16. 10. Acts 2. 1. ²⁶ Also ^s in the day of the firstfruits, when ye bring a new meat offering unto the LORD, after your weeks be out, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work: ²⁷ But ye shall offer the burnt offering for a sweet savour unto the LORD; ^t two young bullocks, one ram, seven lambs of the first year; ²⁸ And their meat offering of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals unto one bullock, two tenth deals unto one ram, ²⁹ A several tenth deal unto one lamb, throughout the seven lambs; ³⁰ And one kid of the goats, to make an atonement for you. ³¹ Ye shall offer them beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, (^u they shall be unto you without blemish) and their drink offerings.

XXIX. ^a And in the seventh month, on the first day of the month, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work: ^a it is a day of blowing the trumpets unto you. ² And ye shall offer a burnt offering for a sweet savour unto the LORD; one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year without blemish: ³ And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals for a bullock, and two tenth deals for a ram, ⁴ And one tenth deal for one lamb, throughout the seven lambs: ⁵ And one kid of the goats for a sin offering, to make an atonement for you: ⁶ Beside ^b the burnt offering of the month, and his meat offering, and ^c the daily burnt offering, and his meat offering, and their drink offerings, ^d according unto their manner, for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

^e Lev. 16. 20. & 23. 27. ^f Ps. 35. 13. Isa. 58. 5. ⁷ And ^e ye shall have on the tenth day of this seventh month an holy convocation; and ye shall ^f afflict your souls: ye shall not do any work therein: ⁸ But ye shall offer a burnt offering unto the LORD for a sweet savour; one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year; ^g they shall be unto you without blemish: ⁹ And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals to a bullock, and two tenth deals to one ram, ¹⁰ A several tenth deal for one lamb, throughout the seven lambs: ¹¹ One kid of Josh. v. 10. On the ceremonial of the Passover now reinforced, see Exod. xii. 3—49.

26. after your weeks] that is, on the Feast of Weeks, or Pentecost: see Exod. xxiii. 16; xxxiv. 22. Lev. xxiii. 15—21.

CH. XXIX. 1. in the seventh month] Tisri: see Lev. xxiii. 24.

— blowing the trumpets] See Num. x. 10; and Lev. xxiii. 24.

The sacrifices to be offered on this festival, and on the Great Day of Atonement, had been in abeyance in the wilderness, and are therefore prescribed afresh to this new generation of Israelites.

2. burnt offering] See Lev. i. 2—13.

3. meat offering] See Lev. ii. 1, 2.

5. sin offering] See Lev. iv. 1—12.

7. tenth day] the Day of Atonement: see Lev. xvi.; xxiii. 27.

the goats for a sin offering; beside ^h the sin offering of atonement, and the h Lev. 16. 3, 5. continual burnt offering, and the meat offering of it, and their drink offerings.

¹² And ⁱ on the fifteenth day of the seventh month ye shall have an holy i Lev. 23. 34.
Deut. 16. 13.
Ezek. 45. 25. convocation; ye shall do no servile work, and ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days: ¹³ And ^k ye shall offer a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by k Ezra 3. 4. fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; thirteen young bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year; they shall be without blemish: ¹⁴ And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals unto every bullock of the thirteen bullocks, two tenth deals to each ram of the two rams, ¹⁵ And a several tenth deal to each lamb of the fourteen lambs: ¹⁶ And one kid of the goats for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

¹⁷ And on the second day ye shall offer twelve young bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without spot: ¹⁸ And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, ¹ after the manner: ¹⁹ And one kid of the goats for i ver. 3, 4, 9, 10.
ch. 15. 12. & 28.
7, 14. a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and the meat offering thereof, and their drink offerings.

²⁰ And on the third day eleven bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish; ²¹ And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, ^m after the manner: ²² And one goat for a sin offering; beside the m ver. 18. continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

²³ And on the fourth day ten bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish: ²⁴ Their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner: ²⁵ And one kid of the goats for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

²⁶ And on the fifth day nine bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without spot: ²⁷ And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner: ²⁸ And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

²⁹ And on the sixth day eight bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish: ³⁰ And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner: ³¹ And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

³² And on the seventh day seven bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish: ³³ And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner: ³⁴ And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

2. the fifteenth day] or Feast of Tabernacles: see Lev. xxiii. 34—36.

17. twelve young bullocks] In each of the successive days of this feast there is a diminution of one bullock; and on the eighth, or last day, which was the great day of the Feast, the bullocks and rams were reduced to one.

Perhaps this was a pre-signification of the gradual evanescence of the Law, till the time of its absorption in the Gospel (Heb. viii. 13). This was fitly betokened in the Feast of Tabernacles; for that Feast has its consummation in the Incarnation of the Son of God, who came from heaven and tabernacled in us (see John i. 14); and took away all the Levitical sacrifices by the one sacrifice of Himself, offered once for all for the sins of the whole world; and who has gone up on high, and will come again in glory to receive His people to Himself; and who will tabernacle for ever with His saints in Heaven: see the notes above, on Lev. xxiii. 34, and below on John vii. 2, and ibid. p. 308, and on Rev. vii. 15, p. 199; xxi. 3, p. 271.

n Lev. 23. 36.

³⁵ On the eighth day ye shall have a ⁿsolemn assembly: ye shall do no servile work therein: ³⁶ But ye shall offer a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: one bullock, one ram, seven lambs of the first year without blemish: ³⁷ Their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullock, for the ram, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner: ³⁸ And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

|| Or, offer.

o Lev. 23. 2.
1 Chron. 23. 31.
2 Chron. 31. 3.
Ezra 3. 5.
Neh. 10. 33.
Isa. 1. 14.
p Lev. 7. 11, 16.
& 22. 21, 25.

³⁹ These things ye shall || do unto the LORD in your ^oset feasts, beside your ^pvows, and your freewill offerings, for your burnt offerings, and for your meat offerings, and for your drink offerings, and for your peace offerings. ⁴⁰ And Moses told the children of Israel according to all that the LORD commanded Moses.

a ch. 1. 4, 16. &
7. 2.

XXX. ¹ And Moses spake unto ^athe heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

b Lev. 27. 2.
Deut. 23. 21.
Jud. 11. 30, 35.
Eccles. 5. 4.
c Lev. 5. 4.
Matt. 14. 9.
Acts 23. 14.
† Heb. profane,
Ps. 55. 20.
d Job 22. 27.
Ps. 22. 25. & 50.
14. & 66. 13, 14.
& 116. 14, 18.
Nah. 1. 15.

² ^bIf a man vow a vow unto the LORD, or ^cswear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not †break his word, he shall ^ddo according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

³ If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth; ⁴ And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand. ⁵ But if her father disallow her in the day that he heareth; not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul, shall stand: and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

35. On the eighth day] on the last day, one bullock, one ram, one goat for a sin-offering. The sacrifices gradually converge to One sacrifice—a type of the sacrifice of Christ; and are consummated on the eighth day; the day of His Resurrection and Glory after His earthly week of labour, and seventh-day Sabbath of the grave.

On the eighth day Christ arose from the dead; and by His Resurrection it was proclaimed that His sacrifice on the Cross had been accepted by God, and that we are justified and accepted in Him: see on Matt. xxvii. 52. Luke xxiv. 1. Rom. iv. 25. Rev. xvii. 10, 11.

36. seven lambs] Seven is a sacred number, the number of completion and of rest (see on Rev. xi. 15—19, p. 220. 2 Pet. ii. 5).

In Christ, the Lamb of God, we have rest, and are perfected in Him: rest from sin, rest in the grave, rest in heaven, and eternal rest in God.

39. vows] See Lev. vii. 16.

— peace offerings] See Lev. iii. 1.

CH. XXX. 1. And Moses spake] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law as read in the Synagogues, and reaches to xxxii. 42. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Jer. i. 1 to ii. 2, which ends with the words, “Thus saith the Lord, I remember thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals, when thou wentest after Me in a land that was not sown;” and contains these words, “I will utter My judgments against them who have forsaken Me, and have burned incense unto other gods” (i. 16); and this serves as a commentary on the sin of the Israelites in their double harlotry with Midian, as related in this portion of the Pentateuch.

2. If a man vow a vow unto the LORD—he shall not break his word] All Israel had made a Vow of faithfulness to God at Sinai. God had joined Himself to Israel as a Church, at the Exodus, in holy espousals; and the promulgation of the Law was the ratification of the contract of marriage between them, and He had given them Canaan as a dowry—the type of heaven. Hence appears the enormity of the sin of which they had just been guilty, when, on the very eve of entering Canaan, “they joined themselves to Baal-peor,” in the plains of Moab, on the borders of the Promised Land (xxv. 1—18). Hence appeared also the reasonableness of severe punishment for that heinous sin, to satisfy the Divine justice, and to prevent the repetition of similar enormities in Canaan, where they would be exposed to like temptations.

“If a man vow a vow” A vow is properly a promise made to God, and is an act of worship, and therefore (if it be a good vow) cannot be relaxed; it cannot be made to any creature. Such a vow is an act of idolatry: if contrary to piety, justice, and morals, it is void; and the validity of it depends, as this chapter declares, on the condition of the person who makes it, at the time of making it. See Bp. Sanderson, iv. 243—361, where this subject of Vows is treated with great clearness, accuracy, and fulness, and v. 60—74, “the case of a rash vow.” See also Bp. Andrewes, v. 75—81. 90—92; and consider the case of the promise of Herod (Matt. xiv. 7—9), and the vow of the “more than forty” who conspired against St. Paul (Acts xxiii. 13).

— all that proceedeth out of his mouth] Provided it be “in justice, judgment, and truth” (Jer. iv. 2). See Art. XXXIX., and Bp. Sanderson, as quoted above.

3. If a woman] The Israelites now being at the end of their pilgrimage, might be disposed in a devout spirit of thankfulness to make voluntary vows of offerings to God of the substance they might hereafter possess in the Land of Promise; and this would probably be the case with the Women of Israel, who would have suffered much in the wanderings, and would be most affected with joy and enthusiasm on their entrance into the Land of Promise, after their weary journey in the wilderness. God therefore here prescribes rules for the regulation of vows.

— being in her father's house in her youth] And therefore under her father's power. In a like spirit St. Paul treats the question of the marriage of virgins; which he supposes to be a matter in which the father's authority will have the principal control. See below, on 1 Cor. vii. 36—40.

On the question whether vows of celibacy are sanctioned by Holy Scripture, see below, on 1 Tim. iv. 3; and Bp. Sanderson, as quoted above.

4. then all her vows shall stand] Provided they be in rebus licitis. See v. 2.

5. the LORD shall forgive her] Her sin in making, and not performing, the vow.

⁶ And if she had at all an husband, when † she vowed, or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul; ⁷ And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard it: then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand. ⁸ But if her husband ^e disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her. † Heb. her vows were upon her, Ps. 56. 12.

⁹ But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her. e Gen. 3. 16.

¹⁰ And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath; ¹¹ And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her, and disallowed her not: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand. ¹² But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void; and the LORD shall forgive her. ¹³ Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void. ¹⁴ But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day; then he establisheth all her vows, or all her bonds, which are upon her: he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her in the day that he heard them. ¹⁵ But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard them; then he shall bear her iniquity.

¹⁶ These are the statutes, which the LORD commanded Moses, between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, being yet in her youth in her father's house.

XXXI. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² ^a Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou ^b be gathered unto thy people. a ch. 25. 17. b ch. 27. 13.

6. if she had at all an husband] Literally, if being she were to a husband (that is, married, and under his control), and her vows were upon her, or an utterance out of her lips.

9. divorced] Literally, expelled. Heb. gerushah, from garash, to thrust out (Gesen. 181).

13. to afflict the soul] By fasting and abstinence. See Lev. xvi. 29. Compare St. Paul's precepts, 1 Cor. vii. 4, 5.

CH. XXXI. 2. Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites] God will not have men to avenge themselves (Rom. xii. 19) of their own mere motion; but He, to whom vengeance belongeth (Deut. xxxii. 35), sometimes makes men to be the executioners of His vengeance—called “the vengeance of the Lord” (v. 3), by special commission, as here.

Why did He give this command against the Midianites, rather than against the Moabites? Balaam was king of Moab, and hired Balak to curse Israel, and Balaam gave counsel to Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed to idols, and to commit fornication (Rev. ii. 14). Why then are the Midianites to be punished?

(1) The reason seems to be, that the Midianites were more guilty, as having greater spiritual advantages than the Moabites. The Midianites were descendants of Abraham: they had a Jethro among them as a Priest; their privileges were greater, and their sin therefore was more heinous.

(2) It is specially noted that the woman was a Midianitish woman, a woman “of a chief house of Midian,” who was guilty of that impious outrage which was punished by Phinehas. See on xxv. 6—15.

(3) Even after that act of retribution, and after the plague in which 24,000 Israelites had fallen, for their sin, the Midianites continued to vex Israel with their wiles (xxv. 18).

(4) It seems that Balak, the king of Moab, dismissed Balaam in anger (xxiv. 10. 25), and that though Balaam afterwards gave the counsel to Balak which has just been mentioned, yet we do not afterwards find Balaam among the Moabites, but among the Midianites; and God says of the Midianitish women that these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to sin against the Lord in the matter of Baal peor (v. 16), and Balaam was slain among the kings of Midian (v. 8). Cp. Josephus, iv. 6, 7.

The punishment therefore of the Midianites for tempting others to harlotry and idolatry represents the divine vengeance which is in store for all who have known the truth, and fall away from it, whether in faith or practice, and who seduce others to error and sin, whether in doctrine or in practice.

The history of this warfare against the Midianites has been abused by some as an occasion for objections against God's goodness and justice, and against the divine origin and veracity of the Mosaic history. Some reply to these allegations may be seen in Dr. Kitto's Bible Illustrations, ii. pp. 232—238. Dr. McCaul, Examination of Colenso's Difficulties, p. 153; and Mr. B. B. Rogers, Mosaic Records, p. 199; and an eloquent volume, entitled “Anti-Colenso,” pp. 149, 151, Lond. 1863. The question at issue was “whether an obscene and debasing idolatry should undermine the foundations of human society; or should the divine retribution interpose to stay the plague and to deliver the people of God; and to warn them by a terrible judgment, of which they themselves were to be executioners, against falling from the God of purity to a foul and loathsome idolatry.”

Could the critic “look into the heart of idolatry with the introspection of the divine mind; could he see however dimly its alienation from the life of God; could he realize its grovelling tendency and debasing results; he would surely wonder less that it should be required to expiate its sin in this baptism of blood. Sin must be destroyed at any cost; and we may be sure that God, who loves man, but hates his sin, shows His love to mankind by punishing that sin which draws him farthest from God.” Cp. Ibid., p. 154.

There is another aspect in which this war against Midian may be contemplated. As the author just quoted justly observes: “The battle of the Christian warrior to-day is in all essentials the same fight that had to be fought by ancient Israel. Idolatry, or self-worship, though in a manner hidden

³ And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the LORD of Midian. ⁴ † Of every tribe a thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war. ⁵ So there were delivered out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war. ⁶ And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and ^c the trumpets to blow in his hand. ⁷ And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and ^d they slew all the ^e males. ⁸ And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, ^f Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: ^g Balaam also the son of Beor they † Heb. A thousand of a tribe, a thousand of a tribe.

c ch. 10. 9.

d Dent. 20. 13.
Judg. 21. 11.
1 Sam. 27. 9.
1 Kings 11. 15.

16.
e See Judg. 6. 1, 2, 33. f Josh. 13. 21. g Josh. 13. 22.

from ourselves and from our fellows, is the radical evil of our fallen nature.” We have to wage a war against idol-worship in its various forms. This is our war against Midian. It is a war against our own selves: against the right hand and the right eye which offends (Matt. v. 29), and hinders us in our path to heaven. Every affection is to be cut off by whatever painful sacrifice, if it draws us from God. Only the virgin affections, those holier Midianites, which have not been tainted by sin, are to be preserved and cherished and consecrated to God. The war on Midian is the battle of God's people against His foes and theirs, from the beginning to the end of the world. We may not shrink from it. We have been enlisted at our baptism as soldiers of Christ, under His banner, that we may fight manfully and valiantly in this warfare; and the chapter before us is, as it were, a plan of the spiritual campaign on which we must march, equipped in “the whole armour of God,” to do battle against the enemies of our soul, and to gain the crown of victory from the hand of Christ. Indeed we should read this history to little profit, if we did not see here a solemn exhortation and warning from God, on the sin of entertaining within ourselves any evil desires which draw our hearts from God to spiritual harlotry, and on the duty of waging war against evil appetites, and false doctrines, and idolatrous forms of worship, contrary to the will and word of God. These are the Midianites against which we must take up arms, and which we must exterminate, if we are to inherit the heavenly Canaan.

This is the view in which this history was read by the ancient Christian Expositors. See the noble homily of Origen, who says: “Nobis in hoc mundo pugna est adversus Midianitas; adversum vitia carnis nostræ, adversus contrarias potestates. Spectat nos Angelorum Chorus, Virtutum Cœlestium pia erga nos pendet expectatio, quando vel quomodo de hoc prælio revertamur, et quid unusquisque nostrum manubiarum reportet. Quis nobis enarrare potest quæ sint purificationes, quæ præparentur Paulo vel Petro, vel aliis eorum similibus, qui tanta spolia, tot triumphos, ceperunt!” (Origen, Hom. 25).

See also on v. 17, and what is said below in the Introduction to the Book of Joshua, on the extermination of the Canaanites.

— afterward shall thou be gathered unto thy people] To give a solemn warning against idolatry shall be thy last act before thy death: so the beloved disciple St. John ends his Epistle, “Little children, keep yourselves from idols” (1 John v. 21).

The history of the Jewish Church after Moses, and of the Christian Church after St. John, even to the present hour, shows the need of those warnings. They were uttered in love.

3. Arm some of yourselves—and avenge the Lord of Midian] It is the LORD's cause, as well as that of Israel. His Law has been broken; His people have been seduced to idolatry and fornication by descendants of Abraham; His honour has been outraged, and a signal judgment is necessary to show the idolaters that the Lord is stronger than Baal-peor; and to deliver them (if they would be rescued) from the bondage of idolatry, and to save their souls, and those of the Israelites, from destruction, and to prevent the recurrence of a similar sin, and the infliction of severer punishment.

Therefore this punishment was inflicted in a signal and marvellous manner, which proved it to be not from man, but from God: see v. 49; and compare the similar judgment against the same people, the Midianites, marked in Judges (vii. 2—25).

They who cavil at this history, profanely and impiously blasphemous God.

The prophet Isaiah teaches us to regard these judgments against Midian as prophetic of the victory of Christ, and the triumph of the Gospel, over all the idols of this world. “The zeal of the Lord of Hosts shall perform this:” see Isa. ix. 4—7.

6. Phinehas] who had been distinguished by his zeal in the cause of God against Baal-peor (xxv. 7—15). He now goes forth, not to fight, but to bear the holy instruments (cp. xiv. 44), to blow the trumpet (x. 9), and perhaps to conduct the Ark of God to the battle. Why should we be surprised that Phinehas, the Priest, is sent to the war, since Christ, our High Priest, leads us forth to the battle against the World, the Flesh, and the Devil? S. Cyril de Ador. iv. p. 121.

7. as the LORD commanded Moses] See v. 2. It is carefully to be noted that they engaged in this war, and waged it, by express command of God.

Surely this ought to be enough to stop the mouths of those who condemn Moses and the Israelites here. “Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God?” (Rom. ix. 20.)

— all the males] that were in the battle. Cp. Dent. xx. 13; and see below, v. 17.

8. the kings of Midian] Called also princes of Sihon (Josh. xiii. 21, 22), because they had been made tributary by him, and had not been warned by his fate (Num. xxi. 23, 24).

— that were slain] who fell in battle.

— Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword] among them (viz., the kings of Midian) which were slain by them: see Josh. xiii. 21, 22, where Balaam is called “the soothsayer.”

A solemn and awful end of his eventful history.

Among the prophecies of Holy Scripture few are more remarkable for spirituality of conception and sublimity of expression than those which had been uttered by Balaam (xxiii. xxiv.). His prophetic eye had seen Christ; he had hailed the Star of Jacob from afar, and discoursed concerning Him in strains of heavenly beauty (xxiv. 17). As we know also from the Prophet Micah, Balaam had theoretically a clear perception of moral truth, as distinguished from its counterfeit. “The Lord hath showed thee,” he exclaims, “O man, what is good; and what doth He require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?” (Micah vi. 8.) Besides, he contemplated with serenity the circumstances of Death and Judgment; and with devout aspirations he breathed forth that pious prayer, “Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his” (Num. xxiii. 10). And yet, though he could thus prophesy, preach, and pray, he was in the hands of the Tempter. He endeavoured to reconcile God and Mammon; to make a compromise of his duty to the one with his love for the other; he sought for indulgences in sin, and glossed it over with a specious disguise, and so deceived himself, and was given over by God to a reprobate mind, and to the fearful penalty of spiritual blindness. This inspired prophet, this eloquent preacher, this framer of holy prayers, became a wretched victim and degraded drudge of the devil; he was the prey of the most sordid sin; he loved the wages of unrighteousness, and is consigned to eternal infamy by the Spirit of God in the New Testament (2 Pet. ii. 15. Jude 11). With the same lips that had just proclaimed Christ, he could persuade Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel; and with Satanic subtlety he could tempt the Israelites, whom he had blessed as God's people, to sin against Him by a double harlotry; and so this Prophet and Preacher became like an Evil Spirit, the cause of death to thousands; and he who had seen and hailed the brightness of the Star of Jacob became like a wandering star, to which is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever (Jude 13).

How striking is the contrast between Balaam at Piggah and Moses there! Both had visions of Christ; the one “loved the wages of unrighteousness,” the other preferred “the reproach of Christ as the true riches” (Heb. xi. 24—26). How different their end!

Here is a solemn warning, that spiritual gifts apart from spiritual graces will not save a man; but may even be a snare, and tempt him and others to his and their destruction; and that the slew with the sword. ⁹ And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods. ¹⁰ And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire. ¹¹ And ^h they took all the ^h Deut. 20. 14. spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts. ¹² And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

¹³ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, went forth to meet them without the camp. ¹⁴ And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the † battle. ¹⁵ And Moses said unto them, Have † Heb. host of war. ye saved ⁱ all the women alive? ¹⁶ Behold, ^k these caused the children of Israel, through the ^l counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD ⁱ See Deut. 20. 14. in the matter of Peor, and ^m there was a plague among the congregation of the LORD. ¹⁷ Now therefore ⁿ kill every male among the little ones, and kill ¹ Sam. 15. 3. ^k ch. 25. 2. ^l ch. 24. 14. ² Pet. 2. 15. ^{Rev.} 2. 14. ^m ch. 25. 9. ⁿ Judg. 21. 11.

health of the human intellect depends on soundness of faith and on purity of heart, and on prayer for God's grace, and on devotion to His service.

A bad man, in some happier moments, when standing like Balaam in the field of Zophim, and on the top of Pisgah, and when the Spirit of the Lord is upon him, "falling into a trance with his eyes open" (Num. xxvi. 4. 6), may breathe words fraught with heavenly meaning; but if he fail to stir up the grace that is in him, and if he seek worldly gain and earthly aggrandizement, then his commission is revoked by God, his powers become diseased, God's grace is withdrawn, and a withering blight seizes on his soul. He was once a Prophet of the Lord, but now he offers unhallowed fire to false deities; he mounts to the high places of Baal (xxii. 41), and to the heights of Peor (xxiii. 28), and seeks for sorceries and enchantments; and if he is forced to utter the truth, he struggles against it, and tempts Israel to sin. Balaam, the seducer of Israel, had bright gleams of divine truth, and power, and beauty, on the specular heights of Pisgah; but he died in the lowlands of shame and infamy, on the plains of Moab. But Moses, the true prophet of the Lord, and the faithful leader of His people, died upon Pisgah (Deut. xxxiv. 1. 5), the hill of holy contemplation,—he continued true to the end, his eye was never dim, and he breathed forth his last breath in the full sight of heavenly glory, and with the waking sense of heavenly bliss.

^{9.} took all the women of Midian captives] The word all is not in the original; nor in Sept., Vulg., Arabic, Syriac, or Onkelos. This is necessary to be observed, lest we suppose the captivity to have been greater than it was. The temptation consequent on this act is noted by Moses in v. 15.

^{10.} they burnt all their cities—with fire] The punishment in store for spiritual fornication; as revealed in the Apocalypse. See the destruction described (Rev. xvii. 16; xviii. 8); of which this war against Midian may be regarded as a type.

^{13.} Moses, and Eleazar the priest,—went forth to meet them] Melchizedek, the king and priest, went forth to meet Abraham (Gen. xiv. 18—20. Heb. vii. 1), and Christ, the great King and Priest, will come forth to meet those who have fought the good fight of faith against the spiritual harlotry of false doctrine and corrupt worship.

^{15.} Have ye saved all the women alive?] Moses here uses a different word for women from that employed in v. 9 (cp. Gesen., p. 84 with p. 564). His anger was not kindled because they saved all the women (for he ordered some to be spared), but all of a particular class (v. 17).

^{16.} Behold, these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel (or word) of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD in the matter of Peor] These allowed themselves to be instruments in the hands of Balaam against God and His people, in the matter of Peor; that is, because of Peor (Sept.), or, in the sin of Peor (Vulg.), the lewd deity of Moab.

It is well known that women devoted themselves by an impure and accursed kind of consecration to the lustful service of the unclean deities, of which Baal-peor was one. See Jonathan on Num. xxvi. 1. Creutzer, Symbol. ii. 411. 976. Winer, R. W. B. i. 120). He had his priestesses of impurity, as well as his priests of idolatry. Probably these women had dedicated themselves to this unchaste worship; certainly they were initiated in it, and had tempted others to join it; and in their punishment we see the divine judgment against those who seduce others to acts of harlotry; and also against those who corrupt the true faith and worship of God, and allure others to unite with them in the spiritual fornication of heresy or idolatry (cp. 2 Cor. xi. 2. Rev. xvii. 1).

"These things," concerning Midian, "are ensamples of us," as St. Paul teaches (1 Cor. x. 6. 8), and they were "written for our admonition and for our learning" (1 Cor. x. 11. Rom. xv. 4), and it would be a narrow view of this history to regard it apart from a view of the baneful consequences, not only of fornication, but also of false doctrine and worship, and as a warning against them. When the heinousness of those sins is considered, and their bitter fruits in this world and the next are taken into consideration, then—but not till then—will a proper estimate be formed of the true character of this signal example, in the divine retribution against the whoredom and idolatry of Midian. Let the victims and votaries of the corruptions of Rome consider this.

The war of Israel against the Midianites is, as the ancient Christian Expositors observe, a figure of that moral and spiritual warfare, which the Christian Church, and every Christian man, is bound to wage against the ghostly enemies of God and of His people. "Moses," says S. Cyril, "was wroth with the officers of the host (τοῖς ἐπισκόποις τῆς δυνάμεως) for sparing those who had been leaders in idolatry and fornication, and who would propagate an evil seed; so God is angry with ἐπίσκοποι, the Bishops of His Church, if they give any quarter to those errors in doctrine which are sins of spiritual fornication, and which may cause the eternal perdition of souls." See S. Cyril de Ador. iv. pp. 122, 123. The warfare against Midian represents also in a figure that irreconcilable warfare which we ourselves ought to carry on against the Midianites within ourselves; that is, against our own carnal lusts and appetites, and against every thing, however dear,—even a right hand and a right eye,—which would seduce us from God. The anger of God against Midian shows, in striking ensamples, His wrath against the works of the flesh, and ought to constrain us to give them no quarter, but to crucify our flesh with all its sinful affections which war against the soul. When we have conquered these spiritual Midianites within us—then (says Origen) Christ will dwell in us, and be our king. See Origen, Hom. 25, and note above on v. 2.

^{17.} kill every male among the little ones] Little ones; Heb. taph, those who are tender and young (Gesen. 324); an awful declaration.

Some have supposed that this was not a divine command, but one of Moses, acting independently of God. But it seems to be related here as in accordance with the divine will. God knows what is best for children; and as He suffered the innocents at Bethlehem to be killed, and took them as martyrs to Himself (see Matt. ii. 16), so doubtless there was mercy for these little ones of Midian. To them life might have been worse than death; and certainly death was life, for God took them before † Heb. a male. every woman that hath known man by lying with † him. ¹⁸ But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves. ¹⁹ And °do ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and ^p whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day. ²⁰ And purify all your raiment, and all † that is made of skins, and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

† Heb instrument, or, vessel of skins.

²¹ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses; ²² Only the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead, ²³ Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean: nevertheless it shall be purified ^a with the water of separation: and all that abideth not the fire ye shall make go through the water. ²⁴ ^r And ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

²⁵ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁶ Take the sum of the prey † that was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation: ²⁷ And ^s divide the prey into two parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation: ²⁸ And levy a tribute unto the LORD of the men of war which went out to battle: ^t one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep: ²⁹ Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for an heave offering of the LORD. ³⁰ And of the children of Israel's half, thou shalt take ^u one portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the || flocks, of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, ^x which keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD. ³¹ And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.

† Heb. of the captivity.

^s Josh. 22. 8. ¹ Sam. 30. 24.

^t See ver. 30. 47. & ch. 18. 26.

^u See ver. 42—47.

|| Or, goats.

^x ch. 3. 7, 8, 25, 31, 36. & 18. 3, 4.

³² And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, they knew sin. And their death was a warning to their parents and to others. They who had abused their bodies to sin were deprived of the fruit of their bodies. If it should be said, that the children of innocent parents perished with the children of guilty ones; then it must be answered that this is the common condition of their life; and here is a proof of the great and consolatory truths, that there is a Judgment to come, and a future Resurrection, and Life Everlasting; and then all inequalities of this short life will be corrected, and every one will be justly dealt with.

— every woman] See vv. 15, 16. How distinguished? See S. Cyprian ad Pompon.; S. Ambrose ad Syricium; S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, i. 18; A Lapide here; Pfeiffer, Dub. 190, on Judg. xxi. 12. That many were spared appears from the power of the Midianites in the days of Gideon. Judg. vi. 5. The word “all” must therefore, in vv. 7, 17, be limited by certain conditions, and means all in the cities which God delivered into their hands. It must be remembered also that God repressed on several occasions the aggressive spirit of Israel against the Moabites (Deut. ii. 9) and also against the Ammonites (Deut. ii. 32—37).

18. keep alive for yourselves] That by religious nurture among you they may be recovered to the truth.

The history of Ruth, the Moabitess, opens to us a refreshing view of the healthful and blessed consequences of this command. The warning as well as the mercy worked together for good. We do not know how many women were slain, but we know that 32,000 were spared (see v. 35).

19. seven days] according to the law (xix. 19).

— purify] with the water of separation (xix. 11—18).

22. brass] copper.

23. it shall be purified] A remarkable proof of the corruption and contagion of sin.

— all that abideth not the fire] This purification of the metallic treasures of Midian by fire is figurative of the moral process by which all earthly things are to be purified by the Christian, in order that they may be made acceptable to God.

For a spiritual interpretation of this history in this sense, see S. Cyril de Adorat. iv. p. 124, who observes that we ourselves were once like vessels of Midian; vessels in the house of our ghostly enemy (Matt. xii. 29), but we have been taken out of his hands, and have been sanctified and dedicated to God by Christ.

26. Take the sum of the prey] This command of God to Moses and Eleazar, to take the sum of the prey and distribute it, is regarded by ancient Christian interpreters as a foreshadowing of that judicial act which Christ, who unites the office of Moses and Eleazar (King and Priest), will perform, by delegation from God, at the great Day, when all the conflicts and battles of this world will be over, and He will reward His faithful soldiers according to their valour in His service (S. Cyril, ibid. p. 127. Origen, Hom. 25).

27. divide the prey into two parts] One part for the 12,000 who went to the war; the other part for the rest of the people (cp. 1 Sam. xxx. 24).

28. levy] Literally, heave, as a thank-offering.

— one soul of five hundred] The warriors gave the five-hundredth part; the congregation gave the fiftieth part (v. 30); but the warriors had offered their lives to the Lord.

29. unto Eleazar the priest] The priests had the five-hundredth part; but the Levites had the fiftieth (v. 30), being more in number than the priests; cp. xviii. 21—28, where it is ordered that the Levites should have the tithe, and the Priests the tithe's tithe. “Heave-offering” here is any offering.

32. the booty] 675,000 sheep; 72,000 oxen; 61,000 asses; 32,000 women.

It is a very large spoil, and won without the loss of a single man (r. 49). By this victory God encouraged Israel to go was six hundred thousand and seventy thousand and five thousand sheep, ³³ And threescore and twelve thousand beeves, ³⁴ And threescore and one thousand asses, ³⁵ And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him.

³⁶ And the half, which was the portion of them that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred sheep: ³⁷ And the LORD's tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen. ³⁸ And the beeves were thirty and six thousand; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and twelve. ³⁹ And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and one. ⁴⁰ And the persons were sixteen thousand; of which the LORD's tribute was thirty and two persons. ⁴¹ And Moses gave the tribute, which was the LORD's heave offering, unto Eleazar the priest, ' as the LORD commanded y See ch. 18. 8, 19.
 Moses.

⁴² And of the children of Israel's half, which Moses divided from the men that warred, ⁴³ (Now the half that pertained unto the congregation was three hundred thousand and thirty thousand and seven thousand and five hundred sheep, ⁴⁴ And thirty and six thousand beeves, ⁴⁵ And thirty thousand asses and five hundred, ⁴⁶ And sixteen thousand persons;) ⁴⁷ Even ^z of the children of z ver. 30.
 Israel's half, Moses took one portion of fifty, both of man and of beast, and gave them unto the Levites, which kept the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

⁴⁸ And the officers which were over thousands of the host, the captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds, came near unto Moses: ⁴⁹ And they said unto Moses, Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war which are under our † charge, and there lacketh not one man of us. ⁵⁰ We have therefore † Heb. hand.
 brought an oblation for the LORD, what every man hath † gotten, of jewels of † Heb. found.
 gold, chains, and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets, ^a to make an atonement a Ex. 30. 12, 16.
 for our souls before the LORD. ⁵¹ And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of them, even all wrought jewels. ⁵² And all the gold of the † offering that † Heb. heave offering.
 they offered up to the LORD, of the captains of thousands, and of the captains Deut. 20. 14.
 of hundreds, was sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels. ⁵³ (For ^b the men of war had taken spoil, every man for himself.) ⁵⁴ And Moses and b Ex. 30. 16.
 Eleazar the priest took the gold of the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and brought it into the tabernacle of the congregation, ^c for a memorial for the children of Israel before the LORD.

XXXII. ¹ Now the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of ^a Jazer, and the land a ch. 21. 32.
Josh. 13. 25.
2 Sam. 24. 5.

in and conquer Canaan, and assured them of success, if they would obey Him.

^{40.} the LORD's tribute was thirty and two persons] "How," it has been asked, "is it possible to quote the Bible as condemning slavery, if the Lord's tribute of slaves was thirty-two persons?" These thirty-two persons were not enslaved, but they were rescued from a debasing slavery, and were incorporated in God's family, and were dedicated to His service, which is perfect freedom.

^{50.} We have therefore brought an oblation] The Israelites do not boast of their own courage, or ascribe this great victory to themselves, but they give all the glory to God, and offer Him an oblation for it.

— chains, and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets] arm-rings (2 Sam. i. 10), bracelets (Gen. xxiv. 22), seal-rings, earrings (Ezek. xvi. 11, 12), balls of gold, probably strung in a necklace (Exod. xxxv. 22). Gesen. 386.

^{54.} And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of the captains] See above on v. 26. So Christ, who unites in Himself the functions of Moses and Eleazar, that is, of King and Priest, will receive the gold of His captains. That is, He will graciously acknowledge the faithful services of all His soldiers, who have fought the Lord's battles on earth, against all His spiritual enemies, and will lay them up for a memorial in the presence of the Lord. He will acknowledge and remember them, and will assign them their reward at the great Day, in His heavenly Tabernacle. See S. Cyril de Ador. iv. 131: ep. Origin, quoted above on v. 2.

CH. XXXII. 1. the children of Reuben and the children of Gad] Who encamped side by side in the journey through the wilderness (see x. 14). It was natural that having been so long neighbours in travel they should wish to be neighbours in habitation (ep. Blunt, p. 85).

— a very great multitude of cattle] Partly from the spoil mentioned in the foregoing chapter (v. 32).

of Gilead, that, behold, the place was a place for cattle; ² The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses, and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying, ³ Ataroth, and Dibon, and Jazer, and ^b Nimrah, and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and ^c Shebam, and Nebo, and ^d Beon, ⁴ Even the country ^e which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle: ⁵ Wherefore, said they, if we have found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and bring us not over Jordan.

⁶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall ye sit here? ⁷ And wherefore †discourage ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them? ⁸ Thus did your fathers, †when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea ^g to see the land. ⁹ For ^h when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them. ¹⁰ ⁱ And the LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying, ¹¹ Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, ^k from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob; because ^l they have not †wholly followed me: ¹² Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun: ^m for they have wholly followed the LORD. ¹³ And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them ⁿ wander in the wilderness forty years, until ^o all the generation, that had done evil in the sight of the LORD, was consumed. ¹⁴ And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, an increase of sinful men, to augment yet the ^p fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel. ¹⁵ For if ye ^q turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness; and ye shall destroy all this people.

¹⁶ And they came near unto him, and said, We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones: ¹⁷ But ^r we ourselves will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities because of the inhabitants of the land. ¹⁸ ^s We will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance. ¹⁹ For we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; ^t because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

²⁰ And ^u Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed b ver. 36, Beth-nimrah.

c ver. 38, Shibmah.
d ver. 38, Baal-meon.
e ch. 21. 24, 34.

† Heb. break.
f ch. 13. 3, 26.

g Deut. 1. 22.
h ch. 13. 24, 31.
Deut. 1. 24, 28.

i ch. 14. 11, 21.
Deut. 1. 34
k ch. 14. 28, 29.
Deut. 1. 35.

l ch. 14. 24, 30.
† Heb. fulfilled after me.

m ch. 14. 24.
Deut. 1. 36.
Josh. 14. 8, 9.
n ch. 14. 33, 34, 35.
o ch. 26. 64, 65.

p Deut. 1. 34.

q Deut. 30. 17.
Josh. 22. 16, 18.
2 Chron. 7. 19. & 15. 2.

r Josh. 4. 12, 13.

s Josh. 22. 4.

t ver. 33.
Josh. 12. 1.
& 13. 8.

u Deut. 3. 18.
Josh. 1. 14. & 4.
12, 13.

— Gilead] The region intersected by the Jabbok (Deut. iii. 10): the southern part is called Belka, and the northern is Jebel Adschlun, and is still famous for its cattle (Burckh., Rauwer). On the beauty of Jebel Adschlun, rich in timber trees and green pastures, see Keil, p. 352.

5. let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession] They were enchanted with the sight of it, as Lot was with the sight of the vale of the Jordan; but their choice was a disastrous one, for they were the first of the tribes to be carried away captive. They fell into the idolatry of the neighbouring nations, notwithstanding the signal judgment related in the last chapter, and were therefore punished for their sins (2 Kings xv. 29. 1 Chron. v. 25, 26).

12. the Kenezite] A family of the tribe of Judah (see on Josh. xiv. 6).

19. on yonder side Jordan] The Hebrew, me-ber hay-garden, is used to signify either the west or east side of Jordan, as was natural when the people were as yet unsettled; but to prevent confusion arising therefrom, the latter sense is defined by an addition, toward the sunrise.

20—33. And Moses said] The circumstances here recorded are very remarkable.

(1) The tribe of Reuben, the tribe of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh, desire of Moses an inheritance on the eastern side of Jordan.

(2) They afterwards passed over Jordan, and helped their brethren, the other nine and a half tribes, to conquer the country and to obtain their inheritance on the western side.

(3) They left their "little ones, their wives, and their flocks" on the eastern side of Jordan, and passed over with the rest (Josh. iv. 12).

(4) After the conquest of Canaan they returned to the east of Jordan, and were settled there by Joshua in the land which Moses had given them (v. 33). Deut. iii. 12—17; xxix. 8. Josh. i. 12—15.

The history of the Exodus of the Israelites, and of their wanderings, and of their final settlement, under Joshua, is figurative of the history of the Christian Church. Therefore, probably, these circumstances, which are recorded with so much minuteness, and are several times repeated in Scripture, were not without a typical significance.

before the LORD to war, ²¹ And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him, ²² And ^x the land be subdued before the LORD: then afterward ^y ye shall return, and be guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and ^z this land shall be your possession before the LORD. ²³ But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure ^a your sin will find you out. ²⁴ ^b Build you cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

x Deut. 3 20.
Josh. 11. 23. &
18. 1.
y Josh. 22. 4.
z Deut. 3. 12, 15,
16, 18.
Josh. 1. 15. &
13. 8, 32. & 22.
4, 9.
a Gen. 4. 7. &
14. 16.
Isa 59. 12.
b ver. 16, 34, &c.

²⁵ And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth. ²⁶ ^c Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead: ²⁷ ^d But thy servants will pass over, every man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith. ²⁸ So ^e concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel: ²⁹ And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle, before the LORD, and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession: ³⁰ But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan. ³¹ And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do. ³² We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be ours.

c Josh. 1. 14.
d Josh. 4. 12.
e Josh. 1. 13.

³³ And ^f Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh the son of Joseph, ^g the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

f Deut. 3. 12—17.
& 29. 8.
g Deut. 12. 6. &
13. 8. & 22. 4.
h ch. 21. 24, 33,
35.

³⁴ And the children of Gad built ^h Dibon, and Ataroth, and ⁱ Aroer, ³⁵ And Atroth, Shophan, and ^k Jaazer, and Jogbehah, ³⁶ And ^l Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, ^m fenced cities: and folds for sheep.

h ch. 33. 45, 46.
i Deut. 2. 36.
k ver. 1, 3, Jaazer.
l ver. 3, Nimrah.
m ver. 24.

Origen has dwelt on this point in his homilies on Joshua (Hom. 3). Moses (he observes) is the representative of the Old Dispensation: Joshua is the type of Jesus and of the Gospel.

It is remarkable, that the tribes who were settled on the east of Jordan, viz., Reuben, Gad, Manasseh, were all firstborn children. They have their inheritance given them by Moses; not in Canaan itself, but on the east of Jordan. But they take part with their brethren, the other tribes, and assist them to settle under Joshua in Canaan, while they leave their weaker members on the east side of Jordan.

Thus they represent the faithful of the elder Dispensation, co-operating with the Christian Church, fighting under Jesus for its inheritance; and the division of one of the tribes, Manasseh, into two parts, one on one side of Jordan, the other on the other, marks the connexion of those two elements of the Church; the blending together of the two Dispensations of the Law and the Gospel into one.

The Two tribes, Reuben and Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, had their inheritance designated for them by Moses, but they were settled in it eventually by Joshua, after fighting under his banner. There was no salvation for the elder Dispensation by the Law of Moses, but by faith in Jesus.

We who live now, and the Israel of old, are like soldiers ranged side by side in one spiritual Army of the same Church militant, under the banner of the Cross.

Moses represents the Law. They who lived under the Law had the promise of an inheritance from him. But they did not enter upon that inheritance, under the Law, but waited till the true Joshua should bestow it in the Gospel. This is analogous to what the Apostle says to the Hebrews: "The Law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did" (Heb. vii. 19); and again, speaking of the Hebrew Fathers, he says, "These all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" (Heb. xi. 39, 40). They received an assignment from Moses, and they fought under Joshua; and how do the old fathers fight on our side? The ancient fathers, who are fallen asleep (says Origen), help us with their prayers; and they and we shall enter together into our heavenly inheritance, under the true Joshua—Jesus Christ" (see Origen in Jesu Nave, Hom. 16).

Another ancient Christian writer thus speaks: "The two tribes and a half, who received an inheritance by the ministry of Moses, were typical of the Jews; they who receive an inheritance by Joshua are figurative of the Gentiles. The Jews are the firstborn; and are represented by Reuben, Gad, and Manasseh, all of whom were firstborn children of their mothers. But these passed over Jordan armed, and fought; for those who believed in Christ among the Jews (e.g., the Apostles), have been ministerial to the salvation of the Gentiles" (Theodore in Josuam, Qu. 16).

34. Dibon] A little distance north of the Arnon (cp. Josh. xiii. 9, 16), probably now called Diban (Rauner). Keil, p. 288.

— Ataroth] Perhaps on Jebel Attarus, between El Yergal and Makaur, the ancient Machærus (Seetzen).

— Aroer] Not the Aroer before Rabba (Josh. xiii. 25), but Aroer in the vale of Arnon (Deut. ii. 36; iii. 12), now called Arrayr (Burekh., Keil, 356).

35. Atroth, Shophan] Rather, Atroth-Shophan, distinct from that in v. 34.

n ch. 21. 27.

o Isa. 46. 1.
p ch. 22. 41.
q See ver. 3.
Ex. 23. 13.Josh. 23. 7.
† Heb. they called by num's the names of the cities.r Gen. 50. 23.
s Deut. 3. 12, 13,
15.Josh. 13. 31. &
17. 1.

t Deut. 3. 14.

Josh. 13. 20.

1 Chron. 2. 21, 22,
23.

u Judg. 10. 4.

1 Kings 4. 13.

³⁷ And the children of Reuben ^a built Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim, ³⁸ And ^o Nebo, and ^p Baal-meon, (^a their names being changed,) and Shibmah:
and † gave other names unto the cities which they builded.

³⁹ And the children of ^r Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it. ⁴⁰ And Moses ^s gave Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein. ⁴¹ And ^t Jair the son of Manasseh went and took the small towns thereof, and called them ^u Havoth-jair. ⁴² And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

XXXIII. ¹ These are the journeys of the children of Israel, which went

37. Heshbon] The former residence of King Sihon (xxi. 26. Josh. xiii. 17), in the middle point between the Arnon and Jabbok, over against Jericho, about twenty miles from the Jordan (Seetzen, Burckh., Robinson, Rawner).

— Elealeh] Half an hour north of Heshbon, now El-aal; that is, the height, from which is a fine view of the region of the Belka (Burckh.).

— Kirjathaim] Perhaps at El Teym, south-west of Medeba (Keil).

38. Nebo] See xxvii. 12; xxxiii. 47.

— Baal-meon] See Josh. xiii. 17. Some suppose it to have been at Maain, an hour south-west of Teim, and an hour N. of Habbis; and N.E. of Jebel Attarus; nine miles S. of Heshbon. So Rosenm., Rawner, Knobel, Seetzen. But Burckhardt places it at Myan, three-quarters of an hour S.E. of Heshbon; and so Keil, p. 357.

— Their names being changed] Literally, changed (Heb. musabboth, Hophal participle, plural, feminine, from sabab, to change) as to their name, probably on account of the idolatrous worship connected with them (Jarchi). “Bel boweth down, Nebo stoopeth” (Isa. xlvi. 1; and see Gesen. 526, who connects Nebo with the planet Mercury). From Nebo were named many Chaldean and Assyrian kings and nobles, Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan, &c. See Gesen., pp. 526, 527.

The new names of these cities have not been preserved.

39. went] had gone.

— Gilead] now Jebel Adschlun (cp. Deut. iii. 13).

40. Machir] Called from Manasseh's firstborn, Machir, whose sons were brought up upon Joseph's knees (Gen. i. 23).

41. Jair the son of Manasseh] Jair, the son (i. e., the descendant) of Manasseh, was son of Segub, son of Hezron, son of Judah, by the father's side; and a descendant of Machir, the son of Manasseh, by his mother's side (1 Chron. ii. 21, 22).

— Havoth-jair] Heb. Chavoth-jair, that is, families or possessions of Jair; plural from chavah, life (Eve), the place where a person lives, and the property on which he lives (Gesen. 264). Jair was the grandson of a daughter of Machir, the son of Manasseh. His father Segub was the son of Hezron, of the tribe of Judah, who married a daughter of Manasseh (1 Chron. ii. 21), and so Jair, or his father Segub, had passed into the tribe of Manasseh, perhaps on account of the dowry received with his wife.

Another Jair, of the tribe of Manasseh, who was judge of Israel, had thirty cities in the land of Gilead, which were also called Havoth-jair (see Judg. x. 3, 4).

CH. XXXIII.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law as read in the Synagogues, and reaches to the end of Numbers. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Jer. ii. 4—28; iii. 4; and iv. 1, 2; where the Prophet recounts God's goodness to Israel in the Exodus, and in the journey through the wilderness, and Israel's unthankfulness (see Jer. ii. 5—7).

1. These are the journeys] Literally, the removings, the breakings up. The Hebrew word massa here used is properly a breaking up, or plucking up, from nasa, to pluck up, to pluck out the stakes of a tent, for the moving of a camp (Isa. xxx. 20: cp. Gen. xxxv. 16; xxxvii. 17. Exod. xii. 37. Num. x. 18. Gesen. 490. 553). The Sept. renders it by σθαυολ; the word ἀπαρσεί is given by Jerome; and Vulg. has “mansiones.”

In reading this chapter, it is to be borne in mind, that the design of the Historian is here to set down a list of the halting-places where the Tabernacle was set up, and where the people encamped and sojourned for a time, without any reference to the consideration whether any thing of historical importance occurred there. Cp. above on xxi. 11. The journeys here specified, which bring the people of Israel from Egypt to the borders of Canaan, are forty-two in number.

The holy Evangelist St. Matthew remarks that the number of generations from Abraham, the father of the faithful, unto Christ, the Promised Seed, is three times fourteen, equal to forty-two (see Matt. i. 17).

The stations which led the literal Israel, Abraham's seed, through the wilderness to the Promised Land, the figure of that heavenly Canaan to which the Church comes in Christ, were forty-two. “Per has currit verus Hebraeus, qui de terra transire festinat ad cælum” (S. Jerome). The stations which lead the spiritual Israel through the wilderness of this world to the heavenly Canaan, into which they are brought by Christ, are forty-two. See Origen, Hom. 27, who had already remarked the analogy.

It is observable also, that the Woman in the Apocalypse, who represents the Church Militant on earth, is described as being in the wilderness three years and a half, i. e., forty-two months (see Rev. xii. 6. 14). This period, forty-two months, or 1260 days, or three years and a half, is often presented to us in Scripture as a period of trial and suffering leading on to rest and victory like that of Canaan. See below on Rev. xi. 19, p. 221.

It is probable that this was the duration of the ministry of the Son of God, who sums up all faithful Israelites in Himself, and brings them to their everlasting rest.

We know from St. Paul, that the history of the journeyings of the Israelites in the wilderness, is figurative of our history (see 1 Cor. x. 6. 11. Heb. iii. 1—19; iv. 1—11). It is typical of the pilgrimage of the Church in this world to the heavenly Canaan. It is therefore full of warning, instruction, and encouragement to us. And the analogies above mentioned may serve to confirm the belief, that there is a harmony, not as yet fully understood, between the history of the ancient Church in the wilderness, and the history of the Christian Church in the world; and that all the goings-in and goings-out of the Church in both Dispensations are under the eye of one and the same Divine Lawgiver and Leader, who brings all the faithful of every age into one body in Christ, and to eternal rest and glory in Him; and also, that even in the details of the places specified in this chapter, there may be foreshadowings of events in the progress of the Christian Church through this world's wilderness, from her spiritual Egypt to her everlasting Inheritance.

This persuasion dictated some of the observations of the ancient Fathers of the Church on these stations; especially the homily of Origen on this subject (Hom. 27 in Numeros), and the Epistle of S. Jerome to a Christian Lady, Fabiola, “On the forty-two stations in the wilderness” (Epist. 127), and Bede, Qu. in Exod. 22, 23, and in Num. 16; which are well entitled to the reader's attention: see above, on Exod. xii. 37; xv. 25. 27.

Concerning these stations, it is to be borne in mind that those specified

(1) in vv. 5—15, are the stations of the Ancient Hebrew Church in its march from EGYPT to SINAI.

(2) in vv. 16—19, are probably the stations in the march from SINAI to KADESH, for the first time; whence the spies were sent, and the people were condemned to wander thirty-eight years in the wilderness (see Num. xiii. and xiv.).

(3) in vv. 19—36, are the stations between KADESH, for the first time, and KADESH for the second time; and they represent a period of about thirty-seven years.

(4) in vv. 37—49, between KADESH and the plains of MOAB, are those of the last year of the wandering (cp. Deut. x. 6).

It appears that the Israelites went twice southward in the Arabah; first in their journey from Kadesh down to the Ælanitic gulf (Ezion-geber) of the Red Sea; the second time, after the return to Kadesh, down a part of the Arabah to Mount Hor (Mosera), where Aaron died.

forth out of the land of Egypt with their armies under the hand of Moses and Aaron. ² And Moses wrote their goings out according to their journeys by the commandment of the LORD: and these are their journeys according to their goings out.

³ And they ^a departed from Rameses in ^b the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month; on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out ^c with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians. ⁴ For the Egyptians buried all their firstborn, ^d which the LORD had smitten among them: ^e upon their gods also the LORD executed judgments. ^{5 f} And the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth. ⁶ And they departed from ^g Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness. ⁷ And ^h they removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baal-zephon: and they pitched before Migdol. ⁸ And they departed

a Ex. 12. 37.
b Ex. 12. 2. &
13. 4.
c Ex. 14. 8.
d Ex. 12. 29.
e Ex. 12. 12. &
18. 11.
f Isa. 19. 1.
g Rev. 12. 8.
h Ex. 12. 37.
i Ex. 13. 20.
j Ex. 14. 2, 9.

The following Table represents the journeying of the Israelites, and their Stations between Egypt and Canaan:—

1st Period; from EGYPT to SINAI.
From Rameses, EXOD. xii. 37; Succoth, xii. 37. Etham, xiii. 20. Pi-hahiroth, xiv. 2. Passage through the Red Sea, xiv. 22, and three days' march into the desert of Shur, xv. 22. Marah, xv. 23. Elim, xv. 27.	From Rameses, NUM. xxxiii. 3. Succoth, v. 5. Etham, v. 6. Pi-hahiroth, v. 7. Passage through the Red Sea, and three days' march in the desert of Etham, v. 8. Marah, v. 8. Elim, v. 9. Encampment by the Red Sea, v. 10. Desert of Sin, v. 11. Dophkah, v. 12. Alush, v. 13. Rephidim, v. 14. Desert of Sinai, v. 15.
Desert of Sin, xvi. 1. Rephidim, xvii. 1. Desert of Sinai, xix. 1, in the third month of the first year of the wanderings.

2nd Period; from SINAI to KADESH, the first time, when the spies were sent by Moses into Canaan.

NUM. x.—xx. From the Desert of Sinai on the 20th day of the second month of the second year of the wanderings, x. 11. Taberah, xi. 3. Dent. ix. 22. Kibroth-hattaavah, Num. xi. 34. Hazereth, xi. 35. KADESH, in the desert of Paran (xii. 16; xiii. 26. Dent. i. 2. 19), whence they were turned back by God for their murmurings, and are condemned to wander for thirty-eight years in the wilderness; and the elder generation which had been numbered at Sinai are ex- cluded from Canaan, except Joshua and Caleb (Num. xiv. 25, seq.).	NUM. xxxiii. From the Desert of Sinai, v. 16. Kibroth-hattaavah, v. 16. Hazereth, v. 17.
--	---

3rd Period; from KADESH the first time, to Kadesh the second time; a period of nearly thirty-eight years. Here the elder generation disappears and ceases to have a history; and scarcely any thing is related of the new generation till they arrive near the end of their march, and have arrived at the plains of Moab, where another census is taken, and they are about to enter Canaan.

Rithmah, Num. xxxiii. 18. Rimmon-parez, v. 19. Lisnah, v. 20.	Rissah, v. 21. Kehelathah, v. 22.
---	--------------------------------------

There is no history of any thing that occurred to the Israelites while they were halting at these stations:—

Mount Shapher, v. 23. Haradah, v. 24. Makheleth, v. 25. Tahath, v. 26. Tarah, v. 27. Mithcah, v. 28. Hashmonah, v. 29.	Moseroth, v. 30. Bene-jaakan, v. 31. Hor-hagidgad, v. 32. Jotbathah, v. 33. Ebronah, v. 34. Ezion-gaber, v. 35. Kadesh, v. 36.
--	--

4th Period; from KADESH to the Plains of MOAB and JORDAN.
NUM. xx. xxi. DEUT. i. ii. x.

Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron and Moses, died (probably at Kadesh) at the beginning of the 40th year of the wanderings, Num. xx. 1.

From Kadesh, Num. xx. 22. Beeroh, Bene-jaakan, Dent. x. 6. Mount Hor, Num. xx. 22; or Mosera , Dent. x. 6, where Aaron died , on the first day of the fifth month of the 40th year of the wanderings, Num. xxxiii. 38. Gudgodah, Dent. x. 7. Jotbath, Dent. x. 7. Way of the Red Sea, Num. xxi. 4; by Elath and Ezion- gaber, Dent. ii. 8.	From Kadesh, Num. xxxiii. 37. Mount Hor , v. 37. Zahmonah, v. 41. Punon, v. 42. Oboth, v. 43. Ije-abarim, or Iim, vv. 44, 45. The brook Zared, xxi. 12. Dent. ii. 13, 14. The brook Arnon, Num. xxi. 13. Dent. ii. 24.
---	---

Oboth, Num. xxi. 10. Ije-abarim, Num. xxi. 11. The brook Zared, xxi. 12. Dent. ii. 13, 14. The brook Arnon, Num. xxi. 13. Dent. ii. 24.	Dibon-gad, v. 45. Almon-diblathaim, v. 46.
--	---

Beer, in the desert, Num. xxi. 16. 18. Mattanah, xxi. 18. Nahaliel, xxi. 19. Bamoth, xxi. 19. Pisgah, on the range of Abarim, Num. xxi. 20. By the way of Bashan to the plains of Moab, by Jordan, near Jericho, xxi. 33; xxii. 1.	Mountains of Abarim, near to Nebo, v. 47. Plains of Moab by Jordan, near Jericho, v. 48.
---	---

On this subject the reader may compare the learned article of the Rev. Henry Hayman in Dr. Smith's Dict. of the Bible, vol. iii. 1746—1770.

— with their armies] See Exod. xii. 37, 38. 51.
— under the hand of Moses and Aaron] The representatives of the Law and the Priesthood (S. Jerome).

3. from Rameses] Exod. xii. 37.
4. their gods] See Exod. xii. 12; xviii. 8. 11.
5. Succoth] booths. Exod. xii. 37.
6. Etham] Exod. xiii. 20, 21.
7. Pi-hahiroth] Exod. xiv. 2. 9.

i Ex. 14. 22. & 15.
22, 23.

k Ex. 15. 27.

l Ex. 16. 1.

m Ex. 17. 1. &
19. 2.
n Ex. 16. 1. & 19.
1, 2.
o ch. 11. 34.
|| That is, *The
graves of Iust.*
p ch. 11. 35.
q ch. 12. 16.

from before Pi-hahiroth, and ⁱ passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham, and pitched in Marah. ⁹ And they removed from Marah, and ^k came unto Elim: and in Elim were twelve fountains of water, and threescore and ten palm trees; and they pitched there. ¹⁰ And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red sea. ¹¹ And they removed from the Red sea, and encamped in the ^l wilderness of Sin. ¹² And they took their journey out of the wilderness of Sin, and encamped in Dophkah. ¹³ And they departed from Dophkah, and encamped in Alush. ¹⁴ And they removed from Alush, and encamped at ^m Rephidim, where was no water for the people to drink. ¹⁵ And they departed from Rephidim, and pitched in the ⁿ wilderness of Sinai. ¹⁶ And they removed from the desert of Sinai, and pitched ^o at || Kibroth-hattaavah. ¹⁷ And they departed from Kibroth-hattaavah, and ^p encamped at Hazeroth. ¹⁸ And they departed from Hazeroth, and pitched in ^q Rithmah. ¹⁹ And they departed from Rithmah, and pitched at Rimmon-parez. ²⁰ And they departed from

8. Marah] bitterness. See on Exod. xv. 23.

9. twelve fountains—and threescore and ten palm trees] (See on Exod. xv. 27.) After the bitterness of Marah, we come to the refreshing waters and cool shades of Elim. “De amaritudine venimus ad fontes purissimos; nec dubium est, quin de duodecim Apostolis sermo sit, de quorum fontibus derivatæ aquæ mundi siccitatem rigant; juxta has aquas septuaginta creverunt palmæ, quos et ipsos secundi ordinis intelligimus præceptores (70 disciples), quos et binos autem se Dominus præmittebat. Bibamus de hujusmodi fontibus, et dulcis fructus victoriae devorantes ad mansiones reliquas præparemur.” S. Jerome: cp. Origen, Hom. 27.

11. Sin] just a month after their departure from Rameses (see Exod. xvi. 1, 2). Here God gave them Quails and Manna (Exod. xvi. 11, 16).

12, 13. Dophkah—Alush] The former means knocking; the latter, probably, a fortress; neither is mentioned in Exodus.

14. Rephidim] spreadings out, or supports. At Rephidim they murmured for want of water; and God gave them water out of the Rock in Horeb; and the place was called Massah or Temptation, and Meribah, Contention; for there they tempted God and strove against Him in the wilderness, and then were attacked by the Amalekites, and God gave the victory to the arms of Joshua and the prayers of Moses, who there built the altar Jehovah-nissi (Exod. xvii. 2—16). “Moyse ascendit ad montem, Jesus contra Amalec militat, ad crucis signum superatur inimicus” (S. Jerome).

At this time, also, Moses was visited by Jethro, the priest of Midian, his father-in-law, and by Zipporah, his wife, and by his two sons, Gershon and Eliezer (Exod. xviii. 1—10); and Jethro rejoiced and said, “Blessed be the Lord” (xviii. 9, 10), a contrast to Balaam, hired by the Midianites and Moabites to curse Israel (Num. xxii. 7).

15. wilderness of Sinai] of Mount Sinai (Acts vii. 30), at the beginning of the third month after the Exodus (Exod. xix. 1), and then God gave them the Law on the fiftieth day (Pentecost), after the Passover (S. Jerome), and the Statutes and the Judgments (Exod. xx. xxi.), and they made there the golden calf (Exod. xxxii.), and then the Tabernacle was constructed, and was set up on the first day of the first month of the second year of wandering (Exod. xl. 1, 17), and God delivered there the Law of Sacrifices and the Priesthood contained in LEVITICUS. There also He commanded Moses to number the Tribes, and to arrange the order of their Encampment about the Tabernacle, and in the Journeys through the wilderness (Num. i. 2), and to separate the Levites, in lieu of the firstborn, for His service (Num. iii. iv.).

There Aaron and his sons were consecrated (Lev. viii. 1—36; ix. 1), and Nadab and Abihu died before the Lord (Lev. x. 1, 2), and the second Passover was kept (Num. ix. 1—5). And there they remained till the twentieth day of the second month of the second year after the Exodus (Num. x. 11).

From this station at Sinai they journeyed northward on their way to Canaan, which they might have reached in a few days (see Deut. i. 2), and into which they would have entered immediately if they had obeyed God.

16. Kibroth-hattaavah] graves of Iust. Num. xi. 4—34.

17. Hazeroth] enclosures. There Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses, and Miriam was smitten with leprosy, and was shut out of the camp seven days. Num. xii. 1—16.

18. Rithmah] juniper-tree or broom. (Jerome, Gesen.) Rithmah is placed here next after Hazeroth, which in xii. 16 is placed next before the “wilderness of Paran,” and thence the spies were sent, who returned to the Israelites at Kadesh (xiii. 26): hence it may be inferred that Rithmah was near Kadesh; and it was probably near Abu Relemat, “a wide plain with shrubs and relem. Beyond the eastern mountain at some distance is a large fountain with sweet running water, named Ain-el-Kudeirat” (Robinson, i. 279). From Kadesh in the wilderness of Paran, or of Zin (see Num. xiii. 1, 26; xx. 1. Cp. Keil, p. 360), the spies were sent to explore the Promised Land, and they searched it for forty days (xiii. 25), and came back to Kadesh (xiii. 26), and ten of them brought an evil report of it, and the people murmured against God; and all the spies died by a plague before the Lord, except Caleb and Joshua (Num. xiv. 1—38).

For this and for former murmurings and rebellions against Him, after they had seen His glory and His miracles in Egypt and the wilderness (xiv. 21, 22), God declared that none of those who had been numbered at Sinai, except Caleb and Joshua, should enter Canaan; and that the people should wander “forty years in the wilderness, according to the number of the days in which the spies searched it” (xiv. 29, 34). “To-morrow turn you (He said), and get you into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea” (xiv. 25).

Thus, when they seemed to be on the eve of entering into Canaan, they were driven back for unbelief and disobedience, and the elder generation was condemned to wander in the wilderness, and to die there.

The elder generation here almost disappears from the sight, and a period of silence ensues, in which the younger generation of Israel is being gradually trained for admission into Canaan.

Here therefore was a crisis in the history; and a new era began of trial and suffering. Accordingly, we find a special provision of mercy toward them in their difficulties at this time—see above on Num. xv. 1, 2, with regard to the ordinance of the Sabbath (Num. xv. 32—36), and with regard to the Fringes, and especially with regard to the sacrifice of the Red Heifer, and the water of purification made with its ashes—an institution of the highest importance in the Levitical Legislation, and appropriately appointed at this particular time. See above on xix. 2—22.

19. And they departed from Rithmah] The seventeen next stations between Rithmah and Kadesh (n. 19—36) are those at which Israel halted in its thirty-seven years' wandering before its return to Kadesh-barnea (xx. 1). The Israelites seem to have remained a considerable time in the neighbourhood of Rithmah (cp. Deut. i. 46; ii. 1): and it is probable from the comparative fewness of the stations mentioned in this interval, that while the Ark and Tabernacle remained stationary for some time in certain places, the people dispersed themselves in foraging excursions in different parts of the wilderness.

— Rimmon-parez] probably so called from the abundance of the pomegranate-tree (Heb. rimmon) near that station (Gesen. 770). Probably it was called peretz or perets, from some hostile incursion upon the Israelites there, and from some breach made upon them, perhaps by the Amalekites (xiv. 44, 45). Cp. the word Perez-uzzah, where a breach was made on Uzzah for his Rimmon-parez, and pitched in Libnah. ²¹ And they removed from Libnah, and pitched at Rissah. ²² And they journeyed from Rissah, and pitched in Kehelathah. ²³ And they went from Kehelathah, and pitched in mount Shapher. ²⁴ And they removed from mount Shapher, and encamped in Haradah. ²⁵ And they removed from Haradah, and pitched in Makheloth. ²⁶ And they removed from Makheloth, and encamped at Tahath. ²⁷ And they departed from Tahath, and pitched at Tarah. ²⁸ And they removed from Tarah, and pitched in Mitheah. ²⁹ And they went from Mitheah, and pitched in Hashmonah. ³⁰ And they departed from Hashmonah, and 'encamped at Moseroth. ³¹ And they departed from Moseroth, and pitched in Bene-jaakan. ³² And they removed from 'Bene-jaakan, and 'encamped at Hor-hagidgad. ³³ And they went from Hor-hagidgad, and pitched in Jotbathah. ³⁴ And they removed from Jotbathah, and encamped at Ebronah. ³⁵ And they departed from Ebronah, "and encamped at Ezion-gaber. ³⁶ And they removed from Ezion-gaber, and pitched in the " wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh. ³⁷ And they removed from *Kadesh, and pitched in mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.

³⁸ And ^y Aaron the priest went up into mount Hor at the commandment of the LORD, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first day of the fifth month. ³⁹ And Aaron was an hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in mount Hor.

r Deut. 10. 6.

s See Gen. 36. 27.
Deut. 10. 6.
1 Chron. 1. 42.
t Deut. 10. 7.u Deut. 2. 8.
1 Kings 9. 26. &
22. 48.
w ch. 20. 1. &
27. 14.
x ch. 20. 22, 23.
& 21. 4.y ch. 20. 25, 28.
Deut. 10. 6. &
32. 50.

presumption (1 Chron. xiii. 11); and Baal-perazim, where the worshippers of Baal were broken and routed (1 Chron. xiv. 11). See Gesen. 691.

^{20.} Libnah] whiteness. The stations here specified in vv. 20—23 are not mentioned elsewhere.

After their unbelief, disobedience, and rebellion against God in the wilderness of Paran (see v. 18), and after the sentence of exile and wandering pronounced upon them by God for their sin, the marches of the people are not described in Holy Scripture. The elder generation disappears, as it were, from the view for thirty-eight years. They sink into silence and oblivion, and cease for a time to be a people.

There is something very solemn and significant in this withdrawal of the nation from the sight, and in this blotting out, as it were, of their name from the pages of God's Book. There is inspiration in this silence. It teaches that the history of nations and of individuals in God's sight depends on their obedience to Him; that, in His view, they cease to have a history when they fall away from Him.

But there is also consolation here. After a long term of penitential probation the Israelites reappear. God renews His covenant with them. He numbers them again. He enrolls a new generation of Israel in His census in the plains of Moab, when they were about to enter Canaan (Num. xxvi. 2—65). "Novus populus Dei censetur" (S. Jerome in Mans. 42). He gives them victory over the Amorites (Num. xxi. 21—31), and over Midian (Num. xxxi. 2—54), and brings them at last into the Canaan of their rest, under Joshua, the type of Jesus Christ.

On the futile attempt of some recent critics (e. g., Knobel) to reduce the term of the wanderings in the wilderness to two years, because we have very few details of their history during more than two years, see Kurtz, Ges. A. B. ii. § 78; and Keil, p. 361. This is one of the innumerable instances, where modern Criticism, which vaunts its clear-sightedness, is rendered blind to the beautiful moral of the sacred history, and hears no music in it, because it has not the eye and the ear of Faith.

^{21.} Rissah] dew, moisture.

^{22.} Khelathah] toward the assembly. S. Jerome supposes that the rebellion of Korah took place there, and that it received its name from the bringing back of the people to the lawful place of religious worship.

^{23.} Shapher] splendour.

^{24.} Haradah] trembling.

^{25.} Makheloth] assemblies.

^{26.} Tahath] going down.

^{27.} Tarah] delay.

^{28.} Mitcheah] sweetness.

^{29.} Hashmonah] fatness.

^{30.} Moseroth] bonds, the plural form of moser (Ges. 457). On the alleged discrepancies between the account of the marches here and in Deut. x. 6, 7, see note there.

^{31.} Bene-jaakan] sons of Jaakan. In Deut. x. 6 it is called Beeroth-benejaakan, wells of sons of Jaakan. If these people are identical with the Horite tribe of Jakan in Gen. xxxvi. 27 (cp. 1 Chron. i. 42), the stations seem to be on the hills skirting the Arabah (Keil).

^{32.} Hor-hagidgad] curse of Gidgad. Cp. Deut. x. 7.

^{33.} Jotbathah] goodness. See Deut. x. 7, where it is called Jo bath.

^{35.} Ezion-gaber] back-bone of a giant (geber), on the Red Sea; the north extremity of the eastern arm of it (cp. Deut. ii. 8. 1 Kings ix. 26; xxii. 48).

Thus then the Israelites had now been brought down to a point more distant from Canaan than that at which they were when they came out of Egypt. This was their nadir: hence they begin to move upward again, and arrive again at Kadesh-barnea, about thirty-seven years after they had been there before (v. 36: see xx. 1).

There they arrived in the first month of the fortieth, or last year of their wanderings, and then Miriam died (xx. 1). There the people murmured for want of water, whence the place was called Meribah-kadesh; and Moses "spake unadvisedly with his lips," and smote the rock twice; and God declared to him and to Aaron that they should not bring the people into Canaan (xx. 7—13).

Here Edom refused to let Israel pass through his land, and they therefore turned aside to compass the land of Edom (xx. 14—21), and came to Mount Hor, where, by God's command, Aaron was stripped of Moses of his priestly robes, which were put on his son Eleazar, and Aaron died there on the first day of the fifth month of the fortieth year of their wanderings in the wilderness (xx. 23—29).

^{38.} And Aaron—died there] at Mount Hor; and yet in Deut. x. 6 it is said, that he died in Mosera, which was seven stations from Mount Hor (see v. 31). How is this to be explained? See the note below on Deut. x. 6.

z ch. 21. 1, &c.

a ch. 21. 4.

b ch. 21. 10.
c ch. 21. 11.
|| Or, Heaps of Abarim.
d ch. 21. 11.
e ch. 32. 34.

f Jer. 48. 22.
Ezek. 6. 14.
g ch. 21. 20.
Deut. 32. 49.
h ch. 22. 1.

|| Or, The plains of Shittim.
i ch. 25. 1.
Josh. 2. 1.

k Deut. 7. 1, 2. & 9. 1.
Josh. 3. 17.
l Ex. 23. 24, 33. & 34. 13.
Deut. 7. 2, 5. & 12. 3.
Josh. 11. 12.
Judg. 2. 2.
m ch. 26. 53, 54, 55.

† Heb. multiply his inheritance.
‡ Heb. diminish his inheritance.

n Josh. 23. 13.
Judg. 2. 3.
Ps. 106. 34, 35.
See Ex. 23. 33.
Ezek. 28. 24.

⁴⁰ And ²king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel. ⁴¹ And they departed from mount ^aHor, and pitched in Zalmonah. ⁴² And they departed from Zalmonah, and pitched in Punon. ⁴³ And they departed from Punon, and pitched in Oboth. ⁴⁴ And ^cthey departed from Oboth, and pitched in ^dIje-abarim, in the border of Moab. ⁴⁵ And they departed from Iim, and pitched ^ein Dibon-gad. ⁴⁶ And they removed from Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon^f-diblathaim. ⁴⁷ And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, ^gand pitched in the mountains of Abarim, before Nebo. ⁴⁸ And they departed from the mountains of Abarim, and ^hpitched in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho. ⁴⁹ And they pitched by Jordan, from Beth-jesimoth even unto ⁱAbel-shittim in the plains of Moab.

⁵⁰ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying, ⁵¹ Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^kWhen ye are passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan; ⁵² ¹Then ye shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures, and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places: ⁵³ And ye shall dispossess the inhabitants of the land, and dwell therein: for I have given you the land to possess it. ⁵⁴ And ^mye shall divide the land by lot for an inheritance among your families: and to the more ye shall [†]give the more inheritance, and to the fewer ye shall [†]give the less inheritance: every man's inheritance shall be in the place where his lot falleth; according to the tribes of your fathers ye shall inherit. ⁵⁵ But if ye will not drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you; then it shall come to pass, that those which ye let remain of them shall be ⁿpricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides, and shall vex you in the land wherein ye dwell. ⁵⁶ Moreover it shall come to pass, that I shall do unto you, as I thought to do unto them.

XXXIV. ¹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ² Command the 40. king Arad] or King of Arad. See xxi. 1—3.

On the alleged discrepancies between this portion of this chapter, vv. 41—49, and chap. xxi. 11—20, see above, xxi. 11.

41. Zalmonah] Heb. tsalmonah, probably so called from tselem, a shadow, also a likeness, a figure (σκιὰ, σκιαγραφία), whence S. Jerome says, "Salmona interpretatur imaguncula" (in Mans. 35), and this station is supposed by some to have been so named from the brazen serpent set up by Moses on a pole—the likeness of the serpent which bit the people, and also the type and figure of Him Who was lifted up on the cross, that all who believe in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life (Num. xxi. 8, 9. John iii. 14, 15). So S. Jerome, Mans. 35, "In Salmona—in typum Salvatoris qui antiquum Serpentem patibulo crucis triumphavit—diaboli venena superantur." After the Israelites had been bitten by serpents, and the brazen serpent had been made, they removed to Oboth (xxi. 10), which is also mentioned here (v. 43).

42. Punon] perplexity. There were copper-mines there, in which captives were condemned to work (S. Jerome): ep. Gen. xxxvi. 41.

43. Oboth] familiar spirits (see above, Lev. xix. 31; xx. 6). The word is rendered "pythones" by S. Jerome (Mans. 37), who also observes that it is rendered "lagene grandes," or "large bottles, or skins" by some; they, who had familiar spirits, being inflated, as it were, by the spirit of sorcery.

44. Ije-abarim] ruined heaps of Abarim; on the confines of Moab. Cp. xxi. 10. Thence they came to the valley of Zared, or luxuriant growth of trees (Gesen. 252), and thence to Beer, the well, which sprung up at the song and prayer of the princes (see xxi. 17—20), and thence to Mattanah (or gift), and Nahaliel (torrents of God), and Bamoth (high places), and Pisgah, which looks to Jeshimon, or wilderness (xxi. 19, 20); and they overcame Sihon, king of the Amorites, who had dispossessed the Moabites (xxi. 21—31), and conquered Og, king of Bashan (xxi. 33. 35), and pitched in the plains of Moab over against Jericho.

45. Dibon-gad] See xxi. 30.

46. Almon-diblathaim] hiding-place of Diblathaim, or, two cakes; a name given to the place on account of its shape (Gesen. 185). The stations here specified, Dibon-gad, and Almon-diblathaim, and the mountains of Abarim, were passed by the Israelites in their journey to Shittim, or Abel-shittim (meadow of acacias), in the plains of Moab, where the Israelites were guilty of the sin described in Num. xxv. 1—8, after the prophecy of Balaam (xxiii. xxiv.).

There a census was taken of the people (see xxvi. 1—65), and it was found that no one was then surviving, who had been enrolled in the former census taken at Mount Sinai about thirty-eight years before (xxvi. 64).

There also the Levitical Law of sacrifice, which had been in abeyance since the murmuring and condemnation at Kadesh-barnea (xiv. 34; xv. 2), was promulgated afresh to the new generation of Israel (see xxviii. 2—31; xxix. 1—39); and God gave them the victory over the Midianites (xxx. 2—54).

47. before Nebo] The mountain where Moses afterward viewed the land and died (Deut. xxxii. 49—52; xxxiv. 1—5).

52. pictures] Heb. mascith, from sacah, to look at (see Lev. xxvi. 1. Ezek. viii. 12), and it signifies any likeness or figure, whether graven or painted (Gesen. 513).

55. pricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides] Like thorns and brambles left in a field that ought to have been cleared. See Ps. cvi. 34—41, where the Psalmist describes the evil consequences of their neglect of this divine command; and ep. Ezek. xxviii. 24. This language was afterwards adopted and reinforced by Joshua (xxiii. 13); see also Judg. ii. 2, 3.

children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into ^athe land of Canaan; (this is the land that shall fall unto you for an inheritance, even the land of Canaan with the coasts thereof):

³ Then ^b your south quarter shall be from the wilderness of Zin along by the coast of Edom, and your south border shall be the outmost coast of ^cthe salt sea eastward: ⁴ And your border shall turn from the south ^dto the ascent of Akrabbim, and pass on to Zin: and the going forth thereof shall be from the south ^eto Kadesh-barnea, and shall go on to ^fHazar-addar, and pass on to Azmon: ⁵ And the border shall fetch a compass from Azmon ^gunto the river of Egypt, and the goings out of it shall be at the sea.

⁶ And as for the western border, ye shall even have the great sea for a border: this shall be your west border.

⁷ And this shall be your north border: from the great sea ye shall point out for you ^hmount Hor: ⁸ From mount Hor ye shall point out your border ⁱunto the entrance of Hamath; and the goings forth of the border shall be to ^kZedad: ⁹ And the border shall go on to Ziphron, and the goings out of it shall be at ^lHazar-enam: this shall be your north border.

¹⁰ And ye shall point out your east border from Hazar-enam to Shepham: ^m And the coast shall go down from Shepham ⁿto Riblah, on the east side of Ain; and the border shall descend, and shall reach unto the ^oside of the sea ^pof Chimmereth eastward: ¹² And the border shall go down to Jordan, and the goings out of it shall be at ^qthe salt sea: this shall be your land with the coasts thereof round about.

¹³ And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, ^rThis is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the LORD commanded to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half tribe: ¹⁴ ^sFor the tribe of the children of Reuben according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance; and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance: ¹⁵ The two tribes

a Gen. 17. 8.
Deut. 1. 7.
Ps. 78. 55. & 105.
11.
Ezek. 47. 14.

b Josh. 15. 1.
See Ezek. 47. 13,
&c.
c Gen. 14. 3.
Josh. 15. 2.
d Josh. 15. 3.

e ch. 13. 26. & 32.
8.
f See Josh. 15.
3, 4.
g Gen. 15. 18.
Josh. 15. 4. 47.
1 Kings 8. 65.
Isa. 27. 12.

h ch. 33. 37.
i ch. 13. 21.
2 Kings 14. 25.

k Ezek. 47. 15.
l Ezek. 47. 17.

m 2 Kings 23. 32.
Jer. 39. 5, 6.
† Heb. shoulder.

n Deut. 3. 17.
Josh. 11. 2. & 19.
35.
Matt. 14. 34.
Luke 5. 1.
o ver. 3.

p ver. 1.
Josh. 14. 1, 2.

q ch. 32. 33.
Josh. 14. 2, 3.

CH. XXXIV. 3. your south quarter shall be] Almighty God describes the limits of the Promised Land, and thus declares that it is He who is the Lord of all the earth; that all Nations are His feudatories and vassals, and hold their territories from Him who sets the borders of the earth (Ps. lxxiv. 17), and determines the bounds of their habitation (Acts xvii. 26); and that the eternal and heavenly inheritance, which is typified by Canaan, is His gift (John xiv. 2. Matt. xx. 23).

God also specified the limits of Canaan, in order that while the Israelites obeyed His command to exterminate certain nations,—the nations of Canaan,—for their sins, and thus were executioners of His righteous judgments upon them, they were not therefore to imagine that they had any commission or licence to wage an aggressive warfare against any other nations, for the gratification of their own covetous or ambitious desires of spoil and aggrandizement; but might be contented with the portion assigned to them by Him; and also that they might not be molested in their occupation of Canaan, which they held by a divine charter from heaven.

— wilderness of Zin] See xxxiii. 36; and Josh. xv. 2—4.

— Edom] Not the mountains of Edom, on the west frontier of Wady Arabah, but the region south of the wilderness of Zin, or Wady Murreh, namely, the mountain range now called Seir, or Serr (Seetzen, Rowlands, Keil).

— salt sea] The Dead Sea (see Gen. xiv. 3).

4. Akrabbim] scorpions (cp. Deut. viii. 15). The ascent Akrabbim (mentioned in 1 Macc. v. 3. Joseph., Ant. xii. 8. 1) is probably that of the white cliffs, about eight miles to the south of the Dead Sea, and on the north of Wady Arabah.

— Hazar-addar] enclosure, or village, of largeness. See Josh. xv. 3, 4.

— Azmon] strong; probably in Wady el Ain, w. of the road to Hebron.

5. river of Egypt] or, brook of Egypt; it is mentioned as the southern limit of the land of Israel, Josh. xv. 4. 47. 1 Kings viii. 65. 2 Kings xxiv. 7. 2 Chron. vii. 8; and Isa. xxvii. 12, where it is called βυκοροπία by Sept.

6. great sea] The Mediterranean (cp. Josh. ix. 1; xv. 47; xxiii. 4).

8. mount Hor] “Mons Casius,” s.w. of Antioch, on the Orontes (Robinson).

— Hamath] Now Hamah, the Epiphania of the Greeks and Romans, on the river Orontes (see xiii. 21).

— Zedad] side, i. e., of a mountain, now Zadad (Robinson), a large town inhabited by Syrian Christians; lying to the s.e. of Hums, and on the road from Hums to Damascus. With these descriptions of the limits of the land on the north, compare Ezek. xlvi. 17.

9. Ziphron] fragrance; supposed by some to be the same as the modern Zifran, fourteen hours n.e. of Damascus: cp. Ezek. xlvii. 17 (Knobel). Others are of opinion that it is much more to the south (cp. Josh. xi. 17; xii. 7; xiii. 5. Judg. iii. 3: and see Keil, p. 370), on the northern slopes of Lebanon; and they place Hazar-enam (enclosure, or village of springs) at the springs or fountains of Lebweh.

11. Riblah] abundance (see 2 Kings xxiii. 33), but it is doubtful whether the place there mentioned is the same as that specified here. Ain, or fountain, was perhaps at the springs at the foot of Anti-libanus, which are called Birket Andshear (Robinson). The Vulgate renders it Daphnis.

— Chinnereth] The sea of Galilee, called Chinnereth, or harp (Gesen. 401. 406), perhaps from its shape, or from the town which bore that name (Josh. xi. 2; xix. 35. Deut. iii. 17. 1 Kings xv. 20). In Chaldee it is called Ghinnosar, and in 1 Macc. xi. 67, Gennesar, whence in the New Testament it is called Gennesareth.

and the half tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sunrising.

16 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 17 These are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you: Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun. 18 And ye shall take one prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance. 19 And the names of the men are these: Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh. 20 And of the tribe of the children of Simeon, Shemuel the son of Ammihud. 21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad the son of Chislon. 22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bukki the son of Jogli. 23 The prince of the children of Joseph, for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hanniel the son of Ephod. 24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel the son of Shiphtan. 25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zebulun, Elizaphan the son of Parnach. 26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan. 27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi. 28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 These are they whom the LORD commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.

XXXV. 1 And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying, 2 Command the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them. 3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be a Josh. 14. 3, 4.

r Josh. 14. 1.
& 19. 51.
s ch. 1. 4, 16.

& 21. 2.
See Ezek. 45. 1,
&c. & 48. 8, &c.

17. These—shall divide the land—Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun] Forming, by their union, a type of Christ, who is both King and Priest, and who settles all the tribes of the faithful Israelites in the heavenly Canaan, and assigns to them their inheritance (see Josh. xiv. 1; xix. 51).

18. And ye shall take one prince of every tribe] Eleazar and Joshua divided the land (cp. Josh. xiv. 1; xix. 51), but by God's command they associated with them a prince of every tribe; so our Lord associates the Apostles with Himself in bringing the World into subjection to the Gospel, and in making it to be an inheritance of His visible Church; and He will associate them with Himself in the inheritance of His Church glorified. See on v. 28.

19—29. Judah] Judah is placed first, for he had the first lot on the south (Josh. xv. 1). Simeon, his brother, by Leah, next, and his inheritance was within the inheritance of the sons of Judah (Josh. xix. 1). Then Benjamin, who had his lot between Judah and the sons of Joseph (Josh. xviii. 11). Then Dan, for his lot was near Benjamin, westward (Josh. xix. 40. 47). Then Manasseh, and Ephraim, his brother, whose inheritance was next beyond Benjamin (Josh. xvi. and xvii.). Then Zebulun and Issachar, sons of Leah (Josh. xix. 10. 17). Then Asher and Naphtali on the north (Josh. xix. 24. 32).

The meanings of these twelve names are as follows:—

19. Caleb] Dog, vigilant as a watch-dog; not "a dumb dog" (Isa. lvi. 10), from calab, to bark (Gesen. 398).

20. Shemuel] Heard of God, the same name as Samuel.

21. Elidad] Loved of God; Theophilus.

22. Bukki] Poured out of the Lord (Gesen. 135, 136).

23. Hanniel] Grace of God.

24. Kemuel] Assembly of God.

25. Elizaphan] Whom God hides, or defends.

26. Paltiel] Whom God rescues.

27. Ahihud] Brother of Judah, or of praise.

28. Pedahel] Whom God redeems.

— Ammihud] People of Judah. This is the name also of the father of Elishama, prince of Ephraim (i. 10); and of Shemuel, prince of Simeon (v. 20).

These Twelve Princes, associated with Joshua and Eleazar, jointly making a type of Jesus Christ, in assigning an inheritance to Israel, seem to foreshadow the work which Christ Himself assigned to His Twelve Apostles, when He said, "Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." "I appoint unto you a kingdom, as My Father hath appointed unto Me; that ye may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. xix. 28. Luke xxii. 29, 30).

The Book of NUMBERS ends, as Leviticus did (xxvii. 30—33), with a provision for the settled maintenance of the Levitical Ministry. Here is an evidence of unity of plan and of authorship.

CH. XXXV. 2. that they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession] In order that the Levitical ministry being diffused throughout Israel might be like a holy leaven, leavening the entire mass; and that they might hallow the people, and teach them the knowledge of God's law. Deut. xxxiii. 8—10.

For the history of the fulfilment of these divine injunctions, see below, Josh. xxi. 1—42.

Thus Jacob's prophecy was fulfilled, that "Levi should be scattered in Israel" (Gen. xlix. 5—7), which was indeed a curse for sin, but by reason of Levi's zeal for God (Exod. xxxii. 29) was changed into a blessing.

This idea of holy diffusion was embodied in the number of the Levitical cities ($12 \times 4 = 48$: see below on v. 7), by means of which the Land was sanctified; and God's promises and the knowledge of His Law were diffused in every part of it by means of the Levites, His ministers. See v. 7.

In like manner the Jews were scattered for their sins throughout the world (see Ps. lix. 11); but by God's mercy that curse has been turned into a blessing; for by this dispersion they have carried the Old Testament with them into all lands, and by the weekly reading of it in their Synagogues, in all the principal cities of Europe and Asia, they prepared the way for the preaching of the Gospel (see below, Introduction to the Acts of the Apostles, p. 8); and when devout Jews had come up to Jerusalem at Pentecost, they saw the signs of the miraculous coming of the Holy Ghost, and heard the preaching of the Apostles, and they carried back the Gospel with them into all lands (see below, on Acts ii. 4—11). And the time may come when, by the conversion of the Jews who do not yet believe, they may become the blessed instruments of turning the Nations to Christ. Cp. S. Cyril de Ador. xiii. p. 465.

— suburbs] migrash, literally a drawing-out, from garash to

for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts. ⁴ And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits round about. ⁵ And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities. ⁶ And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be ^b six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and † to them ye shall add forty and two cities. ⁷ So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be ^c forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs. ⁸ And the cities which ye shall give shall be ^d of the possession of the children of Israel: ^e from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites according to his inheritance which † he inheriteth.

⁹ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁰ Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, † When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan; ¹¹ Then ^g ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither, which killeth any person † at unawares. ¹² ^h And they shall be unto you cities for refuge from the avenger; that the manslayer die not, until he stand before the congregation in judgment. ¹³ And of these cities which ye shall give ⁱ six cities shall ye have for refuge. ¹⁴ ^k Ye shall give three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge. ¹⁵ These six cities shall

b ver. 13.
Deut. 4. 41.
Josh. 20. 2, 7, 8.
& 21. 3, 13, 21, 27,
32, 35, 38.
† Heb. above them ye shall give
c Josh. 21. 41.

d Josh. 21. 3.

e ch. 26. 54.

† Heb. they inherit.

f Deut. 19. 2.
Josh. 20. 2.
g Ex. 21. 13.

† Heb. by error.

h Deut. 19. 6.
Josh. 20. 3, 5, 6.

i ver. 6.

k Deut. 4. 41.
Josh. 20. 8.

draw out—an open place for the drawing-out and pasturage of cattle. (Gesen. 449.)

3. cattle] behemoth (from baham, to shut, to be dumb), beasts of burden, cattle, sheep. (Gesen. 105.)
— beasts] chayyah; living creatures.

4. a thousand cubits] About 583 yards for the cattle, and two thousand more on every side (see v. 5) for fields and vineyards (Maimonides). Others (Raschi, Vatablus, Lyranus) are of opinion that the two thousand cubits were for cattle, &c., and a thousand cubits beyond for vineyards. Michaelis supposes that 1000 cubits were measured every way, from the wall of the city, which was in the centre, and so made 2000 cubits of suburb, from east to west, and from north to south (see Keil, p. 373; cp. Davidson, 313). Others suppose that each wall of the city measured 2000 cubits, or that the whole circuit was 8000 cubits, and that the suburb was 1000 cubits, measured every way from each of the four walls. Pfeiffer, p. 157.

6. six cities] three on the east, and three on the west of Jordan. See v. 14; and Deut. iv. 41. 43. Josh. xx. 7—9.

On the moral and spiritual uses and typical character of the Cities of Refuge, see S. Ambrose de Cain, c. 4; de Fuga Sæculi c. 2. S. Cyril de Ador. viii. p. 283; xiii. p. 465. Greg. Mag. in Ezek. Hom. 6. Isidor. Pelusiot., Epist. iii. 109. Ainsworth, p. 203. Mather on the Types, p. 326; and notes below on Deut. xix. 1—13.

— refuge] miklat, from palat, to draw together, to receive as a fugitive. Gesen. 732.

— manslayer] Heb. rotseah, from ratsah, to break, to kill (Gesen.).

— forty and two cities] the number of the stations in the wilderness (see xxxii. 1); so that in their settled state in Canaan, they were reminded, by this number, of their wanderings in the wilderness, and of God's mercies to them there.

It will be a part of the joy of the saints in the heavenly Canaan to meditate on God's mercies to them, while they were in their mortal pilgrimage through the wilderness of this world to their eternal inheritance. On these forty-two cities, see Josh. xxi. 2—42.

7. forty and eight] 12 × 4, both sacred numbers, symbolical of universality; displaying the presence of God in all parts of the land. See Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 50; and notes below on Rev. xi. 19, p. 221.

8. of the possession of the children of Israel] One and the same form of ecclesiastical regimen, and of religious worship and instruction, was to be diffused throughout the whole of the inheritance of the literal Israel. The literal Israel was a figure of the Christian Church Universal; and this divine provision for Uniformity of Worship, Instruction, and Church-Government, confirms the proof that Almighty God has designed that one and the same form of Apostolic regimen for the Ministry of the Word and Sacraments should be propagated throughout the World. Compare below, Josh. xxi. 1.

— from them that have many] See the distribution in Josh. xxi. 9—19; cp. above, xxvi. 54.

12. the avenger] Goel, from gaal, to redeem, or bring back (Gesen. 151). One who is near of kin (see Lev. xxv. 25), and therefore rendered ἀγχιστέων by Sept., and “cognatus” by Vulg.; and, as such, was the redeemer of property (see below on Ruth ii. 20; iii. 9—12). He also avenged the blood of his kinsman that was slain (Deut. xix. 6. 12. Josh. xx. 3).

Our Goel, or next of kin, is Christ, who has taken the nature of us all by His Incarnation, and who redeems us from Sin, Satan, and Death; and He will avenge the blood of His people who are slain, as prophesied in the Apocalypse. See on Ruth as quoted above, and on Rev. vi. 10.

13. of these cities] that is, of the cities of the Levites. Wisely was it ordered, that such cities should be cities of refuge, because, the Levites being teachers of the Law, a guarantee would thus be provided, that the Law would be rightly administered in the cases of manslaughter; and also the fugitive would have the benefit of religious instruction and comfort while he was in the city of refuge. Cp. Bähr, Symbolik, ii. 53; and note below, Josh. xxi. 31.

The Christian Fathers regard the Cities of Refuge as emblematic of penitential asylums, to which the devout soul retires from the world, in order to humble itself for its sin, and to pray to God for pardon and grace. See S. Ambrose de Fuga Sæculi, c. 2.

They may be regarded also as emblems of Christian Churches in which the pure Gospel of Christ is preached, and His Sacraments are duly administered, and the other means of grace are dispensed to the penitent and faithful soul. See the references above on v. 6.

14. three cities on this side Jordan] These were Golan, in Basan of Manasseh (32° 52' N.L.); Ramoth, in Gilead (32° 25'); and Bezer, in Reuben (31° 35'). Deut. iv. 41. 43.

— three cities—in the land of Canaan] These were appointed by Joshua, and were Kedesh, in Naphtali (33° 6'); Shechem ch. 15. 16. be a refuge, both for the children of Israel, and ¹for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them: that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither.

m Ex. 21. 12, 14.
Lev. 24. 17.
Deut. 19. 11, 12.

† Heb. with a stone of the hand.

n ver. 21, 24, 27.
Deut. 19. 6, 12.
Josh. 20. 3, 5.

o Gen. 4. 8.
2 Sam. 3. 27. & 20. 10.
1 Kings 2. 31, 32.
p Ex. 21. 14.
Deut. 19. 11.

q Ex. 21. 13.

r ver. 12.
Josh. 20. 6.

s Josh. 20. 6.
t Ex. 29. 7.
Lev. 4. 3. & 21. 10.

† Heb. no blood shall be to him, Ex. 22. 2.

¹⁶ And if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death. ¹⁷ And if he smite him with throwing a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death. ¹⁸ Or if he smite him with an hand weapon of wood, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death. ¹⁹ The revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer: when he meeteth him, he shall slay him. ²⁰ But if he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him by laying of wait, that he die; ²¹ Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer, when he meeteth him.

²² But if he thrust him suddenly without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait, ²³ Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm: ²⁴ Then the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood according to these judgments: ²⁵ And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest, which was anointed with the holy oil.

²⁶ But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled; ²⁷ And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; he shall not be guilty of blood: ²⁸ Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the in Mount Ephraim (32° 18'); Kirjath-arba (Hebron), in Judah (31° 25'). Josh. xx. 8.

On the special significance in the choice of the cities, see below, on Josh. xx. 7.

On both sides of the Jordan the cities were so chosen, that the greatest distance from one City of Refuge to the next was about 60 miles; and no person was more than 30 miles from a City of Refuge. This was specially provided as a merciful resource, lest the fugitive should be cut off by the avenger of blood, while his heart was hot, and because the way was long. Deut. xix. 6.

The Rabbis say that at the cross-roads posts were erected which pointed the way to the City of Refuge. See Rittershus. de Jure Asyli, in Crit. Sacr. viii. 159. Lightfoot, Cent. Chorog. c. 50; and note below, on Deut. xix. 3.

As to the particular time in which these cities were appointed, see below, on Josh. xx. 1.

On the Law concerning the Cities of Refuge, and the humanity of the Mosaic Legislation in this respect, as compared with Heathen and Mahomedan Codes, see Kalisch on Exodus, pp. 393—397. See also Maimonides on Murder, vii. 8; viii. 11. Winer, R. W. B. i. 379, Art. "Freistatt," and H. W. Phillott in Dict. of the Bible, pp. 221—336; and Dawn's Treatise on this subject, Leipzig, 1840.

15. the stranger] A foreshadowing of the gracious extension of the blessings of Christ's death to all nations under the Gospel.

16. the murderer shall surely be put to death] See Gen. ix. 5, 6. Exod. xxi. 12—14. Lev. xxiv. 17. 1 Kings ii. 29—34.

There is no discrepancy (as some have alleged) between this precept and that in Deut. xix. 12. See the note there, and cp. Josh. xx. 6. 9.

18. with an hand weapon of wood] Literally, with an instrument of wood, of hand: that is, in the hand, cominus. The former cases were by throwing a stone, eminus (v. 17), and with an instrument of iron (v. 16).

20. But] rather, And, or.

25. unto the death of the high priest, which was anointed with the holy oil] Literally, unto the death of the Great Priest, whom he (put impersonally) anointed with the oil of holiness.

At the death of the High Priest, they who had fled for safety to the City of Refuge were released and restored to their homes (see v. 28). So, by the death of our Great High Priest (Heb. iv. 14; x. 21), Who was anointed with the Holy Ghost, and is therefore called Messial and Christ, the Anointed One, and Who offers Himself, without spot, through the Eternal Spirit (Heb. ix. 14), with which He was anointed; and Who is the Mediator of the New Testament, that by the means of death for the redemption of the transgressions under the first Testament, they which are called might receive the promise of an eternal inheritance (Heb. ix. 15), they who have fled for refuge to lay hold of the hope set before them (Heb. vi. 18) are restored to liberty, and peace, and happiness, and to the favour of God, their reconciled Father in Christ. See Theodoret, Qu. 50. S. Cyril de Ador. viii. p. 282. S. Gregor. in Ezek. Hom. vi.; and other authors quoted on v. 6.

By Christ's death, as by the death of our High Priest, for He is Priest and Sacrifice both, we are restored to our former forfeit estate in the Land of Promise (Bp. Andrewes, ii. p. 153). His death, as the High Priest's, freed us from captivity (iii. 209). As S. Cyril says, "The guilty soul is driven into banishment from its home by sin, as the Israelite was when he had committed murder; but Christ, our great High Priest, died, went down into hell, and overcame Death, and rose from the Grave, and the soul is restored to its home by Him."

There must be the act of faith believing God's promises, and of obedience complying with His ordinance in appointing His Church as a City of Refuge, and there must be entering into it and abiding in it (v. 26, 27); and then, the death of Christ, Who is both High Priest and Sacrifice, will avail to the salvation of the soul.

28. until the death of the high priest] Great stress is laid upon this point (see v. 25, and again, v. 32); and the light thrown high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession. ²⁹ So these things shall be for "a statute of judgment unto you throughout your ^{u ch. 27. 11} generations in all your dwellings.

³⁰ Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the *mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to ^{x Deut. 17. 6. & 19. 15.} cause him to die. ³¹ Moreover ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is † guilty of death: but he shall be surely put to death. ^{2 Cor. 13. 1.}

³² And ye shall take no satisfaction for him that is fled to the city of his refuge, that he should come again to dwell in the land, until the death of the priest. ^{Heb. 10. 28.}

³³ So ye shall not pollute the land wherein ye are: for blood ^{y Ps. 106. 38.} it defileth the land: and † the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but ^{Mic. 4. 11.} by the blood of him that shed it. ^{† Heb there can be no expiation for the land.} ^{z Gen. 9. 6.} ^{a Lev. 18. 25.} ^{Deut. 21. 23.} ^{b Ex. 29. 45, 40.} ³⁴ a Defile not therefore the land which ye shall inhabit, wherein I dwell: for ^b I the LORD dwell among the children of Israel.

XXXVI. ¹ And the chief fathers of the families of the ^a children of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel: ² And they said, ^b The LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and ^c my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters. ³ And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe † whereunto they are received: so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance. ⁴ And when ^d the jubile of the children of Israel shall be, then shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers. ^{† Heb. unto whom they shall be.} ^{d Lev. 25. 10.}

⁵ And Moses commanded the children of Israel according to the word of the LORD, saying, The tribe of the sons of Joseph ^e hath said well. ⁶ This ^{e ch. 27. 7.} is the thing which the LORD doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them † marry to whom they think best; ^{† Heb. be wives.} ^{f ver. 12.} ^f only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry. ⁷ So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe: for every one of the children of Israel shall [†] keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers. ⁸ And ^{† Heb. cleave to the, &c.} ^{g 1 Kings 21. 3.}

upon it by the Gospel enables us to see here a confirmation of the truth there preached, that before the Death of the Great High Priest no deliverance for Human Nature was possible, and none is afforded now to any who look for salvation from any other cause but from the Death of Christ; for, as St. Peter declares, "there is none other Name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved; neither is there salvation in any other" (Acts iv. 12).

^{30. of witnesses}] two or three at the least. Deut. xvii. 6. See Matt. xviii. 16. 1 Cor. xiii. 1. Heb. x. 28.

— ^{one witness}] See Deut. xvii. 6; xix. 5.

^{33. So ye shall not pollute the land}] Not only does Blood defile the land, but they, also, who connive at Murder when they ought to punish it, are said here to pollute it. The Land was holy to God, whose presence was visibly manifested in the Levitical Priesthood, diffused through every part of it; and it was desecrated by blood, and therefore an expiation was to be made for blood. See above on Gen. ix. 5, 6. Is it then competent to Man to abolish capital punishments for Murder?

CH. XXXVI. 1. ^{the chief fathers}] The Divine Legislator having defined the limits of the Holy Land, which he had given for the inheritance of Israel (ch. xxxv.), and having also appointed His own portion to be given to the Priests and Levites, His ministers, in the inheritance of every tribe, and having thus consecrated the land by His Own Presence in the Priesthood; and having provided against the desecration of that land by bloodshed, at the same time that in mercy He appointed Cities of Refuge for the involuntary manslayer, to protect him against the anger of the avenger of blood, and having revealed in that institution some gleams of the Refuge and Restoration of Mankind in Christ (see xxxv. 25), now concludes His Laws with an ordinance for the settled continuance of the respective inheritance of the tribes, as originally assigned to them by God; and thus unfolds a view of the perpetuity of that spiritual inheritance, incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for His people (1 Pet. i. 4), and which was foreshadowed by the earthly Canaan.

2. ^{my lord}] Moses (see xxvi. 52; xxvii. 1—7).

— ^{Zelophehad—his daughters}] See above on xxvii. 1—7.

4. ^{the jubile}] See Lev. xxv. 10.

7. ^{So shall not the inheritance—remove}] The Fathers were of opinion that this was done specially to secure the succession and inheritance of the tribe of Judah, from which Christ came.

^h 1 Chron 23. 22. ^h every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers. ⁹ Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe; but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance.

¹⁰ Even as the LORD commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad: ¹¹ ⁱ For Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Noah, the daughters of Zelophehad, were married unto their father's brothers' sons: ¹² And they were married † into the families of the sons of Manasseh the son of Joseph, and their inheritance remained in the tribe of the family of their father.

f ch. 27. 1.

+ Heb. to some that were of the families.

k ch. 26. 3. & 33. 50.

¹³ These are the commandments and the judgments, which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses unto the children of Israel ^k in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

S. Cyril c. Julian. viii. p. 261. Theodoret, Qu. 51. Isidor. Pelusiot., Epist. i. 7.

8. every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe—shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father] Hence it is inferred that Mary was of the same tribe as Joseph, that is, of the tribe of Judah (Euseb., i. 7). This would be necessarily true if Mary had an inheritance: it is certain that she did marry one of her own tribe, for Christ, who is the Seed of the Woman and the Son of Mary, is said by St. Paul to be of the seed of David (Rom. i. 3), and Joseph was of the house and lineage of David (Matt. i. 20. Luke ii. 4).

Priests and Levites, having no inheritance with Israel (Deut. xviii. 1), might marry women of any tribe; and daughters of Priests and Levites, being of no tribe, might marry with men of any tribe. Elizabeth, of the daughters of Aaron, was cousin to Mary, of the tribe of Judah (Luke i. 5. 36). Also, it appears that women who had not an inheritance, were not obliged to marry within their own tribe. See Josh. xv. 16. 1 Sam. xvii. 15.

13. These are the commandments and the judgments] This is the conclusion of the Levitical Code, which began to be delivered at the Exodus, was fully promulgated at Mount Sinai, and has now, as far as was requisite, been published afresh to the new generation of Israel, and is brought to a close in the plains of Moab, by Jordan, near Jericho.

DEUTERONOMY, which now follows, and which begins with an address of Moses to Israel on the first day of the eleventh month of the last year of the wanderings (Deut. i. 3), proceeds on the supposition that its hearers and readers are fully acquainted with the former portions of the Pentateuch, and does not add any new law to that Code, but declares and enforces what has been already promulgated in EXODUS, LEVITICUS, and NUMBERS.

INTRODUCTION TO DEUTERONOMY.

On the Genuineness of Deuteronomy.

THAT the following portion of the Pentateuch, which is called DEUTERONOMY, was not written by Moses, but was composed at a much later period of Jewish history, is a conclusion which, we are assured by some, "may be ranked among the most certain results of modern scientific Biblical Criticism." Such are the words of Bishop Colenso, "On the Pentateuch," Part III. p. 613.

Some recent celebrated critics assign its composition to¹ a writer who lived in the times of Hezekiah, king of Judah²; others assert that it was composed in the reign of his son, Manassch; others³ suppose that it was written in the time of Josiah.

It seems that "modern scientific Biblical Criticism" (to adopt the title assigned to it by one of its adherents) is prepared to stake its own reputation on this issue; and that on the soundness of this conclusion its claims to credit and confidence must stand or fall.

Let us then examine —

What does this assertion involve?

The writer of Deuteronomy professes to be Moses.

Let us examine the first chapter. "I spake unto you at that time, saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone." Here Moses himself is introduced speaking to Israel. What next? "I said unto you, Ye are come unto the mountain of the Amorites, which the Lord our God doth give unto *us*⁴. And ye came near unto me, every one of you, and said, We will send men before us . . . and the saying pleased me well, and I took twelve men of you, one of a tribe⁵." . . . And again, "The Lord was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither. But Joshua the son of Nun, which standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: encourage him: for he shall cause Israel to inherit it⁶."

In a similar tone, throughout the book, the writer of Deuteronomy professes to be no other than Moses himself.

What then is the question at issue?

It is not—whether we have here a writer, living after the age of Moses, and purporting to give a record of his acts; but it is, whether we have here the words of Moses himself, or the words of another person who pretends to be Moses, and utters the most solemn language in his name? In a word, is the Book of Deuteronomy an imposture, or is it not?

This is the real question at issue. And that School of modern Biblical Criticism, which is most confident of its own superior enlightenment, and is impatient of any resistance to its authority, stands committed to the affirmative. Its reputation for sagacity and intelligence hangs on the truth of the proposition—that Deuteronomy is a forgery.

What then, let us inquire, are the grounds on which this assertion is based?

It is alleged by the critics, who have been already mentioned⁸, that Deuteronomy cannot have been written by Moses. This allegation is based on two grounds, viz. :—

¹ Ewald, Riehm, Bleek, Dr. Davidson, who says, "It is certain that Moses could not have written the book of Deuteronomy" (p. 377). "The entire book belongs to a later writer and time" (p. 350).

² Bp. Colenso has devoted the whole of his Part III. on the Pentateuch, Lond., 1863, to disprove the genuineness of Deuteronomy.

³ Bunsen, Vaihinger.

⁴ De Wette, Von Bohlen, Knobel (as to the greater part of the book), Bp. Colenso, and others.

The works, in which the above assertions are put forth, are as follows:—

Vaihinger, in Herzog's Encycl. xi. 316.

Bunsen's Bibelwerk, 2te Abtheilung, 264.

V. Lengerke, Kanaan, 1844.

Ewald, Geschichte d. Volk Isr. i. 156—171.

Riehm, Gesetzgebung im Lande Moab, p. 105.

Bleek, Einleitung, pp. 165, 301.

De Wette, Einleitung, § 155.

Von Bohlen on Genesis, i. 270.

Knobel, Exeg. Handbuch, xiii.

Dr. Davidson, Introduction to the Old Testament, Lond., 1862.

Bp. Colenso, The Pentateuch and Book of Joshua critically examined, Lond., 1863, Part III.

⁴ Deut. i. 9.

⁵ i. 20.

⁶ i. 22.

⁷ i. 37.

⁸ De Wette, Ewald, Bleek, Riehm, and others, whose arguments have been reproduced, with additions, by Bp. Colenso, on the Pentateuch, Part III., Lond., 1863.

INTRODUCTION

(1) Because, as to many of its statements, it is inconsistent in substance with the foregoing parts of the Pentateuch.

(2) Because in style it differs greatly from the rest of the Pentateuch.

On these two allegations, one preliminary remark may be offered.

It is generally allowed that the writer of Deuteronomy had the preceding parts of the Pentateuch before him. One of the critics above mentioned says, "There is no doubt that the Deuteronomist built on the historical facts embodied in the former part of the Pentateuch. He presupposes them as well known. He alludes to them throughout. It appears that the Deuteronomist had the written books before him with all their contents¹."

This is a candid avowal; and indeed it is inevitable. The writer of Deuteronomy, whoever he may be, was a Hebrew writer of great natural endowments and intellectual acquirements, and if with the above-mentioned critics we suppose that he lived after the time of Moses, and that his design in Deuteronomy was to personate Moses, it is certain that he would carefully study the books of Moses; and being a Hebrew writer, well skilled in the language, he would at least be as much conversant with those writings as his critics are who live 3000 years after Moses, and do not speak the language which Moses wrote. The writer of Deuteronomy had before his eyes those very books from which his critics profess to convict him of inconsistency and error.

This being presumed, let us be allowed to appeal to common sense; which is sometimes more sagacious than what is called shrewdness, especially when that shrewdness is allied with self-confidence, and speaks in a tone of arrogance and presumption concerning those writings which have been universally received as the Word of God by the Church of God.

Suppose the case of a writer desirous to personate Moses, and setting himself down to write a book in the name of Moses. And such a book Deuteronomy is. Is it not certain, that such a Hebrew writer would have taken good care not to deviate from the sacred history as written by Moses in the foregoing books, received as genuine by the whole Hebrew Nation; and that he would have conformed exactly to that narrative? Is it not also certain, that he would not have written in a different style from that in which the foregoing books of Moses are written? A forger wishing to counterfeit a signature makes a fac-simile of it. A writer, wishing to palm Deuteronomy on the Hebrew Nation in the name of their great Lawgiver, would assuredly have taken good care to copy the other books which were universally recognized by that Nation as written by Moses; and he would have been especially careful not to excite suspicions of the fraud, by variations from the facts of the history, or from the style of those other writings. And if he had produced a book, such as Deuteronomy is, containing many additions to the history contained in those other writings, and greatly differing from them in style, the chance of the reception of his book, as a genuine work of Moses, first coming forth into the world, as these critics assure us, seven hundred years after his death, and of its adoption, as an integral part of Scripture, into the Canon of the Hebrew Nation, then scattered in different parts of the world, and of its reception into all the copies of all their Bibles, as a genuine and divinely-inspired book of the great Hebrew Lawgiver—a chance not very great under any circumstances—would have been greatly diminished, so as in fact to become infinitely small, and to vanish altogether.

But what is the fact?

The Book of Deuteronomy is not only found in all the Manuscripts of the Hebrew Bible, but is contained in all the Manuscripts of the Samaritan Pentateuch also, and in the Septuagint Version made by Hellenistic Jews in Egypt, and in all the other Ancient Versions; and every word of it is read as genuine, and inspired, in all the Hebrew Synagogues throughout the world; and, as far as we know, no voice was ever raised by any one of that vast community to challenge its claim; no whisper was ever breathed to dispute its title to be a true, genuine, and divinely-inspired writing of Moses; and it has been reserved for writers living at a distance of more than 3000 years after the death of Moses, to discover for the first time, that the whole Hebrew Nation, as well as the whole Christian Church—to say nothing now of a still more sacred Authority, that of JESUS CHRIST Himself—has been imposed upon by a cheat, and has canonized an imposture, in attributing Deuteronomy to Moses. Truly, this "modern scientific Biblical criticism" (as it calls itself) is a very credulous and superstitious thing; and requires us to accept, at its own arbitrary dictation, propositions far more improbable and monstrous than any thing which it rejects.

We need not hesitate to say that the seeming variations in the substance of Deuteronomy, as compared with the other parts of the Pentateuch, and the acknowledged difference of style between it and those other parts, so far from being proofs of spuriousness, as is alleged by some, do, in fact, present a primâ facie evidence in its favour.

¹ See Dr. Davidson's Introduction to the Old Testament, i. p. 386.

Let us proceed to analyze the objections themselves. In the following notes they will be examined seriatim, as they occur in the course of the book; but it may be convenient to place before the reader a few specimens of them, which may serve to illustrate their true character.

(1) It is alleged, that Deuteronomy could not have been written by Moses, because the Priests are called in this book "the Priests the Levites," and are never called "the sons of Aaron," as they are constantly in the foregoing parts of the Pentateuch¹.

"It is impossible," we are assured², "that any writer should have so suddenly changed his form of expression in such a case as this."

This allegation proceeds from the fruitful source of many similar objections—a want of attention to the difference of the circumstances of Deuteronomy, as compared with Exodus and Leviticus, and a great part of Numbers.

Deuteronomy, be it remembered, consists of speeches, purporting to be spoken by Moses to Israel in the eleventh month of the last year of the wanderings³.

Exodus is a history, ending with the setting up of the Tabernacle at Sinai about *thirty-nine years before*⁴.

Leviticus is a Code of Laws, delivered by God to Moses in the Tabernacle at Sinai, nearly thirty-nine years before a single word of Deuteronomy was spoken⁵.

The first fourteen chapters of Numbers concern events which took place within a short time after Leviticus was delivered.

Only the last fifteen chapters of Numbers refer to the same time as Deuteronomy; and in them the Priests are never called the "sons of Aaron." Indeed the word Priests, in the plural number, does not occur in them at all.

But how then are we to account for this difference of language in the designation of the Priests in Deuteronomy?

Let the reader bear in mind, that in the interval of nearly forty years between the facts related in Exodus, Leviticus, the first part of Numbers, and the delivery of the speeches in Deuteronomy, a remarkable event took place—the rebellion of Korah, and of the Levites associated with him, against Aaron the Priest; and that Almighty God vindicated the priestly prerogative of Aaron and his sons against that insurrection by the awful judgment upon Korah and his company, related in the sixteenth chapter of Numbers; and by the miracle recorded in the next chapter of Numbers, the budding of Aaron's rod, which was to be laid up in the Holy of Holies, for a witness of his prerogative, and that of his sons.

At the time when Deuteronomy purports to have been written, this question of priestly superiority had been settled. Aaron was now dead, and Moses also was about to die. Surely it was very fitting, that Moses should leave behind him a lesson of unity and love. He had described in Leviticus and Numbers the respective functions of the Priests and of the Levites. He had recorded in Numbers the signal interventions of God, marking the difference of their functions. What could he now do better, in the farewell words of Deuteronomy, than to exhort the Priests and Levites to live in harmony together? And what title could he find better adapted to the Priests, in order to produce this happy result, than this very one which is given them in Deuteronomy, "the Priests the Levites?" By the adoption of this title, he seems to say to the Priests, on the one hand, "Bear in mind that ye are from the same original stock as the Levites; ye, as well as they, are from a common father, Levi; and therefore, ye Priests, do not lord it over the Levites, but treat them as brethren: treat them as those who are from the same earthly progenitor as yourselves, and who are associated with you in the service of the same heavenly Father and God. And on the other hand, ye Levites, do not forget that the Priests are your own flesh and blood: therefore serve them cheerfully; their dignity reflects lustre on you; and remember that they are something more than Levites, that they are also Priests, which ye are not, and therefore they are entitled to reverential deference from you⁷."

In confirmation of these statements, it may be observed, that this designation, "the Priests the ¹ See Deut. xvii. 9. 18; xxi. 5; xxiv. 8; xxvii. 9; xxx. 1. 9.

² See below, xvii. 9, where the references are given.

³ By Bp. Colenso, § 542. The same is said by Dr. David-

⁴ See i. 3.

⁵ Exod. xl. 17.

⁶ See Lev. i. 1; xxvii. 34. Cp. Num. x. 11.

⁷ It is well said by Schultz (p. 375) that the design of Moses in Deuteronomy is "to exhibit the unity of the Priests and Levites, rather than their difference."

Levites," is adopted by the writer of the next book to that of Deuteronomy, the Book of Joshua. There also the Priests are called "the Priests the Levites'." Will the critics assert that the Book of Joshua also was written many hundred years after his death?

(2) Another objection, somewhat similar to the former, is this:—

The Author of Deuteronomy, in the eleventh chapter, is appealing to the mighty acts of the Lord, and he refers to the sin and punishment of Dathan and Abiram: "Know ye this day, what the Lord did unto you in the wilderness until ye came into this place: and what He did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben: how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the substance that was in their possession, in the midst of all Israel."

Here, it is objected, "nothing is said about the death of Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, who, according to Numbers xvi., perished fearfully at the same time. The sin of Korah and his company is stated to have been this, that though they were only Levites they sought the Priesthood also (Num. xvi. 10). This it would seem was considered not to be such a very grievous sin in the days of the Deuteronomist;" whom the critics suppose to have lived seven hundred years after the days of Moses.

Here again we do not hesitate to say, that if the sagacity of the critics had been at all equal to their self-confidence, they would have immediately discerned, that the very circumstance, on which they ground their objection, and which they make to be an evidence of spuriousness, is in fact a sign of genuineness.

A fabricator, living after the age of Moses, and counterfeiting Moses, and having the history in the sixteenth chapter of the Book of Moses, called Numbers, before him, would probably not have omitted Korah when he was speaking of Dathan and Abiram, his associates in rebellion.

But let us consider the position—not of a forger, personating Moses—but of Moses himself.

Deuteronomy, as we have already observed, contains a series of speeches addressed by Moses to the People, at the end of their wanderings, and giving them warnings and exhortations derived from their history in those wanderings.

The rebellion of Dathan and Abiram was a rebellion of a part of the People against their civil Rulers; but the insurrection of Korah was not a mutiny of the People against their superiors; but it was a rising of a lower order of the Clergy, the Levites, against the superior hierarchy, Aaron and the Priests.

A bad orator, who did not understand his business, whose memory was better than his judgment, and who remembered that Korah's rebellion coincided in time with that of Dathan and Abiram, would probably have done, what our critics say ought to have been done; and would have read to the Hebrew People a lecture on the sins of one portion of their Clergy against the other. But a skilful orator, like Moses, would have been content to remind the People of those warnings which concerned themselves, and to leave the Clergy to learn those lessons which he had taught them in the proper place, in the Book of Numbers. If the critics in question ever write charges and sermons, do they think it their duty to preach to the People on the sins of the Clergy? If they do, they must allow us to say, that their oratory is as irrelevant, as their criticism is irreverent.

(3) It is objected also, that only in Deuteronomy, and not in any foregoing part of the Pentateuch, is it declared by Almighty God, that there would be one special place, which the Lord would choose to put His Name there; and that to that place all sacrifices must be brought.

This, it is alleged, is a proof that Deuteronomy could not have been written by the same person, and at the same time, as the rest of the Pentateuch.

Inasmuch also, as in the times of the Judges and of Prophets, such as Samuel, Elijah, and Elisha, sacrifices were offered in various places; and inasmuch as this was done "under the most pious kings, such as Asa and Jehoshaphat," it is clear (we are told) that no such law then existed, and that its promulgation in Deuteronomy is "indicative of such a time as that of Hezekiah, or more probably Josiah"³—viz., more than seven hundred years after the death of Moses.

Here also the objection recoils on those who make it. First of all, the injunction in Deuteronomy, that Sacrifices should be offered only "in the place" which the Lord God of Israel should choose out of his tribes in Canaan, is quite in harmony with the command given in *Exodus*⁴,

¹ Josh. iii. 33; viii. 3.

² Bp. Colenso on the Pentateuch, § 634. And in the same tone Dr. Davidson before him had said (p. 356), "It is worthy of remark that the Deuteronomist passes over the Levite Korah, because in his (the Deuteronomist's) eyes, there was nothing improper in aspiring to the Priesthood."

³ Bp. Colenso on the Pentateuch, iii. p. 466, § 637, 638. And before him, the same objection had been urged by Dr. Davidson, pp. 405, 406; and before both, by De Wette, Beitr. zur Einleitung, &c. i. 223.

⁴ Exod. xxiii. 17. Cp. xxxiv. 23. Lev. xvii. 4.

“Three times in the year all the males shall appear before the Lord thy God;” and with the injunction in Leviticus, that, while the Israelites were wandering in the wilderness, they should bring all their Sacrifices to the door of the Tabernacle, to offer them there unto the Lord; and with the warning, that whoever failed to do so, “that man should be cut off from among his people.”

The command in Deuteronomy, which was delivered on the eve of the entrance into Canaan, was only an application, suited to that time, of the Law delivered in the wilderness. Further, although it is true, that, as the Psalmist says¹, God “forsook the Tabernacle of Shiloh, and chose the Tribe of Judah, the Mount Zion, which he loved;” and that thither in David’s days “the tribes went up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel²;” yet, doubtless, not only in the times of the Judges, which were times of disorder, but also in the days of Samuel and of Saul, sacrifices were offered to the Lord in *various places*³; and when the ten tribes revolted from Judah, “Jeroboam, the king of Israel, said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David, if this people go up to sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem.” . . . “Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem. Behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt; and he set the one in Bethel, and the other put he in *Dan*⁴.”

Now, suppose the case of a writer wishing to personate Moses, and to gain acceptance among the tribes of Israel for his writing, is it probable that he would have introduced a requirement such as is continually inculcated in Deuteronomy, which proclaims the duty of resorting to one place, and one only, for sacrifice, and which forbids and condemns the offering of sacrifice in any other place? Such an injunction contravened and condemned the fundamental principle on which the schismatical kingdom of Israel was based. Suppose also, that a writing had been produced long after the age of Moses, and contained such an injunction as this, and denounced the contrary practice, is it possible that it would ever have gained currency in the kingdom of Israel? Suppose also that this writing purported to be from Moses himself, as Deuteronomy does, is it not certain, that the forgery would have been exposed, and the impostor have been condemned, by the kings and people of Israel?

Again; it is alleged by some of these critics, that Deuteronomy was not produced till the reign of Manasseh or Josiah—that is, not till after the destruction of the Kingdom of Israel.

But this allegation only creates a greater difficulty still.

Is it likely, that a forger, wishing to gain acceptance for his writing among the Hebrew People, should have prescribed something to all Israelites—namely, attendance at one place for worship, which, after the dispersion of Israel, had become more difficult than ever? And if such a writing with such an injunction had then first appeared in the world, purporting (as Deuteronomy does) to come from Moses, is it not certain, that if the writing ever found its way into the hands of the dispersed Israelites, such an injunction would have caused the scattered tribes to examine its claims with the most jealous scrutiny?

But what is the state of the case?

As has been already said, Deuteronomy is not only contained in all the Manuscripts of the Hebrew Bible, but in all those of the Samaritan Pentateuch. It is found in the Septuagint Version made by Jews of the Hellenistic dispersion, and received by the Hellenists as their Authorized Version, and is read in all the Synagogues of Israelites throughout the world. It is received and read by them there, as the genuine and inspired work of the great Hebrew Lawgiver. And notwithstanding the dispersion of the Tribes, and notwithstanding the rival claims of the Samaritan Temple of Gerizim, the injunction in Deuteronomy, requiring all Israelites to resort to one place for worship, had the wonderful power of inducing the Israelites to encounter toil, and to endure fatigue, and to sacrifice their time, and to relinquish their worldly business, and to undertake long journeys to Jerusalem from all parts of the world. It has had the extraordinary effect of making the dispersed myriads of Israel to gravitate with a mysterious centripetal force to one place; it had the effect of bringing “devout men to Jerusalem year after year from every climate under heaven,” as long as the Temple stood, and sacrifices were offered there.

How can this wonderful phenomenon be accounted for, except by the fact, that Deuteronomy is, what it professes to be, the work of Moses himself?

Here therefore again the very thing, that is made an occasion for an objection to Deuteronomy, becomes an argument in favour of its genuineness.

Moses, when delivering God’s laws in Leviticus, at the beginning of the Wanderings, while the

¹ Ps. lxxviii. 60. 68.

² Ps. cxlii. 4.

to the First Book of Samuel.

³ See however some limitations to this below, in the note on Deut. xii. 5. For the reasons of this variety, see the Introduction

⁴ 1 Kings xii. 13, 14. 18. 21. 26; xiv. 23—25; xv. 6; xvii 8; xviii. 6; xxvi. 2.

INTRODUCTION

Israelites were on their pilgrimage through the Wilderness, was commanded to announce the Divine Will that all sacrifices should be brought to the *door of the Tabernacle*¹; and when he was at the end of the wanderings, and when the Israelites were about to be settled in Canaan, then he declared in Deuteronomy God's further will, that they should not offer their burnt-offerings in every place that they saw, but in the place which the Lord their God should choose in one of their tribes².

What could be a more natural sequel and development of the previous law in Leviticus, than this law in Deuteronomy? But it is utterly impossible, that when seven hundred years had elapsed after the death of Moses, such a law, as that in Deuteronomy, should then have been promulgated for the first time; or if then first promulgated, that the history in which it was published should have found its way into all the copies of the Hebrew Scriptures in the hands of the Israelites scattered throughout the world, and have been received by the dispersed millions of the Hebrew Nation, as a genuine work of Moses, and have been read as such in their synagogues, and have been complied with at such cost of time and labour in their practice, continued without interruption for many years, and indeed as long as compliance with it was practicable. The thing is not only improbable, it is simply and absolutely impossible; and those critics who would require us to accept such an hypothesis as this, at their arbitrary dictation, show little knowledge of human nature, and little capacity for dealing with moral evidence. Their scepticism is only equalled by their credulity. And it is punished by that credulity, as by a just retribution. And yet they have the modesty to demand that Christendom should abandon its ancient faith in the genuineness and inspiration of Deuteronomy, and should accept their crude theories in its stead!

(4) These considerations will appear even still more cogent, when it is remembered, that among the Blessings pronounced upon the Tribes of Israel at the close of *Deuteronomy*³ the name of one of the Tribes does not appear; Simeon is omitted.

Now, let us ask, would any forger, wishing to gain acceptance for his writing among the Tribes of Israel, have ventured to encounter the hostility of a whole tribe, by casting upon it such a slur as this? And if he had done so, is it imaginable that this whole Tribe should have remained quiet, and have patiently submitted to such an indignity? Is it conceivable, that no one of that Tribe should have ever arisen, to remonstrate and protest against it, and to denounce the impostor? And this is still more remarkable in the case of the particular Tribe that is omitted—the Tribe of Simeon. That Tribe produced some of the most learned men of the Hebrew Nation. Simeon was the Tribe from which the greatest number of the Scribes and Doctors of the Law proceeded. And, if Deuteronomy had been an imposture, would they all have accepted Deuteronomy as a part of the Law of Moses, and have expounded it to the people as such, when their own Tribe was thus, as it were, excommunicated in it?

(5) We may now pass on to consider the argument from style.

It is true that Deuteronomy differs greatly in style from the other parts of the Pentateuch. We do not need the elaborate collections that have been made of peculiar phrases⁴ occurring in Deuteronomy, to convince us of the difference. It is obvious at first sight.

But the question is, does this difference of style prove difference of authorship?

No; rather it confirms the argument for the identity of origin.

Let us suppose, with the objectors, that a Hebrew writer, a man of genius and learning, such as the writer of Deuteronomy confessedly was, had desired to palm on the world (the reader will pardon the supposition, which is forced upon us) an imposture in the name of Moses, and to gain admittance for his apocryphal work into the Canon of the Hebrew Scriptures,—is it not certain that he would carefully have studied the other acknowledged writings of Moses? that he would have read them over and over, and almost learnt them by heart, and would have endeavoured to imbibe their spirit, and have made them the model of his style?

Assuredly he would.

But the author of Deuteronomy has not done this. The critics have successfully displayed the great difference between the diction of Deuteronomy and that of the other parts of the Pentateuch. We thank them for this evidence, and we gratefully accept it at their hands.

But now let us suppose the other alternative. Let us suppose the author of Deuteronomy to be Moses; can this difference be accounted for?

With perfect ease. Deuteronomy is not a history, like Genesis, Exodus, and Numbers. Deuteronomy is not a code, like Leviticus. Deuteronomy is a series of speeches: it is a prophecy: it is a poem.

¹ Lev. xvii. 3—9.

² Deut. xii. 13, 14.

³ Chap. xx

Some however of these differences are imaginary. See below, on ⁴ e. g. by Bp. Colenso, pp. 400—406. Dr. Davidson, p. xiii.

i. 13; ii. 7.

This is acknowledged by the objectors themselves. Thus one of these critics¹ says, "Whereas the other parts of the Pentateuch are occupied almost entirely with long details of legend or history, with multiplied repetitions of the minutæ of the ceremonial law,—the Book of Deuteronomy, on the contrary, almost from the beginning to the end, is one magnificent poem."

Let us therefore be permitted here to ask the critics one question; do they find the same style, or even the same dialect, in the lyrical portions of the same dramas of Æschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides, as they do in the dialogues of those plays? Do they not find even in the same Comedies of Aristophanes (the *Clouds*² for instance) specimens of dithyrambic diction, worthy of Pindar, interwoven with the daily dialect of the Athenian Agora? Scarcely a single phrase of the one portion would be found to occur in the other. And may we not be allowed to remind them of Bentley's remark on the difference of forms, even of the same words³, in Horace's Odes, and in his Epistles? Will they not allow us to refer them to the immense difference between the style of St. John, when writing a narrative in his Gospel, and when inditing a prophecy in the Apocalypse? The grammatical forms of one are very different from those of the other. The nomenclature is different. Even the name of "the Lamb" undergoes a change⁴. In the Gospel of St. John, the word Amen is always doubled, and is always at the beginning of a sentence; in the Apocalypse, never.

Still, however, together with these differences of style between Deuteronomy and the other parts of the Pentateuch, we have many marks of identity of authorship even in the diction itself. We find in Deuteronomy the same characteristic archaisms as are found in those other portions of the Pentateuch, and which rarely occur in any other part of the Hebrew Scriptures⁵.

(6) It has been rightly observed by some recent critics, that there is much similarity between the style of Deuteronomy, and that of the prophet Jeremiah⁶; but those critics are not agreed among themselves, whether Jeremiah imitated Deuteronomy, or whether the writer of Deuteronomy imitated Jeremiah; or may not even have been Jeremiah himself⁷.

How is this similarity of style to be accounted for?

The most probable explanation of it is, that the Prophet Jeremiah adopted in his own prophecies many of the phrases of Deuteronomy, and also many of the thoughts and feelings expressed in that Book. And no wonder. Moses was the first writer of sacred prophecy. Succeeding Prophets re-echo the language of their predecessors. St. John, the last prophet of Scripture, repeats the words of almost all the Prophets from the beginning⁸. It was very likely, that Jeremiah, perhaps more than any other Hebrew Prophet, should desire to remind the Hebrew Nation of the words of Deuteronomy. He lived to see the fulfilment of those curses for disobedience, which are pre-announced in this Book⁹; and he might reasonably desire to call the attention of the Hebrew Nation to the fulfilment of the prophecies uttered by Moses, and to the evidence thence to be derived of God's righteousness and truth, and of the consequent duty of repentance and obedience on their part; and he would thence be led to suggest, as he does, the cheering consolation, that the gracious promises which God had announced in Deuteronomy to Israel would be accomplished also¹⁰, if they turned to Him with contrite hearts.

If this supposition is correct, then we have here another proof of the genuineness and import-

¹ Bp. Colenso, p. 392.

² Aristoph., Nub. 275—290. 299—311.

³ Such as Circe. See Bentley on Horat., Epod. xvii. 17.

⁴ In St. John's Gospel Christ is called 'Αμνός, but always 'Αρνίον in the Apocalypse. See below, on Rev. v. 6; xvii. 3.

⁵ The form דָּוָה is used as a feminine 195 times in the Pentateuch, 36 of which are in Deuteronomy, and the feminine דָּוָה never occurs in Deuteronomy (cp. Gesen. 218). So דָּוָה is used as a feminine in Deuteronomy, as in the other parts of the Pentateuch (cp. Gesen. 555); and the feminine דָּוָה occurs only once (xxii. 19). In like manner, the demonstrative pronoun דָּוָה for דָּוָה is found in Deuteronomy as well as in other parts of the Pentateuch, and in no other part of the Hebrew Scriptures, except 1 Chron. xx. 8: cp. Ezra v. 15 (which is Aramaic). The form דָּוָה of the third person of the preterite, which, in prose, is found only in the Pentateuch, is found in Deuteronomy xix. 4, and in other places (cp. Ewald, § 142). And in Deuteronomy the archaic דָּוָה (xiv. 4) is found for דָּוָה, which is not the case in later books: also the antique form דָּוָה (xvi. 16; xx. 13), for דָּוָה, which is the only form found in the later books. The use of the ה locale, which is rare in the later books, is found in Deuteronomy as well as in other parts of the Pentateuch. Other archaisms, common to Deuteronomy and other parts of the Pentateuch, and very rarely found in other parts of the Hebrew Scriptures, may be seen in Delitzsch, Gen. p. 26; Keil, Einleitung in d. alt. Test. pp. 34. 99; Schultz, Deuteron. p. 73; and in Perowne, in Dr. Smith's Bibl. Dict., ii. 783.

⁶ Von Bohlen. Cp. Bp. Colenso, § 558. 562. Davidson, p. 385.

⁷ Which is Bp. Colenso's conjecture, § 577. 868, who suggests that Deuteronomy was the book of the Law which was said to be found in the Temple in the days of Josiah—2 Kings xxii. 8; xxiii. 2, 3. 21; and says that to this supposition there is no objection, "except the moral difficulty which we find in attributing such a proceeding to good men, to Hilkiah, and perhaps Jeremiah. But we must not judge of those times by our own." Our morals are so much purer than those of Jeremiah! On the contrary, Dr. Davidson says (p. 385), "it must not be supposed that Jeremiah was the writer of the Book of Deuteronomy, in whole or in part." So consistent is scepticism with itself! On Jeremiah's relation to Deuteronomy see below Intr. to Jeremiah.

⁸ See below, Introduction to the Book of Revelation, p. 150, and Dr. Pusey, Lectures on Daniel, p. 308.

⁹ Deut. xxviii., xxxii., on the margin of which two chapters the reader will see nearly forty references to the Prophecies and Lamentations of Jeremiah—collations of more value, because they are made without any reference to the question at issue. See also Küper's "Jeremias librorum sacrorum interpres," Berlin. 1837.

¹⁰ See Deut. xxx. 1—3. Cp. with Jer. xxxii. 37. 39, and xxiv. 5—7.

ance of Deuteronomy. Deuteronomy professes to be a work of Moses himself. The Holy Spirit, speaking by Jeremiah, would very probably have referred to the words which He had uttered by Moses; but He would not have adopted the words of an impostor.

(7) Let us now consider further the external evidence of the genuineness of Deuteronomy.

The Church of England puts into our hands the Book of Deuteronomy as "the Fifth Book of Moses." She reads it as such in her churches to her people. She treats this Book with special reverence and affection, as one of the most edifying portions of Holy Writ. She reads the whole of it (one chapter excepted¹) in her public congregations. Is she practising a fraud upon her people? Is she reading an imposture? Is she canonizing a forgery? Is she palming on them a spurious counterfeit, as the Word of the God of Truth?

The recent critics, referred to at the beginning of these remarks, assert that she is. It is affirmed by one of that number, that it may "be ranked among the most certain results of modern scientific Biblical Criticism" that Deuteronomy was not written by Moses, but first appeared in the world some 700 years after his death.

Some reasons have now been offered for rejecting this conclusion, which is so confidently asserted.

But in a question of this kind we cannot be content to lean on our own understandings. Let us refer it to the All-wise God, the God of Truth. "What advantage hath the Jew?" asks the divinely-inspired Apostle, St. Paul². "Much every way," he replies, "chiefly because unto them were committed the oracles of God." The critics will not deny that among these oracles of God, which the Jews received, was Deuteronomy. What, if this Book was an imposture? could it be any special advantage, any signal privilege, to the Jew, to be deluded by a counterfeit? to read as a work of Moses, and as a writing inspired by God, a forgery put forth some hundred years after the death of Moses?

But further; the Holy Spirit Himself, speaking by the same Apostle (who, as a learned "Hebrew of the Hebrews," was, even on natural grounds, as good a judge of the genuineness of a Hebrew writing, and therefore of Deuteronomy, as our modern "scientific Biblical Critics"), refers to Deuteronomy, in the New Testament; and he ascribes it to Moses. He quotes it largely in the tenth chapter of that Epistle³, and he identifies it with *Moses*⁴,—"Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation will I anger you." Was the divine Apostle also deceived by an imposture? Was the Holy Spirit, who inspired Him, deluded by a forgery and a fraud?

In like manner, the Apostle St. Peter, when filled with the Holy Ghost, spake to the people at Jerusalem⁵,—"Moses truly said unto your fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you." St. Peter is there quoting from *Deuteronomy*⁶. And St. Stephen, whose wisdom none was able to resist⁷, thus addressed the Jewish Sanhedrim⁸: "This is that Moses, which said unto the children of Israel, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear." St. Stephen is quoting from Deuteronomy. Were St. Peter and St. Stephen also cheated by an imposture, or did they practise a fraud on their hearers?

(8) Further still. When the Son of God came into the world, and when He, "Who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life," and Who came "to bear Witness of the Truth," and "in Whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," was "led up by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the Devil," what weapon did He then choose to wield against the Tempter? and with what weapon did He vanquish him? The Book of Deuteronomy. Three times Christ was tempted by Satan, and three times did the Holy One of God draw forth the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. Three times He said, "It is WRITTEN;" it is written in God's Word. He uttered three sentences; and each of these three sentences is from Deuteronomy⁹. Did He, Who is the Truth, resort to an imposture for defence? Did the Son of God overcome the Tempter by a fraud?—"Hæret lateri lethalis arundo." It would seem as if the Evil Spirit were still smarting from the weapon, by which he received his wound from the Son of God at the Temptation; and as if he were straining every nerve, in these latter days, to prove the spuriousness of Deuteronomy, by means of the self-idolizing arrogance of this so-called "scientific Biblical Criticism."

Once more. When Our Blessed Lord was declaring what are the two great Commandments,

¹ Chap. xxiii.

² Rom. iii. 1.

⁵ Acts iii. 22.

⁶ xviii. 15.

³ Rom. x. 5. 8. Cp. Deut. xxx. 11-14. Cp. Rom. xv., and Deut. xxxii. 43.

⁷ Acts vi. 10.

⁸ Acts vii. 37.

⁴ Rom. x. 19. Cp. Deut. xxxii. 21.

⁹ See Matt. iv. 4: cp. Deut. viii. 3. Matt. iv. 7: cp. Deut. vi. 16. Matt. iv. 10: cp. Deut. vi. 13.

He adopted the words of Deuteronomy, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is One Lord¹;" and "thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart and with all thy soul²." Did Christ resort to a counterfeit in order to teach the truth?

If, therefore, the question at issue with regard to the genuineness of Deuteronomy compelled us to make our choice between what are called the sure results of "modern scientific Biblical Criticism," and the infallible testimony of Him Who is the Light of the World, our answer must be with St. Peter, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the Words of Eternal Life³."

If modern Biblical Criticism is resolved to stake its reputation on this issue, this is to be deeply regretted for its own sake. It will have signed its death-warrant with its own hand; it will have warned all who value the Truth and their own souls, not to follow so blind a guide.

But while we must not be surprised by any words of those who treat Holy Scripture with contumely and contempt; and while we are sure, that they who reject Deuteronomy as an imposture (a book which Christ and His Apostles received as a part of the lively oracles of God) must draw upon themselves the righteous wrath of God, and be punished with intellectual and spiritual blindness by Him, as a just retribution for their contemptuous and disdainful treatment of His Holy Word, and have, therefore, disqualified themselves for the high and holy work of Biblical Criticism, we are not willing that they should claim to themselves to be the sole representatives of Modern Scientific Biblical Criticism; we have the satisfaction of knowing, that there are many other recent Biblical Critics⁴, whose knowledge is sanctified by grace, and enlightened with the Holy Spirit of God, who devoutly receive and revere Deuteronomy as the genuine and divinely-inspired work of Moses, with the Church of England and the Church Universal, and with the Ancient Hebrew Church, and with the blessed Apostles of Christ, and with the Son of God Himself.

(9) There is something inexpressibly solemn, as well as unspeakably joyful, in the tones of Deuteronomy, avouched as the genuine utterance of the great Hebrew Lawgiver, by Christ Himself.

In this book, Moses no longer comes before us as an Historian, or a Legislator; but he appears as a grand Orator, a sublime Poet, a heart-stirring Preacher, a divinely-inspired Prophet of God. After a life of one hundred and twenty years, he is now about to depart, and to be with God. This magnificent prophecy is his farewell voice to the world. It shows how true the witness of those who then beheld him is, that "his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated⁵."

From the heights of Pisgah he surveyed the hills and valleys, the lakes and rivers, of Palestine; and his inner eye ranged over the wide-spread scenery of coming events. The Map of the future was unrolled before him; he prophesied of Israel's destinies, even till the Coming of Christ⁶.

Thus he was a type and figure of the Levitical Law. He was a specimen of all the holy men who lived and died under it. He did not cross the confines of the temporal Canaan; but he was about to pass into the regions of the spiritual antitype; and he cheers us with a glorious vision of a blessed Death, and of the land beyond it. We lose sight of Moses on the specular height of Pisgah; but the next thing we hear of him is, that he is brought to be a witness and partaker of Christ's glory on the Mount of Transfiguration⁷. He there saw the reality of what he had seen in the visions of the future. And if his departure was so joyful, when he saw Christ in the distance, how happy is the death-bed of the faithful Christian, who believes the Holy Scriptures to be the unerring Word of God; and who has in those Scriptures a clear view of that better country, which Christ Himself has revealed to his eyes; and which the Eternal Son has prepared for him by His glorious Ascension into heaven, and by His session at the right hand of God!

¹ Mark xii. 29. Cp. Deut. vi. 4.

² Matt. xxii. 37. Cp. Deut. xxx. 6.

³ John vi. 68.

⁴ See for example Hengstenberg, Authentic d. Pent. ii. p. 247. Hävernick, Einleitung, i. p. 473. Keil, Einleitung in d. a. Test. § 28. Kurtz, History of the Old Covenant, iii. 470. Delitzsch, Genesis, pp. 24. 62. Professor Rawlinson, Aids to Faith, Essay vi. The valuable Prolegomena of Schultz's d. Deuter. erklärt, 1859, pp. 27—97. Perowne, Rev. J. J. S., in Dr. Smith's Diet. of the Bible, ii. 782.

⁵ Deut. xxxiv. 7.

⁶ See chap. xxxiii.

⁷ Mark ix. 4.

DEUTERONOMY.

a Josh. 9. 1, 10.
& 22. 4, 7.
|| Or, Zaph.

b Num. 13. 26.
ch. 9. 23.
c Num. 33. 38.

d Num. 21. 24, 33.

I. ¹ THESE be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel ^a on this side Jordan in the wilderness, in the plain over against || the Red sea, between Paran, and Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizahab. ² (There are eleven days' journey from Horeb by the way of mount Seir ^b unto Kadesh-barnea.) ³ And it came to pass ^c in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spake unto the children of Israel, according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them: ⁴ ^d After he had

CH. I.] Here begins a new Section of the Law as read in the Synagogues, and extends to iii. 22.

The parallel Lesson from the Prophets is Isa. i. 1—27, where God remonstrates with His people for their rebellion, and exhorts them to repentance and obedience. The ancient Hebrew Church has connected the prophecies of Isaiah in a special manner with the Book of Deuteronomy, by appointing nine Proper Lessons out of Fourteen to be read from those prophecies, together with the Proper Lessons from this book.

1. These be the words] Heb. elleh had-debarim, the title given to this Book in the Hebrew Bibles (cp. Gen. i. 1). Its Greek name—Deuteronomy—is derived from the words in xvii. 18. The word Deuteronomy is not so to be understood as if Moses here designed to give a second Law (see Num. xxxvi. 13), but now in the last year and month of his life he reminds the people under his charge of what he had already delivered to them, and which is contained in the foregoing parts of the Pentateuch (Theodoret).

— all Israel] Cp. v. 1. How, it has been asked, could Moses speak to all Israel,—more than two millions of people? and this sentence has also been alleged as a proof of spuriousness (Colenso, § 584). The mode of doing it had been pointed out by God Himself (Exod. iii. 16), “Go and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them” (cp. Exod. iv. 29; and above, Lev. xxiv. 14, where “all the congregation” are said to stone the blasphemer; and cp. McCaul, p. 24; and Rogers, Mosaic Records, p. 58). The phrases “all Israel,” “all the congregation,” are used in innumerable places of the Bible to describe any national gathering. See for instance 1 Sam. vii. 3; xii. 1. 19. 1 Kings viii. 2. 14. 22. 55. 62; xii. 12, 13. 16; xviii. 19. 21. Cp. Matt. ii. 3.

— on this side Jordan] Heb. le-eber hay-yarden, and Sept. has πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου. Moses speaks from his own point of view. Comp. iv. 45, 46; and the use of the words in Josh. i. 15; 1 Sam. xiv. 40; and Bp. Patrick's note here; and Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. 313—324; Schultz, p. 27; and see Matt. iv. 15.

— in the plain] Heb. Arabah, the name still borne by the long broad vale, or wady, which stretches down from the Dead Sea southward to the Ælaniatic branch (the gulf of Akabah) of the Red Sea.

— against the Red sea] that is, towards the gulf of Akabah. Cp. Num. xiv. 25; xxi. 4.

— between Paran] that is, the station so called (Num. x. 12; xii. 16), near Kadesh in the Wilderness of Zin (Num. xiii. 21. 26), where the spies brought an evil report of the land, and the people murmured, and the murmurers were excluded by God from Canaan (xiv. 1—26). Moses is here specifying certain places which were memorable for the disobedience and rebellion of the people, and for their evil consequences. See the Targum of Onkelos here.

— Tophel] Perhaps the site now called Tafyleh, a large town, on the frontier of Moab and Edom, a few miles to the S.E. of the Dead Sea. (Hengst., Bileam, p. 223; Robinson; Burckh.; Keil, p. 390.) Moses seems to be specifying the two extreme limits of the march. Between the haltings at Paran and Tophel there was an interval of thirty-eight years.

— Laban] identified by some with the second station in the retrograde movement of the Israelites from Kadesh (Num. xxxiii. 18); perhaps the place where the rebellion of Korah occurred. Num. xvi. (Keil).

— Hazeroth] where Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses (Num. xi. 35; xii. 1—16).

— Dizahab] Supposed by some to be Mirsa Dahab, or Mina Dahab; on the west coast of the gulf of Akabah. Burckh., p. 847; Ritter, xiv. 226.

The site of some of these places (e. g., Tophel, Laban, Dizahab) is uncertain; but this uncertainty itself has its uses. It is an argument against the allegations of some modern critics, who affirm that Deuteronomy is not the work of Moses, but of some later writer, who lived in the age of Jeremiah, and who desired to personate Moses. A forger would have adopted names from the other parts of the history, and would not have introduced names of places here which are found nowhere else in the Pentateuch, nor in the Old Testament. But the whole route was familiar to Moses; and he might very fitly mention the names of places which were well known to himself and his hearers, and which have now passed into oblivion.

2. There are eleven days' journey from Horeb—unto Kadesh-barnea] This sentence is no sign (as some allege, Colenso, § 276) of a later writer than Moses. A forger would not have introduced such a notice as this; but it was appropriate in the mouth of Moses, as reminding the Israelites that if they had been obedient they might have entered Canaan in so short a time. But after they arrived at Kadesh, the frontier of Canaan, they murmured against God, and were condemned to forty years of wandering in the wilderness; and they who murmured died there, and were excluded from the Promised Land. See Num. xiv. 33, 34.

— the way of mount Seir] That is, the way towards it. Cp. v. 19; ii. 1; and Num. xiv. 25; and see v. 44, and on Matt. iv. 15.

3. And it came to pass in the fortieth year] Here the Israelites rise again, as it were, to new life in a new generation (ii. 14, 15), after an interval of thirty-eight years, during which they had no historical existence on account of their disobedience. See above, on Num. xiv. 25. 39; and xv. 32. 36—41.

In the earlier part of this fortieth year, Miriam had died (Num. xx. 1); on the first day of the fifth month of this year Aaron also had died (Num. xxxiii. 38). Now Moses is left alone, and he dies at the end of this year (xxxiv. 5).

For the previous history of Israel in the wilderness, see the Preliminary Note to Exod. xvi.; and cp. above on Num. xxxiii.

— Moses spake] and recapitulated the moral law, with solemn exhortations to obedience, and warnings against disobedience.

“Moses spake according to all that the Lord commanded him.” God gave the revelation of His Will, and Moses declared what God revealed; the voice of the Prophets uttered the words of God (Origen). Cp. 2 Pet. i. 20, 21.

slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth ° in Edrei :

⁵ On this side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying, ⁶ The LORD our God spake unto us ^f in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long ^g enough in this mount: ⁷ Turn you, and take your journey, and go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto [†] all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates. ⁸ Behold, I have [†] set the land before you: go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers, ^h Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them.

⁹ And ⁱ I spake unto you at that time, saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone: ¹⁰ The LORD your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ^k ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude. ¹¹ (¹ The LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, ^m as he hath promised you!) ¹² ⁿ How can I myself alone bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife? ¹³ ^o [†] Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you. ¹⁴ And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do. ¹⁵ So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, ^p and [†] made them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes. ¹⁶ And I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and ^q judge righteously between every man and his ^r brother, and the stranger that is with him. ¹⁷ ^s Ye shall not [†] respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the

e Num. 21. 33.
Josh. 13. 12.

f Ex. 3. 1.

g See Ex. 19. 1.
Num. 10. 11,
† Heb. all his neighbours.

† Heb. given.

h Gen. 12. 7.
& 15 18. & 17. 7
& 26. 4. & 28.
13.

i Ex. 18. 18.
Num. 11. 14.

k Gen. 15. 5.
ch. 10. 22. & 28.
62.
l 2 Sam. 24. 3.

m Gen. 15. 5. &
22. 17. & 26. 4.
Ex. 32. 13.
n 1 Kings 3. 8. 9.
o See Ex. 18. 21.
Num. 11. 16, 17.
† Heb. Give.

p Ex. 18. 2^c.
† Heb. gave.

q ch. 16. 18.
John 7. 24.
r Lev. 24. 22.
s Lev. 19. 15.
ch. 16. 19.
l Sam. 16. 7.

Prov. 24. 23. James 2. 1.

† Heb. acknowledge faces

4. Sihon] Num. xxi. 21.

— Og] Num. xxi. 33.

5. to declare this law] rather, to engrave, to write this law. See xxvii. 8. (Höfvernick.) Or it may rather mean, to explain.

6. The LORD our God] Jehovah our God: emphatic. See Exod. vi. 3.

— spake unto us] The earlier generation was dead. How then, it has been asked, could Moses say, The Lord spake unto us (Colenso, § 587)? This question is answered by the consideration (1) that the condemnation at Kadesh-barnea did not extend to those who were under twenty years of age; (2) that a nation's identity is continued from one generation to another; cp. above, on Gen. 1. 25; and below, Matt. xxiii. 35, where our Lord charges the Jews with a sin committed by their ancestors many hundred years before they were born—i. e., with the murder of Zacharias, the son of Barachias, “whom,” He says, “ye slew between the Temple and the Altar.”

— in Horeb] Why Horeb, and not Sinai, as in Exodus, and Leviticus, and Numbers (see on Exod. xix. 1, 2)? Why is the name Horeb constantly used in this book, and the word Sinai only once (see xxxiii. 2)? Is this a sign of difference of authorship, as has been alleged by some recent critics? Certainly not. On the contrary, a forger, wishing to personate Moses, would have taken care to assimilate his nomenclature servilely to the diction of Moses; and if Deuteronomy had been a fabrication, we should have Sinai in it, as we had in the other parts of the Pentateuch. Why then does Moses speak of Horeb in Deuteronomy? Probably, because Horeb is the name of the mountain region of which Sinai was a particular mountain (cp. Keil, i. p. 439); and because in this book he is speaking in the fortieth year of the wanderings, and is addressing those, of whom all may have often seen the mountain range of Horeb, but of whom only a small part had seen the particular mountain called Sinai. Others suppose that Horeb is the more poetical form of the word, and therefore better suited to the style of Deuteronomy, and that the use of this form is a consequence of the more poetical and rhetorical character of this Book, as a retrospective record of God's revelations and mercies.

— dwelt] sat.

— long enough] nearly a year; for they came to it in the third month of the first year of the wandering (Exod. xix. 1, 2), and remained there till the twentieth day of the second month in the second year. See Num. x. 11, 12; and Preliminary Note to Exod. xvi.

7. unto the great river] See Gen. xv. 16—18. Exod. xxiii. 31. Deut. xi. 24.

9. I spake unto you] at Jethro's suggestion (Exod. xviii. 14, 21), on which it is probable Moses consulted God, and which God approved. Cp. Graves on the Pent. p. 50. It is to be observed that the Book of Deuteronomy has for the most part the character of an hortatory address to the people; and that consequently in it there is a special reference to the part which the people themselves took in the acts there recorded (cp. v. 22).

— at that time] It has been alleged that this account is inconsistent with the statement in Exod. xviii. 25, 26 (Colenso, § 588), because the choice is there represented as having been made before the delivery of the Law. This is an error. The whole matter is related briefly in Exodus, and the relation is placed before the relation of the delivery of the Law; but it is not said that the selection was completed before that delivery. Nor can it be concluded from the words “at that time” that the choice was not commenced before that delivery. The one narrative is subsidiary to the other.

13. your tribes] In Deuteronomy Moses always uses the word shebet for tribe (see i. 15. 23; iii. 13; v. 23; x. 8; xii. 5. 14; xvi. 18; xviii. 1. 5; xxix. 8. 10. 18. 21; xxxi. 28; xxxiii. 5), and never matteh, which occurs frequently in the other portions of the Pentateuch. This is to be accounted for, from the fact, that in Deuteronomy the author had no occasion to speak of the tribes in their genealogical stems and branches, and therefore he did not use the word matteh, which describes them specially in that character. Cp. Keil on Joshua, p. 10, who observes that in the historical portions of that book the form shebet is commonly used, and the form matteh in the geographical: shebet designates the tribe as a political corporation; matteh is genealogical.

17. not respect persons] Lev. xix. 15.

t 2 Chron. 19. 6. great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man; for 'the judgment is God's:
 u Ex. 18. 22, 26. and the cause that is too hard for you, "bring it unto me, and I will hear it.
 18 And I commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do.
 x Num. 10. 12. 19 And when we departed from Horeb, * we went through all that great and
 ch. 8. 15. terrible wilderness, which ye saw by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, Jer. 2. 6. as the LORD our God commanded us; and † we came to Kadesh-barnea.
 y Num. 13. 26. 20 And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the mountain of the Amorites, which the LORD our God doth give unto us. 21 Behold, the LORD thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath said unto thee; ‡ fear not, neither be discouraged. 22 And ye came near unto me every one of you, and said, We will send men before us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again by what way we must go up, and into what cities we shall come. 23 And the saying pleased me well:
 and † I took twelve men of you, one of a tribe: 24 And † they turned and went up into the mountain, and came unto the valley of Eshcol, and searched it out. 25 And they took of the fruit of the land in their hands, and brought it down unto us, and brought us word again, and said, † It is a good land which the LORD our God doth give us.
 d Num. 14. 1, 2, 26 † Notwithstanding ye would not go up, but rebelled against the 3, 4. commandment of the LORD your God: 27 And ye murmured in your tents, Ps. 106. 24, 25. and said, Because the LORD † hated us, he hath brought us forth out of the e ch. 9. 23. land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.
 † Heb. melted. 23 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have † discouraged our heart, saying, Josh. 2. 11. 'The people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great and walled up f Num. 13. 28, 31, to heaven; and moreover we have seen the sons of the † Anakims there.
 32, 33. 29 Then I said unto you, Dread not, neither be afraid of them. 30 † The LORD
 ch. 9. 1, 2. your God which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, according to all that g Num. 13. 28. he did for you in Egypt before your eyes; 31 And in the wilderness, where h Ex. 14. 14, 25. thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God † bare thee, as a man doth bear his Neh. 4. 20. son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place. 32 Yet in this thing † ye did not believe the LORD your God, 33 † Who went in the way before you, † to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to shew you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.
 34 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, † and sware, — too hard for you] Exod. xviii. 26.

 19. that great and terrible wilderness] (See Num. x. 11—36; xi. 1. Deut. viii. 15. Jer. ii. 6.) So the way to the heavenly Canaan is beset with danger and difficulty (Acts xiv. 22).

— by the way of the mountain] That is, to the mountain. See on v. 2.

— Kadesh-barnea] See v. 2.
 22. ye came near—and said] From a comparison of this passage with Num. xiii. 1—3, it appears that the proposal was made by the people, and that God approved it when Moses referred the matter to Him. As was before observed (v. 9), the Book of Deuteronomy being for the most part a hortatory address to the people, there is in it special reference to the part which the people took in the acts related to it. Cp. Graves on the Pent., Part i. Lect. iii.

— ye came near unto me every one of you] "The writer of this seems to have forgotten that these things took place forty years before, when most of them whom he was now addressing were not even born" (Colenso, § 590: cp. vv. 22. 26. 29. 32). On this allegation see note above on v. 22; and the original may be better rendered, "ye came near to me all of you"—i. e., in a body; as Sept. renders it, and Vulg.

With regard also to this and other like allegations, surely it might reasonably occur to a sagacious critic, that "the Deu-teronomist" (whom the objector supposes to have lived in the age of Jeremiah) had at least the same access to the other writings of Moses as the critic himself has, who professes to refute him from those writings; and that if he desired to personate Moses (as the objector alleges), he would have taken very good care that his own statements concerning the acts of Moses should be seen to be in perfect harmony with the records of Moses himself. The semblances of discrepancy are not marks of spuriousness (for a forger would have studiously avoided them), but rather of genuineness.

24. Eshcol] Num. xiii. 22—24.

25. the fruit] Num. xiii. 27.

27. ye murmured in your tents] Such expressions as these are evidences of genuineness. Cp. note below, on ix. 1.

28. The people is greater] (Num. xiii. 28. 31—33.) Moses does not deny the fact; but he makes it a reason for faith (ix. 1, 2).

— Anakims] See Num. xiii. 28.

31. as a man doth bear his son] Cp. Isa. xlv. 3, 4. S. Jerome on Hosea, c. xi.; and the true reading in Acts xiii. 18.

34. the LORD—was wroth, and sware] For an answer to the objections of some writers against such passages as these, where God is said to be angry and to swear, see Waterland, Ser. Vind. p. 111; and Hengstenb., Auth. ii. 457—462.

saying, ³⁵ Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I sware to give unto your fathers, ³⁶ Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because ^a he hath † wholly followed the LORD. ³⁷ Also the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither. ³⁸ But Joshua the son of Nun, † which standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: ^a encourage him: for he shall cause Israel to inherit it. ³⁹ Moreover your little ones, which ^y ye said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day ^z had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it. ⁴⁰ But as for you, turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

⁴¹ Then ye answered and said unto me, ^b We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill. ⁴² And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, ^c Go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies. ⁴³ So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and †^d went presumptuously up into the hill. ⁴⁴ And the Amorites, which dwelt in that mountain, came out against you, and chased you, ^e as bees do, and destroyed you in Seir, even unto Hormah. ⁴⁵ And ye returned and wept before the LORD; but the LORD would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you. ⁴⁶ So ye abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there.

o Num. 14. 22, 23.
Ps. 95. 11.

p Num. 14. 24, 3e
Josh. 14. 9.

q Num. 14. 24.
f Heb. fulfilled to go after.

r Num. 20. 12. &
27. 14.
ch. 3. 26. & 4. 21.
& 34. 4.

s Num. 14. 30.

t Ex. 24. 13. & 33.
11.

See I Sam. 16. 22.

u Num. 27. 18, 19.

ch. 31. 7, 23.

x Num. 14. 31.

y Num. 14. 3.

z Isa. 7. 15, 16.

Rom. 9. 11.

a Num. 14. 25.

b Num. 14. 40.

c Num. 14. 42.

† Heb. ye were presumptuous and went up.

d Num. 14. 44, 45.

e Ps. 118. 12.

f Num. 13. 25. &
20. 1, 22.
Judg. 11. 17.

35. Surely there shall not one] Moses in his modesty omits God's offer to himself. Cp. Num. xiv. 12.

37. Also the LORD was angry with me for your sakes] Not as if he would exculpate himself, for he relates his own sin in this book (see xxxii. 51); but, as the Psalmist says, they angered Moses, so that it went ill with him for their sakes, because they provoked his spirit, so that he spake unadvisedly with his lips (Ps. cvi. 32, 33).

The sacred writer has been here also charged with forgetfulness, because the reason of the exclusion of Moses was his sin at Kadesh-barnea, thirty-seven years after the murmuring of the Israelites on the return of the spies, to which he has just been referring. Num. xxvii. 12—15 (Colenso, § 591).

But what could be more natural, than that Moses, looking back on the forty years' wandering, should pass from a mention of one sin at Kadesh-barnea to that of another at the same place; and should remind the people that their sins were not only the cause of their punishment, but the occasion of his own also, and should thus impress them more deeply with a sense of the evil of sin? He takes for granted that they know the chronology of the events to which he refers, and he endeavours throughout this book to draw moral lessons from them.

That the sacred writer was referring to the event at "the waters of strife," at Meribah-kadesh, as the cause of his exclusion, is evident from what he himself says below, when, referring to it, he uses precisely the same words (see iii. 26).

38. Joshua] The type of Jesus in this respect, as in many others. Exod. xxiv. 13; xxxiii. 11. Num. xxvii. 18, 19. Deut. xxxi. 7, 23; and below, Introduction to the Book of Joshua.

39. your little ones] See Num. xiv. 3. 31.

40. the Red sea] Num. xiv. 25.

41. Then ye answered] Cp. Num. xiv. 40—45.

44. Amorites] called also Canaanites (Num. xiv. 43).

— Hormah] See above, on Num. xiv. 44, 45, and Num. xxi. 3.

46. So ye abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there] "In this strange way (says Bp. Colenso, § 592) is summed up the account of the thirty-seven years' sojourn in the wilderness. It is all that the Deuteronomist can tell us about it." In a similar supercilious tone the same critic says, on v. 2, "Here we have the strongest instances of oversight." The sacred writer is not "summing up" any account of the thirty-seven years' sojourn in the wilderness; but he is speaking only of the stay at Kadesh-barnea before those thirty-seven years began. See above, Num. xiii. 26; xiv. 34.

It was not necessary for him to mention the precise number of those days, which were known to those whom he addressed; and it is observable, that after their rebellion there, the sacred writer says little of their doings. By their rebellion they almost ceased to have a history. See above, on Num. xiv. 30; and Num. xv., Prelim. Note; and below, ii. 14.

There is something mournfully solemn and emphatic in the words, "Ye abode in Kadesh." Ye were on the very borders of Canaan; but instead of passing the frontier and entering into the Land of Promise, ye abode there at Kadesh; and when you moved from it, it was not to go northward into Canaan, but southward, into the opposite direction (see ii. 1); and after thirty-seven years' weary wandering ye had only arrived at Kadesh again. Such were the consequences of disobedience.

From the change of the pronoun here from ye into we, in the next chapter, it has been inferred by some (Kurtz, Fries, Schultz, p. 153) that a portion of the army remained stationary at Kadesh and its neighbourhood, while the other part with Moses went southward, and eventually rejoined the former part at the beginning of the fortieth year. But this seems hardly probable.

With regard to the objections made to the genuineness of DEUTERONOMY, on the ground of certain expressions in the foregoing chapter, some apology may be due to the reader for occupying his time, and perhaps wounding his feelings, by a recital of those allegations which have been placed before him in the notes to the foregoing chapter.

But it seemed requisite to submit to him some specimens of those objections, and to present them as nearly as might be in the words of the objectors themselves.

The devout reader of Holy Scripture, who remembers that "mysteries are revealed unto the meek," will not be surprised that writers, who speak in such haughty and disdainful language, as has been quoted, of these holy oracles, and the Son of God Himself received as genuine and divine, should not be permitted to see the truth; but that their eyes should be blinded by Him who "resisteth the proud, and giveth grace unto the lowly."

In the following notes, the objections will be borne in mind, and replies will be suggested, but with less frequent citations of

II. ¹ Then we turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, ^a as the LORD spake unto me: and we compassed mount Seir many days. ² And the LORD spake unto me, saying, ³ Ye have compassed this mountain ^b long enough: turn you northward. ⁴ And command thou the people, saying, ^c Ye are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir; and they shall be afraid of you: take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore: ⁵ Meddle not with them; for I will not give you of their land, [†] no, not so much as a foot breadth; ^d because I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession. ⁶ Ye shall buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink. ⁷ For the LORD thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: ^e these forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

^{8 f} And when we passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, through the way of the plain from ^g Elath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab. ⁹ And the LORD said unto me, || Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given ^h Ar unto ⁱ the children of Lot for a possession. ^{10 k} The Emims dwelt therein in times past, a people great, and many, and tall, as ^l the Anakims; ¹¹ Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims; but the Moabites call them Emims. ^{12 m} The Horims also dwelt in Seir beforetime; but the children of Esau [†] succeeded them, when they had destroyed them from before them, and dwelt in their ||stead; as Israel did unto the land of his possession, which the LORD gave unto them. ¹³ Now rise up, said I, and get you over ⁿ the ||brook Zered. And we went over the brook Zered.

¹⁴ And the space in which we came ^o from Kadesh-barnea, until we were come over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years; ^p until all the generation of the men of war were wasted out from among the host, ^q as the LORD sware unto them. ¹⁵ For indeed the ^r hand of the LORD was against them, to destroy them from among the host, until they were consumed.

a Num. 14. 25.
ch. 1. 40

b See ver. 7, 14.

c Num. 20. 14.

† Heb. even to the treading of the sole of the foot.
† Gen. 36. 8.
Josh. 24. 4.

e ch. 8. 2, 3, 4.

f Judg. 11. 18.

g 1 Kings 9. 26.

|| Or, Use no hostility against Moab.

h Num. 21. 28.
i Gen. 19. 36, 37.
k Gen. 14. 5.
l Num. 13. 22, 33.
ch. 9. 2.

m ver. 22.
Gen. 14. 6. & 36. 20.
† Heb. inherited them.
|| Or, room.

n Num. 21. 12.
|| Or, valley.
Num. 13. 23.

o Num. 13. 26.

p Num. 14. 33. & 26. 64.

q Num. 14. 35.
ch. 1. 34, 35.
Ezek. 20. 15.
r Ps. 78. 33. & 106. 26.

such contemptuous words, which, it is earnestly to be hoped, may one day be retracted by those who have uttered them.

The objections raised to the genuineness of this Book, on the ground of style, as well as of substance, have been considered summarily above in the Introduction to Deuteronomy.

CH. II. 1. the way of the Red sea] That is, toward the Ælanitic branch of it. See Num. xiv. 25.

3. turn you northward] Probably from the southern region of the Arabah.

5. I have given mount Seir unto Esau] Gen. xxxiii. 16; xxxvi. 8. Josh. xxiv. 4.

— for a possession] Heb. yerushah. It is alleged that the author of Deuteronomy is a different person from the writers of the rest of the Pentateuch, because he uses this word, and they use achuzzah (Bp. Colenso, § 548, p. 399). But the author of Deuteronomy uses this word only in this chapter (vv. 5. 9. 12), and in the next (iii. 19, 20); and he does use achuzzah also, viz., in xxxii. 49; and why should he not use yerushah, which is used in the following book (Josh. i. 15; xii. 6, 7)?

7. thou hast lacked nothing] See the details in viii. 2—4, a sufficient answer to all objections as to this matter; their maintenance in the wilderness is declared to have been miraculous; and they themselves are commanded to be thankful for it. Cp. Neh. ix. 21.

8. we passed by] The truth of this record is declared by King Jehoshaphat (2 Chron. xx. 10).

— Elath, and from Ezion-gaber] on the Ælanitic gulf of the Red Sea. 1 Kings ix. 26. Cp. Num. xxxiii. 35.

— by the way of the wilderness of Moab] See the route traced in Judg. xi. 16—18.

9. Distress not the Moabites] But the Moabites injured them (Judg. xi. 17. Num. xxii. 1—6; xxv. 1); and the same was the case with the Ammonites; for which God punished both these nations (2 Chron. xx. 1—11. Amos i. 13, 14. Cp. Deut. xxiii. 3—6).

10. Emims] (Cp. Gen. xiv. 5—7.) In primitive times the region east of Jordan appears to have been occupied by a race of giants, the Rephaim, on the north, next the Zuzims, then the Emims, then the Horims. The extermination of these giant races is appropriately recorded here by Moses, as a proof that physical strength is of no avail against the decrees of God, the King of Nations; and as an assurance to Israel, that, if they obey God, they will be able to exterminate the powerful Nations of Canaan, whither they are going.

12. unto the land of his possession] The region east of Jordan, which God gave to Reuben, Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh (iii. 20), where the same word (yerushah) is used for possession as here.

Or (as Schultz observes, p. 30) the perfect may stand here for the futurum exactum (cp. Ewald, § 135; Gesen., Lehrgeb. § 205, and the examples in xix. 4. Ps. lvi. 14; lix. 17), and the sense would then be, "As Israel shall have done," i. e., shall do (by God's help) in the land of their possession which the Lord has given him.

13. Zered] which flows into the river Arnon, the frontier between Moab and Ammon. See Num. xxi. 12; xxxiii. 45.

¹⁶ So it came to pass, when all the men of war were consumed and dead from among the people, ¹⁷ That the LORD spake unto me, saying, ¹⁸ Thou art to pass over through Ar, the coast of Moab, this day: ¹⁹ And when thou comest nigh over against the children of Ammon, distress them not, nor meddle with them: for I will not give thee of the land of the children of Ammon any possession; because I have given it unto ^s the children of Lot for a possession. ²⁰ (That also was accounted a land of giants: giants dwelt therein in old time; and the Ammonites call them ^t Zamzummins; ²¹ ^u A people great, and many, and tall, as the Anakims; but the LORD destroyed them before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead: ²² As he did to the children of Esau, ^x which dwelt in Seir, when he destroyed ^y the Horims from before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead even unto this day: ²³ And ^z the Avims which dwelt in Hazerim, even unto ^a Azzah, ^b the Capthorims, which came forth out of Capthor, destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.) ²⁴ Rise ye up, take your journey, and ^c pass over the river Arnon: behold, I have given into thine hand Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land: [†] begin to possess it, and contend with him in battle. ²⁵ ^d This day will I begin to put the dread of thee and the fear of thee upon the nations that are under the whole heaven, who shall hear report of thee, and shall tremble, and be in anguish because of thee.

²⁶ And I sent messengers out of the wilderness of Kedemoth unto Sihon king of Heshbon ^e with words of peace, saying, ²⁷ ^f Let me pass through thy land: I will go along by the high way, I will neither turn unto the right hand nor to the left. ²⁸ Thou shalt sell me meat for money, that I may eat; and give me water for money, that I may drink: ^g only I will pass through on my feet; ²⁹ (^h As the children of Esau which dwell in Seir, and the Moabites which dwell in Ar, did unto me;) until I shall pass over Jordan into the land which the LORD our God giveth us. ³⁰ ⁱ But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for ^k the LORD thy God ^l hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day.

³¹ And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to ^m give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land. ³² ⁿ Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz. ³³ And ^o the LORD our God delivered him before us; and ^p we smote him, and his sons, and all his people. ³⁴ And we took all his cities at that time, and 20. Zamzummins] (Gen. xiv. 5.) The word seems to signify "tumultuous" (Gesen. 247).

22. when he destroyed the Horims from before them] Another encouragement to Israel. If God did this for the "children of Esau," much more, if you obey Him, will He destroy the Canaanites before you, the children of Israel.

23. Azzah] Gaza. Gen. x. 19. 1 Sam. vi. 17. Cp. 1 Kings iv. 24. Jer. xxv. 20. Acts viii. 26.

— Capthorims] of Philistia. Gen. x. 14. Amos ix. 7.

25. will I begin to put the dread of thee] A further fulfilment of the prophecy of the song of Moses (Exod. xv. 14, 15); cp. Rahab's avowal at Jericho (Josh. ii. 9, 10).

26. Kedemoth] Cp. Num. xxi. 21—24. It became afterwards a Levitical city, in the tribe of Reuben (Josh. xiii. 18; xxi. 37. 1 Chron. vi. 64. 79).

29. As the children of Esau which dwell in Seir, and the Moabites] It has been alleged by some that this account is at variance with the narrative in Num. xx. 17—21, where it is said that Edom refused to allow Israel to pass through their territory; and that they came out against Israel with a strong hand.

But neither of those statements is denied here. What is asserted here is, that Edom sold them water; made them pay for what they ought to have given freely to them, who were their brethren. See Schultz, p. 191; and Hengst., Authent. ii. p. 283.

who observes that the temper of the Edomites towards Israel was probably somewhat modified by acquaintance with their numbers, and also of their peaceable intentions.

As to the case of the Moabites, there is no inconsistency between what is stated here and in xxiii. 4. They did not supply Israel, who was their friend, with water freely, but constrained them to pay for it, a very inhospitable act (cp. Isa. xxi. 13—17 with lv. 1): "They met you not with bread and water; and they hired Balaam to curse thee." How different was the conduct of Edom and Moab from that of Melchizedek, who met Abraham with bread and wine, and blessed him (Gen. xiv. 18)!

Sihon, king of Heshbon, would not do even so much as the Edomites and Moabites did. His heart was obstinate against them, and he would neither give them water, nor sell it to them for money; and he came out to attack Israel. Therefore God gave him and his cities into their hands.

These circumstances are fitly recorded by Moses, in order that it may be clearly understood by Israel, that the conquest of Sihon's kingdom by them was a consequence of his own unmercifulness, and of God's righteous anger against him; and that this conquest might not be made a precedent by Israel for aggressive warfare on other nations, against which they had not a divine commission as they had against Canaan; and he adds that God specially forbade them to touch the Ammonites (v. 37).

q Lev. 27. 28.
ch. 7. 2, 26.
† Heb. every city of men, and women, and little ones.
r ch. 3. 12. & 4.
48.
Josh. 13. 9.
s Ps. 44. 3.

t Gen. 32. 22.
Num. 21. 24.
ch. 3. 16.
u ver. 5, 9, 19.
a Num. 21. 33,
&c. ch. 29. 7.
b ch. 1. 4.

c Num. 21. 34.

d Num. 21. 35.

e 1 Kings 4. 13.

f ch. 2. 24.
Ps. 135. 10, 11,
12. & 136. 19, 20, 21.

g ch. 4. 43.
Ps. 29. 6.
h 1 Chron. 5. 23
i ch. 4. 49.
k Josh. 12. 5. &
13. 11.

l Amos 2. 9.

m Gen. 14. 5.
n 2 Sam. 12. 26
Jer. 49. 2. Ezek. 21. 20.

utterly destroyed † the men, and the women, and the little ones, of every city, we left none to remain: ³⁵ Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves and the spoil of the cities which we took. ³⁶ From Aroer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us: * the LORD our God delivered all unto us: ³⁷ Only unto the land of the children of Ammon thou camest not, nor unto any place of the river † Jabbok, nor unto the cities in the mountains, nor unto ^u whatsoever the LORD our God forbad us.

III. ¹ Then we turned, and went up the way to Bashan: and * Og the king of Bashan came out against us, he and all his people, to battle ^b at Edrei. ² And the LORD said unto me, Fear him not: for I will deliver him, and all his people, and his land, into thy hand; and thou shalt do unto him as thou didst unto ^c Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon. ³ So the LORD our God delivered into our hands Og also, the king of Bashan, and all his people: ^d and we smote him until none was left to him remaining. ⁴ And we took all his cities at that time, there was not a city which we took not from them, threescore cities, ^e all the region of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Bashan. ⁵ All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates, and bars; beside unwall'd towns a great many. ⁶ And we utterly destroyed them, as we did unto Sihon king ^f of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children, of every city. ⁷ But all the cattle, and the spoil of the cities, we took for a prey to ourselves. ⁸ And we took at that time out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorites the land that was on this side Jordan, from the river of Arnon unto mount Hermon; ⁹ (Which ^g Hermon the Sidonians call Sirion; and the Amorites call it ^h Shenir;) ¹⁰ ⁱ All the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and ^k all Bashan, unto Salchah and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan. ¹¹ ^l For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of ^m giants; behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron; is it not in ⁿ Rabbath

34. the men of the city] every city of men, i. e. inhabited.

36. the city] Ar. See Num. xxi. 15.

* — unto Gilead] which reached to the river Jabbok, now Zerka. See iii. 14.

CH. III. 1. Bashan] properly, the flat, soft land; whence the Greek Batanæa (Gesen. 147).

— came out against us] Moses is careful to remind Israel that the aggression was on the part of the king of Bashan and his people. See above, on ii. 30.

— Edrei] now Draa or Dera. See Num. xxi. 33.

4. all his cities] The remains of which are described by Porter and Graham "Cities of Bashan" (Camb. Essays, 1858).

— threescore cities] On the supposed discrepancy between this statement and 1 Chron. ii. 21, see Hengst., Auth. ii. 227. There is no evidence to show that the sacred writer thought that the sixty cities here mentioned were all properly called cities of Jair himself. Cp. 1 Kings iv. 13.

— region of Argob] Properly, the line of Argob, as being measured by a line; and therefore specially applicable to a rich, fertile, pastoral region. Cp. Ps. xvi. 6. Gesen. 257.

Some suppose Argob to be so called from regeb, a clod (Job xxi. 33; xxxviii. 38). Onkelos renders it trachona, perhaps from τραχὺς, rough; and Gesenius supposes regob to signify also "a heap of stones" (p. 76); and the region may have been so called from the basalt rocks of Hauran, the region of which is covered with crater-like cavities and ravines, and remains of ruined cities (Burckh., p. 196. Keil, p. 405. Graham, Camb. Essays, 1858). There is therefore perhaps a contrast in these names. Bashan is the flat, soft region; Argob, the rough—the former corresponds more or less to Batanæa, the latter to the Trachonitis of the Gospel. Cp. Grove, B. D. i. 105.

9. Hermon] The southern spur of Antilibanus, now Jebel 210

es Sheikh, or el Teldsch. Some have supposed that the name Hermon or Chermon is connected with the Hebrew cherem, anathema (Hilar. in Ps. 133. Hengst., Auth. ii. 241), as being devoted to desolation; but it seems rather to be derived from a Semitic root, signifying a prominence; the same sense as Sion. Cp. iv. 48. Gesen. 306. Keil, 407.

— Sirion] A Semitic term for a breastplate. Cp. 1 Sam. xvii. 5. Jer. xlvi. 4.

These topographical notices were proper to be introduced as records of the right of Israel to this country by a special grant from God (v. 2. Num. xxi. 24. 33—35); and as barring all future claims from their former occupants.

— Shenir] probably with the same meaning as Sirion (Keil, 407).

10. Salchah] now called Szalchat, or Szarchad, six hours east of Bozra (Raumer, Pal. p. 255).

— Edrei] This other Edrei is now called Adra, or Ezra, N.W. of Bozra. It is now a ruined city about 3½ miles in circumference, and has about 200 families of Turks, Druses, and Christians (Seetzen, Burckh., Robinson).

11. of giants] The Rephaim of Abraham's age (Gen. xiv. 5). — his bedstead] For a reply to the objections of Spinoza, Peyrierius, Geddes, and others, against the genuineness and authenticity of this passage, see Hengstenb., Auth. ii. p. 243—246, who remarks that the sacred penmen write with a consciousness of their own veracity, and also of the exceptions which will be made by after-ages to the truth of their story, and that Moses here appeals to what his contemporaries knew of the physical force of God's enemies, and of the divine doings in subduing them before the face of his people.

The length of Og's bedstead is mentioned for the same reason as the size of Goliath's spear-staff (1 Sam. xvii. 7. Cp. Schultz, pp. 31. 203).

of the children of Ammon? nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man.

¹² And this land, which we possessed at that time, °from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, and half mount Gilead, and ^pthe cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites and to the Gadites. ¹³ ^q And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants. ¹⁴ ^r Jair the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob ^s unto the coasts of Geshuri and Maachathi; and ^t called them after his own name, Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day. ¹⁵ ^u And I gave Gilead unto Machir. ¹⁶ And unto the Reubenites ^v and unto the Gadites I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon half the valley, and the border even unto the river Jabbok, ^x which is the border of the children of Ammon; ¹⁷ The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from ^y Chinnereth ^z even unto the sea of the plain, ^a even the salt sea, || under Ashdoth-pisgah eastward. ¹⁸ And I commanded you at that time, saying, The LORD your God hath given you this land to possess it: ^b ye shall pass over armed before your brethren the children of Israel, all that are † meet for the war. ¹⁹ But your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle, (for I know that ye have much cattle,) shall abide in your cities which I have given you; ²⁰ Until the LORD have given rest unto your brethren, as well as unto you, and until they also possess the land which the LORD your God hath given them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye ^c return every man unto his possession, which I have given you.

²¹ And ^d I commanded Joshua at that time, saying, Thine eyes have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the LORD do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest. ²² Ye shall not fear them: for ^e the LORD your God he shall fight for you.

²³ And ^f I besought the LORD at that time, saying, ²⁴ O Lord God, thou hast begun to shew thy servant ^g thy greatness, and thy mighty hand: for

o ch. 2. 36.
Josh. 12. 2.
p Num. 32. 32.
Josh. 12. 6.
& 13. 8. &c.
q Josh. 13. 29.

r 1 Chron. 2. 22.
s Josh. 13. 13.
2 Sam. 3. 3.
& 10. 6.
t Num. 32. 41.
u Num. 32. 39.
w 2 Sam. 24. 5.

x Num. 21. 24.
Josh. 12. 2.
y Num. 34. 11.
z Num. 34. 12.
ch. 4. 49.
Josh. 12. 3.
a Gen. 14. 3.
|| Or, under the springs of Pisgah,
or, the hill.
b Num. 32. 20. &c.
† Heb. sons of power.

c Josh. 22. 4.

d Num. 27. 18.

e Ex. 14. 14.
ch. 1. 30. & 20. 4.
f See 2 Cor. 12.
8, 9.
g ch. 11. 2.

— is it not in Rabbath] Perhaps taken by the Ammonites, and preserved there as a trophy (cp. Joseph., iv. 5. 5), as the silver-footed throne of Xerxes was in the Acropolis of Athens. Israel did not take this monument of Og's stature as a trophy for themselves, because they were not permitted to war against the Ammonites (ii. 37).

Concerning Rabbath, or Rabbah (the th is only the termination of the word in regimen), afterwards called Philadelphia, from Ptolemy Philadelphus, now Amman, see Josh. xiii. 25. 2 Sam. xi. 1. Burckh., p. 612. Raumer, p. 268. Winer, ii. 296. Grove, B. D. ii. 983.

— the cubit of a man] the common cubit (cp. Isa. viii. 1; Rev. xxi. 17), about a foot and a half.

14. Jair] See v. 4, and Num. xxxii. 41.

— Geshuri and Maachathi mean the Geshurite and Maachathite unto this day] A phrase used to describe a fact which happened recently, and had continued under circumstances that might have been expected to produce an interruption, in a period even of short duration; see Le Clerc and Michaelis here; Hengst., Auth. ii. pp. 325—8. Cp. Gen. xxxv. 20. Josh. xxii. 22; xxiii. 9. Matt. xxvii. 8; xxviii. 15. Acts i. 19. The interval here specified is from the time mentioned in Num. xxi. to the eleventh month of the fortieth year (Deut. i. 3); and it was certainly a noteworthy thing, and one which might well be mentioned as a motive to thankfulness and faith, that God had subdued so many cities of this mighty king by the arm of an Israelite, and should have retained them under his power even for a short time. What might not God be expected therefore to do for Israel generally?

17. Chinnereth] afterwards Gennesaret. See Num. xxxiv. 11. Josh. xix. 35.

— of the plain] or, arabah; the long broad wady of Jordan, which stretches down from Lebanon to the sea of the plain, Salt Sea, or Dead Sea, even to the Ælantic gulf of the Red Sea;

the former, or northern part, being now known as El Ghor, the southern as the Arabah.

— Ashdoth-pisgah] that is, the pourings out of Pisgah (Gesen. 83). Cp. Num. xxi. 15; xxvii. 12. Keil, p. 286.

18. And I commanded you] you Reubenites, and Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh. There is a native air of lively reality in this transition to the Reubenites as actually present before his eyes (see Num. xxxii. 20—24). Moses does not here repeat the threat which is there uttered. He does not suppose that they will sin against the Lord (Num. xxxii. 23).

19. I know that ye have much cattle] Therefore he had said, “Build you folds for your sheep” (Num. xxxii. 24); and the Reubenites speak of their cattle, ibid. v. 26. This mention of their cattle is a public justification of the conduct of the Reubenites on the part of Moses.

21. so shall the LORD do] This victory is an earnest of your future triumphs, if you have faith (Josh. ii. 10).

22. he shall fight] The Targum of Onkelos has here “the Word of the Lord will fight for you.”

23.] Here begins a new section of the Law, and extends to vii. 11. The parallel Prophetical Lesson is Isa. xl. 1—26, “Comfort ye, comfort ye my people,” a prophecy of the preaching of the Baptist and of Christ,—a happy combination with this record of the vision of Canaan by Moses, the Giver of the Law, and the appointment of Joshua, the type of Jesus.

23—25. I besought the LORD] This prayer, which introduces a reference to his own sin, is not mentioned in any previous part of the history; but another prayer of Moses, uttered at this time for the appointment of a successor to himself, that “the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep without a shepherd,” a prayer followed by the appointment of Joshua, is recorded in Num. xxvii. 15—18. But Moses, in his modesty, does not mention that prayer in this address to the people.

h Ex. 15. 11.
2 Sam. 7. 22.
Ps. 71. 19. & 86.
& 89. 6, 8.
i Ex. 3. 8. ch. 4.
22.

k Num. 20. 12. &
27. 14. ch. 1. 37.
& 31. 2. & 32. 51,
52. & 34. 4.
Ps. 106. 32.
l Num. 27. 12.
m Or, The hill.

m Num. 27. 18, 23.
ch. 1. 38. & 31. 3, 7.

n ch. 4. 46. &
34. 6.

a Lev. 19. 37. &
20. 8. & 22. 31.
ch. 5. 1. & 8. 1.
Ezek. 20. 11.
Rom. 10. 5.
b ch. 12. 32.
Josh. 1. 7.
Prov. 30. 6.
Eccles. 12. 13.
Rev. 22. 18, 19.

c Num. 25. 4. & c.
Josh. 22. 17.
Ps. 106. 28, 29.

d Job 28. 28.
Ps. 19. 7. & 111.
10. Prov. 1. 7.

e 2 Sam. 7. 23.

f Ps. 46. 1. & 145.
18. & 148. 14.
Isa. 55. 6.

g Prov. 4. 23.
h Prov. 3. 1, 3. &
4. 21.

i Gen. 18. 19.
ch. 6. 7. & 11. 19.
Ps. 78. 5, 6.
Eph. 6. 4.
k Ex. 19. 9, 16. & 20. 18. Heb. 12. 18, 19.

^h what God is there in heaven or in earth, that can do according to thy works, and according to thy might? ²⁵ I pray thee, let me go ^over, and see ⁱ the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon. ²⁶ But the LORD ^k was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the LORD said unto me, Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter. ²⁷ ^l Get thee up into the top of ^{||} Pisgah, and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan. ²⁸ But ^m charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him: for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see. ²⁹ So we abode in ⁿ the valley over against Beth-peor.

IV. ¹ Now therefore hearken, O Israel, unto ^a the statutes and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you. ² ^b Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you. ³ Your eyes have seen what the LORD did because of ^c Baal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you. ⁴ But ye that did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day. ⁵ Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it. ⁶ Keep therefore and do them; for this is ^d your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people. ⁷ For ^e what nation is there so great, who hath ^f God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for? ⁸ And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day? ⁹ Only take heed to thyself, and ^g keep thy soul diligently, ^h lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but ⁱ teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons; ¹⁰ Speciallly ^k the day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb,

25. let me go over, and see] Literally, I will go over; or, may I go over: hence Sept. has ὑψομαι, and Vulg. "transibo;" a similar form occurs ii. 27. Num. xxi. 22.

— the good land—that goodly mountain] Moses therefore did not think scorn of that pleasant land (cp. iv. 21), as the ten spies and people had done (Num. xiii. 22; xiv. 1. Ps. cvi. 24).

Moses calls Canaan "that goodly mountain," because he speaks from the arabah, or plain; there is a reality in such an expression as this, which could never have occurred to one who was not an actor as well as a speaker in the history.

27. Pisgah] See Num. xxvii. 12, where the word Abarim occurs; but there is more of oratorical liveliness in the mention of the particular hill.

— behold it with thine eyes] Moses sees the land, but cannot enter it. The Law had a far-off vision of the Gospel and of its heavenly revelations, and yearned for it and them, but could not go in and possess them; but Moses after his death is brought into Canaan to see the glory of Christ (Matt. xvii. 3). See above, on Num. xxvii. 15.

28. Joshua—he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit] Not Moses and the Law, but Jesus and the Gospel, bring us to our Canaan (see above, on Num. xxvii. 18. 23).

29. Beth-peor] where Moses himself died and was buried (xxxiv. 6; cp. Num. xxiii. 28).

CH. IV. 1. Now therefore hearken] From a recital of what God had done for His people Moses proceeds to speak of what their conduct ought to be. They must be hearers of the word and doers also (James i. 22).

This and the following chapter are appointed to be read in the Church on the Third Sunday after Easter. After our deliverance by Christ's Death and Resurrection, we are bound by new obligations to obedience, and have new powers of doing God's will.

— the statutes and—the judgments] The whole Law. See Exod. xxi. 1. Lev. xix. 37. Deut. xxvi. 17.

2. Ye shall not add] As the Pharisees did in our Lord's days (Matt. xv. 9), and as some Christian Churches have done, against the command of God. See xii. 32. Jer. xxvi. 2. Prov. xxx. 6; and Rev. xxii. 18, 19.

3. of Baal-peor] He refers to the most recent judgment, with which the youngest among them were familiar (Num. xxv. 1—5. 9).

8. so righteous as all this law] He says, "all this law," which is a confutation of the theory of some (e. g., Spencer de Legibus Hebr., passim), grounded on a misinterpretation of Ezek. xx. 25, that some of the precepts given by God were not good. Cp. Rom. i. 24 with Rom. vii. 14. 16.

9. lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen] Here is the fundamental distinction between true religion and false. Moses, the Prophets, and our Blessed Lord, appeal to facts, wonderful and merciful signs, which were seen by those to whom they preached, and by other credible witnesses; but what can other religions produce like these which Moses here records, or which are related in the Gospel?

when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children. ¹¹ And ye came near and stood under the mountain; and the ¹mountain burned with fire unto the †midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

^{12 m} And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: "ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; ° † only ye heard a voice. ^{13 p} And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ^qten commandments; and ^rhe wrote them upon two tables of stone. ¹⁴ And ^sthe LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

^{15 t} Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves; for ye saw no manner of ^usimilitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire: ¹⁶ Lest ye ^xcorrupt yourselves, and ^ymake you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, ^zthe likeness of male or female, ¹⁷ The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air, ¹⁸ The likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth: ¹⁹ And lest thou ^alift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even ^ball the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to ^cworship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath ||divided unto all nations under the whole heaven. ²⁰ But the LORD hath taken you, and ^dbrought you forth out of the iron furnace, even out of Egypt, ^eto be unto him a people of inheritance, as ye are this day.

²¹ Furthermore ^fthe LORD was angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance: ²² But ^gI must die in this land, ^hI must not go over Jordan: but ye shall go over, and possess ⁱthat good land. ²³ Take heed unto yourselves, ^klest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which he made with you, ^land make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee. ²⁴ For ^mthe LORD thy God is a consuming fire, even ⁿa jealous God.

²⁵ When thou shalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and ^oshall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and ^pshall do evil in the sight of the LORD thy God, to provoke him to anger: ^{26 q} I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it; ye shall not prolong your

1 Ex. 19. 18.
ch. 5. 23.

† Heb. heart.

m ch. 5. 4, 22.

n ver. 33, 36.

o Ex. 20. 22.

1 Kings 19. 12.

† Heb. save a voice.

p ch. 9. 9, 1.

q Ex. 24. 28.

r Ex. 24. 12. &

31. 18.

s Ex. 21. 1.

& ch. 22. & ch.

23.

t Josh. 23. 11.

u Isa. 40. 18

x Ex. 32. 7.

y Ex. 20. 4, 5.

ver. 23. ch. 5. 8.

z Rom. 1. 23.

a ch. 17. 3.

Job 31. 26, 27.

b Gen. 2. 1.

2 Kings 17. 16. &

21. 3.

c Rom. 1. 25.

|| Or, imparted.

d 1 Kings 8. 51.

Jer. 11. 4.

e Ex. 19. 5.

ch. 9. 29. & 32. 9

f Num. 20. 12.

ch. 1. 37. & 3. 26

g See 2 Pet. 1. 13

14, 15.

h ch. 3. 27.

i ch. 3. 25.

k ver. 9.

l ver. 16.

Ex. 20. 4, 5.

m Ex. 24. 17.

ch. 9. 8.

Isa. 33. 14.

Heb. 12. 29.

n Ex. 20. 5.

ch. 6. 15.

Isa. 42. 8.

o ver. 16.

p 2 Kings 17. 17,

&c.

q ch. 30. 18, 19.

Isa. 1. 2.

Mic. 6. 2.

11. unto the midst of heaven] Literally, to the heart of the heavens.

13. ten commandments] Literally, ten words.

14. statutes and judgments] after the delivery of the Ten Commandments by God Himself to the people. See Exod. xxi. 1; and Irenæus, iv. 31, who argues for the perpetuity of the Decalogue on the ground of this difference in the manner of its delivery.

16. Lest ye corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven image] Here is another fundamental difference between true religion and false. The former forbids, the latter encourages, idolatry.

19. the host of heaven] A prophecy afterwards fulfilled by the idolatries of Israel (2 Kings xvii. 16; xxiii. 4). The Israelites even in the wilderness appear to have been guilty of this sin. See Amos v. 26. Acts vii. 43. Cp. Schultz, p. 38, for a refutation of the objection of those who argue from this command that Deuteronomy belongs to a post-Mosaic age.

— which the LORD thy God hath divided] Not as some suppose to be worshipped by men (Job xxxi. 26. 2 Kings xvii. 16; xxi. 3); but to serve all men by ministering to their use (S. Jerome, Theodoret, Aug. Cp. Pfeiffer, Dub. p. 160), and to lead them all to the knowledge of the power and love of the Creator (Rom. i. 20).

20. the iron furnace] This phrase is adopted in 1 Kings viii. 51, and Jer. xi. 4.

24. thy God is a consuming fire] From such statements as these the Manichæans inferred a diversity between the God of the Old Testament and of the New; but see our Lord's words, Matt. xxv. 41, and Heb. xii. 29, where St. Paul quotes this text, and applies it to "our God:" ep. S. Aug. c. Adimant. Manich. § 7. S. Cyril. Hier., Cat. 6.

r Lev. 26. 33.
ch. 28. 62, 64.
Neh. 1. 8.

s ch. 28. 64.
1 Sam. 26. 19.
Jer. 16. 13.
t Ps. 115. 4, 5.
& 135. 15, 16.
Isa. 44. 9. & 46.
7.
u Lev. 26. 39, 40.
ch. 30. 1, 2, 3.
2 Chron. 15. 4.
Neh. 1. 9.
Isa. 55. 6, 7.
Jer. 29. 12, 13, 14.
† Heb. have found thee.
Ex. 18. 8.
ch. 31. 17.
x Gen. 49. 1.
ch. 31. 29.
Jer. 23. 20.
Hos. 3. 5.
y Joel 2. 12.
z 2 Chron. 30. 9.
Neh. 9. 31.
Ps. 116. 5.
Jonah. 4. 2.
a Job 8. 8.
b Matt. 24. 31.
c Ex. 24. 11. &
35. 20.
ch. 5. 24, 26.

d ch. 1. 7, 9. &
29. 3.
e Ex. 7. 3.
f Ex. 13. 3.
g Ex. 6. 6.
h ch. 26. 8. & 34.
12.
i ch. 32. 39.
1 Sam. 2. 2.
Isa. 45. 5, 13, 22.
Mark 12. 29, 32.
k Ex. 19. 9, 19. &
20. 18, 22. & 24.
15.
l Heb. 12. 18.
m Ex. 13. 3, 9, 14.
n ch. 7. 1. & 9. 1, 4, 5.

o ver. 35.
Josh. 2. 11.

p Lev. 22. 31.

q
3, ch. 5. 16. & 6.
& 18. & 12. 25, 23.
22. 7.

r Num. 35. 6, 14.

s ch. 19. 4.

t Josh. 20. 8.

days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed. ²⁷ And the LORD shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the LORD shall lead you. ²⁸ And there ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell. ²⁹ But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul. ³⁰ When thou art in tribulation, and all these things come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice; ³¹ (For the LORD thy God is a merciful God;) he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he swore unto them.

³² For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it? ³³ Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live? ³⁴ Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes? ³⁵ Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the LORD he is God; there is none else beside him. ³⁶ Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee: and upon earth he shewed thee his great fire; and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire. ³⁷ And because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt; ³⁸ To drive out nations from before thee greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

³⁹ Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the LORD he is God, in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else. ⁴⁰ Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, for ever.

⁴¹ Then Moses severed three cities on this side Jordan toward the sunrising; ⁴² That the slayer might flee thither, which should kill his neighbour unawares, and hated him not in times past; and that fleeing unto one of these cities he might live: ⁴³ Namely, Bezer in the wilderness, in the plain country, of the Reubenites; and Ramoth in Gilead, of the Gadites; and Golan in Bashan, of the Manassites.

^{27.} shall scatter you among the nations] As He afterwards did, by the hand of the Assyrians, the Babylonians, the Seleucid and the Ptolemaic dynasties, and the Romans.

^{29.} if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD] As the prodigal in the Gospel (Luke xv. 18: cp. Lev. xxvi. 40—42. Deut. xxx. 1—3).

^{31.} he will not forsake thee] There is therefore mercy yet in store for the Jews (Rom. xi. 12. 15. 23. 26).

^{35.} there is none else beside him] Cp. Iren. iii. 6, and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. i., for the proofs of this unity of the Godhead.

^{37.} And because] The correct translation of these verses seems to be,—and (He did this not for thine own deserts: cp. vii. 7; ix. 5; x. 15. 22, but) because He loved thy fathers and chose his (Abraham's) seed after him, and brought thee in His sight with his great power out of Egypt to drive out nations mightier and stronger than thou art from before thy face, and to bring thee in, and to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day; and thou shalt know and consider in thine heart that the LORD He is God.

^{41.} Then Moses severed] After his exhortation to obedience he himself sets them an example of it (cp. Num. xxxv. 14, 15).

^{43.} Bezer] Probably the Bosor of 1 Macc. v. 36, perhaps now called Berza (Robinson), a city of refuge for the southern district.

—Ramoth] in Gilead; fifteen Roman miles west of Rabbah, or Philadelphia; and now called Salt (Raumer), a city of refuge for the midland district.

—Golan] in Batanæa (Euseb.), a city of refuge for the northern district.

⁴⁴ And this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel: ⁴⁵ These are the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which Moses spake unto the children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt, ⁴⁶ On this side Jordan, ^u in the valley over against Beth-peor, in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel ^x smote, after they were come forth out of Egypt: ⁴⁷ And they possessed his land, and the land ^y of Og king of Bashan, two kings of the Amorites, which were on this side Jordan toward the sunrising; ⁴⁸ ^z From Aroer, which is by the bank of the river Arnon, even unto mount Sion, which is ^a Hermon, ⁴⁹ And all the plain on this side Jordan eastward, even unto the sea of the plain, under the ^b springs of Pisgah.

V. ¹ And Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and [†] keep, and do them. ² ^a The LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. ³ The LORD ^b made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day. ⁴ ^c The LORD talked with you face to face in the mount out of the midst of the fire, ⁵ (^d I stood between the LORD and you at that time, to shew you the word of the LORD: for ^e ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount;) saying,

⁶ ^f I am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of [†] bondage. ⁷ ^g Thou shalt have none other gods before me.

⁸ ^h Thou shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth: ⁹ Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, ⁱ visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me, ¹⁰ ^k And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

¹¹ ^l Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

¹² ^m Keep the sabbath day to sanctify it, as the LORD thy God hath

These cities were so appointed by Moses as to be easy of access from the different parts of the region east of Jordan. So the Christian Church ought to make the means of grace in Christ, which they prefigured, to be within the reach of all. See notes above on Num. xxxv. 6. 14, 15, and below, Josh. xx. 8.

CH. V. 1. Hear, O Israel] In like manner the Gospel is commended by the voice of God from heaven, "This is My beloved Son, hear Him," and this too in the presence of Moses himself at the Transfiguration (Luke ix. 35). And Christ speaks as God in the Gospel, "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear," and in the Apocalypse seven times, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches," Rev. ii. 7, and in the following epistles; see below, Rev., p. 173.

3. The LORD made not this covenant with our fathers] With Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. We, who received the Law at Horeb, and were there admitted into covenant with God, enjoy greater privileges than they did.

— but with us] The original words here are very emphatic, with us, ourselves, who are here to-day; we, who are alive, are God's people; the national life and identity is continued in us; we constitute the nation with whom God spake in Horeb. See above, on i. 6. Do not therefore imagine, that because the covenant was made nearly forty years ago, when some of you were very young, and others were not born, its duties and privileges do not belong to you. They who have died, on account of their sins, were disinherited, and ceased to be God's covenanted people. But you, who have not perished, and all who are here alive this day, were the real parties to it, and your life, which is God's gift, is a proof of your covenantship (Theodoret, Qu. 1. Augustine, Qu. 9).

So, now that the unbelieving Jews have disinherited themselves by rejecting Christ, God's covenant is with the Christian Church, the Israel of God, the true seed of faithful Abraham, who are alive by faith in Christ; but there is "life from the dead" to the Jews (Rom. xi. 15), if they believe in Christ.

4. talked with you face to face] That is, not through me, or any one else, when He delivered the Ten Commandments. The words rendered face to face, panim ve panim, are not precisely the same as those so rendered, with regard to Moses himself, panim el panim (Exod. xxxiii. 11), which express a still more direct communication (cp. Deut. xxxiv. 10; and Gen. xxxii. 30).

5. I stood between the LORD and you] This parenthesis is introduced to show the awfulness of the Divine appearance (see Exod. xix. 1. 8. 19), which produced the request from the people which is mentioned in vv. 23. 27. Cp. Exod. xx. 18, 19; and see Exod. xx. 21, 22. Moses here describes himself as a Mediator, as he is called by St. Paul (Gal. iii. 19), and so he was a type of Christ: see there, and Exod. xxiv. 2.

6—18. I am the LORD thy God] See above, on Exod. xx. 1—14. 12—15. Keep the sabbath] In this recital of the precept concerning the Sabbath, something is inserted which is not in the parallel passage in Exodus, and something is omitted, which is there.

This is a consequence of the character of Exodus, as compared with that of Deuteronomy.

Accordingly we find in Exodus a reference to the Creation as the ground for the observance of the Sabbath. In Deuteronomy

u ch. 3. 29.

x Num. 21. 24.
ch. 1. 4.y Num. 21. 35.
ch. 3. 3, 4.
z ch. 2. 36. & 3.
12.a ch. 3. 9.
Ps. 133. 3.

b ch. 3. 17.

† Heb. *keep to do them.*a Ex. 19. 5.
ch. 4. 23.

b See Matt. 13. 17.

Heb. 8. 9.

c Ex. 19. 9, 19. & 20. 22.

ch. 4. 33, 36. & 34. 10.

d Ex. 20. 21.

Gal. 3. 19.

e Ex. 19. 16. & 20. 18. & 24. 2.

f Ex. 20. 2, &c.

Lev. 26. 1.

ch. 6. 4.

Ps. 81. 10.

† Heb. servants.

g Ex. 20. 3.

h Ex. 20. 4.

i Ex. 34. 7.

k Jer. 32. 18.
Dan. 9. 4.l Ex. 20. 7.
Lev. 19. 12.
Matt. 5. 33.

m Ex. 20. 8.

n Ex. 23. 12.
& 35. 2.
Ezek. 20. 12.
o Gen. 2. 2.
Ex. 16. 29, 30.
Heb. 4. 4

p ch. 15. 15.
& 16. 12.
& 24. 18, 22.
q ch. 4. 31, 37.

r Ex. 20. 12.
Lev. 19. 3.
ch. 27. 16.
Eph. 6. 2, 3.
Col. 3. 20.
s ch. 4. 40.

t Ex. 20. 13.
Matt. 5. 21.

u Ex. 20. 14.
Luke 18. 20.
James 2. 11.
x Ex. 20. 15.
Rom. 13. 9.
y Ex. 20. 16.

z Ex. 20. 17.
Mic. 2. 2.
Hab. 2. 9.
Luke 12. 15.
Rom. 7. 7.
& 13. 9.

a Ex. 24. 12.
& 31. 18.
ch. 4. 13.
b Ex. 20. 18, 19.

c Ex. 19. 19.
d ch. 4. 33.
Judg. 13. 22.
e ch. 18. 16.
† Heb.
add to hear.
f ch. 4. 33.

g Ex. 20. 19.
Heb. 12. 19.

h ch. 18. 17.

i ch. 32. 29.
Ps. 81. 13.
Isa. 48. 18.

commanded thee. ¹³ ^a Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work: ¹⁴ But the seventh day is the ° sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy manservant and thy maidservant may rest as well as thou. ¹⁵ ^p And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy God brought thee out thence ^q through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm: therefore the LORD thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day.

¹⁶ ^r Honour thy father and thy mother, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee; ^s that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

¹⁷ ^t Thou shalt not kill.

¹⁸ ^u Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

¹⁹ ^x Neither shalt thou steal.

²⁰ ^y Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

²¹ ^z Neither shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife, neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field, or his manservant, or his maidservant, his ox, or his ass, or any thing that is thy neighbour's.

²² These words the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice: and he added no more. And ^a he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me. ²³ ^b And it came to pass, when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the heads of your tribes, and your elders; ²⁴ And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath shewed us his glory and his greatness, and ^c we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he ^d liveth. ²⁵ Now therefore why should we die? for this great fire will consume us: ^e if we † hear the voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die. ²⁶ ^f For who is there of all flesh, that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived? ²⁷ Go thou near, and hear all that the LORD our God shall say: and ^g speak thou unto us all that the LORD our God shall speak unto thee; and we will hear it, and do it.

²⁸ And the LORD heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me, and the LORD said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: ^h they have well said all that they have spoken. ²⁹ ⁱ O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear

Luke 19. 42. Matt. 23. 37.

this is supposed to be known from the preceding book, Exodus; and something is added by way of supplement, which is special to Israel—namely, a reference to their deliverance from Egypt. By saying that God blessed the Sabbath because He rested on that day (Exod. xx. 11), Moses does not deny that God commanded Israel to observe it, for another special and additional reason—viz., because He delivered them from the bondage of Egypt, and gave them rest from their labours (Deut. v. 15); and in making the latter assertion he does not deny the former, but commends the Sabbath to their observance by a double motive of gratitude. And yet here also the sacred writer has been charged with inconsistency! (Colenso, § 617.)

In a spiritual sense, this latter reason also concerns all who are freed by Christ, Who is the true Sabbath, from the burden of sin; and who says, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. xi. 28). See above, on Exod. xii. 1, 2, and xx. 8—11. Cp. Bp. Pearson, Art. v. p. 265.

18. Neither] Literally, And not. All the following Commandments begin with the conjunction And, marking their connexion, and preparing the way for their summing up in the Gospel into one—that of Love (Rom. xiii. 9); and also showing that the Commandments make one whole, and are not to be severed from each other, and that he who wilfully "offends in one, is guilty of all;" see on James ii. 10, 11.

22. he added no more] to you; but he said more to me: see Exod. xx. 22, and xxi. 1. The perpetuity, universality, and supremacy of the Moral Law were marked by the circumstances of the delivery of the Decalogue. Cp. Iren., iv. 31; and Graves on the Pent., Part ii. Lect. ii.; and above, on Lev. i. 1.

26. the living God] Both words are plural here: a shadowing forth of the doctrine more fully revealed hereafter—of the plurality of Persons in the One Godhead: see Gen. i. 1.

28. they have well said] In that they not only said, We will hear it, but also, We will do it (Bp. Andrewes, v. 193).

29. O that there were such an heart] The words are very me, and ^kkeep all my commandments always, ^lthat it might be well with them, and with their children for ever! ³⁰ Go say to them, Get you into your tents again. ³¹ But as for thee, stand thou here by me, ^mand I will speak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it. ³² Ye shall observe to do therefore as the LORD your God hath commanded you: ⁿye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

³³ Ye shall walk in ^oall the ways which the LORD your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, ^pand that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.

VI. ¹ Now these are ^athe commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye [†]go to possess it: ² ^bThat thou mightest fear the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee, thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; ^cand that thy days may be prolonged. ³ Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, ^das the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in ^ethe land that floweth with milk and honey.

⁴ ^fHear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD: ⁵ And ^gthou shalt love the LORD thy God ^hwith all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all emphatic in the original,—Who will give that there may be such a heart in them? and so Sept., τίς δώσει, κ.τ.λ.; and Vulg., “Quis det?” Here the Christian Fathers recognized a prophetic declaration of the doctrine of justification through faith, working by love, produced by God's grace writing the law “on the fleshy tables of the heart” (2 Cor. iii. 3. See Augustine, Qu. 11); and here is also a divine testimony to human freewill.

31. the statutes, and the judgments] These are not inserted here, as being already promulgated in Exodus; and as being supposed to be well known to the people from it: see Exod. xxi. xxii. If this had not been the case, they would certainly not have been omitted here. Here is another proof of the identity of authorship of the Pentateuch, and of its unity of plan.

CH. VI.] This and the following chapter are appointed by the Church to be read on the Fourth Sunday after Easter.

— in the land] Rather, a land.

4. Hear, O Israel] In the MSS. of the original the last letter of the word Hear (shema), and the last letter of the word one (echad), are written in large letters, in order to call attention to this clause from the beginning of the fourth verse to the end of the ninth verse, which was one of the four paragraphs (Exod. xii. 1—10, 11—16. Deut. vi. 4—9. Deut. xi. 13—21, inclusive) written by the Jews on their phylacteries (see Exod. xiii. 9—16), and fixed on their door-posts (see her v. 9), and which was read in their houses twice a day: see Maimon in Mishn. Keriath Shema, i. 1, 2. Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. cap. x. 205—213. Prideaux, Conn., Pt. i. Bk. 6. See above, on Exod. xiii. 9; and below, note on Matt. xxiii. 5.

— The LORD our God is one LORD] Literally, Jehovah thy God is Jehovah one only. Cp. Mark xii. 29, adopting the words of the Sept. here, Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἑμῶν, Κύριος εἷς ἐστίν: and this is explained by the scribe, “There is one God, and there is none other but He” (Mark xii. 32).

The true meaning of this declaration is, that Jehovah, the God of Israel, is JEHOVAH—that is, the Everlasting Author and Giver of all life (see above, Exod. vi. 3); and is One only; the One Universal and Everlasting Lord God of all the Earth. And thus this declaration not only excludes Polytheism and Syncretism (the union of other national deities with Jehovah, which was Jeroboam's sin, cp. Hos. ii. 17), but Pantheism and Materialism. Cp. Deut. xxxiii. 26—29. Isa. xxxviii. 16; xlv. 6. 1 Cor. viii. 4. 6. Eph. iv. 5, 6. John xvii. 3.

The Christian Fathers used this Text, when combined with others, of Scripture declaratory of the divine essence of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, to prove against the Arians and Sabellians, that in the One Indivisible and Everlasting Godhead there are three Divine Co-eternal and Consubstantial Persons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost: see S. Athanasius de Synod. § 35. S. Hilary de Trin. iv. 15; iv. 33; v. 25; vii. 11. S. Epiphanius, Hæres. 62 and 74. S. Ambrose de Spiritu Sancto, iii. 15. Theodoret in Deut., Qu. 2. Cp. Bp. Patrick here; and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. pp. 143, 148, and note, where he shows that the name JEHOVAH is given to Christ in the Holy Scriptures; and see Art. viii. p. 316, where similar reasoning is applied to prove the Godhead of the Holy Ghost.

Surely the adoption of these solemn words of Deuteronomy in the Gospel by our Blessed Lord Himself (Mark xii. 29, 30), is a sufficient refutation of the theory of those who affirm that Deuteronomy is a spurious work. Our Lord makes them the very groundwork of all true religion. Would He have done so if they had been the words of a forger? And this argument will appear still stronger, when it is also remembered, that in His conflict with Satan at the Temptation, our Lord used no other weapon than the words of Deuteronomy: see Matt. iv. 4, 7, 10; and below, vi. 16; viii. 3; x. 20. It is observable, that our Lord's replies come from three different chapters of this book; and all of them are introduced by Him with the solemn pre-amble, “IT IS WRITTEN.” What stronger testimony could He have given to the genuineness, truth, and divine origin of Deuteronomy?

5. thou shalt love] Therefore the Law as well as the Gospel is grounded on Love (cp. xi. 1; xxx. 6; and see Graves on the Pentateuch, Part ii. Lect. ii.). In Love is comprised godly fear (Deut. x. 12), obedience (xi. 13), observance of the whole Law (xi. 22), and walking in the ways of the Lord (xi. 22; xix. 9; xxx. 16). “This is the first and great commandment” (Matt. xxii. 37. Mark xii. 29, 30. Luke x. 27). The Gospel gives higher and stronger motives to Love—motives derived from the doctrine of the Incarnation and Death of Christ, His Resurrection, Ascension, Priesthood, and future Coming; and it supplies new powers of Love, which “is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost” (Rom. v. 5), but the groundwork both of the Law and of the Gospel is the same—Love; and the oneness of origin of both Dispensations is thence rightly concluded by the Christian Fathers, and by all the best later Divines.

— with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might] The heart, in its Hebrew acceptance, is not only the seat of the affections, but expresses also the Understanding and the Conscience, and comprises also the πνεῦμα, and is the seat of faith. See 1 Kings iii. 9—12. Prov. ii. 2, 10; Matt. xv. 8. Rom. x. 10. See below, on 1 Thess. v. 23; and on 1 John iii. 19, 20.

Therefore in some of the passages where this precept

i ch. 11. 18.
& 32. 46.
Ps. 37. 31.
& 40. 8. & 119.
11. 93.
Prov. 3. 3.
Isa. 51. 7.
k ch. 4. 9.
& 11. 19.
Ps. 78. 4, 5, 6.
Eph. 6. 4.
† Heb. uhet, or,
sharpen.
l Ex. 13. 9, 16.
ch. 11. 18.
Prov. 3. 3.
& 6. 21.
& 7. 3.
m ch. 11. 20.
Isa. 57. 8.
n Josh. 24. 13.
Ps. 105. 44.

o ch. 8. 10, &c.

† Heb. bondmen,
or, servants.
p ch. 10. 12, 20.
& 13. 4.
Matt. 4. 10.
Luke 4. 8.
q Ps. 63. 11.
Isa. 45. 23.
& 65. 16.
Jer. 4. 2.
& 5. 7.
& 12. 16.
r ch. 8. 19.
& 11. 28.
Jer. 25. 6.
s ch. 13. 7.
t Ex. 20. 5.
ch. 4. 24.
u ch. 7. 4.
& 11. 17.
x Matt. 4. 7.
Luke 4. 12.
y Ex. 17. 2, 7.
Num. 20. 3, 4.
& 21. 4, 5.
z Cor. 10. 9.
1 ch. 11. 13, 22.
Ps. 119. 4.
a Ex. 15. 26.
ch. 12. 28.
& 13. 18.
b Num. 33. 52, 53.
c Ex. 13. 14.
† Heb. tomorrow.

d Ex. 3. 19.
& 13. 3.
e Ex. 7. & 8.
& 9. & 10.
& 11. & 12.
Ps. 135. 9.
† Heb. evil.

f ver. 2.
g ch. 10. 13.
Job 35. 7, 8.
Jer. 32. 39.
h ch. 4. 1.
& 8. 1.
Ps. 41. 2.
Luke 10. 28.
i Lev. 18. 5.
ch. 24. 13. Rom. 10. 3, 5.

thy might. ⁶ And ⁱ these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: ⁷ And ^k thou shalt [†] teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. ⁸ ^l And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes. ⁹ ^m And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.

¹⁰ And it shall be, when the LORD thy God shall have brought thee into the land which he sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities, ⁿ which thou buildedst not, ¹¹ And houses full of all good things, which thou filledst not, and wells digged, which thou diggedst not, vineyards and olive trees, which thou plantedst not; ^o when thou shalt have eaten and be full; ¹² Then beware lest thou forget the LORD, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of [†] bondage. ¹³ Thou shalt ^p fear the LORD thy God, and serve him, and ^q shalt swear by his name. ¹⁴ Ye shall not ^r go after other gods, ^s of the gods of the people which are round about you; ¹⁵ (For ^t the LORD thy God is a jealous God among you) ^u lest the anger of the LORD thy God be kindled against thee, and destroy thee from off the face of the earth.

¹⁶ ^x Ye shall not tempt the LORD your God, ^y as ye tempted him in Massah. ¹⁷ Ye shall ^z diligently keep the commandments of the LORD your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes, which he hath commanded thee. ¹⁸ And thou ^a shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the LORD: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the good land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, ¹⁹ ^b To cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the LORD hath spoken.

²⁰ And ^c when thy son asketh thee [†] in time to come, saying, What mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD our God hath commanded you? ²¹ Then thou shalt say unto thy son, We were Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt; and the LORD brought us out of Egypt ^d with a mighty hand: ²² ^e And the LORD shewed signs and wonders, great and [†] sore, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, before our eyes: ²³ And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he sware unto our fathers. ²⁴ And the LORD commanded us to do all these statutes, ^f to fear the LORD our God, ^g for our good always, that ^h he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day. ²⁵ And ⁱ it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the LORD our God, as he hath commanded us.

is recited in the Gospels, the words διάρθια and σύνεσις are inserted, in order to present the statement more clearly to the Greek mind. See Luke x. 27. Mark xii. 30. 33.

6—9. And these words] This precept is understood literally by the Jews, and has produced the tephillim, or phylacteries for their persons, and the mezuzoth for the door-posts of their houses. See above on v. 4, and on Exod. xiii. 9—16; and below, on Matt. xxiii. 5, where it appears that the Pharisees made a display of observing the letter of this law, but violated its spirit.

The Talmudists say, "Whosoever has the tephillim (phylacteries) bound on his head and arm; and the tsitsith (fringes, see Num. xv. 38, 39) thrown over his garments, and the mezuzah fixed on his door-post, is protected from sin" (Talmud tract, Sabbath, c. xi. Cp. Maimon. de Tephillim, c. 5. Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. cap. xxxi.). If the spirit of them, as explained in the Gospel, is written on the heart by the Holy Ghost, then indeed the Christian is protected from sin (cp. Col. iii. 16).

11. houses full—which thou filledst not] For an answer to the objections of the Marcionites and Manichæans, alleging that such a transfer was unjust, see Epiphanius, Aucorat., § 113.

13. shalt swear by his name] On oaths, as an act of worship of the true God, see Ps. lxxiii. 12. Isa. xlv. 23; lxxv. 16. Jer. iv. 2. Zeph. i. 5; and below, on Matt. v. 34. Heb. vi. 16. James v. 12; and Bp. Sanderson, iv. 244, de Juram. Oblig., Prælect. i.

16. Ye shall not tempt the LORD your God] A text quoted by Christ against Satan (Matt. iv. 7: see above, on v. 4). On the various ways of tempting God, see the remarks of Irenæus, v. 21. Augustine c. Faust. xxii. 36. Theodoret, Qu. 5.

25. it shall be our righteousness, if we observe] Cp. Rom. x. 5. Gal. iii. 12. The Pharisaic righteousness was something very different from the Mosaic, as well as from the Evangelical. See Matt. v. 20. Luke x. 29; xvi. 15.

VII. ¹ When the ^a LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, ^b the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations ^c greater and mightier than thou; ² And when the LORD thy God shall ^d deliver them before thee; thou shalt smite them, and ^e utterly destroy them; ^f thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them: ³ ^g Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son. ⁴ For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: ^h so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly. ⁵ But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall ⁱ destroy their altars, and break down their ^j images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire. ⁶ ^k For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: ^l the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth. ⁷ The LORD did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were ^m the fewest of all people: ⁸ But ⁿ because the LORD loved you, and because he would keep ^o the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, ^p hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt. ⁹ Know therefore that the LORD thy God, he is God, ^q the faithful God, ^r which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments to a thousand generations; ¹⁰ And ^s repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: ^t he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

¹¹ Thou shalt therefore keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them. ¹² ^u Wherefore it shall come to pass, ^v if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep, and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee ^x the covenant and the mercy which he sware unto thy fathers: ¹³ And he will ^y love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee: ^z he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee. ¹⁴ Thou shalt be blessed above all people: ^a there shall not be male or female barren

a ch. 31. 3.
Ps. 44. 2. 3.
b Gen. 15. 19, &c.
Ex. 33. 2.
c ch. 4. 38.
& 9. 1.
d ver. 23.
e ch. 23. 14.
f Lev. 27. 28, 29.
Num. 33. 52.
g ch. 20. 16, 17.
Josh. 6. 17.
& 8. 24.
& 9. 24.
& 10. 28, 40.
& 11. 11, 12.
h Ex. 23. 32.
& 34. 12, 15, 16.
i Judg. 2. 2.
j See ch. 20. 10, &c.
Josh. 2. 14.
& 9. 18.
k Judg. 1. 24.
l Josh. 23. 12.
m 1 Kings 11. 2.
n Ezra 9. 2.
o ch. 6. 15.
p Ex. 23. 24.
& 34. 13.
q ch. 12. 2, 3.
r Heb. statues, or, pillars.
s k Ex. 19. 6.
ch. 14. 2.
& 26. 19.
t Ps. 50. 5.
Jer. 2. 3.
u 1 Ex. 19. 5.
Amos 3. 2.
v 1 Pet. 2. 9.
w ch. 10. 22.
x n ch. 10. 15.
o Ex. 32. 13.
p Ps. 105. 8, 9, 10.
q Luke 1. 55, 72, 73.
r p Ex. 13. 3, 14.
s q Isa. 49. 7.
t 1 Cor. 1. 9.
& 10. 13.
u 2 Cor. 1. 18.
v 1 Thess. 5. 24.
w 2 Thess. 3. 3.
x 2 Tim. 2. 13.
y Heb. 11. 11.
z 1 John 1. 9.
a r Ex. 20. 6.
ch. 5. 10.
Neh. 1. 5.
Dan. 9. 4.
s Isa. 59. 18.
t Nah. 1. 2.
u t ch. 32. 35.
v u Lev. 26. 3.
ch. 28. 1.
w t Heb. because.
x Ps. 105. 8, 9.
y Luke 1. 55, 72, 73.
z y John 14. 21.
a z ch. 28. 4.
a Ex. 23. 26, &c.

CH. VII. 1. seven nations] See Gen. x. 15; xv. 20. Here seven are named, as in Josh. iii. 10; xxiv. 11. Acts xiii. 19. In Deut. xx. 17 the Girgashites are omitted, as in Exod. iii. 8. 17; xxxiii. 23; xxxiii. 2.

2. thou shalt smite them] On the command to extirpate the Canaanitish nations, see above, on Gen. xv. 16; and below, Introduction to the Book of Joshua.

3. Neither shalt thou make marriages with them] Cp. Gen. xxiv. 3, Abraham's charge to his servant; and see Gen. xxvi. 34; xxvii. 46; xxviii. 2, the evil consequences in Judah's case; and St. Paul's advice (2 Cor. vi. 14); and S. Aug. de Conjug. Adult. i. 14.

5. groves] So Sept., Vulg., Arabic, Onkelos; but Syriac has "molten images" (cp. above, Exod. xxxiv. 13; and below, xii. 3. Judg. iii. 7; vi. 25). On the meaning of the original word, asherah, see Selden de Diis Syriis, ii. 2, who supposes asherim to mean images of Astarte, wooden idols, trunks of trees.

7. ye were the fewest] When God called you in Abraham your father, and blessed you in Jacob, "a Syrian ready to perish." See x. 22; xxvi. 5. Such was the Church of Christ in its origin. See 1 Cor. i. 26—31.

10. to their face] To the face of each one of his enemies, so that each may see and feel that he is punished by God (Onkelos, Rosenm.).

— he will not be slack] Though He may often seem to be so. See Luke xviii. 7, 8. "The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some men count slackness" (2 Pet. iii. 9).

12.] Here begins a new Section of the Law, and extends to xi. 25. The parallel Section of the Prophets is Isa. xlix. 13 to li. 3, where Christ declares His love to His people, and announces their deliverance and restoration.

— it shall come to pass, if ye hearken] as the end and reward of your hearkening. Cp. Gen. xxvi. 5. Amos iv. 12. See Gesen. 649.

13. the increase] Literally the casting forth (Exod. xiii. 12).

— the flocks] Heb., ashtheroth, a word supposed by some to be connected with the Canaanitish word Ashtoreth, Astarte, the Canaanitish deity of fruitfulness (Gesen., p. 661). This word is found only here and in xviii. 51; xxviii. 4. It is probable that the deity itself derived its name from some common root, such as asherah, fortune, from which also ashtheroth may be derived (Gesen., p. 91: cp. Bochart, Hieroz. iii. 43, Canaan, ii. 2. Some render it ewes).

14. there shall not be male or female barren] This promise among you, or among your cattle. ¹⁵ And the LORD will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the ^bevil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, upon thee; but will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

b Ex. 9. 14.
k 15. 26.
ch. 28. 27, 60.

c ver. 2.

d ch. 13. 8.
& 19. 13, 21.
& 25. 12.
e Ex. 23. 33.
ch. 12. 30.
Judg. 8. 27.
Ps. 106. 36.
f Num. 33. 53.
g ch. 31. 6.
h Ps. 105. 5.
i ch. 4. 34.
& 29. 3.

¹⁶ And ^cthou shalt consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; ^dthine eye shall have no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be ^ea snare unto thee. ¹⁷ If thou shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I; how can I ^fdispossess them?

¹⁸ ^gThou shalt not be afraid of them: but shalt well ^hremember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt; ¹⁹ ⁱThe great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out: so shall the LORD thy God do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

k Ex. 23. 28.
Josh. 24. 12.

²⁰ ^kMoreover the LORD thy God will send the hornet among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed. ²¹ Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is ^lamong you, ^ma mighty God and terrible. ²² ⁿAnd the LORD thy God will [†]put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the

Num. 11. 20.
& 14. 9, 14, 42.
& 16. 3.
Josh. 3. 10.
m ch. 10. 17.
Neh. 1. 5.
& 4. 14.
& 9. 32.
n Ex. 23. 29, 30.
† Heb. pluck off.
† Heb. before thy face, ver. 2.
o Josh. 10. 24.
25, 42. & 12. 1.
&c.
p Ex. 17. 14.
ch. 9. 14.
& 25. 19.
& 29. 20.
q ch. 11. 25.
Josh. 1. 5.
& 10. 8.
& 23. 9.
r ver. 5.
Ex. 32. 20.
ch. 12. 3.
s Chron. 14. 12.
1 Josh. 7. 1, 21.
t Judg. 8. 27.
Zeph. 1. 3.
u ch. 17. 1.
x Lev. 27. 28.
ch. 13. 17.
Josh. 6. 17, 18.
& 7. 1.
a ch. 4. 1.
& 5. 32, 33.
& 6. 1, 2, 3.
b ch. 1. 3.
& 2. 7. & 29. 5.
Ps. 136. 16.
Amos 2. 10.
c Ex. 16. 4. ch. 13. 3. d 2 Chron. 32. 31. John 2. 25.

beasts of the field increase upon thee. ²³ But the LORD thy God shall deliver them [†]unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed. ²⁴ And ^ohe shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name ^pfrom under heaven: ^qthere shall no man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them. ²⁵ The graven images of their gods ^rshall ye burn with fire: thou ^sshalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be ^tsnared therein: for it is ^uan abomination to the LORD thy God. ²⁶ Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; ^xfor it is a cursed thing.

VIII. ¹ All the commandments which I command thee this day ^ashall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers. ² And thou shalt remember all the way which the LORD thy God ^bled thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and ^cto prove thee, ^dto know what was in thine heart, whether (it is alleged) is an extravagant exaggeration of the divine assurances in the foregoing parts of the Pentateuch, and betrays a difference of authorship (Davidson, p. 370). But, on the contrary, God uses almost precisely the same words in Exod. xxiii. 26.

Such are the promises in the Law. Those under the Gospel are more gracious. In Christ, as the Hebrew prophets foretold, there are blessings better than of sons and daughters, to the faithful. See Isa. lvi. 4, 5; and cp. 1 Cor. vii. 32—38.

15. diseases of Egypt] Cp. Exod. xv. 26. Deut. xxviii. 27. 60. Plin., N. H. xxvi.; and Hengstenberg, Moses and Egypt, p. 215. Wagner, in his Natural History of Man (ii. 270), calls Egypt "a great focus of the diseases of all history." Plague, Elephantiasis, Small-pox, and Blindness prevail there at this day (Keil, p. 428). It was therefore more remarkable, that when Israel came forth from such a country as Egypt, "there was not one feeble person among their tribes" (Ps. cv. 37).

20. the hornet] See Exod. xxiii. 28.

22. at once] Heb. maher (Gesen. 454: on the alleged discrepancy between this and ix. 3, see note there).

25. lest thou be snared] As they were by Gideon's ephod (Judg. viii. 27).

26. Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house] Hence it was held by many among the Jews, that if a man brake idolatrous images, and melted them down, and sold the gold or silver of them, he committed abomination; and they would not warm themselves with the wood of an idolatrous grove that had been cut down (Maimon., Mor. Nevoch. iii. 37. Selden de Jure Gentium, ii. 7). How far a Christian may avail himself of things that have been used by idolaters, is a question which has been raised on such texts as this (cp. xii. 3. 2 Kings xxiii. 4. 1 Chron. xiv. 12. 2 Chron. xv. 16; and see S. Aug., Epist. 46 and 47, vol. ii. pp. 160—7). Some in England and Scotland have construed such texts as this into commands for the destruction of Cathedral and other Churches which had been perverted to idolatrous uses in Papal times; on which argument and practice see Hooker, E. P. v. xvii. 1. 6; and v. lxi. 12—20. There was only one place where God was to be worshipped by the Israelites, so that their case differed from ours.

— a cursed thing] As was proved in the case of Achan (Josh. vii. 1. 21).

This and the following chapter are appointed to be read on the fifth Sunday after the Season of our Lord's Death, Burial, and Resurrection: see above, iv. 1; and vi. 1.

CH. VIII. 2. to humble thee] by showing thy dependence on God for thy daily bread.

Here is one of the uses of the means of grace—the spiritual manna and water from the rock—that they teach humility, by declaring man's constant need of grace and pardon from God. Another use is, that they prove men, whether they will humbly obey God's will and word, or proudly follow their own devices.

thou wouldest keep his commandments, or no. ³ And he humbled thee, and *suffered thee to hunger, and ‘fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, ^e Ex. 16. 2, 3.
 neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth ^f Ex. 16. 12, 14, ⁵ not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth ^g Ps. 104. 29.
 of the LORD doth man live. ⁴ ^h Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither ⁱ Matt. 4. 4.
 did thy foot swell, these forty years. ⁵ ⁱ Thou shalt also consider in thine ^h Luke 4. 4.
 heart, that, as a man chasteneth his son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee. ^h ch. 29. 5.
⁶ Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, ^k to walk ^h Neh. 9. 21.
 in his ways, and to fear him. ⁱ 2 Sam. 7. 14
^g Ps. 89. 32.
^h Prov. 3. 12.
ⁱ Heb. 12. 5, 6.
^k Rev. 3. 19.
^l ch. 5. 33.

⁷ For the LORD thy God bringeth thee into a good land, a ¹ land of brooks ¹ ch. 11. 10, 11, of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills; ⁸ A land ¹² of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig trees, and pomegranates; a land † of [†] Heb. of olive oil olive, and honey; ⁹ A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, [†] tree of oil.
 thou shalt not lack any thing in it; a land ^m whose stones are iron, and out of ^m ch. 33. 25.
 whose hills thou mayest dig brass.

¹⁰ ⁿ When thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the LORD thy ⁿ ch. 6. 11, 12.
 God for the good land which he hath given thee. ¹¹ Beware that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day: ¹² ^o Lest when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein; ¹³ And ^o ch. 28. 47.
 when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is ^o & 32. 15.
^o Prov. 30. 9.
^o Hos. 13. 6.

3. doth not live by bread only] as if bread could nourish life, irrespectively of God’s will; or as if He could not support life without it, and by any thing that He appoints for the purpose, or without any means at all: see Matt. iv. 4, where He, Who is the Living Bread, quotes these words against the Tempter, who endeavoured to prevail upon Him to exert His own Divine power to produce bread to satisfy His own human needs. Cp. Bp. Sanderson, iii. 180, on 1 Tim. iv. 4.

4. Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee] Literally, fell not away from upon thee by reason of old age (Ges., p. 121). This supernatural preservation of the garments of the Israelites is never mentioned in Exodus, Leviticus, or Numbers. But now, in this address of Moses, in the eleventh month of the fortieth year (i. 3), he appeals publicly to their own experience during their pilgrimage in the wilderness for a testimony to the fact. Cp. xxix. 5, where it is repeated; and Neh. ix. 21, where it is referred to as a fact well known.

This is very suggestive. It naturally prompts the inference that we are not to suppose that we have a full record of all the miraculous acts of God for the preservation of the Israelites in their Wanderings.

We have only a narrative of their history for about a year and a little more, at the beginning of those wanderings (see Num. xiv. and xv. 1), and a year at the end of them. It would therefore be unreasonable to infer from the silence of the historian on that subject, that the cattle of the Israelites were not supernaturally provided for, as well as the Israelites themselves.

What is true of Our Lord’s miracles in His ministry is true of God’s acts in the wilderness. What is true of the Gospel is true of the Pentateuch. Many other signs truly did God in the presence of His people which are not written in this book; but these are written that ye might believe that God is the Lord, and that believing ye might have life through Him, of whom Moses wrote in this book (cp. John xx. 30, 31; xxi. 25).

The feeding of the Israelites with manna was a miracle, which, though constantly repeated, was a miracle in each instance clear and distinct; but the circumstance of the raiment not waxing old for forty years, was a continual, supernatural operation, which at no one period could have had its commencement distinctly marked; and therefore never could be noticed with such clear certainty as when it was no longer to continue — i. e., at the end of the forty years’ wandering, when they were about to enter Canaan, at which time these speeches of Moses were delivered. Hence we see the propriety of its mention in Deuteronomy, rather than in any other part of the Pentateuch. Cp. Graves, Pt. i. Lect. iv.

It has been asked by some, “What was the process by which this miracle was wrought?” Some of the Fathers thought the raiment of the Israelites grew with their growth. Thus Justin Martyr, c. Tryphon, c. 131, ad fin. says, οὐδὲ τὰ ἐνδύματα κατερίβη, ἀλλὰ συνήξανε; and so some of the Rabbis; and Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 160, who accepts that interpretation. Others of the Fathers were of opinion that, by God’s blessing, the raiment did not wear out, and that it was transmitted from one generation to the next. So Ambrose de Fide ii. 2, who sees here a figure of the preservation of the vesture of the human body in the wardrobe of the grave; and so Bede, Qu. 2 in Deut. If God could thus preserve the vesture of bodies, cannot He restore the bodies themselves? Cp. S. Augustine and Theodoret here. It may be borne in mind that the sandals and loose robes of Orientals would be more easy of transmission than modern costume; and we find that priestly robes were so transmitted. Cp. Num. xx. 26; and note on Gen. xxvii. 15. Probably also human labour co-operated with divine power in this and other miracles. The manna was to be gathered daily and cooked. God did what God alone could do; but man must do what could be done by man. So it is also in the world of grace. “When I sent you without purse and scrip and shoes, lacked ye any thing?” said Christ to His disciples, “and they said, Nothing” (Luke xxii. 35). He, by His Divine care, provides for all true Israelites in their pilgrimage through this world. But He adds also, “He that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip.” — neither did thy foot swell] like dough (Exod. xii. 34. 39).

Sept. has οὐκ ἐρυλώθησαν, did not become callous. This preservation of their feet from swelling was more remarkable in such a climate and such a soil (Chryss.). If (says Tertullian de Res. c. 58) God preserved the shoes, &c., of Israel from waxing old for forty years, surely He can preserve His own Israel in heaven.

9. whose stones are iron—brass] i. e., copper, as has been proved by modern researches: see Burekh., Syr. 73, p. 83; Volney, i. p. 233; Seetzen, i. 145. 187; Ritter, Erdk. xvii. 1063, who bear testimony to the existence of iron and copper mines in Lebanon, and between Jerusalem and Jericho; and the sources of Tiberias are impregnated with iron. The Canaanites had many chariots of iron (Josh. xvii. 16. Judg. iv. 3). Some have made the mention of iron (barzel) in Deuteronomy to be a mark of later composition than the age of Moses (Colenso, § 620). But iron was worked by Tubal-cain (Gen. iv. 22); and it is also mentioned in Lev. xxvi. 19. Num. xxxi. 22; xxxv. 16.

11. Beware that thou forget not] This whole chapter is a warning against unthankfulness. See Bp. Sanderson’s excellent sermon on 1 Tim. iv. 4, vol. iii. pp. 180, 183, and 203.

p 1 Cor. 4. 7.
q Ps. 106. 21.
r Isa. 3. 12, 13, 14.
Jer. 2. 6.
s Num. 23. 6.
t Hos. 13. 5.
u Num. 20. 11.
Ps. 78. 15.
& 114. 8.
v ver. 3.
Ex. 15. 15.
x Jer. 24. 5, 6.
Heb. 12. 11.
y ch. 9. 4.
1 Cor. 4. 7.
z Prov. 10. 22.
Hos. 2. 8.
a ch. 7. 8, 12.

multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied; ¹⁴ ^p Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou ^q forget the LORD thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage; ¹⁵ Who ^r led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, ^s wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water; ^t who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint; ¹⁶ Who fed thee in the wilderness with ^u manna, which thy fathers knew not, that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, ^x to do thee good at thy latter end; ¹⁷ ^y And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth. ¹⁸ But thou shalt remember the LORD thy God: ^z for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, ^a that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day.

¹⁹ And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, ^b I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish. ²⁰ As the nations which the LORD destroyeth before your face, ^c so shall ye perish; because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the LORD your God.

IX. ¹ Hear, O Israel: Thou art to ^a pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations ^b greater and mightier than thyself, cities great and ^c fenced up to heaven, ² A people great and tall, ^d the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak! ³ Understand therefore this day, that the LORD thy God is he which ^e goeth over before thee; as a ^f consuming fire ^g he shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: ^h so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the LORD hath said unto thee. ⁴ ⁱ Speak not

b ch. 4. 26
& 30. 18.

c Dan. 9. 11, 12.

a ch. 11. 31.
Josh. 3. 16.
& 4. 19
b ch. 4. 38.
& 7. 1.
& 11. 23.
c ch. 1. 28.
& 11. 23.
d Num. 13. 22,
28, 32, 33.

e ch. 31. 3.
Josh. 3. 11.
f ch. 4. 24.
Heb. 12. 29.
g ch. 7. 23.
h Ex. 23. 31.
ch. 7. 24.

i ch. 8. 17. Rom. 11. 6, 20. 1 Cor. 4. 4, 7.

¹⁶. to do thee good at thy latter end] Or, as Sept. has it, "in thy last days," which is the design of God in all the discipline, humiliation, and trial of His people (cp. Heb. xii. 11). This "latter end" of Israel was not only their entrance into Canaan; but it extends to "the last days," in which God comforted the true Israel of God by the coming of Christ (see Heb. i. 1); and it stretches onward to the last days, when He will bring in His faithful people into the heavenly rest of eternity.

²⁰. so shall ye perish] For an answer to the objection, grounded on the fulfilment of this threat, that the Israelites should perish, and on the alleged consequent frustration of God's purposes, and on the inutility of the Levitical Law and Ritual, see Minucius Felix, c. 33. The prosperity of the Israelites as long as they obeyed God, and their afflictions whenever they disobeyed Him, are salutary encouragements and warnings to every age, nation, and person.

CH. IX. 1. The following chapter is very important, as affording evidence of the truth, genuineness, and inspiration of this Book and of the Pentateuch generally.

If, as some allege, the Book of Deuteronomy had been written by a person or persons living in an age later than that of Moses, who desired to impose a forgery upon the Israelitish Nation in the name of Moses, the Book would have been composed in a very different tone and spirit. The Author would have endeavoured to conciliate the people, and to ingratiate himself with them, by a favourable representation of their character, presenting claims to God's favour and love; and by such means as these he would have endeavoured to procure the adoption of his book by the nation.

But the writer of Deuteronomy has proceeded in a very different manner.

He does not give a favourable representation of the people. He tells them that it is by no merit of their own that they were chosen by God; but purely by His free grace and love. He reminds them that they rebelled against God as soon as He had delivered them from Egypt; and that they were guilty of rebellion and idolatry, even when He had just revealed Himself in divine glory and majesty, and was giving them laws from Horeb. He displays them as guilty of ingratitude to Him when giving them bread from heaven, and water from the rock.

Let the reader carefully consider the present chapter, in all its details of divine love and human sin, till the writer sums up all in the remarkable words (v. 24), "Ye have been rebellious against the Lord from the day that I knew you."

The Book of Deuteronomy is like a censure and condemnation of the Israelitish nation for its ingratitude and rebellion against God.

The Book of Deuteronomy also, it must be remembered, purports to be a public oration of the great Hebrew Lawgiver to the Hebrew people. Nations do not readily accept censures of themselves. But, on the contrary, they are prone to exaggerate their own merits, and to eulogize their own acts. And the Hebrew people was elated with a sense of its own privileges, and regarded itself as superior to all other Nations.

And yet we know that the Book of Deuteronomy is received, and has been received ever since it was written, by the Israelitish nation as true, genuine, and inspired; and that it is read, as such, publicly in their synagogues in all parts of the world.

Can we imagine that a whole Nation would ever have conspired to accept a libel against itself, and have venerated it as an oracle of God; and that no one should have arisen among them to point out the forgery, and to protest against it?

The thing is absolutely impossible (cp. notes below, xxxi. 9—12; and above, Preface to Part I., p. xxxii). Here therefore is a strong argument for the genuineness of Deuteronomy.

². whom thou knowest] From the spies (Aug.).

³. Understand therefore] Rather, And thou shalt know.

— shalt thou—destroy them quickly] "In the ardour of his discourse the writer forgets that he has just forbidden this destroying of them quickly (vii. 22). The same Hebrew word, maher, is used in both places" (Knobel, Colenso). But it is not used of the same persons. In vii. 22, Moses says, "Thou shalt not destroy the nations of Canaan quickly, or all at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee," and God had given this command in Exod. xxiii. 29, 30. But here he is speaking of a particular race,—"the sons of Anak" (v. 2), and he is speaking of the speedy destruction of those whom they attacked, but he is not commanding them to attack all the nations quickly, or at once; but he is promising them a speedy victory over those who were to be attacked by degrees.

thou in thine heart, after that the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land: but ^k for the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee. ⁵ ¹ Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land: but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that he may perform ^m the word which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

⁶ Understand therefore, that the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art ⁿ a stiffnecked people.

⁷ Remember, and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: ^o from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

⁸ Also ^p in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you to have destroyed you.

⁹ When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then ^r I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights, I neither did eat bread nor drink water: ¹⁰ ^s And the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone written with the finger of God; and on them was written according to all the words, which the LORD spake with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire ^t in the day of the assembly. ¹¹ And it came to pass at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant. ¹² And the LORD said unto me, ^u Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are ^x quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image. ¹³ Furthermore ^y the LORD spake unto me, saying, I have seen this people, and, behold, ^z it is a stiffnecked people: ¹⁴ ^a Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and ^b blot out their name from under heaven: ^c and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they. ¹⁵ ^d So I turned and came down from the mount, and ^e the mount burned with fire: and the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands. ¹⁶ And ^f I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you. ¹⁷ And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes. ¹⁸ And I ^g fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread, nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger. ¹⁹ ^h For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure, wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you. ⁱ But the LORD hearkened unto me at that time

^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^{aa} ^{ab} ^{ac} ^{ad} ^{ae} ^{af} ^{ag} ^{ah} ^{ai} ^{aj} ^{ak} ^{al} ^{am} ^{an} ^{ao} ^{ap} ^{aq} ^{ar} ^{as} ^{at} ^{au} ^{av} ^{aw} ^{ax} ^{ay} ^{az} ^{ba} ^{bb} ^{bc} ^{bd} ^{be} ^{bf} ^{bg} ^{bh} ^{bi} ^{bj} ^{bk} ^{bl} ^{bm} ^{bn} ^{bo} ^{bp} ^{bq} ^{br} ^{bs} ^{bt} ^{bu} ^{bv} ^{bw} ^{bx} ^{by} ^{bz} ^{ca} ^{cb} ^{cc} ^{cd} ^{ce} ^{cf} ^{cg} ^{ch} ^{ci} ^{cj} ^{ck} ^{cl} ^{cm} ^{cn} ^{co} ^{cp} ^{cq} ^{cr} ^{cs} ^{ct} ^{cu} ^{cv} ^{cw} ^{cx} ^{cy} ^{cz} ^{da} ^{db} ^{dc} ^{dd} ^{de} ^{df} ^{dg} ^{dh} ^{di} ^{dj} ^{dk} ^{dl} ^{dm} ^{dn} ^{do} ^{dp} ^{dq} ^{dr} ^{ds} ^{dt} ^{du} ^{dv} ^{dw} ^{dx} ^{dy} ^{dz} ^{ea} ^{eb} ^{ec} ^{ed} ^{ee} ^{ef} ^{eg} ^{eh} ^{ei} ^{ej} ^{ek} ^{el} ^{em} ^{en} ^{eo} ^{ep} ^{eq} ^{er} ^{es} ^{et} ^{eu} ^{ev} ^{ew} ^{ex} ^{ey} ^{ez} ^{fa} ^{fb} ^{fc} ^{fd} ^{fe} ^{ff} ^{fg} ^{fh} ^{fi} ^{fj} ^{fk} ^{fl} ^{fm} ^{fn} ^{fo} ^{fp} ^{fq} ^{fr} ^{fs} ^{ft} ^{fu} ^{fv} ^{fw} ^{fx} ^{fy} ^{fz} ^{ga} ^{gb} ^{gc} ^{gd} ^{ge} ^{gf} ^{gg} ^{gh} ^{gi} ^{gj} ^{gk} ^{gl} ^{gm} ^{gn} ^{go} ^{gp} ^{gq} ^{gr} ^{gs} ^{gt} ^{gu} ^{gv} ^{gw} ^{gx} ^{gy} ^{gz} ^{ha} ^{hb} ^{hc} ^{hd} ^{he} ^{hf} ^{hg} ^{hh} ^{hi} ^{hj} ^{hk} ^{hl} ^{hm} ^{hn} ^{ho} ^{hp} ^{hq} ^{hr} ^{hs} ^{ht} ^{hu} ^{hv} ^{hw} ^{hx} ^{hy} ^{hz} ^{ia} ^{ib} ^{ic} ^{id} ^{ie} ^{if} ^{ig} ^{ih} ⁱⁱ ^{ij} ^{ik} ^{il} ^{im} ⁱⁿ ^{io} ^{ip} ^{iq} ^{ir} ^{is} ^{it} ^{iu} ^{iv} ^{iw} ^{ix} ^{iy} ^{iz} ^{ja} ^{jb} ^{jc} ^{jd} ^{je} ^{jf} ^{jj} ^{jk} ^{jl} ^{jm} ^{jn} ^{jo} ^{jp} ^{jq} ^{jr} ^{js} ^{jt} ^{ju} ^{kv} ^{kw} ^{kx} ^{ky} ^{kz} ^{la} ^{lb} ^{lc} ^{ld} ^{le} ^{lf} ^{lg} ^{lh} ^{li} ^{lj} ^{lk} ^{ll} ^{lm} ^{ln} ^{lo} ^{lp} ^{lq} ^{lr} ^{ls} ^{lt} ^{lu} ^{lv} ^{lw} ^{lx} ^{ly} ^{lz} ^{ma} ^{mb} ^{mc} ^{md} ^{me} ^{mf} ^{mg} ^{mh} ^{mi} ^{mj} ^{mk} ^{ml} ^{mn} ^{mo} ^{mp} ^{mq} ^{mr} ^{ms} ^{mt} ^{mu} ^{mv} ^{mw} ^{mx} ^{my} ^{mz} ^{na} ^{nb} ^{nc} nd ^{ne} ^{nf} ^{ng} ^{nh} ⁿⁱ ^{nj} ^{nk} ^{nl} ^{nm} ⁿⁿ ^{no} ^{np} ^{nq} ^{nr} ^{ns} ^{nt} ^{nu} ^{nv} ^{nw} ^{nx} ^{ny} ^{nz} ^{oa} ^{ob} ^{oc} ^{od} ^{oe} ^{of} ^{og} ^{oh} ^{oi} ^{oj} ^{ok} ^{ol} ^{om} ^{on} ^{oo} ^{op} ^{oq} ^{or} ^{os} ^{ot} ^{ou} ^{ov} ^{ow} ^{ox} ^{oy} ^{oz} ^{pa} ^{pb} ^{pc} ^{pd} ^{pe} ^{pf} ^{pg} ^{ph} ^{pi} ^{pj} ^{pk} ^{pl} ^{pm} ^{pn} ^{po} ^{pp} ^{pq} ^{pr} ^{ps} ^{pt} ^{pu} ^{pv} ^{pw} ^{px} ^{py} ^{pz} ^{qa} ^{qb} ^{qc} ^{qd} ^{qe} ^{qf} ^{qg} ^{qh} ^{qi} ^{qj} ^{qk} ^{ql} ^{qm} ^{qn} ^{qo} ^{qp} ^{qq} ^{qr} ^{qs} ^{qt} ^{qu} ^{qv} ^{qw} ^{qx} ^{qy} ^{qz} ^{ra} ^{rb} ^{rc} rd ^{re} ^{rf} ^{rg} ^{rh} ^{ri} ^{rj} ^{rk} ^{rl} ^{rm} ^{rn} ^{ro} ^{rp} ^{rq} ^{rr} ^{rs} ^{rt} ^{ru} ^{rv} ^{rw} ^{rx} ^{ry} ^{rz} ^{sa} ^{sb} ^{sc} ^{sd} ^{se} ^{sf} ^{sg} ^{sh} ^{si} ^{sj} ^{sk} ^{sl} sm ^{sn} ^{so} ^{sp} ^{sq} ^{sr} ^{ss} st ^{su} ^{sv} ^{sw} ^{sx} ^{sy} ^{sz} ^{ta} ^{tb} ^{tc} ^{td} ^{te} ^{tf} ^{tg} th ^{ti} ^{tj} ^{tk} ^{tl} tm ^{tn} ^{to} ^{tp} ^{tq} ^{tr} ^{ts} ^{tt} ^{tu} ^{tv} ^{tw} ^{tx} ^{ty} ^{tz} ^{ua} ^{ub} ^{uc} ^{ud} ^{ue} ^{uf} ^{ug} ^{uh} ^{ui} ^{uj} ^{uk} ^{ul} ^{um} ^{un} ^{uo} ^{up} ^{uq} ^{ur} ^{us} ^{ut} ^{uu} ^{uv} ^{uw} ^{ux} ^{uy} ^{uz} ^{va} ^{vb} ^{vc} ^{vd} ^{ve} ^{vf} ^{vg} ^{vh} ^{vi} ^{vj} ^{vk} ^{vl} ^{vm} ^{vn} ^{vo} ^{vp} ^{vq} ^{vr} ^{vs} ^{vt} ^{vu} ^{vv} ^{vw} ^{vx} ^{vy} ^{vz} ^{wa} ^{wb} ^{wc} ^{wd} ^{we} ^{wf} ^{wg} ^{wh} ^{wi} ^{wj} ^{wk} ^{wl} ^{wm} ^{wn} ^{wo} ^{wp} ^{wq} ^{wr} ^{ws} ^{wt} ^{wu} ^{wv} ^{ww} ^{wx} ^{wy} ^{wz} ^{xa} ^{xb} ^{xc} ^{xd} ^{xe} ^{xf} ^{yg} ^{yh} ^{yi} ^{yj} ^{yk} ^{yl} ^{ym} ^{yn} ^{yo} ^{yp} ^{yq} ^{yr} ^{ys} ^{yt} ^{yu} ^{yv} ^{yw} ^{yx} ^{yy} ^{yz} ^{za} ^{zb} ^{zc} ^{zd} ^{ze} ^{zf} ^{zg} ^{zh} ^{zi} ^{zj} ^{zk} ^{zl} ^{zm} ^{zn} ^{zo} ^{zp} ^{zq} ^{zr} ^{zs} ^{zt} ^{zu} ^{zv} ^{zw} ^{zx} ^{zy} ^{zz}

¹⁹ ^h For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure, wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you. ⁱ But the LORD hearkened unto me at that time

5. Not for thy righteousness] He thus teaches them humility, faith, and love (Theodoret).

Thus Moses prepares the way for St. Paul and the Gospel. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but by His mercy He saved us" (Titus iii. 5. Rom. xi. 6. 2 Tim. i. 9).

6. thou art a stiffnecked people] These words bespeak a national identity and a national responsibility; they whom Moses addressed, and who were permitted to enter the land, were not the same persons as had rebelled, but they were the same people (Aug.: cp. on Matt. xxiii. 35; and above, on i. 6).

18, 19. I fell down before the LORD—the LORD hearkened unto me] He passes from a record of the first ascent, to speak of the second. It is alleged that this account is at variance with the history in Exodus. In Exod. xxxii. 11—14, it is related that Moses interceded for the people before he came down from the mount the first time, when he heard of their sin from God,—"and the Lord repented of the evil which he thought to do to His people."

But here it is said that he prayed for them after he had gone up the second time (see here, and vv. 25—29).

But this allegation is groundless: it is said in Exod. xxxiv. 9, that he prayed to God at his second ascent into the mount.

Moses introduces here this mention of his prayer, as an evidence of God's great mercy and love, which showed itself

k Gen. 15. 16.
Lev. 18. 24, 25.
ch. 18. 12.
1 Tit. 3. 5.

m Gen. 12. 7.
& 13. 15.
& 15. 7.
& 17. 8. & 26. 4.
& 28. 13.

n ver. 13.
Ex. 32. 9.
& 33. 3.
& 34. 9.

o Ex. 14. 11.
& 16. 2.
& 17. 2.

Num. 11. 4.
& 20. 2.
& 25. 2.

ch. 31. 27.

p Ex. 32. 4.
Ps. 106. 19.

q Ex. 24. 12, 15.

r Ex. 24. 18.
& 34. 28.

s Ex. 31. 18.

t Ex. 19. 17.
& 20. 1.

ch. 4. 10.
& 10. 4.

& 18. 16.

u Ex. 32. 7.

x ch. 31. 29.
Judg. 2. 17.

y Ex. 32. 9.

z ver. 6.

ch. 10. 16.

& 31. 27.

2 Kings 17. 14.

a Ex. 32. 10.

b ch. 29. 20.

Ps. 9. 5.

& 109. 13.

c Num. 14. 12.

d Ex. 32. 15.

e Ex. 19. 18.

ch. 4. 11.

& 5. 23.

f Ex. 32. 19.

g Ex. 34. 28.

Ps. 106. 23.

h Ex. 32. 10, 11.

i Ex. 32. 14.

& 33. 17.

ch. 10. 10. Ps. 106. 23.

also. ²⁰ And the LORD was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time. ²¹ And ^k I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust: and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

k Ex. 32. 20.
lsa. 31. 7.

²² And at ^lTaberah, and at ^mMassah, and at ⁿKibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath. ²³ Likewise ^owhen the LORD sent you from Kadesh-barnea, saying, Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ^pye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice. ²⁴ ^qYe have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.

l Num. 11. 1, 3, 5.
m Ex. 17. 7.
n Num. 11. 4, 31.
o Num. 13. 3.
& 14. 1.
p Ps. 106. 24, 25.
q ch. 31. 27.

²⁵ ^rThus I fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights, as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you. ²⁶ ^sI prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O Lord GOD, destroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand. ²⁷ Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin: ²⁸ Lest ^tthe land whence thou broughtest us out say, "Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness. ²⁹ ^xYet they are thy people and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power and by thy stretched out arm.

r ver. 18.

s Ex. 32. 11, &c.

t Gen. 41. 57.
l Sam. 14. 25.
u Ex. 32. 12.
Num. 14. 16.

x ch. 4. 20.
l Kings 8. 51.
Neh. 1. 10.
Ps. 95. 7.

a Ex. 34. 1, 2.

b Ex. 25. 10.

X. ¹ At that time the LORD said unto me, ^aHew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and ^bmake thee an ark of wood. ² And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first in his dealings with the Israelites, even when they had been most disobedient, and was now evinced in the following particulars which are here inserted;

(1) The sparing of Aaron's life (v. 20).
(2) And not only so, but in the renewal of the Two Tables (x. 1—5).

(3) In the making of the Ark of the Covenant, and in the placing of the Tables in the Ark (x. 2, 3, 5).

(4) In the continuation of the priesthood, after Aaron's death (x. 6); by the appointment of Eleazar his son to minister in his stead.

(5) In the signification of God's favour to His people by temporal mercies, such as the fresh springs of Jotbath (x. 7).

(6) In the setting apart of the Levites, to minister to the priesthood in the Tabernacle.

This appointment was in the second year of the wandering (Num. iii. 6—10; iv. 4—15; viii. 5—14); but it is appropriately mentioned where it is, because the gift of the Levites to the Priests, and their services in the sanctuary, were connected with the appointment of a continual Priesthood in the family of Aaron, and were evidences of God's love and favour to the Levites for their zeal at Horeb (see below, xxxiii. 8, 9), and also of God's goodness to His people, and a pledge of His favour towards them.

When the whole drift and tenour of the speech of Moses are considered, which was designed to be a memento of God's free grace and mercy to His people, even though rebellious against Him, it will be seen that the paragraph in x. 6—9, is not (as has been alleged by some) an interpolation and gloss, or inconsistent with the history of Exodus, but is in perfect harmony with that history and with the context.

²⁰ I prayed for Aaron] The Priest himself required an intercessor; therefore the Aaronic Priesthood could not have been perfect. In this intercession, Moses, the king of Jeshurun, was a type of Christ, who is both Priest and King (S. Cyril, Cat. 2).

²¹ I took your sin] Exod. xxxii. 20.
— the brook that descended out of the mount] Here is a proof that the Israelites had no lack of water at Sinai: this transaction was forty days after the delivery of the Law, which was in the third month after the Exodus; which was in the spring (the fourteenth Abib): cp. Benisch on Colenso, p. 43.

²² at Taberah] Num. xi. 1. 3. 5.

— Kibroth-hattaavah] Num. xi. 4. 34.

²³ Kadesh-barnea] Num. xiii. 3. 26.

²⁵ Thus I fell down] Exod. xxxiv. 9. See above, on v. 18.

CH. X. 1.] This is the First Lesson for ASCENSION DAY, when Christ went up to write His Law by the Spirit on the heart.

It is alleged, that this is at variance with the statement in Exodus. In Exod. xxxiv. 29 the Tables are in the hands of Moses before any Ark has been made to receive them; and in Exod. xxxv. 10—12, when Moses has come down from the Mount with the Tables, the wise-hearted are summoned to come and make the Ark; and in Exod. xxxvii. 1—9 is an account of the making of the Ark. But here the Ark is commanded to be made, and is made, at the same time with the Tables (see also, v. 5), where Moses comes down from the Mount, and puts the Tables into the Ark (Knobel, Colenso).

But such allegations as these are of little weight. A forger, personating Moses, would have followed with exact precision, and mechanical servility, the details of the two Ascents of Moses, and the hewing of the two sets of Tables, and the framing of the Ark, as they are set down in chronological order before his eyes in Exodus.

But Moses himself, in this rapid address to the people, is solicitous to present the facts themselves before them, as they would be most impressive, rather than to mark distinctly the order of time in which they occurred. He states that God commanded him to hew two tables of stone, and come up into the Mount, and to make an Ark, and to put them into the Ark; and that he made an Ark, and hewed two tables of stone, and went up into the Mount, and that God wrote upon them, and that he himself came down and put the Tables into the Ark, and there they are now—i. e., nearly forty years after that time. What was more natural, than that in Exodus, which ends with the making of the Ark, &c., and the setting up of the Tabernacle, he should write tables which thou brakest, and °thou shalt put them in the ark. ³ And I ^c Ex. 25. 16, 21. made an ark of ^d shittim wood, and ^e hewed two tables of stone like unto the ^d Ex. 25. 5, 10. first, and went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand. ⁴ And ^e Ex. 34. 4. ^f he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten † commandments, ^f Ex. 34. 28. [†] Heb. words. ^g which the LORD spake unto you in the mount out of the midst of the fire ^h in the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me. ⁵ And I turned ^g Ex. 20. 1. myself and ^h Ex. 19. 17. came down from the mount, and ⁱ put the tables in the ark which ^{ch.} 9. 10. I had made; and there they be, as the LORD commanded me. [†] 18. 16. ⁱ Ex. 34. 29. ^k Ex. 40. 20. ^l 1 Kings 8. 9.

⁶ And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth ^m of the children of Jaakan to ⁿ Mosera: °there Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead. ⁷ ^p From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters. ^m Num. 33. 31. ⁿ Num. 33. 30. ^o Num. 20. 23. [†] 33. 38. ^p Num. 33. 7, 23, 33.

⁸ At that time ^q the LORD separated the tribe of Levi, ^r to bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, ^s to stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and ^t to bless in his name, unto this day. ⁹ ^u Wherefore Levi hath no part nor ^q Num. 3. 6. [†] 4. 4. & 8. 14. [†] 16. 9. ^r Num. 4. 15. ^s ch. 18. 5. ^t Lev. 9. 22. ^u Num. 6. 23. ch. 21. 5. ^v Num. 18. 20, 24. ch. 18. 1, 2. Ezek. 44. 28.

down the events as they occurred in exact chronological order of time; but that in Deuteronomy speaking to the people nearly forty years afterwards, he should group the events together as they stood in essential connexion with each other; and that after speaking of the making of the Tables, he should proceed immediately to speak of the making of the Ark, in which the Tables were to be placed, and in which they were preserved?

4. he wrote] Exod. xxxiv. 28; above, ix. 10.

5. came down] Exod. xxxiv. 29.

6. And the children of Israel] This is not a gloss or interpolation, but comes in here very naturally, as a record of God's mercy to rebellious Israel in not only sparing Aaron their High Priest in answer to the prayer of Moses; but in vouchsafing a continuance to his priesthood by the appointment of Eleazar, his son, to succeed him at his death. See above, on ix. 19; and Keil, p. 437; and Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. 427.

— there Aaron died] How can it be said that Aaron died at Mosera, when, in Num. xxxiii. 38, it is stated that he died on Mount Hor, which place is at an interval of several stations from Mosera (vs. 31—38)?

There is also, it is alleged, another discrepancy here. In Numbers the order of march is, Moseroth, Bene-jaakan, Hor-hagidgad, Jotbathah, Ebronah, Ezion-gaber, wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh, Mount Hor, where Aaron died (Num. xxxiii. 30—38).

Here the order is Beeroth, Bene-jaakan, Mosera, “where Aaron died; and Eleazar, his son, ministered in the priest's office in his stead.” In the one case there is a march from Moseroth to Mount Hor, where Aaron died; in the other there is a march from Beeroth to Mosera, where Aaron died. How is this to be explained?

Let us observe that the Author of Deuteronomy himself states that Aaron died on Mount Hor (see xxxii. 50), in agreement with the statement in Num. xx. 22; xxxiii. 37.

These passages are to be combined; and thence it follows that Mosera was in the region of Mount Hor; and so Aben Ezra, Tostatus, A Lapide, Drusius: cp. Gerhard, Pfeiffer, Lebehtal, and Hengstenb., Auth. ii. p. 430.

There is a parallel to this in the Gospel history. There Christ's agony is said to be on the Mount of Olives (Luke xxii. 39), and it is also said to be at Gethsemane (Matt. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32), because Gethsemane was in the region of the Mount of Olives. Christ is also said to have lodged at Bethany in the evenings before His Passion (Matt. xxi. 17. Mark xi. 1); and also to have lodged at the Mount of Olives (Luke xxiv. 37). His Ascension is said to be at Bethany (Luke xxiv. 50); and also at the Mount of Olives (Acts i. 12), because Bethany was a district on that mountain.

It is probable that several of the stations mentioned in Num. xxxiii. 31—37 were connected with the region of Mount Hor. This connexion seems to be marked by the name of one mentioned soon after Mosera—viz., Hor-hagidgad, which is here called simply Gudgodah.

Next it is to be observed, that the two accounts, in Num. xxxiii. 30—32, and in Deut. x. 6, 7, refer to two different times. That in Numbers seems to refer to an earlier part of their wanderings, that in Deuteronomy to the last year. Cp. Keil, pp. 361—4; and above on Num. xxxiii. 1; and Dr. Hayman, in B. D. iii. p. 1765.

There is something very interesting in the recurrence of the same names of stations (such as Bene-jaakan, Mosera, Gudgodah, Jotbath), after an interval of some years. The Israelites murmured and rebelled at Kadesh, and were disinherited for disobedience, and were condemned to wander for forty years (see xxxiii. 1). They were then lost for a time; they ceased to have a history; no one can trace their footsteps. And after this long penal discipline, and national evanescence, they emerge as it were from their depths of darkness and forgetfulness, and appear again in a new generation, at the same places where they were many years before. They have made no progress. Here is a solemn warning to Nations and individuals; there can be no real progress, no genuine advancement, but by obedience to God's Will and Word.

The intertwining of the marches of the Israelites, in an intricate zigzag and mazy labyrinth, represents the condition of perplexity to which they were reduced by disobedience. We might almost say of them in this their condition of uncertainty, that they were like mariners tossed about in a storm on the wide Ocean of the Wilderness; “they reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man” (Ps. cvii. 27).

Perhaps the Sacred Writer mentioned that Aaron died at Mosera, and that Eleazar his son succeeded him at Mosera, a station where the Israelites had been some years before, in order to show not only that by reason of their own disobedience they made no progress, and were not nearer to Canaan then, than they had been some years before; but also to show that by God's mercy they were not utterly cast off, and that a locus penitentiæ was given them; and they were then permitted to begin anew, and that the Priesthood received fresh life in Eleazar, and that the new generation of Israel went forth with new hopes from Mosera toward the Land of Promise.

The word Mosera signifies a bond; and its name was thus verified to Israel. It became a bond of union to the Priesthood of Aaron, joining it to that of Eleazar; it became a bond of union to Israel, uniting the old generation to the new; and connecting the deliverance from Egypt with the entrance into Canaan.

7. a land of rivers] Another proof of God's long-suffering and love to His People. Notwithstanding their rebellion, God still vouchsafed to give them blessings spiritual and temporal—rivers of water, as well as rivers of grace (Gerhard, Oslander, Schultze).

8. At that time] This phrase is to be connected with the words in v. 1, “at that time,” and ix. 20; and it comprises the whole period of the restoration of the covenant of Sinai. The choice of the Levites was consequent on their zeal for God at Horeb. See xxxiii. 9.

— the tribe of Levi, to bear the ark] namely, the Kohathites (Num. iii. 27; iv. 15); but on certain great occasions this office was also performed by the Priests (Josh. iii. 6. 1 Kings viii. 3). See below, xxxi. 9.

— to bless in his name] But, it is alleged, “this was to be inheritance with his brethren; the LORD is his inheritance, according as the LORD thy God promised him.

^x Ex. 34. 28. ¹⁰ And ^x I stayed in the mount, according to the || first time, forty days and forty nights; and ^y the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also, and the LORD would not destroy thee. ¹¹ ^z And the LORD said unto me, Arise, † take thy journey before the people, that they may go in and possess the land, which I swear unto their fathers to give unto them.

^a Mic. 6. 8. ^b ch. 6. 13. ^c ch. 5. 33. ^d ch. 6. 5. & 11. 13. & 30. 16, 20. Matt. 22. 37.

^e ch. 6. 24. f 1 Kings 8. 27. Ps. 115. 16. & 148. 4. g Gen. 14. 19. Ex. 19. 5. Ps. 24. 1. h ch. 4. 37. i See Lev. 26. 41. ch. 30. 6. Jer. 4. 4. Rom. 2. 28, 29. Col. 2. 11. k ch. 9. 6, 13. l Josh. 22. 22. Ps. 136. 2. Dan. 2. 47. & 11. 36. m Rev. 17. 14. & 19. 16. n ch. 7. 21. o 2 Chron. 19. 7. Job 34. 19. Acts 10. 34. Rom. 2. 11. Gal. 2. 6. Eph. 6. 9. Col. 3. 25. l Pet. 1. 17. p Ps. 68. 5. & 146. 9. q Lev. 19. 33, 34. r ch. 6. 13. Matt. 4. 10. Luke 4. 8. s ch. 11. 22. & 13. 4. t Ps. 63. 11. u Ex. 15. 2. Ps. 22. 3. Jer. 17. 14. x 1 Sam. 12. 24. 2 Sam. 7. 23. Zech. 3. 7.

¹² And now, Israel, ^a what doth the LORD thy God require of thee, but ^b to fear the LORD thy God, ^c to walk in all his ways, and ^d to love him, and to serve the LORD thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, ¹³ To keep the commandments of the LORD, and his statutes, which I command thee this day ^e for thy good? ¹⁴ Behold, ^f the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the LORD's thy God, ^g the earth also, with all that therein is. ¹⁵ ^h Only the LORD had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day. ¹⁶ Circumcise therefore ⁱ the foreskin of your heart, and be no more ^k stiffnecked. ¹⁷ For the LORD your God is ^l God of gods, and ^m Lord of lords, a great God, ⁿ a mighty, and a terrible, which ^o regardeth not persons, nor taketh reward: ¹⁸ ^p He doth execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment. ¹⁹ ^q Love ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. ²⁰ ^r Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou ^s cleave, ^t and swear by his name. ²¹ ^u He is thy praise, and he is thy God, ^x that hath done for thee these great and terrible things, which thine eyes have seen. ²² Thy fathers went down into Egypt ^y with threescore and ten persons; and now the LORD thy God hath made thee ^z as the stars of heaven for multitude. XI. ¹ Therefore thou shalt ^a love the LORD thy God, and ^b keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, alway.

² And know ye this day: for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen ^c the chastisement of the LORD your God, ^y Gen. 46. 27. Ex. 1. 5. Acts 7. 14. z Gen. 15. 5. ch. 1. 10. & 28. 62. a ch. 10. 12. & 30. 16, 20.

done by the Priests alone"—i. e., by Aaron and his sons (see Num. vi. 23—27), and therefore, it is objected, there is a contradiction between what is said here and what is stated in other parts of the Pentateuch.

But Aaron and all his sons were Levites, as well as Priests; and Moses is here speaking generally of the privileges given by God to the descendants of Levi; viz., the office of bearing the Ark, and ministering before the Lord (see xviii. 6—8), and of blessing the People (cp. xxi. 5). It will be found that in Deuteronomy—which is the farewell address of the Great Lawgiver to Israel—he endeavours to cherish a spirit of unity and love between the Priests and Levites; and between both and the People: see above, Introduction to Deuteronomy, p. 197.

9. as the LORD thy God promised him] a reference to Num. xviii. 20, and a proof that the Author of Deuteronomy did not (as some allege) confound the Levites with the Priests. Cp. Hengstl., Auth. ii. 402.

12. to love him] Here is a preparation for the Gospel (Irenæus, iv. 31).

14. the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the LORD's thy God] Do not therefore imagine Him to be a mere local or national deity; such as the gods of the heathen are supposed to be.

16. Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart] A proof of the spiritual character of the Levitical Law, as to its essence, and of its harmony with the Gospel. Cp. Jer. iv. 4. Rom. ii. 28. Col. ii. 11.

Hence this portion of this chapter (v. 12 to end) is appointed to be read in the Church on the Festival of the Circumcision.

Some critics have excepted against this expression in Deuteronomy, "circumcise the foreskin of your hearts," as un-Mosaic. Why should it be thought so, more than the phrase of Moses himself in Exodus speaking to God, "I am of uncircumcised lips" (Exod. vi. 12. 30)?

19. Love ye therefore the stranger] A proof also of the comprehensiveness of the Law, and of its preparation for the Gospel, and for a Church Universal in Christ. Cp. Exod. xii. 48; xxii. 21; xxiii. 9.

From such precepts as these, S. Justin Martyr proves against Trypho the Jew, that the Levitical Law was not final, but preliminary to another Dispensation (Dialog. § 16—19; cp. Ambrose de Abr. i. 4; ii. 11); and indeed (as Theodoret observes) Moses was now speaking to people who were not literally circumcised. See Josh. v. 5.

CH. XI. 2. I speak not with your children] The words, "I speak," are not in the original. The sense is, Not with your children, who were not alive when ye came out of Egypt, but were born in the wilderness; not with them have I to do; not to them does what I say refer. Moses is speaking with them all; but he is appealing to the special knowledge of some among them—that is, the elder generation, especially to those who were not twenty years of age when they came out of Egypt, and are now going into Canaan: see v. 8.

Here Moses comes forward and makes publicly a direct appeal to the Israelites, as witnesses of the miracles which are recorded in the Pentateuch: "Your eyes have seen all the great acts of the Lord which He did." He calls upon the Nation to be vouchers to the World for the truth of the history, at the same time that he reproves them very sharply for their own rebellion and wickedness, notwithstanding all these wonderful works (see ix. 1—24). The Hebrew Nation has ever received this History as true and as divinely inspired, although it tells so ^dhis greatness, ^ehis mighty hand, and his stretched out arm, ^{3 f}And his miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land; ⁴And what he did unto the army of Egypt, unto their horses, and to their chariots; ⁵how he made the water of the Red sea to overflow them as they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day; ⁵And what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place; ⁶And ^bwhat he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben: how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the || substance that †was in their possession, in the midst of all Israel: ⁷But ¹your eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did. ⁸Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may ^kbe strong, and go in and possess the land, whither ye go to possess it; ⁹And ¹that ye may prolong your days in the land, ^mwhich the LORD sware unto your fathers to give unto them and to their seed, ⁿa land that floweth with milk and honey.

¹⁰For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, ^owhere thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs: ^{11 p}But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven: ¹²A land which the LORD thy God †careth for: ^qthe eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.

¹³And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken ^rdiligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, ^sto love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul, ¹⁴That ^tI will give you the rain of your land in his due season, ^uthe first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

d ch. 5. 24.
e ch. 7. 19.
f Ps 78 12.
& 135. 9.

g Ex. 14. 27, 28.
& 15. 9, 10.
Ps. 106. 11.

h Num. 16. 1, 31
& 27. 3.
Ps. 106. 17.

|| Or, living substance which followed them.

† Heb. was at their feet.
i ch. 5. 3.
& 7. 19.
k Josh. 1. 6, 7.

l ch. 4. 40.
& 5. 16.
Prov. 10 27.
m ch. 9. 5.
n Ex. 3. 8.

o Zech. 14. 18.

p ch. 8. 7.

† Heb. seeketh.
q 1 Kings 9. 3.

r ver. 22.
ch. 6. 17.
s ch. 10. 12.

t Lev. 26. 4.
ch. 28. 12.
u Joel 2. 23.
James 5. 7.

much to their own discredit; and this national reception of such a History affords a strong argument for its truth.

— the chastisement] discipline: see viii. 5.

6. Dathan and Abiram] Why (it has been asked) does he not also mention the sin and destruction of Korah, and of the two hundred men who offered incense? (Num. xvi. 5—11. 35.)

It has been inferred by some from this silence that the sin of Korah and his company "was considered to be not such a grievous sin in the days of the Deuteronomist" (Bp. Colenso, § 634. Cp. Dr. Davidson, p. 356). "The Deuteronomist here passes over the Levite Korah, because in his (the Deuteronomist's) eyes there was nothing improper in aspiring to the priesthood."

What is to be said in reply to this allegation?

Moses here mentions the rebellion and punishment of Dathan and Abiram, because theirs was a rebellion of some of the People against the authority of the Rulers, and their punishment was a warning to the People whom he was addressing; but he does not mention the sin and punishment of Korah, the Kohathite, and his Levites, because that was a mutiny of a special portion of a single tribe against another part of that special tribe, and did not concern the people generally; and because it might well be hoped that the jealous rivalry of such Levites as Korah, against Aaron, had been extinguished by that punishment, and by the miracle of the budding rod of Aaron (Num. xvii.); and that the Priests and Levites would now live in amity together as brethren. A preacher delivering a sermon "ad populum" does not usually introduce what may have a special fitness when he is preaching "ad clerum." He would not descend before the people on the duties of deacons to priests, and on the duties of both to bishops.

The alleged discrepancy is, in fact, an evidence of reality and truth: see further below, on xvii. 9, where a similar objection has been raised; and ep. above, Introduction to Deuteronomy, p. 198.

10. For the land . . . is not as the land of Egypt] where there is scarcely any rain. The crops depend on the inundation of the Nile, and artificial irrigation (Herod., ii. 4; Diod., i. 41; and Plin., Panegy. c. 30).

Here is another motive for obedience: Canaan is not fertilized so much by human labour, like Egypt, as by Divine grace; therefore thou hast more reason for thankfulness to God; and beware that thou do not disobey God, lest He withhold these blessings from thee.

— wateredst it with thy foot] by machines for irrigation worked by the foot: described by Philo (de Conf. Ling. p. 254); and Diod. Sic., i. 34; v. 37. On those still used in Egypt see Niebuhr, Reis, i. p. 148; Robinson, i. 541, 542; and ep. ii. 351; iii. 21, as to watering by the foot; and see the note to the English translation of Hengstenberg's Moses and Egypt, p. 222; and especially as to the machine for irrigation, which is one found delineated in ancient pictures in Egypt, and is still used and called the schaduf: see Wilkinson, i. 35; ii. 4; and Lane, Mod. Egypt, p. 326, ed. 1860, where it is represented by an engraving.

14. I will give you] Moses, as a prophet of God, speaks in God's name,—“I will give:” he passes, as the prophets do, by a natural transition from his own person to that of God. Cp. Isa. v. 1—4. Cp. below, xxix. 5, 6. And yet it is said by some that “this single instance is sufficient to satisfy us as to the un-historical character of this book” (Colenso, § 635).

— the first rain and the latter rain] the former about the middle of November at the seed-time; the latter before the harvest, in April (Shaw; Jahn, Arch. § 21. Cp. Ainsworth here).

In a spiritual sense, the Church of God—the mystical Holy Land—enjoys a “former rain” and a “latter rain;” the one in the Old Testament, the other in the New: the one in the seed-time, the other before the reaping of the crop: both are necessary for the Harvest (S. Jerome).

x Ps. 104. 14.
 † Heb. gire.
 y ch. 6. 11.
 Joel 2. 19.
 z ch. 29. 13.
 Job 31. 27.
 a ch. 8. 19.
 & 30. 17.
 b ch. 6. 15.
 c 1 Kings 8. 35.
 2 Chron. 6. 26.
 & 7. 13.
 d c. 4. 26.
 & 8. 19, 20.
 & 30. 18.
 Josh. 23. 13, 15, 16.
 e ch. 6. 6.
 & 32. 46.
 f ch. 6. 8.
 g ch. 4. 9, 10.
 & 6. 7.

h ch. 6. 9.
 i ch. 4. 40.
 & 6. 2.
 Prov. 3. 2.
 & 4. 10. & 9. 11.
 k Ps. 72. 5.
 & 89. 29.

l ver. 13.
 ch. 6. 17.
 m ch. 10. 20.
 & 30. 20.
 n ch. 4. 58. & 9. 5.

o ch. 9. 1.

p Josh. 1. 3.
 & 14. 9.
 q Gen. 15. 18.
 Ex. 23. 31.
 Num. 34. 3, &c.
 r ch. 7. 24.
 s ch. 2. 25.

t Ex. 23. 27.

u ch. 30. 1, 15, 19.
 x ch. 28. 2.

y ch. 28. 15.

z ch. 27. 12, 13.
 Josh. 8. 33.

a Gen. 12. 6.
 Judg. 7. 1.
 b ch. 9. 1. Josh. 1. 11.

15 ^x And I will † send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest ^y eat and be full.

16 Take heed to yourselves, ^z that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and ^a serve other gods, and worship them; 17 And then ^b the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he ^c shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest ^d ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

18 Therefore ^e shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and ^f bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes. 19 ^g And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. 20 ^h And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates: 21 That ⁱ your days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, ^k as the days of heaven upon the earth.

22 For if ^l ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you, to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and ^m to cleave unto him; 23 Then will the LORD ⁿ drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall ^o possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

24 ^p Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours: ^q from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea shall your coast be. 25 ^r There shall no man be able to stand before you: for the LORD your God shall ^s lay the fear of you and the dread of you upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, ^t as he hath said unto you.

26 ^u Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse; 27 ^x A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day: 28 And a ^y curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known.

29 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put ^z the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal. 30 Are they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the champaign over against Gilgal, ^a beside the plains of Moreh? 31 ^b For ye shall pass over Jordan to go in to 18—20. sign upon your hand] See on vi. 8, 9. Exod. xiii. 16.

24. from the wilderness—river Euphrates] See on Gen. xv. 18.

26.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xvi. 17. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Isa. liv. 11—lv. 5.

— a blessing and a curse] God wills man's freewill, and He recognizes man's freewill; He teaches him how to use it; He sets before him the consequences of using it aright, and the consequences of abusing it; and He enables him to use it rightly, if he is willing to do so. His language is, "I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life" (Deut. xxx. 19): see below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, pp. 197, 198.

God sets before us a blessing and a curse, not only in the Law, but in the Gospel. He is the only Author and Giver of both. Cp. Tertullian e. Marcion. v. 3.

29. thou shalt put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal] Gerizim is on the south, the region of warmth and light; Ebal, on the north, the region of cold and darkness. Siehem lay between them. There God appeared to Abraham; there Jacob built an altar; there Joseph and his brethren are buried; there Christ revealed Himself as the Messiah (see note above on Gen. xii. 6). The former hill is about 2650 feet high, the latter 2700.

If the people stood between the two, they might distinctly have heard the blessings and curses uttered on each; as has been shown, against recent objection, from the testimony of travellers (Dr. Thomson, Dr. Bonar), by Dr. McCaul, on Colenso, pp. 28—31. But it appears to be more probable, that the blessings and curses were uttered by the Priests, standing in the middle with the Ark; and they could be heard by the People on the two hills: see on xxvii. 12. 14; and on Josh. viii. 32—35.

30. by the way, &c.] Or, beyond the way to the sun setting. — over against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh] The Hebrew word here rendered over against, is mul, and it means, in face, or in front of, opposite to (Gesen. 456). Exod. xviii.

possess the land which the LORD your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein. ³² And ye shall observe ^c to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day. c ch. 5. 32. & 12. 32.

XII. ^{1 a} These are the statutes and judgments, which ye shall observe to do in the land, which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, ^b all the days that ye live upon the earth. a ch. 6. 1. b ch. 4. 10. 1 Kings 8. 40.

^{2 c} Ye shall utterly destroy all the places, wherein the nations which ye shall possess served their gods, ^d upon the high mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree: ³ And ^e ye shall † overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, and destroy the names of them out of that place. c Ex. 34. 13. ch. 7. 5. d Or. inherit. 2 Kings 16. 4. & 17. 10, 11. Jer. 3. 6. e Num. 33. 52. Judg. 2. 2. † Heb. break down.

^{4 f} Ye shall not do so unto the LORD your God. ⁵ But unto the place which f ver. 31.

18; xxvi. 9; xxviii. 25, 27, 37. Lev. v. 8; viii. 9. Num. viii. 2, 3. Deut. ii. 19; iii. 29; iv. 46; and see especially Josh. viii. 33, over against Mount Gerizim, and over against Mount Ebal, where the sacred writer is referring to the same transaction as is mentioned here.

Again, the word here rendered beside, is etsel, and this also signifies near (Gesen. 74: see Gen. xxxix. 10. 15. 18. Lev. i. 16. Deut. xvi. 2).

Therefore this Gilgal is not the Gilgal on the right bank of the Jordan, near Jericho; which first received its name from Joshua. But (as some suppose) it is another Gilgal, ten miles south of Gerizim and a little to the west of Shiloh, and now called Jiljilia (Baumgarten; Vanderveelde, p. 316; Robinson, iii. 139; Grove, B. D. 700). This Gilgal, however, it must be acknowledged, could hardly have been familiar to the Israelites, and we hear little concerning it till a later time; and it is observable, that the definitive article is here used, hag-gilgal, the Gilgal; and it may perhaps be questioned, whether the Gilgal (which signifies a wheel, Isa. xxviii. 20. Cp. Gesen. 170) is here a proper name at all; and whether it may not rather mean an enclosure, properly a circuit, like the word circar (Gen. xiii. 10. 12; xix. 17); and whether the sentence may not be rendered "the Canaanite who dwelleth in the plain (arabah) near the enclosure at the terebinths of Moreh?" May not a sacred enclosure perhaps have been formed there near the terebinths of Moreh? Certain it is that the word Gilgal represents a place near Moreh, and near Gerizim.

Yet the Sacred Writer has been charged with an anachronism here! and it has been said, that he did "not know that the name (Gilgal) was not given to the place till the people had been circumcised (there by Joshua) after entering the land of Canaan" (Josh. v. 9. Colenso, § 242).

It is wonderful, that the critic should have imagined, that the Gilgal, which received its name from Joshua, and which was only about five miles west of the Jordan, could have been described as "beside the plains of Moreh," and near "Ebal and Gerizim," which are thirty miles from the Gilgal of Joshua! If the author of Deuteronomy had written thus, how could his work have ever been received by all the Hebrew inhabitants of Palestine as true, genuine, and divine?

— the plains of Moreh] or, the terebinths of Moreh—halloved by the memory of God's appearance and promise to Abraham: see Gen. xii. 6, 7; xxxv. 4.

CH. XII. 2. Ye shall utterly destroy all the places] See on vii. 26.

3. groves] idols of wood. See vii. 5.

4. Ye shall not do so unto the LORD] That is, not worship Him in modes and places of your own choosing, as the heathen worshipped their deities, in high places, or amid thick trees, because they imagined that their gods dwelt in such places, or because such dark retreats were favourable to their unholy worship, or because they filled the mind with dread for their gods; ye shall not indulge yourselves in any such imaginations as these, but shall conform to God's own appointments for the place and the manner of His worship and service.

5. the place] This command does not appear in the earlier parts of the Pentateuch. It finds an appropriate place in Deuteronomy, which is the farewell address of the great Legislator in the last year of the wandering, when the Israelites were about to enter into Canaan, and no longer to carry the Ark and Tabernacle from place to place, as they had done for nearly forty years; but to have a fixed place, chosen by God Himself for the Ark and Tabernacle, and ultimately for the Temple. Yet here also some have charged the Sacred Writer with inconsistency, and it is alleged that this command betrays a later age, such as that of Josiah! (Colenso, § 637, 638.)

It is objected also, that this command shows that Deuteronomy is not the work of Moses. Such a command (it is alleged by Vater, De Wette, Colenso, and others) could not have been given by God to Moses, inasmuch as in the time of the Judges, and of Samuel, and of the kings—even some of the good kings of Judah,—we find that sacrifices were offered in other places than at the door of the Tabernacle or Temple. See Judg. ii. 5; xx. 18; xxi. 1—4. 1 Sam. vii. 2; xx. 6. 2 Sam. xv. 12. 32. 1 Kings iii. 2; xv. 14; xxii. 43. 2 Kings xii. 3; xiv. 4; xv. 4. 35. Cp. Davidson, p. 406.

But this objection proves too much; for it would also apply to Leviticus, which was uttered by God Himself to Moses at Sinai (Lev. i. 1; xxvii. 34); and in which it is required that all sacrifices should be brought to the door of the Tabernacle (Lev. xvii. 3—9).

No argument can be derived from the time of the Judges, when every man did what was right in his own eyes (Judg. xvii. 6; xxi. 25). Even Gideon himself drew away the people from God by his Ephod in Ophrah (Judg. viii. 27). Besides, many of the examples quoted as exceptions, are in fact no exceptions at all. The sacrifice offered by Gideon (Judg. vi. 24), at Jehovah-shalom, was offered by express command of God. That of Manoah was offered in the place where the Lord appeared to him (Judg. xiii. 19); and it was a received opinion of the Hebrews that any place wherever God appeared, became by reason of that appearance a place consecrated for sacrifice (Serarius).

After the destruction of Shiloh, and in the days of Samuel and Saul, the Ark was separated from the Tabernacle, and the command given in Deuteronomy remained in a state of abeyance.

Many of the sacrifices, offered in other places than at the Tabernacle, were offered—as David's was, at the threshing-floor of Araunah—by express command of God (2 Sam. xxiv. 18).

For an examination of the above objections the reader may refer to Hengstenberg, Authentic d. Pentateuch, ii. 2—55.

In fact, this passage, so far from being an evidence of spuriousness, is an argument for the genuineness of Deuteronomy.

When we consider, what the sins of the kings of Judah were in this respect; when we remember that many of them set up high places, and offered sacrifice there, it is absolutely impossible that they should have received this book of Deuteronomy,—containing those stern prohibitions of their practice,—as divinely inspired, unless they had been convinced that it was so. If it had been a forgery, as some modern critics assert, of the age of Manassah, the fraud would certainly have been exposed, and the book would have been rejected as an imposture.

When also we remember, what the policy and practice of all the kings of Israel was, viz., to draw off their subjects from the place where God set His name, and to deter them from going to Judah and Jerusalem, by means of the calves of Bethel and of Dan; and when we consider, that they set up idolatrous altars of Baal and Ashtoreth, it is not possible, that the Book of Deuteronomy, requiring every Israelite to bring his sacrifice to the place which the Lord should choose to place His Name there, should ever have been accepted as genuine and inspired, if its genuineness and inspiration had not been incontrovertible. The Kings and People of Israel would have combined against it. But they did not venture to do so. It is, and ever has been, in the sacred Canon of the whole twelve tribes of Israel. The Book of Deuteronomy is found in the Samaritan Pentateuch. It has been read for more than two thousand years in all the

g ver. 11.
ch. 26. 2.
Josh. 9. 27.
1 Kings 8. 29.
2 Chron. 7. 12.
Ps. 78. 68.
h Lev. 17. 3, 4.
i ver. 17. ch. 14.
22, 23. & 15. 19, 20.
k ch. 14. 26.

l ver. 12, 18.
Lev. 23, 40.
ch. 16. 11, 14, 15.
& 26. 11. & 27. 7.
m Judg. 17. 6. & 21. 25.

n ch. 11. 31.

o ver. 5, 14, 18,
21, 26. & ch. 14.
23. & 15. 20. & 16.
2. & c. & 17. 8. &
18. 6. & 23. 16. &
26. 2. & 31. 11.
Josh. 18. 1.
1 Kings 8. 29.
Ps. 78. 68.
† Heb. the choice
of your vows.
p ver. 7.

q ch. 10. 9. & 14.
29.

r Lev. 17. 4.

s ver. 11.

t ver. 21.

u ver. 22.

x ch. 14. 5.
& 15. 22.
y Gen. 9. 4.
Lev. 7. 26. & 17.
10. ver. 23, 24.
& ch. 15. 23.

the LORD your God shall ^e choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his habitation shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come: ⁶ And ^h thither ye shall bring your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, and your ⁱ tithes, and heave offerings of your hand, and your vows, and your freewill offerings, and the firstlings of your herds and of your flocks: ⁷ And ^k there ye shall eat before the LORD your God, and ^l ye shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.

⁸ Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, ^m every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes. ⁹ For ye are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance, which the LORD your God giveth you. ¹⁰ But when ⁿ ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the LORD your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that ye dwell in safety; ¹¹ Then there shall be ^o a place which the LORD your God shall choose to cause his name to dwell there; thither shall ye bring all that I command you; your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave offering of your hand, and all [†] your choice vows which ye vow unto the LORD: ¹² And ^p ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God, ye, and your sons, and your daughters, and your menservants, and your maidservants, and the Levite that is within your gates; forasmuch as ^q he hath no part nor inheritance with you.

¹³ ^r Take heed to thyself that thou offer not thy burnt offerings in every place that thou seest: ¹⁴ ^s But in the place which the LORD shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee.

¹⁵ Notwithstanding ^t thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee: ^u the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, ^x as of the roebuck, and as of the hart. ¹⁶ ^y Only ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

synagogues of Israel; and not a single voice has ever been raised there against it. Compare what is said above, Introduction, p. 198.

6. thither ye shall bring] In answer to the objection, that it would not be possible to bring these things to one place from all parts of the land, it is enough to advert to the provision made in xiv. 24, 25, which doubtless was applicable in the cases here supposed.

— your tithes] It has been alleged by some (De Wette, Fater, and others), that this is inconsistent with what is commanded in Num. xviii. 21, that the Levites were to receive all the tithes in Israel for an inheritance (cp. v. 24), and that they were to give a tithing of it to the Priests (vv. 26—28). The command here given is repeated (vv. 17—19). See also, xiv. 22; xxvi. 12, 15.

But this command, and that in Num. xviii. 21—24, are perfectly consistent.

The Author of Deuteronomy supposes his readers to be acquainted with what is said in Leviticus and Numbers; and the present commands are added as supplementary to the precepts delivered there.

There were three kinds of tithes; to which the Author of the Book of Tobit refers (i. 7), viz.—

(1) The tithing of all produce, given to the Levites.

(2) That which he calls the second tithe, and which the Israelite carried to Jerusalem; and a third tithing also, which he offered to those to whom it was due (cp. Theodoret, Qu. 13, who refers to Josephus on the Jewish usage of paying three tithes).

In the Book of Numbers Moses is speaking of the first tithing, and here he speaks of the second.

But in this book he is not forgetful of the first tithing; see below, xviii. 1, 2; cp. x. 9; and here, v. 19, "Take heed that thou forsake not the Levite." Cp. Theodoret, Qu. 10; Bonfrerius here; and Ihengst., Auth. i. pp. 401—414; and Keil, pp. 265, 266. Cp. Phillott, B. D. iii. 1516, 1517.

These supposed "discrepancies" are evidences of the unity of plan of the Pentateuch. In this, the last portion of it, the Author takes for granted, that the hearers and readers are familiar with what had been said by him in the earlier parts of his work, and speaks accordingly; as St. John, the last Evangelist, assumes his readers to be familiar with what had been related in the previous Gospels. See below, Introduction to St. John, p. 268.

Besides, the obligation to pay tithing to the Levites had been established by the usage of thirty-eight years, and there was no need of mentioning it here; it was a settled practice; but the obligation to bring tithing to the place which the Lord should choose, depended on a contingency which had not yet arisen, but which was soon about to arise—viz., their entrance into Canaan, and the choice of such a place by God.

We, therefore, recognize the propriety of the mention of the former obligation, and of the non-mention of the latter, in Numbers; and we see the reason for the mention of the latter obligation, and for the non-mention of the former, in Deuteronomy. "Distingue tempora, et concordabis Leges," "Distingue tempora, et concordabis Scripturas," are sound maxims, which might have saved many Biblical Critics from vain allegations of imaginary discrepancies in the Pentateuch.

11. sacrifices] i. e., such as are slain; these and the burnt-offerings are specified; the meat-offering and drink-offering being supposed to be joined with them, according to Num. xv. 4; xxix. 6.

15. as of the roebuck, and as of the hart] which were clean for food, but not for sacrifice; thou mayest eat them, but not offer them in sacrifice. Sacrifice is only to be offered in "the place which the Lord thy God shall choose." He specifies the roebuck and the hart because they abounded in Palestine, as Ælian relates (Hist. Anim. v. ad. fin.).

¹⁷ Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy freewill offerings, or heave offering of thine hand: ¹⁸ ^z But thou must eat them before the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates: and thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God in all that thou putteth thine hands unto. ¹⁹ ^a Take heed to thyself that thou forsake not the Levite | as long as thou livest upon the earth.

²⁰ When the LORD thy God shall enlarge thy border, ^b as he hath promised thee, and thou shalt say, I will eat flesh, because thy soul longeth to eat flesh; thou mayest eat flesh, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after. ²¹ If the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to put his name there be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the LORD hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after. ²² ^c Even as the roebuck and the hart is eaten, so thou shalt eat them: the unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike. ²³ ^d Only † be sure that thou eat not the blood: ^e for the blood is the life; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh. ²⁴ Thou shalt not eat it; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water. ²⁵ Thou shalt not eat it; ^f that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, ^g when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

²⁶ Only thy ^h holy things which thou hast, and ⁱ thy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the LORD shall choose: ²⁷ And ^k thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God: and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.

²⁸ Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, ^l that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the LORD thy God.

²⁹ When ^m the LORD thy God shall cut off the nations from before thee, whither thou goest to possess them, and thou † succeedest them, and dwellest in their land; ³⁰ Take heed to thyself ⁿ that thou be not snared † by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee; and that thou enquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods? even so will I do likewise. ³¹ ^o Thou shalt not do so unto the LORD thy God: for every † abomination to the LORD, which he hateth, have they done unto their gods; for ^p even their sons and their daughters they have burnt in the fire to their ^z ver. 11, 12. & ch. 14. 23.

a ch. 14. 27.

† Heb. all thy days.

b Gen. 15. 18. & 25. 14.

Ex. 34. 24. ch. 11. 24. & 19. 8.

c ver. 15.

d ver. 16.

† Heb. bestrong.

e Gen. 9. 4.

Lev. 17. 11, 14.

f ch. 4. 40.

lsa. 3. 10.

g Ex. 15. 26.

ch. 13. 18.

1 Kings 11. 33.

h Num. 5. 9, 10.

& 18. 19.

i 1 Sam. 1. 21, 22, 24.

k Lev. 1. 5, 9, 13.

& 17. 11.

l ver. 25.

m Ex. 23. 23.

ch. 19. 1.

Josh. 23. 4.

† Heb. inherited,

or, possessed

them.

n ch. 7. 16.

† Heb. after them.

o ver. 4.

Lev. 18. 3,

26, 30.

2 Kings 17. 15.

† Heb. abomination

of the.

p Lev. 18. 21. & 20. 2. ch. 18. 10. Jer. 32. 35. Ezek. 23. 37.

On the moral and spiritual meaning of such permissions as these, see Augustine, c. Adimant. Manich. c. 14, in refutation of those who objected to it as inconsistent with our Lord's words in the Gospel (Luke xxi. 34; Rom. xiv. 21).

16. ye shall not eat the blood] See Gen. ix. 4. Lev. vii. 26; xvii. 10.

17. the firstlings of thy herds] For an answer to the allegation of some, that this is inconsistent with Num. xviii. 18, where the flesh of firstlings is given to the priest, see note there.

18. the Levite that is within thy gates] That is, in the Levitical cities of thy land (cp. xxiv. 14), not as if the Levites were scattered promiscuously (as some allege) within all the gates of the cities of Israel. The Sacred Writer supposes that the reader will construe this with what is said in Num. xxxv. 1—8, concerning these Levitical Cities.

20. as he hath promised thee] In Gen. xv. 18, and specially in Exod. xxiii. 27—33, the Israelites are supposed by the Sacred Writer to be familiar with what is there said.

26. thy holy things] thy holy offerings prescribed by the Law, which is supposed to be known. Cp. Num. xviii. 8. Lev. xxi. 22.

27. upon the altar] Rather, at the altar—πρὸς τὴν θάραν (Sept.). The Hebrew at often has this meaning (see Gesen. 46, 47); yet the Sacred Writer is charged by some with contradicting what is said in Leviticus! (Colenso, § 657.)

30. enquire not] God forbids all curiosity with regard to evil spirits and idol-worship; a warning against all dealings with the powers of darkness. See on Acts xvi. 16; xix. 19. Rev. ix. 20.

31. even their sons and their daughters have they burnt in the fire] An answer to the allegation of those who say that those

q ch. 4. 2. & 13.
18.

Josh. 1. 7.
Prov. 30. 6.
Rev. 22. 18.
a Zech. 10. 2.
b Matt. 24. 24. 2 Thess. 2. 9.

gods. ³² What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: ^a thou shalt not add thereto nor diminish from it.

XIII. ¹ If there arise among you a prophet, or a ^a dreamer of dreams, ^b and heathen nations only purified their children by a baptism of fire, but did not burn them. Cp. Lev. xviii. 21. Ps. cvi. 36, 37.

^{32.} thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it] See iv. 2. A solemn warning, applicable against all additions to, or diminutions from, "the Faith once delivered to the Saints." See below, Jude 3. Gal. i. 8, 9.

CH. XIII.] This and the preceding Chapters are appointed by the Church to be read on the Sunday after our Lord's Ascension, and before Whitsunday.

1. If there arise] In this very important passage it is supposed by the Sacred Writer that persons

- (1) May be able to work miracles, and
- (2) Even to utter prophecies which come to pass; and yet
- (3) Be guilty of heinous sin,
- (4) And be liable to capital punishment, and to be dealt with accordingly, even to be put to death (v. 5); and that even

"if thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or the wife of thy bosom entice thee, secretly saying, Let us go and serve other gods (v. 6), thou shalt surely kill him, thine own hand shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people; and thou shalt stone him with stones that he die" (v. 10). And

(5) It is said, that such persons are permitted by God to work miracles (as the Egyptian Magicians were), and to utter prophecies, in order to prove the people of God, whether they love Him with all their heart and soul (v. 3). Hence therefore it is clear,

- (1) That miracles may be wrought, and prophecies uttered, by false teachers; and that miracles alone are not sufficient to establish a person's claim to be a teacher sent by God.
- (2) That they are not of themselves adequate evidences and "notes of a true Church."
- (3) That they may be found in a corrupt Church; and that it is probable that they will be permitted by God to exist in such a Church, in order to prove and try God's people whether they are steadfast in their allegiance to Him. And

(4) That it is not probable, that, after the settlement of the Church in the world, with the Canon of Scripture completed, and the Christian Ministry duly organized and established, and the ordinary means of grace regularly provided in the Ministry of the Word and Sacraments, they will be found in the true Church; for God does nothing superfluous; and Christ has said by the mouth of Abraham, "If they hear not Moses and the Prophets," and much more if they hear not also Christ, and the Apostles and Evangelists, "neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead" (Luke xvi. 31). And

(5) We know from Christ Himself and His Apostles, that great signs and wonders will be permitted to be wrought by false teachers in a corrupt Church, in order to try the steadfastness of those who live in the latter days. Matt. xxiv. 11, 24. 2 Thess. ii. 9—11. Rev. xiii. 13; xvi. 14; xix. 20.

Therefore this text is full of salutary instruction with regard to these latter days.

Further, this text is full of interest to the Christian Church on another account.

Our LORD JESUS CHRIST was tried by this law of Deuteronomy, before the Jewish Sanhedrim at Jerusalem; and, on the ground of this law, He was condemned by them to death.

This very law, on which He was condemned, will be found on examination to afford strong evidence of the divine origin of Christianity, and particularly of the truth of its two fundamental doctrines—the Godhead and Manhood of Christ. It explains a wonderful phenomenon, which has perplexed many in the history of our Lord's Ministry. How came it to pass (it has been asked), that if our Lord wrought these miracles which the Gospels assert Him to have performed, and delivered those prophecies which He is there said to have uttered, the Jewish Nation did not believe on Him, and has not received Him even to this day?

The reason was, because the Jewish Nation did not understand their own Scriptures. They were not prepared to receive as the Christ, one who claimed to be God; and also consented to suffer as Man. The Jews ought to have deduced the doctrine of the Messiah's divinity from their own Scriptures, especially from such texts as Ps. xlv. 6, 7, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Cp. Heb. i. 8; and such texts as Isa. ix. 6, "Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given . . . and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God;" and vii. 14, "Behold, a Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel" (with us, God); and Jer. xxiii. 5, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper . . . ; and this is the name whereby He shall be called, The Lord (Jehovah) our Righteousness;" and Micah v. 2, "Out of thee (Bethlehem Ephrath) shall He come forth unto me that is to be Ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting;" and Zech. xi. 13, "And the Lord said unto Me, Cast it unto the potter: a goodly price that I was prized at of them."

The Jews ought also to have been prepared by their own Scriptures for a suffering Messiah. But this was not the case; and the Cross of Christ was to them a stumbling-block (1 Cor. i. 23); and one of the strongest objections which they raised against the Christians was, that they worshipped a man who died a death, which is declared to be an accursed one in the Law of Moses, which Law was delivered by God Himself (Deut. xxi. 23).

The Jews of our Lord's age failed likewise of attaining to the true sense of their own Scriptures, in the opposite direction. They did not acknowledge the Divine Sonship of the Messiah, and they were not prepared to admit the claims of one who asserted Himself to be the Christ, and also affirmed Himself to be the Son of God, co-equal with the Father.

This failure seems to have arisen from the following causes:—

The Hebrew Law declared in the strongest and most explicit terms the Divine Unity: "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord" (Deut. vi. 4). This is the solemn declaration which the Jews recite daily, morning and evening (see above there).

They regarded themselves as set apart from all the Nations of the earth to be a witness of God's unity, and to protest against the polytheism of the rest of mankind. And having suffered severe chastisements in the Babylonish Captivity for their own idolatries, they shrank—and still shrink—with fear and abhorrence from every thing that might seem in any degree to trench upon the doctrine of the unity of the Godhead.

Accordingly we find that Tryphon, the learned Jew, who debated with Justin Martyr, at Ephesus, about A.D. 150, on the points of controversy between the Jews and Christians, expressly states, "that it seems to him not only paradoxical but silly (μαρὸν), to say that the Messiah, or Christ, pre-existed from eternity as God, and that He condescended to be born as man." Tryphon there explodes the notion that Christ was "not to be merely man, begotten of man" (Justin M., Dialog. c. Tryphon. § 48, vol. ii. p. 154, ed. Otto, Jen., 1842), and he approves the tenets of the Ebionite heretics, who asserted that the Christ was a mere man (ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπος); and adds this remarkable declaration: "All we (Jews) expect that the Messiah will come as a man from man (i. e., from human parents), and that Elias will anoint Him when He is come" (πάντες ἡμεῖς τὸν Χριστὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐξ ἀνθρώπων προσδοκῶμεν γενέσθαι καὶ τὸν Ἠλίαν χρίσαι αὐτὸν ἐλθόντα. Justin M., Dialog. § 49, p. 156). And in § 54, S. Justin Martyr, speaking in the name of the Christian believers, combats that assertion, and affirms that the Hebrew prophecies themselves, to which he appeals, testify that the Messiah is not a man born of man, according to the ordinary manner of human generation (ἄνθρωπος ἐξ ἀνθρώπων κατὰ τὸ κοινὸν τῶν ἀνθρώπων γεννηθείς. Justin M. c. Tryp. § 126, p. 409), and Justin affirms, that he has proved against the Jews that "Christ, who is the LORD and God, and Son of God," appeared to their Fathers the Patriarchs, in various forms, under the old dispensation (§ 128, p. 425).

In the middle of the third century Origen wrote his apologetic work in defence of Christianity against Celsus, the Epicurean, and in various places of that treatise he recites the allegations of the Jews against the Gospel. In one passage, when Celsus, speaking in the person of a Jew, had said that one of the Hebrew prophets had predicted that the Son of God would come to judge the righteous and to punish the wicked, Origen rejoins that such a notion is most improperly ascribed to a Jew; inasmuch as Jews did indeed look for a Messiah, but not as the Son of God. "No Jew," he says, "would allow that any prophet ever said that a Son of God would come; and what the Jews do say, is, that the Christ of God will come; and they often dispute with us Christians as to this very question—for instance, giveth thee a sign or a wonder, ² And the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou

c See ch. 13. 22.
Jer. 23. 9.
Matt. 7. 22.

concerning the Son of God, on the plea that no such Person exists or was ever foretold." Origen adv. Cels. i. § 49, vol. i. p. 365, B., see pp. 38. 79, ed. Spencer; and other places, e. g., pp. 22. 30. 51. 62. 71. 82. 110. 136.

In the fourth century, Eusebius testified that the Jews of that age would not accept the title Son of God as applicable to the Messiah (Euseb., Dem. Evang. iv. 1), and in later days they charge Christians with impiety and blasphemy for designating Christ by that title (Leontius, Conc. Nicen. ii. Act iv.).

Lastly, a learned Jew, Orobio, in the seventeenth century, in his conference with Linborch, affirms that if a prophet, or even, if it were possible, the Messiah Himself, were to work miracles, and yet lay claim to divinity, he ought to be put to death by stoning, as one guilty of blasphemy. Orobio, ap. Linborch., Amica Collatio, p. 295, ed. Goud, 1688.

Hence therefore we may conclude (with Basnage, Histoire des Juifs, iv. c. 24), that although the Jews ought to have inferred from their own Scriptures, that the Messiah, or Christ, would be a Divine Person, and the Son of God in the highest sense of the term; and although some among them, who were more enlightened than the rest, entertained that opinion; yet it was not the popular and generally-received doctrine among the Jews that the Messiah would be other than a man, born of human parents, and not a Divine Being, and Son of God.

Not being prepared to receive Christ as God, the Jews applied to our Lord's miracles the test supplied by their own Law in the passage of Deuteronomy before us, which enjoined that, if a prophet arose among them, and worked miracles, and endeavoured to draw them away from the worship of the true God, those miracles were to be regarded as trials of their own steadfastness, and were not to be accepted as proofs of a divine mission, "but the prophet himself was to be put to death" (Deut. xiii. 1—11). The Jews tried our Lord and His miracles by this law. Some of the Jews ventured to say, that "Jesus of Nazareth was specially in the mind of the Divine Lawgiver when He framed this law" (see Fagius on the Chaldee Paraphrase of Deut. xiii., and his note on Deut. xviii. 15), and that it was provided expressly to meet His case. Indeed, they do not hesitate to say that, in the words of this law, "if thy brother, the son of thy mother, entice thee secretly" (Deut. xiii. 6), there was a prophetic reference to the case of Jesus, who "said that he had a human mother but not a human father, but was the Son of God, and was God" (see Fagius there).

Jesus claimed to be the Messiah; but according to the popular view of the Jews, the Messiah was to be merely a human personage, and would not claim to be God. Therefore, though the Jews admitted His miracles to be really wrought, yet they did not acknowledge the claim grounded on those miracles to be true; but rather regarded those miracles as trials of their loyalty to the One True God (according to the terms of this chapter, v. 3, "The Lord your God proveth you"), whose prerogatives, they thought, were invaded by Him Who wrought those miracles; and they even ascribed those miracles to the agency of the Prince of the Devils (Matt. xii. 24. 27. Mark iii. 22. Luke xi. 15); and even said that He had a devil (John vii. 20; viii. 48); and they called Him Beelzebub (Matt. x. 25), because they thought that He was setting Himself in opposition to God.

"They all condemned Him to be guilty of death" (Mark xiv. 64). The Sanhedrim was unanimous in the sentence of condemnation. Many of the members of the Sanhedrim were actuated by an earnest zeal for the honour of God when they condemned Jesus to death; and they did what they did with a view to God's glory, which they supposed to be disparaged by our Lord's pretensions; and they were impelled by a desire to comply with God's law, as promulgated in this chapter of Deuteronomy, which required them to put to death any one who was guilty of blasphemy in arrogating to himself the power which belonged to God.

Hence we may explain our Lord's words on the cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke xxiii. 34); and St. Peter said at Jerusalem to the Jews after the crucifixion, "Now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it"—i. e., rejected and crucified Christ, "as did also your rulers" (Acts iii. 17); and St. Paul declared in the Jewish synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia, "They that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew Him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets, which are read every Sabbath-day, have fulfilled them in condemning Him" (Acts xiii. 27).

These considerations reflect much light upon certain important questions of the Gospel History, and clear up several difficulties with regard to the evidences of Christianity;

(1) They supply an answer to the question, "Why was Jesus Christ put to death?" He was accused by the Jews before Pilate as guilty of sedition and rebellion against the power of Rome (Luke xxiii. 1—5; ep. John xix. 12); but this was a mere pretext, to which the Jews resorted for the sake of compelling Pilate, against his will, to condemn Him, in order that he might not lay himself open to the charge of "not being Cæsar's friend" (John xix. 12).

Nor does it appear that Jesus Christ was put to death because He claimed to be the Christ. The Jews were at that time anxiously looking for the Messiah; the Pharisees asked the Baptist whether he was the Christ (John i. 20—25); "and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not" (Luke iii. 15).

The people well knew that John the Baptist was the son of Zacharias and Elisabeth; they knew him to be a mere man, born after the ordinary manner of human generation; and yet they all thought it probable that he might be the Christ.

This proves that, according to their notions, the Christ was not to be a divine person; certainly not the Son of God in the Christian sense of the term. The same conclusion may be deduced from the circumstance that the Jews of that age eagerly welcomed the appearance of those false Christs (Matt. xxiv. 24), who promised to deliver them from the Roman yoke, and whom they knew to be mere men, and who did not claim divine origin, which they certainly would have done, if the Christ was generally expected to be the Son of God.

We see also, that after the miraculous feeding, the people were desirous of "making Jesus a king" (John vi. 15); and after the raising of Lazarus at Bethany they met Him with enthusiastic acclamations, "Hosanna to the Son of David; Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matt. xxi. 9. Mark xi. 9. John xii. 13). And they would have willingly allowed the claims of one who "wrought many miracles" (John xi. 47), if He had been content with such a title as the Jews assigned to their expected Messiah, namely, that of a great Prophet distinguished by mighty works.

When our Lord put to the Pharisees this question, "What think ye of Christ, whose Son is He?" their answer was not, "He is the Son of God," but "He is the Son of David;" and they could not answer the second question which He asked (Matt. xxii. 43), "How then doth David, speaking in the Spirit, call Him Lord?" The reason was, because the Pharisees did not expect the Messiah to be the Son of God; and when He, who is the Messiah, claimed to be God, they rejected His claim to be the Christ.

The reason, therefore, of our Lord's condemnation by the Jewish Sanhedrim, and of His delivery to Pilate for crucifixion, was not that He claimed to be the Messiah, or Christ, but because He asserted Himself to be the Son of God, and to be God.

Therefore the Jews said to Pilate, "We have a law, and by our law He ought to die, because He made Himself the Son of God" (John xix. 7).

It was the claim which He put forth to be the Christ, and that of Son of God, that led to our Lord's condemnation by the unanimous verdict of the Sanhedrim: "They all condemned Him to be guilty of death" (Mark xiv. 64. Matt. xxvi. 63—66); and the sense in which He claimed to be Son of God is clear from the narrative of John v. 15. The Jews sought the more to kill Him, because He not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was His own Father (πάτερα ἰδίον ἔλεγε τὸν Θεόν), making Himself "equal with God;" and when He claimed Divine pre-existence, saying, "Before Abraham was (ἔγένετο), I AM, then took they up stones to cast at Him" (John viii. 58, 59); and when He asserted His own unity with God, "I and the Father are one"—one substance (ἓν), not one person (εἷς)—"then the Jews took up stones again to stone him" (John x. 30, 31); and this is evident again from their own words, "For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy; and because that Thou, being a man, makest thyself God" (John x. 33).

The Jews, in acting thus, supposed that they were complying with the Law of God, in this chapter of Deuteronomy (vv. 5. 10), that a false prophet was to be put to death by stoning.

Accordingly we find that, after the Ascension, the Apostles laboured to bring the Jews to acknowledge that Jesus was not only the Christ, but was also a Divine Person, even the Lord Jehovah. Thus, for example, St. Peter, after the outpouring of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost by Christ, says, "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have accused, both LORD (Κύριον, ΚΕΙΡΟΥΑΙ) and Christ" (Acts ii. 36).

hast not known, and let us serve them; ³ Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the LORD your God ^d proveth you, to know whether ye love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul. ⁴ Ye shall ^e walk after the LORD your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and ^f cleave unto him. ⁵ And ^g that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, shall be put to death; because he hath ^h spoken to turn you away from the LORD

4 ch. 8. 2.
See Matt. 24. 24.
1 Cor. 11. 19.
2 Thess. 2. 11.
Rev. 13. 14.
e 2 Kings 23. 3.
2 Chron. 34. 31.
f ch. 10. 20.
g 30. 20.
g ch. 18. 20.
Jer. 14. 15.
Zech. 13. 3.

† Heb. spoken revoll against the Lord.

(2) This conclusion supplies a convincing proof of Christ's GODHEAD. If He is not the Son of God, equal with God, then there is no other alternative but that He was guilty of blasphemy; for He claimed God "as His own Father, making Himself equal with God," and by doing so He proposed Himself as an object of divine worship. And in that case He would have rightly been put to death; and the Jews in rejecting and killing Him would have been acting in obedience to the Law of God, as promulgated in this chapter of Deuteronomy; and the Crucifixion of Jesus would have been an act of pious zeal on their part for the honour of God, and would have commended them to His favour and protection; whereas we know that it was that act which filled the cup of their national guilt, and has made them outcasts from God even to this day (Matt. xxiii. 32—38. Luko xiv. 33—35. 1 Thess. ii. 15, 16. James v. 6).

When the Jews repent of this sin, and say, "Blessed (εὐλογημένος) is He that cometh in the name of the Lord," and acknowledge Jesus to be Christ and the Son of God, coequal with God, then Israel shall be saved (Rom. xi. 26).

(3) This conclusion also explains the fact—which might otherwise have perplexed us—that the miracles which Jesus wrought, and which the Jews and their rulers acknowledged to have been wrought by Him, did not have their due influence upon them. Those mighty and merciful works did not produce the effect upon them which they ought to have produced, and which those works would have produced, if the Jews and their rulers had been prepared, as they ought to have been, by an intelligent study of their own Scriptures, to regard their expected Messiah as the Son of God, coequal with God.

Indeed these miracles themselves may have even prejudiced them against Christ. They may have appeared to them to be fulfillments of the divine prophecy in this chapter (v. 1), "If there arise among you a prophet, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder," &c.; and they may have even expiated some among them, and excited them against Him as a false prophet, who was to be put to death. Forasmuch (says Maimonides) as we believe not in the woe, but because of the commandment of Moses; how should we receive the sign which cometh to make the prophecy of Moses false (cp. Ainsworth, p. 48)? But, if the Jews had really hearkened to Moses (see xviii. 15); if they and their rulers had understood their own Scriptures, and had not been swayed by prejudice, but in a careful, candid, and humble spirit had considered the evidence before them, they would have known that their promised Messiah was to be the Son of God, coequal with God, and that He was revealed as such in their own Scriptures; and thus His miracles would have had their due effect upon their minds.

(4) The Socinians, who deny Christ to be the Son of God, coequal and coeternal with the Father, are followers of the Jews, who, on the plea of zeal for the Divine Unity, rejected and crucified Jesus, who claimed to be God. Accordingly we find that the Ebionites, Cerinthians, Nazarenes, and others who denied Christ's divinity, arose from the ranks of Judaism (cp. Waterland, Works, v. 240, ed. Oxf. 1823). On these heresies see below, Introduction to the First Epistle of St. John, pp. 101—103. It has been well remarked by the late Professor Blunt that the arguments by which the ancient Christian apologists, such as Justin Martyr, Tertullian, and others, confuted the Jews, afford the strongest weapons against the modern Socinians (see also the remark of S. Athanasius, Orat. ii. adv. Arium, pp. 377—383, where he compares the Arians to the Jews).

These considerations show the vast importance of a correct interpretation of the Holy Scriptures. The Jews had the Old Testament; it was read weekly in their Synagogues; but they did not understand it; and they incurred its fearful denunciations by condemning Him to whom those Scriptures bare witness. Acts xiii. 27. 1 Thess. ii. 14—16.

(5) The conclusion here stated supplies a strong argument for the Divine origin and truth of Christianity. The Christian Church is built on JESUS CHRIST confessed to be Son of God and Son of Man (see on Matt. xvi. 18).

This doctrine, that Christ is Son of God, and Son of Man, reaches from the highest pole of Divine glory to the lowest pole of human suffering. No human mind could ever have devised such a scheme as that: and when it was presented to the mind of the Jews, the favoured people of God, they could not reach to either of these two poles; they could not mount to the height of the Divine exaltation in Christ, the Son of God; nor descend to the depth of human suffering in Christ, the Son of Man. They invented the theory of two Messiahs, in order to escape from the imaginary contradiction between a suffering and triumphant Christ; and they rejected the doctrine of Christ's Godhead in order to cling to a defective and unscriptural Monotheism. They failed of grasping the true sense of their own Scriptures in both respects. But in the Gospel, Jesus Christ, Son of God and Son of Man, reaches from one pole to the other, and filleth all in all (Eph. i. 23). The Gospel of Christ ran counter to the Jewish zeal for Monotheism, and incurred the charge of Polytheism, by preaching Christ the Son of God, coequal with the Father; it also contravened and challenged all the complex and dominant systems of Gentile Polytheism, by proclaiming the Divine Unity. It boldly confronted the World, and it has conquered the World; because the excellency of the power of the Gospel is not of man, but of God (2 Cor. iv. 7).

1—3.] On these verses as applicable to the trial of the faith of the Christian Church by the preaching of heresies, see Tertullian, Præs. Hæret. 1—7. As St. Paul says, "There must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you;" see 1 Cor. xi. 19. Perhaps the Editor may be allowed to refer here to his Occasional Sermons, No. 1.

3. Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet—the LORD your God proveth you] Thus God had proved the people by the prophet Balaam; and they did not stand the trial, but fell into idolatry, and perished. So God proved the Samaritan believers by the sorceries of the first heresiarch, Simon Magus (Acts viii. 9—11); and so He will prove the Church in the latter days: see S. Chrys., Orat. vi. c. Judæos; and above, on v. 1.

The Devils themselves acknowledged Christ; indeed, in the days of Christ's Ministry the Evil Spirit was among the first to acknowledge Him: "I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God." But Christ would not allow the unclean spirits to confess Him, and He cast them out, while they were in the act of doing so (Mark i. 24. 26). So the Evil Spirit acknowledged St. Paul and Silas at Philippi,—"These men are the servants of the most high God, who show unto us the way of salvation" (Acts xvi. 17). But St. Paul cast him out.

It is ever the policy of the Evil Spirit to mix truth with falsehood, in order to gain currency for falsehood, and to bring truth into disrepute. This device is always adopted by false Teachers; and God permits it, in order to prove the steadfastness of our faith. We are warned in Scripture not to listen to heretics, although they may speak what is true; for they mingle truth with falsehood, in order that we may imbibe what is false, as they who, by an infusion of honey, would make us swallow poison: see S. Cyril de Ador. v. p. 185.

4. Ye shall—obey his voice] Literally, ye shall hear in His voice—that is, all your hearing shall be fixed there,—"Adversus tale verbum non sunt admittendi prophete ulli, etiamsi pluerent signa et prodigia; ne Angelus quidem de celo, ut Paulus ad Gal. i. 8 dicit" (Luther). Cp. Theodoret, Qu. 12.

5. shall be put to death] So it was under the Hebrew Theocracy, when God gave clear directions concerning the heinousness of that sin, and also supplied plain signs, whether such and such individuals were guilty of it.

The sin of false teaching is not less now than it was then; and this Law shows the heinousness of it; but it does not show, as the Church of Rome affirms, that the Church of God ought to put heretics to death: see on Luke ix. 54. Cp. 1 Cor. v. 9—13. Now that a future retribution is more clearly denounced against all who resist God's Will and Word; and it is declared that "he that believeth not, shall be damned" (Mark xvi. 16); and that "the Lord Jesus will be revealed from heaven with your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you out of the house of bondage, to thrust thee out of the way which the LORD thy God commanded thee to walk in. ^h So shalt thou put the evil away from the midst of thee.

^h ch. 17. 7. & 22
21, 22, 24.
1 Cor. 5. 13.

⁶ If thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or ^k the wife of thy bosom, or thy friend, ^l which is as thine own soul, entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which thou hast not known, thou, nor thy fathers; ⁷ Namely, of the gods of the people which are round about you, nigh unto thee, or far off from thee, from the one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth; ⁸ Thou shalt ^m not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shall thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him: ⁹ But ⁿ thou shalt surely kill him; ^o thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people. ¹⁰ And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die; because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of [†] bondage. ¹¹ And ^p all Israel shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you.

ⁱ ch. 17. 2.

^k See Gen. 13. 5.
ch. 28. 54.
Prov. 5. 20.
Mic. 7. 5.
^l 1 Sam. 18. 1, 3.
& 20. 17.

^m Prov. 1. 10.

ⁿ ch. 17. 5.
^o ch. 17. 7.
Acts 7. 53.

[†] Heb. bondmen.
^p ch. 17. 13.
& 19. 20.

¹² If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the LORD thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying, ¹³ Certain men, || the children of Belial, ^r are gone out from among you, and have ^s withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, 'Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known; ¹⁴ Then shalt thou enquire, and make search, and ask diligently; and, behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you; ¹⁵ Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, ^u destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword. ¹⁶ And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shalt ^x burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the LORD thy God: and it shall be ^y an heap for ever; it shall not be built again. ¹⁷ And ^z there shall cleave nought of the || cursed thing to thine hand: that the LORD may ^a turn from the fierceness of his anger, and shew thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, ^b as he hath sworn unto thy fathers; ¹⁸ When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, ^c to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

^q Josh. 22. 11, &c.
Judg. 20. 1, 2.

|| Or, naughty men: see Judg. 19. 22. 1 Sam. 2. 12. & 25. 17, 25. 1 Kings 21. 10, 13. 2 Cor. 6. 15. ^r 1 John 2. 19. Jude 19. ^s 2 Kings 17. 21. ^t ver. 2, 6.

^u Ex. 22. 20.
Lev. 27. 28.
Josh. 6. 17, 21.

^x Josh. 6. 24.

^y Josh. 8. 28.
Isa. 17. 1. & 25.
2 Jer. 49. 2.

^z ch. 7. 26.
Josh. 6. 18.
|| Or, devoted.
^a Josh. 6. 26.

^b Gen. 22. 17.
& 26. 4, 24. & 28.
14.
^c ch. 12. 25, 28,
32.

^a Rom. 8. 16. &
9. 8, 26. Gal. 3. 26.
^b Lev. 19. 28. &
21. 5.
Jer. 16. 6. & 41. 5.
& 47. 5.
^l Thess. 4. 13.
^c Lev. 20. 26.
ch. 7. 6. & 26. 18,
19.

XIV. ¹ Ye are ^a the children of the LORD your God: ^b ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes for the dead. ² ^c For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God, and the LORD hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself, above all the nations that are upon the earth.

His mighty Angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel" (2 Thess. i. 8); the full punishment for such sins is reserved for the Great Day.

^{12.} in one of thy cities] God was therefore not partial. He employed the Israelites as His instruments in punishing the Canaanites for idolatry: but the Israelites themselves were to be punished in like manner if they were guilty of the same sin.

^{13.} children of Belial] So Vulg.; but Sept. has only παράνομοι: Onkelos, "sons of impiety;" and Syriac and Arabic, "wicked," "faithless men." The Hebrew word literally means worthlessness, wickedness; nequitia: from beli, without, not, and yaal, profit (Gesen. 122). The word "Belial" is rendered "wicked" by our Translators in xv. 9. Hence Belial is the name of the "Evil One" (2 Cor. vi. 15; and see S. Jerome in Ephes. iv.).

^{17.} there shall cleave nought of the cursed thing] See the history of Achan, Josh. vii. 1—26.

CHR. XIV. 1. ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness] as the heathen did. 1 Kings xviii. 28. Jer. xvi. 6; xli. 4. Ezek. vii. 8. See above, Lev. xix. 27; xxi. 5.

So St. Paul counsels under the Gospel, that we sorrow not, as the rest of mankind do, who have no hope (see 1 Thess. iv. 13). The reason is stated in the preamble, "Ye are the sons of the Lord (Jehovah) your God," and are thus distinguished from the heathen; and ye have hope of Resurrection and Life, in Him Who is Jehovah, the Everlasting One. Why, therefore, should ye mourn as if ye had no hope?

d Ezek. 4. 14.
Acts 10. 13, 14.
e Lev. 11. 2, &c.

|| Or. bison.
† Heb. dishon.

f Lev. 11. 26, 27.

g Lev. 11. 9.

h Lev. 11. 13.

i Lev. 11. 20.

k See Lev. 11. 21.

l Lev. 17. 15. &
22. 8.
Ezek. 4. 14.

m ver. 2.
n Ex. 23. 19. &
34. 26.

o Lev. 27. 30.
ch. 12. 6, 17.
Neh. 10. 37.
p ch. 12. 5, 6, 7, 17, 18.

q ch. 15. 19, 20.

r ch. 12. 21.

† Heb. asketh of thee.
s ch. 12. 7, 18. & 26. 11.

³ ^d Thou shalt not eat any abominable thing. ⁴ ^e These are the beasts which ye shall eat: the ox, the sheep, and the goat, ⁵ The hart, and the roebuck, and the fallow deer, and the wild goat, and the ||† pygarg, and the wild ox, and the chamois. ⁶ And every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleft into two claws, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that ye shall eat. ⁷ Nevertheless these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof; as the camel, and the hare, and the coney: for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you. ⁸ And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, ^f nor touch their dead carcase.

⁹ ^g These ye shall eat of all that are in the waters: all that have fins and scales shall ye eat: ¹⁰ And whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat; it is unclean unto you.

¹¹ ^h Of all clean birds ye shall eat. ¹² ^h But these are they of which ye shall not eat: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the ospray, ¹³ And the glede, and the kite, and the vulture after his kind, ¹⁴ And every raven after his kind, ¹⁵ And the owl, and the night hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind, ¹⁶ The little owl, and the great owl, and the swan, ¹⁷ And the pelican, and the gier eagle, and the cormorant, ¹⁸ And the stork, and the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat. ¹⁹ And ⁱ every creeping thing that flieth is unclean unto you: ^k they shall not be eaten. ²⁰ But of all clean fowls ye may eat.

²¹ ^l Ye shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself: thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it; or thou mayest sell it unto an alien: ^m for thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God. ⁿ Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

²² ^o Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year. ²³ ^p And thou shalt eat before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithe of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and ^q the firstlings of thy herds and of thy flocks; that thou mayest learn to fear the LORD thy God always.

²⁴ And if the way be too long for thee, so that thou art not able to carry it; ^r or ^r if the place be too far from thee, which the LORD thy God shall choose to set his name there, when the LORD thy God hath blessed thee: ²⁵ Then shalt thou turn it into money, and bind up the money in thine hand, and shalt go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose: ²⁶ And thou shalt bestow that money for whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, for oxen, or for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul [†] desireth: ^s and thou

4. These are the beasts which ye shall eat] See above, Lev. xi. 2—8.

6. parteth the hoof—and cheweth the cud] On the moral and spiritual meaning of these characteristics, see above, on Lev. xi. 3. Origen says here, “The parting of the hoof is a figure of that sure walking, by which we arrive at sound wisdom; and the chewing of the cud symbolizes that spiritual rumination by which we meditate on, and, as it were, chew the cud of, and masticate (ἀναμασάωμεθα καὶ λεπτύνομεν), the words of the divinely inspired Scripture.”

7. the hare—chew the cud] For an examination of the objections made by some to this statement, see above, Lev. xi. 6; and ep. Schultz, p. 432.

9. that have fins and scales] See on Lev. xi. 9.

12. the eagle] See Lev. xi. 13.

21. dieth of itself] See Lev. xvii. 15; xxii. 8.

— Thou shalt not seethe] See Exod. xxiii. 19.

22. Thou shalt truly tithe] Here the Sacred Author supposes his readers to be familiar with the earlier legislation which obliged to pay tithe to the Levites, and to be already observing it (see above, on xii. 6). But he appropriately adds here some new provisions, consequent on their present condition when they were on the eve of entering the Land of Promise; and prescribes their duty to resort to the place in that land, which the Lord their God should choose; and to offer another tithe there (see vr. 23—26), and he also delivers a command concerning the tithe of every third year (v. 28), and the manner of its application within their gates in that land which they were now about to possess. Such precepts as these naturally find their place in this the last portion of the Pentateuch.

shalt eat there before the LORD thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou, and thine household, ²⁷ And 'the Levite that is within thy gates; thou shalt not forsake him; for ^uhe hath no part nor inheritance with thee.

t ch. 12. 12, 18, 19.

²⁸ *At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates: ²⁹ †And the Levite, (because ²he hath no part nor inheritance with thee,) and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; that ^athe LORD thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hand which thou doest.

u Num. 18. 20. ch. 18. 1. 2. x ch. 26. 12. Amos 4. 4. y ch. 26. 12.

z ver. 27. ch. 12. 12.

a ch. 15. 10. Prov. 3. 9, 10. Sec Mal. 3. 10.

XV. ¹ At the end of ^aevery seven years thou shalt make a release. ² And this is the manner of the release: Every †creditor that lendeth ought unto his neighbour shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD's release. ³ ^bOf a foreigner thou mayest exact it again: but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release; ⁴ || Save when there shall be no poor among you; ^cfor the LORD shall greatly bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it: ⁵ Only ^dif thou carefully hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all these commandments which I command thee this day. ⁶ For the LORD thy God blesseth thee, as he promised thee: and ^ethou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and ^fthou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.

a Ex. 21. 2. & 23. 10, 11. Lev. 25. 2, 4. ch. 31. 10. Jer. 34. 14. † Heb. master of the lending of his hand. b See ch. 23. 20.

|| Or, To the end that there be no poor among you. c ch. 28. 8.

d ch. 28. 1.

e ch. 28. 12, 44 f ch. 28. 13. Prov. 22. 7.

⁷ If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, ⁸ thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother: ⁸ ^hBut thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth. ⁹ Beware that there be not a †thought in thy †wicked heart, saying, The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand; and thine ⁱeye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought; and ^khe cry unto the LORD against thee, and ^lit be sin unto thee. ¹⁰ Thou shalt surely give him, and ^mthine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that ⁿfor this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto. ¹¹ For ^othe poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.

g l John 3. 17.

h Lev. 25. 35. Matt. 5. 42. Luke 6. 34, 35.

† Heb. word.

† Heb. Belial.

i ch. 28. 54, 56. Prov. 23. 6. & 28. 22.

Matt. 20. 15. k ch. 24. 15. l Matt. 25. 41, 42 m 2 Cor 9. 5, 7. n ch. 14. 29. & 24. 19.

Ps. 41. 1. Prov. 22. 9. o Matt. 26. 11. Mark 14. 7. John 12. 8.

¹² And ^pif thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto p Ex. 21. 2. Lev. 25. 39. Jer. 34. 14.

28. At the end of three years] that is, twice between two Sabbatic years—viz., in the third and sixth year (cp. below, xxvi. 12. Amos iv. 4). It has been doubted whether this was properly a third tithe, as Josephus (Ant. iv. 8. 22) and many of the Rabbis call it—or whether it was not the same as the second tithe, with this variation, that it was not to be offered at the place which the Lord chose, but within their gates (cp. Holtinger de Decimis, p. 182, ed. 1713. Keil, Archæol. p. 339. Phillott, B. D. iii. p. 1517). And this is probably the true meaning of the command, as is distinctly stated by Maimonides in Matthanoth, quoted by Ains. on v. 28.

Ch. XV. 1. At the end of every seven years] in the seventh year. Cp. xiv. 28; xv. 12.

— a release] See Exod. xxiii. 11, and Lev. xxv. 4, on the Sabbatical year, and the release of debts; foreshadowing “the acceptable year of the Lord,” in which the Gospel of divine grace is preached, and remission of sins. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets (Isa. liv. 11—lv. 5), which speaks of free redemption in Christ, is a divine exposition of the spiritual sense of this chapter (cp. Luke iv. 18, 19).

2. it is called] the Lord's release has been proclaimed.

4. Save when there shall be no poor among you] Rather, to the end that there shall be no poor among you (see Gesen., p. 72). The translation “Save when,” &c., is not authorized by any ancient version, but that in the margin is more or less confirmed by the Arabic and Syriac. This is quite consistent with what is said (v. 11), “The poor shall not cease: there shall be poor: but their poverty shall be relieved by thee.” Cp. Bp. Andrewes, v. 44; and Bp. Sanderson, iii. 111, who interpret this text to mean that “there shall be no beggar in all Israel.”

9. in thy wicked heart] Here in Hebrew is the word belial. See xiii. 13. The text means, a word of belial in thy heart.

11. the poor shall never cease] As our Lord says, “Ye have the poor with you always,” and He adds the reason, “when ye will, ye may do them good” (Mark xiv. 7); and thus exercise the divine grace of love, and so promote your own salvation and theirs. God, who could make all men rich, if He pleased, tries you by the needs of your poor brethren, and according to your treatment of them will He judge you (Matt. xxv. 40). Thy poor brother is His brother.

12. be sold unto thee] See Exod. xxi. 2—11. Lev. xxv. 39—55.

thee, and serve thee six years; then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee. ¹³ And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty: ¹⁴ Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy floor, and out of thy winepress: of that wherewith the LORD thy God hath ^a blessed thee thou shalt give unto him. ¹⁵ And ^r thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee: therefore I command thee this thing to day.

q Prov. 10. 22.
r ch. 5. 15. & 16.
12.

s Ex. 21. 5, 6.

¹⁶ And it shall be, ^s if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee; because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee; ¹⁷ Then thou shalt take an aul, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant for ever. And also unto thy maidservant thou shalt do likewise. ¹⁸ It shall not seem hard unto thee, when thou sendest him away free from thee; for he hath been worth ^t a double hired servant to thee, in serving thee six years: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest.

t See Isa. 16. 14.
& 21. 16.

u Ex. 13. 2. & 34.
19.
Lev. 27. 26.
Num. 3. 13.

x ch. 12. 5, 6, 7,
17. & 14. 23. & 16.
11, 14.

¹⁹ ^u All the firstling males that come of thy herd and of thy flock thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep. ²⁰ ^x Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

y Lev. 22. 20. ch.
17. 1.

²¹ ^y And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the LORD thy God. ²² Thou shalt eat it within thy gates: ^z the unclean and the clean person shall eat it alike, as the roebuck, and as the hart. ²³ ^a Only thou shalt not eat the blood thereof; thou shalt pour it upon the ground as water.

z ch. 12. 15, 22.

a ch. 12. 16, 23.

a Ex. 12. 2, & c.

b Ex. 13. 4. & 24.
18.

c Ex. 12. 29, 42.

d Num. 28. 19.
e ch. 12. 5, 21.

XVI. ¹ Observe the ^a month of Abib, and keep the passover unto the LORD thy God: for ^b in the month of Abib the LORD thy God brought thee forth out of Egypt ^c by night. ² Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the passover unto the LORD thy God, of the flock and ^d the herd, in the ^e place which the LORD shall — in the seventh year] that is, of service, not the Sabbatical year, as such; see Exod. xxi. 2.

— let him go free] Another foreshadowing of Evangelical blessings; that is, in the release of the captives of sin and Satan by Christ. Luke iv. 18, 19. John viii. 32—36. Rom. vi. 12—14. See Exod. xxi. 2. Lev. xxv. 39—55.

17. thou shalt take an aul] See Exod. xxi. 6.

21. lame, or blind] See Lev. xxii. 18—22.

CH. XVI. 1. Abib] See Exod. xiii. 4.

This chapter to v. 18 is appointed to be read on the Festival of Whitsunday; and thus we are reminded that we are the heirs of the joyful promises and blessings annexed to the Festivals of Israel; and that all these Festivals are spiritualized and Christianized in the Gospel.

2. and the herd] This ceremonial therefore extends not only to the Paschal lamb, but to the other sacrifices which were connected with it; and which were offered during the seven days of unleavened bread (Augustine, Qu. 24), and were called chagigah: see Lightfoot, Hor. Heb. on Matt. xxvi. 26. Pfeiffer, Dub. p. 362; and cp. 2 Chron. xxx. 15. 24.

— in the place] This law is repeated here, because the observance of the Passover was thenceforth to be connected with the appointed place which God would choose in the land which they were now about to enter and to possess: see vv. 5, 6, 7, where the union of all Israel at that place, for that festival, is earnestly insisted on. The same remark applies to the repetition here of the Law concerning the Feast of Weeks (Pentecost) and Tabernacles: see vv. 15, 16.

Here is an answer to those (such as Hupfeld) who allege that such repetitions as these are superfluous, and are evidences of a difference of authorship of the several books of the Pentateuch.

The Passover was in abeyance in the wilderness after the sentence of exclusion at Kadesh-barnea: see Prelim. Note to Num. xv. When Moses addressed the Israelites in Deuteronomy, they had not kept a passover for thirty-seven years. But now they were about to enter Canaan, and there they would be obliged to observe it, he therefore fitly reminds them of that obligation.

Besides, the truth is, these recapitulations are not repetitions in the proper sense of the word; for they introduce a new and most important obligation, in connexion with these Festivals—that of visible, national unity in the worship of God at the place which He Himself should choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to whom He, in His universal sovereignty, was now about to give the Land of Canaan for their inheritance. The emphatic words in all the precepts are, “Thou mayest not sacrifice within any of thy gates” according to thine own choice, but “thou shalt appear before the Lord thy God in the place which he shall choose.” These latter words are repeated six times in this short chapter (vv. 2. 6, 7. 11. 15, 16).

Hence also we may explain why there is no mention made here of the Feast of Trumpets and the great Fast of Atonement. An objection to the genuineness of Deuteronomy has been grounded on this omission (Colenso, § 548. 698. Davidson, p. 364). But first it is probable that the Feast of Trumpets, and perhaps the Great Day of Atonement, did not fall into abeyance in the wilderness, and therefore did not need to be mentioned. And in confirmation of this we find that the Sabbath, which was kept in the wilderness after the sentence of exclusion at Kadesh (see Num. xv. 32), and the sacrifice of the Red Heifer, which was instituted after that date (Num. xix.), are not mentioned here. And further, the Feast of Trumpets and Day of Atonement did not oblige the Israelites to resort to the place which the Lord should choose. Cp. Bachmann, die Feste, choose to place his name there. ³ 'Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, even the bread of affliction; for thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt in haste: that thou mayest remember the day when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt all the days of thy life. ⁴ ⁵ And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee in all thy coast seven days; ^h neither shall there any thing of the flesh, which thou sacrificedst the first day at even, remain all night until the morning. ⁵ Thou mayest not || sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee: ⁶ But at the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the passover ¹ at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt. ⁷ And thou shalt ^h roast and eat it ¹ in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose: and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go unto thy tents. ⁸ Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread: and ^m on the seventh day shall be a [†] solemn assembly to the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work therein. ⁹ ⁿ Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn. ¹⁰ And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with || a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, ^o according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee: ¹¹ And ^p thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are among you, in the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to place his name there. ¹² ^q And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt: and thou shalt observe and do these statutes. ¹³ ^r Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy [†] corn and thy wine: ¹⁴ And ^s thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates. ¹⁵ ^t Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD shall choose: because the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice. ¹⁶ ^u Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose; in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and ^{*} they shall not appear before the LORD empty: ¹⁷ Every man shall give [†] as he is able, ^v according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee. ¹⁸ ^z Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the LORD

f Ex. 12. 15, 19, 39. & 13. 3, 6, 7. & 24. 18.

g Ex. 13. 7.

h Ex. 12. 10. & 34. 25.

|| Or, kill.

i Ex. 12. 6.

k Ex. 12. 8, 9. 2 Chron. 35. 11. 12 Kings 23. 23. John 2. 13, 23. & 11. 55.

m Ex. 12. 15. & 13. 6.

Lev. 23. 8.

† Heb. restraint.

Lev. 23. 36.

n Ex. 23. 16. & 34. 22.

Lev. 23. 15.

Num. 28. 26.

Acts 2. 1.

|| Or, sufficiency.

o ver. 17.

1 Cor. 16. 2.

p ch. 12. 7, 12, 13.

ver. 14.

q ch. 15. 15.

r Ex. 23. 16.

Lev. 23. 34.

Num. 29. 12.

† Heb. floor, and thy winepress.

s Neh. 8. 9, &c.

t Lev. 23. 39, 40.

u Ex. 23. 14, 17. & 34. 23.

x Ex. 23. 15. & 34. 20.

† Heb. according to the gift of his hand, 2 Cor. 8. 12.

y ver. 10.

z ch. 1. 16.

1 Chron. 23. 4. & 26. 29.

2 Chron. 19. 5, 8.

p. 143. Hävernick, Einleit. i. 2, p. 423. Hengst., Auth. ii. 359. Keil, p. 464.

From the fact that the Festivals here specified were to be kept in a particular place in Canaan, although the God of Israel is God of the whole Earth, it was rightly argued by the Christian Fathers that these Levitical Laws were temporary and preparatory, and were afterwards to be more fully developed in the Universal Church of Christ: see Justin Martyr c. Tryphon. § 40. Irenæus, iv. 34. At the same time, though these precepts are abrogated in letter, they are still obligatory in spirit; as showing God's will, that all men should be joined together in one heart and soul, especially in the offices of religion. Cp. John x. 16. Rom. xv. 16. 1 Cor. x. 17.

13. the feast of tabernacles] On the figurative relation of this Festival to Christianity, especially to the Incarnation of Him who "tabernacled in us," see above on Lev. xxiii. 34; and below, on John i. 14; vii. 2, 37; and note at the end of that chapter, p. 308; and on Rev. vii. 13. Cp. Euseb., Dem. Ev. vii. p. 409, who enlarges on the fulfilment of the typical character of this Feast in the Gospel, especially in the dwelling of Christ in Christian Churches throughout the world, and declares that the prophecy of Zeechariah (xiv. 16—21) is thus accomplished.

18.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xxi. 9. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Isa. li. 12—lii. 12, where is a promise of deliverance and redemption in Christ, the Great Prophet, pre-announced by Moses in this Lesson of the Law (xviii. 18).

— Judges and officers shall thou make thee in all thy gates] This was a new ordinance consequent on their new condition, in that they were now about to settle in Canaan, according to the

thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgment. ¹⁹ ^aThou shalt not wrest judgment; ^bthou shalt not respect persons, ^cneither take a gift: for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the || words of the righteous. ²⁰ † That which is altogether just shalt thou follow, that thou mayest ^dlive, and inherit the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

²¹ ^eThou shalt not plant thee a grove of any trees near unto the altar of the LORD thy God, which thou shalt make thee. ²² ^fNeither shalt thou set thee up any || image; which the LORD thy God hateth.

XVII. ¹Thou ^ashalt not sacrifice unto the LORD thy God any bullock, or || sheep, wherein is blemish, or any evilfavouredness: for that is an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

² ^bIf there be found among you, within any of thy gates which the LORD thy God giveth thee, man or woman, that hath wrought wickedness in the sight of the LORD thy God, ^cin transgressing his covenant, ³And hath gone and served other gods, and worshipped them, either ^dthe sun, or moon, or any of the host of heaven, ^ewhich I have not commanded; ⁴ ^fAnd it be told thee, and thou hast heard of it, and enquired diligently, and, behold, it be true, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought in Israel: ⁵Then shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, unto thy gates, even that man or that woman, and ^gshalt stone them with stones, till they die.

⁶ ^hAt the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death. ⁷ ⁱThe hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterward the hands of all the people. So ^kthou shalt put the evil away from among you.

⁸ ^lIf there arise a matter too hard for thee in judgment, ^mbetween blood and blood, between plea and plea, and between stroke and stroke, being matters of controversy within thy gates: then shalt thou arise, ⁿand get thee up into the place which the LORD thy God shall choose; ⁹And ^othou shalt come unto the priests the Levites, and ^punto the judge that shall be in those days, and

a Ex. 23. 2, 6.
 Lev. 19. 15.
 b ch. 1. 17.
 Prov. 24. 23.
 c Ex. 23. 8.
 Prov. 17. 23.
 Eccles. 7. 7.
 † Or, matters.
 † Heb. Justice, justice.
 d Ezek. 18. 5, 9.
 e Ex. 34. 13.
 1 Kings 14. 15. &
 16. 33.
 2 Kings 17. 16. &
 21. 3.
 2 Chron. 33. 3.
 f Lev. 26. 1.
 † Or, statue, or, pillar.
 a ch. 15. 21.
 Mal. 1. 8, 13, 14.
 † Or, goat.

b ch. 13. 6.

c Josh. 7. 11, 15.
 & 23. 16.
 Judg. 2. 20.
 2 Kings 18. 12.
 Hos. 8. 1.
 d ch. 4. 19.
 Job 31. 25.
 e Jer. 7. 22, 23, 31.
 & 19. 5. & 32. 35.
 f ch. 13. 12, 14.

g Lev. 24. 14, 16.
 ch. 13. 10.
 Josh. 7. 25.
 h Num. 35. 30.
 ch. 19. 15.
 Matt. 18. 16.
 John 8. 17.
 2 Cor. 13. 1.
 1 Tim. 5. 19.
 Heb. 10. 28.
 i ch. 13. 9.
 Acts 7. 58.
 k ver. 12. ch. 13.
 5. & 19. 19.
 l 2 Chron. 19. 10.
 Hag. 2. 11.
 Mal. 2. 7.
 m See Ex. 21. 13.
 20, 22, 28. & 22. 2.
 Num. 35. 11, 16,
 19. ch. 19. 4, 10,
 11.
 n ch. 12. 5. & 19.
 17.
 Ps. 122. 5.
 o See Jer. 18. 18.

p ch. 19. 17.

inheritance of their respective tribes. Hitherto they had one general Tribunal, now they were to constitute judges and officers (shoterim: see Exod. v. 6) in all their gates throughout their tribes. Cp. Maimon. in Sanhedrim, i. § 2. Selden de Syn. ii. 4.

21. plant] set up: see Isa. li. 16. Dan. xi. 25.

— a grove] Heb. asherah, probably an image. Movers (Phœnic. i. 560) derives the word from asherah, upright. Gesenius (p. 91) connects it with asherah, fortune, and Astarte. Cp. Keil, p. 468; and note above on Exod. xxxiv. 13; and see Deut. vii. 5; xii. 3; and Judg. iii. 7; vi. 25. This is a precept against associating the worship of any other God with that of JEHOVAH.

— of any trees] or, of any wood; the material of which the image was made (Judg. vi. 25).

22. any image] a pillar: στήλην, Sept.: see Exod. xxxiii. 24. He had forbidden a carved image; and they may not set up even a pillar: they must resist all approaches to idolatry.

CH. XVII. 1. blemish] Heb. num, whence Gr. μῶμος: Christ is ἀμαρτος (1 Pet. i. 19). See on Lev. i. 3.

3. which I have not commanded] Cp. xviii. 20. From such passages as these the sufficiency of Scripture, in matters of Faith, and as to objects of Worship, has been rightly concluded by the best Divines; as Hooker, ii. 6. 4; cp. below, on Gal. i. 8.

7. The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him] A wise law; inasmuch as many injure by the tongue who dare not attack with the hand. Cp. Acts vii. 57.

8. too hard for thee] that is, for determination in the local courts mentioned above (xvii. 8).

— blood and blood] whether it were wilfully shed or not. Cp. Num. xxxv. 16, 23, 24.

— stroke and stroke] wounds and injuries inflicted by one party on another. See xxi. 5.

— into the place which the LORD thy God shall choose] and to the High Court of Judicature there—in later days the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, “where was the seat of judgment” (Ps. cxxii. 5; cp. 2 Chron. xix. 8: and Maimonides in Sanhed. i. § 3—5), grounded on the model in the Law (Num. xi. 16. See below, on Matt. xxvi. 57. Acts v. 21. 34; vi. 12. Jahn, Archæol. § 243. Keil, Archæol. § 149. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 551. Grove, in B. D. iii. 1136).

This text has been applied by Christian Writers to the enforcement of the duty of resorting in controverted causes in Christian Churches to “the sentence of judicial decision given by the authority appointed within themselves.” The example of the Council of Jerusalem (Acts xv.) is set forth in Scripture to show the duty of submitting “to a more universal authority”—viz., that of the Church Universal. See Hooker, E. P., Preface, ch. vi. 2.

9. thou shalt come unto the priests the Levites] Is there not a difficulty here? In the other parts of the Pentateuch the Priests are called “the sons of Aaron” (Lev. i. 5. 7. 8. 11; ii. 2; iii. 2; xiii. 2; xxi. 21. Num. x. 8); and are never called “sons of Levi.” But in Deuteronomy they are never called “sons of Aaron;” but are always called “the Priests the sons of Levi,” or “the Priests the Levites.” See here and v. 18; xviii. 1. 5; xxi. 5; xxiv. 8; xxvii. 9; xxxi. 9; xxxiii. 8—11.

On this ground, and on others of a similar kind, it is enquire; and they shall shew thee the sentence of judgment: ¹⁰ And thou shalt do according to the sentence, which they of that place which the LORD shall choose shall shew thee; and thou shalt observe to do according to all that they inform thee: ¹¹ According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee, and according to the judgment which they shall tell thee, thou shalt do: thou shalt not decline from the sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right hand, nor to the left. ¹² And the man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the priest that standeth to minister there before q Ezek. 44. 24.

r Num 15. 30.
Ezra 10. 8.
Hos. 4. 4.
† Heb. not to
s ch. 18. 5, 7.

hearken.

asserted that Deuteronomy could not have been written by the Author of the other parts of the Pentateuch (De Wette, Kritik, 335. Vater, p. 500. Colenso, § 494. 542).

How is this to be accounted for?

(1) It is certain that the Author of Deuteronomy well knew the difference between the Priests and Levites; he knew that both descended from one common father—Levi; but that the Priests were of a particular family in that tribe, being all from Aaron, the son of Amram, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi (Exod. vi. 16—20). He knew that all Priests were also Levites; but that all Levites were not Priests; and this is evident from his words in x. 6, where Eleazar succeeds as Priest in Aaron's stead; and from xviii. 1, where those Levites, who were Priests, are distinguished from the rest of the tribe of Levi. Cp. Hengst., Auth. ii. 401—404. Keil, p. 471.

Either Deuteronomy was written by Moses, or it was not. If it was, then the Author of Deuteronomy had clearly marked the difference between the Priests and Levites in other parts of the Pentateuch. If it was not, but was written in a later age, then the Author had the other parts of the Pentateuch before him; and it is incredible that he should have been ignorant of a distinction so plainly set down there, and exhibited in the daily practice of the ritual of the Sanctuary. What then was the reason of this difference of phraseology?

(2) Deuteronomy is the farewell speech of the great Lawgiver, in the latter part of the last year of the wanderings, a little before his own death. The distinction between the Priests and Levites had already been clearly pointed out in the former parts of the Pentateuch; and it had been established by divine interference in the fearful judgment on Korah and the Levites, who were with him, for invading the Priest's office (Num. xvi. 1—40), and by the budding of Aaron's rod, which was laid up in the Holy of Holies. See Num. xvii. 1—10.

(3) This having been done, it was very natural that Moses, now about to depart, should desire to bury all feelings of rivalry in oblivion, and to appease all jealousies between the Priests and the Levites; and for this purpose he could not use a more healing phrase than that now before us, “the Priests the Levites.” For thus, on the one hand, he exhorted the Priests to treat the Levites with kindness as brethren, and not to domineer over them; and, on the other hand, he cheered the Levites with the reflection that the Priests were of the same origin as themselves, and that they, therefore, themselves derived honour from the priestly dignity, and ought not to encroach upon it; but to feel themselves honoured by being permitted to assist those who were invested with it.

(4) We see a like spirit in the Apostle of Christ, St. Paul, whose Apostolic office was disparaged and challenged by gainsayers, and who entitles himself in his Epistles, Paul the Apostle of Jesus Christ.

St. Peter styles himself an Apostle, but he also calls himself a presbyter, and addresses the presbyters as his brethren and compeers (1 Pet. v. 1). And St. John calls himself “the elder” (2 John 1. 3 John 1). St. James and St. Jude call themselves servants of Jesus Christ. Thus they taught a lesson of humility, charity, and unity, as Moses does here. The lesson is a wholesome one for the Christian Church. The phrase before us might be transferred into “the Bishops the Priests,” or into “the Priests the Deacons.” Every one of the three Orders in the Church may well be reminded that it has something in common with every other order; and if they act together in this spirit of mutual harmony, the “triple cord will not be broken.”

(5) Yet further, let it be remembered that Leviticus was written in the second year of the wanderings; and Deuteronomy was spoken in the last year—that is, nearly forty years after Leviticus. When Leviticus was written, the sons of Aaron were the only Priests; but when Deuteronomy was spoken there was at least one grandson of Aaron in the Priest's office, Phinehas the son of Eleazar (Num. xxv. 7. 11), and probably more. And Deuteronomy was spoken after Aaron's death, and at a time when the Priests would have acquired a known and independent position, and would not be regarded in reference to him. The difference of time in the composition of Leviticus and Deuteronomy explains the difference of language. See also above, Introduction to Deuteronomy, p. 197.

—the judge] i. e., the judicial tribunal; as that of those who are here called “Priests” is called “the Priest” (v. 12); because, as among the Priests there was one who was Chief, so it was with the Judges; one was Chief. See 2 Chron. xix. 8. 11.

This Divine Law has been regarded as a groundwork for the usage of the Christian Church, in the decision of controversies by means of General Councils (see the remarks of Hooker, Pref. to Eccl. Pol., cap. vi.); and it seems to have guided the primitive Church in the convocation of the council of Jerusalem. See Acts xv. 1—30.

There was a division of causes into civil and ecclesiastical, temporal and spiritual, as is evident from the historical commentary on this Law, which we find in 2 Chron. xix. 8—12, “In Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set of the Levites, and of the Priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for the judgment of the Lord, and for controversies; and he charged them, saying, What cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between blood and blood, between law and commandment, statutes and judgments, ye shall even warn them that they trespass not against the Lord. And, behold, Amariah the Chief Priest is over you in all matters of the Lord; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the King's matters.”

This principle is of great importance, in its bearing on the right exercise of the Royal Supremacy in Christian States; as has been shown by Bishop Andrewes, Tortura Torti, p. 380, in a “loans classicus” on that subject; a passage which was approved by King James I. See Theophilus Anglicanus, Part iii. ch. v., “In his quæ ad Deum pertinent, Amariam Sacerdotem, non Zebadiah ducem, Rex jubebit præsidere.” This principle was embodied at the English Reformation in the celebrated “Statute of Appeals” (24 Henry VIII.), as follows:—“This Realm of England (says that Statute) is an Empire, and so hath been accepted in the world, governed by one Supreme Head and King, having the Dignity and Royal Estate of the Imperial Crown of the same; unto whom a Body Politick, compact of all sorts and degrees of People, divided in terms and by names of Spirituality and Temporality, being bounden and owen to bear, next to God, a Natural and Humble Obedience; He being also institute and furnished by the goodness and sufferance of Almighty God, with plenary, whole, and entire power, pre-eminence, authority, prerogative, and jurisdiction, to render and yield justice, and final determination to all manner of folk, resiants or subjects within this his Realm, in all causes, matters, debates, and contentions happening to occur, insurg or begin within the limits thereof, without restraint or provocation to any forain Princes or Potentates of the World. The Body Spiritual whereof having power, when any cause of the Law Divine happened to come in question, or of spiritual learning, that it was declared, interpreted, and shewed by that part of the said Body Politick, called the Spirituality, now being usually called the English Church, which always hath been reputed and also found of that sort, that both for knowledge, integrity, and sufficiency of number, it hath been always thought, and is also at this hour, sufficient and meet of itself, without the intermeddling of any exterior person or persons, to declare and determine all such doubts, and to administer all such offices and duties, as to their rooms spiritual doth appertain.”

12. the man that will do presumptuously] On the applicability of this precept in Christian times, see Hooker, Preface, vi. 4, and the expositors of the XXth Article of the Church of England, “The Church hath authority in controversies of Faith.”

t ch. 13. 5.

u ch. 13. 11. & 19. 20.

x 1 Sam. 8. 5 19, 20.

y See 1 Sam. 9. 15. & 10. 24. & 16. 12.
1 Chron. 22. 10.
z Jer. 30. 21.

a 1 Kings 4. 26. & 10. 26, 28.
Ps. 20. 7.
b Isa. 31. 1.
c Ezek. 17. 15.
d Ex. 13. 17.
Num. 14. 3, 4.
d ch. 28. 68.
Hos. 11. 5.
See Jer. 42. 15.
e See 1 Kings 11. 3, 4.
f 2 Kings 11. 12.
g ch. 31. 9, 26.
See 2 Kings 22. 8.
h Josh. 1. 8.
Ps. 119. 97, 98.

i ch. 5. 32.
1 Kings 15. 5.

a Num. 18. 20. & 26. 62. ch. 10. 9.
b Num. 18. 8, 9.
1 Cor. 9. 13.

the LORD thy God, or unto the judge, even that man shall die: and thou shalt put away the evil from Israel. ¹³ And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously.

¹⁴ When thou art come unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, *I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me; ¹⁵ Thou shalt in any wise set him king over thee, whom the LORD thy God shall choose: one ² from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee: thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy brother. ¹⁶ But he shall not multiply horses to himself, nor cause the people ^b to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as ^c the LORD hath said unto you, ^d Ye shall henceforth return no more that way. ¹⁷ Neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that ^e his heart turn not away: neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold. ¹⁸ ^f And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book out of ^g that which is before the priests the Levites: ¹⁹ And ^h it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life: that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them: ²⁰ That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he ⁱ turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel.

XVIII. ¹ The priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, ^a shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they ^b shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance. ² Therefore shall they have no inheritance

14. and shalt say, I will set a king over me] Here is a prophetic provision for a contingency, which God, in His divine foresight, foreknew would arise (see Gen. xxxvi. 31). He does not approve the act (see 1 Sam. viii. 5—7. Hos. xiii. 10. Joseph., Ant. iv. 8. 17), but controls it, as he does in the case of divorce (xxiv. 1: cp. Augustine here).

In that case he says, "When a man hath taken a wife, and she find no favour in his eyes—then let him write her a bill of divorce." Our Lord Himself declares that this provision was due to the "hardness of their hearts" (Matt. xix. 3—9). And so here the Legislator says, "When thou shalt say, I will set a king over me, like as the nations that are about me," and by this remarkable preamble he intimates that this would be done from their own waywardness, and in imitation of other nations who did not serve God: see below, Introduction to 1 Samuel; and on 1 Sam. viii. 5, and 1 Kings x. 26—29, &c., referring to this text.

The sin of the people in Samuel's time consisted in their desire to set up a king, of their own device, by their own act, without consulting God, and in imitation of heathen nations, in disparagement of the benefits they enjoyed under the Theocracy. Compare below, xxviii. 36,—“The Lord shall bring thee and thy king, which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known.” See also Hengst., Auth. ii. pp. 246—261; and Keil, p. 472, who show that there is no ground for the allegation of some, that this mention of the kingdom betokens a post-Mosaic age (see Davidson, Intr. p. 359), and that it could not have been known to the Hebrews even in the time of Samuel, inasmuch as if it had then existed Samuel would not have ventured to remonstrate with the people for their desire of a king (cp. Schultz, pp. 50—57).

15. whom the LORD thy God shall choose] Either by His Prophets, as Saul (1 Sam. x. 1), and David (1 Sam. xvi. 1), by Samuel; or by Urim and Thummim.

16. not multiply horses] Lest he should trust in worldly strength, and not in God. Ps. xx. 8: cp. Isa. xxxi. 1, “Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help, and stay on horses.”

— to return to Egypt] Here is an answer to those (like Vater, Hartmann, Ilgen, De Wette, V. Bohlen, Ewald, Riehm, Davidson, Coleenso), who allege that these provisions are marks of a later age, and that they were suggested by the practice of Solomon and later kings with regard to horses (1 Kings iv. 26; x. 28. 2 Chron. i. 16), and to wives (1 Kings xi. 4). Not even in the age of Joshua, when the Tribes were settled in Canaan, could there be any thought of returning to Egypt (cp. Hengst., Auth. ii. 247, Mos. and Egypt, p. 22; Hävernick, Einleit. i. p. 473; and Keil, p. 472).

18. he shall write him a copy of this law] This is a correct translation, and is that of Onkelos, Syriac, and Arabic, which last supposes, perhaps rightly, the act of writing not to have been done personally by the king himself. Cp. Mark xv. 15 with Matt. xxvii. 26. The Sept. and Fulg. have, “he shall write for himself the Deuteronomy,” perhaps in the same sense.

This royal transcript was to be made from that which was before the Priests and Levites; that is, from the original deposited in the Tabernacle in the Holy of Holies (see below, on xxxi. 9. 24—26).

It does not clearly appear, whether this transcript to be made for the king's use was a transcript of the whole Pentateuch, or of the Book of Deuteronomy only. But the former seems more probable. For it is declared that the copy was to be made of the original which was in the hands of the Priests and Levites, and this was the whole Pentateuch. See below, on xxxi. 9. 11. 26. Josh. i. 8. Cp. Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. p. 163. Keil, p. 474. Shickard de Jure reg. Hebr. Theor. v. Kittlo, Illust. iii. 156. Macdonald on the Pent. i. p. 355.

There is no evidence that the Pentateuch was originally divided into books as it now is; and there are many commands in Numbers and Leviticus, which the king needed to know, as well as those in Deuteronomy; and Deuteronomy was written on the supposition that its readers would refer to the other parts of the Pentateuch, and be familiar with them.

Ch. XVIII. 1. The priests the Levites] See above, xvii. 18. — the offerings—made by fire] The Sacred Writer supposes the reader to be familiar with what he said in Lev. i. 8 and Num. xviii. on this subject, and does not repeat it.

For a refutation of the allegation that there is a difference in the legislative provision in Deuteronomy for the Levites, and that made in Leviticus and Numbers, see Schultz, pp. 58—66.

among their brethren: the LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

³ And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a sacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep; and ^c they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw. ^d ⁴ The firstfruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give him. ^e For ^e the LORD thy God hath chosen him out of all thy tribes, ^f to stand to minister in the name of the LORD, him and his sons for ever.

⁶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel, where he ^g sojourned, and come with all the desire of his mind ^h unto the place which the LORD shall choose; ⁷ Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, ⁱ as all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD. ⁸ They shall have like ^k portions to eat, beside [†] that which cometh of the sale of his patrimony.

⁹ When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, ^l thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations. ¹⁰ There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter ^m to pass through the fire, ⁿ or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, ¹¹ ^o Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a ^p necromancer. ¹² For all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and ^q because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee. ¹³ Thou shalt be || perfect with the LORD thy God. ¹⁴ For these nations, which thou shalt || possess, hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners: but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath not suffered thee so to do.

¹⁵ ^r The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of

c Lev. 7. 30—34.

d Ex. 22. 29.
Num. 15. 12, 24.

e Ex. 28. 1.
Num. 3. 10.
f ch. 10. 8. & 17. 12.

g Num. 35. 2, 3.
h ch. 12. 5.

i 2 Chron. 31. 2.

k 2 Chron. 31. 4.
Neh. 12. 44, 47.
† Heb. his sales by the fathers.

l Lev. 18. 26, 27, 30. ch. 12. 29, 30, 31.
m Lev. 18. 21. ch. 12. 31.
n Lev. 19. 26, 31. & 20. 27.
o Isa. 8. 19.
p Lev. 20. 27. p 1 Sam. 28. 7.

q Lev. 18. 24, 25. ch. 9. 4.

|| Or, upright, or sincere, Gen. 17. 1.
|| Or, inherit.

r ver. 18.
John 1. 45.
Acts 3. 22. & 7. 37.

2. the LORD is their inheritance] A memento to the Priesthood in every age of the Church, that they be not entangled with the affairs of this life (2 Tim. iii. 4: cp. above, x. 8, 9). Hence the Christian clergy derive their name: as the Sept. has it here, κληρος οὐκ ἔσται αὐτῶ ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς αὐτοῦ· κήριος αὐτῶς κληρος αὐτοῦ. Cp. Num. xviii. 24. See S. Jerome ad Nepotian.

— as he hath said unto them] Here the writer of Deuteronomy refers to Num. xviii. 20: cp. below, xxiv. 8, as even Dr. Davidson admits, who says (p. 386), “There is no doubt that Deuteronomy is built on the historical facts embodied in the former parts of the Pentateuch. It presupposes them as well known; it appears that he had the written books (of the former parts) before him with all their contents.”

Surely, therefore, it follows, that the theory is untenable, which assigns Deuteronomy to a person of a much later age, who desired to personate Moses; and which alleges that this is evident from discrepancies of style and matter between Deuteronomy and the other books.

3. the priest's due] The present precepts are to be construed with those in Lev. vii. 31—36: cp. Keil, p. 476. The Priest is here distinguished from the Levite. See v. 6, and above, xvii. 9.

— the maw] The fourth stomach of ruminating animals, τὸ ἕνυστρον, omasus. The older expositors observe, that every victim consisted of three parts, the head, the legs, and the body, and that God's minister, the Priest, had his portion of each.

6. with all the desire of his mind] With earnest devotion, and religious yearning for the service of the sanctuary, and not from the love of change, or from a restless passion for excitement, or from an ambitious craving for self-display and popular applause in a great and populous city—a lesson for the Clergy of every age. Chaucer's character of a good Parson, thus modernized by Dryden, vol. iii. 239, harmonizes with this precept:

“Nor durst he trust another with his care,
Nor rode himself to Paul's, the public fair,
To chaffer for preferment with his gold.”

7. shall minister] Though it be not the time of ministration appointed for his own ἐφημερία, or course (Maimon. on the Inst. of the Sanct. iv. 3). Cp. below, 1 Chron. xxiv. and xxvi.; and 2 Chron. xxxi. 2.

10. pass through the fire] Lev. xviii. 21; above, xii. 31.
— useth divination] Literally, divineth divinations. The Hebrew word is kosem: see Num. xxiii. 23. Ezek. xxi. 21. 23. 29. Gesen. 736, who says, that “the primary idea seems to be that of cutting.” Cp. Dr. Thomson, the Land and the Book, pp. 148, 149, on the words here used.

— observer of times] Heb. meōnen, from anan, to cover, to use hidden arts: see Lev. xix. 26; Judg. ix. 37; and Gesen. 644.

— enchanter] menachesh, from nachash: see Gen. xxx. 27; xlv. 13. Gesen., p. 545. Keil supposes it to mean an “interpreter by serpents.”

— witch] from cashaph, to pray. See Exod. vii. 11; xxii. 18. Gesen. 418. Keil supposes it to mean an “adjurer.”

11. a charmer] from Heb. chabar, to bind, to fascinate (cp. Ps. lviii. 5. Gesen. 258), as by magic knots (Keil).

— familiar spirits] Heb. ob: see Lev. xix. 31; xx. 6. 27. 1 Sam. xxviii. 3. 7—9. Isa. viii. 19; xix. 3; xxix. 4; and on Acts xvi. 16. Gesen. 18.

— wizard] Heb. yidoni: see Lev. xix. 31; xx. 6; properly a cunning person (Gesen. 335).

— necromancer] In Hebrew, literally, one who asks questions of the dead.

It is interesting and important to observe, how careful the Holy Spirit has been to specify here, and to condemn separately, the various arts of sorcery and witchcraft, which He declares to be “an abomination to the Lord;” and “because of those abominations the Lord doth drive out the nations from before thee.” The mode of divination, which is here mentioned last, is one which, notwithstanding this solemn denunciation, has been revived in modern days. These abominable sins of Canaan have even found an entrance, and a welcome, into the saloons of the cities of Christendom! Cp. Rev. xxi. 8.

15—19. The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee . . . And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken; ¹⁶ According to all that thou desiredst of the LORD thy God in Horeb in the day of the assembly, saying, ‘Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not.’ ¹⁷ And the LORD said unto me, ‘They have well spoken that which they have spoken.’ ¹⁸ * I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and ^v will put my words in his mouth; ^z and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. ¹⁹ ^a And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.

²⁰ But ^b the prophet, which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or ^c that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die. ²¹ And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken? ²² ^d When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, ^e if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it ^f presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

XIX. ¹ When the LORD thy God ^a hath cut off the nations, whose land the LORD thy God giveth thee, and thou [†] succeedest them, and dwellest in their

s ch. 9. 10.

t Ex. 20. 19.
Heb. 12. 19.

u ch. 5. 28.
x ver. 15.
John 1. 45.
Acts 3. 22. & 7.
37.
y 1sa. 51. 16.
John 17. 8.
z John 4. 25. & 8.
28. & 12. 49, 50.
a Acts 3. 23.

b ch. 13. 5.
Jer. 14. 14, 15.
Zech. 13. 3.
c ch. 13. 1, 2.
Jer. 2. 8.

d Jer. 28. 9.

e See ch. 13. 2.

f ver. 20.

a ch. 12. 29.

† Heb. inheritest, or possesseth.

speak in my name, I will require it of him] These five verses exhibit proofs of Divine Inspiration.

The sacred Lawgiver had been delivering solemn warnings against heathen diviners and false prophets; and he had declared, that if there should even arise a prophet who worked miracles, and delivered prophecies, which came to pass, but who turned the hearts of the people away from the Law of God, as delivered by Moses himself, that Prophet was to be put to death: see above, on those remarkable enactments, xiii. 1—11.

It has been already observed there, that JESUS CHRIST was rejected and condemned, and put to death by the Hebrew Nation, on the ground of supposed obedience to the requirements of that Law; and that His miracles were not received by the Jews as credentials of His divine mission, because that enactment had provided that no miracles were to be accepted as of any weight in behalf of the claims of a Prophet who contravened the Law of God, as delivered by Moses.

With divine foresight, therefore, of the mission of Christ, Almighty God here declares by Moses, that another Prophet would arise, like unto Moses, from among the people of Israel; that He would fulfil the desires of Israel at Horeb, yearning for a Mediator between themselves and God (v. 16). Cp. Exod. xx. 19, and 1 Tim. ii. 5; that God would put His words into His mouth; and that He would speak all that God commanded Him; and further, that whosoever would not hearken unto God’s words, which that Prophet should speak in His name, God would require it of him.

That Jesus Christ was that Prophet, whom God here pronounced by Moses, and who would declare God’s will (cp. John vii. 16; xii. 49; xv. 15), we have the testimony of the Holy Spirit Himself, speaking in the New Testament by St. Peter to the People of Jerusalem, and reciting these very words of Deuteronomy, and applying them to Christ: see Acts iii. 22, 23. Cp. Acts vii. 37. John i. 19. 21.

The Samaritans themselves appear to have derived their expectations of a Messiah from this prophecy (John iv. 25).

Here, in passing, we may observe that this passage, so applied by the Apostles, shows the genuineness of Deuteronomy.

If, as some modern critics affirm, Deuteronomy had been a fabrication, composed by a later writer personating Moses—if it be indeed true, that “the Book of Deuteronomy was written at a much later date than the other parts of the Pentateuch, so that these words (i. e., this prophecy concerning the Messiah) can no longer be regarded as words recorded by Moses from the mouth of Jehovah Himself” (Colenso, § 722)—is it to be imagined, that the Apostles, inspired by the Holy Ghost, would have quoted them, and have applied them to Christ? Would they have appealed to a forgery, and have relied on an imposture, when they were preaching the Gospel of Truth?

Our Lord Himself seems to refer to this passage, when He declares that the blood of all God’s prophets, who had been rejected by the Jews, would be required (see v. 19) of that generation, which rejected Himself: see Luke xi. 50, 51. God the Father applied this prophecy to Jesus at the Transfiguration, when He said in the presence of Moses and Elias, “This is My beloved Son, hear ye Him” (Matt. xvii. 5).

All the earlier Jewish Expositors, with one consent, applied this prophecy to the MESSIAH. Cp. Hengst., Christol. § 93.

They who wish for further proof of this truth, that JESUS CHRIST is indeed that Prophet of whom God here speaks by Moses, may consult Euseb., Dem. Evang., prope init. S. Athanas. c. Arian., Orat. i. S. Cyril. Catech. xii. Epiphanius, Hær. xlii. and xlii. S. Cyril. Alex. in Joann. iii. 3, de Fest. Paschal., Hom. xv. S. Augustine c. Faust. xvi. 15—19. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, pp. 81. 85, Art. ii.; and the Authors quoted by Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 163. Huet, Dem. Evan., Prop. 7, Num. 9. Hengstenberg, Christologie, i. p. 111, or ed. Arnold, p. 37. Kurtz, Gesch. ii. 513. Tholuck, Propheten, p. 25; and so Döderlein, Köhler, Knapp, Delitzsch.

The words rendered “a Prophet like unto me” (v. 15), and “like unto thee” (v. 18), are literally rendered “a Prophet as me,” and “a Prophet as thee;” and so Sept.; and so St. Peter and St. Stephen quote them (Acts iii. 22; vii. 37).

In what respects Christ was like Moses, but far greater than he, see Heb. iii. 2, 5, 6. God spake with Moses face to face, mouth to mouth (Num. xii. 6—8); but Christ, the Divine Word, is in the bosom of the Father (John i. 18; iii. 13). Moses was like Christ in his birth: born under persecution, and exposed to danger of death in his infancy; in his divine call, and mission to deliver Israel; in his work and office; as Mediator and Intercessor; as rejected by those whom he came to save (see Acts vii. 27—38); in wisdom; in visions of God; in promulgating God’s will as a Legislator; as revealing the future; as meek and lowly, and yet zealous for God; as a King and Ruler of Israel; as setting up the Tabernacle of God’s Church in the wilderness; as proving his mission by miracles, prophecies, and obedience to God’s will; as faithful in God’s house. But in all things, in which Christ was like Moses, Christ was infinitely greater. See Heb. iii. 2—6. Cp. Euseb., Dem. Evang. i. 7; iii. 2. Mather on the Types, pp. 95—100; and particularly the Exposition of this text by Dean Jackson on the Creed, book iii. chap. xxi.

CH. XIX. 1. When the LORD thy God hath cut off the nations] Here is another indication of the time in which this book was written (cp. Graves on the Pent., Part i. Lect. iii. p. 45). Moses himself had severed three cities on the east of Jordan (iv. 41—43), and he now contemplates a further severance to be made after his death; and the genuineness of this passage is confirmed by the act of Joshua consequent on the divine command, “The Lord spake unto Joshua, saying, Speak to the children of Israel, saying, Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses” (Josh. xx. 1, 2).

cities, and in their houses; ² ^b Thou shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it. ³ Thou shalt prepare thee a way, and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither.

^b Ex. 21. 13.
Num. 35. 10, 14.
Josh. 20. 2.

⁴ And ^c this is the case of the slayer, which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not [†] in time past; ⁵ As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the axe to cut down the tree, and the [†] head slippeth from the [†] helve, and [†] lighteth upon his neighbour, that he die; he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live: ⁶ ^d Lest the avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and [†] slay him; whereas he was not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not [†] in time past. ⁷ Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

^c Num. 35. 15.
ch. 4. 42.
[†] Heb. from yesterday the third day.

[†] Heb. iron.
[†] Heb. wood.
[†] Heb. findeth.
^d Num. 35. 12.

[†] Heb. smite him in life.
[†] Heb. from yesterday the third day.

⁸ And if the LORD thy God ^e enlarge thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers; ⁹ If thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the LORD thy God, and to walk ever in his ways; ^f then shalt thou add three cities more for thee, beside these three: ¹⁰ That innocent blood be not shed in thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

^e Gen. 15. 18.
ch. 12. 20.

^f Josh. 20. 7, 8.

2. three cities] Of refuge,—these three were Kedesh, Shechem, and Hebron, all of them Levitical cities; the first for the north, the second for the midland district of Palestine, the third for the south (see v. 3, and Josh. xx. 7).

On the Evangelical relation of these cities to Him to whom the Christian soul flies “for refuge to lay hold on the hope set before us” (Heb. vi. 18), see above, on Num. xxxv. 6, and the following verses, to which the present passage is supplementary.

This mention of the cities of refuge is happily introduced here after the pre-announcement of the great Prophet (xviii. 15. 18). It is in Him only that we have a city of refuge.

3. Thou shalt prepare thee a way] These roads, say the Jewish expositors, to the cities of refuge were to be made clear, level, and broad, thirty-two cubits in width; all hindrances and stumbling-blocks were to be carefully removed out of them; they were well supplied with bridges, and at the cross roads were to be set up finger-posts with the words, “Refuge, Refuge,” inscribed on them, to point the way thither; and on the fifteenth of the month Adar (February) the magistrates sent surveyors to repair the ways to them. Maimon. on Murder, viii. 5. 6.

These cities, as here prescribed, were in commodious places, so as to be of easy access from all parts of the land. See above, on Num. xxxv. 14. Cp. Thomson, Land and Book, chap. xviii. p. 261.

These laws suggest many salutary directions to Christian States and Churches, on the duty of providing an adequate supply of means of grace to all the Population of a country, especially by a right organization of its Ecclesiastical system, and of making spiritual roads and bridges, and of removing all hindrances and obstacles out of the way of all, in their access to Christ and His Church. It cannot be right in the sight of God, who dictated this Law, to restrain the access of Christian souls to the means of grace, which flow from Christ through an Apostolic ministry, and to deny His people the power of increasing the number of Chief Pastors, according to their spiritual needs.

May we not therefore apply this Scripture to ourselves?

In England the people, especially the poor, are subjected to hardships from the want of enough Bishops. In the last 300 years the population has increased fivefold; but only one additional See has been founded. At every baptism, the Sponsors are enjoined to take care that “the child be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him,” so soon as the child has been properly taught. But, from the want of Bishops, Confirmations cannot be duly administered. If they were administered annually, and in Parishes taken singly, or in groups of two or three, the Clergy would be excited and obliged to instruct all the children of their parishes in their faith and duty to God and man, and to prepare them for Confirmation. They would take pains to catechize them, and thus do much good to them, the people, and themselves. But in many dioceses, Confirmation is administered only once in three years; and thus, through the want of a sufficient number of Bishops, a large number of persons are left without an opportunity of ever coming to Confirmation, and consequently are never brought to the Holy Communion.

It is made an occasion of reproach against the Church of England, that, while other Churches in other countries, and other denominations of Christians in England, are allowed to increase the number of their Ministers according to their desires and needs, the Church of England is so much enslaved by her connexion with the State, that she cannot increase her Bishops according to the increase and wants of the people; and it is alleged by her enemies, that if she possessed that genuine vitality and energy which are the true sign of Christian life in a Church, she would show them by an earnest endeavour to develop and expand her ecclesiastical regimen and organization.

The reader will forgive this digression, and join with the Editor in prayer that this stigma may speedily be removed from her; and that her “cities of refuge” may be increased according to the needs of her people.

4. that he may live] Till the death of the High Priest, the type of Christ (see Num. xxxv. 25).

6. avenger] Heb. goel. See Num. xxxv. 12; and on Ruth ii. 20; iii. 13; iv. 4.

8. And if the LORD thy God enlarge thy coast] This promise is made contingent on a certain condition, namely, of the Nation’s obedience to God (v. 9). It has therefore not been fulfilled to the literal Israel, who have disobeyed God, and have not hearkened to the Prophet whom He raised up, and commanded them to hear (xviii. 15—19).

But the Jews rightly say that this prophecy and promise were to be fulfilled in the days of the Messiah (Maimon. on Murder, viii. 4: cp. xi. 2), and it is abundantly fulfilled to all true Israelites in Christ; for new cities of refuge have now arisen in Christian Churches throughout the world wherever Christ’s word is duly preached and His sacraments administered; thither the sinner may flee for refuge and live.

9. beside these three] That is, beside these second three. The first three had been designated by Moses himself (iv. 41—43) on the east side of Jordan; the next three are to be set apart in the midst of the land, after the conquest, that had not yet been achieved, of the nations of Canaan.

g Ex. 21. 12, &c.
Num. 35. 16, 21.
ch. 27. 24.
Prov. 28. 17.
† Heb. in iife.

h ch. 13. 8. & 25.
12.
i Num. 35. 33, 34.
ch. 21. 9.
1 Kings 2. 31.

k ch. 27. 17.
Job 24. 2.
Prov. 22, 28.
Hos. 5. 10.

l Num. 35. 30.
ch. 17. 6.
Matt. 18. 16.
John 8. 17.
2 Cor. 13. 1.
1 Tim. 5. 19.
Heb. 10. 28.
m Ps. 27. 12. &
35. 11.
|| Or, falling away.
n ch. 17. 9. & 21.
5.

o Prov. 19. 5, 9.
Dan. 6. 24.

p ch. 13. 5. & 17.
7. & 21. 21. & 22.
21, 24. & 24. 7.
q ch. 17. 13. & 21.
21.

r ver. 13.
s Ex. 21. 23, 24.
Lev. 24. 20.
Matt. 5. 38.

a See Ps. 20. 7.
Isa. 31. 1.
b Num. 23. 21.
ch. 31. 6, 8.
2 Chron. 13. 12.
& 32. 7, 8.

¹¹ But ^g if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him † mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities: ¹² Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die. ¹³ ^h Thine eye shall not pity him, ⁱ but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee.

¹⁴ ^k Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

¹⁵ ^l One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established. ¹⁶ If a false witness ^m rise up against any man to testify against him || that which is wrong; ¹⁷ Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand before the LORD, ⁿ before the priests and the judges, which shall be in those days; ¹⁸ And the judges shall make diligent inquisition: and, behold, if the witness be a false witness, and hath testified falsely against his brother; ¹⁹ ^o Then shall ye do unto him, as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so ^p shalt thou put the evil away from among you. ²⁰ ^q And those which remain shall hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you. ²¹ ^r And thine eye shall not pity; but ^s life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

XX. ¹ When thou goest out to battle against thine enemies, and seest ^a horses, and chariots, and a people more than thou, be not afraid of them: for the LORD thy God is ^b with thee, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. ² And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the priest shall approach and speak unto the people, ³ And shall say unto them,

11. But if any man hate his neighbour] There was no refuge in the literal Israel for wilful murder. But here also the promise is enlarged to the spiritual Israel. Though the Law is still in force, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made He man" (see Gen. ix. 6), and therefore the slayer's life is forfeited in this world, yet there is a promise of refuge even to him in Christ, on his sincere repentance for his sin, if he flees to Christ for refuge, and lays hold on Him by faith; for in such a case as that, the declaration in Holy Scripture is, "that the blood of Jesus Christ the Son of God cleanseth from all sin" (1 John i. 7).

12. the elders of his city] There is no discrepancy between this precept and that in Num. xxxv. 16—21, as is alleged by some (De Wette, Vater, Riehm). There it had been said "that the murderer is to be put to death." Here the Sacred Legislator adds a direction concerning the Magistrates, by whom that law was to be put in execution.

14. Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark] Another precept suited to the people's present condition, when about to settle in Canaan: the landmark was fixed by God through the ministry of Joshua and Eleazar (Josh. xiv. 1), and they who removed it were to be cursed (Deut. xxvii. 17).

15. at the mouth of two witnesses] A law referred to by Christ Himself, and by St. Paul, and applied to the concerns of the Christian Church (Matt. xviii. 16. 1 Tim. v. 19). And if every violation of the law of Moses was punished without mercy "under two or three witnesses" (Heb. x. 28), what are we to think of transgressions of Christ's laws in His Church committed in the presence "of a cloud of witnesses" (Heb. x. 29; xii. 1)?

17. before the LORD] Before the sanctuary, in the place which He shall choose (Deut. xvii. 8. 1 Kings viii. 31).

19. Then shall ye do unto him] The Jews in this respect were guilty of a double sin: they rejected Christ, the true Prophet, and put Him to death; and they received the testimony against Him of false witnesses, whom they ought to have put to death (Matt. xxvi. 60. Mark xiv. 60).

21. eye for eye] See Exod. xxi. 23. Lev. xxiv. 20. Matt. v. 38.

CH. XX. 1—4. When thou goest out to battle]

They must not go to battle at all except by commission from God. See the excellent remarks on these four verses by Bishop Andrewes, preaching before Queen Elizabeth at Richmond, on Ash-Wednesday, 1599, on the occasion of the expedition of the Earl of Essex to Ireland (vol. i. p. 321); particularly with regard to the Lawfulness of War, and on the spirit in which it is to be entered on and waged. Cp. below, Luke iii. 14, and Maimon. on Mishna concerning the Kings, ch. v. § 1.

2. the priest shall approach] On the ceremonies used among the Hebrews on the proclamation of war, see Maimonides, as quoted here by Ainsworth; and compare above, Num. x. 8, 9, concerning the trumpets to be blown by them.

God gives a special direction below (xxiii. 9), "When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing;" and there is an instructive passage of Bishop Andrewes, referring to this chapter (i. 326), on the lessons to be learnt and practised by religious Kings and States in times of War.

"Leading an army to war (he says) pertaineth to military policy; forbearing from sin, is divinity. What hath the leading of an army to do with forbearing of sin? God hath sorted them together, as we here see. Policy of War and Divinity are not such strangers, one to the other, as that the one must avoid, while the other is in place; but that as loving neighbours and good friends here they meet together, they stand together, they keep time, consequence, and correspondence the one with the other. God Himself, in Whose imperial style so oft proclaimed in the Prophets, they both meet, 'the Lord of Hosts,' 'the Holy One of Israel;'—God, I say, Himself, in the great chapter of War, the twentieth of this book (Deuteronomy), assigneth an employment to the Priests as well as the officers of the camp, even to animate the companies in the Lord, and the power of His might; letting them see the right of their cause, and how ready God is

Hear, O Israel, ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts † faint, fear not, and do not † tremble, neither be ye terrified because of them; ⁴ For the LORD your God is he that goeth with you, ^c to fight for you against your enemies, to save you.

† Heb. be tender.
† Heb. make haste.
c ch. 1. 30. & 3. 22.
Josh. 23. 10.

⁵ And the officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not ^d dedicated it? let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

d See Neh. 12. 27.
Ps. 30. title.

⁶ And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet † eaten of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it.

† Heb. made it common:
see Lev. 19. 23,
24. ch. 28. 30.

⁷ And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her. ⁸ And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, 'What man is there that is fearful and fainthearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart † faint as well as his heart. ⁹ And it shall be, when the officers have made an end of speaking unto the people, that they shall make captains of the armies † to lead the people.

e ch. 24. 5.

f Judg. 7. 3.

† Heb. melt.

¹⁰ When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, ⁸ then proclaim peace unto it. ¹¹ And it shall be, if it make thee answer of peace, and open unto thee, then it shall be, that all the people that is found therein shall be tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee. ¹² And if it will make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it:

† Heb. to be in the head of the people.
g 2 Sam. 20. 18, 20.

¹³ And when the LORD thy God hath delivered it into thine hands, ^h thou shalt smite every male thereof with the edge of the sword: ¹⁴ But the women, and the little ones, and ⁱ the cattle, and all that is in the city, even all the spoil thereof, shalt thou † take unto thyself; and ^k thou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the LORD thy God hath given thee. ¹⁵ Thus shalt thou do unto all the cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the

h Num. 31. 7.

i Josh. 8. 2.

† Heb. spoil.
k Josh. 22. 8.

to receive the right under the banner and power of His protection. And from God Himself, no doubt, was that happy and blessed combination which in most wars of happy success we find, of a Captain and a Prophet sorted together: Joshua with Moses, a Prophet; Barak with Deborah, a prophetess; Ezekias with Essay; Jehoshaphat with Jahaziel; Joash with Elisha; and one of these doing the other no manner of hurt, but good: Joshua lifting up his hand against Amalek; Moses lifting up his hand for Joshua: the one leading against the enemy and annoying him, the other leading against sin and annoying it; against Sin, what some reckon of it, it kills not, but certainly it is the most dangerous enemy both of private persons and of public States" (Bp. Andrewes).

3. let not your hearts faint, fear not] These and the following words are to be applied, in spirit, to the soldiers of the Cross; especially to those who are officers in Christ's army as Bishops and Priests; and they are so applied by St. Paul. Cp. 1 Tim. i. 18; vi. 12. 2 Tim. ii. 4.

5. the officers] The Priest was to be first to speak, to encourage the soldiers to the battle, and after him the officers (Shoterim, xvi. 18), to give exemption to those who, under the influence of worldly allurements, might abate the valour of their comrades.

These Precepts are applicable, in a spiritual sense, to all Christians, who were enlisted under the banner of the Cross at their baptism, and are sent forth as soldiers to fight the Lord's battles in the world. They must surrender all worldly and carnal affections, and follow the Captain of their salvation, and fight manfully for Him. See the exposition of S. Cyril de Ador., lib. v. p. 148, who compares with this law our Lord's parable, describing the invitation to the Marriage Supper, and the hindrances to the acceptance of the invitation, "I have married a wife," &c. (Luke xiv. 20.)

— that hath built a new house] He was allowed a year's reprieve. Joseph., Antt. iv. 8. 41; cp. xxiv. 5.

— hath not dedicated it] which was done not only with the exercise of hospitality, but with praise and thanksgiving to God. (See the title of Psalm xxx., and Bp. Patrick there, and 2 Sam. vi. 20. Selden de Synedrüs, iii. 14, and Parker, Bibl. Bibl. v. p. 373.)

Here is a lesson for Christians as to their own houses.

6. vineyard, and hath not yet eaten of it] which he might not do for three years (Lev. xix. 23).

It has been alleged, that such a precept as this betrays a later age than that of Moses, when the Israelites had no vineyards (Bleek, Colenso, § 731), as if the Divine Legislator did not give laws for the observance of Israel in future ages!

8. shall speak further—What man is there that is fearful and fainthearted?] So Gideon's thirty and two thousand were reduced to three hundred, and by them God overthrew the Midianites (Judg. vii. 3—7. 22).

10. When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight] which they might not do without commission from God (see v. 1). And yet it is said by some, referring to this verse, "It is well, that we are no longer obliged to believe that this frightful command emanated from the mouth of the Holy and Blessed One; according to which any city, which the Israelites might decide for any cause to fight against, if it did not surrender on the very first summons, was to be besieged and captured, and then all the males, except young children, were to be put ruthlessly to death" (Colenso, § 732). The wars of Israel were wars of God. The Lord your God is He that goeth forth with you to fight against your enemies. Their enemies were His. To fight against Israel was to fight against Him. He gave public notice by these Laws what the nations were to expect, if they fought against Him. And by such fearful warnings as these He deterred the Nations from attacking His People, and promoted the maintenance of Peace.

— then proclaim peace unto it] if it be not one of the cities of the seven Nations of Canaan (vv. 15—17).

¹ Num. 31. 2, 3, 35, & 33. 52. ch. 7. 1, 2. ^oosh. 11. 14.

m ch. 7. 4. & 12. 30, 31. & 18. 9.

n Ex. 23. 33.

|| Or, for, O man, the tree of the field is to be employed in the siege.

† Heb. to go from before thee.

† Heb. it come down.

a ch. 10. 8. ¹ Chron. 23. 13. b ch. 17. 8, 9. † Heb. mouth.

cities of these nations. ¹⁶ But ¹ of the cities of these people, which the LORD thy God doth give thee for an inheritance, thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth: ¹⁷ But thou shalt utterly destroy them; namely, the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee: ¹⁸ That ^m they teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods; so should ye ⁿ sin against the LORD your God.

¹⁹ When thou shalt besiege a city a long time, in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an axe against them: for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down (|| for the tree of the field is man's life) † to employ them in the siege: ²⁰ Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat, thou shalt destroy and cut them down; and thou shalt build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee, until † it be subdued.

XXI. ¹ If one be found slain in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath slain him: ² Then thy elders and thy judges shall come forth, and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain: ³ And it shall be, that the city which is next unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke; ⁴ And the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a rough valley, which is neither eared nor sown, and shall strike off the heifer's neck there in the valley: ⁵ And the priests the sons of Levi shall come near; for ^a them the LORD thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the LORD; and ^b by their † word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried: ⁶ And all the elders of that city, that are next unto the

17. thou shalt utterly destroy them] For the reasons of this command, see above on Gen. xv. 16; and below, xxxi. 3; and Introduction to Joshua.

It has been supposed by some of the Hebrew Expositors that it was competent, even to the nations of Canaan, to have capitulated to Joshua, and to have been preserved from extermination; and that the difference between them and other Nations was this, that they were to be attacked and extirpated unless they submitted of their own accord; but that Israel was bound to make overtures of peace to other Nations. See Maimonides on Melach. vi. 4, 5; cp. Josh. xi. 19, 20. And this opinion has been adopted by Grotius, de Jure Bell. ii. 12; Selden de Jure Hebr. vi. 12, and many others (see Bp. Patrick on v. 17; and Graves on the Pentateuch, Part iii. Lect. i. pp. 193—196, note, who inclines to that view). The history of the Gibeonites (Josh. ix.) seems to contravene it. At the same time it may be said, that the Gibeonites asked for more than peace from Israel; they desired and obtained a league (Josh. ix. 6. 11. 15); and Joshua seems to have thought himself bound to defend them (Josh. x. 6—9); and the case of Rahab shows that they who profited by what was known in Canaan of God's dealings with Israel, and believed, were received into communion with Israel (Josh. vi. 25); and in Josh. xi. 19 it seems to be implied that even those cities might have had "peace with the children of Israel" if they had surrendered themselves to Joshua, and "not come out against him to battle."

19. thou shalt not destroy] Literally, thou shalt not spoil.

— thou mayest eat (or, thou shalt eat)—[for the tree of the field is man's life) to employ them in the siege] A difficult passage; perhaps the true meaning is this: Thou art engaged, it may be, in besieging a city; and thou art wearied with the siege, which has lasted for a long time; yet do not be thereby tempted to cut down the fruit-trees, for thou shalt eat of them; they shall help thee to continue the siege, and to bring it to a successful issue: and in this way, by supplying food, these fruit-trees will be of much more use than they would be by being used as timber in the siege; for the timber of trees is of little use, if men faint in the siege for want of food, and cannot, therefore, use the timber of the trees for any good effect. The literal translation is this—When thou shalt besiege a city for many days in fighting against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees by forcing an axe against them: for thou shalt eat of them and shalt not cut them down, for man (the original has the definitive article—ha-adam) is the tree of the field (so Aben Ezra: cp. Schultz, p. 536), to go from thy face to the siege—that is, man, fed and strengthened by the fruit-trees, can go from thy face to the siege, and take the city, which the trees without man's help cannot do, and he cannot help if he have not food. Man's life depends on the fruits of the earth; he is in a certain sense identified with them; and therefore injury to the fruits of the earth is injury to thyself.

This interpretation is confirmed by what follows:—Thou mayest cut down the trees which are not fruit-trees, and make use of them for timber in the siege. Other interpretations may be seen in Sept., Fulg., Syriac, Arabic, Onkelos, who understand it either as a negative, or a question: "the trees are not as a man that they can come and fight against thee, or flee from thee." Cp. Bp. Patrick here, and Parker, Bibl. v. p. 371, note; and Keil, p. 487.

CH. XXI. 3. an heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke] A victim to bear the sin of the people, and, like the red heifer, which had not borne a yoke, a type of Christ, the true Sacrifice: see Num. xix. 2.

4. a rough valley] Heb. nachal eythan; properly, a bourne that is perennial, perhaps overflowing with water (Gesen. 41, and Keil, 489); and this may have been chosen as emblematic of the cleansing which was required for the murder. The stream itself would have a voice, and ever say, "Wash you, make you clean" (Isa. i. 15).

The rendering rough is authorized by Sept., Fulg., and other Versions; and it may be referred to the same root (yathan), which signifies continuance. The valley is rough with rocks, which remain firm and solid without change. There would be something of dreary wildness in this characteristic, which might have a moral use.

— neither eared (ploughed) nor sown] The place where the remembrance of blood is, is not suited for cultivation and joy, but for sorrow and awe, and penitential desolation: it is an Aceldama.

slain man, ^c shall wash their hands over the heifer that is beheaded in the valley: ⁷ And they shall answer and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it. ⁸ Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy people Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, ^d and lay not innocent blood † unto thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them. ⁹ So ^e shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

¹⁰ When thou goest forth to war against thine enemies, and the LORD thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive, ¹¹ And seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldest have her to thy wife; ¹² Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house; and she shall shave her head, and † pare her nails; ¹³ And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and † bewail her father and her mother a full month: and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife. ¹⁴ And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money, thou shalt not make merchandise of her, because thou hast ^e humbled her.

¹⁵ If a man have two wives, one beloved, ^h and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the firstborn son be hers that was hated: ¹⁶ Then it shall be, ⁱ when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved firstborn before the son of the hated, which is indeed the firstborn: ¹⁷ But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the firstborn, ^k by giving him a double portion of all † that he hath: for he is ^l the beginning of his strength; ^m the right of the firstborn is his.

¹⁸ If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them: ¹⁹ Then shall his father and his mother lay

^c See Ps. 19. 12. & 26. 6. Matt. 27. 24.

^d Jonah 1. 14. † Heb. in the midst. ^e ch. 19. 13.

‡ Or, suffer to grow. † Heb. make, or dress.

^f See Ps. 45. 10.

^g Gen. 34. 2. ch. 22. 29. ^h Judg. 19. 24. ⁱ Gen. 29. 33.

^j 1 Chron. 5. 2. & 26. 10. ^k 2 Chron. 11. 19, 22.

^l See 1 Chron. 5. 1. † Heb. that is found with him. ^m Gen. 49. 3. ⁿ Gen. 25. 31, 33.

10.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, as read in the Synagogue, and extends to xxv. 19. The parallel Proper Lesson from the Prophets is Isa. liv. 1—10, where the Prophet speaks of the Church as a Wife,—“Thy Maker is thine Husband: the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth.” The propriety of this selection is obvious.

11. And seest among the captives a beautiful woman] It is to be observed, that these precepts (which have been censured by some as inconsistent with Divine Wisdom and Goodness, Colenso, § 736) proceed on the supposition that the captive woman who is brought home into the house, is to become a wife, and consequently to be admitted into the blessed privileges of the covenant—as Rahab was (Josh. vi. 25): see Schultz, p. 545.

The ceremonial here prescribed, which was like a purification from Gentilism (ep. Lev. xiv. 8. Num. viii. 7), would also be a test of the sincerity of the affection of the Israelite for her, as depriving her of some of the external ornaments of beauty, especially her hair; and if after the month's delay his affection remained unimpaired, then she was to become his wife. If after this probation his love for her had passed away, and he did not desire to take her to wife, then he must let her go free, because he had humbled her—that is (as Abarbanel explains it), had held out to her expectations of marriage, and had shaven her head, and then refused to marry her. The Hebrew verb here rendered to humble, is amar, to treat, as a master does a slave: see xxiv. 7. Gesen. 640.

Surely such a law as this may rather be described as a salutary check to the passions of the Hebrew soldier.

Those critics who censure these precepts as not compatible with “Divine Wisdom and Goodness,” may be desired to consider the merciful consideration of this code, even for animals (xxii. 1—4. 6; xxv. 4), and for the poor and strangers (xxiii. 19—22), and for enemies (xxii. 27).

The ancient Fathers apply this law in a spiritual sense also. The Church of Christ is brought out of captivity from her father's house in heathenism (cp. Ps. xlv. 10); and after being purified, she is espoused to Christ as a chaste Virgin (2 Cor. xi. 2). Such is the case with every Christian soul rescued from the world, and joined to Christ in Baptism; but let it fear, lest He have no delight in it, and put it from Him for sin. See the interesting exposition of S. Cyril. Alex., Glaphyr. in Deut. p. 415; and Bede, Quaest. 18.

Origen (in Levit., Hom. 7), and after him S. Jerome, happily apply this law to the consecration of Heathen Literature to Christian uses: see S. Jerome's Epist. 84, ad Magnum; and his Epist. 146, ad Damasum, and ad Pammachium. “If,” says he in the first-named Epistle, “an Israelite wished to marry a heathen wife, she was first to be purified by certain ceremonial rites; so if I, on account of her fair endowments, wish to raise profane Learning from the state of a Captive to that of a Mother in Israel, shall I be reproved, when thus the family of Christ upon earth may be enlarged?”

The objections raised by some against this Law have been well refuted by Schultz, pp. 544—546.

15. If a man have two wives] not that God approves this (cp. Gen. ii. 24; iv. 19. Matt. xix. 4, 5), but controls it: see xxiv. 1.

17. a double portion] See on Gen. xlix. 3.

18. rebellious] Heb. moreh. Cp. i. 26. 43; ix. 7. 23, 24. Cp. Matt. v. 22, where the connexion with the Greek μωπέ is observable.

19. his father and his mother] both parents; one is not enough; neither the father without the mother, nor the mother without the father. If the one parent is immoderately angry against the child, the other parent ought to intercede for him (Origen).

hold on him, and bring him out unto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place; ²⁰ And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice; he is a glutton, and a drunkard. ²¹ And all the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die: ⁿ so shalt thou put evil away from among you; ^o and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

²² And if a man have committed a sin ^p worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree: ²³ ^q His body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day; (for he that is hanged is [†] accursed of God;) that ^s thy land be not defiled, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

n ch. 13. 5. & 19.
19, 20. & 22. 21,
24.
o ch. 13. 11.
p ch. 19. 6. & 22.
26.
Acts 23. 29. & 25.
11, 25. & 26. 31.
q Josh. 8. 29. &
10. 26, 27.
John 19. 31.
r Gal. 3. 13.
† Heb. the curse of God: see
Num. 25. 4.
2 Sam. 21. 6.

s Lev. 18. 25. Num. 35. 34.

20. glutton] Heb. zolel, from the verb zalal, to shake (cp. Greek σαλεύω), to pour out, to squander; hence it signifies a prodigal, one who squanders his substance on his own lusts, an ἄσωτος: see Luke xv. 13. Cp. Prov. xxiii. 20. Gesen. 246.

— a drunkard] Heb. sobé, from the verb saba, to gulp down (cp. Engl. sup). Cp. Prov. xxiii. 20, 21. Gesen. 576.

22. a sin worthy of death] Literally, a sin of the judgment of death.

— and he be to be put to death] Observe, according to Hebrew usage, the malefactor was put to death first, and hanged on a tree afterwards: see Maimon. in Sanhed. xv. 6; and above on Num. xxv. 4.

— thou hang him on a tree] not on a living tree, growing in the earth, but on dead timber (Maimon. in Sanhedrim. xv. 6), that there may not be any need of cutting it down, “for the tree is to be buried with him who hangs upon it.” Hence this precept is applicable to hanging by Crucifixion, though that punishment was not a Jewish one, but a Roman; and these words are very applicable to Him whom “they slew and hanged on a tree,” ξύλον (the word used here by the Septuagint, and adopted in Acts v. 30; x. 39; xiii. 29; xvi. 24), and “who bare our sins in His own body on the tree” (1 Pet. ii. 24), that tree which is dead, lifeless timber to the unbelieving, but to all true Israelites is no other than the “tree of life” (ξύλον ζωῆς, Rev. xxii. 2. 14. 19).

23. His body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day] Cp. Josephus, Ant. iv. 8. 24,—“Let him be carried outside the city and stoned, and let him remain all day as a spectacle to all, and be buried at night;” and cp. Josh. viii. 29; x. 26.

This burial of Him who was hanged on a tree was for the abolition of the curse from the Holy Land, which was defiled by the body hanging on the tree upon the earth.

This was a foreshadowing of the burial of Our Lord’s Body on the same day that it was hanged on the tree (see John xix. 31. 38. 42). By that burial the curse due to our sins was abolished, and hidden from God’s sight. The fulfilment of this precept in Christ’s case was very remarkable. Crucifixion was a Roman punishment; and, according to Roman usage, the bodies of those who were crucified were not taken down at all and buried, but were left to feed the fowls of the air,—“pascet in cruce corvos” (Ihor., 1 Epist. xvi. 48; and see below, note on Gal. iii. 13, pp. 59, 60).

All this was ordered by the controlling Providence of God, to show His own divine working in the death of Christ, and to assure us of our own redemption thereby.

— for he that is hanged is accursed of God] Literally, as it is in the original, for he that is hanged is a curse of God. St. Paul adopts these words (Gal. iii. 13), and applies them to Christ, who was “made a curse for us;” and who thus “redeemed us from the curse of the Law,” not only dying for our sins, but suffering that particular kind of death, which the Law had specified as that of those who were under a curse of God. He summed up all Mankind in Himself, being the second Adam, and by being “in the likeness of sinful flesh” (Rom. viii. 3), and yet perfectly sinless, He paid a sufficient penalty, and made adequate satisfaction, for the sins of all whom He represented, by shedding His own most precious blood (and “without shedding of blood is no remission,” Heb. ix. 22), and “bare our sins in His own body on the tree” (1 Pet. ii. 24), and took them upon Himself, and took away from us the curse of the Law, under which all Mankind lay for disobedience; and by His perfect obedience in our nature, presented us in a state of acceptability with God, and became the “Lord our Righteousness,” in whom we are justified before Him; and He removed from us the ban, which said, “Cursed is he that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the Law to do them” (Gal. iii. 10. Deut. xxvii. 26).

For an answer to the Manichæan objections to this doctrine, see Epiphanius, Hær. 66. S. Aug. c. Faust. xiv. 6; and in Ps. 37; and on this subject see Justin Martyr c. Tryphon. § 89. 96. S. Jerome in Gal. c. iii. S. Cyril, Hom. in Fest. Palmarum, p. 396; and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, p. 207, Art. iv.; and the notes below on Gal. iii. 13.

The following remarks are from S. Cyril and S. Jerome:—S. Cyril of Alexand. thus writes (Hom. on Palm Sunday): “Man alone could not save or redeem us. Moses, or some other of the Prophets, might have been willing to lay down his life for our salvation, but they themselves were all under the debt and demerit of sin. Our ransom therefore was absolutely impracticable without the proper and substantial union of the two natures in one person, and the dying of that person in our stead. Even the divinity itself unincarnate could not have effected this great and most gracious work. He suffered, and He did not suffer. As on the one side we may not impute mortality and suffering to the LOGOS, or WORD; so on the other side we are not to separate in the person of Christ the WORD from the FLESH. What I affirm is, that the WORD abides united with the HUMAN NATURE, yet that it did not suffer with it. Into his divinity the iron of the nails did not enter, which entered into his hands and feet; the LOGOS was united with the body of Christ in His burial, but did not undergo the pains of death with it; it accompanied it in the grave, though it was not confined or circumscribed there; the soul of Christ was separated from the body by death, but neither soul nor body was separated from the LOGOS.”

S. Jerome (on Gal. iii.) says, “It ought not to seem shocking that Christ should become a curse for us; because God, who is said to have made him such, constituted Him sin for us, ‘who yet knew no sin.’ He emptied Himself, exinanivit se, out of the fulness of the Father for the working out of our salvation, and took upon Him the form of a servant. He died, although He was the very Prince and Author of Life. He was the wisdom of God, and yet is called His foolishness (1 Cor. i. 25); and in Ps. lxxix. 5, He speaks thus of Himself, ‘O God, Thou knowest my foolishness, and my sins are not hid from Thee.’ Thus whatever injuries or sorrows eclipsed our Lord, turn to our glory. He died that we might live. He descended into hell that we might ascend up into heaven. He was made foolishness, that we might become wisdom. He emptied Himself of the fulness and form of God, taking upon Him the form of a servant, that the fulness of the Divinity might dwell in us, and we of servants and slaves should become lords. He hanged on a tree, that since we had fallen into sin at the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. He might abolish it by dying on the wood of the cross; whereof we read in Exod. xv. 25, and which was typified by that wood which being cast into Jordan, caused the iron to swim (2 Kings vi. 6). Lastly, this was He that was made a curse for us. Made, I say, not in any sense born so; and for this end, that the blessings which had been promised to Abraham should by means of Him be transferred to the Gentiles; and the promise of the Spirit by faith in Him should be completed in us. This promise carries in it a double construction; as we are to understand it of the gifts and graces in general of the Holy Spirit, and of the spiritual study and interpretation of the Holy Scriptures.”

St. Paul teaches that the Law is “spiritual” (Rom. vii. 14), that it has not only a literal meaning, but a spiritual one; and he teaches us that the Levitical Law, “Thou shalt not

XXII. ¹ Thou ^a shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and ^a Ex. 23. 4. hide thyself from them: thou shalt in any case bring them again unto thy brother. ² And if thy brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not, then thou shalt bring it unto thine own house, and it shall be with thee until thy brother seek after it, and thou shalt restore it to him again. ³ In like manner shalt thou do with his ass; and so shalt thou do with his raiment; and with all lost thing of thy brother's, which he hath lost, and thou hast found, shalt thou do likewise: thou mayest not hide thyself. ⁴ ^b Thou shalt not see ^b Ex. 23. 5. thy brother's ass or his ox fall down by the way, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt surely help him to lift them up again.

⁵ The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so are abomination unto the LORD thy God.

⁶ If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, ^c thou shalt not take the dam with the young: ⁷ But ^c Lev. 22. 23. thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee; ^d that it ^d ch. 4. 40. may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days.

⁸ When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn" (xxv. 4), has a spiritual sense (see 1 Cor. ix. 9. 1 Tim. v. 18), and thus he puts a clue into our hands for the interpretation of this and the following chapter. He instructs us that the precepts, delivered to the literal Israel, have also a moral meaning for Christian Churches and for Christian people, who are the Israel of God; and are to be explained and applied accordingly. See below, on v. 10; and on 1 Cor. x. 6.

Chr. XXII. 1. Thou shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them] How much less from his soul (see James v. 19, 20)! The Son of God died for us, who were all like sheep going astray (1 Pet. ii. 25), and He left the ninety and nine, and came to seek and to save the one that was lost, and laid down His life for it, and bare it on His shoulders rejoicing even on the cross, and has borne it up to heaven in His glorious ascension. There seems, therefore, to be a spiritual connexion in Christ, with this precept and that which has just gone before concerning Him, who became a curse for us, and bare our sins in His own body on the tree (see the foregoing note). Thus from considering the love of Christ for us—love stronger than death—we learn to be tender-hearted, and to love one another (cp. Col. iii. 12, 13).

4. thy brother's ass] Nor even thine enemy's (see Exod. xxiii. 5).

— thou shalt surely help him to lift] More strongly in the original, lifting, thou shalt lift with him; though the animal should fall often, as the Hebrew Expositors explain the words (see Maimon, on Num. xiii. 1).

These precepts, in a spiritual sense, are binding on all. Cp. 1 Thess. v. 14, "Warn the unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men." 2 Thess. iii. 15.

5. The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man] Literally, there shall not be any gear (Heb. cli, vessel, instrument, furniture, raiment,—a very general word; and therefore Sept. has σκεῦν) of a man on a woman: cp. Exod. xxii. 7. Lev. xi. 32; xiii. 49, as to the use of the word. The word for man here is geber, ἄνθρωπος, vir. This is a precept against boldness and effrontery in woman; and against effeminacy in man (see S. Ambrose, Epist. 69, ad Irenæum). It is a precept against all infractions of those Laws which God has established at the creation of Man, and of Woman out of Man; and renewed and reinforced in the Incarnation of Christ, and in the formation of the Church out of Him, and in her subordination to Christ. It is a precept against all confusion of attire of men and women, especially in the Church of God. Cp. notes on 1 Cor. xi. 4—16. 1 Cor. xiv. 34. 1 Tim. ii. 12.

— all that do so are abomination unto the LORD] A solemn warning against such confusion of attire and of functions.

And, in the highest spiritual sense of the word, since the Man is an image of Christ, and the Woman a figure of the Church (as St. Paul teaches, Eph. v. 2—24), how abominable a thing must it be in the sight of God, that a Church should usurp the place and authority of Christ, and set His Laws at defiance, and publish new articles of faith, and propose new objects of worship, as the Church of Rome does at this day! Cp. below, Gal. i. 8, 9; and on Rev. xiii. 15, 17, p. 252.

6. thou shalt not take the dam with the young] Here is the complement to the law in Exod. xxxiv. 26, "Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's milk." See the note there, and cp. Tertullian c. Marcion. ii. 17, on these precepts, as evidences of the tenderness and love of the divine Author of the Levitical Law.

Extreme cruelty is described in Scripture by the phrase, "the mother was dashed in pieces upon her children" (Hos. x. 4). How great therefore must have been the sin, of which Jerusalem was guilty,—that city, which was the beloved city of God,—Who deigned to describe Himself as her husband (Isa. liv. 5),—that city to which Christ said, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not" (Matt. xxiii. 37)!—that He, who so loved her, was constrained in the execution of His righteous judgment upon her, to send the armies of Rome against her, and "lay her even with the ground, and her children within her" (Luke ix. 44)!

Surely here (as S. Chrysostom has observed) is a proof that Jesus of Nazareth was indeed what He professed to be, "the Son of Man"—the Christ; and also the "Son of the living God," co-equal and co-eternal with the Father. If He had not been what He claimed to be, then the rejection and execution of Jesus by the Jews would have been an act well-pleasing to God, as being done in obedience to His Law in this book (xiii. 1—11), and that act would have brought blessings from heaven upon Jerusalem, instead of malediction and desolation; it would have been a new title to divine favour for the Jews, instead of being, as it is, the cause of God's rejection and dispersion of them as outcasts unto this day: see 1 Thess. ii. 15—17.

Observe God's love to us in Christ. He said in the Law here, "Thou shalt not take the dam with the young." Christ compares Himself in the Gospel to the Dam sheltering her brood under her wings (Matt. xxiii. 37). He died for us. The Bird died for the sake of its offspring. The Brood was not taken, and the dam saved; no; but the Mother Bird was taken, in order that the brood might live. Christ gave Himself to die for us, who deserved death, and by His death we have everlasting life (Rom. vi. 23). For some other moral inferences from this Law, see S. Cyril de Ador. viii. p. 267.

8. a battlement] Heb. maakeh, from akah, to hold back. Sept. has σφάραγξ, a crown.

thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thine house, if any man fall from thence.

e Lev. 19. 19.
† Heb. fulness of thy seed.

⁹ e Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds: lest the † fruit of thy seed which thou hast sown, and the fruit of thy vineyard, be defiled.

f See 2 Cor. 6. 14, 15, 16.
g Lev. 19. 19.

¹⁰ f Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together. ¹¹ g Thou shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts, as of woollen and linen together.

h Num. 15. 38.
Matt. 23. 5.
† Heb. wings.

¹² Thou shalt make thee ^h fringes upon the four † quarters of thy vesture, wherewith thou coverest thyself.

i Gen. 29. 21.
Judg. 15. 1.

¹³ If any man take a wife, and ⁱ go in unto her, and hate her, ¹⁴ And give occasions of speech against her, and bring up an evil name upon her, and say, I took this woman, and when I came to her, I found her not a maid: ¹⁵ Then shall the father of the damsel, and her mother, take and bring forth the tokens of the damsel's virginity unto the elders of the city in the gate: ¹⁶ And the damsel's father shall say unto the elders, I gave my daughter unto this man to wife, and he hateth her; ¹⁷ And, lo, he hath given occasions of speech against her, saying, I found not thy daughter a maid; and yet these are the tokens of my daughter's virginity. And they shall spread the cloth before the elders of the city. ¹⁸ And the elders of that city shall take that man and chastise him; ¹⁹ And they shall amerce him in an hundred shekels of silver, and give them unto the father of the damsel, because he hath brought up an evil name upon a virgin of Israel: and she shall be his wife; he may not put her away all his days. ²⁰ But if this thing be true, and the tokens of virginity be not found for the damsel: ²¹ Then they shall bring out the damsel to the door of her father's house, and the men of her city shall stone her with stones — for thy roof] Which was flat; an usual place for walking to enjoy the air. 2 Sam. xi. 2: cp. Matt. x. 27. Luke xii. 3.

— that thou bring not blood] By a man's falling unawares from it. Here is a lesson to all, not to put stumbling-blocks in the way of others, particularly of weak brethren, lest they destroy those "for whom Christ died" (see Rom. xiv. 15. 20, 21. 1 Cor. viii. 13: cp. Matt. xviii. 6, 7. Luke xvii. 2). Every man is bound to put a battlement to the roof of his own house,—that is, so to order his own actions, that they may not be an occasion of falling to others. It is not enough that he walks safely himself on his own housetop; he is bound to provide that others may not fall from it. If he does not do this, he brings blood upon his own house.

9. Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds] The Church is God's vineyard (Isa. v. 7. Jer. xii. 10. Matt. xxi. 33. Luke xx. 15). It must not be sown with the tares of false doctrine mingled with the good seed of true. Cp. 2 Cor. vi. 14—18. Hooker, Sermon v. § 7; and see the next note.

10. Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together] That is, with a clean beast and an unclean. St. Paul has given a spiritual interpretation to the Levitical precept,—“Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn,” and has applied it, in two places, to enforce the treatment due to Christ's ministers (1 Cor. ix. 9. 1 Tim. v. 18); and thus he leads us to the inner meaning of this precept;

Thou must not plough in the field of God's Church (Matt. xiii. 24; 1 Cor. iii. 9) with clean and unclean animals unequally yoked together (2 Cor. vi. 14—16)—that is, thou must not endeavour to do God's work, in preaching the Word and ministering the sacraments, by heretical teachers and priests, joined together with those who are sound in doctrine, lest thou produce a confusion in the minds of the people, and tempt them to imagine that Truth is Error, or that Error is Truth; and so produce Indifference and Unbelief. See Clem. Alex., Strom. ii. p. 478. S. Aug. c. Faust. vi. 9. S. Jerome on Esai. i. Cyril. Alex. de Fest. Pasch. p. 225. S. Greg. Mag., Moral. i. 16, quoted in Parker, Bibl. Bibl. v. p. 440. See also Bede, Qu. 6.

The precept in the foregoing verse may be applied to the seed sown in the field of Christ: this refers to those who labour in it.

11. Thou shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts] In our Baptism “we put on the Lord Jesus Christ” (Gal. iii. 27. Rom. xiii. 14. Col. iii. 10), and we must wear the same white robe of His Righteousness (Rev. vi. 11); that robe which is our marriage garment (Matt. xxii. 11), and is described as made of fine linen, clean and white (Rev. xix. 8); and this white robe of linen is not to be mingled with human admixtures of imaginary self-righteousness (Phil. iii. 9). We must walk in white (Rev. iii. 4)—that is, we must not defile the robe of Christ's righteousness, in which we are clothed, by corrupt doctrine or by unholiness of living, but must “adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things,” and be conformed to His likeness.

12. Thou shalt make thee fringes] The fringes are here called gedilim, from gadal, to twist, to twine (Gesen. 159), and are called also tsitsith in Num. xv. 38—40, where see the note on the moral uses of these fringes on the borders of the garments of the literal Israel.

13—21. If any man take a wife] These precepts (which are justly regarded as evidences of the antiquity of this book: see Schultz, p. 561) were delivered for the purpose of protecting the maidens of Israel from the charge of unchastity, on which see the note of Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 163; and Selden, Uxor Hebr. iii. 1, 2; and of punishing them if they were guilty of it.

Surely this law demands our serious consideration. It shows the heinousness of unchastity, in God's sight, even at a time when holiness had not been enforced by all the motives consequent on the Incarnation of the Son of God; the Holy One Himself taking our Nature and consecrating it, and making our bodies to be members of Himself, and temples of the Holy Ghost. See 1 Cor. vi. 15. 19.

And if this is the case with regard to the Body, certainly it is not less so with respect to the Soul; and these precepts declare the duty of Christian Churches and of Christian Souls to keep their plighted troth to Christ, to whom they are espoused; and to take good heed that they be not guilty of conjugal infidelity toward Him, by unsoundness of doctrine, superstitious worship, or by unholiness of life. “So thou shalt put away evil from among you.”

For a spiritual application of these precepts, as inculcating faith, holiness, and love in Christians, see S. Cyril de Ador. viii. pp. 283, 284.

that she die: because she hath ^k wrought folly in Israel, to play the whore in her father's house: ^l so shalt thou put evil away from among you.

^k Gen. 34. 7.
^l Judg. 20. 6, 10.
² Sam. 13. 12, 13.
¹ ch. 13. 5.
^m Lev. 20. 10.
ⁿ John 8. 5.

²² ^m If a man be found lying with a woman married to an husband, then they shall both of them die, both the man that lay with the woman, and the woman: so shalt thou put away evil from Israel. ²³ If a damsel that is a virgin be ⁿ betrothed unto an husband, and a man find her in the city, and lie with her;

ⁿ Matt. 1. 18, 19.

²⁴ Then ye shall bring them both out unto the gate of that city, and ye shall stone them with stones that they die; the damsel, because she cried not, being in the city; and the man, because he hath ^o humbled his neighbour's wife:

^o ch. 21. 14.

^p so thou shalt put away evil from among you.

^p ver. 21, 22.

²⁵ But if a man find a betrothed damsel in the field, and the man || force her, and lie with her: then the man only that lay with her shall die: ²⁶ But unto the damsel thou shalt do nothing; there is in the damsel no sin worthy of death: for as when a man riseth against his neighbour, and slayeth him, even so is this matter: ²⁷ For he found her in the field, and the betrothed damsel cried, and there was none to save her.

|| Or, take strong hold of her, ² Sam. 13. 14.

²⁸ ^q If a man find a damsel that is a virgin, which is not betrothed, and lay hold on her, and lie with her, and they be found; ²⁹ Then the man that lay with her shall give unto the damsel's father fifty shekels of silver, and she shall be his wife; ^r because he hath humbled her, he may not put her away all his days.

^q Ex. 22. 16, 17.

^r ver. 24.

³⁰ ^s A man shall not take his father's wife, nor ^t discover his father's skirt.

^s Lev. 18. 8. & 26
^t 11. ch. 27. 20.

XXIII. ¹ He that is wounded in the stones, or hath his privy member cut off, shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD. ² A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD. ³ ^a An Ammonite or Moabite

¹ Cor. 5. 1.
^t See Ruth 3. 9.
Ezek. 16. 3.

^a Neh. 13. 1, 2

22. If a man be found lying—they shall both of them die] The adulterer and adulteress shall surely be put to death. See Lev. xx. 10.

These precepts have also a spiritual application, as the ancient Fathers observed. The heretical teacher of unsound doctrine is guilty of spiritual fornication; see S. Cyril de Ador. viii. pp. 257—259. How great, observes he, is the guilt of those false Teachers, who corrupt the soul which is espoused in spiritual wedlock to Christ (2 Cor. xi. 2)!

30. A man] See Gen. xlix. 3. 1 Cor. v. 1. This seems to be introduced as a brief memento to the people from the Sacred Lawgiver that they should be careful to observe all those laws against incestuous marriages which he had already delivered in Lev. xviii. and xx.

CH. XXIII. 1. He that is wounded—shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD] Not that they were excluded from becoming proselytes (see Acts viii. 27, and Selden de Jure Nat., v. 16), and from "the privileges of the sanctuary" (as Bp. Coleiso supposes, § 744), but he might not bear any office among the people of God.

God wills what is perfect and sound in His Church. As to the letter, this prohibition is removed in Christ, and there is a promise of grace to all in Him. See the Evangelical Prophecy, Isa. lvi. 3, 4, and the notes below on the history in Acts viii. 27—39.

But still in spirit God mislikes barrenness of the soul: He looks for fruitfulness in good works (John xv. 8). He desires spiritual soundness, and spiritual procreation of a godly seed (Mal. ii. 15), for the increase of the family of the faithful, and for the peopling of heaven with saints (cp. S. Clemens Alex., Strom. iii. 15); as S. Cyril. Alex. (de Ador. xiv. p. 483) observes, God requires in the service of His Church those who have courage, energy, and masculine vigour; and disapproves effeminacy and softness in spiritual things. The Child of the Church is described in the Apocalypse as a male child (Rev. xii. 5), and must endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ (2 Tim. ii. 3).

— or hath] Hence we may explain the difficult passage in Gal. v. 12. The Apostle intimates that false teachers are not deserving of admission into God's household, much less of high places of dignity and trust in it. The rendering of the Sept. here, ἀποκεκομμένος, is the best exposition of St. Paul's word ἀποκόψονται there. Cp. the remarks in the note there, p. 68.

2. A bastard] Heb. mamzer (perhaps from mazar, to separate, to despise; or from zur, a foreigner; cp. Zech. ix. 6; Gesen. 480), one born ἐκ πόρνῆς (Sept.), "de scorto" (Vulg.), or the offspring of any incestuous or adulterous connexion (Maimon.).

For a spiritual application of these prohibitions see S. Cyril. Alex. de Ador. xiv. p. 183. God desires to have in the service of His Church those who are endued with an ingenuous temper, and liberal disposition, and noble aspirations; and He hates what is spurious, and adulterated, and mean.

It has been objected by some, that these precepts are chargeable with partiality; that they press heavily on those who suffer injury inflicted by others, but that they do not impose penalties on those who inflicted the injuries. But there are other punishments in the Mosaic Law against mutilation (see Exod. xxi. 24; Lev. xxiv. 20) and against adultery (Lev. xx. 10); and these injunctions themselves are warnings against these sins; and they suggest a belief in another dispensation, and in a future state, when all will be equitably dealt with.

3. An Ammonite or Moabite] See Neh. xiii. 1, 2. Ezra ix. 1, 2. An Israelite might marry a Moabitess, if she were converted to the true faith, as is evident from the case of Ruth (Ruth i. 14—16), whose name is in the genealogy of Christ (Matt. i. 5).

Here is an intimation of the transitory and provisional character of the Law, and of the fulfilment of the divine promise to Abraham, the father of Israel, that in his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed (Gen. xii. 3; xxviii. 4). By this Levitical Law, the descendants of Abraham's nephew Lot were excluded from offices in the commonwealth of the literal Israel for ever. This exclusion shows that the Levitical Law was not the fulfilment of God's promise to Abraham; yet the Levitical Law was from God. What then was its purpose? To prepare Israel for the Gospel, to be a schoolmaster to lead them to Christ (Gal. iii. 24).

This precept may also be applied spiritually. The Ammonites and Moabites represent those who impede the Church in her shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to their tenth generation shall they not enter into the congregation of the LORD for ever: ⁴ ^b Because they met you not with bread and with water in the way, when ye came forth out of Egypt; and ^c because they hired against thee Balaam the son of Beor of Pethor of Mesopotamia, to curse thee. ⁵ Nevertheless the LORD thy God would not hearken unto Balaam; but the LORD thy God turned the curse into a blessing unto thee, because the LORD thy God loved thee. ⁶ ^d Thou shalt not seek their peace nor their † prosperity all thy days for ever. ⁷ Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite; ^e for he is thy brother: thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian; because ^f thou wast a stranger in his land. ⁸ The children that are begotten of them shall enter into the congregation of the LORD in their third generation.

⁹ When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing. ¹⁰ ^g If there be among you any man, that is not clean by reason of uncleanness that chanceth him by night, then shall he go abroad out of the camp, he shall not come within the camp: ¹¹ But it shall be, when evening † cometh on, ^h he shall wash himself with water: and when the sun is down, he shall come into the camp again. ¹² Thou shalt have a place also without the camp, whither thou shalt go forth abroad: ¹³ And thou shalt have a paddle upon thy weapon; and it shall be, when thou † wilt ease thyself abroad, thou shalt dig therewith, and shalt turn back and cover that which cometh from thee: ¹⁴ For the LORD thy God ⁱ walketh in the midst of thy camp, to deliver thee, and to give up thine enemies before thee; therefore march to her heavenly Canaan, and endeavour to injure her by hiring Balaams—false prophets and false teachers—against her (S. Cyril de Ador. xiv. pp. 483—486).

^{4. they met you not with bread and with water}] See above, on ii. 29.

— ^{they hired}] The Moabite hired, as had before been related (Num. xxii. xxiii.). On this use of the plural, see Matt. ii. 20; and for the application of this use to the history of the malefactors at the Crucifixion, see Matt. xxvii. 44, compared with Luke xxiii. 39.

^{6. Thou shalt not seek their peace}] but if they offer peace it is to be accepted (Maimonides on Kings, vi. 6).

^{7. Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite} (the posterity of Esau, Gen. xxv. 25—30); ^{for he is thy brother} (cp. Num. xx. 14. Amos i. 11. Obad. 10. 12)] On account of which natural alliance, though they had acted in a hostile spirit to Israel, yet God would have them treated with kindness.

Hence it is evident, that Israel was not encouraged to harbour a vindictive spirit against other Nations, but the contrary; and the foregoing precepts proceed from the principles of Divine Justice, which acts by means of human instruments. This is further evident from what follows.

Here also we have an argument against those who assert that Deuteronomy is the fabrication of a writer who lived in an age posterior to Moses. It is not at all likely that, with the national enmity of Israel against Edom, any Jew, wishing to gain currency among the Israelites for his work, would have spoken thus kindly of the Edomites, their bitterest enemies.

— ^{thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian}] Though he oppressed thee for many years with hard bondage, and endeavoured to destroy thee, yet thou shalt remember that in the days of the elder Pharaoh, his country harboured thee and thy fathers, and treated thee hospitably; and even when thou camest forth out of Egypt, many Egyptians loaded thy fathers with presents. Let former kindnesses be remembered, and past injuries be forgotten.

^{8. in their third generation}] God thus shows that He regards Nations as having a corporate existence, and deals with them according to their national acts. Egypt was to be kindly dealt with, for its past favours to Israel, much more kindly than Ammon or Moab; but not so kindly as other Nations which had not injured Israel at all: or who had not been guilty of such abominations for many generations as defiled the seven Nations of Canaan.

^{9. When the host goeth forth against thine enemies}] See above, xx. 1; and Bp. Andrewes' Sermon on this text, vol. i. p. 321. God, who is the Lord of battles, and walks in the midst of camps (v. 14), specially designed that the soldier's life should be a holy and religious one; a life of warfare against spiritual enemies. Our sins of unholliness make our enemies powerful against us (see v. 14). When there was an Achan in the host, even Joshua was defeated; and when Hophni and Phinehas were in the army of Israel, the Ark of God was taken. And if this was the case in the days of the literal Israel, how much more in those of the Christian Church, where every one who is baptized is signed with the cross of Christ, "that he may manfully fight under His banner against sin, the world, and the devil!" And so the following precept may be spiritualized in the language of the Apostle, "Dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God" (2 Cor. vii. 1).

This is enlarged upon with much elegance and beauty by S. Cyril. Alex., Glaphyr. in Deut. pp. 423, 424.

^{10. of uncleanness that chanceth}] "Qui nocturno pollutus sit somnio" (Vulg.).

^{12. a place}] Literally, a hand, "ad requisita naturæ" (Vulg.).

For a reply to the objections raised on this passage, as to the improbability of going outside the camp for the purpose here mentioned, see Dr. Benisch on Colenso, p. 10. The Legislator is not speaking of the march in the wilderness, but of a march in an enemy's country.

^{13. a paddle}] πᾶσσαλος (Sept.), "paxillus" (Vulg.), an instrument wherewith to dig a hole in the earth; υπον = beside.

— ^{weapon}] Hebr. azen, from azan to be sharp (Gesen. 26). The Sept. and Vulg. render it a belt. Many MSS. read this word in the plural, and then the meaning will be, "thou shalt have a spade or trowel among thy weapons" (Gesen.).

— ^{cover that which cometh}] This text may serve to explain Mark vii. 19—23. Excrementa purgabant cibos; idè ipsa sunt immunda.

^{14. the LORD thy God walketh in the midst of thy camp}] The Lord Christ dwelleth and walketh in the midst of us, and preaches to us all, "Be ye holy, for I am holy" (S. Cyril, Glaph. p. 424). He walks ever in the midst of the Golden Candlesticks, which are the Churches, and observes whether they burn brightly, with purity of doctrine and holiness of life (Rev. i. 13).

shall thy camp be holy: that he see no † unclean thing in thee, and turn away from thee. † Heb. nakedness of any thing.

¹⁵ ^k Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant which is escaped from his master unto thee: ¹⁶ He shall dwell with thee, even among you, in that place which he shall choose in one of thy gates, where it † liketh him best: ¹ thou shalt not oppress him. † Heb. is good for him.
1 Sam. 30. 15.
1 Ex. 22. 21.

¹⁷ There shall be no † whore ^m of the daughters of Israel, nor ⁿ a sodomite of the sons of Israel. ¹⁸ Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore, or the price of a dog, into the house of the LORD thy God for any vow: for even both these are abomination unto the LORD thy God. † Or, sodomites.
In Lev. 19. 29.
See Prov. 2. 16.
n Gen. 19. 5.
2 Kings 23. 7.

¹⁹ ^o Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother; usury of money, usury of victuals, usury of any thing that is lent upon usury: ²⁰ ^p Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury; but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: ^q that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all that thou settest thine hand to in the land whither thou goest to possess it. o Ex. 22. 25.
Lev. 25. 36, 37.
Neh. 5. 2, 7.
Ps. 15. 5.
Luke 6. 34, 35.
p See Lev. 19. 34.
& ch. 15. 3.
q ch. 15. 10.

²¹ ^r When thou shalt vow a vow unto the LORD thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the LORD thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee. ²² But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee. r Num. 30. 2.
Eccles. 5. 4, 5.

²³ ^s That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform; even a freewill offering, according as thou hast vowed unto the LORD thy God, which thou hast promised with thy mouth. s Num. 30. 2.
Ps. 66. 13, 14.

²⁴ When thou comest into thy neighbour's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill at thine own pleasure; but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel.

15. Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant] Literally, thou shalt not shut, i. e. into the hand of his master. David seems to have acted upon this law in the case of the Egyptian slave of the Amalekite (1 Sam. xxx. 11. 15). The Hebrew Expositors say that the slave who fled from Gentiles to Israel, and to religious communion with the people of God, was to be received and protected; and measures were to be taken with his master on the one hand, that he would write a bill of manumission of the slave; and on the other hand, the slave was required to give a bond that he would pay his master the price at which he was valued, in order that his master might not suffer loss (Maimonides on Slaves, viii. 10, 11).

St. Paul seems to have acted in the spirit of this law in his own dealings with Philemon in behalf of his runaway slave Onesimus. See Philem. 18, and the Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 335, 336.

Here was foreshadowed the genuine spiritual liberty from the bondage of sin; that liberty which is offered to all in the Church of Christ. See Gal. iii. 28. 1 Cor. vii. 22.

17. whore] Kedeshah (see above, on Gen. xxxviii. 21). Here fornication is expressly forbidden (Augustine, Qu. 37). How different is the Law of Moses in this respect from all human codes! See below, on Acts xv. 20.

— sodomite] Heb. Kadesh: these two words reveal the depth of the iniquity to which the Nations of the world were then sunk; words expressive of consecration were applied by them to those who were guilty of deadly sin. They show that deadly sin was itself a trade, and was even regarded as a sacred ministry to those unclean deities, who had supplanted the true God in the hearts of His reasonable creatures. Cp. Gesen., p. 725.

18. Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore] A lesson to Christians that they should be scrupulous as to the means they use for promoting works of piety. Cp. Isa. lxi. 8, "I hate robbery for burnt-offering."

In such a case as that supposed, the richer the offering, the greater the abomination: see Isa. i. 11; and S. Greg. Nyss. de Orat. Dom. 4. God forbids such offerings, lest men should imagine them to be expiatory for sin, says S. Augustine, Qu. 38. A remarkable observation, and a wholesome caution to some Christian Churches.

— of a dog] Supposed by some to be an unclean person, "Cruædus," the Kadesh of v. 17. So Knobel and Keil. Cp. Phil. iii. 2. Rev. xxii. 15. And this may seem to be confirmed by what follows, "both these are abomination;" but perhaps the literal interpretation, authorized by all the ancient Expositors, ought to be maintained; and the sinfulness of harlotry is forcibly displayed by this union of a harlot in the same sentence with an unclean and shameless animal: see S. Jerome in Isa. lxi.

19. usury] neshec, from nashac, to bite. Cp. δάκνεσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν χρεῶν, Aristoph., Nub. i. 12; and "usura vorax," Lucan, Phars. i. 171.

As to the lawfulness of Usury among Christians see below, Matt. xxv. 27. The etymology of the word throws some light on that question. The lending of money so as to bite the creditor by usurious rates of interest, is clearly forbidden; but the lending of money at a lawful and easy rate, so as to help a brother by the loan, does not seem to fall within the scope of the prohibition. At the same time, the lending of money without interest, and the bestowal of it as a gift, and the lending of it thereby to God, and the laying up of treasure in heaven, is the traffic commended in the Gospel, and in the Law understood spiritually (Luke vi. 34. Rom. xii. 13. 1 Tim. vi. 18, 19. Cp. S. Ambrose in Tobiam, c. 14).

21. When thou shalt vow a vow] See Acts v. 1—4, on the case of Ananias and Sapphira.

24. When thou comest] either as a labourer in the vineyard, or as a traveller led by thine occasions to pass that way; which seems to be expressed by the Evangelists describing the journey of our Lord and His disciples through the corn-fields, who ate the corn on the spot, being not allowed by the Law to carry any away. See on Matt. xii. 1. Mark ii. 23. Luke vi. 1. Cp. S. Augustine's remarks, c. Faust. xvi. 28.

— at thine own pleasure] Literally, according to thine own soul; that is, thou mayest not take any away, so as to satisfy any one else. On these Laws, see Maimonides, as quoted by Ainsworth, pp. 103, 104.

— but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel] S. Cyril complains that, in his own days, Reporters came into churches and took down sermons delivered extemporaneously, and published them, without being revised by the Preacher (S. Cyril de Adorat. viii. 267). Let them come (he says) into the vineyard of the Church, and eat grapes there to their fill at their own pleasure; but let them not put them into their own vessel, and carry them away to market for their own gain. Might not this text be thus applied to some in our own age?

t Matt. 12. 1.
Mark 2. 23.
Luke 6. 1.

²⁵ When thou comest into the standing corn of thy neighbour, 'then thou mayest pluck the ears with thine hand; but thou shalt not move a sickle unto thy neighbour's standing corn.

a Matt. 5. 31. &
19. 7.
Mark 10. 4.
† Heb. matter of nakedness.
† Heb. cutting off.

XXIV. ¹ When a ^a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found † some uncleanness in her: then let him write her a bill of † divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house. ² And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife. ³ And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and giveth it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife; ⁴ ^b Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before the Lord: and thou shalt not cause the land to sin, which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

b Jer. 3. 1.

c ch. 20. 7.
† Heb. not any thing shall pass upon him.
d Prov. 5. 18.

⁵ ^c When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, † neither shall he be charged with any business: but he shall be free at home one year, and shall ^d cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

⁶ No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge: for he taketh a man's life to pledge.

e Ex. 21. 16.

⁷ ^e If a man be found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel,

CH. XXIV. 1. some uncleanness] Literally, nakedness of a thing; that is, as the Sept. expresses it, ἀρχηρον πράγμα. The Hebrew Expositors differ as to the meaning of this term. The School of Hillel interpreted it laxly, as Josephus does (Ant. iv. 8. 23), and as the Pharisees did in our Lord's age (Matt. xix. 3); but the School of Schammai, with more reason, restrained it to some act of unchastity. Cp. xxiii. 14. See Maimon. on Divorce, c. 21. Buxtorf de Sponsal. et Divort. § 88. Selden, Uxor Hebr. iii. 18—20. See below on Matt. v. 31; xix. 3.

— then let him write] Rather, and if he have written,—and given.

— a bill of divorcement] Literally, a writing of cutting off, the form of which may be seen in Ainsworth, p. 105; or in the edition of the Mishna by Surenhusius, iii. p. 322. Lightfoot, Horæ Hebr. on Matt. v. 31; and Buxtorf, Synag. Jud. c. 40, p. 644.

This permission was extorted by the revengeful and cruel temper of the Hebrew Nation, and was given as a remedy against a greater evil; and in this permission itself there were divine conditions here specified, which were designed to be restraints on Divorce. See Augustine c. Faust. xix. 26; and Isidor. Pelusiot., Epist. iii. 76.

Almighty God, as we know from Christ Himself (in Matt. xix. 3—8), hates Divorce; and the permission here given by Moses was a proof “of the hardness of the hearts” of His people, who would have got rid of their wives by murder, if they had not been permitted to put them away by divorce; and this requirement, that the husband should not put away his wife without previously writing a bill of divorce, which he put into her own hand, in the presence of witnesses, and in which the cause of the divorce was specified, with some other conditions, was itself designed to prevent divorces, by giving the husband time for his passion to cool, and to reflect maturely and deliberately before he put away his wife; and the wife would be also on her guard against giving to her husband any cause for putting her away; for, if she were put away, her shame would be published in a document, attested by witnesses, and would remain on record against her.

The children also, if she had any, would be a check and a restraint to her; and they would remonstrate with their father, and endeavour to deter him from putting their mother to shame. The Jews are very solicitous about these bills of divorce, but seem to think little of their own divorce from God (Buxtorf).

². And when she is departed] Rather, and if she has departed and has become another man's wife.

⁴. Her former husband—may not take her again] Here is another restraint of Divorce. The husband would seriously consider, before he put away his wife, perhaps the mother of his children; for if he put her away once, he could never have her for his wife again. And here also was a check upon the wife, that she should not give any occasion to her husband to desire to put her away. And if she had any children, they would expostulate with their father, and try to restrain him from separating himself from his wife, which would involve perpetual severance of the children from the mother.

Thus the Levitical Law was like a bridle in the mouth of the Hebrew Nation; and it prepared them to receive the Law of Christ, which declared, that whosoever putteth away his wife, except for fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever marieth a woman that is put away, committeth adultery (Matt. v. 32; xix. 9); and “whosoever putteth away his wife, and marieth another, committeth adultery against her” (Mark x. 11).

Here was God's love made manifest. Although the Hebrew Church had been guilty of spiritual adultery against Him, yet He invited her to return to Him. Jer. iii. 1. Hos. ii. 2. 19; iii. 1. 5. On the case of David taking back Michal, see 2 Sam. iii. 14, 15.

⁵. When a man hath taken a new wife] This precept is applied by the Christian Fathers in a spiritual sense, as declaring that due allowance should be made for human weakness; and that heavy burdens are not to be imposed upon those who have not strength to bear them. New wine must be put into new bottles (Matt. ix. 17). This principle actuated the Apostles at the Council of Jerusalem: see Acts xv. 28; and it would have been well for Christendom, if it had been constantly before the eyes of those in authority in the Church, who have sometimes imitated the Pharisees (Matt. xxiii. 4), and not followed the example of Christ (John xvi. 12). See S. Cyril de Ador. v. 153.

— shall cheer up his wife] God in His law is tender-hearted towards women, although in the same code He is severe against their sins.

⁶. the nether—millstone] Rather, the two millstones, which make the handmill (Exod. xi. 5. Num. xi. 8. Isa. xlvii. 2): μύλον, Sept.

— or the upper millstone] Literally, the chariot, or rider upon the lower stone. Cp. Job xxii. 6. Prov. xx. 16; xxii. 17. Amos ii. 8.

They could not grind without both millstones (says Origen, p. 391); and none (he adds) can grind spiritual food with one Testament: we need both Testaments. The Jews have only one, and therefore cannot feed on the bread of life.

⁷. If a man be found stealing] See Exod. xxi. 16. 1 Tim. i. 9, 10.

Those heretical teachers, who make merchandise of men's souls, leading them into the captivity of false doctrines, are subject to the sentence pronounced in this law. S. Cyril de Ador. viii. 255.

and maketh merchandise of him, or selleth him; then that thief shall die; and thou shalt put evil away from among you.

⁸ Take heed in ⁸ the plague of leprosy, that thou observe diligently, and do according to all that the priests the Levites shall teach you: as I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do. ⁹ ^h Remember what the LORD thy God did ¹ unto Miriam by the way, after that ye were come forth out of Egypt.

¹⁰ When thou dost [†] lend thy brother any thing, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge. ¹¹ Thou shalt stand abroad, and the man to whom thou dost lend shall bring out the pledge abroad unto thee. ¹² And if the man be poor, thou shalt not sleep with his pledge: ¹³ ^k In any case thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down, that he may sleep in his own raiment, and ¹ bless thee: and ^m it shall be righteousness unto thee before the LORD thy God.

¹⁴ Thou shalt not ⁿ oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy, whether he be of thy brethren, or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates: ¹⁵ At his day ^o thou shalt give him his hire, neither shall the sun go down upon it; for he is poor, and [†] setteth his heart upon it: ^p lest he cry against thee unto the LORD, and it be sin unto thee.

¹⁶ ^q The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

¹⁷ ^r Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger, nor of the fatherless; ^s nor take the widow's raiment to pledge: ¹⁸ But ^t thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee thence: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

¹⁹ ^u When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow: that the LORD thy God may ^a bless thee in all the work of thine hands. ²⁰ When thou beatest thine olive tree, [†] thou shalt not go over the boughs again: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow. ²¹ When thou gatherest the grapes of thy vineyard, thou shalt not glean it [†] afterward: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow. ²² And ^v thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

f ch. 19. 19.

g Lev. 13. 2. & 14. 2.

h See Luke 17. 32. 1 Cor. 10. 6.

i Num. 12. 10.

† Heb. lend the loan of any thing lo, &c.

k Ex. 22. 26.

l Job 29. 11, 13. & 31. 20.

m 2 Cor. 9. 13.

n 2 Tim. 1. 18.

o ch. 6. 25.

p Ps. 106. 31. & 112. 9.

q Dan. 4. 27.

r Mal. 3. 5.

s Lev. 19. 13.

t Jer. 22. 13.

u James 5. 4.

† Heb. lifteth his soul unto it,

Ps. 25. 1. & 86. 4

p James 5. 4.

q 2 Kings 14. 6.

r 2 Chron. 25. 4.

s Jer. 31. 29, 30.

t Ezek. 18. 20.

r Ex. 22. 21, 22.

s Prov. 22. 22.

t Isa. 1. 23.

u Jer. 5. 28. & 22. 3.

v Ezek. 22. 29.

w Zech. 7. 10.

x Mal. 3. 5.

y s Ex. 22. 26.

t ver. 22.

ch. 16. 12.

u Lev. 19. 9, 10.

& 23. 22.

x ch. 15. 10.

y Ps. 41. 1.

z Prov. 19. 17.

† Heb. thou shalt not ~~buy~~ it after thee.

† Heb. after thee.

y ver. 18.

— thou shalt put evil away from among you] St. Paul adopts this charge when he requires the Corinthians to excommunicate the incestuous persons. He transcribes the words of the Septuagint version here, and thus teaches us to apply these Levitical Laws to spiritual things. See 1 Cor. v. 13: cp. S. Aug., Qu. 39.

8. as I commanded them] The Sacred Lawgiver assumes that the people are acquainted with what had been enacted already on this subject in Leviticus xiii. and xiv., as is allowed by Dr. Davidson, p. 386. Moses therefore does not repeat what he had said there. Cp. above, on xviii. 2.

9. Remember what the LORD thy God did unto Miriam] For insubordination (see Num. xii. 10), and learn therefrom to be dutiful and reverent to those who are over you in the Lord; and “do according to all that the Priests the Levites shall teach you” (v. 8), lest thou also shouldst be punished with leprosy, as she was.

13. deliver him the pledge] Cp. Exod. xxii. 26. — it shall be righteousness unto thee before the LORD thy God] “He that hath pity on the poor lendeth unto the Lord” (Prov. xix. 17). He who injures the poor does violence to God. (S. Jerome in Isa. lviii.)

15. give him his hire] In the evening. Cp. Lev. xix. 13. Our Lord supposes this in His parable, Matt. xx. 8.

16. The fathers shall not be put to death for the children] See 2 Kings xiv. 6, and above on Exod. xx. 5. God is here delivering a precept to the Hebrew magistrates. He does not say, that in His own divine dispensation, children are not sometimes put to death on account of the sins of their forefathers, as at the flood, and in Sodom, and among the nations of Canaan. The Judge of all the earth deals equitably with all, and makes equitable allowances for all; and often takes away children in mercy. He is not speaking of His own inscrutable dispensations; but of what human magistrates ought to do. See Augustine, Opus Imperf., c. Julian. Pelag., lib. iii. p. 1056.

19. When thou cuttest down thine harvest] Cp. above, Lev. xix. 9; xxiii. 22.

— for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow] This was remembered by Boaz (Ruth ii. 7, 8), and he received a reward for his mercy, and he became an ancestor of Christ.

Other persons, besides those here specified, were not entitled to avail themselves of the indulgence mentioned in these laws. Augustine, Qu. 44.

20. for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow] These words are repeated three times (vv. 19, 20, 21), showing the tenderness of the Divine Legislator for strangers, orphans and widows: cp. Ps. lxxviii. 5; lxxxii. 3.

a ch. 19. 17.
Ezek. 44. 24.
b See Prov. 17. 15.

c Luke 12. 48.
d Matt. 10. 17.
e 2 Cor. 11. 24.

f Job 18. 3.

g Prov. 12. 10.
l Cor. 9. 9.
i Tim. 5. 18.
† Heb. thresheth,
Hos. 10. 11.
h Matt. 22. 24.
Mark 12. 19.
Luke 20. 28.
|| Or, *next
kinsman*,
Gen. 38. 8.
Ruth 1. 12, 13. &
3. 9.
i Gen. 38. 9.
k Ruth 4. 10.
|| Or, *next
kins-man's wife*.
l Ruth 4. 1, 2.

XXV. ¹ If there be a ^a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them; then they ^b shall justify the righteous, and condemn the wicked. ² And it shall be, if the wicked man be ^c worthy to be beaten, that the judge shall cause him to lie down, ^d and to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number. ³ ^e Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed: lest, if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many stripes, then thy brother should ^f seem vile unto thee.

⁴ ^g Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he [†] treadeth out the corn.

⁵ ^h If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger: her || husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her. ⁶ And it shall be, that the firstborn which she beareth ⁱ shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that ^k his name be not put out of Israel. ⁷ And if the man like not to take his || brother's wife, then let his brother's wife go up to the ^l gate unto the elders, and say, My husband's brother refuseth to raise up unto his brother a name in Israel, he will not perform the duty of my husband's brother. ⁸ Then the elders of his city shall call him, and speak unto him: and if he stand to it, and say,

CH. XXV. 1. then they shall justify] Rather, and when they justify the righteous, &c., then it shall be, &c.

2. worthy to be beaten] a son of beating. Cp. 1 Sam. xx. 31. — the judge] who then recited certain sentences of Deuteronomy, viz. xxviii. 58 and xxix. 9. See Selden, de Syned. ii. 13.

— to be beaten] With a scourge of thongs doubled, μόστις, to be distinguished from the Roman πάββος, a rod (2 Cor. xi. 24, 25. Acts xvi. 22), and also from the Roman φραγέλλιον (Matt. xxvii. 26. Mark xv. 15).

In later times among the Hebrews this punishment of scourging was inflicted in the synagogues (Matt. x. 17). On the manner of its infliction, see Maimonides in Sanhedrim, quoted by Ainsworth, p. 112; and Selden de Syned. ii. 13. Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. c. 25, p. 521.

— according to his fault] So it will be at the great day (cp. Luke xii. 48. Matt. x. 15; xii. 32; and notes below, on 1 Cor. iii. 12—15). There will be degrees in eternal punishment.

3. Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed] Inasmuch as the scourge was made of three thongs, each stroke (say some of the Rabbis) was reckoned as three, and thus in practice they gave only thirteen; if they had given fourteen, they would in fact have given forty-two. Maimon. in San. c. xvii. Others say that they gave one less than the legal number from a scrupulous apprehension of having made some error in counting them. Buxtorf, Syn. Jud. p. 523, and Præf. ad Lib. de Abbreviaturis, ed. 1708. See St. Paul's assertion concerning himself (2 Cor. xi. 24), with Wetstein's note; and Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 164.

The number forty has usually a spiritual meaning in Holy Scripture. Forty years, forty days, are periods representing trial. See on Matt. iv. 2. Acts i. 3. God did not extend the time of wandering to His people beyond forty years, and then the new generation of Israel was brought by Joshua into Canaan. On the moral and spiritual lessons suggested by this limitation to forty stripes, see S. Cyril de Ador. viii. p. 278.

— thy brother should seem vile] Punishment is not for abasement, but for amendment; and is merciful in its severity: and especially is spiritual discipline for edification, and not for destruction (2 Cor. xiii. 10), and therefore he who withholds spiritual discipline is cruel, and he who forfeits it is miserable (S. Augustine).

4. Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn] The exposition, which the Holy Spirit gives, of this precept by the mouth of the Apostle St. Paul, in two passages of the New Testament, is of great value, as teaching us that the Levitical Law is spiritual (Rom. vii. 14); and that in its spiritual sense it is not obsolete or superannated, but is binding on all Christians in every age and country of the world. See 1 Cor. ix. 9—11. 1 Tim. v. 18. Cp. S. Augustine in Joann., Tract. 10.

St. Paul has not only taught us in the places just quoted, that this process of spiritualization ought to be performed; but he has put a key into our hands whereby to unlock the casket, and to take out the treasures it contains, that the Church may be enriched thereby. Among the treatises of Christian Antiquity, that may serve as helps in this work, which, if performed with sobriety, judgment, and learning, would do much to vindicate the Pentateuch from those low conceptions, by which the Marcionites and Manichæans, in ancient times, and their successors in modern times, have disparaged this portion of the Divine Volume, none perhaps are more valuable, than the contributions of S. Cyril of Alexandria, especially in his works entitled, "On the Worship of God in Spirit and in Truth," and his "Glaphyra." See above, Introduction to Leviticus; and note to Lev. i. 1.

— when he treadeth out the corn] See Hengst., Moses, p. 223, where he quotes passages from Champollion, Rosellini, and others, showing the antiquity of this usage, which still prevails in Egypt and in the East. Cp. Wellsted, Arab. i. 194. Keil, p. 502.

5. If brethren dwell together] Israelites, in their fathers' house; and in case there is no brother, then this law is extended to the next of kin, as appears from the history of Ruth (Ruth iv. 10: cp. Matt. xxii. 24; and Maimon. in Jibbum, ii. 6). This law seems to have been in force even in earlier times (see Gen. xxxviii. 8—11). For an answer to the objections of those who allege, that the "Lex Levitatus," by which the next of kin was obliged to marry the widow of his brother who died without issue, male or female (Num. xxvii. 4), appears in different and inconsistent phases in the Pentateuch, and in the Book of Ruth; and for a proof that the judicial proceedings in the Book of Ruth are based upon the Legislation of the Pentateuch, see Hengst., Auth. ii. pp. 100—106. On the Law generally, see Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 165. Winer, R. W. B. ii. 19.

6. The firstborn shall succeed in the name of his brother] Christ gave His Divine sanction to this provision of the Levitical Law, by vouchsafing to be born of a race where the name of the father had been continued in this manner, and the Holy Spirit has recorded this continuation of the name in the genealogy of Christ in the Gospel (Matt. i. 15). Perhaps, also, the difference in the names of the immediate predecessors of Joseph, the husband of Mary, in the genealogical tables of St. Matthew and St. Luke, is to be explained by a levirate marriage, as the ancient expositors suppose (see below, on Matt. i. 5; and cp. S. Aug. here, Qu. 46), that the name of the dead might be raised up.

The Apostles raised up a godly seed to Christ, who vouchsafed to call them His brethren (John xx. 17), yet they never called any of them by their own name, but by His (1 Cor. i. 15). Cp. S. Ambrose in Ps. 43, and in Lucam, lib. ix.; and S. Aug. c. Faustum, xxxii. 10.

^m I like not to take her ; ⁹ Then shall his brother's wife come unto him in the presence of the elders, and ⁿ loose his shoe from off his foot, and spit in his face, and shall answer and say, So shall it be done unto that man that will not ^o build up his brother's house. ¹⁰ And his name shall be called in Israel, The house of him that hath his shoe loosed.

¹¹ When men strive together one with another, and the wife of the one draweth near for to deliver her husband out of the hand of him that smiteth him, and putteth forth her hand, and taketh him by the secrets : ¹² Then thou shalt cut off her hand, ^p thine eye shall not pity her.

¹³ ^q Thou shalt not have in thy bag † divers weights, a great and a small. ¹⁴ Thou shalt not have in thine house † divers measures, a great and a small.

¹⁵ But thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have : ^r that thy days may be lengthened in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee. ¹⁶ For ^s all that do such things, and all that do unrighteously, are an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

¹⁷ ^t Remember what Amalek did unto thee by the way, when ye were come forth out of Egypt ; ¹⁸ How he met thee by the way, and smote the hindmost of thee, even all that were feeble behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary ; and he ^u feared not God. ¹⁹ Therefore it shall be, ^x when the LORD thy God hath given thee rest from all thine enemies round about, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it, that thou shalt blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven ; thou shalt not forget it.

XXVI. ¹ And it shall be, when thou art come in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and possessest it, and dwellest therein ; ² ^a That thou shalt take of the first of all the fruit of the earth, which thou shalt bring of thy land that the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt put it in a basket, and shalt ^b go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name there. ³ And thou shalt go unto the priest that shall be in those days, and say unto him, I profess this day unto the LORD thy God, that I am come unto the country which the LORD sware unto ^m Ruth 4. 6.

ⁿ Ruth 4. 7.
^o Ruth 4. 11.
p ch. 19. 13.
^q Lev. 19. 35, 36.
Prov. 11. 1.
Ezek. 45. 10.
Mic. 6. 11.
† Heb. a stone and a stone.
‡ Heb. an ephah and an ephah.
r Ex. 20. 12.
s Prov. 11. 1.
t 1 Thess. 4. 6.

t Ex. 17. 8.
u Ps. 36. 1.
Prov. 16. 6.
Rom. 3. 18.
x 1 Sam. 15. 3.
y Ex. 17. 14.

a Ex. 23. 19. & 34. 26.
Num. 18. 13.
ch. 16. 10.
Prov. 3. 9.
b ch. 12. 5.

9. loose his shoe] by which it was signified that he discharged himself from his right, and was released from his duty ; at the same time also, by being made barefoot, he was reduced to a state of ignominy (see 2 Sam. xv. 30. Isa. xx. 2. 4. Micah i. 8. Maimon. in Jibbum, iv. 6). The "near kinsman," who refused to do his own duty of kindness to his deceased brother, and to Ruth his widow, might, if he had done that duty, have had his name enrolled in the Gospel, as Boaz is, among the ancestors of Christ ; and have had a place among the merciful in the book of life. Observe here the loss entailed by the neglect of any duty, especially a spiritual one. Cp. S. Augustine in Faustum, xxxii. 10.

— spit in his face] A mark of reproach (Num. xii. 14). The renunciation and abandonment of duty brings with it shame and reproach. Christ, the Lord of all, who did the part of a divine brother and husband to the Jewish Church, condescended to receive this treatment at her hands (Isa. i. 6. Mark x. 34 ; xiv. 65).

11. to deliver her husband] A good end, but not to be attained by immodest means (cp. Rom. iii. 8. 2 Tim. ii. 5). This prohibition is connected with the preceding Law, and guards against the possible result of a shameless presumption in women, consequent on the right given to the widows in that foregoing enactment.

13. weights] Heb. stones. See Lev. xix. 36.
14. in thine house] even if thou dost not use it. Avoid temptation.

15. measure] ephah.
17. Remember what Amalek did] See Exod. xvii. 8—16, and Balaam's prophecy (Num. xxiv. 20).

The reason for this remembrance is given, that "Amalek feared not God" (v. 18) ; and Israel is an instrument in God's hand to vindicate his honour.

19. Therefore it shall be] By his public announcement God called Amalek to repent (as He called Nineveh by Jonah) ; and He showed that He does not forget sins, although He does not immediately punish them ; and He gave Amalek time for repentance ; and if Amalek would not repent, then the sentence was to be executed.

Accordingly, we find that God gave a commission to Saul to execute it (1 Sam. xv. 2), and to the Simeonites in Hezekiah's reign (1 Chron. iv. 42). Here we see evidence of an unity of plan in God's dealings, and also an unity in God's writing, in His Inspired Word, the Holy Bible, during a long period of years.

CHR. XXVI. 1.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and continues to xxix. 8. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Isa. xl. 1—22, which foretells the preaching of John the Baptist, and the promulgation of the Gospel, with thanksgiving and glory to God for His Omnipotence and Love.

2. the first] is due to God, and to be presented publicly to Him. Cp. James i. 18.

— and shalt go] at the Feast of Weeks, or Pentecost, till the Feast of Dedication (Maimon. ; Selden de Syned. iii. 13).

— unto the place] Shiloh, and afterwards Jerusalem.

3. unto the priest] the Priest appointed for that purpose ; and therefore now to Christ, "who abideth a Priest for ever" (Heb. vii. 3 ; x. 21), to whom we are to bring our offerings (Heb. xiii. 15).

— the LORD] the Word of the Lord (Targum Jerus.).

our fathers for to give us. ⁴ And the priest shall take the basket out of thine hand, and set it down before the altar of the LORD thy God. ⁵ And thou shalt speak and say before the LORD thy God, ^c A Syrian ^d ready to perish was my father, and ^e he went down into Egypt, and sojourned there with a ^f few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous: ⁶ And ^e the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage: ⁷ And ^h when we cried unto the LORD God of our fathers, the LORD heard our voice, and looked on our affliction, and our labour, and our oppression: ⁸ And ⁱ the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and ^k with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders: ⁹ And he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even ^l a land that floweth with milk and honey. ¹⁰ And now, behold, I have brought the firstfruits of the land, which thou, O LORD, hast given me. And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God: ¹¹ And ^m thou shalt rejoice in every good thing which the LORD thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that is among you.

¹² When thou hast made an end of tithing all the ⁿ tithes of thine increase the third year, which is ^o the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled; ¹³ Then thou shalt say before the LORD thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, to the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, ^p neither have I forgotten them: ¹⁴ ^q I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead: but I have ^r hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me. ¹⁵ ^r Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

¹⁶ This day the LORD thy God hath commanded thee to do these statutes and judgments: thou shalt therefore keep and do them with all thine heart, and with all thy soul. ¹⁷ Thou hast ^s avouched the LORD this day to be thy c Hos. 12. 12.

d Gen. 43. 1, 2.
& 45. 7, 11, 2.
e Gen. 46. 1, 6.
Acts 7. 15.
f Gen. 46. 27.
ch. 10. 22.
g Ex. 1. 11, 14.
h Ex. 2. 23, 24,
25. & 3. 9. & 4.
31.
i Ex. 12. 37, 51.
& 13. 3, 14, 16.
ch. 5. 15.

k ch. 4. 34.

l Ex. 3. 8.

m ch. 12. 7, 12,
18. & 16. 11.

n Lev. 27. 30.
Num. 18. 21.
o ch. 14. 28, 29.

p Ps. 119. 141, 153, 176.
q Lev. 7. 20. &
21. 1, 11.
Hos. 9. 4.

r Isa. 63. 15.
Zech. 2. 13.

s Ex. 20. 19.

4. before the altar] which sanctified the gifts (Matt. xxiii. 19); and if the firstfruits were holy, the whole was hallowed also (Rom. xi. 16).

5. thou shalt speak] Literally, thou shalt answer, in reply to God's goodness to thee.

It was not enough to feel thankfulness, it was necessary to make a public declaration and open profession of it, both by word and deed, in God's house. Here is a divine exhortation to Harvest Thanksgivings in the Christian Church.

— A Syrian ready to perish] Heb. an Aramæan perishing. Jacob, who served in danger and distress with Laban the Syrian (Gen. xxv. 20) for twenty years, and whose wives and children were from Padan-aram (Gen. xxviii. 5; xxxi. 38—42). Christ is called a Nazarene, because He was brought up at Nazareth; so Israel is called an Aramæan, because of his long sojourn there. On this, the true sense of the words, see Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 166.

In all our thanksgivings there must be abasement of ourselves, as well as praise and glory to God. We must remember our past miseries, as well as our present mercies. We must remember our Arams and our Egypts, as well as our Shilohs and our Sions. We must remember what we were by Nature, as well as what we are by Grace.

— with a few] Literally, in few, in small numbers. Cp. x. 22. As to this use of the preposition, the 'beth essential; similar to év in Greek, cp. Winer, G. G. § 29, p. 166.

10. And thou shalt set it before the LORD] A foreshadowing of that self-consecration which is due from the Christian Church to the Lord, and from every soul in it: see Rom. xii. 1.

11. And thou shalt rejoice] Especially is this fulfilled in the Holy Eucharist, where the Church on Earth joins with the Church in heaven, and sings her Trisagion to the Lord. Cp. Rev. v. 13.

12. the third year] See above, xiv. 28.

13. I have brought away] I had a holy portion due to God amongst my goods. I have severed it from the rest: I have brought it and laid it upon the altar (Bp. Andrewes, v. 133).

14. I have not eaten thereof in my mourning] If any one eat of the second tithes, or of any holy things, in the days when he is mourning (and therefore Levitically unclean) for any of his kindred, he is to be punished (Maimon, on the Second Tithe, iii. 5—7), for in all his holy things he was bound to "rejoice before the Lord" (v. 11). Cp. Spencer, Leg. Hebr. ii. 24.

— for any unclean use] or for any unclean person to eat; or in any unclean condition (Lev. xxii. 3).

— for the dead] or at any funeral, where a Levitical uncleanness was contracted, and where meals were provided for the mourners (Ezek. xxiv. 17. Jer. xvi. 7, compared with Hos. ix. 4).

All these precepts have a spiritual significance, intimating that, in order to be accepted in his religious services, the worshipper of the living God should abstain from dead works, and all unholy deeds, and present himself a "living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God" (Rom. xii. 1).

God, and to walk in his ways, and to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice: ¹⁸ And ^t the LORD hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar people, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldst keep all his commandments; ¹⁹ And to make thee "high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honour; and that thou mayest be *an holy people unto the LORD thy God, as he hath spoken.

t Ex. 6. 7. & 19.
5. ch. 7. 6. & 14.
2. & 28. 9.

u ch. 4. 7, 8. &
28. 1.
Ps. 148. 14.
x Ex. 19. 6.
ch. 7. 6. & 28. 9
1 Pet. 2. 9.

XXVII. ¹ And Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day. ² And it shall be on the day ^a when ye shall pass over Jordan unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, that ^b thou shalt set thee up great stones, and plaister them with plaister: ³ And thou shalt write upon them all the words of this law, when thou art passed over, that thou mayest go in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey; as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee. ⁴ Therefore it shall be when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, ^c in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaister them with plaister. ⁵ And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: ^d thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them. ⁶ Thou shalt build the altar of the LORD thy God of whole stones: and thou shalt offer burnt offerings thereon unto the LORD thy God: ⁷ And thou shalt offer peace offerings, and shalt eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy God. ⁸ And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law very plainly.

a Josh. 4. 1.

b Josh. 8. 32.

c ch. 11. 29.
Josh. 8. 30.

d Ex. 20. 25.
Josh. 8. 31.

⁹ And Moses and the priests the Levites spake unto all Israel, saying, Take heed, and hearken, O Israel; ^e this day thou art become the people of the LORD thy God. ¹⁰ Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the LORD thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day.

e ch. 26. 18.

¹¹ And Moses charged the people the same day, saying, ¹² These shall stand upon mount Gerizim to bless the people, when ye are come over Jordan;

f ch. 11. 29.
Josh. 8. 33.
Judg. 9. 7.

CH. XXVII. 2. on the day] or, at the time. On this use of "day;" cp. Luke xix. 42. For the fulfilment of this command, see Josh. viii. 30—35.

— plaister them with plaister] kovdareis kovla (Sept.), with hard white cement (Matt. xxiii. 27), so that the words written on them may be easily legible, and also be durable. This practice was common in Egypt; and many ancient pictures painted on such layers of gypsum are still visible, as well as ancient writings in reddish ink: see the testimonies of Heeren, Minertoli, and Prokesch in Hengstenberg, Auth. i. pp. 464, 465; and in his work on Moses and Egypt, p. 88. Cp. Dr. Thomson, the Land and the Book, p. 471: "I have seen numerous specimens of this kind of writing certainly more than 2000 years old, and still as distinct as when it was first inscribed on the plaster." The reader may probably be familiar with the ancient writings still preserved on the cement which covers the walls of the houses and streets of Pompeii.

3. of this law] not only the blessings and curses, nor simply the Book of Deuteronomy, which, in the age of Moses, was not separated from the rest of the Pentateuch, but the substance of the Law. Cp. Josh. viii. 32, 34; and Keil, p. 509.

4. in mount Ebal] The mount to the north (see xi. 29), not Gerizim, according to the reading of the Samaritan Pentateuch (Gesen. de Pent. Sam. p. 61).

The choice of Ebal, the mount on which those Tribes stood to whom the Priests turned when they uttered the curses, appears to have been dictated by the same considerations which led to the insertion only of the curses in this chapter (the blessings not being recited)—viz., a prophetic feeling, flat in the words of the Apostle "as many as are under the works of the Law are under a curse" (Gal. iii. 10); and that the people would subject themselves to the curse by disobedience (cp. xxxi. 16, 17), and that by the deeds of the Law no flesh shall be justified (Rom. iii. 20);

and that the Law was only "a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, who has redeemed us from the curse of the Law, being made a curse for us" (Gal. iii. 13, 24). The Law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ (John i. 17. Acts iii. 26; xiii. 39). See on v. 15.

5. an altar of stones—not lift up any iron tool upon them] Cp. Exod. xx. 25.

6, 7. thou shalt offer burnt offerings—And thou shalt offer peace offerings, and shalt eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy God] In the burnt-offerings the people presented themselves as a sacrifice to God; in the peace-offerings they communicated with Him, and rejoiced in Him (see Lev. i. 3—17; iii. 1—12). Both were figurative of Christ, by whom we are presented acceptable to God, and in Whom we communicate with God, especially in the Holy Eucharist, and have peace and joy. See above, on Lev. i. 3; iii. 1; and cp. Josh. viii. 30, 31. John vi. 51. Gal. iii. 13.

8. write upon the stones all the words of this law very plainly] so that "he may run that readeth" (Hab. ii. 2). Here is a declaration of the Divine will that God's Law, revealed in the Holy Scriptures, should be made known to all, so as to be understood by all (cp. Acts xx. 27. 1 Cor. xiv. 1—40).

9. Take heed] be silent: σιωπα (Sept.). Gesen. 219, 220.

12. These shall stand upon mount Gerizim] The southern hill—the hill of light and warmth. See above, xi. 29.

— to bless] that is, for the benediction of the people;—not that these six Tribes next mentioned pronounced the blessing; that was done by the Levites in the midst (see v. 14)—or that they alone responded ("all the people said Amen," vv. 15, 16, &c.). But the division of the twelve tribes into two sets of six, and the placing of six on the north side, on Mount Ebal, and six on the south, on Mount Gerizim, represented visibly the two great alternatives, "Life and Death, Blessing and Cursing;" and was

g ch. 11. 29.
 Josh 8. 33.
 † Heb. for a cursing.
 h ch. 33. 10.
 Josh. 8. 33.
 Dan. 9. 11.
 i Ex. 20. 4, 23. & 34. 17.
 Lev. 19. 4. & 26. 1.
 ch. 4. 16, 23. & 5. 8.
 Isa. 44. 9.
 Hos. 13. 2.
 k See Num. 5. 22.
 Jer. 11. 5.
 l Cor. 14. 16.
 l Ex. 20. 12. & 21. 17.
 Lev. 19. 3.
 ch. 21. 18.
 m ch. 19. 14.
 Prov. 22. 28.
 n Lev. 19. 14.
 o Ex. 22. 21, 22.
 ch. 10. 18. & 24. 17.
 Mal. 3. 5.
 p Lev. 18. 8. & 20. 11.
 ch. 22. 30.
 q Lev. 18. 23. & 20. 15.
 r Lev. 18. 9. & 20. 17.

Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin :
 13 And ^g these shall stand upon mount Ebal † to curse ; Reuben, Gad, and Asher, and Zebulun, Dan, and Naphtali. 14 And ^h the Levites shall speak, and say unto all the men of Israel with a loud voice ;
 15 ⁱ Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the Lord, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place. ^k And all the people shall answer and say, Amen. 16 ^l Cursed be he that setteth light by his father or his mother. And all the people shall say, Amen. 17 ^m Cursed be he that removeth his neighbour's landmark. And all the people shall say, Amen. 18 ⁿ Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way. And all the people shall say, Amen. 19 ^o Cursed be he that perverteth the judgment of the stranger, fatherless, and widow. And all the people shall say, Amen. 20 ^p Cursed be he that lieth with his father's wife ; because he uncovereth his father's skirt. And all the people shall say, Amen. 21 ^q Cursed be he that lieth with any manner of beast. And all the people shall say, Amen. 22 ^r Cursed be he that lieth with his sister, the daughter of his father, or the daughter of his mother. And all the people an awful foreshadowing of the division of all men at the Great Day of Doom, when some will be placed on the Right Hand and others on the Left, by the Great Judge of all (Matt. xxv. 32, 33—41).

This arrangement of the people, six tribes on Gerizim for blessing, and six on Ebal for cursing, with the Ark, representing God's Throne, and the Priests and Levites around it in the midst, and probably Joshua, the type of Jesus, in the midst ; and the Voice of Blessing and Cursing coming forth from the Ark, are plainly made manifest by a comparison of this chapter with Josh. viii. 33, 34, and are declared by the Hebrew Expositors (see Talmud Babyl., Mishna in Sotah, cap. vii.), where it is stated that the Ark was in the valley in the midst ; and around it were the Priests and Levites, and that six tribes were on Mount Gerizim, and six on Mount Ebal ; and when the Priests uttered the blessings, they turned themselves to Mount Gerizim, and when they uttered the curses, they turned to Mount Ebal, and all the tribes said Amen to both. Cp. the Targum of Jerusalem here, where the same thing is affirmed. Cp. Schultz, p. 607. Keil, p. 512.

This solemn judicial scene, foreshadowing the last Judgment of the World, will appear still more striking and awful, when we remember that it was near Shechem, where God first revealed Himself in Canaan to Abraham the father of the faithful, and where Jacob built his altar El-Elohe-Israel, and where the bones of Joseph and the other Patriarchs lie buried ; and where JESUS CHRIST, the Son of God, the future JUDGE of quick and dead, first declared Himself to be the MESSIAH. See above, on Gen. xxxiii. 18 ; and below, on John iv. 5 ; and Acts vii. 16. Cp. Origen on Josh. Hom. 9, who says, " It is JESUS only who can set some for blessing, and others for cursing."

As to the distinctness with which such a proclamation would be heard on the spot, see the testimony from local knowledge by Dr. Thomson, Land and Book, p. 471 ; and Dr. Bonar, Land of Promise, p. 371 ; and McCaul on Colenso, pp. 30, 31.

Standing in the midst between Mounts Gerizim and Ebal, and probably raised on an elevated platform round about the Ark of God in the centre, the Priests would be easily heard by the people on both sides ; and this solemn promulgation of Blessings and Curses would be like a rehearsal of the great transactions of the " Valley of Jehoshaphat," the Valley of the Judgment of Jehovah (Joel iii. 2), the figure of the future universal Judgment, when all Nations shall be judged by Jesus Christ ; and the utterance of " Blessed " to those on the one hand on Gerizim, and of " Cursed " to those on the other hand towards Ebal, was a solemn foreshadowing of the words of the Great Judge of all to those on the right, " Come, ye blessed ; " and to those on the left, " Depart from Me, ye cursed " (Matt. xxv. 34, 41).

— Simeon, and Levi—Benjamin] All six children of the free women, Leah and Rachel (Origen). Cp. Gal. iv. 22—31.

Blessing is placed before Cursing, as in our Lord's prophetic declaration of the transactions of the Great Day, Matt. xxv. 34, 41.

13. Reuben] Though the firstborn of a freewoman, yet he is degraded for his sin. See Gen. xlix. 3. See here v. 20 ; and cp. Origen, and Theodoret, Qu. 34.

— Zebulun] the sixth and youngest of Leah's sons ; the other four, Gad, Asher, Dan, and Naphtali, were sons of handmaids ; the two former of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid (Gen. xxx. 10—13) ; the two latter of Billah, Rachel's handmaid (Gen. xxx. 4—8).

14. the Levites shall speak] that is, some of the Priests the Levites shall pronounce the blessings and the curses (Josh. viii. 33). This was in accordance with their duty to teach Israel God's Law (see xxxiii. 10), and with the priestly function of blessing the people (Num. vi. 24, 27. Cp. Deut. x. 8).

15. Cursed] Only curses are expressed here ; Blessings are reserved for the Gospel. Christ begins the Sermon on the Mount with " Blessed," which He repeats eight times (Matt. v. 3—10. See above, v. 4).

There are twelve curses here. Christ has freed us from them (Gal. iii. 10, 13). Justin Martyr c. Tryph. § 95, 96. Bp. Andrewes, v. 434.

There is therefore eloquence and inspiration in this silence of Scripture here as to blessings ; but we are to suppose that the blessings were uttered toward Gerizim as antitheses to the curses toward Ebal, and that AMEN was responded to them also.

— in a secret place] even in his own heart (Ezek. viii. 12).

16. And all the people shall say, Amen] Here is an answer to those who raise an objection to the saying of Amen in the " Communion Office " in the Book of Common Prayer. God Himself commanded His Ministers to declare His (not their) malediction on sin, in His name, and He commanded His people to say " Amen " to that declaration.

— Amen] See Matt. v. 18. In the Gospels this word stands at the beginning of a sentence. In St. John's Gospel it is always doubled, and it is uttered only by Christ. In the Epistles it stands at the end. In the Apocalypse Christ Himself is called " the AMEN " (Rev. iii. 14). In the Liturgy of the Apostolic Church it was uttered by the people at the end of prayers and thanksgivings : see 1 Cor. xiv. 16 ; and so in the heavenly Church (Rev. v. 14 ; vii. 12 ; xix. 4). For an exposition of the full meaning of the word AMEN, see Bp. Andrewes, v. pp. 467—476.

The Sept. has γένοιτο here in each case. The word ἀμήν is found in that Version in 1 Chron. xvi. 36, ἐπεὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἀμήν. Cp. Neh. v. 13 ; viii. 8 ; and seems to show that a different hand from that used in the Pentateuch was employed in those parts of that Version.

18. Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way] S. Irenæus has some excellent remarks on these words ; which he applies as an answer to those who say that Christ and His Apostles did not declare, the truth simply and plainly as it is, and did not correct the errors of those to whom they preached, but spoke by way of accommodation to His and their hearers ; and he calls those persons " vanissimos sophistas," who allege that the " apostoli cum hypoerisi fecerunt doctrinam secundum audientium capacitatem, et responsiones secundum interrogantium suspiciones, cæcis cæca confabulantes, secundum cæcitatem ipsorum " (Irenæus, iii. 5, p. 207). Grabe. Cp. S. Irenæus, iii. 12, p. 225. His remarks are very applicable to modern times.

shall say, Amen. ²³ * Cursed be he that lieth with his mother in law. And all the people shall say, Amen. ²⁴ * Cursed be he that smiteth his neighbour secretly. And all the people shall say, Amen. ²⁵ * Cursed be he that taketh reward to slay an innocent person. And all the people shall say, Amen. ²⁶ * Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the words of this law to do them. And all the people shall say, Amen.

XXVIII. ¹ And it shall come to pass, * if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe and to do all his commandments which I command thee this day, that the LORD thy God ^b will set thee on high above all nations of the earth: ² And all these blessings shall come on thee, and ^c overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God. ³ ^d Blessed shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be ^e in the field. ⁴ Blessed shall be ^f the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep. ⁵ Blessed shall be thy basket and thy ^g store. ⁶ ^h Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out. ⁷ The LORD ⁱ shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways. ⁸ The LORD shall ^j command the blessing upon thee in thy ^k storehouses, and in all that thou ^l settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee. ⁹ ^m The LORD shall establish thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, if thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways. ¹⁰ And all people of the earth shall see that thou art ⁿ called by the name of the LORD;

s Lev. 18. 17. & 20. 14.
t Ex. 20. 13. & 21. 12, 14.
Lev. 24. 17.
Num. 35. 31.
ch. 19. 11.
u Ex. 23. 7, 8.
ch. 10. 17.
& 16. 19.
Ezek. 22. 12.
x ch. 28. 15.
Ps. 119. 21.
Jer. 11. 3.
Gal. 3. 10.
a Ex. 15. 26.
Lev. 26. 3.
Isa. 55. 2.
b ch. 26. 19.

c ver. 15.
Zech. 1. 6.
d Ps. 128. 1, 4.
e Gen. 39. 5.
f ver. 11.
Gen. 22. 17. & 49.
25. ch. 7. 13.
Ps. 107. 38. & 127.
3. & 128. 3.
Prov. 10. 22.
1 Tim. 4. 8.
|| Or, dough, or, kneading-trough.
g Ps. 121. 8.
h Lev. 26. 7, 8.
2 Sam. 22. 38, 39, 41.
Ps. 89. 23.
See ver. 25.
i Lev. 25. 21.
|| Or, barns.
Prov. 3. 10.
k ch. 15. 10.
l Ex. 19. 5, 6.
ch. 7. 6. & 26. 18.
19. & 29. 13.

m Num. 6. 27.
2 Chron. 7. 14.
Isa. 63. 19.
Dan. 9. 18, 19.

The Gnostic theory of accommodation, condemned by Irenæus, has been revived by Semler, and by writers in our own days.

26. Cursed be he that confirmeth not] Literally, that establisheth not. St. Paul adopts the rendering of the Sept. here. — to do them] for “not the hearers of the Law are justified, but the doers” (Rom. ii. 13). Christ has delivered us from this curse, “being made a curse for us” (Gal. iii. 10. 13. 22): see below, notes on these passages, and Justin M. c. Tryphon. § 95; and Bp. Pearson, Art. iv. p. 206. S. Epiphanius, Hæres. 29.

CH. XXVIII. 1. it shall come to pass] The divine denunciations, which are contained in this chapter, and which were uttered by Almighty God Himself in foresight of the disobedience of His people, have now been fulfilled in the awful judgments executed upon Jerusalem, and upon the Jewish Nation. That Nation itself is conscious of the outpouring of the divine wrath upon it for its sins; and it manifests this consciousness in a remarkable manner in its Synagogues, whenever this Chapter recurs in the cycle of Proper Lessons appointed to be read in them. This chapter of Deuteronomy is the fiftieth Lesson of the Law, as read in the Synagogues: see above on xxvi. 1. The function of reading the Proper Lessons in the Synagogues is regarded, for the most part, as a high privilege; and, as an evidence of the degradation to which the ancient people of God are now reduced for their disobedience to God’s Law, and especially for their rejection of Him of whom “Moses and the Prophets did write” (see above on xviii. 15—18), it may be observed, that this privilege of reading the Proper Lessons in the Synagogues is sometimes set up for auction, and sold to the highest bidder for large sums of money: see Allen’s Modern Judaism, p. 333.

But the case is the reverse with regard to this chapter. No Jew desires to read it or hear it in the Synagogue. A miserable pauper is engaged by the payment of a certain sum to come near the reader, and to have this chapter muttered into his ear, which is done in a low mournful tone; and when he has listened to it, he retires in silence to his seat. Here is a solemn testimony to the truth of the awful prophecies which it contains.

One of the best expositions in the English language of this prophecy, with ample proofs of its fulfilment, will be found in Dean Jackson’s Work on the Creed, book i. chaps. 27—30, vol. i. pp. 235—299, ed. Oxford, 1844, who rightly grounds an argument for the truth and inspiration of the divine Oracles on its wonderful accomplishment in the sight of all nations.

On the connexion of this chapter, and of ch. xxxii., with the prophecies of Jeremiah, and on the inferences thence to be derived, see above, Introduction to Deuteronomy.

3. Blessed] Heb. baruc; εὐλογημένος, Sept., which is remarkable, as this word in the New Testament has a force and emphasis peculiarly its own; it is applied to the Mother of our Lord in the message of the Incarnation (Luke i. 28); and also to the righteous perfected and accepted by Christ the Judge at the Great Day (Matt. xxv. 34). But in the Beatitudes in the Sermon on the Mount, the word is μακάριος (Matt. v. 3. Luke vi. 20), a word only twice applied to the Divine Being in the New Testament (1 Tim. i. 11; vi. 15). On the sixfold repetition of the word, see xxvii. 15.

5. thy store] Lit. kneading-trough (Exod. viii. 3; xii. 34).

7. seven ways] A perfect number (Gen. ii. 2; xxxiii. 3. Lev. iv. 6).

10. thou art called by the name of the LORD] Literally, the name of the LORD is called upon thee: see Acts xv. 17. James ii. 7. Heb. xi. 16; and so Sept., τὸ ὄνομα Κυρίου ἐπικέκληται σοι. Cp. 2 Chron. vii. 14. Isa. lxiii. 19. Jer. vii. 10; xiv. 9. Dan. ix. 19; and Gen. xlviii. 16.

It has been said, that there is no mention of spiritual and eternal blessings in this prophecy, and that all the benefits promised to Israel are temporal. And it has been thence inferred by some (e. g. the Manicheans of old), that the God of the Law was a different Being from the God of the Gospel. But, as S. Augustine observes (c. Adimantum, c. 18), even those temporal blessings of the field and the fold may well be interpreted also in a spiritual sense; and, as Theodoret remarks (Qu. 34), the words “the Lord will establish thee a holy people to Himself,” are spiritual and evangelical. And surely in this declaration, “All the people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the Name of the LORD”—the Everlasting Author and Giver of all life—there is implied a promise of immortality; for “God is not the God of the dead, but of the living” (see Matt. xxii. 32); and these words are to be construed in a Christian sense, according to the teaching of the Apostles (Acts xv. 17. James ii. 7. Heb. xi. 16. Cp. Euseb. in Ps. xxxv.; and Procop. Gaz. here). Its full realization to Israel is still future (Rom. xi. 25). May the God of Israel hasten the time!

n ch. 11. 25.
o ver. 4. ch. 30. 9.
Prov. 10. 22.
|| Or, for good.
† Heb. bol'y.

p Lev. 26. 4.
ch. 11. 14.
q ch. 14. 29.

r ch. 15. 6.

s Isa. 9. 14, 15.

t ch. 5. 32. & 11.
16.

u Lev. 26. 14.
Lam. 2. 17.
Dan. 9. 11, 13.
Mal. 2. 2.

x ver. 2.
y ver. 3, &c.

z Mal. 2. 2.
a 1 Sam. 14. 20.
Zeck. 14. 13.
b Ps. 80. 16.
Isa. 30. 17. & 51.
20. & 66. 15.
† Heb. which thou wouldst do.
c Lev. 26. 25.
Jer. 24. 10.
d Lev. 26. 16.

|| Or, drought.
e Amos 4. 9.
f Lev. 26. 19.

g ver. 7.
Lev. 26. 17, 37.
ch. 32. 30.
Isa. 30. 17.
h Jer. 15. 4. &
24. 9.
Ezek. 23. 46.
† Heb. for a removing.
i 1 Sam. 17. 44,
46.
Ps. 79. 2.
Jer. 7. 33. & 16.
4. & 34. 20.
k ver. 35.
Ex. 9. 9. & 15. 26.
l 1 Sam. 5. 6. Ps. 78. 66.

and they shall be ⁿ afraid of thee. ¹¹ And ^o the LORD shall make thee plenteous || in goods, in the fruit of thy ^t body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers to give thee. ¹² The LORD shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven ^p to give the rain unto thy land in his season, and ^q to bless all the work of thine hand: and ^r thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow. ¹³ And the LORD shall make thee ^s the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; if that thou hearken unto the commandments of the LORD thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them: ¹⁴ ^t And thou shalt not go aside from any of the words which I command thee this day, to the right hand, or to the left, to go after other gods to serve them.

¹⁵ But it shall come to pass, ^u if thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes which I command thee this day; that all these curses shall come upon thee, and ^x overtake thee: ¹⁶ Cursed shalt thou be ^y in the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field. ¹⁷ Cursed shall be thy basket and thy store. ¹⁸ Cursed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep. ¹⁹ Cursed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out. ²⁰ The LORD shall send upon thee ^z cursing, ^a vexation, and ^b rebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto ^t for to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me. ²¹ The LORD shall make ^c the pestilence cleave unto thee, until he have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it. ²² ^d The LORD shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning, and with the || sword, and with ^e blasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish. ²³ And ^f thy heaven that is over thy head shall be brass, and the earth that is under thee shall be iron. ²⁴ The LORD shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust: from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed. ²⁵ ^g The LORD shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them: and ^h shalt be ^t removed into all the kingdoms of the earth. ²⁶ And ⁱ thy carcass shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away. ²⁷ The LORD will smite thee with ^k the botch of Egypt, and with ^l the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed. ²⁸ The LORD shall

12. thou shalt lend unto many] This has been fulfilled in a spiritual sense in the holy Apostles, who were Hebrews; especially by St. Paul, who lent in holy usury to many Nations by communicating to them the treasures of the Gospel, and the treasures of Christ, and thus were themselves enriched with heavenly glory, while they enriched others (Euseb. in Psal. xxxv.).

13. the head] See Isa. ix. 14, 15.

This is a promise to all who believe in Christ. Whosoever believes in Christ who is the Head, he is made one with Christ; but the Jews rejected Christ, and so became the tail. The first became the last (Origen in Jesu N., Hom. 7).

22. consumption] Seven maladies are mentioned, the sign of the full outpouring of the wrath of God; as there are seven trumpets of judgment, and seven vials of wrath in the Apocalypse; the same hand appears in both.

— sword] chereb. The Vulg. and Arabic seem to have read choreb, heat.

— blasting] from shadaph, to scorch, or to blacken (Gesen. 806).

— mildew] from yarah, to be ghastly.

23. thy heaven—brass, and earth—iron] He says thy heaven; God's heaven will lose its genial mildness, and become thy heaven—a heaven of brass. Cp. “your house” in Matt. xxiii. 38; and “thy seed” below, v. 46.

Iron yields no corn, nor brass rain; and our earth is made iron, when it is traversed with forces of armed soldiers, instead of with peaceful husbandmen and shepherds (S. Ambrose, Epist. 68).

25. shalt be removed] rather, shalt be for agitation—that is, to be tossed about and kicked like a ball from one nation to another; as the Latin poet says, “Di nos quasi pilas habent.” As to the origin of the word zaavah, see Gesen. 250. Keil, 516.

27. the botch of Egypt] Probably the elephantiasis. See Exod. ix. 9.

— emerods] See 1 Sam. v. 6. 9. Bochart, Hieroz., i. p. 381. Latin “mariseæ” (Juvenal, ii. 13). On the other diseases here mentioned, see Pruner, Krankh. d. Orient, p. 142 and Wiener, R. W. B. i. 673, Art. “Krankheiten.” smite thee with madness, and blindness, and ^m astonishment of heart: ²⁹ And ^m Job 4. 9.

 thou shalt ⁿ grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou ⁿ Job 5. 14.
 shalt not prosper in thy ways: and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled ^{Isa. 59. 10.}
 evermore, and no man shall save thee. ³⁰ ^o Thou shalt betroth a wife, and ^o Job 31. 10.
 another man shall lie with her: ^p thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt ^{Jer. 8. 10.}
 not dwell therein: ^q thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not ^p Job 31. 8.
 † gather the ^{Jer. 12. 13.}
 grapes thereof. ³¹ Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt ^{Amos 5. 11.}
 not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, ^{Mic. 6. 15.}
 and † shall not be restored to thee: thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, ^{Zeph. 1. 13.}
 and thou shalt have none to rescue them. ³² Thy sons and thy daughters shall ^{q ch. 20. 6.}
be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and ^r fail with longing <sup>† Heb. profane, or, use it as common meat: as ch.
20. 6.</sup>
 for them all the day long: and there shall be no might in thine hand. ³³ ^s The ^{Lev. 26. 16.}
 fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not ^{Jer. 5. 17.}
 eat up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed alway: ³⁴ So that thou shalt be mad ^t for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see. ³⁵ The LORD ^{t ver. 67.}
 shall ^u smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot ^{u ver. 27.}
 be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of the head. ³⁶ The LORD shall ^x bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation, which <sup>x 2 Kings 17. 4. 6 & 24. 12, 14. &
25. 7, 11.</sup>
 neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and ^y there shalt thou serve other <sup>2 Chron. 33. 11.
& 36. 6, 20.
y ch. 4. 28. &
ver. 64.</sup>
 gods, wood and stone. ³⁷ And thou shalt become ^z an astonishment, a proverb, ^{Jer. 16. 13.}
^a and a byword, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee. ³⁸ <sup>z 1 Kings 9. 7. 8.
Jer. 24. 9. & 25. 9.
Zech. 8. 13.</sup>
 Thou shalt carry much seed out into the field, and shalt gather but little in; for ^c the locust shall consume it. ³⁹ Thou shalt plant vineyards, and dress them, but shalt neither drink of the wine, nor gather the grapes; for the worms shall eat them. ⁴⁰ Thou shalt have olive trees throughout all thy coasts, but thou shalt not anoint thyself with the oil; for thine olive shall cast his fruit.
⁴¹ Thou shalt beget sons and daughters, but † thou shalt not enjoy them; for <sup>† Heb. they shall not be thine,
d Lam. 1. 5</sup>
^d they shall go into captivity. ⁴² All thy trees and fruit of thy land shall the locust || consume. ⁴³ The stranger that is within thee shall get up above thee || Or, possess.
 very high; and thou shalt come down very low. ⁴⁴ ^e He shall lend to thee, ^{e ver. 12.}
 and thou shalt not lend to him: ^f he shall be the head, and thou shalt be the <sup>f ver. 13.
Lam. 1. 5.</sup> tail.

29. grobe at noonday] As the Jewish Nation does, "groping palpably in darkness, in the sunshine of Messiah's glory;" as if it were Egyptian darkness (Dean Jackson), especially when reading or hearing the Word of God, which shines like a noonday light to those who believe in Christ. Cp. Ps. xxxvii. 7, and St. Paul's words (2 Cor. iii. 15), "the veil is on their hearts;" and St. John says, they could not believe, because Esaias saith, "He hath blinded their eyes," i. e., for their sins (John xii. 39, 40). Cp. Zephyr, Caten., and Procop. Gaz. here.

For the prophetic exposition of this passage, see below on xxix. 10.

30. Thou shalt betroth a wife] All these curses, fulfilled literally (cp. Jackson, i. pp. 256. 263. 268. 272, and Bp. Patrick here), have also their spiritual accomplishment in the Jews, to whom "those things which should have been for their wealth, have become an occasion of falling," according to the curse pronounced upon them by their own King, David, speaking in the person of the Messiah; and, therefore, with judicial authority, for their sin against God, in rejecting and crucifying His dear Son. See Ps. lxxix. 21, 22, "They gave me gall to eat—Let their table become a snare," &c. Cp. Augustine there, vol. iv. p. 1006, ed. Paris, 1835.

Abraham was approved of God, for his readiness to sacrifice Isaac at His command. These, his degenerate sons, have crucified the Son of Abraham's God; that Son Whose Day Abraham saw and was glad (John viii. 56); and for their infidelity and disobedience have been cast out of that good land which was given to Abraham's righteous seed. See Dean Jackson, i. 254.

It is a fearful thing to consider, that in their synagogues the Jews, who have subjected themselves to these curses for rejecting Christ, imprecate curses daily upon those who adore Him. See Buatoz, Syn. Jud. c. x. pp. 209—213.

35. sore botch] "lepra tuberosa." See Pruner, p. 167.

36. The LORD shall bring thee, and thy king] fulfilled in the carrying away of Israel by the King of Assyria (2 Kings xvii. 6), and in the carrying away of Judah by the King of Babylon (2 Kings xxiv. 12; xxv. 7. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11). See Theodore, Qu. 34.

— shalt thou serve other gods] Thou shalt be punished by thy sins, for thy sins. Cp. Acts vii. 41, 42. Rom. i. 28. Cp. Dean Jackson, p. 275.

37. an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword] Cp. 1 Kings ix. 7. Jer. xlii. 18—22; and see Dean Jackson, pp. 278—280.

38. locust] rather, the vine-weevil; ψ, convolvulus. See Sept. and Vulg.

40. shall cast] rather, shall be rooted up, and be wasted (Sept.). Others render it, shall fall off (Gesen., Fürst, Espin.).

43. Thy stranger—shall get up above thee] As was the case with the Idumæans and Romans, domineering over the Jews, and setting up the image of Cæsar in the Temple (Joseph., B. J. i. 1; ii. 10. Ant. xviii. 8. 2. Euseb., ii. 5). And this may be interpreted also in a spiritual sense. The Proselyte will rise above thee by accepting the Gospel, which is rejected by thee. See Euseb. in Ps. xxxv. Cp. below, Introd. to the Acts, p. 9.

g ver. 15.

⁴⁵ Moreover ^g all these curses shall come upon thee, and shall pursue thee, and overtake thee, till thou be destroyed; because thou hearkenedst not unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which he commanded thee: ⁴⁶ And they shall be upon thee ^h for a sign and for a wonder, and upon thy seed for ever. ⁴⁷ ⁱ Because thou servedst not the LORD thy God with joyfulness, and with gladness of heart, ^k for the abundance of all things; ⁴⁸ Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies which the LORD shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness, and in want of all things: and he ^l shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he have destroyed thee. ⁴⁹ ^m The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, ⁿ as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not [†] understand; ⁵⁰ A nation [†] of fierce countenance, ^o which shall not regard the person of the old, nor shew favour to the young: ⁵¹ And he shall ^p eat the fruit of thy cattle, and the fruit of thy land, until thou be destroyed: which also shall not leave thee either corn, wine, or oil, or the increase of thy kine, or flocks of thy sheep, until he have destroyed thee. ⁵² And he shall ^q besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land: and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates throughout all thy land, which the LORD thy God hath given thee. ⁵³ And ^r thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own [†] body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee: ⁵⁴ So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, ^s his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward ^t the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave: ⁵⁵ So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates. ⁵⁶ The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, ^u her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter, ⁵⁷ And toward her [†] young one that cometh out ^x from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates.

i Jer. 28. 14.

m Jer. 5. 15. & 6. 22, 23.
 Luke 19. 43.
 n Jer. 48. 40. & 49. 22.
 Lam. 4. 19.
 Ezek. 17. 3, 12.
 Hos. 8. 1.
 † Heb. hear.
 † Heb. strong of face.
 Prov. 7. 13.
 Eccles. 8. 1.
 Dan. 8. 23.
 o 2 Chron. 36. 17.
 Isa. 47. 6.
 p ver. 33.
 Isa. 1. 7. & 62. 8.
 q 2 Kings 25. 1, 2, 4.

r Lev. 26. 29.
 2 Kings 6. 28, 29.
 Jer. 19. 9.
 Lam. 2. 20. & 4. 10.
 † Heb. belly.

s ch. 15. 9.

t ch. 13. 6.

u ver. 54.

† Heb. afterbirth.

x Gen. 49. 10.

y Ex. 6. 3.

z Dan. 9. 12.

⁵⁸ If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear ^y this glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD; ⁵⁹ Then the LORD will make thy plagues ^z wonderful, and the plagues of thy seed, even great plagues, and of long continuance, and sore

46. thy seed for ever] that is, for ever, on thy seed, the seed of evil-doers (see this use of thy, above, v. 26). But there is a holy seed, a seed of God, a goodly remnant, which will obtain mercy (Rom. ix. 27; xi. 5. Cp. Isa. vi. 13; x. 22). It depends on thyself to escape the curse by turning to the Lord.

47. Because thou servedst not the LORD] This was the true cause of the destruction of Jerusalem: see below, on Matt. xxiv. 15; and 1 Thess. ii. 16.

49. a nation . . . from far] fulfilled in the Assyrians (Isa. v. 26; xxviii. 11; xxxiii. 19), Babylonians (Jer. xlviii. 40. Ezek. xvii. 3. Hab. i. 6), Medes (Isa. xiii. 17), and Romans, who were all employed in their turns as executioners of God's judgments against His people for their sins, especially the last: see Theodoret, Qu. 34; and Dean Jackson l., pp. 239—242.

56. The tender and delicate woman] For the fulfilment, see 2 Kings vi. 28; and the passages of Josephus, collected by Eusebius, II. E. iii. 6; and see S. Chrysostom, Orat. v. c. Jud.

tom. i. p. 637, ed. Bened., where he comments on the prophecies in this chapter at large, and shows their accomplishment. See his Epist. ad Olympiad. 3, § 4, tom. iii. p. 556, ed. Bened.

58. this glorious and fearful name] Revealed in the Gospel as the Name of the Blessed Trinity in Unity (see Matt. xxviii. 19); and spiritually "the Name" is applied to Him who took human nature for the express purpose of declaring that Name (see Acts v. 41. 3 John 7). And it was the rejection of Him, which made the cup of the national guilt of the Jews to overflow (see Matt. xxvii. 24, 25). But when they turn to Him, and look on Him whom they pierced (John xix. 37), and say with heart and voice, "Hosanna to the Son of David; Blessed is He that cometh in the NAME of the LORD" (Matt. xxiii. 39), then the curses of Ebal will be withdrawn, and all the blessings of Gerizim will be poured out upon them.

59. thy plagues wonderful] See Dean Jackson, i. 237; and Bp. Patrick here.

sicknesses, and of long continuance. ⁶⁰ Moreover he will bring upon thee all ^a the diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of; and they shall cleave unto thee. ⁶¹ Also every sickness, and every plague, which is not written in the book of this law, them will the LORD [†] bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed. ⁶² And ye ^b shall be left few in number, whereas ye were ^c as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldest not obey the voice of the LORD thy God. ⁶³ And it shall come to pass, that as the LORD ^d rejoiced over you to do you good, and to multiply you; so the LORD ^e will rejoice over you to destroy you, and to bring you to nought; and ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it. ⁶⁴ And the LORD ^f shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; and ^g there thou shalt serve other gods, which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone. ⁶⁵ And ^h among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: ⁱ but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and ^k sorrow of mind: ⁶⁶ And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life: ⁶⁷ ¹ In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and ^m for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see. ⁶⁸ And the LORD ⁿ shall bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee, ^o Thou shalt see it no more again: and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bondmen and bondwomen, and no man shall buy you.

a ch. 7. 15.

† Heb. cause to ascend.
b ch. 4. 27.
c ch. 10. 22.
Neh. 9. 23.d ch. 30. 9.
Jer. 32. 41.
e Prov. 1. 26.
Isa. 1. 24.f Lev. 26. 33.
ch. 4. 27, 28.
Neh. 1. 8.
Jer. 16. 13.
g ver. 36.

h Amos 9. 4.

i Lev. 26. 36.

k Lev. 26. 16.

l Job 7. 4.

m ver. 34.

n Jer. 43. 7.
Hos. 8. 13. & 9. 3.
o ch. 17. 16.

64. shall scatter thee] An evidence of the fulfilment of the curse, and also a preamble to the blessing displayed in the events of the Day of Pentecost: see below on Acts ii. 5—11, pp. 45, 46. Cp. Joseph., B. J. vi. 9. 2. S. Chrys. adv. Jud., Orat. v. Tertullian, adv. Jud. c. 13; ad Gentes, c. 21. Bp. Patrick here; and Dean Jackson, i. pp. 241. 250. 278. 281.

66. thy life shall hang in doubt before thee] A remarkable prophecy. The words "in doubt" are not in the original. The Hebrew says only "Thy life shall be hanging before thee . . . and thou shalt not believe in thy life;" and the Sept. has ἔσται ἡ ζωὴ σου κρεμαμένη ἀπέναντι τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν σου, καὶ οὐ πιστεύσεις τῇ ζωῇ σου: and Vulg. has "erit vita tua quasi pendens ante te: et non credes vitæ tuæ." The word for hanging here is the same as in Deut. xxi. 3 (see note there), which was a prophecy concerning Christ.

For these reasons, many of the ancient Christians saw here a secondary spiritual meaning—a deep, mysterious shadowing forth, of Him who is the LIFE (John xi. 25; xiv. 6), hanging on the Cross before the eyes of the Jewish Nation, and in whom they would not believe. And perhaps even St. Paul himself may be supposed in some degree to countenance this interpretation by his words, οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοῦς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς προεγράφη ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος (Gal. iii. 1).

In behalf of this exposition, see Irenæus, iv. 23; v. 18. Tertullian c. Jud. c. 11. S. Chrysostom adv. Jud. ii. 20. S. Athanas. de Incarnat. c. 35. 37; and Orat. ii. c. Arian. c. 16. S. August. c. Faust. xvi. 22, which are quoted in Bibl. v. pp. 590, 591.

68. with ships] like slaves in slave-ships, by a way in which there is no escape; as there may be by land, especially in the wilderness between Judæa and Egypt.

In looking back on this chapter, and reviewing the prophecies it contains, and comparing them with their fulfilment, as displayed to the eyes of the world for many successive generations, in the history of the Jewish Nation, we recognize clear evidence of Divine foreknowledge, and we see manifest proof that the writer of the Pentateuch was inspired by the Holy Ghost.

In the rejection of His own people for their hardness of heart, we also see a solemn manifestation of God's wrath and indignation against unbelief.

Here also is a proof that the Messiah is come, and that Jesus is the Christ, and that the Gospel is true.

The Jews were God's favoured people; and whenever they obeyed Him, they prospered: their temporal state was always adjusted by God to their spiritual. They were often guilty of idolatry, and they were punished for it; but on their repentance they were restored to God's favour.

But now they are not guilty of idolatry; and therefore, so far, are more pious and godly than their fathers; and yet, as our Lord prophesied they would be, they are scattered among all nations; their city was destroyed in that generation which He visited upon on earth; and ever since that time, as He foretold, they have been outcasts upon the earth.

If Jesus was not a true Prophet, then their rejection of Him was an act of zeal for God, and was an additional title to God's favour. But yet the Jews are what they are, and have been so for 1800 years.

What is the inference? Is it not, that they have committed some heinous sin, and have not yet repented of it? And what is that sin? It is,—as Christ Himself and His Apostles declare,—the rejection of the Son of God. Cp. Tertullian adv. Jud. c. 13; adv. Gentes, c. 21. S. Chrysostom, Orat. v. adv. Judæos; and his Homily on Ps. viii.; and S. Jerome, Epist. ad Dardanum, ii. p. 610, ed. Ben.

The rejection of Israel is a confirmation of our faith, as proving the truth of God's holy Word, and of the Gospel of Christ. As Dean Jackson says, "Every degree of the fall of Israel is a step to our rising." While we are moved with godly fear on account of His severity towards them, we have also reason for fervent, love on account of His mercy to ourselves. But if with this fearful warning before us, of the terrible consequences of unbelief, we are not deterred from it, if we do not receive Christ and His Gospel, and conform ourselves to His Will and Word, then our punishment will be more dreadful than that which has overtaken Israel, and under which they now lie.

Lastly, we see here a strong motive to earnest prayer, and pious endeavour, that the veil may be taken from the heart of the literal Israel, and that they may see Him who is the true Seed of Abraham, the Shiloh proclaimed by Jacob, the Great Prophet pre-announced by Moses, the Saviour typified by Joshua, the King promised to David, the EMMANUEL of Isaiah, the LORD our RIGHTEOUSNESS of Jeremiah; and that they may be joined together with all true Israelites, with St. Paul, St. Peter, and St. John, and with all the children of faithful Abraham gathered together from the north and the south, from the east and the west, and may sit down together with them in the XXIX. ¹ These are the words of the covenant, which the LORD commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, beside ^a the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.

^b Ex. 19. 4. ² And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, ^b Ye have seen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land; ³ ^c The great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs, and those great miracles: ⁴ Yet ^d the LORD hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day. ⁵ ^e And I have led you forty years in the wilderness: ^f your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot. ⁶ ^g Ye have not eaten bread, neither have ye drunk wine or strong drink: that ye might know that I am the LORD your God. ⁷ And when ye came unto this place, ^h Sihon the king of Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, came out against us unto battle, and we smote them: ⁸ And we took their land, and ⁱ gave it for an inheritance unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half tribe of Manasseh. ⁹ ^k Keep therefore the words of this covenant, and do them, that ye may ^l prosper in all that ye do.

¹⁰ Ye stand this day all of you before the LORD your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel, ¹¹ Your little ones, your wives, and thy stranger that is in thy camp, from ^m the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water: ¹² That thou shouldest ⁿ enter into covenant with the LORD thy God, and ⁿ into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day: ¹³ That he may ^o establish thee to day for a people unto himself, and that he may be unto thee a God, ^p as he hath said unto thee, and ^q as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob. ¹⁴ Neither with you only ^r do I make this covenant and this oath; ¹⁵ But with him that standeth here with us this day before the LORD our God, ^s and also with him that is not here with us this day:

¹⁶ (For ye know how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt; and how we came through the nations which ye passed by; ¹⁷ And ye have seen their abominations, and their ^t idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, which were kingdom of God. We are authorized to look for this blessed consummation by the prophecy in ch. xxx. 1—14.

^t Heb. dungy gods.

CH. XXIX. 1. beside the covenant—in Horeb] For he had now to do with a new generation. Besides, Moses was now at the close of his career, and the people were now on the borders of Canaan, and were about to enter the Land of Promise, the type of heaven; and therefore the covenant which the Lord now commands Moses to make with Israel, is another covenant, in the sense of displaying the blessings of the Gospel of Christ, and the glories of the New Covenant, in a clearer light. See xxx. 6, where it is said “the Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart,” which could only be done by the Holy Spirit sent by Jesus Christ (see note there). And in xxx. 11—14 there are plain promises of the Gospel: cp. Burgon, Sermon on Inspiration and Interpretation, pp. 199, 202, “By the general consent of the Hebrew Doctors, the xxxth chapter has ever been held to have reference to the times of MESSIAH” (Fugius in Crit. Sac. ad Deut. xxx. 11). “The restoration spoken of is referred by them to the restoration to be effected by CHRIST;” cp. Bp. Bull—quoted by Mr. Burgon—Harmonia Apostolica c. xi. 3, vol. iii. pp. 197—201, ed. Burton; who says, “Ipsi Hebræi magistri ea quæ Deut. xxix. et deinceps continentur, ad Messie tempus omnino referenda consuerunt;” and he shows the truth of that assertion.

2. Ye have seen] He regards the nation as having a corporate existence. Few except those who were under twenty years of age at Sinai had seen the wonders of Egypt with their own eyes: see above, on i. 9.

3. temptations] Trials.

4. hath not given you] Because ye disobeyed him (see Ezek. xii.

2. Matt. xiii. 15. John xii. 37—40; and Theodoret here, Qu. 34.)

5. your clothes are not wares old] See above, on viii. 2. 4.

6. not eaten bread] produced by your own labour, but

— wine] Lest ye imagine that your strength was due to any thing but God; therefore ye have not been refreshed by wine made from vineyards of your own planting, but by water given you by Him from the Rock in the desert.

7. Sihon—and Og] Num. xxi. 23, 24, 34, 35; above, ii. 30.

10. of your tribes] Rather, your tribes—in their heads.

—] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to xxx. 20. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Isa. lix. 10 to lxiii. 9,—a divinely-inspired comment on this portion of the Pentateuch, and showing its relation to the triumphs of CHRIST, and the glory of His Bride, the Church. It begins with the remarkable words, “We grope for the wall like the blind, we stumble at noonday” (see above, xxviii. 29); and then bursts forth in the joyous exclamation, “Arise, shine! for THY LIGHT is come” (lx. 1).

11—15. Your little ones—thy stranger—the hewer of thy wood—and also with him that is not here] An intimation that God’s covenant would eventually be extended to all nations; as St. Peter says, Acts ii. 39: cp. Heb. viii. 7, 8. Compare our Lord’s Prayer, John xvii. 20.

Here is an answer to the objection sometimes raised to the answers made in the name of infants by Sponsors at Baptism. God here made a covenant with little ones, even with the absent. He accepted those who were present as Sponsors for them.

14. this oath] The covenant confirmed by oath (see Gen. xxi. 28).

17. idols] Heb. gillulim, from galal, to roll (Gesen. 172); stumps that may be rolled about (see Lev. xxvi. 30).

among them :) ¹⁸ Lest there should be among you man, or woman, or family, or tribe, ' whose heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations; " lest there should be among you a root that beareth || † gall and wormwood; ¹⁹ And it come to pass, when he heareth the words of this curse, that he bless himself in his heart, saying, I shall have peace, though I walk * in the || imagination of mine heart, x to add † drunkenness to thirst: ²⁰ y The LORD will not spare him, but then z the anger of the LORD and a his jealousy shall smoke against that man, and all the curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him, and the LORD b shall blot out his name from under heaven. ²¹ And the LORD c shall separate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel, according to all the curses of the covenant that † are written in this book of the law: ²² So that the generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and the stranger that shall come from a far land, shall say, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses † which the LORD hath laid upon it; ²³ And that the whole land thereof is brimstone, d and salt, and burning, that it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, e like the overthrow of Sodom, and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath: ²⁴ Even all nations shall say, f Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this land? what meaneth the heat of this great anger? ²⁵ Then men shall say, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt: ²⁶ For they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and || whom he had not † given unto them: ²⁷ And the anger of the LORD was kindled against this land, g to bring upon it all the curses that are written in this book: ²⁸ And the LORD h rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into

t ch. 11. 16.
u Acts 8. 23.
Heb. 12. 15.
|| Or, a poisonous herb.
† Heb. rosh.
w Num. 15. 39.
Eccles. 11. 9.
|| Or, stubbornness.
Jer. 3. 17. & 7. 24
x Isa. 30. 1.
† Heb. the drunken to the thirsty.
y Ezek. 14. 7. 8.
z Ps. 74. 1.
a Ps. 79. 5.
Ezek. 23. 25.
b ch. 9. 14.
c Matt. 24. 51.
† Heb. as written.
† Heb. wherewith the LORD hath made it sick.
d Ps. 107. 34.
Jer. 17. 6.
Zeph. 2. 9.
e Gen. 19. 24. 25.
Jer. 20. 16.
f 1 Kings 9. 8, 9.
Jer. 22. 8, 9.
|| Or, who had not given to them any portion.
† Heb. divided.
g Dan. 9. 11, 13, 14.
h 1 Kings 14. 15.
2 Chron. 7. 20.
Ps. 52. 5. Prov. 2. 22.

18. a root that beareth gall] A root that does not fructify with a good produce, but yields a poisonous plant,—rosh (connected with rosh, a head), so called from growing to a tuft like the poppy (see Jer. viii. 14; ix. 15. Gesen. 752), supposed by others to be cicuta; by others, colocynth. Whatever it be, it is spoken of as a bitter, poisonous plant (see below, xxxii. 32, 33): cp. Job xx. 16. Hos. x. 4, where it is translated hemlock; and Ps. lxxix. 22, where it is translated gall, as frequently in the Authorized Version (Lam. iii. 5. 19).

— wormwood] Heb. laanah (probably from laan, to curse), Prv. v. 11. Jer. ix. 14; xxiii. 15. Lam. iii. 15. Gesen. 440. These words are used in a spiritual sense in Heb. xii. 15, "lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness, springing up, trouble you, and thereby many be defiled." The Jews gave to Christ gall (rosh) to eat (Ps. lxxix. 22), and they are punished with the root of gall (rosh) embittering their lives. The false Teacher, who embitters the living waters of salvation, is personified as Wormwood in the Apocalypse (see the notes below, on Rev. viii. 10, 11).

19. of this curse] or oath.
— imagination] Heb. sheriruth; literally, hardness; deliberate, firmest resolve, whether for good or evil: from sharir, firm (Gesen. 850. Keil, 524). On the state of the soul here described, see Bp. Andrewes, v. 99.

— to add] The Hebrew word here rendered to add is saphah, which sometimes means to scrape together, to accumulate; and sometimes (with the idea of scraping off), to destroy, to carry off (see Gesen. 592), and in this sense the word is taken here by the Sept., Vulg.

— drunkenness to thirst] Rather, the saturated (from raveh, to drink largely, Gesen. 759), with the thirsty (tsamé; Gesen. 711). This is a proverbial expression, and it seems here to describe the land that has drunken in the poison (mentioned in r. 18), together with that which thirsts for it (cp. Ps. xlii. 3. Lam. iii. 15. Amos viii. 11), and also to describe the people, or souls, of that country, which drink in that poison, or desire to do so, like water (cp. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 167. Schultz, p. 630. Keil, p. 524).

Some interpret this of adding sins of wilfulness to sins of ignorance (Bp. Sanderson, i. 109; iv. 269); and some, of running from one extreme to another (Bp. Andrewes, i. 363), and of adding sins of their own to those of their forefathers (Dean Jackson on the Creed, i. ch. xxx.).

22. hath laid upon it] Literally, hath made it to be sick.
23. that the whole land—is brimstone, and salt] This is to be noted; for these denunciations are not to be understood so much in a physical sense as in a spiritual. This is clear from what has been said as to blotting out the sinner's name (cp. Exod. xxxii. 32, 33; and Rev. iii. 5; xiii. 8); and of his separation unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel (v. 21); and it cannot be said that all the Holy Land is like the region of Sodom and Gomorrah. Doubtless, a physical change for the worse has been wrought upon the face of the soil itself, for the sins of the people; but the plagues here mentioned have fallen with far more visible and inveterate severity on the people. Once the Hebrew Nation flourished in the sunshine of God's favour like an earthly Paradise, and like the garden of the Lord in the Vale of Siddim, but now it is smitten with barrenness; it is not sown nor beareth, but it is brimstone, salt, and burning, like the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah. See also below, on xxx. 4—6.

26. whom he had not given] as He gave the Sun and Moon to be lights to all (iv. 19).

27. the curses] Daniel confirms this statement when he says, "The curse is poured upon it, and the oath that is written in the Law of Moses, the servant of God, because we have sinned against him" (Dan. ix. 11).

28. cast them] One of the letters (lamed) in the original here is a very large capital letter, drawing attention to the greatness of the punishment—"no casting away is like that of the ten tribes" (Baal hatturim).

another land, as it is this day. ²⁹ The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.

XXX. ¹ And ^a it shall come to pass, when ^b all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and ^c thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee, ² And shalt ^d return unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul; ³ ^e That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and ^f gather thee from all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee. ⁴ ^g If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: ⁵ And the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers. ⁶ And ^h the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live. ⁷ And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee. ⁸ And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day. ⁹ ⁱ And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again ^k rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers: ¹⁰ If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law,

a Lev. 26. 40.
b ch. 28.
c ch. 4. 29, 30.
1 Kings 8. 47, 48.

d Neh. 1. 9.
Isa. 55. 7.
Lam. 3. 40.
Joel 2. 12, 13.
e Ps. 106. 45.
& 126. 1, 4.
Jer. 29. 14.
Lam. 3. 22, 32.

f Ps. 147. 2.
Jer. 32. 37.
Ezek. 34. 13. &
36. 24.
g ch. 28. 64.
Neh. 1. 9.

h ch. 10. 16.
Jer. 32. 39.
Ezek. 11. 19. &
36. 26.

ch. 28. 11.

k ch. 28. 63.
Jer. 32. 41.

29. The secret things belong unto the LORD our God] Especially God's counsel concerning Israel; both as to the choice of it by God, and its rejection and restoration, both as to its manner and its time. "O altitudo!" exclaims St. Paul (Rom. xi. 33). Cp. Bp. Andrewes, iv. 373; v. 347. 398, on the Mysteries of Predestination.

The secret will of the Father is, that "of all that He hath given Me I should lose nothing" (John vi. 39). The revealed Will is, "that every one that seeth the Son and believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John iii. 16).

— those things which are revealed belong unto us] His commands, His curses, and blessings, and our consequent duty. These are perfectly clear.

— unto us and to our children for ever] The Hebrew Text has some "puncta extraordinaria" over these words, to call attention to them; and well may this be the case, for the secret things, of which Moses here speaks, are the mysteries revealed in the Gospel for the salvation of all true Israelites by Christ, the Seed of Abraham, and the everlasting glories of the heavenly Jerusalem.

CH. XXX. 3. will turn thy captivity] Will change thy miserable estate (Ps. xiv. 7. Job xlii. 10. Jer. xxx. 8. Keil, 526).

— and gather thee from all the nations] and bring thee to thy home, the true Zion, in Christ, of Whom it is declared that He should "gather together in one the children of God that are scattered abroad." See John xi. 51, 52, where the Evangelist adopts some of the words used by the Septuagint here, πάντων συνάξει σε ἐκ πανταχῶς τῶν ἐθνῶν, εἰς οὓς διεσκέδαίσε σε.

It would be presumptuous to say, whether some great local restoration of the Jews may not be effected; but if the prophecies are to be taken literally, if the Jews are to be multiplied as the sand and as the stars, and to be brought together from all parts of the whole world to one country and city, it is not easy to see how Jerusalem or any Country so small as Palestine could contain them. See below on Ezekiel xxxv., p. 238.

However this may be, it is certain, that the Jews began to be restored at the day of Pentecost, when devout Jews from every country under heaven heard St. Peter's sermon, and were baptized; and the Jews are ever being restored to the true Jerusalem, whenever they enter the Church of Christ, the true Zion, and believe in Him Who is the promised Seed of Abraham, and in Whom all the families of the earth are blessed (see below, notes on Acts ii. 7—12; p. 46; and Introduction to the First Epistle of St. Peter, pp. 37, 38; and Rom. xi. 25. See also on 1 Pet. i. 1, 2, and Procop. Gaz. here; and Keil's note here, p. 527). This is the true Restoration of the Jews. To this the Prophets looked forward with the most ardent aspirations beyond the horizon of all local restoration to the earthly Jerusalem (Isa. lix. 20. Jer. xxxi. 31. 33; xxxii. 39. Ezek. xi. 19; xxxvi. 26). And therefore Moses here speaks of the true circumcision, the circumcision of the heart (v. 6; cp. Rom. ii. 28, 29), which is the work of the Spirit sent by Christ.

4. If any of thine be driven out] Rather, if thy dispersion shall be in the utmost parts of the heaven. The Septuagint here uses the word διασπορά (dispersion), the word adopted in the New Testament to describe the dispersed Jews (see John vii. 35. James i. 1. 1 Pet. i. 1; and note below on Acts, p. 46); and it is worthy of remark, that in describing the Jews who were restored to the true Zion in Christ on the day of Pentecost, the Sacred Writer speaks of them as devout men out of every nation under heaven (Acts ii. 5). May he not be referring to this prophecy of Moses, where Moses is speaking of the gathering again and return, of the dispersed from all the nations, where they were scattered unto the outmost parts of heaven? and may he not be pointing out the beginning of its fulfilment on the day of Pentecost, by the power of the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Unity?

6. the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart] which is the act of Christ, working by the Holy Ghost (Rom. ii. 29. Phil. iii. 3. Col. ii. 11).

God here utters a promise by Moses, which was afterwards repeated by Jeremiah (xxxii. 31, 32), "The days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel. I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts;" a promise which St. Paul assures us is fulfilled in the Gospel of Christ (1 Heb. viii. 10).

and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

¹¹ For this commandment which I command thee this day, 'it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. ¹² It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? ¹³ Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? ¹⁴ But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.

¹⁵ See, ^a I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil; ¹⁶ In that I command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments and his statutes and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it. ¹⁷ But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them; ¹⁸ I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land, whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it. ¹⁹ I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that ^q I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live: ²⁰ That thou mayest love the LORD thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him: for he is thy life, and the length of thy days: that thou mayest dwell in the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

XXXI. ¹ And Moses went and spake these words unto all Israel. ² And he said unto them, I ^a am an hundred and twenty years old this day; I can no more ^b go out and come in: also the LORD hath said unto me, ^c Thou shalt not

¹ Isa. 45. 19.
^m Rom. 10. 6, &c.

ⁿ ver. 1. 19.
^{ch.} 11. 26.

^o ch. 4. 26. & 8. 19.

^p ch. 4. 26. & 31. 23.
^q ver. 15.

^r Ps. 27. 1. & 66. 9.
^s John 11. 25.

^a Ex. 7. 7.
^{ch.} 34. 7.
^b Num. 27. 17.
¹ Kings 3. 7.
^c Num. 20. 12. & 27. 13. ch. 3. 27.

11—14. this commandment] Here is another proof that these prophecies look forward to the restoration of Israel in Christ. For, as the Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, affirms, it is the “Righteousness which is by Faith” (as contrasted with the Righteousness which is by the Law) which speaks here; and the Word, of which Moses here speaks, as being in the heart, is the Word of faith preached by the Apostles of Christ; and it is even also the Eternal Word, Who became Incarnate for us; see below on Rom. x. 6—8. 17, 18, where St. Paul adopts the words of the Septuagint here, and adds “if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus Christ, and believe in thy heart that God raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.”

In a marvellous and mysterious manner, not unfrequent in Holy Scripture (see below on Heb. iv. 12, p. 391), the Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, passes from the mention of the WORD spoken and written, to the mention of the WORD Incarnate; and no wonder, for CHRIST is the end of the Law to all that believe (Rom. x. 4); and the WORD is come down from heaven, and the WORD has risen like a second Jonah (Matt. xii. 39, 40) from the depths of the sea, even from the lowest gulph of Death; and is conceived and born by faith in the heart of every believer, and is brought forth in his life, that “he may do” what he believes (see on Matt. xii. 48). The question is not, whether Moses himself understood all that St. Paul deduces from the words which were uttered by Moses. But it cannot be doubted, that the Holy Ghost, who spake through (δὲ) St. Paul, has given a correct view of what was in His own Divine Mind when He spake through (δὲ) Moses the words which we here read. Cp. the excellent remarks in Burgon’s Sermons on Inspiration, pp. 203, 204.

— is not hidden] Literally, is not too wonderful (cp. xvii. 8. Matt. xxi. 42), not too hard for thee.

12. It is not in he ven] This and the following verse have a twofold sense—first, with reference to the Word spoken and written (as St. Paul teaches), to the Word Incarnate (see above on v. 11).

14. the word is very nigh unto thee] Made so in a mysterious manner by the Incarnation of Him Who is the Eternal WORD, and was made flesh (John i. 14), and took the nature of all, and so became nigh to all—their Goël, or near kinsman—and Who made us members of Himself, and Who dwells in the hearts of all by faith, especially in the Holy Communion of His body and blood (John vi. 56. 1 Cor. x. 16). Therefore (as Augustine says, Qu. 54), these words direct our eyes to the New Testament (cp. Theodoret, Qu. 38).

— in thy heart] As our Lord said to the Jews, “The Kingdom of God is within you” (Luke xvii. 21).

19. choose life] Another proof that Moses here looks forward to the gathering together of Israel in Christ; and preaches of Him in Whom Abraham believed, as the object of faith; for no one can choose life except by the help of the Spirit, which Christ, Who is the Life, gives (cp. Rom. iii. 26; ix. 30).

Here is a proof of human free will (Justin Martyr., Apol. ii. p. 63. Cp. below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, pp. 197—199).

20. he is thy life] that is, Christ. See John xiv. 6. 1 John v. 12. 20; and above, on xxviii. 66; and Rom. x. 4—9, the best exposition of this text (cp. Tertullian c. Marcion. iv. 15).

CH. XXXI. 1.] Here begins another Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to the end of this chapter. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is Isa. lv. 6 to lvi. 8, containing a divine exhortation to repentance and holiness; and Hosea iv. 2—10, or xiv. 1—9, containing expostulations for sin, and promises of blessing to repentance; and Micah vii. 18—20, extolling God’s mercy and pardon to the penitent.

2. an hundred and twenty years old] Of which he had lived forty in Egypt; forty in Midian; forty in the wilderness (Acts vii. 20. 23. 29, 30. Exod. vii. 7).

— I can no more go out] Not from failure of strength (see xxxiv. 7), but because he might not enter Canaan. Or it may be rendered, I shall not be able longer, &c.

d ch. 9. 3.

e Num. 27. 21.
ch. 3. 28.
f ch. 3. 21.
g Num. 21. 24,
33.
h ch. 7. 2.

i Josh. 10. 25.
1 Chron. 22. 13.
k ch. 1. 29. & 7.
18.
l ch. 20. 4.
m Josh. 1. 5.
Heb. 13. 5.

n ver. 23. ch. 1.
38. & 3. 28.
Josh. 1. 6.

o Ex. 13. 21, 22.
& 33. 14. ch. 9. 3.
p Josh. 1. 5, 9.
1 Chron. 28. 20.

q ver. 25.
ch. 17. 18.
r Num. 4. 15.
Josh. 3. 3.
1 Chron. 15. 12,
15.

go over this Jordan. ³ The LORD thy God, ^d he will go over before thee, and he will destroy these nations from before thee, and thou shalt possess them: and Joshua, he shall go over before thee, ^e as the LORD hath said. ^{4 f} And the LORD shall do unto them ^g as he did to Sihon and to Og, kings of the Amorites, and unto the land of them, whom he destroyed. ⁵ And ^h the LORD shall give them up before your face, that ye may do unto them according unto all the commandments which I have commanded you. ^{6 i} Be strong and of a good courage, ^k fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, ^l he it is that doth go with thee; ^m he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

⁷ And Moses called unto Joshua, and said unto him in the sight of all Israel, ⁿ Be strong and of a good courage: for thou must go with this people unto the land which the LORD hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it. ³ And the LORD, ^o he it is that doth go before thee; ^p he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed.

⁹ And Moses wrote this law, ^q and delivered it unto the priests the sons of Levi, ^r which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and unto all the elders of Israel. ¹⁰ And Moses commanded them, saying, At the end of every seven

3. Joshua, he shall go over before thee] The Law cannot bring us to heaven; but Jesus and the Gospel go before us to lead us thither (see above, Exod. xxiv. 13. Num. xiii. 6. 16; xxvii. 16—18; xxxiv. 17. Deut. i. 38; xxxiv. 9. John i. 17; x. 4).

This coincidence of the name of the leader of Israel into Canaan with that of the "Captain of our Salvation," our fore-runner, JESUS, into the heavenly Canaan, was a providential dispensation; and with what fresh joy and exultation must the readers of the Septuagint Version of the Law of Moses have read such passages as these after the preaching of the Gospel of JESUS CHRIST; and after the full revelation of the Type in the Antitype,—καὶ Ἰησοῦς ὁ προπορευόμενος πρὸ προσώπου σου, κατὰ ἐλάλησε Κύριος! Cp. S. Cyril, Glaph. in Deut. p. 428; and Procop. Gaz. on v. 7; and below, Introduction to Joshua.

6. he it is] Here, and in v. 8, the Chaldee Targum of Onkelos has "HIS WORD is with thee; and will be thy help." Surely such phrases as these were also providentially ordered as preparatives to St. John's Gospel: see there, i. 1.

7. Moses called unto Joshua] The Law is a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ (Gal. iii. 24).

9. Moses wrote this law] The Greek Version paraphrases thus: Moses wrote all the words of this law in a book. The words, "Law," Heb. torah, "Book of the Law," Heb. sepher hattorah, "the Law of the Lord" (torath Jehovah, 2 Chron. xvii. 9. Neh. ix. 3. Luke ii. 23), are to be explained from the sense of the Hebrew verb yarah, to instruct; horah, to teach; and they signify instruction, doctrine (Gesen., pp. 366. 860). The "Law" (Torah) is the Book of instruction which Jehovah gave through Moses, first to the Hebrew people, and next to the whole world. Cp. Delitzsch, Gen. p. 15.

— and delivered it unto the priests the sons of Levi, which bare the ark— and unto all the elders of Israel] And he commanded the Priests to put it by the side of the ark in the Holy of Holies; see below, vv. 24—26.

The Law was delivered to those Levites who were Priests, and they are said to bear the Ark, because on solemn occasions they carried it, as in the passage through Jordan (Josh. iii. 3; iv. 9), and in the circuits round Jericho (Josh. vi. 6), and in the proclamation of the Law at Ebal and Gerizim (Josh. viii. 33), and in the dedication of Solomon's Temple (1 Kings viii. 3), and because the Priests only had access to the Ark (cp. Num. iv. 5, 6, and iv. 15).

From these two passages (vv. 9. 24) it appears probable that the act of the delivery of the Law was performed twice:—

(1) To the priests, and also to the elders,—the respective representatives of the ecclesiastical and civil polity—as a sign, that the Law was to be the Rule of their conduct and administration in their several functions. This act was like the delivery of the Holy Scriptures to the Christian Priest at his Ordination; and like the delivery of the Bible to the Christian Sovereigns of England at their coronation.

(2) To the Levitical Priests—when the Book was completed (v. 26),—to be guarded, and kept under their care, by the side of the Ark, in the Holy of Holies (cp. Hengstenberg, Auth. ii. 155. Keil on Hävernick, Einleit. i. ii. 20).

The question is, what Book was this? It seems to have been the whole of the Pentateuch; which was now completed.

This appears probable from the following facts;— Moses did not divide the Law into books, as we see them divided now. They formed one continuous whole. The names, Genesis, Exodus, &c., are not of primitive Hebrew origin; but are all Greek, and of a date long after the age of Moses. The continuity of the books of Moses seems to be marked by the commencement of them with the conjunction "and;" see Exod. i. 1. Lev. i. 1. Num. i. 1.

It is true that this conjunction is found at the beginning of other books written by other authors, e. g., Joshua; and this was probably adopted in imitation of the practice of Moses, and in order that those other books might be recognized as parts of the sacred canon which had begun to be formed in the Pentateuch.

In the ancient Hebrew method of writing on rolls of parchment, there was something very favourable for the declaration and preservation of this unity and continuity of the Pentateuch. It is not an easy thing to tack one modern book to another so as to make one volume; but it was an easy thing for Moses to glue one skin of parchment on to another, accordingly as he composed the successive parts of the Pentateuch, so as to form one Roll, and to deliver that one Roll into the hands of the Priest. The writers of the New Testament (as indeed all the Jews) regarded the Five books of Moses as constituting the Law; see on Matt. xxii. 40. St. Paul asks, "Do you not hear the Law?" (Gal. iv. 21.) when he quotes Genesis (xvi. 21). Nehemiah says, "as it is written in the Law" (Neh. x. 36), when he quotes Exodus (xiii. 12). Josiah is said to perform the words of the Law (2 Kings xxiii. 24), when he executed an order in Leviticus (xix. 30). Hezekiah did what was written in the Law (2 Chron. xxxi. 3), when he fulfilled the requirements of Numbers (xxviii. xxix.). Joshua did what was written in the Law (Josh. viii. 30), when he did what is prescribed in Deuteronomy (xxvii. 4).

Moses here commands that "the Book of the Law," when completed, should be read publicly at the end of "every seven years, in the solemnity of the year of release, in the Feast of Tabernacles" (see v. 10).

We find that this order was complied with by the Jews at their return from Babylon (see Neh. viii. 1—18), and it is evident that what was then read, was not only the Book of Deuteronomy, but the Book of Leviticus (see Neh. viii. 14, 15, compared with Lev. xxiii. 4. 40). On this subject see Mishna, Sota vii. 8, fol. 41. Holtinger de Solemn Legis lectione, 1717, where it is shown that the whole Law was read. Gousset, Lex. p. 347 "Loquitur Nehemias de toto Mosis volumine." Cp. Ezra iii. 2 years, in the solemnity of the 'year of release, 'in the feast of tabernacles, ^{s ch. 15. 1.}

^{t Lev. 23. 34.}
^{u ch. 16. 16.}
 11 When all Israel is come to "appear before the LORD thy God in the place

vii. 6. Joseph., Ant. iv. 8. 12. Hengstenberg, Authentic, ii. pp. 153—163, and the remarks in Graves on the Pentateuch, Lect. i.; and Havernick, Einleitung, Erlangen, 1836, i. pp. 17—22: see also the observations, to the same effect, of Schultz, Deuteron, pp. 91, 92. 646; and of Keil, p. 531.

This delivery of the Law to the Priests, and to all the Elders of Israel, was tantamount to a delivery of the Pentateuch to the whole Hebrew Nation, to be guarded carefully by them.

To this delivery it is that the Apostle St. Paul refers, when he asks, "What advantage hath the Jew?" and answers, "Much every way: chiefly, because unto them were committed the oracles of God" (Rom. iii. 1, 2).

This Book of the Law was not only delivered to them: the Priests were also commanded to deposit the sacred Original by the side of the Ark, which was enshrined in the Holy of Holies in the Tabernacle (ev. 24—26). It was from this copy "which was before the Priests the Levites" (see above, xvii. 18) that the Kings were commanded to make a transcript, at their accession to the throne. It was probably to this copy that Joshua annexed the words written by God's command: see Josh. xxiv. 26, "Joshua wrote these words in the book of the Law of God." And we read, that "Samuel told the people the manner (or law) of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book (the book), and laid it up before the Lord" (1 Sam. x. 25), which shows that the Tabernacle was a depository of Sacred Archives.

It was probably this original copy of the Law which was found in the Temple in the days of Josiah (2 Chron. xxxiv. 15); it having been secreted by the Priests in the preceding reigns of the idolatrous kings, Manasseh and Amon, to preserve it from their impious rage (2 Chron. xxxiii. 5).

Hence it is that Josephus speaks of "the Scripture deposited in the Temple" (Ant. iii. 1. 7; v. 1. 17); and the Christian Fathers speak of the "armarium Judaicum," in which the Old Testament was contained: see Tertullian de Cult. Fem. i. 3; and Epiphanius de Mensuris, p. 162,—ἐν τῷ ἀρῶν (i. e., the Ark) ἀνετέθησαν, τοῦτ' ἔστιν, ἐν τῇ τῆς διαθήκης κιβωτῷ; and Augustine (de Civ. Dei xv. 23), "Canon Scripturarum servabatur in Templo Hebræi populi, succedentium diligentia sacerdotum." S. Joan. Damasc. de Fide iv. 17, where he distinguishes the Apocryphal books from the Canonical by saying οὐκ ἔκειντο ἐν τῇ κιβωτῷ. Cp. Schmid, Hist. Canon, pp. 229—233. Vitringa de Synag. Vet. pp. 177—182. It is in imitation of this divinely-ordered deposition of the Law in the Holy of Holies, that the Jewish People, even to the present day, preserve in every synagogue, in a sacred chest (aron hak-kodesh) in a veiled sanctuary, a copy of the Law, which is brought forth with great solemnity, to be unrolled and read in the ears of the people: see Buxtorf de Synagoga, cap. xiv. pp. 283, 284.

It would seem as if the heathens themselves were aware that the Roll of the Law of Moses was connected with the Ark. Juvenal says (xiv. 102), "Traddit arcano quæcumque Volumine Moyses;" and Cicero explains the word arcanum, as derived "ab arcâ, in quâ quæ clausa sunt tuta manent."

However this may be, in the command of God Himself, that the Book of the Law should be delivered by Moses to the Guardians of the Tabernacle, and be deposited at the side of the Ark in the Holy of Holies, there was a divine provision for its safe custody, and also a divine attestation, in the eyes of all Israel, to its Truth and Inspiration.

The Tabernacle itself was holy ground; the Sanctuary was the Holy Place into which only God's Ministers might come; and into the Holy of Holies only the High Priest might enter once a year. The Ark was the throne of God; His Presence rested on it within the Veil.

The Pentateuch, therefore, being placed by the side of the Ark, probably, in a case, or chest, provided for that purpose (see Schultz, p. 646), and enshrined in God's own Sanctuary, even in the Holiest of all, was separated by God from all common books: it was avouched by Him to be an unique book. He placed it under the wings of the Cherubim. He received it under the shadow of His own wings, and it was made safe under His feathers (Ps. xci. 4).

This Book, so received, so revered, so guarded, was not to be kept secret, but to be published by open reading in the ears of all Israel; and it was read during seven days in the seventh month (Neh. viii. 2. 18), in the year of release at the Feast of Tabernacles, when they were exhorted to rest from their labours, and to devote themselves to meditation on God's Law, and to prepare themselves by holy exercises for the sabbatical year of the Coming of the Messiah, to proclaim release from debts, that is, the forgiveness of sins (Luke iv. 19: see S. Cyril, Glaph. p. 432. Cp. Bähr, Symb. ii. 603), and to prepare for the Sabbath of Eternity.

Here was another proof of its Truth and Inspiration.

If the people of Israel had not been convinced that it was true and inspired, they never would have received and read, and listened to, a Book which gives such an unfavourable character of themselves: see above on ix. 1; and Graves on the Pentateuch, Part i., Lect. ii. and pp. 33, 34; and the present Editor's Lectures on Inspiration, pp. 42, 43. This divine provision for preserving Holy Scripture in its integrity; and this provision also of an external testimony to the Integrity, Truth, and Inspiration of Holy Scripture, have been continued from the times of Moses to our own day.

The Visible Church of God is the divinely-appointed Guardian and Witness of Holy Writ; and whatever Books have been delivered by God to the custody of the Church of God; and whatever books were acknowledged as divine by Jesus Christ, the Great Head of the Church; and whatever books are avouched by the Holy Spirit of God dwelling in the Church Universal, those books we believe to be true, "and to be given by inspiration of God." Cp. XXXIX Articles, Art. vi.

After these remarks were written, the Editor was gratified by seeing the following confirmation of them in the pages of a recent work by a learned person, who possesses pre-eminent qualifications for pronouncing an opinion on this subject. I refer to what is said in Dr. Pusey's Lectures on Daniel the Prophet (p. 306),—"The close of the Pentateuch contains a solemn account, with what earnest protest Moses, when ready to depart, delivered the Law to the Priests the Levites, and all the elders of the people, to be read publicly at the Feast of Tabernacles in the seventh year, the year of release (Deut. xxi. 10, 11), when hearts would be gladliest. Besides this public gift and public use, Moses gave a copy of it to be laid up by the side of the Ark (Deut. xxxi. 26, 27),—Moses commanded the Levites who bare the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying, Take this Book of the Law, and place it at the side of the Ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, and it shall be a witness against you. It was deposited there, not as a mere place of safety, but close by the place of the typical atonement for sin, the Ark of the covenant, as the protest against their national breach of that covenant by idolatry. There was yet further the provision, that the King, when he should come to the throne, should (Deut. xvii. 18) write for himself the copy of this Law in a book, from that which is before the Priests the Levites, and it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life. This book, it is plain from the Pentateuch itself, was not a section only of it, since the word the book is used in the larger sense in the Pentateuch itself. In regard to Amalek, Moses is commanded, 'Write this for a memorial in the book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua' (Exod. xvii. 14). 'Moses took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people.' The curse is threatened to Israel (Deut. xxviii. 58, 61), 'if thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book.' To this book Joshua added. Without entering into the details, how much he added, the fact of his so adding is stated clearly at the close of his book (Josh. xxiv. 26),—'Joshua wrote these words in the Book of the Law of the Lord.' The very form in which Joshua and the other historical books (except the Chronicles) begin, 'And it was,' shows that the writers intended to join them to previous books. A Hebrew writer would not use the form any more than we should, unless he intended by it to join on his book to a previous whole. In the Book of Chronicles, which is a whole by itself, Ezra does not use it, nor does Daniel.

"Samuel again, when he had 'told the people the law of the kingdom, wrote it in the book, and laid it up before the Lord' (1 Sam. x. 35), on the same ground on which Moses had so laid up the law, as a memorial against its infraction.

"So also as to the books of the prophets, Isaiah bids his people (Isa. xxxiv. 16), Search ye out of the Book of the Lord, and read, using the corresponding word to that which our Lord used (John v. 39), Search the Scriptures. Isaiah appeals here, as elsewhere (Isa. xiii. 9), to the evident fulfilment of prophecy. But he speaks of it as a whole, as one book of the Lord, of which his own should form a part, in which they who should search should find; in which God's Word, and the coming events which he foretold, were accurately paired one with the other. No one of these [predicted things] shall fail—none shall want her mate.

x Josh. 8. 34. 35.
2 Kings 23. 2.
Neh. 8. 1, 2, 3,
&c.
y ch. 4. 10.

z ch. 11. 2.
a Ps. 78. 6, 7.

b Num. 27. 13.
ch. 34. 5.

c ver. 23.
Num. 27. 19.
d Ex. 33. 9.

† Heb. lie down,
2 Sam. 7. 12.
e Ex. 32. 6.
f Ex. 34. 15.
Judg. 2. 17.
g ch. 32. 15.
Judg. 2. 12. & 10.
6, 13.
h Judg. 2. 20.
i 2 Chron. 15. 2.
k ch. 32. 20.
Ps. 104. 29.
Isa. 8. 17. & 64. 7.
Ezek. 39. 23.
† Heb. find them.
Neh. 9. 32.
l Judg. 6. 13.
m Num. 14. 42.
n ver. 17.

o ver. 26.

which he shall choose, *thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing. ¹² y Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the words of this law: ¹³ And that their children, ^z which have not known any thing, ^a may hear, and learn to fear the LORD your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

¹⁴ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^b Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourselves in the tabernacle of the congregation, that ^c I may give him a charge. And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation. ¹⁵ And ^d the LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud: and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle. ¹⁶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt [†] sleep with thy fathers; and this people will ^e rise up, and ^f go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land, whither they go to be among them, and will ^g forsake me, and ^h break my covenant which I have made with them. ¹⁷ Then my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and ⁱ I will forsake them, and I will ^k hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall [†] befall them; so that they will say in that day, ^l Are not these evils come upon us, because our God is ^m not among us? ¹⁸ And ⁿ I will surely hide my face in that day for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods. ¹⁹ Now therefore write ye this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: put it in their mouths, that this song may be ^o a witness for me against the children of Israel. ²⁰ For when I shall have brought them into the land which

“The use of the Law by the prophets, and of the earlier prophets by those who succeeded them, implies the same thing. It has been pointed out how prophets of Israel, Hosea and Amos, appeal to, or presuppose, the Law of Moses, as well known in the schismatic kingdom of Israel; and so how certain it is, that the Law as contained in the Pentateuch was an existing authority, which Jeroboam could not shake off, but had to adapt his corruption of religion as well as he could to it” (Dr. Pusey).

11. thou shalt read this law] A command which was complied with, for many generations (see Neh. viii. 1—3, and foregoing note). After the return from the Captivity, Synagogues were erected in all parts of the land of Israel; and in course of time they were constructed in all countries wherever the Jews were dispersed, and in these synagogues, the Law and the Prophets were read every Sabbath-day (Acts xiii. 27; xv. 21).

Our Blessed Lord authorized, and took part in, this public reading of the Law and the Prophets (see Luke iv. 16—20); so did the Apostles, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost (see below, Introduction to Acts, pp. 8, 9). Thus an additional security was given for the preservation of the Law; and thus Our Lord Himself, the Son of God, and thus the Holy Spirit of God, Who was in the Apostles, bore testimony to its Truth and Inspiration.

Further, when the books of the New Testament were written, similar means were adopted for preserving them in their integrity, and for assuring the world of their Truth and Inspiration. See below, 1 Thess. v. 27, p. 23.

Thus then we see, that there has been an uniform plan from the beginning, for assuring the world of the integrity, veracity, and divine origin of the Holy Scriptures.

We do not underrate the importance of internal evidence in the books themselves, and of the truth and importance of the evidence to the same effect in the heart of man, when led by the Spirit of God, or of the evidence derived from the salutary effects of the Scriptures on human society. But we must not rest our argument only on what is more or less subjective, relative, and variable, according to the personal feelings or private experience of individuals. But we must appeal also to the external testimony of God Himself, speaking both in word and deed, and guarding the Integrity, and guaranteeing the Truth and Inspiration of Holy Scripture, by such acts as these—namely, the consignment of the Pentateuch to the Priests and Elders of Israel; the enshrining of it in the Holy of Holies at the side of the Ark of the Covenant; the command to Kings of Israel to transcribe it (see xvii. 18); the divine command to read it publicly; the open reading of it in the ears of all the people; the reading of the Law and the Prophets in the Synagogues on every Sabbath-day throughout all countries where the Jews were scattered; the testimony of the SON of GOD when upon earth to the Truth and divine Inspiration of the Old Testament; the testimony of the Holy Spirit, speaking by the Apostles of Christ, to the same effect; the witness of the Holy Ghost speaking in the Universal Church of Christ, which is His Body (Eph. i. 23. Col. i. 18), “the Pillar and Ground of the Truth” (1 Tim. iii. 15).

14, 15. And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tabernacle—And the LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud] Here was a foreshadowing of the Transfiguration, when Moses and the Divine Joshua stood side by side, and when Peter, “not knowing what he said,” proposed to make a separate Tabernacle for each (whereas there is but one Tabernacle, that of God and of Christ, in which Moses was only a servant, Heb. iii. 5); and when the bright cloud came and overshadowed them, then the voice came forth out of the cloud, “This is My Beloved Son: hear Him” (Matt. xvii. 4—6. Mark ix. 5—7. Luke ix. 33—35. Cp. S. Cyril, Glaphyr. in Deut. pp. 428—430).

19. write ye] The command is given by God to Joshua as well as to Moses, to write the Song (see v. 14).

Here is a direct assertion of the divine inspiration of this Song. It was to be written by Moses and Joshua from the mouth of God Himself, Who said, “Write ye this Song”—as Christ said to John in Patmos, “Write in a Book” (Rev. i. 11. 19; ii. 1. 8. 12, &c.; xxi. 5). Joshua was associated with Moses in the writing, because Moses was now near his death, and Joshua was to be a witness after his death to the divine delivery of this song, and was to take care that it should be learnt by the people.

—this song] In ch. xxxii., the Epilogue of the Law, Moses begins the wanderings, and ends them with a song of Praise to God (see above, Exod. xv.): both are Prophetical Hymns.

I swear unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey; and they shall have eaten and filled themselves, ^pand waxen fat; ^qthen will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant. ²¹ And it shall come to pass, ^rwhen many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify [†]against them as a witness; for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed: for ^sI know their imagination [†]which they [†]go about, even now, before I have brought them into the land which I swear. ²² Moses therefore wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel. ²³ ^uAnd he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, ^xBe strong and of a good courage: for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I swear unto them: and I will be with thee.

p ch. 32. 15.
Neh. 9. 25, 26.
Hos. 13. 6.
q ver. 16.
r ver. 17.

† Heb. before.

s Hos. 5. 3. & 13.
5, 6.
t Amos 5. 25, 26 † Heb. do.

u ver. 14.
x ver. 7.
Josh. 1. 6.

²⁴ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of ^ywriting the words of this law in a book, until they were finished, ²⁵ That Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying, ²⁶ Take this book of the law, ^zand put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there ^afor a witness against thee. ²⁷ ^bFor I know thy rebellion, and thy ^cstiff neck: behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD; and how much more after my death? ²⁸ Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, ^dand call heaven and earth to record against them. ²⁹ For I know that after my death ye will utterly ^ecorrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and ^fevil will befall you ^gin the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands.

y ver. 9.

z See 2 Kings 22 8.
a ver. 19.
b ch. 9. 24. & 32.
20.
c Ex. 32. 9.
ch. 9. 6.

d ch. 30. 19. &
32. 1.
e ch. 32. 5.
Judg. 2. 19.
Hos. 9. 9.

f ch. 28. 15.
g Gen. 49. 1.
ch. 4. 30.

³⁰ And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended;

XXXII. ¹ Give ^aear, O ye heavens, and I will speak;

a ch. 4. 26. & 30.
19. & 31. 28.

Ps. 50. 4. Isa. 1. 2. Jer. 2. 12. & 6. 19.

23. I will be with thee] These are words of God Himself.

Observe, though God Himself gives to Joshua a special promise of divine help, yet Joshua was not dispensed from making an outward call, a visible ordination and mission, by the laying on of the hands of Moses. See Num. xxvii. 18. 23; and cp. St. Paul's case, Acts xiii. 1—3; and even that of the Divine Joshua himself (Heb. v. 5).

25. the Levites] the priests of that tribe. See v. 9. Num. iv. 5. Josh. iii. 3; iv. 9; vi. 6; viii. 33. 1 Kings viii. 3.

26. put it in the side of the ark] Rather, by the side of the Ark; it was not in the Ark; see 1 Kings viii. 9. Heb. ix. 4. Joseph., Ant. viii. 4. 1; and Targum of Jonathan, which says that it was placed in a chest near the Ark (cp. Hävernick, Einleitung, i. pp. 19. 22). Hence Josephus speaks of the Scriptures as laid up in the Temple of God (Ant. iii. 1. 4; v. 1).

On this important subject see the note above, v. 9.

It was probably this "Temple-Copy" that was discovered in Josiah's days: it had perhaps been hidden by some of the priests for safety in the preceding times of idolatry and persecution. See on 2 Kings xxii. 8—10. 2 Chron. xxxiv. 14; and cp. Hävernick, Einleitung, § 139, or § 35 of the English translation of that portion of it.

CH. XXXII. 1.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law, and extends to the end of the chapter. The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is 2 Sam. xxii. 1—51, containing David's farewell song of thanksgiving to God for His mercies; a psalm which bears in many respects a resemblance to this of Moses; compare the appellation of God as a Rock at the beginning of each, and see there (v. 2), "The Lord is my Rock; the God of my Rock, in Him will I trust," and (v. 32), "Who is a Rock save our God?" and (v. 47), "The Lord liveth, and blessed be my Rock, and exalted be the God of the Rock of my salvation."

Also, in some synagogues, Hos. xiv. 2—10. Joel ii. 15—27. Ezek. xvii. 22—xviii. 32, containing exhortations to repentance, and promises of grace and pardon in Christ, are read as parallel prophetic lessons.

In this song, the great Lawgiver, who had begun his Exodus with a hymn of praise and prophecy (see Exod. xiv.), and who has now finished his course, and is on the eve of a blessed Exodus and entrance to the spiritual Canaan, and to the presence of Christ, casts his eye backward to Creation (v. 7), to the division of the earth among the descendants of Noah after the flood (v. 8), to the call of Israel (v. 10), to their deliverance from Egypt, and to the journey in the wilderness, through which they had been borne on eagle's wings by God (xxii. 11). He thence looks forward to Israel's defection from God, and to all its unhappy consequences, to their idolatries, and rejection, and to the call of the Gentiles (v. 21); and, lastly, he reveals the glorious consummation of the recovery of Israel, and the blessed union of all, both Jew and Gentile, in the worship of God (v. 43).

This Hymn has (what all genuine Hymns have) a doctrinal character (see v. 2),—"My doctrine shall drop as the rain:" it realizes St. Paul's description of a Hymn; "teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your hearts to the Lord" (Eph. v. 19. Col. iii. 16. Cp. the Editor's Preface to the "Holy Year," 1865).

Both the songs of Moses are like rehearsals of the song of victory of the Church glorified in heaven (see Rev. xv. 3, and Introduction to the Book of Revelation, pp. 148, 149).

Some modern critics (such as Ewald, Knobel, Colenso, and others) deny the genuineness of this song; and ascribe it, with great confidence, to an age much later than Moses. But their objections will be found to have no weight. There are doubtless unique words in this song; but that might be expected in such a lyrical composition; and these are such as a forger would have avoided rather than have adopted. Writing in the name of Moses he would have carefully imitated his style (see above, Introduction to Deuteronomy, p. 196).

At the same time, there are also many remarkable coinci-

And hear, O earth, the words of my mouth.

b Isa. 55. 10, 11.
1 Cor. 3. 6, 7, 8.

² b My doctrine shall drop as the rain,
My speech shall distil as the dew,

c Ps. 72. 6.
Mic. 5. 7.

^c As the small rain upon the tender herb,
And as the showers upon the grass :

³ Because I will publish the name of the LORD :

d 1 Chron. 29. 11.

^d Ascribe ye greatness unto our God.

e 2 Sam. 22. 3. &
23. 3.

⁴ He is ^e the Rock, ^f his work is perfect :
For ^g all his ways are judgment :

Ps. 18. 2, 31, 46.

Hab. 1. 12.

f 2 Sam. 22. 31.

g Dan. 4. 37.

Rev. 15. 3.

h Jer. 10. 10.

i Job 34. 10.

Ps. 92. 15.

† Heb. He hath corrupted to himself.

k ch. 31. 29.

‡ Or, that they are not his children, that is their blot.

l Matt. 17. 17.

Luke 9. 41.

Phil. 2. 15.

m Ps. 116. 12.

n Isa. 63. 16.

o Ps. 74. 2.

p ver. 15.

Isa. 27. 11. & 41.

2.

† Heb. generation and generation.

q Ex. 13. 14.

Ps. 44. 1. & 78. 3,

4.

r Zech. 9. 2.

Acts 17. 26.

^h A God of truth and ⁱ without iniquity,
Just and right is he.

⁵ † ^k They have corrupted themselves,

‡ Their spot is not the spot of his children :

They are a ^l perverse and crooked generation.

⁶ Do ye thus ^m requite the LORD,

O foolish people and unwise ?

Is not he ⁿ thy father that hath ^o bought thee ?

Hath he not ^p made thee, and established thee ?

⁷ Remember the days of old,

Consider the years of † many generations :

^q Ask thy father, and he will shew thee ;

Thy elders, and they will tell thee.

⁸ When the most High ^r divided to the nations their inheritance, dences in imagery and diction between this song and other parts of the Pentateuch (cp. Keil, p. 537), some of which will be noted in the course of the chapter. And a forger, wishing to gain acceptance of his poem from the Hebrew nation, would not have spoken of the Hebrew nation in the strong terms of censure which are applied to it in this poem (see vv. 15—28) ; and certainly no Jewish forger in a post-Mosaic age would have been able or willing to set before the eyes of the Hebrew nation that blessed and glorious mystery which (as we know from St. Paul) is revealed in this song (see v. 21), the rejection of the Jews, and the call of the Gentiles, and their admission to the favour of God in the place of the Jews, and the ultimate union of both in praising God (v. 43)—“ Rejoice, ye nations, with His people ;” and the Holy Spirit, speaking by the Apostle, sets His divine seal on this song as a genuine work of Moses, thus saying, “ Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people ; by a foolish nation I will anger you” (Rom. x. 19) ; see below, on v. 21 ; and for a vindication of the genuineness of this chapter, see Schultz, pp. 647—650, who has given a version of it, arranged antistrophically (pp. 651—680).

2. as the rain] An image of great propriety here, as very agreeable and refreshing to the Israelites after forty years’ wandering in the parched and barren wilderness, and now come to the fertile plains of Moab.

— small rain] Heb. seirim : a unique word in this sense, and not found elsewhere in the Pentateuch ; and the same may be said of rebibim, showers ; and emunah, truth, in v. 4, only found once in the Pentateuch (Exod. xvii. 12). This has been made an argument against the Mosaic origin of Deuteronomy (Colenso, § 799), but surely with no reason. What wonder that the former words should not occur in a record which never mentions the fall of rain in the forty years’ wandering ? And as for emunah, it occurs only once in Deuteronomy itself, viz., in the passage before us. Were therefore the other thirty-two chapters, and all the other parts of the thirty-third, written by another author ?

3. greatness] Heb. godel, found only in this song and in Deut. iii. 24 ; v. 21 ; ix. 26 ; xi. 2 ; and Num. xiv. 19.

4. the Rock] Heb. tsur, whence tur (Chald.), and Tyrus, the Rock. The Septuagint render this word here and vv. 18. 30. 37, by Θεός, God. This word, tsur or zur, for God, enters into many proper names in the Mosaic writings, e.g. Eli-zur (Num. i. 5), Pedah-zur (Num. i. 10), which is equivalent to Pedah-el (Num.

xxxiv. 28), Zur-iel (Num. iii. 25). Cp. Ewald, § 273, and Schultz, p. 653.

No one is called a Rock in the Old Testament, in this absolute figurative sense, but GOD. Isa. li. 1 is not an exception, for there the word is explained, so that there can be no confusion.

This title is applied to GOD here, vv. 15. 18. 30, 31. 37 ; and thence David borrows it in his farewell song (2 Sam. xxii. 2, 3. 32. 47).

Here is a confirmation of the truth, that the right interpretation of Matt. xvi. 18, “ On this ROCK I will build My Church,” is, that Christ is there speaking of HIMSELF (see the note there).

5. They have corrupted themselves] Literally, it (the people) hath corrupted (itself)—expressive of general degeneracy—against Him. Cp. ix. 12. Ezek. xxxii. 7.

— Their spot is not the spot of his children] Rather, they are not His children, but the stains of them ; that is, they are blemishes which sully His family. (Cp. Prov. ix. 7. Job xi. 15.) This image has been adopted by St. Peter (2 Pet. ii. 13), where false teachers and false brethren are called σπίλοι καὶ μῶμοι (the Hebrew mumim used here), spots and blemishes in God’s Church.

— a perverse and crooked generation] Another image adopted by the Apostles of Christ, in the words of the Septuagint Version here, γενεὰ σκολιὰ καὶ διεστραμμένη, Phil. ii. 15. Cp. Acts ii. 4.

6. Do ye thus requite] This question begins with a larger capital letter in the original, calling attention to this strange requital of God for His mercies.

— that hath bought thee] Thy Redeemer from bondage : this is more fully verified in Christ, Who hath purchased His Church with His own blood (Acts xx. 28. 1 Cor. vi. 20). And the question is therefore put with still greater force, and deserves a still larger initial capital letter (see last note) in the Gospel. Dost thou, O Christian, who sinnest against Christ, thus requite the Lord Who bought thee ? (Jude 4.)

7, 8. Remember the days of old] Here at the end of the Pentateuch, Moses aptly reverts to the beginning. He refers to the first records of Genesis ; the Creation of the World ; the formation of Adam ; the division of the world among the nations after the Flood. The word here for days is yemoth, which is only found here, and in the Psalm of Moses (Ps. xc. 15), &c.

When he ^s separated the sons of Adam,
He set the bounds of the people
According to the number of the children of Israel.

- ⁹ For ^t the LORD's portion is his people ;
Jacob is the [†] lot of his inheritance.
- ¹⁰ He found him ^u in a desert land,
And in the waste howling wilderness ;
He ^{||} led him about, he ^x instructed him,
He ^y kept him as the apple of his eye.
- ¹¹ ^z As an eagle stirreth up her nest,
Fluttereth over her young,
Spreadeth abroad her wings,
Taket^h them, beareth them on her wings :
- ¹² So the LORD alone did lead him,
And there was no strange god with him.
- ¹³ ^a He made him ride on the high places of the earth,
That he might eat the increase of the fields ;
And he made him to suck ^b honey out of the rock,
And oil out of the flinty rock ;
- ¹⁴ Butter of kine, and milk of sheep,
With fat of lambs,
And rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, ^c With the fat of kidneys of wheat ;

s Gen. 11. 8.

t Ex. 15. 16. & 19.

5.

1 Sam. 10. 1.

Ps. 78. 71.

† Heb. co'd.

u ch. 8. 15.

Jer. 2. 6.

Hos. 13. 5.

|| Or, compassedhim about.

x Deut. 4. 36.

y Ps. 17. 8.

Prov. 7. 2.

Zech. 2. 8.

z Ex. 19. 4.

ch. 1. 31.

Isa. 31. 5. & 46. 4.

& 63. 9.

Hos. 11. 3.

a ch. 33. 29.

Isa. 58. 14.

Ezek. 36. 2.

b Job 29. 6.

Ps. 81. 16.

c Ps. 81. 16. &

147. 14.

8. the sons of Adam] An assertion that all men are from one human father; cp. Acts xvii. 26, 27.

— According to the number of the children of Israel] There are seventy nations reckoned in Gen. x., and there were seventy souls of Israel in Egypt (Gen. xlvii. Deut. x. 22).

On this number, seventy, as the number of the Nations, see Jonathan here, and R. Menahem on Gen. xlvii., Nili Epist. iii. 116, and A Lapide here, and Charles Leslie, Short Method with the Jews (i. 83), who says that "the Jews suppose that the division of the world among seventy Nations was done with a particular prophetic respect to God's segullah, or peculiar possession, to be set up in Israel, whose sons, recorded in Gen. xlvii., are seventy. As our Saviour sent out Twelve Apostles with respect to the Twelve Tribes, so (says Leslie) He sent out Seventy disciples with respect to the Seventy Nations." And it is observable that their sending out is mentioned in the Gospel of St. Luke, the Evangelist specially of the Gentiles (Luke x. 1); and there is no restriction to them, as to the twelve, forbidding them to go to the Gentiles. See also Parker, Bibl. Bibl. p. 632; cp. Pfeiffer, Dubia, p. 168, who recites other interpretations.

There is, therefore, an analogy between Israel and the Nations of the Earth. Israel is a Microcosm: the World was, as it were, reduced, in consequence of its corruption, into one Family. Instead of Seventy Nations, God had seventy souls. This was His household. "For the Lord's portion is His people" (v. 9: cp. vii. 6; and Amos iii. 2). But these were to increase and multiply again, and sprout forth afresh. Jacob, God's firstborn, was to rise to new life in Christ. The Twelve Patriarchs were to shoot forth their branches in the Twelve Apostles, the Patriarchs of the Spiritual Israel; and to colonize the World. And now God has restored and built up Mankind into a Church Universal in Christ.

This is the consummation, to which the inspired Author of this song is gradually tending, and which at last he reaches, when he bursts forth in that joyous strain of exultation at the close of this Divine Hymn, where he announces the recovery of Israel, and the Union of all Nations, both Jew and Gentile, in the worship of God, "Rejoice, O ye Nations, with His People" (v. 43), as explained by St. Paul (Rom. xv. 10).

The Septuagint has here, "According to the number of the Angels of God" (cp. Justin M. c. Tryph. § 131, and S. Hilary in Ps. lxi.), which some have supposed to have been inserted in that version, lest the Greeks should be offended by the comparison; and also on account of the Jewish belief that each Nation had a guardian Angel (cp. Dan. x. 13. 20; xii. 1. See further on this subject, Parker, Bibl. Bibl. v. 633).

9. the lot] Heb. the line.

10. in a desert land] Such was the World without God.

— waste] Heb. bohu; see above, on Gen. i. 2. As the Earth was formed afresh out of ruined materials, so was Mankind created afresh in Israel, and in the promised Seed of Israel, that is, in Christ.

— howling wilderness] The wilderness in which wild beasts roar.

— the apple of his eye] Ps. xvii. 8. Zech. ii. 8.

11. As an eagle] the King of birds: this image, used in Exod. xix. 4, is fully verified in Him Who is called "the Great Eagle" (Rev. xii. 14), and Who bears His Church on Eagle's wings through the wilderness of this world (see on Rev. xii. 6. 14), and Who has ascended up into heaven with His young ones on His wings, and to Whom as their Parent, and their Life, and their Food, all true Eagles of the Gospel, as His children, are gathered now on Earth, and will be gathered for ever hereafter in heaven. See below, on Matt. xxiv. 28; Luke xvii. 37; 2 Thess. ii. 1; and "Introduction to the Book of Revelation," p. 148.

— Taket^h them, beareth them on her wings] Rather, He (that is, JEROVAH) took him (i. e. Israel), bare him, on His wings.

12. So] This word is not in the original, and ought to be expunged. Cp. Houbigant, and Bp. Horsley, p. 218; Keil, p. 543.

13. ride] as a conqueror. Cp. Ps. xlv. 4; lxvi. 12. Rev. vi. 2; xix. 11. 14.

— high places] The fortresses, the citadels, the "Capitols" of the earth. Cp. Isa. lviii. 14, where the same phrase is used.

— honey out of the rock, And oil!] Not only water, as in the wilderness, but even honey and oil; that is, an increase of blessings supplied miraculously by God in places where they might least be expected. Cp. Job xx. 17. Ps. lxxxi. 16.

This has been fulfilled in Christ; and in the honey and oil of spiritual graces and gifts of the Holy Ghost flowing forth from Him Who is the Rock of the Church. See 1 Cor. x. 4; and John i. 14. 16.

14. Butter of kine] not of goats or sheep. The Hebrew for butter here is chemah. On the different kinds of preparations of milk in Palestine, see Drake in B. D. i. 237.

— kidneys of wheat] Full, large, plump ears, very different from those in Gen. xli. 6, 7.

d Gen. 49. 11.

e ch. 33. 5, 26.

f 1 Sam. 2. 29.

g ch. 31. 20.

h Neh. 9. 25.

i Ps. 17. 10.

j Jer. 2. 7. & 5 f.

28.

k Hos. 13. 6.

l ch. 31. 16.

m Isa. 1. 4.

n ver. 6.

o Isa. 51. 13.

p k 2 Sam. 22. 47.

q Ps. 89. 26. & 95. 1.

r 1 Kings 14. 22.

s 1 Cor. 10. 22.

t m Lev. 17. 7.

u Ps. 106. 37.

v 1 Cor. 10. 20.

w Rev. 9. 20.

x Or, which were not God, ver. 21.

y n Isa. 17. 10.

z o Jer. 2. 32.

aa p Judg. 2. 14.

ab Or, despised,

ac Lam. 2. 6.

ad q Isa. 1. 2.

ae r ch. 31. 17.

af s Isa. 30. 9.

ag Matt. 17. 17.

ah t ver. 16.

ai Ps. 78. 58.

aj u 1 Sam. 12. 21.

ak 1 Kings 16. 13,

al 26.

am Ps. 31. 6.

an Jer. 8. 19. & 10. 8. & 14. 22.

And thou didst drink the pure ^d blood of the grape.

15 But ^e Jeshurun waxed fat, and ^f kicked :

^g Thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick,

Thou art covered with fatness ;

Then he ^h forsook God which ⁱ made him,

And lightly esteemed the ^k Rock of his salvation.

16 ^l They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods,

With abominations provoked they him to anger.

17 ^m They sacrificed unto devils, || not to God ;

To gods whom they knew not,

To new gods that came newly up,

Whom your fathers feared not.

18 ⁿ Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful,

And hast ^o forgotten God that formed thee.

19 ^p And when the LORD saw it, he || abhorred them,

^q Because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters.

20 And he said, ^r I will hide my face from them,

I will see what their end shall be :

For they are a very froward generation,

^s Children in whom is no faith.

21 ^t They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God ;

They have provoked me to anger ^u with their vanities :

And ^x I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people ;

Jonah 2. 8. Acts 14. 15. x Hos. 1. 10. Rom. 10. 19.

— pure blood of the grape] Cp. Gen. xlix. 10—12. The things here mentioned—honey, oil, butter, milk—are figures of the gifts of the Holy Spirit: see Luke x. 34. 1 Cor. iii. 1, 2. Heb. i. 9; v. 12—14. 1 Pet. ii. 2. Rev. vi. 6.

15. Jeshurun] from Heb. jasher, righteous. Cp. xxxiii. 5, and Isa. xlv. 2; the only other places where Jeshurun is found. Cp. Selden de Syned. ii. 2. He was righteous (see Num. xxii. 10, 21, and below on v. 29); but he waxed fat, like an ox too well fed, and kicked (cp. 1 Sam. ii. 29. Acts xxvi. 14). His blessings were his bane; he waxed wanton, and became unrighteous. Cp. Keil, p. 544.

— waxed fat] It is objected by some, that these words cannot have come from Moses, because they “cannot be supposed to describe the state of Israel in the wilderness” (Colenso, § 802). Why not? Are they stronger than the words of Stephen speaking of that state? see Acts vii. 41—44. Besides, Moses not only sees what they have done, but foresees what they will do, and speaks both from his knowledge and foreknowledge.

— lightly esteemed] Heb. yenabbel, that is, treated as nabal, or foolish; as to the contrast, see below, v. 21.

— Rock of his salvation] God his Saviour, Sept.

16. provoked him to jealousy] God vouchsafes to call Himself the Husband of His Church (Isa. liv. 5). The Hebrew Church by her idolatries (as Moses foresaw, and has here foretold) became guilty of spiritual fornication and adultery, and thus she provoked God to jealousy; and He gave her up to her lovers with whom she played the harlot (Jer. iii. 1); and He punished her by her own idolatries, and their consequent bitter fruits.

17. unto devils] Heb. shedim, wasters, destroyers, see Lev. xvii. 7, and cp. Ps. cvi. 37, “They sacrificed their sons and daughters to devils;” and 1 Cor. x. 20, where St. Paul quotes this text; and thus we learn, that though idols themselves are nothing (1 Cor. viii. 4), yet to worship them, is to worship the Evil Spirit, who works by them, and is the Author of idolatry. See below on Matt. iv. 10, and on 1 Cor. x. 20.

— new—that came newly up] Literally, from nigh at hand, not, as God, from Eternity: cp. Judg. v. 8.

— feared not] He specifies fear as the characteristic of idolatry; not love, which is the moving principle in the worship of the True God; Who delivers His servants from superstitious fears of heathen gods (Jer. x. 5).

20. Children in whom is no faith] See Justin Martyr's exposition of this prophecy (c. Tryphon. § 123), where he asserts that it was fulfilled in the rejection of the Jews by God, because they rejected Christ; and in the election of the Gentiles in their room, who by faith in Christ became God's children, the Israel of God. See also the Dialogue, §§ 20. 27.

21. I will move them to jealousy] The Hebrew Church was espoused to God in spiritual wedlock (see v. 16); but she provoked Him to jealousy by her spiritual harlotries (v. 17), therefore God would espouse to Himself a Church from the Gentile world; and so He would provoke the Hebrew Church to godly jealousy, and stimulate her to return to Him. This we know from St. Paul to be the true interpretation of these words of Moses, which the Apostle quotes in the precise words of the Septuagint version here, and ascribes to Moses, πῶτος Μωσῆς λέγει, Ἐγὼ παραζηλώσω ὑμᾶς ἐπὶ οὐκ ἔθνει, ἐπὶ ἔθνοι ἀσυνέτω παροργιᾷ ὑμᾶς (Rom. x. 19). Here is an answer to those who deny the genuineness and inspiration of this song. The Holy Spirit here, speaking by St. Paul, ascribes it to Moses, and He recognizes the Almighty Himself as speaking by him. “I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people.”

Besides, it is absolutely impossible that any uninspired person, in the age of Moses, could have foreseen and foretold the rejection of the Hebrew Nation by God, and the reception of the Gentile World, as His Spiritual Bride in her place. What uninspired Hebrew would or could have ever imagined this? What uninspired Hebrew would have ventured to have announced such a thing to the Hebrew Nation? And if he had dared to declare it, would the Hebrew Nation have ever accepted such a “bill of divorce” at his hands?

See also Justin Martyr's eloquent appeal to this prophecy in his dialogue with Trypho the Jew, § 119, where he says that the rejection of Christ was the cause of their rejection by God, and of the reception of the Gentiles by Him; and that thus the promise was fulfilled to Abraham, that in his seed all nations should be blessed, § 120, and cp. Origen, Hom. 9 in Jerem.; and Theodore here, Qu. 41; and S. Jerome, Mans. 42. It is certain, that if the Jews could have denied the genuineness and inspiration of this condemnation of themselves, and of this exaltation of the Gentiles in their room, they would have been very ready and eager to do so.

There is a noble contrast here in the original words of Moses. They have provoked Me to jealousy with a not-God (to-El), and I will provoke them to jealousy with a not-nation (to-am). They lightly esteemed, they treated as foolish (nabal)

- I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.
- 22 For ^y a fire is kindled in mine anger,
And || shall burn unto the lowest hell,
And || shall consume the earth with her increase,
And set on fire the foundations of the mountains.
- 23 I will ^z heap mischiefs upon them ;
^a I will spend mine arrows upon them.
- 24 They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with † burning heat,
And with bitter destruction :
I will also send ^b the teeth of beasts upon them,
With the poison of serpents of the dust.
- 25 ^c The sword without, and terror † within,
Shall † destroy both the young man and the virgin,
The suckling also with the man of gray hairs.
- 26 ^d I said, I would scatter them into corners,
I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men :
27 Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy,
Lest their adversaries ^e should behave themselves strangely,
And lest they should ^f say, || Our hand is high,
And the Lord hath not done all this.
- 28 For they are a nation void of counsel, ^g Neither is there any understanding in them.
- 29 ^h O that they were wise, that they understood this,
ⁱ That they would consider their latter end !
- 30 How should ^k one chase a thousand,
And two put ten thousand to flight,
Except their Rock ^l had sold them,
And the Lord had shut them up ?
- 31 For ^m their rock is not as our Rock,
ⁿ Even our enemies themselves being judges.
- 32 For ^o their vine || is of the vine of Sodom,
And of the fields of Gomorrah :
Their grapes are grapes of gall,
Their clusters are bitter :
33 Their wine is ^p the poison of dragons, y Jer. 15. 14. &

17. 4.
Lam. 4. 11.
|| Or, hath burned
|| Or, hath consumed.

z Isa. 26. 15.

a Ps. 7. 12, 13.
Ezek. 5. 16.
† Heb. burning coals: IIab. 3. 5.

b Lev. 26. 22.

c Lam. 1. 20.
Ezek. 7. 15.
2 Cor. 7. 5.
† Heb. from the chambers.
† Heb. bereave.

d Ezek. 20. 13,
14, 23.

e Jer. 19. 4.

f Ps. 140. 8.
|| Or, Our high hand, and not the Lord, hath done all this.

g Isa. 27. 11.
Jer. 4. 22.
h ch. 5. 29.
Ps. 81. 13. & I07. 43.
Luke 19. 42.
i Isa. 47. 7.
Lam. 1. 9.
k Lev. 26. 8.
Josh. 23. 10.
2 Chron. 24. 24.
Isa. 30. 17.
l Ps. 44. 12.
Isa. 50. 1. & 52. 3.

m I Sam. 2. 2.

n I Sam. 4. 8.
Jer. 40. 3.

o Isa. 1. 10.
|| Or, is worse than the vine of Sodom, &c.

p Ps. 58. 4

the Rock of their salvation (see v. 15), and thus provoked Me to anger ; and I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation (goi nabal) whom I will take to Myself as My Spouse in their stead. See 1 Pet. ii. 10.

22. a fire is kindled in mine anger, And shall burn] Words adopted by Jeremiah, xv. 14.

— the lowest hell] The Sept. has ἕως ἔδου κάτω: see Matt. xi. 23, where the words are applied to the great Jewish city of Capernaum, which rejected Christ.

— set on fire] These prophecies were specially fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans (Lam. iv. 8), and afterwards by the Romans. See Bp. Patrick here.

24, 25. hunger—burning heat—beasts—sword] God's four sore judgments (Ezek. v. 17. Jer. xv. 2).

26. I would scatter them into corners] Rather, perhaps, I will blow them away (Gesen. 664); or, I will exterminate them (Keil, 550); the verb is found only here.

29. consider their latter end] Consider and provide for the things which belong unto their peace: see our Lord's words, Luke xix. 42. Cp. Isa. xlvii. 7; Lam. i. 9, where the same phrase occurs: and cp. Balaam's words, Num. xxiii. 10, "Let me die the death of the righteous" (yesharim, cp. yeshurun above, v. 15), "and let my latter end (the same word as here) be like his!"

30. one chase a thousand] See Lev. xxvi. 7.

— sold them] as captives; as the Patriarchs sold Joseph, and as Judas sold Christ; and as cattle are sold. Cp. Ps. xlv. 13. Isa. 1. 1; lii. 3.

— shut them up] into the enemy's hand: cp. xxiii. 15, Ps. xxxi. 9, "Thou hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy."

31. their rock is not as our Rock] The gods of the Apostate Jews are not like the God of Moses, and of the faithful Hebrews, who looked forward with faith to Christ.

— our enemies—judges] Cp. I Sam. iv. 8. Exod. xiv. 25.

32. their vine] the Hebrew Church; a phrase taken from the dying address of Jacob. See the note there, Gen. xlix. 11. Cp. Ps. lxxx. 8. 14.

— of the vine of Sodom] Sion degenerated by idolatry into Sodom. See Isa. i. 10. Jer. ii. 21. Ezek. xvi. 45, 46. Rev. xi. 8; and cp. above, xxix. 23, where Israel is threatened with the fate of Sodom.

— gall] Heb. rosh. See above, xxix. 18.

33. Their vine] The fruit of the vine, that is of Israel, degenerate like Sodom, is not good wine, but poison, poison of dragons and asps. Cp. Exod. vii. 9. Isa. xi. 8. Ps. lviii. 4; xci. 13; cxl. 3. Rom. iii. 13.

- q Ps. 140. 3.
Rom. 3. 13.
r Job 14. 17.
Jer. 2. 22.
Hos. 13. 12.
Rom. 2. 5.
- s Ps. 94. 1.
Rom. 12. 19.
Heb. 10. 30.
- t 2 Pet. 2. 3.
- u Ps. 135. 14.
- x Judg. 2. 18.
Ps. 106. 45.
Jer. 31. 20.
Joel 2. 14.
† Heb. hand.
y 1 Kings 14. 10.
z 21. 21.
2 Kings 9. 8. &
11. 26.
z Judg. 10. 14.
Jer. 2. 28.
- † Heb. an hiding for you.
- a Ps. 102. 27.
Isa. 41. 4. & 48. 12.
b ch. 4. 35.
Isa. 45. 5, 18, 22.
c 1 Sam. 2. 6.
2 Kings 5. 7.
Job 5. 18.
Ps. 68. 20.
Hos. 6. 1.
- d Gen. 14. 22.
Ex. 6. 8.
Num. 14. 30.
- e Isa. 27. 1. &
34. 5. & 66. 16.
Ezek. 21. 9, 10,
14, 20.
f Isa. 1. 24.
Nah. 1. 2.
- g Jer. 46. 10.
- h Job 13. 24.
Jer. 30. 14.
Lam. 2. 5.
|| Or, Praise his people, ye nations: or, Sing ye.
- And the cruel ^a venom of asps.
- 34 Is not this ^r laid up in store with me,
And sealed up among my treasures?
- 35 ^s To me belongeth vengeance, and recompence;
Their foot shall slide in due time:
For ^t the day of their calamity is at hand,
And the things that shall come upon them make haste.
- 36 ^u For the LORD shall judge his people,
^x And repent himself for his servants,
When he seeth that their † power is gone,
And ^y there is none shut up, or left.
- 37 And he shall say, ^z Where are their gods,
Their rock in whom they trusted,
38 Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices,
And drank the wine of their drink offerings?
Let them rise up and help you,
And be † your protection.
- 39 See now that ^a I, even I, am he,
And ^b there is no god with me:
^c I kill, and I make alive;
I wound, and I heal:
Neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.
- 40 ^d For I lift up my hand to heaven,
And say, I live for ever.
- 41 ^e If I whet my glittering sword,
And mine hand take hold on judgment;
^f I will render vengeance to mine enemies,
And will reward them that hate me.
- 42 I will make mine arrows ^g drunk with blood,
And my sword shall devour flesh;
And that with the blood of the slain and of the captives,
From the beginning of ^h revenges upon the enemy.
- 43 || ⁱ Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people:
- i Rom. 15. 10.

34. sealed up among my treasures] For God seals up many transgressions in a bag, and seweth up their iniquities (Job xiv. 17), as subjects for punishment at the great day. Cp. Job xxxviii. 22, 23, and Ps. cxxxv. 7, where storms are described as God's artillery stored up in the treasures and magazines of His judgment; and the wicked man treasureth up for himself wrath against the day of wrath (Rom. ii. 5).

The metaphor is continued from the foregoing verse. The good Vine bringeth forth good fruit, which is stored up and sealed, and carefully preserved for use and reward. See St. Paul's words, Rom. xv. 28, "When I have sealed unto them this fruit," which redounds to the comfort and reward of those who yield it. See Phil. iv. 17.

On this prophecy, as applied to the Jews and their rejection, for rejecting Christ, see S. Hippolytus de Christo et Anti-Christo, § 57.

35. make haste] Though distant to the eyes of men, yet it was now present to the view of the Holy Ghost, by whose inspiration Moses speaks of judgments to come. Compare the similar words of the Apostle in reply to the careless and ungodly scoffers, who think not of those judgments (2 Pet. ii. 1—3; iii. 3—12). Even Enoch, the seventh from Adam, had a vision of Christ coming to judgment, and said, ἦλθε Κύριος, the Lord came (Jude 14).

36. the LORD shall judge his people] Another sentence quoted from this song in the Psalms (Ps. cxxxv. 14), and in the

New Testament (see Heb. x. 30). "Judgment must begin at the house of God" (see 1 Pet. iv. 17), but if they repent and turn to Him, then He will relent and pardon, as is said in what follows here, where Moses foretells the repentance and restoration of the Jews.

— none shut up] None preserved, as in a safe place (1 Kings xiv. 10. 2 Kings xiv. 26).

The Apostles use φρουρουμένους in this good sense (Phil. iv. 7. 1 Pet. i. 5), as well as in the bad sense of being shut up as in a prison: see Gal. iii. 23.

37. Where are their gods, Their rock] See Judg. x. 14. Jer. ii. 28.

39. I—I—he] So the original. The Sept. has ἐγώ εἰμι, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι Θεὸς πλὴν ἐμοῦ, which confirms the interpretation suggested below of the difficult text, Gal. iii. 20. See there, p. 61; and cp. John viii. 24; xviii. 5.

40. I lift up my hand] I swear: see Rev. x. 5, 6. — I live for ever] as I live for ever, if—with no stop at "ever."

41. I whet my glittering sword] Literally, I whet the lightning of my sword. Cp. Hab. iii. 11; Zech. ix. 14.

— beginning of revenges] or, head of the princes. (Sep. Ges.)

43. Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people] Rejoice, O ye Gentiles, with His chosen People Israel. Thus Moses foretold, that after the rejection of Israel, and the reception of the Gentiles which he predicted in the former part of this hymn (v. 21), the Jews would be chastened and corrected by God's judgments

For he will ^kavenge the blood of his servants,
 And ^lwill render vengeance to his adversaries,
 And ^mwill be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

k Rev. 6. 10. &
 19. 2.
 l ver. 41.
 m Ps. 85. 1.

⁴⁴ And Moses came and spake all the words of this song in the ears of the people, he, and || Hoshea the son of Nun. ⁴⁵ And Moses made an end of speaking all these words to all Israel: ⁴⁶ And he said unto them, ⁿSet your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law. ⁴⁷ For it is not a vain thing for you; ^obecause it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land, whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

|| Or, Joshua.
 n ch. 6. 6. & 11.
 18.
 Ezek. 40. 4.

⁴⁸ ^pAnd the LORD spake unto Moses that selfsame day, saying, ⁴⁹ Get thee up into this ^qmountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over against Jericho; and behold the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel for a possession: ⁵⁰ And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be gathered unto thy people; as ^rAaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people: ⁵¹ Because ^sye trespassed against me among the children of Israel at the waters of || Meribah-Kadesh, in the wilderness of Zin; because ye ^tsanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel. ⁵² ^uYet thou shalt see the land before thee; but thou shalt not go thither unto the land which I give the children of Israel.

o ch. 30. 19
 Lev. 18. 5.
 Prov. 3. 2, 22. &
 4. 22.
 Rom. 10. 5.
 p Num. 27. 12, 13.
 q Num. 33. 47 48
 ch. 34. 1.
 r Num. 20. 25, 28.
 & 35. 38.
 s Num. 20. 11, 12,
 13. & 27. 14.
 || Or, Strife at Kadesh.
 t See Lev. 10. 3.
 u Num. 27. 12.
 ch. 34. 4.

XXXIII. ¹ And this is ^athe blessing, wherewith Moses ^bthe man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death. ² And he said,

a Gen. 49. 28.
 b Ps. xc. title.

upon them, and would turn to Him with true repentance, and would join with the Church, collected from all nations, in the profession of the true faith, and in adoration and praise of Him. A glorious conclusion to this sublime poem and divine prophecy.

This glad sound was echoed after a lapse of about 1500 years by the great Apostle of the Gentiles, "the Hebrew of the Hebrews," St. Paul, in the very words which we read here in the Greek Version of this hymn,—Εὐφράνθητε ἔθνη μετὰ τοῦ λαοῦ αὐτοῦ (Rom. xv. 10). Compare Justin M. c. Tryphon. § 130; and S. Hilary de Trin. iv. 33. Euseb., Dem. Evang. ii. 1; and see Theodoret here, Qu. 42.

This quotation by St. Paul is more remarkable, because the Greek Translation of this phrase is rather a paraphrase than a literal translation. The verb is in hiphil, and the literal meaning is, "O ye nations, make His people to rejoice" (see Gesen. 771), which is fulfilled by the preaching of the Gospel by Gentiles to Jews in these latter days, and by making them to rejoice in Christ. The words may also be rendered, "O ye Nations, shout ye for joy at His people" (Gesen. 558). Whether it be for them (Keil, 558), or with them, or both, is not accurately determined; but the Apostle sanctions the Greek Version; and doubtless, if the Gentiles were to return thanks for God's mercies to the Jews, they might well be said to rejoice with them. Cp. KenNICOTT and Bp. Horsley, p. 223, who adopt a various reading, inserting eth before anno.

^{44.} Moses came—and Hoshea] A foreshadowing of the union of the Law of Moses and the Gospel of Jesus Christ, in the glorious consummation announced at the close of the song, the HALLELUJAH Chorus of Jew and Gentile, praising God with one heart and voice.

^{47.} it is your life] through faith in Him who is the Life.

^{49.} behold the land] The Law of Moses had a view of heaven, but the Gospel of Jesus brings us into it (see above, on Num. xxvii. 12. 18). Moses saw and saluted it from afar (Heb. xi. 13).

^{50.} unto thy people] A proof of the immortality and consciousness of the soul after death. The body of Moses was not gathered to the bodies of his fathers; it was buried alone by God.—mount Hor] at Mosera: see x. 6.

^{51.} Because ye trespassed] On the question, why God did not relent and permit Moses to enter Canaan, see Theodoret, Qu. 43. His bodily death was the death of all his infirmities. At the Rock he doubted, but he believes in Him who is the Rock. He doubts no more, and passes into the presence of Christ. Cp. S. Augustine, Sermon. 352.

Cf. XXXIII. 1.] Here begins a new Proper Lesson of the Law—the fifty-fourth and last.

The parallel Proper Lesson of the Prophets is the same as that for the foregoing Lesson—viz., 2 Sam. xxii. 1—51. Ezek. xvii. 22, to xviii. 32. Hosea xiv. 2—12. Joel ii. 15—27.

—this is the blessing] This blessing of the Tribes by Moses, the servant of God, is the sequel and supplement to the blessing of the Patriarchs by Jacob (Gen. xlix. 1—33).

That Benediction, uttered by the dying Patriarch (Jacob), looks forward to the blessings of the Gospel; and this benediction of Moses, the great Lawgiver, the faithful servant of God, now about to enter into His rest, cannot be fully understood unless it be referred, in a secondary and spiritual sense, to CHRIST (Augustine, Qu. 56).

All the Blessings of all the Tribes of Israel, which are pre-announced by Moses in the Law, are summed up and overflow in CHRIST. And all these Benedictions, as the Ancient Fathers observed, find their spiritual fulfilment in Him; and are to be interpreted accordingly. The Rabbis themselves confess, that the blessings pre-announced by Moses in this Benediction are spiritual. See R. Isaac in Chissuk Emunah i. 18, quoted by Bp. Patrick on v. 29, and Ainsworth's excellent note on vv. 26—29; and so Osiander and Calovius,—"hæ gratulationes ad veros Israelitas, hoc est, ad credentes in Christum Deum suum, verum Salvatorem, pertinent."

The Blessing of Moses is also to be coupled with the Song of Moses in the foregoing chapter. There he had delivered a prophecy concerning the future condition of Israel as a Nation, even to the last days; here he pronounces a blessing on the Tribes individually.

The arrangement and order of the tribes in this benediction are remarkable. First stands Reuben, the firstborn; then follows Judah, to whom Jacob had pre-announced the kingdom: then comes Levi, the Priestly Tribe; Simeon is omitted (see on v. 8). Then follow Benjamin and Joseph, the sons of the beloved wife, Rachel; then Zebulun and Issachar, the younger sons of Leah; and in both these cases the younger son is placed before the elder. Then the tribes which descended from the sons of the handmaids; Gad, the son of Zilpah; Dan and Naphtali, the sons of Bilhah; and, lastly, Asher, the second son of Zilpah.

There is a striking difference in one respect between the last

c Ex. 19. 18, 20.
Judg. 5. 4, 5.
Hab. 3. 3.

d See Ps. 68. 17.
Dan. 7. 10.
Acts 7. 53.
Gal. 3. 19.
Heb. 2. 2.
Rev. 5. 11. & 9.
16.

† Heb. a fire of law.

e Ex. 19. 5. ch. 7.
7, 8.

Ps. 47. 4.
Hos. 11. 1.

Mal. 1. 2.

f ch. 7. 6.

1 Sam. 2. 9.

Ps. 50. 5.

g Luke 10. 39.

Acts 22. 3.

h Prov. 2. 1.

i John 1. 17. & 7.
19.

k Ps. 119. 111.

l See Gen. 36. 31.

Judg. 9. 2. & 17.
6.

m ch. 32. 15.

- ° The LORD came from Sinai,
And rose up from Seir unto them ;
He shined forth from mount Paran,
And he came with ^d ten thousands of saints :
From his right hand went † a fiery law for them ;
3 Yea, ° he loved the people ;
^f All his saints are in thy hand :
And they ^e sat down at thy feet ;
Every one shall ^h receive of thy words.
4 Moses commanded us a law,
^k Even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.
5 And he was ^l king in ^m Jeshurun,
When the heads of the people
And the tribes of Israel were gathered together.
6 Let Reuben live, and not die ;

address of Jacob and that of Moses. Jacob, as the head of Israel and progenitor of Christ, speaks with paternal dignity, and distributes blessings and cursings with judicial authority (see Gen. xlix. 5—7).

But Moses has now resigned his office into the hands of Joshua (xxxii. 44); he descends from his high station; he identifies himself with the people (see v. 4),—"Moses commanded us a law;" and his address is one of blessing only, and prayer for the several tribes.

Many recent critics have denied the genuineness of this Benediction. Some have assigned it (as Knobel) to the age of Saul; others (as Lengerke), to the times of the two kingdoms; Ewald and Colenso (who is disposed to attribute the imposture to Jeremiah, § 826. 868), to that of Josiah; Graf, to that of Jeroboam II.; Hoffmann and others, to the age of the captivity. These discrepancies themselves are strange evidences of uncertainty. These conflicting theories have been examined by Ziegler, Kurtz, Schultz, and Keil, and are considered in the following notes.

Two observations may be here premised;

The omission of an entire tribe is one of the strongest proofs of genuineness. If it had not been genuine, some of the chiefs of that tribe—the powerful tribe of Simeon, which sent 7100 mighty men of valour to help David (1 Chron. xii. 25), would certainly have exposed the forgery. That tribe produced the largest number of Scribes (see on Gen. xlix. 5—7); and surely the scribes of Israel would not have patiently accepted as genuine and divine, and have expounded, a chapter of blessings on the tribes, from which their own name was excluded; and have never breathed a word of remonstrance against its genuineness and inspiration.

Another strong internal proof of genuineness may be derived from the language concerning Judah. See below, v. 7.

— the man of God] So Samuel is called "the man of God" (1 Sam. ix. 6; cp. 2 Pet. i. 2, where all the prophets are designated by this title). There is no cause for surprise that such a title should be applied by Moses to himself (see above, on Num. xii. 3). Though, as just stated by himself, he was not allowed to enter Canaan, yet he was "the man of God." This title prevents any misconception of that sentence of exclusion. So St. Paul, in his recital of his own revelations, speaks of himself in the third person, as "a man in Christ" (2 Cor. xii. 2, 3); and Balaam the prophet, when in a prophetic ecstasy, says, "Balaam, the son of Beor, hath said, The man whose eyes are open, hath said" (Num. xxiv. 3. 15).

2. from Seir] See Judg. v. 4. 5.

(God is described as coming as a mighty conqueror from the land of the Edomites, the enemies of Israel: compare the prophecy of Isaiah concerning Christ (lxiii. 1), "Who is this that cometh from Edom?"

— from mount Paran] See Habakkuk iii. 3.

God is also described as coming from Paran, the wilderness (Gen. xxi. 21. Num. x. 12; xii. 16; xiii. 3. 26), lest it should be supposed that He had a local habitation on Sinai, and that His presence was restrained to the place where His glory was revealed, and the Law was given.

Besides, this description of God's Coming from Seir and shining from Paran, nobly displays the glory of the revelation of God's presence on Sinai, which appeared to fill the northern and eastern region beyond Sinai. Compare the magnificent description in Hab. iii. 3, where it is said, "the earth was full of His praise," or glory; and cp. Deborah's words, Judg. v. 4.

This Coming of God from Seir and Paran, heathen lands, is mentioned, in order to show that the God who gave the Law to Israel, is also the God of the Gentiles (Origen). Compare St. Stephen's speech, describing God's revelation to Abraham in Mesopotamia, for a similar reason (Acts vii. 2).

— he came with ten thousands of saints] or angels. See the prophecy of Enoch in Jude 14, where the same words are applied to describe the majesty and glory of the future coming of Christ to judgment. Moses says here, that the glory of God on Sinai not only filled the regions of the earth—Seir—Paran—but those of heaven also; it shone forth from the innumerable company of angels around the Throne. Cp. Dan. vii. 10. Ps. lxxviii. 17; lxxxix. 6. 8. Zech. xiv. 5. Such will be the appearance of Christ at His coming (Matt. xxv. 31).

On the presence of the Angels at the delivery of the Law, see on Acts vii. 53. Gal. iii. 19; and Bp. Horsley here, p. 226.

— a fiery law] esh-dath; a fire of a law, a flame of an edict (cp. Gesen., p. 210, on the word dath, probably connected with τάρτα). It is alleged by some, as an objection to this word here, that it belongs to the later Hebrew or Chaldee, and not to the Mosaic age. It occurs Dan. ii. 13. 15; vi. 7. 13. 16. Esth. i. 13. 15; ii. 12. Ezra vii. 12. 21; and it has been proposed to read with some MSS. ishdath or ishdedeth, and to interpret it missile fire, i. e. lightning, arrows of God. Cp. Hab. iii. 4; and see Keil, p. 563; and above, v. 22. The first element of the word seems to be unquestionably connected with esh, fire; but the latter member of it is less certain. Some suppose it to be shadah, in Chaldee, to hurl (Bottcher); others, to be dath, from yadah, to hurl. See Schultz, p. 688.

3. Yea, he loved the people] Rather, yea, He loves all people. Cp. the words of St. James, Acts xv. 17. Moses takes up, what he himself had said at the close of his song, where he speaks of all nations as joining together in praising God (xxxii. 43).

— All his saints are in thy hand] that is, all the holy Angels wait upon Him. They sit at His feet as His ministers, ready to go forth at His command, to do His pleasure. See Heb. i. 7. 14; and cp. Keil, p. 564.

4. Moses commanded us a law] He says us, and thus incorporates himself with the people: see on v. 1. Compare the words at the close of St. John's Gospel,—“This is the disciple which testified these things and wrote these things, and we know that his testimony is true” (xxi. 24).

— Even the inheritance] that is, the Law which Moses gave us, is our peculiar inheritance, our national prerogative and privilege.

5. And he was king in Jeshurun] Appointed to that office by God, who "led His people like sheep by the hand of Moses and Aaron" (Ps. lxxvii. 20); him "God sent to be a ruler and deliverer" (Acts vii. 35). On the word Jeshurun, see xxxii. 15.

6. Let Reuben live, and not die] as he might have died for his sin (Gen. xlix. 3); but God had mercy on him; and let not his people be reduced to a few, as they might have been on account of that sin. Reuben's numbers had decreased since the first census. See Num. xxvi. 7, compared with Num. i. 21. Moses therefore might well pray that Reuben's men might not

And let not his men be few.

7 And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said,

Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah,

And bring him unto his people:

ⁿ Let his hands be sufficient for him;

And be thou ° an help to him from his enemies.

n Gen. 49. 8.

8 And of Levi he said,

^p Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one,

p E.A. 23. 30.

^q Whom thou didst prove at Massah,

And with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

q Ex. 17. 7.
Num. 20. 13. ch.
8. 2, 3, 16.
Ps. 81. 7.

9 Who said unto his father and to his mother, I have not ^r seen him;

r Gen. 29. 32.
1 Chron. 17. 17.
Job 37. 24.
s Ex. 32. 26, 27,
28.

^s Neither did he acknowledge his brethren,

Nor knew his own children:

For ^t they have observed thy word,

And kept thy covenant.

t See Jer. 18. 18.
Mal. 2. 5, 6.

10 ^u They shall teach Jacob thy judgments,

And Israel thy law:

|| Or, Let them
teach, &c. u Lev. 10. 11. ch.
17. 9, 10, 11. & 24.
8.

|| ^x They shall put incense † before thee,

Ezek. 44. 23, 24.
Mal. 2. 7.

^y And whole burnt sacrifice upon thine altar.

|| Or, let them put incense.

11 Bless, LORD, his substance,

And ^z accept the work of his hands:

x Ex. 30. 7, 8.
Num. 16. 40.
1 Sam. 2. 28.
† Heb. at thy nose.

y Lev. 1. 9, 13, 17. Ps. 51. 19. Ezek. 43. 27.

z 2 Sam. 24. 23. Ps. 20. 3. Ezek. 20. 40, 41. & 43. 27.

be few, literally, a number (see iv. 27. Isa. x. 19); and this prayer would be a memento to Reuben that he should walk warily before God, lest he should be treated as Simeon is; see on v. 8, and lest he should die the second death (Rev. xx. 6. 14). So Jonathan in his Targum here, and Onkelos and Epiphanius, Hær. i. 4; Ancorat. § 99, and see Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. xii. note, p. 292.

7. this is the blessing of Judah—be thou an help to him from his enemies] The word blessing is first used here, in reference to Judah; from whom, as Jacob had foretold, the Blessed One, Shiloh, would come (Gen. xlix. 8—12). Moses here prays that Judah may be brought to his people. These words, and what follow, “are evidently characteristic of the MESSIAH” (Bp. Horsley), and they may be well understood as a prayer for the advent of Shiloh to his people; as the following words may be understood as a prayer for Christ’s victory over His enemies (Origen in Joh. iv.).

Here is an argument for the genuineness of this prophecy. If (as is alleged by some, see on v. 1) it had been a fabrication of a later age—after the schism of Israel from Judah—how can it be supposed that, containing this benediction on Judah, and this prayer against his enemies, it would ever have been received as the genuine work of Moses by the rival kingdom of Israel? How could it ever have been received and read as divinely inspired in their synagogues? How could it have been admitted, as it is, into the Samaritan Pentateuch?

8. of Levi he said] Levi had been coupled with Simeon in a sentence of censure by the Patriarch Jacob (Gen. xlix. 5—7), “Cursed be their anger: I will scatter them in Israel.” But since that time Levi had recovered God’s favour (as Moses here intimates), by his zeal for God’s glory at Horeb, when even Aaron himself had fallen into sin; and therefore the zeal of the Levites for God was more illustrious (see Exod. xxxii. 26—28), and they received the honour of serving in the Tabernacle for their obedience (Num. viii. 14; xvi. 9. Dent. x. 8. Mal. ii. 5, 6), and Phinehas of that tribe had also received a special reward from God for his zeal for God, in the temptation of Balaam and the Midianitish women: see Num. xxv. 11—13.

Here then, in the case of Levi, was an example of repentance and recovery; but not so in the case of Simeon.

We hear of no such acts of repentance, zeal, and faithfulness on their part. On the contrary, on the same occasion, where Levi stands distinguished by the zeal of Phinehas, we see a defection in the house of Simeon (see Num. xxv. 14); and their sin is proclaimed in the decrease of their numbers during the forty years’ sojourn, by no less than 37,000 men: see above on Num. xxv. 14; and xxvi. 12—14.

These considerations afford a striking proof of the genuineness and truth of the two farewell addresses of Jacob and Moses respectively. Each is exactly fitted to the time and circumstances at which it was delivered. Cp. v. 10; and above, Introduction to Deuteronomy, on the important inferences to be drawn from the omission of Simeon’s name in this place.

— thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one] with Levi, summed up in the High Priest. Here is a prayer for all Levitical Priests, that their “lips should keep knowledge” (Mal. ii. 7), and be illuminated by God’s Spirit, and walk in perfectness before Him; and this was fulfilled to the uttermost in the Holy One of God (Ps. xvi. 10. Acts xiii. 35), Who ministers as our High Priest in the heavenly temple, and has the Urim and Thummim of the Holy Spirit, and bears on His breast the names of all the Israel of God: see Houbigant here, and notes above on Exod. xxviii. 30.

— Whom thou didst prove] The murmuring of Israel was a trial permitted by God, for the exercise of the faith and obedience of Aaron, the Priests, and Levites. As it is said of Christ, the true Aaron, that “He was led up of the Spirit to be tempted in the wilderness” (Matt. iv. 1); so God tried Aaron and the Levites by the murmuring of the people at Massah and Meribah (Exod. xvii. 1—7); and therefore God says by David (Ps. lxxxi. 7), “I proved thee at the waters of strife.” The Levites stood the trial: they were faithful to God, and zealous for His honour; they resisted the temptation to idolatry at Horeb, and to worldly glory, and pleasure, in the plains of Moab, and so were a figure of Him who overcame the Tempter in the wilderness.

9. Who said unto his father and to his mother, I have not seen him; Neither did he acknowledge his brethren] but preferred God’s honour and service before all earthly considerations, and ties of flesh and blood (see Exod. xxxii. 26—28), and thus were figures of Him who said to his earthly mother, “How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father’s business?” (Luke ii. 49), and “Who is my mother and my brethren?” (see Matt. xii. 48. Luke viii. 21). And He teaches others to say the same, especially the ministers of the Gospel (Theodoret). Cp. Matt. x. 37. Luke xiv. 26; and Irenæus iv. 20, who says that “as all Christians make a royal priesthood, so all true disciples of Christ are Levites of the Gospel.”

10. They shall teach—put incense—whole burnt sacrifice] This was fulfilled in the Levitical Priests, the appointed Teachers of Israel (Mal. ii. 7. Jer. xviii. 18. Ezek. xlv. 23), who were set apart to burn incense before God (Exod. xxx. 7. Num. xvi. 40. 1 Sam. ii. 28), and to offer whole burnt sacrifice. Much more is it verified in Christ, the Teacher of the world;

Smite through the loins of them that rise against him,
And of them that hate him, that they rise not again.

12 And of Benjamin he said,

The beloved of the LORD shall dwell in safety by him;
And the LORD shall cover him all the day long,
And he shall dwell between his shoulders.

13 And of Joseph he said,

a Gen. 49. 25.

^a Blessed of the LORD be his land,
For the precious things of heaven,

b Gen. 27. 28.

For ^b the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath,

14 And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun,

† Heb. thrust forth.

And for the precious things † put forth by the † moon,

† Heb. moons.
c Gen. 49. 26.

15 And for the chief things of ^c the ancient mountains, d Hab. 3. 6.

And for the precious things ^d of the lasting hills,

16 And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof,

e Ex. 3. 2, 4.
Acts 7. 30, 35.

And for the good will of ^e him that dwelt in the bush:

f Gen. 49. 26.

Let the blessing ^f come upon the head of Joseph,

And upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

g 1 Chron. 5. 1.

17 His glory is like the ^g firstling of his bullock,

h Num. 23. 22.

And his horns are like ^h the horns of † unicorns:

Ps. 92. 10.

† Heb. an unicorn.

With them ⁱ he shall push the people

i 1 Kings 22. 11.

Together to the ends of the earth:

Ps. 44. 5.

And ^k they are the ten thousands of Ephraim,

k Gen. 48. 19.

And they are the thousands of Manasseh.

18 And of Zebulun he said,

l Gen. 49. 13, 14,
15.

^l Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out;

And, Issachar, in thy tents.

Who offered Himself a perfect burnt-offering; and Who is ever offering the sweet incense of prayer.

12. Benjamin — shall dwell between his shoulders] He shall be carried by God, as a beloved son by a nursing father (see i. 31; and compare also the true reading in Acts xiii. 18). Some suppose that this is a prophecy of God's dwelling in the Temple, on the borders of Benjamin. Oukelos; Lightfoot, Temple Service, p. 145.

13—17. Joseph] Cp. the blessing of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 22—26, concerning Joseph, and xviii. 19, 20, on Ephraim and Manasseh. The blessing pronounced by Moses bespeaks a much nearer view of the blessings pronounced by Jacob. Joseph has ceased to have adversaries who shoot at him. The remembrance of his conflicts is past, and he is contemplated by Moses as settled in the Land of Promise. The comparison of the blessings pronounced in the two prophecies respectively on Joseph affords another proof of the truth and genuineness of both (see v. 8).

14. the precious fruits] On the fulfilment of this prophecy, see Stanley, Palestine, ch. v.

— sun—moon] Is there a reference to Joseph's dream (Gen. xxxii. 9), "the sun and moon and stars made obeisance to me?" 16. of him that dwelt in the bush] Burning, but not consumed (Exod. iii. 2. 6),—a striking emblem of Joseph himself.

On this passage, as applicable to Christ, God and Man, see Hilary de Trin. iv. 33.

— separated from his brethren] Such was Christ, our Joseph, separate from sinners (Heb. vii. 26), and sold by His brethren.

17. the firstling of his bullock] The emblem of the tribe of Ephraim, Joseph's son. Joseph is compared to a firstling, because he was advanced into the place of Reuben, the firstborn (1 Chron. v. 1, 2); and perhaps he is compared to a firstling of his bullock, because the country assigned to Manasseh was famous for its cattle (Amos iv. 1). Bp. Patrick.

Joseph was, in a remarkable manner, a figure of Christ (see on Gen. xxxv. i.; xxxix.; xli.; xlv.; xlv.). And the ancient Fathers have applied this prophecy not only to the Type, but to the Antitype, Christ, Who is compared in the prophecy of Jacob to an ox which has been slain (see Gen. xlix. 7). Such Christ, our victim, was; but when He arose in triumph, He pushed His enemies with His horns, and overthrew them (see the note above, on Gen. xlix. 6, 7). The Christian Fathers therefore, applying this to Christ, say, that in Christ's Cross, by which He conquered Satan, and all His enemies (Col. i. 20; ii. 14), with its upright beam and outstretched arms, are, as it were, the horns of an ox and the horns of the unicorn: that is, the instruments of His power and victory. See Justin M., Dial. § 91: see Otto's note there, and cp. Tertullian c. Judæos, c. 10; and adv. Marcion. iii. 18. S. Ambrose de Bened. Patr. c. xi. § 53, on Ps. xliii. S. Aug., Qu. 57; and Bp. Andrewes, iv. 368, "Christ and His cross are the horn of salvation" (Luke i. 69), which God has reared up for us, by which we are saved, and our enemies are destroyed.

— ten thousands—thousands] Ephraim is before Manasseh, as in Jacob's blessing (Gen. xviii. 19).

18. Zebulun—and, Issachar] Zebulun rejoiced in the earthly traffic (on which see Keil, pp. 570, 571), for which it was famous; and much more for its spiritual commerce, when the Apostles and Evangelists of Galilee, the scene of Christ's earthly ministry (Matt. iv. 13. 15), went forth to evangelize all nations in the ships of the Christian Church (see Jacob's prophecy, Gen. xlix. 13). Issachar rejoiced in his tents, when they erected Christian tabernacles in distant lands. Zebulun and Issachar corresponded to the Galilee of our Lord's age. All the Apostles are addressed as Galileans by the angel at the Ascension (Acts i. 11); and, "Are not all these who speak, Galileans?" was the question of the Jews from all parts of the world at Pentecost (Acts ii. 7). The Apostles called the people unto the mountain of the Lord's house (Isa. ii. 2. Micah iv. 1); they became priests of God and Christ, and offered sacrifices of righteousness. They were Christian merchant-men (cp. Bp. Andrewes, v. 4. Bp. Horsley, pp. 238. 242), and they sucked of the abundance of the sea and the treasures of the sand; for all nations bring their offerings to Christ in His Church, as Isaiah has prophesied: see Isa. lx. 1—22, "Thou shalt suck the milk of the Gentiles" (v. 16).

- 19 They shall ^m call the people unto the mountain ;
There ⁿ they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness :
For they shall suck of the abundance of the seas,
And of treasures hid in the sand.
- 20 And of Gad he said,
Blessed be he that ^o enlargeth Gad :
He dwelleth as a lion, and teareth the arm with the crown of the head.
- 21 And ^p he provided the first part for himself,
Because there, in a portion of the lawgiver, was he † seated ;
And ^q he came with the heads of the people,
He executed the justice of the LORD,
And his judgments with Israel.
- 22 And of Dan he said,
Dan is a lion's whelp :
† He shall leap from Bashan.
- 23 And of Naphtali he said,
O Naphtali, ^s satisfied with favour,
And full with the blessing of the LORD :
† Possess thou the west and the south.
- 24 And of Asher he said,
^u Let Asher be blessed with children ;
Let him be acceptable to his brethren,
And let him ^x dip his foot in oil.
- 25 || Thy shoes shall be ^y iron and brass ;
And as thy days, so shall thy strength be.
- 26 There is ^z none like unto the God of ^a Jeshurun, m Isa. 2. 3.

n Ps. 4. 5.

o See Josh. 13. 10.

p Num. 32. 16.

q Josh. 4. 12.

r Josh. 19. 47.

Judg. 18. 27.

s Gen. 49. 21.

t See Josh. 19. 32.

u Gen. 49. 20.

x See Job 29. 6.

y ch. 8. 9.

z Ex. 15. 11.

Ps. 86. 8.

Jer. 10. 6.

a ch. 32. 15.

20. Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad] Gad was settled on the eastern side of Jordan beyond the limits of Canaan properly so called; the victories gained and the territories occupied by this tribe were an earnest of the future triumphs of Israel in Canaan, and of the enlargement of the Church in the Gentile world.

He is compared to a Lion, the emblem of Christ (Rev. v. 5), in his victories; he provided the first part for himself, where he was settled by the Lawgiver Moses (Num. xxxii. 1. 23. Rosen., Gesen.); see Josh. xiii. 24; or where he was settled in a portion which belonged to him, Gad, as leader (Keil); and he executed the justice of the Lord by warring against His enemies in Canaan (Num. xxxii. 17. Josh. i. 14—17).

22. Dan is a lion's whelp: He shall leap from Bashan] After the conquest of the country of Og, the king of Bashan, Dan leapt as a lion from his covert in Bashan to the coast. There are no historical records now extant which serve to explain this prophecy concerning Dan. But this also confirms the proof of its genuineness. No Hebrew forger would have put forth a pretended prophecy, to which there was no historical response in the annals of the Hebrew Nation. There is no reference here to the expedition of the Danites to Laish (Judg. xviii.).

23. Naphtali] A tribe settled in what was afterwards Galilee, the scene of Christ's ministry, and the native country of His Apostles (see Matt. iv. 13. 15. See above, v. 18). Capernaum was in Naphtali, and it might be truly said that when our Lord preached there, Naphtali was satisfied or satiated with favour, and full of the blessing of the Lord.

— the west] Rather, the sea, i. e., of Genesareth (so the Chaldee Targums and Jarchi).

— the south] Rather, the sunny region (Heb. darom, from darar, to shine), not necessarily signifying a southern quarter, but a mild, sunny region, such as that of Naphtali was, especially that part which bordered on the sea of Galilee. See Josh. xix. 32. 34. 36.

24. Asher] Another tribe in Galilee: he is called blessed (according to his name, Gen. xxx. 13) before, or above, children (Judg. v. 24), or from children, i. e., on account of children.

— Let him be acceptable to his brethren] Rather, let him be acceptable (to God), or graced by God, amid his brethren.

— let him dip his foot in oil] He had a fruitful land. Cp. Jacob's blessing, Gen. xlix. 20. As to the figure, see Job xxix. 6.

25. Thy shoes shall be iron and brass] or, thy bars and strongholds shall be iron and brass. The word rendered shoe (mineal) occurs only here. It has been supposed by some (see Gesen. Arab. and Onkelos, Kimchi, and R. Solomon (see Bochart, Hieroz., Pt. II. vi. 16). The root is naal, to fasten, with a bolt; hence naal, a shoe, fastened by a latchet. But there does not however seem to be sufficient reason for abandoning the translation shoes, which is authorized by Sept., Vulg., Syriac; and there is something expressive in this figure, as indicating the force with which Asher would tread down his enemies (Schultz, 709). Besides, Asher had (it is probable) mines of iron and copper (see Keil on viii. 9, p. 432), and Misrephoth Maim, which seems to be in Asher (see Josh. xi. 8; xiii. 6), is said by the Rabbis to have been famous for its smelting furnaces, and to have derived its name from them. This may be interpreted also in a spiritual sense.

All the blessings of Israel are summed up in Christ. His feet are compared to fine brass (Rev. i. 15). He is the true Asher, or "Blessed One" (see Matt. xxi. 9; xxiii. 39. Rom. ix. 5).

26. Of Jeshurun] Rather, O Jeshurun (cp. v. 29). All the tribes are here summed up in one name derived from jasher, righteous (see xxxii. 15). All the benedictions are concentrated here; all the blessings of the Israel of God, of all faithful children of Abraham. They are all concentrated in Him through Whom alone, and in Whom alone, they are justified before God, Christ, the "Blessed One," who is "the Lord our Righteousness." All the blessings in the last words of Moses, the Leader and Lawgiver of Israel, now bidding farewell to them, and commending them to God, and about to render up his soul into His hands, and to be buried in peace, can only have their full significance and accomplishment in Christ, by Whom Moses himself was sent, and Whose way he came to prepare.

b Ps. 68. 4, 33, 34.
& 104. 3.
Hab. 3. 8.

c Ps. 90. 1.

d ch. 9. 3, 4, 5.

e Num. 23. 9.
Jer. 23. 6. & 33.
16.
f ch. 8. 7, 8.
g Gen. 27. 28.
ch. 11. 11.

h Ps. 144. 15.

i 2 Sam. 7. 23.

k Ps. 115. 9, 10, 11.

l 2 Sam. 22. 45.
Ps. 18. 44. & 66.
5. & 81. 15.
|| Or, shall be subdued.
m ch. 32. 13.
n Num. 27. 12. &
33. 47. ch. 32. 49.
|| Or, The hill.
o ch. 3. 27.
p Gen. 14. 14.
q ch. 11. 24.

r Judg. 1. 16. &
3. 13.
2 Chron. 28. 15.
f Gen. 12. 7. & 13.
15. & 15. 18. & 26.
3. & 23. 13.
g ch. 3. 27. & 32.
52.

h ch. 32. 50.
Josh. 1. 1, 2.

^b Who rideth upon the heaven in thy help,
And in his excellency on the sky.

27 The eternal God is thy ^c refuge,
And underneath are the everlasting arms :
And ^d he shall thrust out the enemy from before thee ;
And shall say, Destroy them.

28 ^e Israel then shall dwell in safety alone :
^f The fountain of Jacob shall be upon a land of corn and wine ;
Also his ^g heavens shall drop down dew.

29 ^h Happy art thou, O Israel :
ⁱ Who is like unto thee, O people saved by the LORD,

^k The shield of thy help,
And who is the sword of thy excellency !
And thine enemies ^l || shall be found liars unto thee ;
And ^m thou shalt tread upon their high places.

XXXIV. ¹ And Moses went up from the plains of Moab ^a unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of || Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the LORD ^b shewed him all the land of Gilead, ^c unto Dan, ² And all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, ^d unto the utmost sea, ³ And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, ^e the city of palm trees, unto Zoar. ⁴ And the LORD said unto him, ^f This is the land which I swear unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy seed : ^g I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither.

⁵ ^h So Moses the servant of the LORD died there in the land of Moab,

27. The eternal God is thy refuge] Thy dwelling is the God of ancient days (Heb. i. 12); thou dwellest in God. Cp. the words of Moses (Ps. xc. 1), "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling from one generation to another." Here was a comfortable assurance after the weary wanderings in the wilderness.

This sentence is now specially true, since the Incarnation of Him who is "Emmanuel, God with us" (Matt. i. 23), who "became flesh and dwelt in us" (John i. 14).

We, and all true Israelites, being engrafted into His mystical body, and participating in Him by the Holy Sacraments, "dwell in Him, and He in us" (John vi. 56); and in Him we feel that the everlasting arms are under us,—as the Church, the Bride of Christ, says of Christ, "His left hand is under my head, and His right hand doth embrace me" (Song of Solomon ii. 6; viii. 3).

— he shall thrust out the enemy] As He destroyed Pharaoh, and Sihon, and Og, and will destroy the kings of Canaan, so will he destroy all the enemies of Israel. This is Christ's work, this is the Victory of Him Who conquers the World, Death, and the Grave, and Satan himself (1 Cor. xv. 15. 2 Cor. x. 4, 5).

28. Israel then shall dwell in safety] The Holy Spirit, speaking by Jeremiah, teaches us to apply these words to CHRIST: see Jer. xxiii. 6.

29. O people saved by the LORD] The angel Gabriel, and the Holy Spirit speaking by Zacharias, teach us to apply this also to Christ, the SAVIOUR of His people: see Matt. i. 21. Luke i. 74. Cp. Acts iv. 12.

CH. XXXIV.] This chapter seems to have been added by Joshua, or some other person commissioned by him, after the death of Moses.

1. And the LORD shewed him all the land] God showed to the natural eye of Moses all the land of Canaan; and to his spiritual eye He revealed CHRIST, and that heavenly inheritance, of which Canaan was a type, and into which all faithful Israelites are led by Him of Whom Moses wrote (John i. 45; v. 46. Luke xxiv. 27).

The Law of Moses, and they who lived under it, had a sight of the blessings of the heavenly Canaan, but it is JESUS only who can bring us into the possession of them: see above on Num. xxvii. 12; xxxiv. 1—15.

— Dan] the city mentioned in Gen. xiv. 14: see note there; and Keil, 576: not the Dan of Judg. xviii. 29.

2. the utmost sea] the hindermost or further sea, the Mediterranean: see xi. 24.

3. the south] Heb. the negeb, or south country; the southern region, stretching from Judah to the Arabian desert: see Num. xiii. 17.

— the plain] the region round Judæa: see Gen. xiii. 10.

— the city of palm trees] Jericho: see Judg. i. 16; iii. 13. 2 Chron. xxviii. 15.

— unto Zoar] the southern extremity of the Dead Sea (Gen. xix. 22).

5—12. So Moses the servant of the LORD died] These words, to the end of the book, are an epilogue to the whole. They are a response from the People, accepting the Books of Moses, witnessing to their truth, genuineness, and inspiration. They are a national AMEN to the Pentateuch. They may be compared to the words at the close of St. John's Gospel, the last of the four,—"This is the disciple which testified of these things,—and we know that his testimony is true" (John xxii. 24). Cp. Hengstenberg, Authent. ii. p. 158.

This sentence is connected with Joshua (i. 1—9), "after the death of Moses, the servant of the Lord, &c.," and serves to join the Pentateuch on to that portion of the sacred canon. Cp. Hävernick, Einleit. § 134, p. 549.

"Moses, the servant of the Lord." Observe, says an ancient Father, the dignity of this title,—"The servant of the Lord." That man who is able to overcome all things is the servant of the Lord. No one can be called the servant of the Lord who does not conquer the world. This is the moral of the history of Moses,—that the end and aim of all our actions is to be called "the servant of the Lord." This is the consummation of all earthly existence. When thou hast overcome thy ghostly enemies, thine Egyptians, thine Amalekites, Edom and Midian; when thou hast crossed the sea, and been illumined by the cloud; when thou hast drunk waters sweetened by the Wood, and gushing from the Rock; when thou hast eaten bread from heaven; when thou hast gone up into Horeb by faith, and talked with God in the darkness; when thou hast listened to the sound of the Trumpet, and according to the word of the LORD. ⁶ And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor: but ¹ no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day. ⁷ ^k And Moses was an hundred and twenty years old when he died: ¹ his eye was not dim, nor his [†] natural force [†] abated. ⁸ And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab ^m thirty days: so the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended.

i See Jude 9.
k ch. 31. 2.
l See Gen. 27. 1. & 48. 10.
Josh. 14. 10, 11.
† Heb. moisture.
† Heb. fled.
m See Gen. 50. 3
10. Num. 20. 29.
n Isa. 11. 2.
Dan. 6. 3.
o Num. 27. 18, 23.

⁹ And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the ⁿ spirit of wisdom; for ^o Moses had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the LORD commanded Moses.

¹⁰ And there ^p arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, ^q whom the LORD knew face to face, ¹¹ In all ^r the signs and the wonders, which the LORD sent him to do in the land of Egypt to Pharaoh, and to all his servants, and to all his land, ¹² And in all that mighty hand, and in all the great terror which Moses shewed in the sight of all Israel.

p See ch. 18. 15, 18.
q Ex. 33. 11. Num. 12. 6, 8. ch. 5. 4. r ch. 4. 34. & 7. 19.

learnt the mysteries of the Tabernacle, and the dignity of the Priesthood; and when thou hast hevn tables out of thine own heart, on which God has written His Law; when thou hast broken in pieces the golden idol, and foiled the art of Balaam; when thou hast been another Moses, and drawest near thy end, then may it be thy great reward,—the crowning of thy whole life,—to be called in God's book "the servant of the Lord!" S. Gregory Nyssen. de Vit. Mosis, ad finem.

6. he buried him] God buried him, and God only knows where his body is. God did not allow the Israelites to see Moses after his death; they were only allowed to know him when alive, but not to see his countenance after the soul had fled from the body; perhaps, as S. Jerome suggests, lest they might see that countenance bedimmed by death, which had once shone with the glory of God. Or, as S. Augustine and others have suggested, lest they might make his grave to be an object of superstitious veneration: see on Jude 9, and the Rev. J. R. Woodford, "On the Death of Moses."

Thus God showed also, that, though under the Levitical Law, of which Moses was the interpreter, uncleanness was communicated by Death and Burial, and therefore Aaron might not bury his own sons (see Lev. x. 4—7), yet the bodies of His saints are not unclean in His sight; "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints" (Ps. cxvi. 15). God takes them to Himself. He showed His approval of the Burial of the Dead—which is a testimony to the doctrine of the Resurrection of the body (see below on Acts viii. 2). He showed that He knows where all bodies are which are hidden from men—whether they be consumed by fire, or whelmed in the sea; and He will bring them forth at the Great Day, as He brought forth Moses at the Transfiguration, to appear before Christ (Matt. xvii. 3; and cp. Rev. xx. 13). He who made all from the dust will awaken all from the dust (John v. 28).

To this it may be added, that when the Israel of God goes into the spiritual Canaan, under the command and leading of JESUS, the divine Joshua, then the Law, which is, as it were, the body of Moses, is buried; for we are become dead to the Law (as St. Paul says) by the body of Christ, that we should be joined to another, Jesus—even to Him who is raised from the dead (Rom. vii. 1—4); and it is God only who can bury the body of Moses, because it is only God in Christ who could abolish its ordinances and reclaim it from its curse (Rom. viii. 3. Gal. iii. 13. Col. ii. 14—17. Heb. ix. 9—11; x. 1—9); and now that it is buried, let no one seek to revive it, as the Judaizers did (Gal. iv. 9—11; v. 4: cp. Ainsworth, p. 167; and Kurtz, Gesch. ii. p. 526).

8. the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended] We mourn no more for the death and burial of the Law, now that we are under the guidance of Jesus, who is full of the Spirit (Luke iv. 1), and gives us the Spirit, and who is the Resurrection and the Life, and who brings Life and Immortality to light in the Gospel. See Origen in Josh. i.

9. Moses had laid his hands upon him] So Christ was "made under the Law, that he might redeem them that are under the Law" (Gal. iv. 4, 5; see above, Num. xxii. 18—23).

10. there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses] This statement does not necessarily imply a long interval between it and the death of Moses. What it declares is, that no prophet arose—nor could be expected to arise—like unto Moses, inasmuch as he was the Mediator of the covenant with God, and the Law given by him was to endure till it was fulfilled in Christ (cp. Matt. v. 17).

This, in fact, is a declaration of God Himself that the Law is a divine dispensation; and that Moses was His ambassador to the world; consequently, that as long as that dispensation lasted, no one could be equal to Moses, the divinely-appointed founder of it. At the same time, the Law itself testified by Moses, that a Prophet would arise like unto him, that God Himself would raise up such a Prophet, and that all would be obliged to hear that Prophet and to obey Him; and the Holy Spirit has declared to us that this Prophet has now arisen in CHRIST (Acts iii. 22), Who was not a servant, faithful in the house of God, like Moses, but a Son over it (Heb. iii. 5, 6); and Whom God not only knew face to face as he knew Moses, but Who is in the bosom of the Father (John i. 18), and in Whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom (Col. ii. 3), and all the fulness of the Godhead (Col. ii. 9); to Whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost be ascribed all "power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing, for ever and ever. AMEN" (Rev. v. 12, 13).